Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin trials. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each.

Stearns's Inquiry into the Nature and Tendency of Freemasonry. 338 pages. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor United Presbyterian church. 5 cents each.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District North-western Iowa Conference M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. 10 cents each.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void; OR FREEMASONRY SELF-CONVICTED. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. 207 pages. Postpaid, 40 cents each.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian), a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. 15 cents each.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. H. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each.

Masonic Salvation, as taught by its standard authors. This pamphlet is a compilation from standard Masonic works, in proof of the following proposition: Freemasonry claims to be a religion that saves men from all sin, and purifies them for heaven. 111 pages, price, postpaid, 20 cents.

Freemasonry at a Glance illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the first three degrees. Paper cover, 32 pages. Single copy, six cents.

Masonic Outrages. Compiled by Rev. H. H. Hinman. Showing Masonic assault on lives of seceders, on reputation, and on free speech; its interference with justice in courts, etc. Postpaid, 20 cents.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret Societies. A most convincing argument against fellowshipping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—U. S. Government Report, Aug. 17, 1889.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

The President and Mrs. Harrison left Washington Saturday afternoon on the United States steamer Despatch for a short season of recreation on the Potomac river and Chesapeake bay. They reached there Sabbath morning, went to church, and started back to Washington in the evening.

CHICAGO.

The master carpenters are pushing vigorously the prosecution of the striking carpenters who have assaulted or intimidated non-union workmen. Several of the men were given hearings in court yesterday. The affairs of the Culinary Alliance Union are said to be in bad shape.

Alderman Roth introduced an order in the Council meeting calling upon the Mayor and Chief of Police to resign if they can not put a stop to gambling.

Dr. W. Goodspeed, the financial secretary pro tem of the University of Chicago, made the first payment on the site for the new building.

POLITICAL.

The farmers of Georgia are in the saddle. The State Farmers' Alliance and the State Agricultural Society have clasped hands, and the next Governor of Georgia will be W. J. Northen, president of the latter organization.

The Farmers' Alliance of South Dakota, in convention at Huron, Friday, formed an Alliance party, adopted a platform, and called a convention to nominate candidates for State officers for July 5.

The executive committee of the Minnesota Farmers' Alliance met at St. Paul Friday for the purpose of deciding whether or not to call a convention to place a State ticket in the field.

Cicero J. Lindley, of Bond county, president of the Farmers' Mutual Benefit Association of Illinois, has been consulting with political leaders and announces himself as a candidate for the Republican nomination for State Treasurer.

COUNTRY.

On Thursday news was brought to Denver, Col., of the massacre several days ago of a party of Government surveyors in the Upper Green River country, Wyoming, by Indians. Chief Engineer Crittenden and three chain-bearers were killed and another man seriously wounded.

The district near Hubbard, Iowa, was swept Wednesday by a tornado, houses and barns being reduced to kindling wood. Many horses and cattle were killed.

It was reported Thursday that fatalities caused by the cyclone at Bradshaw, Neb., had reached fifteen. The sufferers greatly need money and lumber.

Tuesday evening four farmers, I. N. Taggett, Edward Goodchild, William Holmes and Matt Ringle, were struck by lightning four miles west of Cairo, Mich. Goodchild and Holmes were dead when assistance arrived, although no marks or traces of the current could be found upon their persons. Ringle and Taggett are recovering.

A good-looking girl, 20 years old, was brought to the county jail in Coldwater, Mich., Wednesday, from Union City, charged with trying to wreck a train on the Michigan Central Railroad by placing ties on the track. She admits that she and another girl did place two broken ties on the track, and saw the engine of a freight freight train push them off, but they did it for fun, and not because of malice. She appears not to realize the enormity of her offense.

A committee from Chicago representing the Roman Catholic, German Lutheran and German Reformed churches called upon Gov. Fifer Wednesday and requested him in the event that he called a special session of the Legislature to name the educational question as one of the matters to be considered. The Governor will consider the matter.

Tuesday lightning struck a powder-house on the outskirts of Mansfield, Ohio, and in the explosion that followed two residences were completely wrecked, and much damage done to other buildings. A baby in one of the houses was blown 100 feet away and was killed, and a woman and another child are reported to be fatally injured.

The sale of ten of the principal breweries at San Francisco to an English syndicate, for $7,500,000, was consummated Monday.

Mrs. Robert Morrow of Durango, Col., attempted to light a fire with kerosene and an explosion occurred which resulted in the burning of the house, together with Mrs. Morrow and her two children.

On Monday a party of experienced Scandinavian pearl hunters arrived at Galena, Ill., and proceeded to the pearl field of the Pecatonica river for the purpose of hunting for the gems.

It is reported that Francis Murphy, the temperance evangelist, is soon to marry Mrs. Rebekka Fisher, a wealthy and handsome widow of Council Bluffs, Iowa.

FOREIGN.

The Italian Peace Arbitration Association is about to send to President Harrison an address congratulating him upon the debates in the peace congress and expressing a hope that other countries will imitate the example set by the United States.

The Emperor has informed Prince Bismarck that if he does not stop his press utterings the result will be serious.

A fleet of British war ships arrived at Newfoundland Monday and more have been ordered to proceed there. It is also rumored that a regiment of the line will be sent to the same place. Trouble over the fisheries is anticipated.

A bloody encounter has taken place between Arnauts and Servians on the Servian frontier. The Ottoman and Servian governments have sent telegraphic orders for a prompt inquiry into the affair. The Arnauts killed fifteen Christians, wounded thirty-five others, and robbed the dead.

During the progress of a ball at Arnstadt, Germany, June 3, a chandelier containing a number of lamps filled with petroleum fell to the floor in the middle of a crowd of dancers. The lamp exploded, scattering the burning oil over the terrified men and women in that part of the hall, and a horrible scene ensued. Two ladies ran in the open air and were burned to death. Thirteen others were seriously burned, and it is thought that some of them cannot survive their injuries.

Statements are made that the recent filibustering plots against Lower California were planned in British interests, the scheme being to make the peninsula another American colony of England. It is even said that British arms have been shipped to the territory and that British men-of-war were to be in the vicinity to aid in establishing English control.

The Czar has issued a ukase ordering the abandonment of the Russian anti-Jewish policy for one year. This measure is understood to have been taken in deference to the numerous protests against the recent wholesale expulsions of Jewish merchants, lawyers and other prominent Hebrews, which have taken place in Russian Poland, Southern Russia, and other parts of the empire, and is merely tentative. The fact that many of the officials nearest to the Czar were opposed to the anti-Jewish measures adopted by the government influenced the Czar to give consideration to the protests of the victims of the law, with the result of its temporary suspension.

A test vote on the strength of the lottery people in the Louisiana Legislature, taken Friday, resulted 49 to 26 in the lottery's favor. The Governor will veto any bill in favor of lotteries.

Heavy rain and thunder storms prevailed in New York State Thursday, the lightning, wind and floods working havoc. Several lives are reported lost.

A Chicago & Northwestern passenger train jumped the rails near Rockford, Ill., Friday, and tumbled down an embankment among a gang of section men. The engineer and four section men were killed.

At Boston, Sunday morning, a party of eight young men started for a fishing excursion in a sailboat. When they were about one mile from Thompson's Island, in Dorchester Bay, the boat was struck by a squall and capsized and all but one were drowned.

Puget Sound catechism and its chief city SEATTLE, WASHINGTON. Send stamp to Eschelman, Llewellyn & Co., Seattle, Wash.

KEYSTONE MORTGAGE COMPANY. Aberdeen, S. Dak., offers guaranteed 7 per cent Farm Mortgage, Electric and Gas Bonds, Bank and other dividend paying stocks. Address us for particulars. Eastern Office, 1828 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

RIDGE'S FOOD The Most Reliable Food For Infants & Invalids. Not a medicine, but a specially prepared Food, adapted to the weakest stomach. 4 sizes each. Pamphlet free. Woolrich & Co. (on every label), Palmer, Mass.

LADY WANTED SALARY $85 to $50 and EXPENSES (LADIES $1.50 SPECIALTY FREE.) For our business in each locality. Intelligence and honesty, but no experience, necessary. Also good MAN for section; Salary $100. GAY BROS. & CO. (rated Capital $800,000—credit High), 84 Reade St., N. Y.

GREAT FALLS, MONTANA. City of wonderful resources, immense water power, gold, silver, copper, lead, lumber, coal, iron, cattle, horses, wool and agriculture. Phenomenal growth. For full particulars address SECRETARY BOARD OF TRADE, Great Falls, Montana.

THE FORSYTH COMBINATION RUG AND EMBROIDERY MACHINE is far superior to anything of the kind now in use. Beautiful new designs for Rug and embroidery patterns. Big inducements to agents. Catalogue and price list sent free. THE FORSYTH MFG. CO., 204 Dearborn st., Chicago.

MISSOULA Garden city of MONTANA. Railroad and manufacturing center, fine water power, rich agricultural lands, mines, lumber, etc. A prosperous city and rich country. Full particulars, including beautiful book, "MISSOULA ILLUSTRATED" SENT FREE upon application to FAIRCHILD, CORNISH & CO., MISSOULA, MONT.

BABY CARRIAGES! I make a specialty of manufacturing Baby Carriages to sell direct to private parties. You can therefore, do better with me than with a dealer. Carriages Delivered Free of Charge to all points in the United States. Send for Illustrated Catalogue.

CHAS. RAISER, Mfr. 62-64 Clybourn Ave., Chicago, Ill.

SEVEN SEVENTEEN SEVENTY

To cure Biliousness, Sick Headache, Constipation, Malaria, Liver Complaints, take the safe and certain remedy, SMITH'S

BILE BEANS

Use the SMALL SIZE (40 little beans to the bottle). They are the most convenient; suit all ages. Price of either size, 25 cents per bottle.

KISSING at 7, 17, 70: Photo-gravure, panel size of this picture for 4 cents (coppers or stamps).

J. F. SMITH & CO. Makers of "Bile Beans," St. Louis, Mo.

AROUND THE WORLD. "Ex-Mayor Daniel F. Beatty, of Beatty's Celebrated Organs and Pianos, has returned home from a tour Around the World."—News. BEATTY'S ORGANS, Only $35; Pianos $130. Warranted ten (10) years. Write for Catalogue, Address DANIEL F. BEATTY, Washington, New Jersey.

Its superior excellence proven in millions of homes for more than a quarter of a century. It is used by the United States Government. Endorsed by the heads of the Great Universities as the Strongest, Purest and most Healthful. Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder does not contain Ammonia, Lime, or Alum. Sold only in Cans. PRICE BAKING POWDER CO. NEW YORK. CHICAGO. ST. LOUIS.

AGENTS WANTED Ladies or Gents. Permanent business. Quick sales. Valuable Sample Free. Rare chance. F. M. Brooks, Secretary, 821 Broadway, N. Y.

I CURE FITS!

When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. H. G. ROOT, M. C., 183 Pearl St. New York.

Our High Grade List and Bargain Book sent to any address on receipt of a 2-c stamp.

LORD & THOMAS, NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING 45 RANDOLPH STREET, CHICAGO.

WHEATON COLLEGE,

WHEATON, ILL.

COMMENCEMENT DAY JUNE 18

All are invited.

A College for Men and Women.

For Catalogue address with stamp.

O. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

PATENTS

Obtained, and all PATENT BUSINESS attended to for MODERATE FEES. Our office is opposite the U. S. Patent Office, and we can obtain Patents in less time than those remote from WASHINGTON. Send MODEL, DRAWING or PHOTO of invention. We advise as to patent ability free of charge and we make NO CHARGE UNLESS PATENT IS SECURED.

For circular, advice, terms and references to actual clients in your own State, County, City or Town, write to C. A. SNOW & CO.

Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

HELPS TO

BIBLE STUDY

With Practical Notes on the Books of Scripture.

Designed for Ministers, Local Preachers, S. Teachers, and all Christian Workers.

Chapter I.—Different Methods of Bible Study.

Chapter II.—Rules of Interpretation.

Chapter III.—Interpretations of Bible Types and Symbols.

Chapter IV.—Analysis of the books of the Bible.

Chapter V.—Miscellaneous Helps.

Cloth, 184 pages, price postpaid, 50 cents.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,

321 W. Madison St., Chicago.

THE BROKEN SEAL;

Or Personal Reminiscences of the Abductions and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene.

One of the most interesting books ever published. 14 cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents per dozen, $3.50.

This deeply interesting narrative shows what Masonry has done and is capable of doing in the Courts, and how bad men control the good men in the lodge and protect their own members when guilty of great crimes. For sale at 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XXII., No. 40.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JUNE 19, 1890.

WHOLE No. 1,051.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.

Address all letters for publication to EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, CHICAGO. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Address all business letters and make all drafts and money orders payable to the Treasurer and Publisher, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address always give the former address.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill., as Second Class Matter]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:	CORRESPONDENCE:
Notes and Comments..... 1	The G. A. R.; People and Things in the Tennessee Mountains; Be on Time.....5,6
Editorial Correspondence..... 8	WASHINGTON LETTER..... 4
A Miraculous Escape..... 8	LITERATURE..... 6
Political Secretism..... 8	OBITUARY..... 7
The Race Question..... 9	THE N. C. A..... 7
Personal Notes..... 9	LECTURE LIST..... 7
College Anniversaries..... 9	THE HOME.....10
The Christian Endeavor Society..... 5	TEMPERANCE.....11
CONTRIBUTIONS:	Mission Work in Kentucky.....12
Yosemite and Yellowstone..... 1	Mountain Missions in East Tennessee.....12
Indignation as an Element of Moral Character..... 2	RELIGIOUS NEWS.....12
SELECTED:	LODGE NOTES.....13
Inside a Jesuit College..... 3	BUSINESS.....13
NEW ENGLAND LETTER..... 4	MARKETS.....13
REFORM NEWS:	HOME AND HEALTH.....14
Southern Illinois Greets Bro. Hawley..... 5	IN BRIEF.....15
	NEWS OF THE WEEK.....16

The practice among rich men of sending their scapegrace sons to Harvard has done much to hurt its reputation, and the excessive devotion to college sports has had a tendency to lower the standard of high thinking, and bring to the front a class of students who care more for field honors than to win the prizes for scholarship. It would not be fair, however, to fail to give Harvard her just due in having obliterated the color line, and proved to the world that among people of the highest education and culture, mind and character stand for more than the color of a man's skin. She is not only to have a colored student for her orator on her next class day, but a second colored orator is on her list of speakers at commencement,—one chosen by a popular vote of the senior class, the other by a committee from the faculty for excellence of scholarship.

The persistent cruelty of the Indiana White Caps, their defiance of civil authority, and the great difficulty of securing a conviction of their crimes, are all but so many continued evidences that all secret combinations are unsafe, and that whether they are called Clan-na-Gael, Mormonism or Freemasonry, they are all, in various ways and degrees, liable to become, in the hands of bad men, a perpetual menace to the public welfare. There is but one remedy for all this class of mischiefs. Let the legislatures of the several States follow the example of Vermont (and of Rhode Island in 1834) and enact that all oaths administered with intentional secrecy are criminal, and that all combinations of men whose proceedings are not open to judicial investigation are conspiracies, membership in which shall be punishable by fine and imprisonment.

Samuel Gompers, the accredited leader of the secret labor unions, was before the National Prohibition Congress in New York last week to say what was the attitude of these secret orders toward the temperance movement. Had the managers of the meeting looked in on Mr. Gompers and his Federation, endeavoring to do business in the haze of tobacco smoke last December in Boston, they would have known his opinion without asking for it. The cigar store is next the saloon and Mr. Gompers was by trade a cigar-maker until he took up the profession of lodge manager. His remarks were not in tune with the key-note of the meeting. Underpaid laborers would seek relief in liquor because they were unable to procure proper nourishment, and looked upon prohibition as an attempt to deprive them of liberty. An able reply to this sophistry was immediately given. No man who deserves to be regarded a representative American workingman should hear such words without indignation. The strikes, which Mr. Gompers' labor lodges are continually fomenting are often the best allies of the saloons.

"Booms" and politics threaten to muddle our census. The Chicago enumeration was not finished before the papers reported a multitude of complaints. No census-taker had called upon this, that and the other householder who viewed with pride how the counting of his flock would increase the family of "Uncle Sam." Exaggerated rumors that the 1,200,000 people claimed for Chicago would be reported as only half so many were unpleasant reading. In Milwaukee the same complaint is made; and in Minneapolis, it is said, policemen and citizens gave themselves heartily to the work of assisting the census-takers. Whatever may depend upon the repute of a large and increasing population to real estate dealers and party workers, it must be to the man whose heart is upon Christ and his kingdom a matter of much indifference. If our names are not written in heaven, it is nothing though they are found in every roster on the earth.

Some ambitious but unwise Chicago women got up a childrens' opera for "charity." Last week they had several performances of "Cinderella" in the Auditorium. Like the charity of the lodge, this performance was a humbug, and the editor of America calls it one of the "most colossal" ever perpetrated upon this city. He adds: "Obviously it is given for charity; but Robespierre's outcry against the crimes committed in the name of liberty might be applied to the name of charity with equal force. Not only was it unworthy of comparison with private theatricals in a country town, but the spectacle of fifteen hundred children, many of them under five years of age, tottering about the stage for four solid hours, clad in tights and spangles, singing vulgar slang and trying their best to keep awake, was positively painful, and it is safe to say that in any other large city in the world a second performance would not have been tolerated."

If the name of charity can cover such crimes against innocent childhood, that of religion sometimes serves almost as ill a purpose. We read the other day of a Baptist church which provided an entertainment for the children. Part of the performance was charades acted in costume. The deacon's son was captivated with them, and in the process of evolution which naturally took place in his mind, a strong desire to go to the theater soon followed, and he puzzled his father with the question why it was worse to go to a theater to see a play than to a church to see charades. Verily they have a tremendous responsibility who have charge of the plastic minds of children and attempt to win them by any sort of performance in the name of religion. Salvation Army methods may answer for the class they are designed to reach. In that respect they are beyond criticism, but to force them upon well-bred children of Christian homes is another matter.

The letter of W. E. Gladstone to the workingmen of Great Britain is replete with thorough knowledge and excellent advice. Above all, it is refreshing to find the foremost statesman of the age recognizing the Gospel of Christ as the most important factor in civilization, and its prevalence as the absolute prerequisite to the uplifting of all that are oppressed. He warns the laboring men not to expect too much, or to suppose that their relative influence will ever be in proportion to their numbers. He affirms that the amelioration of their condition, which has been great, is due to the extension of the elective franchise, their increased intelligence, their regard for each others' interests, and the sympathy of those outside of their number. He warns them that all acts of injustice, oppression or lawlessness, will alienate that sympathy and put back the cause they are seeking to advance. In other words, every demand that men make upon others must commend itself to the moral sense of the world, and especially to the instincts of humanity, which, even in the worst of men, are always aroused by acts of cruelty. That the greatest of British statesmen and the strongest (because the most thoroughly supported of all the rulers of Continental Europe) should have devoted themselves to the amelioration of the oppressed in Ireland and on the continent, and to the solution of the most difficult problem of the age, is a marked indication of the power of Christianity over the world's great men.

The Inter Ocean says of the graduating exercises of the Union Law School of this city: "It is a notable fact that the member of the class having the highest scholarship, and who delivered the valedictory, was a colored man."

YOSEMITE AND YELLOWSTONE.

BY REV. WILBUR F. CRAFTS.

Yosemite is a valley, "in the heart of the Sierras," 4,000 feet above the sea, half a mile wide, seven miles long, fenced with precipices 3,000 feet high. "Figures cannot lie," it is said. They surely cannot tell the truth—nor can words—about this majestic king of canons. Adjectives give out at Inspiration Point. From that outlook one beholds in El Capitan something worthy of the abused adjectives, "grand" and "awe-full," and sees in the valley below something which at last is worthy of the expression, "perfectly lovely."

Yosemite is now in full dress. An unusual snow-fall during the past winter has filled the waterfalls as seldom before, and the visitor can see enough canned waterfall in the snow that whitens the mountain tops to keep up the music of the cascades through the whole summer.

Surely, a day in these courts is better than a thousand at the fashionable summer resorts. An hour of Yosemite puts more joy into the eyes and into the memory than a cycle of Saratoga. Byron said, on leaving the Rhine,

"Adieu to thee, fair Rhine! a vain adieu.

There can be no farewell to scenes like thine."

He who comes to Yosemite, ever afterward in his memory comes an art gallery grander than any king could buy.

"True pleasures are pleasant to remember." "A good time is one that don't go off with the having." Yosemite will bear these tests, though most summer resorts will not. In the latter one sees, and too often shares, the follies and sins of men. In Yosemite one catches a glimpse of God.

We have had cycloramas of battles long enough. Why does not some one enrich himself and bless the poor by painting a cyclorama from Glacier Point, with Mount Starr King on the extreme right, then Nevada and Vernal Falls, Liberty Cap, Half Dome, Mount Marcy, North Dome, Yosemite Falls, with El Capitan at the extreme left, and the valley stretching through the foreground below?

In mountain resorts one sees the evil results of the American habit of riding everywhere, which is one of the habits that ought to be broken up. Traveling would be more comfortable, and scenery more enjoyed, if our people had as good wind for walking as for talking. The fear that they will be suspected of economy makes some people ride when they would prefer to walk. It is curious that many are ashamed of the virtue of economy, but none of the vice of extravagance. We need new declarations of independence against the taxes we pay to false pride. American women especially should learn to walk, if, perchance, their habitual invalidism may so be left behind.

Yosemite has been written up statistically and touristically. I shall write of it illustratively and religiously. If "the undevout astronomer is mad," what shall we call the man who can see Yosemite irreverently? In the early part of our stage ride, conversation having turned to the little chapel in the valley, I asked the stranger who sat beside me if she saw any one in our party who looked like a minister. She pointed out a long-bearded, long-faced man of 50 as "the only one." Presently he swore at his wife, and so dispelled the illusion. But even he became reverent in the presence of the mighty cliffs of Yosemite. The "Book of Nature," however, seldom leads beyond reverence to religion. Every Sabbath scores rendezvous behind the very chapel, and under the Sentinel Rock, for Sabbath-breaking "pleasure exertions" to Glacier Point. In the volumes of God's works Yosemite is one of the "Royal Psalms," but its grand revelation of God is appreciated only by those who have come to it through the converts' "valley of blessing."

Being requested to preach, on the Sabbath I spent in Yosemite, I spoke of the Bible as a Delightful Wonderland from the text, "Open thou mine eyes that I may behold wondrous things out of thy Law. Thy testimonies are my delight." Recalling the expression used involuntarily by a preacher residing near the Royal Gorge, "the Canyon of Scripture," I called attention to the truth thus suggested, that the Bible does indeed contain Royal Gorges, majestic truths about God that tower to heaven, chapters that flow like mighty torrents, warnings that thunder in our ears like the sound of many waters, side by side with verses as gentle as the scenery that surrounds and frames the Vernal Fall, and associated with promises as beautiful as the rainbow that spans its raging waters. The Bible is a "Mirror Lake" in which is reflected, not mountains and sunrises, but the grandeur of Him whose "righteousness is like the great mountains," and "the strength of the hills is His also;" of whom men of all religions have deemed the Sun the fittest symbol. Would that we were more willing to rise early, if necessary, in order to gaze into this Mirror Lake of the Bible every morning, and rejoice in its reflection of Him of whom it was said, "The Lord God is a Sun and Shield; he will give grace and glory." One needs to enter the Bible by "Inspiration Point" to appreciate its beauty and meaning as something so much greater than any mere human book as El Capitan is greater than the Eiffel Tower. As this rarest combination of mountain grandeur and valley loveliness was unknown to civilized man until forty years ago, so the Bible has majestic warnings and sweet promises yet hidden even from those who have oftenest traversed its continent of truth, for their future discovery.

It is said that the only way one can appreciate the vast height of El Capitan is by climbing the debris at its base, and laying his back against the precipice and looking up. Not less is it true that the only way we can appreciate the Bible is to apply it to our lives.

From the plain below, Glacier Point, 3,250 feet above the plain, on the edge of the precipice, seems impossible of access; but little by little one zigzags up to its visions of matchless grandeur, rewarded all the way by new views of the fairest of valleys, of the loftiest of waterfalls, of the cloud-capped domes and the snow-capped mountains beyond. Climbing a little every day in the knowledge and practice of the Bible, we get ever new views of God and truth, joyous outlooks all along the trail of life, rests amid the labor of the way, a safe passage by every place of peril, and at last the triumphant end of the journey.

The vocabulary of admiration having been exhausted at Inspiration Point, and one has nothing left with which to tell the nobler scenes that reward this harder journey to Glacier Point. Even railroad advertisements for once fall far short of the reality. "The half was never told." Paintings and photographs, excellent as they are, cannot give the waterfalls' musical roar and its ever-changing lace-like festoons of foam which the sun decks with countless diamonds, nor the lofty heights of the precipices that seem to hold up the dome of the sky. One must "inquire within" the valley itself to appreciate the peerless beauty and majesty of it all. So even the Bible can only half describe the valleys of peace and the mounts of joy in the life that is hid with Christ in God.

WAWONA'S BIG TREES,

and Hill's Studio (add its beautiful waterfall, if you have time and money for an extra day) afford a fitting dessert after feasting the eyes on the valley. I had feared that even trees almost three hundred feet high and nearly one-third as large in girth at the base would seem an anti-climax after beholding cliffs ten times as tall; but whatever belongs to the vegetable kingdom is greater in rank, if not in size, than what belongs to the mineral kingdom, and so beholding the kings of the trees was no less enjoyable than beholding the princes of precipices. A dead cliff, though enlivened by a roaring, foaming waterfall, is less wonderful than the Sequoia's seed, that defies gravitation, and grows up into the clouds by the hidden power of life.

As these trees, though only one-tenth as tall as the cliff, are really of higher rank, so the horses we drive are yet higher than the trees, and the driver than the horses; though he may live in the "animal kingdom," of which his body is the borderland, rather than in the spiritual kingdom of thought and conscience, to which his real self belongs. If some of these drivers so live, it is easy to explain. Sunday is like all other days to them, and they find that conscience, to most of their passengers, is only another name for convenience. Oftener than otherwise, the "Christian" (?) tourist keeps the Sabbath only when it costs him nothing either in time or money to do so. Such sham Christianity makes more infidels than Robert Ingersoll and "Robert Elsmere" together.

LAKE TAHOE AND SALT LAKE,

the first a joy to the eyes, the other to the whole body as a peerless bath, are fitting couplings between Yosemite and Yellowstone. Mormonism as a show is a failure. The traveler looks in vain for family carriages as big as stages, in which the Mormon saint is taking his multitudinous wife and family out for an airing; in vain for prophets promenading with their "plural" partners. Even on the Sabbath in the Tabernacle, though the tourist finds the pews, in accordance with his expectations, long enough to accommodate a family of fifty, only one wife and a half dozen children at most are seen beside one man. Mormonism has been driven to cover, and many of us will doubtless live to be in at the death.

As Yosemite is the majestic king of valleys, is their beautiful queen. If a traveler is limited for either time or money, and will take the bits in his own mouth and go his own way, instead of following the stretched-out tours made in the interest of the stages and hotels, he can see all that is distinctive in the Yellowstone, its Mammoth Springs, its most beautiful of canons, its geysers, in three days at a cost of $23 each for a party of three. To do this, hire a two-seated wagon and driver at $10 per day for all, not each, at Mammoth Springs, after seeing their feast of color, and carry lunches for the noons to make hotel bills $3 instead of $4 per day for each person. The stage in and out from Chinabar costs $1.50 each way. The allowance made leaves $1 to each person for the lunches. There is no need whatever of saddle horses for persons in health in the canon or anywhere else. The estimate does not include the lake, which is worth seeing if one's time and money is unlimited, but is not one of the distinctive features of the Park, by which it has become famous the world over.

YELLOWSTONE

In the geysers one sees the first chapter of Genesis in action, the last fragment of the unfinished world in process of creation. If possible, one should add a fourth day to stay at the Upper Geyser Basin and see the steam cannonade of the sky by the earth in all its vanity. This is the place to spend the Sabbath quietly, and yet enjoyably, if it comes into the visit at all. The Mammoth Springs are also creation in process, in still more beautiful, though more quiet, forms.

But the Canon is the princess of the Park. Fortunately I had not been overtrained for this trip. I had read nothing of this canon, and so expected to see, as in other canons, a sombre, though sublime chasm, an earthquake wreck. Instead of that I found cliffs that seemed to be petrified rainbows, a matchless feast of colors, an oratorio of creation, in which the loud, bright sopranos of the gorgeous cliffs sang to the accompaniment of the roaring waterfall in the river below, "The praise of God and of the second day."

Such a tour fitly closes with Niagara's doxology.

A month of time and $325 of money may be well invested in a tour of our country, including Washington and vicinity, Gettysburg, Luray Cave, Marietta's Indian mounds, Mexican Santa Fe, the Indian villages and palisades west of Albuquerque, the Indian cliff and cave dwellings of Flagstaff, the oriental occident of Southern California, Yosemite, Tahoe, Salt Lake, Yellowstone and Niagara. He who so invests will have treasures of memory that no panic can destroy, that will pay daily dividends of pleasure and profit all his life.

INDIGNATION AS AN ELEMENT OF MORAL CHARACTER.

BY REV. H. H. HINMAN.

In a late number of the Forum Frances Power Cobbe has an able and suggestive article on "The Secular Growth of Human Nature." She traces man's mental and moral development from savagery to civilization, and notices the effect on individual and national character. This gradual uplifting into a better and purer moral atmosphere is due mainly, if not wholly, to Christianity in both its direct and its reflex influences. It constitutes an admirable answer to the pessimist who can see nothing so good as in the ages of the past. Surely the world has improved in justice, industry, temperance, and especially in kindness.

But while there is much in human progress in which we ought to rejoice, there are also some things which we may greatly deplore. Together with a great decline in the spirit of revenge, that marked the ancient world, there has also been a falling off, in a lamentable degree, in honest indignation of iniquity, and together with it, the sense of shame and remorse, that ought to characterize those who are guilty. There are Peters to-day who deny their Lord, but they do not go out and "weep bitterly." There are Judases that sell him and betray him with a kiss, but they rarely go and hang themselves. In our times, when men are so far lost to all sense of justice as to commit such crimes, they are lost to all conception of true repentance. Not only so, but we do not "abhor that which is evil" with anything like the intensity of Judaism in its purest days, or of Puritanism of two centuries ago. If men escape the penalties of the law their faults are condoned, and if we do not justify, we at least forgive them. There are many forms of iniquity, notably the liquor traffic, which, if our sense of indignation was at all commensurate with our knowledge of the actual wrong to society, we would at once rise up in the majesty of justice and suppress it. We are timid, half-hearted and complacent—the same now as when, forty years ago, slavery ruled. Had we more of the spirit of the Psalmist, and could we with David appeal to God, "Do not I hate them that hate thee," we would be more efficient in dealing with crimes against society.

If we consider the causes that have led to what may be regarded as an abnormal development of our moral natures, we shall find them to be various. I notice, first, the influence of democratic institutions. Our sense of equality has tended to diminish our reverence for parents, for rulers, and for God. We continually forget him as the source of all authority and all law. Our loyalty both to the state and to our Maker is feeble, hence we so readily condone offences against both human and divine law. The railroad train thunders by on our Christian Sabbath, and we feel annoyed because it disturbs our worship, but we do not burn with indignation as the Puritan fathers would have done. The falsehood and trickery of our political leaders arrests our attention and we deplore it, but we do not say to them, "Retire to private life until you have learned to deal justly even with political opponents." We have not yet learned how to regard equally the rights of men and our obligations to our Maker.

A second cause is the constant parade of crime in the daily press. We are regaled with robberies, the suicides, and the murders. We have them constantly before us in the parlor, the railroad train, and the restaurants. They stare at us from posters and bulletin-boards, and the newsboys cry them at the top of their voices. Pope's lines have become true:

"Vice is a monster of such horrid mein,
That to be hated needs but to be seen;
But seen too oft, familiar with its face,
We first endure, then pity, next embrace."

We need a great reform in our public press.

Third. "The law's delay." The uncertainty of punishment growing out of the intricacies of our legal system, and the intense earnestness with which lawyers give themselves to the work of securing the acquittal of those who have been most clearly convicted at the bar of public opinion, has had a two-fold effect. It has stimulated to mob violence, and the lynching of those accused of crime; and in the better class of citizens it has caused such a sense of uncertainty about punishment as to lead to a great mitigation of the severity with which they would otherwise regard crime. A case in point is that of John L. Sullivan, who was indicted under the laws of Mississippi, tried and convicted of prize-fighting, but took an appeal to the Supreme Court. They set aside the indictment on technicalities, and so the drunken prize-fighter and wife-beater can go scot free. We need a great reform in our methods of punishing crime.

Fourth. The secret lodge system, and especially the familiarity of Masons with murderous oaths, and playing murder in the Master's degree, has done much to blunt the moral sensibilities and to repress honest indignation at iniquity.

Fifth. There has been a great deal of false religious teaching. A false and pernicious system of moral philosophy has pervaded much of our pulpit instruction as well as perverted the religious press. There is less preaching of the law, and, as a result, less of deep and pungent conviction of sin. There is a sort of effeminate tenderness towards sinners of every grade, that more than half condones their iniquity and practically takes sides with them in their controversy with God. We are taught from the pulpit that the impulse of anger is in itself sinful, and that as Christians we must always keep sweet. It is common for certain holiness preachers and writers to say that anger has been all "taken out of them," and that this is because they have become holy. I lately heard a holiness preacher—of no mean ability—say that his anger had been so taken away that he could see his little children beaten and abused not only without resentment, but that he could put his arms in loving embrace about the man that abused them! What a miserable parody on the religion of the Bible! Such holiness has been emasculated, and is fit for idiots. How unlike Him whose wrath abides on the sinner. The blessed Master, if he were here on earth, would make another whip of cords to drive out the teachers that pervert his truth. True, we need to be warned against the power of anger. It must be controlled by justice and reason, and tempered with mercy. It "rests in the bosom of fools." But we need a thousandfold more of honest burning indignation at prevailing sins. We should teach our children and youth that complacency in the presence of sin implies complicity with the iniquity, that we should in "no wise suffer sin upon our brother, but should in any wise rebuke him."

Berea, Ky.

The subject of historical text-books, or rather whether our children shall be taught history or fable, still continues to agitate the public mind. Judge Fallon, the Jesuit member of Boston's school committee, in his minority report condemns Meyer's and Sheldon's histories unsparingly, presenting a long array of to him objectionable quotations, but which without exception are simple, undeniable facts of history. One, for instance, is a mere statement that Edward VI. was Protestant, and that his Catholic sister was called Bloody Queen Mary! Said Madame De Stael, "I knew that Napoleon would fall when I discovered that he no longer cared to know the foundation of things." It will just be as fatal to our nation to ignore historic truth, or instill a carelessness regarding it into the minds of its future citizens, for this is "the foundation of things," without which all governments is at the best a mere experiment. It is to take away from the American republic the very base on which she stands, and substitute the shifting quicksands for the firm granite.

THE INSIDE OF A JESUIT COLLEGE.

It is not often that the public obtains a glimpse of the inside of a Jesuit school. It is carefully shielded from public, and particularly from Protestant gaze. But the veil has been lifted. A Mr. Petre, a Roman Catholic and an Englishman, has interested himself in the subject of education, and is thoroughly persuaded that the system pursued in Roman Catholic schools is out of tune with the age, and in some respects pernicious. He calls aloud for reform, and though of course opposed—as any Romanist who admits that anything in the infallible Church needs reform must be—he has persisted in getting before the English public a series of pamphlets which have attracted favorable attention even in his own communion.

His latest pamphlet is on "Catholic Systems of School Discipline." And here he gives the testimony of his own experience. He was himself a member of the Jesuit College of Stonyhurst. He makes the discipline of this college as experienced by himself an illustration of his position that there is need of reform in this respect.

One great defect Mr. Petre finds to be that the boy is never trusted, never placed upon his honor. "The theory and practice which I found in acceptance at Stonyhurst," says he, "was that at no hour of the day or night should boys be away from the eye of a master." Accordingly, arising at half-past five or six o'clock, a prefect watches them from the dormitory to the lavatory, all in silence. The boys had no separate rooms; their study, their reading, their recreation, all were in the presence of their schoolmates and instructors. "It is the business of the prefects to keep their boys at all times under their eye. This duty is conscientiously performed, and is assisted by the fact that during play-time boys are confined within a square of gravel surrounded by railings or walls, and having on its barren surface eight stunted trees. A boy is not permitted, except under most exceptional circumstances, to leave this square of gravel during his recreation times. The entrance to it is guarded always by one, and usually by three prefects." After supper there was recreation until about half-past eight, always under the eye of a prefect. The boys could read such "mercilessly expurgated books" as were doled out to them, or they could play billiards, bagatelle, chess, draughts, or cards. But no active game, nor even walking about, except such as is required in playing billiards—was allowed. After the recreation hour the boys were "marched into the chapel for night prayers, the passage from play-room to chapel being sentinelled as usual. The last sentinel was the spiritual father, who was posted outside the chapel door. He said the prayers, which lasted about a quarter of an hour. From the chapel we proceeded to the dormitory, which in its internal divisions was under the custody of the three prefects. . . . When the gas was out the prefects remained on guard till presumably the boys were asleep. Then two of them retired, but by turns each one maintained the watch throughout the night, armed with a dark lantern."

How the affections of a boy must have been crushed out by the cast-iron rules of the college may be imagined from the excess of suspicion which would not even allow the confidence and intimacy of personal friendship. We quote: "We were not expected to walk about in couples, in conversation. If talking in couples was at all persisted in the parties were liable to arbitrary separation on the part of the prefects. There is a special fear of 'particular friendships' in the schools of which I am speaking. This fear amounts almost to a superstition, and is of obvious foreign origin. No boy was permitted to lay his hand on a companion. I do not mean to engage in a fight, but to wrestle or to play. The fear of 'romping' was hardly less intense than the fear of 'particular friendships.' Any kind of demonstration of affection was regarded with marked suspicion, with the inevitable result of putting a premium on adventure in this respect. Stonyhurst boys would not have liked to be seen shaking hands with one another. To walk arm in arm would not have been permitted. In all these matters we were surrounded by a close atmosphere of suspicion. The prefects were the empowered administrators of this system, and were bound to uphold it."

But of course we shall find any drawback of this kind amply compensated by the superior facilities for a high education, and, above all, close and intimate relations between the spiritual father and the students of the college. But even here, in these reasonable expectations, we are, according to the testimony of Mr. Petre, doomed to disappointment. As to the high qualifications of the instructors, he says: "In the schools conducted by religious, the professors must necessarily be drawn from the narrow limits of the order, and are generally young scholastics, who are appointed to teach, not because they have any special taste or talents for it, but simply because they are scholastics, and take to teaching as a matter of course, as part of their training. If, at the end of a year, one of them is notoriously found to be incapable, doubtless he is removed. But what, meanwhile, has become of the victims of the experiment, the twenty or thirty boys whom he had to care for? They have passed another year of their lives, and it is well if it has only been wasted. If by chance a body of professors has been found who display aptitude for their work, it will not avail the students long, for as scholastics they must soon be called away to other and more pressing duties. So the weary round goes on; continual experiments are made on the boys, and masters are formed. And if some good material is wasted, if some young lives are spoiled in the process—why, then it is a part of the system."

And as to the spiritual advantages enjoyed in a Jesuit college, our authority declares that he has not found that the spiritual father has usually been chosen with reference to his breadth of sympathy with the boys in their eccentricities, troubles, moods and difficulties, but rather with reference to his zeal for and devotion to the ascetic spirit of St. Ignatius, which appears to be the measure of his piety. He does not gain the confidence of the boys generally. His own experience in the matter is thus stated: "While a boy at Stonyhurst I saw—except in the confessional—little of priests, but much of prefects. I had one or two interviews with the spiritual father in the course of two years, but these were in regard of certain real or supposed delinquencies. I do not think I should like to have been seen going often to his room."

Here we have an inside view of the much-lauded Jesuit college, and we find it conducted on principles of suspicion calculated to repress instead of developing manliness in a boy. We find it governed by rules as unreasonable as they are arbitrary and inflexible. We find it chilling and repressing the warm affections of a boy's heart, and forbidding the formation of personal friendships. We find the youth liable to be the victim of the empiricism of incompetent instructors. And even the religious influence is cold, heartless, and mechanical.—Churchman.

Mr. Joseph Thomson's article on "The Results of European Intercourse with the African," in the March Contemporary Review, will strengthen the hands of the British representatives at the International Conference now sitting in Brussels. The importation of ardent spirits is producing results even more appalling than many philanthropists have pictured. Our own merchants, says Mr. Thomson, through the trade of gin and rum, are spreading ravages of demoralization that ought to clothe us in sackcloth and ashes. European intercourse along the West Coast, and over the whole of East Central Africa, spite of missionary efforts, has been an unmitigated curse. The warehouses along the coast are filled with gin; the air seems to reek with it, and every hut is redolent with its fumes. To walk through the squalor and vice of a village is like a horrible nightmare. Women and children even are calling out for gin, and all is besotment and fiendish debauch. This awful witness is from one who has seen it all, and ought profoundly to affect the Church of God.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

Mrs. Ormiston Chant—The Boston Herald criticizes sensationalism in the city pulpits—The decease of an aged colored minister—Grand Master F. Hewitt pursues his business under the original package decision.

The census man is again going his rounds, and the newspaper humorist (?) resurrecting his stale jokes on woman's proverbial reluctance to tell her age. But why must she always be represented as a spinster? Miss Frances Willard, in the very title of her autobiography, "Glimpses of Fifty Years," ought to have nailed the lie dead. My own observation goes to show that when a woman is a fool it does not matter whether she is married or single; she will always be a fool "for a' that." Mrs. Laura Ormiston Chant, in her address to the employees at Jordan Marsh's the other day, spoke some grandly true words which ought to make every young woman who heard them meet Father Time kindly, and see for herself what a crown of glory waits her wearing from his hand: "Girls, if you are beautiful at 20, and more beautiful at 30, you will be excellent at 40, and as lovely as princesses at 50." At which the Transcript asks, I am afraid just a little sneeringly, "And why not queens at 60, and empresses at three score years and ten?" To be sure, Mrs. Chant probably meant this to be understood. To the subject of a crown monarchical terms "come handy;" but I could mention more than one silver-haired W. C. T. U. president, active in all good works for a quarter of a century, whose superior for queenly grace and dignity might be sought for vainly through all the courts of Europe. All agree that Mrs. Chant has a sweet voice and a wonderfully magnetic presence; and in a public speaker manner has often an undue preponderance over matter. In the latter quality many who have heard her think her deficient, and by no means the equal of some of our own women speakers. But Boston has always a tender side for foreign celebrities. That the warmth of her reception has been appreciated by Mrs. Chant can be seen by her graceful farewell lines:

"Sweet Boston! loyal is thy love,
And royal as thy greeting;
O keep for me, where'er I move,
Dear memory of meeting—

"That if the voice that reached thy soul
Shall falter in its singing,
Across the great waves as they roll
Less clear a note outringing,

"Thine own may sound above the sea,
High comfort and communing,
The oneness of humanity,
Fraternal a-tuning.

"That if the shadow of the hill
Up which I climb falls o'er me
In solemn sadness dark and chill,
And dims the path before me,

"The sunshine of these golden days,
These hours of inspiration,
May send a gleam on after ways,
Fair city, and great nation!"

When the Boston Herald calls the ministers of that city to order for pandering to sensationalism, it is about time for them to stop and seriously ask themselves how such subjects as they announce—more fitting a novel than a sermon—would sound supposing Paul or Peter or John filled the pulpit. It is said that of all the churches in New York which have been sold and transformed into theaters, not one has been successful. The theater and the church can never be made friends. President Buchan, of the Vermont University, says, "The meeting house of the old type is a natural and pathetic expression of the old-fashioned piety out of which it grew." One is tempted sometimes to wonder if this type of piety has forever disappeared with "the meeting house."

Quite a noted character has recently died in New Bedford,—Rev. Thomas H. King, a colored man, for several years pastor of a Methodist Episcopal church in that city. I met him once while stopping for a train at New Bedford, and well remember his upright form, unbent by the weight of four score years, and his coal-black features beaming with good will and intelligence. His life, written by himself, is an eloquent commentary on the horrors of that system which, thank God, is now nothing but a memory. He was born a slave in New Hanover county, North Carolina, and at the age of nine years was sold away from his mother, who, when she implored for one moment more with her boy, received no answer, but a blow from a heavy cow-hide. After years of terrible suffering, during which his wife and children were all sold from him at once, never to be beheld by him again in this life, he escaped as a stow-away on a brig bound for New York. Suspecting the captain, however, of a plot to send him back, he made a raft and put out to sea, and after various adventures arrived in Boston. He preached and lectured in many New England towns, labored some for temperance, and did good work for his enslaved brethren by the recital on the platform of his own thrilling experience in the house of bondage. His sufferings when he became a Christian under his infidel master, who threatened to whip him to death for attending the slave prayer meetings, are graphically described in his little book. During the progress of one of these meetings they were suddenly interrupted by the patrol, a kind of hired police whose duties consisted in finding out and chastising any slaves who might be found thus engaged without their master's permission. One of the band stepped up to an old colored man who was leading in prayer and struck him a blow on the head, but it was the last time he was allowed to maltreat one of these poor servants of Christ, for the next morning he was found dead in his bed; an incident which had the effect of breaking up the patrol system in that vicinity. Besides being a strong temperance man, Mr. King was also an equally-pronounced anti-secretist; as an intelligent man of color can hardly fail to be, after he once learns that lodge benevolence has no more place for the Negro than it has for Christ or for woman.

Grand Master Geo. F. Hewitt, though failing to get a license in Worcester or Boston, is not discouraged; but under the "original package" decision sees no reason why he should get a license at all. Citizens of Worcester have been receiving large, square, yellow envelopes, bearing on the left upper corner the imprint of the royal Hungarian seal, and enclosing a certificate to the effect that an agency had been established in New York to supply the United States and Canada with pure native wines, Geo. F. Hewitt's name being on the outside as wholesale agent for Boston and Worcester. Whether he will succeed in making Judge Fuller's decision override the laws of Worcester, remains for her citizens to determine.

Sanborn, who violated the new city law against bars in order to make a test case, has been fined $100 and costs, but has appealed to the Superior Court. It looks as if the Boston saloonists would have to stand this hamper on their business, of which they so bitterly complain. In a sense they are right, for if high license can make their business legitimate, where is the justice of loading it with any extra burden? But if it be in itself a crime and a wrong, how can license, high or low, make it anything else? A child who has learned the Ten Commandments ought to be able to answer this question. How long shall our legislators be less than children in understanding?

ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, June 11, 1890.

Both Houses of Congress have had a great deal to say about bullion and coin during the past week, but the Senate has had a monopoly, or, shall I say surfeit? of silver eloquence. Senators express anxiety to dispose of the silver question now, and will probably push it to a vote on Friday. In connection with the slow progress made with the debate on the silver question, Senator Platt, of Connecticut, alleged that the Senators waste too much time in preparing and delivering elaborate speeches. He has been waiting on the Silver bill to bring forward two other bills which seemed to him not only of the highest importance, but of the highest privilege—bills for the admission of two Territories as States. In a speech on the silver question Senator Cockrell said those who favored the unlimited coinage of silver were taunted with trying to flood the country with depreciated seventy-two-cent dollars; and the noble national sentiment inscribed on the silver dollar, "In God we trust," was sneered at and derided as meaning "In God we trust—for the other twenty-eight cents to make it a dollar."

The torrid weather of the past week has made our law-makers anxious to get away from Washington as soon as possible, but there is a diversity of opinion among them as to the probable length of the session. Some of them express the belief that there will be an adjournment early in July, while others are looking for an all-summer session. In view of the latter event, the President is prepared to remain at his post through the term. The President's family will go to Cape May to occupy the cottage just donated to them by some of their wealthy Philadelphia friends. It will be an easy matter for Mr. Harrison to join them should Congress adjourn at any time during the summer.

The Speaker of the House proposes to make quite a transformation scene at the Capitol. He has directed the Sergeant-at-Arms to notify the keepers of all sorts of stands, cigar stands, lunch stands, candy, cane and relic stands, all stands where things are kept for sale, that they will be turned out of the House wing of the Capitol after the first of July. There is nothing of the kind on the Senate side of the building. For a long time the question of removing these stands in the House end has been agitated, but heretofore there has been enough influence brought to bear upon the authorities to prevent the order being issued. The telegraph offices are the only thing that will be allowed to remain in the corridors, and after the close of this session they will be put in other rooms, and the corridors will be clear. The United States Capitol will present a much more dignified interior for this expurgation, and then if the recent order prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors at the House restaurant were pushed to practical execution, it could be said that the inside as well as the outside of the great White Dome, is clean.

In a few days there will be a joint Congressional hearing before the Senate House committees on the alcoholic liquor traffic on the joint resolution for National Constitutional Prohibition. This matter has been pending in every Congress for fourteen years, without reaching a vote in either body. At this joint hearing the committee are to be addressed by members of the "National Prohibitory Amendment committee for Congressional work."

The committee consists of the general officers of the several National Prohibition societies of the United States, the general officers of the National Executive Committee of the Prohibition party, and the National W. C. T. U. Superintendent of Legislation and Petitions. The appearance of this committee at this hearing is in furtherance of the "Plan of Canvass," of which Ada M. Bittenbender, the National W. C. T. U. Superintendent of Legislation and Petitions, is the author. The Woman's Christian Temperance Union has made this amendment a special line of work.

The First Presbyterian church of this city, of which Dr. Byron Sunderland has for more than thirty years been pastor, is about to be sold, the attendance being so small that the trustees are unable to pay running expenses. It was this church that President Cleveland attended, and of which his wife was a member. Such was the desire to see the President that during his administration it was necessary to have always a policeman in waiting to hold the great crowd in check. There must be quite a large membership still in connection with this organization. They have done great good in the past, and there is in the immediate vicinity a large population who rarely attend any place of worship. It has been suggested that, instead of surrendering the ground, they will go out into the highways and call in the "poor, the halt and the maimed." Such may not be able to pay pew rent, but they will be greatly blest by hearing the Gospel, and a faithful church which does not have respect to persons will be greatly honored of God.

Daniel Webster said in his famous speech on the Girard will case: "By the Christian world, throughout its broadest extent, it has been and is held as a fundamental truth that religion is the only solid basis of morals, and that moral instruction not resting on this basis is only a building upon sand." And at what age of the Christian era have those who professed to teach the Christian religion or to believe in its authority or importance, not insisted on the absolute necessity of inculcating its principles and its precepts upon the young? In what age, by what sect, where, when, by whom, has religious truth been excluded from the education of youth? Nowhere; never. Everywhere and at all times it has been and is regarded as essential. It is of the essence, the vitality, of useful instruction."

THE CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR SOCIETY.

Deserving to succeed is of greater consequence than some cases of actual success, and the "rap-ture of endeavor" is no small pay. Activity in Christian work gives a great and lasting return. There is never a dearth in the Christian labor-market. No one is "locked out," and none need stand "all the day idle." "Go ye also into the vineyard, and whatsoever is right I will give you," is addressed to every man, woman and child, by the Spirit of God. Each is urged to lay up treasures in heaven. Now is the time to do that. It is well to begin early in life.

About five thousand young people met last week in St. Louis, whose "names and purposes" are Christian Endeavor. This Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor is the youngest and largest religious society in the world. Undenominational and world-wide, it aims to win the world to Jesus Christ. Its creed is: "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved and thy house." Its endeavors are along established lines, and work is done in the churches to which the different members may belong.

Portland, Me., was the cradle of this great society in its infancy. In 1880 Rev. F. E. Clark banded together the young people of his church with the purpose of finding something for each to do and a way to do it. There were sixty members in that first society. Now, after less than ten years there are 660,000 members.

Governor Francis welcomed the convention at St. Louis, and remarked: "As the blood of the martyrs was the seed of the church, so the blood of the young people must be the life of the church." Dr. Nicolls welcomed them in the name of the churches of St. Louis, and said: "You are as welcome as the springtime with its flowers." Trained as they are "to keep step in so noble a purpose," he could bid them Godspeed without any misgivings whatever.

Dr. "Father Endeavor" Clark, as Gov. Francis christened him, spoke of the remarkable growth of the past year. As many societies have been organized in the last eleven months as in the first seven years of the endeavor movement. Seventeen thousand new members were received each month. Mere numerical growth is not an aim of the society, hence the work to which especial attention was directed is that done in the 11,000 churches, and as many prayer meetings held every week, where it has been proven that the movement is based "upon principle and not upon meaningless enthusiasm." Rev. Drs. Barrows and Henson, of this city, addressed the convention.

I try to be a friend to every newsboy. I frequently buy a paper, not because I want the paper, but because I like to please the boy who offers it to me. On my way to church last Sunday morning I received, as usual, several invitations to buy a copy of the Tribune. I answered, "No, I thank you, sir," and I felt inclined, as usual, to emphasize my answer by a sermon on Sunday observance. But I am usually so late to church, anyway, that I have no time to lose. Last Sunday I was compelled to disappoint a boy in a new way. He asked me if I had a match. "Yes," I said. "Will you give it me?" he asked. I noticed that he had a cigarette in his hand. "You want it for smoking?" "Yes." "No, sir, you can't have it," and passed on to preach my sermon on "Christian Happiness." It was clear that I ought not to have given the boy a match, but I like to gratify the wish of a poor boy. I want to tell him that I am his friend. I think I ought to have called him to my side and said, "My boy, you ought not to smoke; you can't have a match; give me the cigarette, and I will give you five cents," and then have torn the bit of noxious weed in pieces and thrown the fragments into the gutter.—Rev. C. F. Thwing, in the Advance.

Senator Evarts has become the champion, in his branch of Congress, of the anti-saloon amendment to the Interstate Commerce act, designed to prevent the national rum carnival that threatens to grow out of the Supreme Court's "original package" decision.

REFORM NEWS.

SOUTHERN ILLINOIS GREET'S BRO. HAWLEY.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Since my last writing I have spoken in the United Presbyterian church, eight miles from Salem, in Madison county. Rev. M. Stewart, of Omaha, was holding a series of revival meetings when I arrived. I attended his meetings on Friday and Saturday nights, and preached Sabbath morning, and gave an address on Monday night.

Over twenty converts united with the church the Sabbath I was there, and the sacraments of baptism and the Lord's Supper were administered. I visited a number of towns and made the acquaintance of the friends of reform, and distributed some literature.

Sabbath morning, the 8th of June, I attended the United Presbyterian church of Coulterville, Randolph county, and listened to a sermon from Rev. Mr. Montieth, the pastor, on the subject, "Christ, our Burden-bearer." The pastor invited me to occupy his pulpit at night, and announced that I would preach on "The Relation of the Secret Orders to the Christian Religion." At 4 p. m. I listened to an address from a W. C. T. U. lady, given in the New School Covenant church.

It threatened rain at night, but the house was well filled, and the pastor expressed his approbation of my effort. Words of commendation, so strong that I modestly forbear to write them, were spoken by a layman who greeted me at the close of the meeting.

I would gladly spend a month in this part of the State, but the time of the annual meeting of the N. C. A. is so near that I must soon turn my face towards Chicago.

They have largely depended upon the wheat crop in this part of the State. Both wheat and oats are so nearly a failure this season that it seems an unpropitious time to solicit financial aid to carry on the N. C. A. work. But I have made the acquaintance of some of the friends, and, at a more favorable time, I doubt not they will cheerfully give as the Lord has prospered them for the support of this department of Christian work. For a number of years past they have had but one good crop, and now the prospect of a crop being so poor they are financially depressed. So, after calling at Sparta and Marissa, and consulting with some of the friends of the N. C. A. reform, I turn my face northward. Yours for Christ, and for the defence of his Gospel against the soul-destroying religious philosophy of the lodge,

C. F. HAWLEY.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE G. A. R.

DEKALB, Iowa.

No set of men have my best wishes more than do the old soldiers. Their interests are mine. They have my sympathy and respect. In charity they should have my prayers for their salvation, and tears for their misfortune and sorrow. My regard for them is because of the sacrifices they have made and the privation they have suffered for the defence of liberty under the Stars and Stripes. Nothing could be invented that would increase my most profound respect for them. Even a nation's gratitude to them should rest solely upon their valor in service, and not upon an association, not even the church.

We have been kindly invited to join the G. A. R. An association of the veterans of the late war for social intercourse might be desirable, if it could be organized without any objectionable features. But the G. A. R. divides the old soldiers, though not so intended by them. There are those who cannot be members of the G. A. R. without compromising their religion. For United Brethren to join that order would be to violate the constitution and abandon the anti-secrecy principles of the old church. True, they might still claim to be United Brethren, but they would be counterfeit church members as far as principle and law is concerned. If one did not love the principles of the church he might then withdraw and join the G. A. R. It is right to love the church of God above any other institution, and the U. B. church is in principle one little department of his organized church. No orthodox church has any law recognizing any lodge as it does the family, church or state. No church known to us has any law positively favoring the lodge, even where principles have been compromised or changed to accomplish such a result.

If the ex-soldiers had an open organization (not secret) in which all might participate, there would be less division, and the principles of the church not desecrated. The church will insist that her membership "have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness," though some of large numbers may be weak on that point for a time.

CYRUS SMITH.

PEOPLE AND THINGS IN THE TENNESSEE MOUNTAINS.

NORMAL INSTITUTE, GRAND VIEW, Tenn.

"Sing it o'er and o'er again," comes from the little chapel, and it sounds just as it did in Wheaton. Our hymns make distance insignificant and make true churches in every place one. And that is merely saying that true Christianity is one; and what lacks oneness is not Christianity. Humanity is one if unregenerate, and when regenerate are one again. The power that makes them one is Christ power; and what would make them any other than one, whether organized segregation or insignificant distinctions, is devil power. "Even now are there many anti-Christians."

But I was about to say that I have never been impressed with differences between peoples of different localities as some writers seem to be. Human intelligence, as distinguished from conventional education, and what we commonly call "human nature," has always addressed me with the right of recognition stronger than any local customs and variations of spirit and manners. And then, too, the novelties that amuse us at first will often show some good reason in their origin.

The chop-sticks of the Chinaman were a good invention to prevent the first at the bowl from getting all it contained. The Southern hoe makes a New Englander smile very wisely till he has occasion to fight bushes as well as weeds; and then he finds good sense in the strong neck and thick blade of the planter's tool. I have seen boys cutting bushes eighteen inches high with the hoe, after the first plowing of the corn or potatoes. The growth of timber here in a single month is astonishing.

The people (who do not like to be called "natives," neither would we) are such as can be found all over these United States. Give certain conditions and traditions and you have the people everywhere. Poverty is not good ground for religion or any other thing desirable. "Give me neither poverty nor riches" has a demonstration of its wisdom over the entire land and world. The poverty of the Southern people is not any more their fault than the poverty of many Northern people is their fault; and I have reason to believe that there is almost no liquor used among these mountain people. I have never seen nor smelled the proof of it in a single instance. Only in the railroad towns in the valley and in the terminal cities does the traveler observe it. And yet they are distressingly poor. Nor is it the poverty of the soil or an utter want of common sense in tilling that explains the fact. The people have never had money. The old slave system needed but little. The poor white man had a "truck" account at the store, and the habit hangs to him to-day of bartering with some old dealer, even when he is offered the money at his own door. Since the war, the waves of enterprise that used the money of the nation have moved across the Northern States, and not until within seven or ten years have the Southern States felt the power of money. In many places such a thing as a market hardly exists.

Field laborers have often worked for $10 per month and board. When we sell them a second-hand dress for ten cents we do not regard it as a gift. In the berry season the women pick immense quantities and often sell at ten cents per gallon. A reasonable rate of transportation where there are railway connections, would give them hundreds of dollars annually instead of tens, from the native berries. A quick market for sweet potatoes would increase their production enormously. This is the home of peanuts also. They are just now coming up, looking like peas.

I think the tobacco vice is the worst one here.

Its power to enervate, and to destroy all enterprise is fearfully apparent; and what makes the fact the more formidable, as a hindrance to social progress, is the example of Northern people who use and sell tobacco. One man from Pennsylvania was lamenting his inability to provide hives for his bees; and offered me bees for hives, if I would help him. He needed just ten dollars to house the new bees; and the bees wouldn't wait. I watched for the right moment to ask him what his tobacco cost him. "Ten dollars a year," said he.

"Just what you need for hives," said I.

"That's so; but the doctor told me, years ago, to use it to reduce my flesh. So I'm at it still."

I would favor the absolute prohibition of the tobacco trade at the earliest practicable moment.

Masonry, the omnipresent, is here—not made much account of in the mountains, but pushing itself into notice in all the village and city locals. I send you an interesting clipping from one of the Chattanooga papers, which will show you how the average editor is duped, or how he himself presumes upon the popular ignorance of secrecy shams.

One of my congregation who has been an Odd-fellow, and left them long ago with disgust, said to one of his associates who preached about their benevolences, "Yes,—benevolences! and you use a log to roll a hand-spike with!" He is a reader of the Cynosure, and through him it will reach several families.

I have spoken in plain terms of the monstrous frauds of Masonry. "At my first answer no man (that I knew of) stood by me." Masons and others would discuss my methods (as though that was all they cared for) and conclude that the time was not "opportune." Iniquity and ignorance demand great conveniences; and are very nice about methods. Staying away from Sabbath service seems to be the plan of resortment, and I do not feel obliged to recognize even that. The boys and young men read and learn. "I have been often asked to join the Masons," said one of them a few days ago. I have not the least fear of his doing it now.

My opportunities of reaching the young people in public address is not as good as it was at Wheaton. Many of the people in the valley towns manage to get their children home from Friday night till Monday morning. In this I suspect there is more priestcraft than some of our workers imagine. The "native" preachers seem to be in full control of the masses; and to prejudice the people against us. Stories absurdly false start out right after the man who attempts to get in an appointment to give the people two or three meetings a month instead of one. All over the mountains and down the valleys went the awful story after me: "He said he had come down here to convert the heathen." Having never said anything of the kind, either in public or in private, I was compelled to consider the lie a regular mode of attack. But those who start them are the few and the rest simply do not know the contrary. Sectarianism is more discouraging here, or elsewhere, than any common vice of the nominally unregenerate. And this is true not alone of the Southern born. The imported sectarian is here also, and he is like the rest, whether North or South. When the people learn that Congregationalism is very nearly no-sect-ism, they will antagonize it less. For my part, I would favor dropping even that name. For we are not the only Congregationalists. The Baptists, many of them, are also like us in polity. Some of the Methodists are also Congregational. It is a name without distinction—an imaginary line that sometimes proves a fence between folds, while Christianity is a fence around the "one fold"—under the "One Shepherd." A. J. CHITTENDEN.

BE ON TIME.

MARYVILLE, MO.

To God's People of America:—I have a message from God to you. I want to deliver it on time. It will be vital for the nation and the world's good that you give timely heed to Him whose right it is to command. At the world's great meeting to be held in Chicago—

1. God demands a place!

2. Where his people from all the nations that may meet in our great city on that important occasion may worship Him who is a spirit "in spirit and in truth."

3. To be known, and fully understood from first to last, that God only leads his own worship!

4. It will then and there be clearly seen that there is a "God in Israel."

5. As to those who would even tell God how to conduct such a vast gathering to prevent confusion or disorder, contention, etc.,—to that class of men and women, Jesus will have some one ready to read just in time, 1 Tim. 3: 15, "that thou mayest know how thou oughtest to behave thyself," etc. That will settle them.

6. If any one would utter one word to cause confusion, without even hinting at a reply to such an one, God will just in time have some one full of love to quote and explain 1 Cor. 14: 33, "God is not the author of confusion, but of peace, as in all churches of the saints." If there should be present any old women from Corinth, they would soon understand God's order, as in Gal. 6: 6, "Communicate good things."

7. All following Jesus, we all dwell in or live in the spirit of Ps. 133: 1, "Behold how good and pleasant it is for brethren,"—yes, for brethren from all nations—"to dwell together in unity."

Now, brethren of the United States, let us obey God and prepare a tent that will hold ten thousand (10,000). That can be made into ten tents for Gospel mission work after the world's meeting closes, these tents to be used in all the States in destroying the works of the devil, until worn out. Now, beloved in the Lord, as sin at this great meeting will abound, let us see that "grace shall much more abound." Hence, let us be on time in getting all things ready; and on time and in our places at these meetings. Finally, on time when Jesus calls us home.

Yours until we meet to part no more,

RUFUS SMITH.

LITERATURE.

NATURE'S SERIAL STORY. By Edward P. Roe. Illustrated by William Hamilton Gibson and F. Dielman. Pp. 486. Price, 50 cents. Dodd, Mead & Co., New York.

Thousands of American boys and girls will remember with what pleasure they read a few years ago in the St. Nicholas magazine the charming story of country life, "Driven Back to Eden," by Mr. Roe. The present volume is much after the same pattern, only written for readers of mature mind. "Nature's Serial Story" appeared first some years ago in Harper's Magazine, and its popularity at the time warrants the present publishers in re-issuing the work in paper cover with a popular price. It is, in reality, the chemistry and philosophy of agriculture, ornithology, floriculture, etc., etc., taught in a charming way, so interwoven with a beautiful story of home life in a Christian household, that the attentive reader has a whole treatise on these interesting studies so happily developed that the memory easily retains the instruction. Mr. Roe was one of the most popular of American writers. The total sales of his books up to April 10 amounted to 2,027,000 copies. The cheap editions have been issued from time to time in limited numbers—usually of a 100,000 copies of each book. A fact of great significance concerning the popularity of the author, and also concerning the question of cheap books, is that the sale of editions in paper have not seemed to interfere with, but rather to promote the circulation of more expensive library edition of Mr. Roe's works.

The danger to our public schools lies not so much in the desire of the Catholic laity to have them destroyed, as it does in the hate entertained toward them by the comparatively few of the clerical party in the Catholic church. The far-reaching schemes of the clerical party demand that the American schools be superseded by those of their own devising. But the Catholic parents who seek the education of their children merely, with no care for the Pope's universal sway, are very well satisfied with the schools as they were before the Bible was cast out of them. We offer as evidence of this a pamphlet of 30 pages, by the Arnold Publishing Association, Boston, containing an open letter by an Irish Catholic layman to Bishop Keane, rector of the new Catholic university at Washington, D. C. Price, 10c.

"Christian Co-operation. Its necessity and value." Addresses by W. E. Dodge, president of the Evangelical Alliance for the United States. Deprecating the fact of so many waning, jealous factions in the Lord's church and recognizing that the good done by the various denominations is not due to their denominational systems, but rather in spite of them, and realizing that these various sects hinder, to no small extent, the evangelization of the world, the Alliance seeks to promote unity of feeling, sympathy and co-operation. The author says: "The divisions which separate the various bodies of the Protestant church arose largely from political causes and local conditions, in times and in countries where social usages and forces were absolutely different from those ruling in our own. . . . Most of these divisions would not have arisen under the freedom of worship and kindly charity of these better days. . . . We cannot afford to spend time or energy on differences which do not affect our vital belief, or our loyal services for Christ and our brothers about us who are in suffering and ignorance. We hope soon to be in our Father's presence, where everything that divides us now will seem unworthy of a thought. Why should we not agree to reduce these differences to the smallest point now, while we are doing the Father's work on earth, gladly emphasizing the living points of agreement which unite us to each other and to him. We shall never have the respect or confidence of the godless world about us until we do this."

Following in the line of the large English publishers who have opened agencies to the United States, comes the announcement that the Religious Tract Society of London are also about to establish a depository in this country. Mr. Fleming H. Revell (New York and Chicago), has been appointed sole agent for the Society, and will supply both the wholesale and retail trade from both points. The publications of the Religious Tract Society are by no means confined to "Tracts." On the other hand they are among the largest publishers in Great Britain of fine illustrated gift books, works of travel, science, healthy fiction and popular juveniles, as well as the most valuable theological and devotional volumes. Owing to the somewhat conservative policy of this Society in the past, their valuable issues have not been known in this country except to a very limited extent, but in literary worth and attractive style of production they are second to none.

The Second Million. It is not often that a publication passes the millionth milestone in its circulation, but H. L. Hastings lecture on The Inspiration of the Bible, delivered before the annual convention of the Y. M. C. Association of Massachusetts in 1881, before 1890 had reached a circulation of about 1,500,000 copies, and is still marching on more rapidly than ever, Mr. John K. Hastings having in the autumn of 1889 issued a single edition of more than 500,000 copies in London for circulation throughout the British Empire. Persons who are interested in seeing a lecture on the Bible which circulates by the million, among skeptics and Christians, and which has been commended by eminent men on both sides of the Atlantic, should send a few shillings to H. L. Hastings, 47 Cornhill, Boston, for copies of this and the various other five-cent pamphlets included in the Anti-Infidel Library.

The Full Significance of 1492, by John B. Shipley, is an unusual number of the Elzevir Library published by John B. Alden of New York. It is an argument full of interest and historical statement to prove that Columbus was inspired by the Catholic hierarchy at Rome to make his voyage to the west in 1492, and that on a visit to Iceland he had been assured of the discovery of America made hundreds of years before, and colonized by the Scandinavians. Columbus is not given a very amiable character by this author, and the warning is given that in the proposed celebration of 1892 Romanism hopes to gain much influence in this country.

Biblia for June supplies Bible students, teachers and readers with valuable notes on the International Lessons; Daily Bible readings for the Bible Readers' Union; Weekly topics for Christian Endeavor meetings and the Epworth League; and interlinear translations from Old Testament Hebrew and New Testament Greek. The contributed papers are, "The Wellhausen Theory of the Pentateuch," "Hebrew Word Studies" and "The Epworth League." Published at 198 Broadway, N. Y.

It has been stated on excellent authority that Mr. Kennan's articles in the Century have been read by the Czar of Russia, though in general the numbers of the magazine which contain the Siberian papers continue to be refused admission to Russia until the obnoxious articles have been expurgated by the press censor, a process known as "blacking out," which was fully described by Mr. Kennan in the Century for May.

Vick's Magazine for June must needs remember the roses, and so there is an editorial talk about this queen of the flowers, but the attractive colored illustration is of the Golden Fleece Arbution. "The Famous Trees and Forests" of California is a most attractive article, and no lady will omit what is said of "Bouquet-making."

The Teachers' Tool Chest, published by Silas Farmer & Co., of Detroit, Mich., for six cents, is a small illustrated pamphlet which aids all teachers by way of allegory to understand their work and the means and methods of working. The rules and maxims of the teachers' art are seldom given more clearly and concisely.

OBITUARY.

REV. CHAUNCEY REYNOLDS, one of the oldest and most esteemed citizens of Hillsdale, Michigan, died at his home in that place, Thursday, May 29, after a brief illness.

The following notice of the life of this warm supporter of the reform represented by the Cynosure for many years we glean from the College Herald of Hillsdale:

"Mr. Reynolds was born in eastern New York, being one of a large family of children. When a young man he came westward to Genesee county, where he lived a few years, and from there came in 1828 to Michigan, locating in Wayne county. Here he was employed at the carpenter's trade for about eight years, and then moved to Ionia county, where he engaged in farming. Although a poor boy, Mr. Reynolds was one of those who rise above obstacles, and before he moved from Ionia county he had amassed an estate valued at $15,000.

Impressed with the conviction that he ought to devote himself to the work of the ministry, he was afterward ordained in the Free Will Baptist denomination and labored for several years as a pastor. He was one of the founders of the Michigan Central College, at Spring Arbor, now Hillsdale College, and was for twenty-five or thirty years a trustee. Of his eleven children nine were raised to manhood and womanhood, each of whom attended college either at Spring Arbor or Hillsdale, seven of them having been students of Hillsdale College. About twenty-five years ago he sold his estate and moved to Hillsdale, where he has since resided. His aged wife and seven of the children are now living. Mr. and Mrs. Reynolds celebrated their 60th wedding anniversary in October of 1888, at which time a large concourse of friends from various parts of the State assembled to do them honor.

"No tribute of words can do justice to the memory of so noble a character as has just passed away. His life has been marked for his steadfast loyalty to the convictions of duty, and the taint of a single bad habit was not to be found upon his character. Of such men it is but a feeble expression of the truth to say that the world is better for their having lived.

"It is true he was a radical, but radically right. He was not only anti-slavery in belief, but his home was one of the stations on the 'Underground Railroad,' and the fearful fugitives ate and slept in security, while the family kept watch lest they should be overtaken and captured by their pursuers. The moral law was to him more binding than the civil when they came in conflict, although always obedient to the 'powers that be' when the human enactment was not contrary to the divine. He was thoroughly loyal to good government and firmly believing that secrecy is dangerous to the perpetuity of the civil institutions and inconsistent with the Christian profession, he was strongly opposed to all secret orders, on the ground of principle. He was temperate not only in regard to alcoholic drinks, but as fully so in regard to the use of tobacco, and would not vote to ordain a minister who used it. He believed in women having a right to vote, because of her equality of rights and privileges with man, and because he deemed her greater moral and social purity more likely to protest successfully, by the use of the ballot, against the untold wrongs of intemperance, from which women suffer. He was sound in Christian doctrine, and although never taught in any theological school, the young men of this generation could learn from him the true significance of scriptural precepts and prophecies much above many whose only preparation has been in the schools, for he made the Bible a study prayerfully and was taught of the Spirit. Without many school privileges in early life, he was really a man of thought, which was evinced in his public labors, and in his intercourse with men. He saw the need of education and gave his children as liberal advantages as his means would allow. He was energetic even to his latest hour, and with the prosperity God granted him he promoted the interests of the church and our denominational enterprises almost to his own impoverishment."

It is conjectured that a specific may yet be found for every ill that flesh is heir to. However this may be, certainly the best specific yet found for diseases of the blood is Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and most diseases originate from impure blood.

CONSUMPTION SURELY CURED.

TO THE EDITOR:—Please inform your readers that I have a positive remedy for above named disease. By its timely use thousands of hopeless cases have been permanently cured. I shall be glad to send two bottles of my remedy FREE to any of your readers who have consumption, if they will send me their Express and P. O. address. Respectfully, T. A. SLOCUM, M. D., 181 Pearl St., New York.

FLOWER SEEDS.

To any one sending 15 cents in stamps or silver, I will send five different kinds of Flower Seeds of choice varieties. Send stamped and addressed envelope.

VICTORIA A. BUCK.

East Randolph, N. Y.

KILLED WITHOUT INQUEST.

Though we have printed this matter twice in the Cynosure, and run extra copies, we have not been able to meet the demand, hence a cheap edition has been gotten out in circular form. Price per pound, postpaid, 30 cents; half pound, 15 cents; one-third pound, 10 cents.

WEBSTER'S DICTIONARY and the Christian Cynosure for $4.25, seems a very little amount to pay for so much valuable matter.

You get 832 pages of Cynosure for the dollar and a half!

And whoever has renewed their subscriptions within the last six months can get 1280 pages of Dictionary, sent postpaid for $2.75!!

Read the advertisement on page 15, "A REMARKABLE OFFER."

CONCERNING PREMIUMS.

We offer premiums to compensate such of our subscribers as take the pains and trouble to secure new subscribers to the Cynosure. Many who do this refuse to receive pay, and work because they love the work; others are glad to receive premiums. But,

First, We do not offer any man a premium to renew his own subscription. If a man has taken this paper a year and does not care enough about it to take it longer without being hired to, we do not offer him a premium.

Second, We do not offer a premium to a new subscriber to hire him to take the paper. When he has subscribed for the paper and paid for it himself, and knows its worth, then if he will take the trouble to introduce the paper to others, he can have a premium on the new subscription, but not on his own.

Third, We do not offer a premium where one member of a family stops the paper, and another member of the same family subscribes for it. We do not consider such a name the name of a new subscriber.

Any book we publish or sell can be had as a premium at reasonable rates. We will allow thirty cents' worth of any of our publications, at retail rates, postpaid, for one dollar's worth of new subscriptions to the Cynosure.

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 20 cents per pound:

1. Historical Sketch—National Christian Association.
2. Address to American Pastors.
3. Freemasonry in the Family.
4. President C. G. Finney on the duty of Christians towards the Lodge.

7. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
8. Modern Heathenism.
9. Ministers at Rival Altars.
12. Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodge.
15. Secrecy and Sin.
16. Selling Dead Horses.
17. History of Masonry.
18. Despotism Character of Freemasonry.
19. Freemasonry, a Christ-excluding Religion.

22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.

28. Nathaniel Colver, D.D., on Masonry.

33. Hon. Wm. H. Seward on Secret Societies.

37. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).

39. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?

44. D. L. Moody on Secret Societies.

45. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?

49. John Quincy Adams on the duty of American Voters.

Chapters in American Politics.

Masonry vs. Prohibition.

Decline of the G. A. R.

Christianity and Odd-fellowship. Part 1, 4 pages; part 2, 4 pages.

The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—20 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

GENERAL AGENT AND LECTURER, J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

WASHINGTON DEPARTMENT, No. 215 4½ St., N. W.: FIELD AGENT, W. B. Stoddard.

NEW ENGLAND AGENT, Miss E. E. Flagg, Wellesley, Mass.

COLLEGE AGENT, Rev. S. F. Porter, Cynosure office.

SPECIAL AGENT, Enos W. Shaw, Cynosure office, Chicago.

STATE AGENTS.

Illinois, Rev. C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, DuPage Co., Illinois.

Minnesota, E. Hanson, Minneapolis.

New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimball, New Market.

Ohio, Rev. H. H. Hinman, Oberlin.

Pennsylvania, Rev. J. T. Michael, 2942 Westmont Street, Philadelphia.

Alabama, Rev. G. M. Elliott, Selma.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.

Nathan Callender, Montdale, Pa.

J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa.

T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.

E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.

H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.

J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.

A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.

J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.

W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.

J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.

Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.

J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.

Rev. E. Mathews, Long Island City, N. Y.

E. Barnetson, Haskinsville, N. Y.

Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.

D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.

A. W. Parry, Annawan, Ill.

THE N. C. A. FUNDS.

The General Fund is that from which the running expenses of the Association are paid. From it the agents on the field are supported.

The Foreign Fund is that from which the foreign demand for literature against the lodge is supplied to missionaries.

The Free Tract Fund clearly stated by its name the object for which contributions are solicited. Millions of pages have been distributed by means of this fund.

The Cynosure Ministers' Fund. The donations to this fund have enabled the Association to send many copies of the Cynosure to the ministers of the South, especially to pastors of colored churches. The result has been a blessing to them and their churches.

Contributions to any or all these funds are urgently solicited.

FORM OF BEQUEST.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of — dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be sufficient discharge.

THE N. C. A. BUILDING
(The gift of Philo Carpenter.)

AND OFFICE OF
The Christian Cynosure,
221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

The National Christian Association

PRESIDENT—Eld. J. L. Barlow, Bloomington, Wis.

VICE PRESIDENT—Rev. M. A. Gault, Blanchard, Iowa.

COR. SEC'Y and GENERAL AGENT, J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SEC'Y and TREASURER—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

DIRECTORS—J. L. Barlow, C. A. Blanchard, A. J. Chittenden, H. A. Fischer, John Gardner, G. R. Milton, J. P. Richards, John Sutcliffe, Alexander Thomson, E. Whipple, E. R. Worrell.

The object of this Association is: "To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

PRESIDENT—Rev. Henry T. Cheever, Worcester, Mass.

SECRETARY—Henry L. Kellogg, Chicago, Ill.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS.

NEW ENGLAND.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic, Conn.; Sec'y and Agent, Miss E. E. Flagg, Wellesley, Mass.; Treas., Z. Graves, Harris, Mass.

ALABAMA.—Pres., Prof. Pickens; Sec., G. M. Elliott; Treas., Rev. C. B. Curtis; all of Selma.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., Rev. G. R. Milton, Elgin; Sec., A. H. Hiatt, Wheaton; Treas., Ezra A. Cook, Chicago.

INDIANA.—Pres., William H. Figg, Reno; Sec., S. L. Cook, Albion; Treas., Benjamin Ulsh, Silver Lake.

IOWA.—Pres., Wm. Johnston, College Springs; Cor. Sec., C. D. Trumbull, Morning Sun; Rec. Sec., W. L. Enlow, Birmingham; Treas., Wm. Crawford, Washington.

KANSAS.—Pres., J. S. T. Milligan, Denison; Sec., S. Hart, LeCompton; Treas., J. A. Torrence, Denison.

MAINE.—Pres., Isaac Jackson, Harrison; Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W. Goddard, West Sidney.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Treas., David Manning, Sr., both Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., S. B. Sjoblom, Ferguson Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul; Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., B. F. Miller, Eagleville; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec., A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

NEBRASKA.—Pres., S. Austin, Fairmount; Cor. Sec., W. Spooner, Kearney; Treas., J. C. Fye.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., A. A. Hoyt, Littleton; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., Isaac Hyatt, Gifford Village.

NEW YORK.—Pres., Prof. A. R. Dodd Houghton; Sec., Rev. W. A. Hazlett, Belmont; Treas., P. D. Miller, Newfane.

OHIO.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Parry; Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Seneca; Cor. Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Seneca.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., Nathan Callender, Montdale; Cor. Sec., E. J. Chalfant, York; Treas., J. C. Young, Custer City.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. W. Wood, Baraboo; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie; Treas., M. R. Britton, Vienna.

The Christian Cynosure.

J. BLANCHARD, EDITOR.

HENRY L. KELLOGG, ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JUNE 19, 1890.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

SALT LAKE CITY, June 9, 1890.

TO OUR READERS:—If we count Alaska as United States territory, we are far east of the middle of our great country; and if Satan ever blows up our Union he will be apt to place his dynamite near the center of it. A small boy has often stopped a locomotive and prevented the wreck of a great train, loaded with lives; so it was my hope to raise signals at San Francisco and here in Utah, which, however diminutive, the Christian press may notice, and warn in time, that class of minds whom Christ called the earth's salt and light.

The editor of the Pacific, a fearless Vermonter and Christian, has promised to give the Christians on that Coast, who read his columns, what I wrote for and read to the ministers there, concerning the spurious priestism which settled California; and the Cynosure will, of course, give it to us.

We are here to take some note of the Mormon children of the "beast and false prophet;" what they are; whence they come; and whether they are likely to "go into perdition" and take the country with them; or, if the latter is to be prevented, what is the means?

We were met, Saturday morning at Ogden, forty miles north of here, by Rev. A. J. Bailey and his accomplished wife, who has spoken for this valley in all parts of the United States. The New West Academy, a fine building, is largely the result of her industry and eloquence. Her husband, under the American Home Missionary Society, has erected a commodious church building for the First Congregational church of Ogden of which he is pastor, and they are united, in their labors and oversight of the cause of Christ in Utah, with Presbyterian, Baptist and Methodist missionaries.

Mr. Bailey was to preach a baccalaureate sermon for Prof. Benner's infant college at Salt Lake next day (Sabbath). So, leaving Mrs. Prof. Fischer (my daughter) and her little ones under the soft wings of Mrs. Bailey, I took the cars with her husband for this city, which aspired to be the Rome of an American Italy, as it was the Mecca of the hegira of our American Mohammed and his Saracens when his crimes drove them from Nauvoo.

Mr. Bailey preached the baccalaureate sermon to a fine congregation, yesterday, in the opera house, which was bedizened with green sprays and flowers; and the press gives it nearly entire. It is an able production, and the institution is prosperous.

In the afternoon we listened to a couple of Mormon priests (Gates and Stevens) who addressed, we judged, some two thousand Mormons in the Tabernacle. The speakers were old men; had been companions of Joseph Smith; and addressed a crowd as sincere as maniacs and attentive as devotees. The immense organ accompanied a choir of, it may be, two hundred singers, who sung such hymns as "Holy Jesus," etc., and the music was in good taste. I took a gallery seat among their head men and close to the speakers, who were able men, and for the many thousandth time, recited to the same ears the story of Joseph Smith and bore witness to the angel visits he had at Palmyra, N. Y., near the hill of Cumorah, where, on golden plates, Joseph was directed to find the history of the mound-builders. Stevens bore witness to the signs of Christ's coming in 1833 when he was 13 years of age, riding forty miles to carry the mail on horseback. A shower of stars fell from heaven, which alarmed people greatly; and Joseph Smith came soon into his school district, and young Stevens became a Mormon, and he had preached fifty-seven years. Both priests bore witness "that Mormonism was eternal;" that it would conquer and clear out its enemies from these valleys, and "then," hesitating, and slightly hissing, "we will attend to those outside of these valleys."

Twenty-six years ago while our terrible war was being waged, I spent two weeks in this city of Salt Lake. Gen. P. Edwards Conner, with whom I have just now been conversing here, then commanded two regiments in this city, and was the first officer, civil or military, who forced Mormons to respect the United States flag. Every Mormon was then a rebel; and their priests then spoke boldly what these two priests only dared to hint. Heber Kimball, a coarse ruffian priest, told the crowd in this same Tabernacle that the "prophet" Joseph had predicted what was now coming to pass:—that the North and South, like the Kilkenny cats, would fight till not even their tails would be left; "Then," said the filthy dreamer, gloatingly, "then who will have the wives and daughters of those men?"

The burden of the two discourses was another priesthood besides Christ, and Stevens pointed triumphantly to as hard-looking old men as I ever saw outside of a penitentiary, whom he called "apostles." One of these apostles, addressing a crowd in southern Utah, I was informed by Judge Anderson, declared that he had seen devils cast out of afflicted people, and had seen them run from those whom they had possessed.

On Monday we called on Gov. Thomas, appointed by President Harrison. He is an uncommonly fine looking young man. He gave us his last report which I have glanced over, and think it one of the best state papers I have seen. The readers of the Cynosure shall have the means of judging of its merits. Judge Anderson, whose decision on the legality of naturalizing Mormons who have sworn the endowment oaths has moved the mind of the United States, has promised us a corrected copy of that decision. He intimated that a decision of the point whether polygamous children can inherit the property of their fathers, would produce more trouble to the Mormon system than de-naturalizing them, because it must strike, at once, at property. We were also introduced to the United States Commissioners here and received a copy of their last report. I have improved every opportunity to converse with individual Mormons and non-Mormons and hope to lay results before our readers. J. B.

A MIRACULOUS ESCAPE.

Our editor, Pres. J. Blanchard, returned with his little party from California on Friday last. The effect of the journey, the climate, and restful change of scenery and occupation has been greatly beneficial in restoring long-impaired health. But the frailty of human expectations and the wonderful providence of a gracious Father in heaven were seldom more strikingly experienced than by these dear friends last Tuesday as they tarried at Ogden, Utah, to visit with Rev. A. J. Bailey. A letter from our editor to one of his young correspondents in this city tells the story of a narrow escape from death, and we are kindly given leave to spread it before our readers as follows:

"Yesterday (Tuesday) we rode up Ogden Canyon eight or ten miles to a Mormon hotel; and though I have seen much of the Rocky Mountains I never have seen scenery at all to be compared with that of the Ogden River, which rushes down that narrow gulch, just wide enough for the roaring torrent and a narrow road where two buggies can just squeeze by each other in the widest places. On each side of us was a continuous mountain, varying from hundreds to eight and ten thousand feet high. The gulch has been torn open by some mighty convulsion of Nature, shown by the frowning precipices which match so exactly most of the way that they plainly were once together, and were rent apart, and let the mad, hissing, roaring river through the split, through miles of mountain, bold and bare, save the little weep pines, which thrust their roots into crevices, quite up to the sharp, ragged summits.

"We had a good dinner of mountain trout, and coming down the roaring glen, some men started a rock boulder up a full thousand feet above our heads. They were quarrying up there. The boulder came leaping down the declivity into the middle of our road, between a carriage just in front of us and our own. The first carriage escaped the blow, and our horses, frightened by the boulder, backed our carriage off the road, which was a dug-way sustained by a perpendicular wall at least seven feet down to a sharp slant of rocks to the seething, savage river, which is six feet deep, and dashing with such force against sharp, jagged rocks, which would tear any human swimmer in pieces before he had gone down that mad stream twenty rods.

"Two women and a babe, with Rev. Mr. Bailey and myself, went down that precipice backwards, and as I was in the hind seat I was pitched over with one foot in the water, which took off my favorite staff and hid it forever from my sight. My head was cut through the flesh in several places and bled freely. The men plunged down where we were and lifted us out on the road. Mrs. Bailey has a hip somewhat lame; and Mrs. Prof. Fischer wrapped herself like a ball of yarn with her babe in the center; and when I got out and rushed to find the babe and mother, they lay on a pile of rocks, and the poor little thing was looking up wondering what had happened. Our carriage was minus four or five spokes in one wheel, and our horses, which were young and spirited, were seized and loosed from the carriage and saved from going over with it upon those of us struggling below.

"Men came with other carriages and took us safe to Mr. Bailey's, and we start home this morning as soon as I have written these hasty lines. If ten men of good judgment were to go and examine that spot, at least nine of them would say that four grown persons and a babe could not be plunged down that precipice, seven feet perpendicular, and thence six feet or more slant down to the savage stream, without losing lives or limbs."

POLITICAL SECRETISM.

The frequent reports of political conventions held by secret societies should alarm and arouse the most indifferent patriotism. In Georgia, South Dakota, Minnesota, Illinois, Kansas, and elsewhere the grange, the Farmers' Alliance, Knights of Labor, the Union Labor organization, etc., are uniting to nominate candidates for Congress and for State and county offices. We might expect such organization in our cities where politics is a synonym for corruption, but not in the country districts. It has caused no expression of surprise that a Tammany society manages New York politics, or that here in Chicago political aspirants are organizing a local Tammany calling it the Wah-nah-ton society—a secret society with distinctly political objects. At a late meeting in this city of prominent Democrats, one of the leaders of that party denounced this as a secret, oath-bound organization. Secrecy, he said, was no part of democracy. "If you do not like the name Democrat, get some other; but do not let us go into any secret society business."

Some of our readers may remember former statements that the Farmer's Alliance was not a secret society. In years past it has been represented to us by trusted correspondents as an open society. But while one organization by that name may have been open, another organized in Texas about the same time was a secret society. The Free Press of Birmingham, Iowa, publishes the following as the obligation of secrecy taken by this farmers' order:

"We, the undersigned, members of — Alliance No. —, hereby pledge our sacred honor not to divulge or disclose any of the private workings or business transactions of this Alliance, only to such as are entitled to the same. Members violating this pledge agree that, upon proof, their names shall be stricken from the membership roll of this Alliance."

This, it may be said, in apology, is but a homeopathic dose of secretism, and nothing to be compared with the grange with its vicious instructions and foolishly deceptive initiations. But this is a pledge to keep secret the proceedings of an organization of whose future membership or business no man can know the character. When the Farmer's Alliance joins with other secret orders for the purpose of promoting the political aspirations of its favorites it certainly falls under the denunciation of General Grant when he says in his autobiography:

"All secret, oath-bound political parties are dangerous to any nation, no matter how pure or how patriotic the motives and principles which first bring them together."

Lord Beaconsfield, one of the most celebrated of British statesmen for astuteness and wide experience, had not observed in vain the movements of secret societies in his time. In Europe movements similar to these now begun by our Alliances and labor lodges have proved that the principle of organized secrecy in politics is most dangerous to civil liberty: and having long observed this to be a fact, Beaconsfield said:

"In the attempt to conduct the government of this world, there are new elements to be considered which our predecessors had not to deal with. We have not to deal only with emperors, princes, and ministers, but there are the secret societies—an element which we must take into consideration, which at the last moment may baffle all our arrangements, which have their agents everywhere, which have reckless agents, which countenance assassination, and which, if necessary, could produce a massacre."—Lord Beaconsfield's Speech at Aylesbury, Sept. 20th, 1876.

Following the Cronin murder the American press was unanimous in denouncing secret political societies and the Cynosure published column after column of their comments on this national danger.

But it is true that, threatening as this movement may be, these orders of laborers and agriculturists are more manly than the Freemasons and Jesuits in their political quest. They make no effort to conceal the fact that they have opened shop to do political work. But these other societies seek no less to control elections and nominations, but their work is all hidden, underground, in the dark, and the poison of a De Medici is no more fatal than is their influence upon the free institutions of America.

THE RACE QUESTION.

The season of war memorial has promoted public reference to this unresting question which is politically one of the most perplexing. The effort now being made in Congress to secure a national election law does not give us great hope of settling the difficulty and securing the black man his vote, since this measure, even if it becomes a law, will never enforce itself, any more than did the Civil Rights bill, out of which the Supreme Court trampled the life. Some excellent men in the South, who have proved themselves worthy of confidence in other matters, ask that they be let alone by the politicians to work out this problem with the school and the church. If politicians of all sorts would keep hands off, the proposition could not be too soon adopted.

The Conference at Lake Mohonk this year took up the Race question in preference to that of the Indians, with which it has usually been occupied. The proprietor of this popular resort invited those interested in the elevation of the colored man to accept his princely hospitality for a week. All sections of the country were represented from Boston to New Orleans. Ex-President Hayes presided. Among the many distinguished men and women who took part in the proceedings were Dr. J. E. Roy, of Chicago, so long connected with the work of the American Missionary Association among the Negroes; Secretaries Strieby and Baird, of that Association; Gen. Armstrong, of Hampton Institute; Sarah Smiley, the well-beloved Quakeress; Miss Austin, whose kind reception of N. C. A. lecturers and delegates at her Slater school on the heights at Knoxville, Tennessee, we shall long remember; General O. O. Howard, the patriot and philanthropist; Judge A. J. Tourgee; President Woodward, of Tougaloo University; Hon. W. T. Harris, U. S. Commissioner of Education; Hon. John Jay, etc. The impartial and kindly discussion of this fateful question in such conferences as this must remove many of the asperities that attach themselves to it.

Among the Southern people themselves it must be feared that too generally to the race issue clings much of the old bitterness left by the war. But there are notable exceptions, and often in the columns of the press, or on the platform, are expressed sentiments tempered with justice and mercy. Among such we find the following from Hon. S. V. White, of New York, in a speech in North Carolina, which was telegraphed to such Democratic organs as the Herald of this city:

I remind you that injustice toward the African race has once brought a fearful heritage of death and bereavement and poverty to this our much loved land. I remind you that throughout our national existence there has always been a conscience which recognized the sacredness of human rights, and which recognizes to-day that things are wrong because they are unjust and right because they are just. And I plead with my brethren of the South to mold the Negro voter by kindness, by education, by magnanimity, into channels which shall enhance the true greatness of the state, and to frown down lawlessness and intimidation and fraud, which can only debase and degrade all popular government. Let me urge you, my kinsmen, to throw aside prejudice, and to strive to lift up, not to trample down, these poor among you! Live to-day so that the muse of history, when she recounts her achievements, shall never, in the light of advanced civilization, have reason to blush over the continuance of wrongs against humanity, against your country and against yourselves.

Let the school and the church have their way with the race question. Caste fades before them as snow before an April sun.

—The Ogden Daily Commercial of the 11th inst. has an account of the accident that befell Pres. J. Blanchard and his party near that city on the day before. The stone blasted out and rolled down the mountain upon the carriages was of some eight tons weight, and if either vehicle had been struck, the fatal consequences would have been dreadful to contemplate.

—The lodges of the Pacific Coast are surely not ready for prohibition. A handbill from San Francisco notified the public of a picnic of the "Ancient Order" of Foresters. There were 70 "gate prizes" to be distributed, and thirteen of the 70 were liquors or cigars. Among these were 4 cases of claret, 3 of wine, 1 of champagne cider, 18 bottles of claret, 1 dozen pints of wine, 1 gallon of whisky and 2 cases of cigars. These were to be distributed in some sort of lottery "for the good of the order." It is evident that the "good-man" argument is not so much used in San Francisco as in our Atlantic and Interior States.

—An important branch of the banking house of S. A. Kean & Co. of this city is the Home Safety Deposit Vaults, located at No. 145 Adams street. Mr. J. M. Hitchcock, of the N. C. A. Board, is connected with this department, and has prepared a handsome descriptive circular of the business. In these vaults valuables of all kinds, especially papers, are kept as safely from fire, burglars, cyclones and riots as human invention and mechanical skill can provide. These vaults have become very popular during the last fifteen years. Valuable papers, which do not demand so much room as an ordinary safe, are stored in them with much greater assurance of being protected from ordinary mischance.

—A pleasant call from Bishop Becker, of the United Brethren church, last Thursday, reassured us of the integrity of the brethren who are for maintaining the Christian principles of that church against the effort of those who would sell the precious birthright of Christian faith for the pottage of a little popularity with the people of the world. Bro. Becker says that the large sum of $100,000 has been contributed in special donations to the United Brethren church. The annual business meetings of some of the church boards, held last week, gave much hope to all. Bishop Becker is on his way to Oregon, where he meets a conference at Philomath. The churches of that region are all firm for the old faith; and it is a pleasure to learn how our steadfast brother, Robert Loggan, for a time Kansas State lecturer, is a strong pillar for the truth among them.

PERSONAL NOTES.

—Rev. Joseph Travis, former chairman of the N. C. A. Board, and editor of the Free Methodist, is lying very ill at his home in Evanston, Ill. May God raise him up to renew the life of usefulness for which he will ever be remembered by his associates in church and reform work.

—Our old song friend, Clark, has just returned to Detroit from Rochester, where he has been long delayed by difficulties and delays in disposing of property and by sickness. He writes a cheery letter to all in the Cynosure office, and though the severe experiences of the past year came late in life, it makes us hope that he may write such letters for many years to come.

—Phineas Chapman, a reformer of the Gospel type, who looked upon no movement of the New Testament model, that seeks to bring in the kingdom of Christ, with indifference, died on the 23rd of April last at his home in Crete, Ill., at the extreme age of 98 years. Rev. L. Taylor, an old friend, and former pastor at Wheaton, preached his funeral sermon, which friends have preserved in a handsome pamphlet. Father Chapman was a constant friend of our reform and reader of the Cynosure, which was sent to him by the kindness of his daughter, Mrs. A. C. Reed, until his death.

—The name of Bro. George W. Needles has not for some time appeared in these columns, but none of us who were accustomed to grasp his mighty hand in our annual gatherings can ever forget his hearty hatred of the lodge. He writes now giving us the first news of great losses. First is the death of a beloved daughter. Second was a cyclone which swept over his farm near Albany, Mo., destroying three dwellings, five barns, and fourteen other outbuildings, leaving three families without shelter. The sympathy of his many friends is most sincerely extended to Bro. Needles in these trials.

COLLEGE ANNIVERSARIES.

—Commencement anniversary at Wheaton College opened on the Sabbath with the Baccalaureate address by Prof. F. W. Fisk, D.D., of Chicago Theological Seminary. His text was Eph. 4: 11-13, and his theme, The Perfection of Character; what it is, and how it may be attained. A large and appreciative audience, quickly responding to the earnest eloquence of the speaker, lent enthusiasm to the occasion, which increased to the end as the perfectness of manhood was shown to depend wholly on the humiliation of human strength and pride before the great example of perfect character in our Lord Jesus Christ. Pres. C. A. Blanchard spoke with deep feeling a brief farewell word to the graduating class, a parting advice which they may well long remember. In the evening Rev. C. N. Hitchcock, assistant Western Secretary of the American Board, addressed the Missionary Society of the College on the subject of World-wide Missions. The remarkable missionary movements of our day were reviewed and their prophecy of the end accepted.

—The graduating exercises of Monmouth College took place Thursday in the opera house. The class consisted of twenty-eight members, fifteen in the classical and thirteen in the scientific course. A grand cantata, "The Holy City," conducted by Prof. Zartman, of the college, was rendered with a chorus of seventy-five voices in the evening. The names of the graduates who participated in the graduation exercises were: Jennie Todd, Monmouth; Clarence F. Buck, Monmouth; Mary E. McMillan, Xenia, Ohio; Elizabeth Gordon, Cedar Rapids; Hattie M. Irwin, Xenia, Ohio; Rider Little, Cedarville, Ohio; Mary Jameson, Davenport, Iowa; J. A. McConlee, Winterset, Iowa; H. J. Kyle, Cedarville, Ohio; Ada Moore, Hanover; H. E. McKelvey, Sparta; Sarella M. Murray, Cedar Rapids, Iowa; J. N. Sprole, Traer, Iowa; Gertrude C. Phelps, Monmouth; Ella B. Rogers, Monmouth; D. W. McQuestion, Monmouth.

—Hartsville College, Indiana, closed its year of work with a fine Commencement last Friday. The attendance was unusually large and enthusiastic, and the prospect before the institution was never better. Generous donations have been made to the funds of the institution during the year and the administration of Pres. E. J. Payne is popular and successful. Rev. C. H. Kiracofe, former president of the institution, missionary secretary and treasurer, was given the degree of D. D. by the Hartsville Board. Bishop Becker preached the Baccalaureate sermon and also gave an address before one of the societies during the anniversary. The occasion and the man were happily met. The Bishop's address at the annual meeting of the Missionary Board the Conservator pronounces matchless and "the finest."

—Hon. S. V. White of Brooklyn, New York, a gentleman whose active business life does not suspend his literary and scientific pursuits, and whose contributions have occasionally enriched the columns of the Cynosure, spoke before the literary societies of Livingston College, Salisbury, N. Carolina, at its late commencement. Mr. White was born in North Carolina, and in the course of his address spoke feelingly of the time when his father left that State in 1831, threatened with violence because of his anti-slavery statements, and located in Illinois. The future Congressman and financier was then but six weeks old.

—The forty-fifth commencement of Knox College occurred last week. The Board of Trustees were in session two days. President Newton Bateman's annual report showed an enrollment of 603 students, which is the largest attendance in the history of the college. The Alumni Association of the college accepted plans for the new alumni hall, and bids for the erection of the same at an early date are now in the hands of the Building Committee. There were twenty-eight graduates of both sexes.

THE HOME.

THE MORNING PSALM.

"Read us a psalm, my little one."
An untried day had just begun,
And, ere the city's rush and roar
Came passing through the closed home door,
The family was hushed to hear
The youngest child, in accents clear,
Read from the Book.

"I will lift up mine eyes," she read,
"Unto the hills." Who was afraid?
What had that psalm of pilgrim life
To do with all our modern strife?
"Behold, he that doth Israel keep
Shall neither slumber, nor shall sleep.
The Lord thy keeper is, and He
Thy Shade on thy right hand shall be;
The sun by day shall not thee smite,
The moon shall hurt thee not by night."

And the child finished the old psalm;
And those who heard grew strong and calm;
The music of the Hebrew words
Thrilled them like sweet remembered chords
And brought the heights of yesterday
Down to the lowlands of to-day,
And seemed to lend to common things
A mystery as of light and wings;
And each one felt in gladsome mood,
And life was beautiful and good.

Then forth, where duty's clarion call
Was heard, the household hastened all.
In crowded haunts of busy men
To toil with book, or speech, or pen,
To meet the day's demand with skill,
And bear and do and dare and will,
As they must, who are in the strife
And strain and stress of modern life,
And would succeed, but who yet hold
Honor of higher worth than gold.

These are the days of peace we say,
Yet fiercest fights are fought to-day;
And those who formed that household band
Had need of strength that they might stand
In firmness and unruffled calm;—
But sweetly did their morning psalm
Amid the clamor, loud and long,
Like echo of a once-loved song,
Rise in their hearts and make them strong.

At close of day they met again
And each had known some touch of pain,
Some disappointment, loss or care,
Some place of stumbling, or some snare,
"And yet the psalm is true," said they,
"The Lord preserveth us alway.
His own were safe in days of yore,
And from this time, and evermore,
If skies be bright or skies be dim,
He keepeth all who trust in Him."

—Marianne Farmingham in London Christian World.

"HOW THOSE COBRAS SQUIRMED!"

It was a hot Sunday morning in India, without a cloud in the brazen skies. We had just come home from early morning service in our Teluga Native Church, and had taken our seats at the breakfast table. At the open door of our dining-room our Teluga school teacher appeared, saying, "Sir, a big cobra has just been chasing a frog through the whole length of your front veranda. He struck at it again and again as it sprang past the open doors of your sitting-room, but the frog, uttering piercing shrieks (as a frog can when pursued by a serpent), sprang each time quick enough to elude its jaws, and together they rushed off the end of the veranda, and the frog sprang under a box that is standing there, too near down upon the hard floor for the big cobra to get under, and escaped."

"Well, said I, 'where is the cobra now?'"

"That is just what I don't know," said he, "for while I was looking to see what had become of the frog, how he had got away, the cobra disappeared among the flower pots and I cannot see where he has gone."

"He must have a hole there, close by the veranda somewhere," said I. "Will you please go and watch until I come, and see if you can get sight of him again, for he must be killed if possible if he lives as near the house as that."

I don't go a shooting on Sunday, but I went for my pistol then, for I considered it decidedly a work of necessity and mercy to put an end to the danger of ourselves or our people being bitten by that deadly cobra. Soon appearing with a revolver, which I keep for traveling through the jungles by night, I went to hunting for the cobra's hole.

Two large native flower pots stood about six feet from the end of the veranda, with each a beautiful rose growing in it, of which my wife was very fond, and beside which she almost daily stood picking off dead leaves, or watering and tending to the roses. I soon discovered a hole in the ground about as large as my wrist, partly concealed by the grass that was growing right between the two flower pots, which were far enough apart for a person to stand between them. The hole went down perpendicularly, growing larger as it went deeper. It took but a moment to bring a hand mirror and throw the reflection of the bright sun right down into the hole. It revealed a horizontal chamber only a foot or so deep, and the glistening scales of a cobra coiled up at rest.

Taking a piece of a broken wagon tire in my left hand to stop up the hole with, and placing the end of it slantingly in the hole, I fired down into the hole. Not a motion was seen. I had missed. Turning the tire up edgewise, I fired again. What a squirming there was! His Majesty, the cobra, had been wounded. He struck up viciously at the iron, which was turned down flat as soon as I had fired, to keep him from darting out at us. I turned the iron edgewise and fired again and again. When I had unloaded the sixth barrel I let him strike his head out, and caught it against the side with the iron tire. I had brought out with me a pair of large hedge shears. With these I caught hold of his protruding neck, and with a stout pull with both hands, pulled him out and gave him a flirt out into the "compound." What a scattering there was of men, women and children! My attention had been so taken up by the snake that I had not noticed what a crowd had gathered around. Hearing the sound of shooting on Sunday in the mission "compound," they had judged that something strange was going on, and had rushed in to see. How they screamed and ran! for they did not know that the grip of the shears had dislocated the fellow's neck, and, seeing a full-sized cobra flying out towards them, they seemed to think that he was springing at them, and the soles of a good many pairs of feet were visible to one who stood near where the snake had made his long leap.

As I had grasped the head of the cobra with the shears I had given the wagon tire to the teacher, asking him to insert the end again instantly that I drew the cobra out, for where one cobra is you will usually find a second. I came back and threw the rays of the sun in again. Yes, there were bright cobra's scales, and another cobra wriggling. Loading my pistol again I repeated the firing, hoping that he would strike his head up out, so that I could catch his head also. Squirm and strike as he did, his head did not come out of the hole until I had fired many times; but it finally came, and I secured him also. On drawing him out and examining him closely, we found fourteen pistol ball holes through his body, and still there was fight in him. Any three of the wounds would have proved fatal in time; but he died making a splendid fight. We laid the cobras out in the veranda and measured them. One of them measured five feet eleven inches, and the other six feet and two inches, than which one rarely finds a cobra larger. Their hole showed that they had evidently been living there, right among the flower pots that were tended daily, and within six feet of our veranda, and within twelve feet of my study door, for weeks or months. And though the cobra is the deadliest serpent known, and thousands die of their bite yearly in India, no one in our mission has ever been harmed by one. Verily "He shall give his angels charge over thee to keep thee in all thy ways" is the unbidden exclamation of many a missionary in such a time.

The above incident, as an illustration of a deep truth, has given me great cheer during the past year.

The fact is known all over Christendom that Hinduism has never been so fierce in its opposition, so vigorous and so vicious in its attacks on missionaries and their work as now. Hindu Tract Societies, Hindu Preaching Societies, have been established in the great cities, with branches all through the country. These Hindu Tract Societies issue very few books and tracts for inculcating their own religion. Nearly all of their multitudinous issues are violent attacks on Christianity and on Christ; on missionaries and their work. Every old and exploded infidel objection from the Occident is brought forth with a clang of cymbals, and made to do service in the Orient, now angrily awakening. The most absolutely untrue charges against missions, missionaries and converts, are printed and scattered by the hundred thousand. The venom is fairly spit out in jets as was the venom of those cobras on the iron. Hindu "preachers" are sent out from headquarters into the regions where the different missionaries are working, not to preach and explain the doctrines of Hinduism so much as to make attacks on Christianity and the missionary work. In many places their preachers seem to make little effort to gather audiences for themselves, but have messengers out here and there, and if a missionary or native pastor or catechist gathers an audience in a street, or in a wayside shed, to tell them of the love of Christ, down they come, and, taking a stand near, begin to pour out blasphemy and lies, and seek to draw away or disperse their audiences.

We are not altogether sorry to have it so. Nothing is so disheartening as the stolid or contemptuous indifference so often manifested in past years. The intensity of their opposition attracts public attention widely to our message; to our weapons that are doing them this damage. We know now that Hinduism has been hit; that it has been vitally wounded. It is madly striking back in sheer desperation. My cobra friends were not disturbed by the noise of my first shots. What did they care for my banging away so long as they were not hit? But when, with better aim, the bullets began to pierce their coils, how those cobras squirmed!

Thus it is with the now intensely antagonistic Hinduism. Sneering indifference is past. The contest waxes hot. The wild, unreasoning striking back tells of mortal wounds inflicted; presages victory for our Immanuel Captain, if we wisely, ceaselessly, zealously press the conflict. Now is the time to rally for India's conquest for Christ.—Rev. Jacob Chamberlain, D.D., in the Christian Intelligencer.

NEVER SWEAR.

1. It is mean. A boy of high-moral standing would almost as soon steal a sheep as to swear.
2. It is vulgar—altogether too low for a decent boy.
3. It is cowardly—implying a fear of not being believed or obeyed.
4. It is ungentlemanly. A gentleman, according to the dictionary, is a genteel man—well bred, refined. Such a man will no more swear than go into the street to throw mud with a chimney-sweep.
5. It is indecent, offensive to delicacy, and extremely unfit for human ears.
6. It is foolish. "Want of decency is want of sense."
7. It is abusive—to the mind that conceives the oath, to the tongue which utters it, and to the person at whom it is aimed.
8. It is venomous, showing a boy's heart to be a nest of vipers; and every time he swears one of them sticks out its head.
9. It is contemptible, forfeiting the respect of all the wise and good.—Sel.

LOVE JESUS BACK AGAIN.

A minister, after preaching one Sabbath morning, asked his little son Harry whether he remembered the text of the sermon.

"Was that it you repeated so often, father, about the foxes having holes?"

"Yes," said his father. "The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests; but the Son of Man hath not where to lay his head."

And as Harry heard again of Him who was the Lord of all, and yet came to live in this world, and had no earthly home, he asked, "Why did Jesus leave all his riches and glory, and become poor?"

"The Bible gives us the reason," said his father. "For our sakes He became poor, that we through his poverty might be rich." He loved us so much as to leave his bright heaven and come to earth to suffer and die for us."

"That was a beautiful reason, father," said the boy: "To become poor for our sakes."

"And his father replied, 'Is there not a beautiful reason, too, why we should love such a Saviour? The Apostle John says, 'We love him, because he first loved us.'"

"Yes," said Harry thoughtfully, "we ought to love Jesus back again."

PUT HEART IN IT, DEAR.

Is the lesson so hard, are the problems so deep,
Is the old hill of learning so thorny and steep,
That the frown on your forehead is coming again,
A frown, Willie darling, that gives mother pain?
Let me whisper a charm, Willie boy, in your ear,
To conquer hard lessons, put heart in them, dear.

You hate the piano, this weary strum, tum,
Though you're ever so happy out of doors with a drum,
But practicing daily, and taking such care
That each little note is struck fully and fair
Makes you cross and discouraged. My Willie come here.
Let me give my secret; put heart in it, dear.

The temper which trips you and gives you a fall
When you mean to be gentle and loving to all.
That sends naughty words to the gate of the lips,
And shadows your face with an ugly eclipse,
Ask Jesus to help you, and Willie, don't fear.
You will win in the conflict, put heart in it, dear.

A thing done by half, child, is always half done,
A shame to be seen, under God's faithful sun
That sets us its beautiful pattern of work,
Without loiter or hurry or stopping to shirk.
While sunshine reminds you, so brave and so clear,
Whatever your task be, put heart in it, dear.

If you weed in the garden or go for the mail,
Feed Ponto or Brindle, let none see you fail
In any small duty, but loyal and true,
Let father and mother depend upon you.
And this is my counsel, worth stopping to hear,
Worth treasuring, Willie, put heart in it, dear.

Put heart in the work, and put heart in the play,
Step on like a soldier though rough be the way,
Laugh gaily at trials, and never retreat,
If your case be a right one, disdain a defeat.
Pray always, and then march forth, full of cheer.
In strife or in labor, put heart in it, dear.

—Congregationalist.

LETTING DOWN THE BARS.

A farmer's boy paused in perplexity considering what he had better do. For the children had complained that it took so long to go all the way around the road to school, it would be a great relief could they cross a certain field, so shortening the distance considerably. But the steep fence was too high to climb over, and there was not near space enough to crawl through the bars, so they appealed to the young farm hand to help them out of the dilemma.

Had the children gone to the farmer with their complaint, the nice old man would have pooh-poohed the idea of young peoples' shrinking from a good long walk in the healthful breeze, so the matter would have been disposed of in a perfectly judicious manner. But the younger man with strong sympathy for the children, stood deliberating as to what he had better do.

If he should take down the upper bars from the fence he was afraid lest some of the strong cattle in the adjoining meadow would push the next one out of place and so trample the large field which had been carefully sown. To remove one of the lower bars so the children could crawl through seemed the only thing to do. Accordingly one was pushed away.

But at the close of the day the farmer called the young man to witness the havoc which had been wrought. At the sight he stood aghast. To begin with, not only had the children of the household availed themselves of the convenient opening, but all the children who passed that way, seeing the wide gap, had trooped through, so willingly saving a few extra steps. The turkey gobbler, and a long admiring train of feathery bipeds, had easily scratched up the covered seed, feasting on some, and scattering more to the four winds of heaven. Then a fine old porker with motherly instincts for searching out rare tid-bits in the way of food, with her squealing brood had trampled and torn, and rooted around, until the smooth surface of the field was in uneven and unsightly furrows.

"I only let down one of the lower bars," said the boy dismayed at the mischief clearly seen on every hand. "I thought it would be better than to take out any of the upper ones." "Another time," remarked the farmer dryly, "please consider it a serious mistake to take down any of the bars guarding a valuable enclosure, but especially the ones where little marauders can creep through and spoil in a few hours the work of many days."

Imagine the field a human heart, and is not the application obvious? For one reason and another, there is constant excuse for letting down the bars of restraint and allowing all kinds, or many kinds, of little sins and shortcomings to uproot the good seed which parents, teachers and the Word of God have sown in the mind and heart. The slight desecration of the Sabbath seems such a little thing, yet it leads to utter disregard of the day and its sacred uses. Inattention to religious teachings, forgetfulness of the habit of devotions, one sin followed by a brood of lesser ones, these all come creeping easily through a convenient opening into the fair field of the heart, well planted with precious seed; a consciousness of what is right, is overborne by a desire to escape a little trouble, until at last conscience becomes dulled, compunction ceases to warn, and off to the four winds of heaven flies the seed which should have taken root and yielded precious fruit. The age is one of impatience and haste. The cautious habits of older people seem needless and unnecessarily slow. There is an uncurbed tendency to tear down or overleap all obstacles to immediate accomplishment of one's wishes and desires. Yet God and Nature impress certain restrictions with which it is dangerous to tamper. The safe, sure bars, erected to guard against sinful license, should be sacredly kept in place. Would that all who read, might be wise enough to regard the old farmer's advice and consider it a serious mistake to let down any of the bars guarding a valuable enclosure, especially those which protect the sacred precincts of the heart and conscience of man.—Christian at Work.

"The Gospel of John," says Dr. W. R. Harper, the eminent Bible scholar, "is the greatest book ever written." Dr. Schaff calls it "the most important literary work ever composed by man; the Gospel of gospels; a marvel even in the marvelous Book of books." Origen terms it "the main gospel." Chrysostom says, "It is a voice of thunder reverberating through the whole earth." Jerome says, "John excels in these depths of divine mysteries." Calvin says it is "the key that opens the way to a right understanding of the other three gospels." Earnesti calls it "the heart of Jesus," Lange, "the diamond among gospels," and Herder says it was "written by the hand of an angel." It is indeed the Holy of holies in the beautiful temple of Revelation.—The Evangelical.

TEMPERANCE.

LIQUOR ARITHMETIC—OBJECT LESSON.

"Boy at the head of the class, what are we paying for liquor, as a nation?"

"Nine hundred million dollars annually."

"Step to the blackboard, my boy. First take a rule and measure this silver dollar. How thick is it?"

"Nearly an eighth of an inch."

"Well, sir, how many of them can you pile in an inch?"

"Between eight and nine."

"Give it the benefit of the doubt and call it nine. How many inches would it require to pile those $900,000,000 in?"

"One hundred million inches."

"How many feet would that be?"

"Eight million, three hundred and thirty-three thousand, three hundred and thirty-three feet."

"How many rods is that?"

"Five hundred and five thousand and fifty rods?"

"How many miles is that?"

"One thousand, five hundred and seventy-eight miles."

"Miles of what?"

"One thousand, five hundred and seventy-eight miles of silver dollars, laid down, packed closely together, our national liquor bill would make. That is only one year's grog bill."

Reader, if you need facts about this temperance question, nail that to a post and read it occasionally. It would take ten men with scoops to throw away money as fast as we are wasting it for grog.—Selected.

INTEMPERANCE AND CRIME.

The present chaplain of the State prison of Iowa, at Fort Madison, has been in the position for fifteen years. He is a man of earnest piety and good judgment. His Christian work has been among criminals, and his unselfish devotion and deep sympathy have brought him into most confidential relations with the men and boys who have been consigned to prison for all classes of crimes. Many have confided to the chaplain the history of their downfall, and while successfully laboring for the souls of the prisoners he has sought to ascertain, by statistics and personal observation, the cause of crime. His conclusion is another arraignment of the saloon as the principal place where criminals are made, and the headquarters for their operations. He says: "It is by intemperance that all barriers to crime are broken down, and the wretch plunges into the vortex. Professional criminals come largely from homes where intemperance prevails. Saloons are dens of thieves. Criminals go out from them, and return to their holes. Intemperance perpetuates crime, and though the causes of crime are legion, this one source causes more crime than all other sources combined."

The temperance problem is no longer a question of how much restraint can be placed upon a most hurtful and pernicious traffic. The point now to be decided is: Shall the government be directed for the protection, the benefit of the sober, decent, intelligent, law-abiding, industrious and upright citizen, or shall it be controlled by a business that can be dispensed with with less injury than any other authorized by law, a business that makes drunkards and paupers, criminals and lunatics, that converts men into brutes and devils, that is notoriously a violator of the law and a desolator of homes? Matters have come just to this pass. The saloon has been active in every election throughout these Northern States, especially during these past two years. The number of liquor-dealers and their advocates in the public offices has been largely increased during twenty-four months. The saloons have been taking possession of town, village and city governments. They have obtained the control of many. There seems to have been an organized movement throughout the North to seize the local governments, and it has attained an alarming success. The saloon never has given any community, and is now incapable of giving a wise, economical, honest and just government. It is essentially and necessarily corrupt, unmerciful, unrighteous and vile. The question to be settled is rapidly becoming, not shall we have license, or high license, or no license, but shall we have decent local governments?—Intelligencer.

During the administration of Dr. Waddell at the University of Georgia, he made the following entry in his diary:

"Caught ——— chewing tobacco; whipped him for it."

The good old days when boys were whipped at college until they were 21 are passed, but a judicious use of the rod at the present day might have a wholesome influence in reducing the number of quids and cigarettes used by boys not 15 years old. "A boy chewing tobacco" and "a whipping" would still be a very handy combination.

Governor Humphrey, of Kansas, has caused to be prepared statistics regarding the aggregate number of men employed and capital invested in manufacturing concerns before and since prohibition law went into effect in 1878. The capital invested in 1878 amounted to $6,426,902, while in 1885 it was $19,000,000, and for 1889 it was $37,000,000. In 1885 there were 1,200 men employed, and in 1888 the number reached 16,977. This does not seem much like injuring the business interests of Kansas by prohibition.

The latest thing in railroading is the smoking and barroom car to be run on the new Shore Line train, connecting Boston, via Harlem River, for Philadelphia. An accomplished artist in mixing drinks will be engaged to make cocktails for thirsty travelers. The car will be magnificently appointed.

Nebraska Prohibitionists are planning to hold a thousand meetings on the Fourth of July in the interest of the prohibitory amendment.

MISSION WORK IN KENTUCKY.

Editors Christian Cynosure,

DEAR BRETHREN:—We desire to ask the readers of the Cynosure to aid the Christian Missionary Association of Kentucky in the work of evangelization. There is here, both among the colored and the white mountain people, a most important and needy field. We are seeking the evangelization of the people, not in the interest of any religious denomination, but simply to win them to Christ. During the past year two, and for a part of the year three, missionaries have been thus engaged. That their labors have not been in vain is shown by their published report, showing 105 persons received on profession of their faith. We have recently secured additional laborers, one of whom has entered on his work and the other expects to come in the early fall. We want to raise to aid them and others, not less than one thousand dollars. We are sure that it can be wisely appropriated. We ask your aid because we are in full sympathy with the reforms advocated in the Cynosure, and because we believe that in no way can the power of the lodge and the saloon be so effectually broken as by the work we are seeking to accomplish.

Our Association is chartered under the laws of the State. We are seeking to occupy the vacant and desolate fields. Our efforts have ceased to be an experiment and we feel confident of the blessing of the Almighty, but expect it through the contributions and prayers of his people.

JOHN G. FEE.

H. H. HINMAN.

Berea, Ky., June 12, 1890.

MOUNTAIN MISSIONS IN EAST TENNESSEE.

In connection with the instructive view of the people and affairs of the mountain region of Tennessee given by Bro. Chittenden in his letter elsewhere, our readers will be interested to note some facts contributed to the Congregationalist of Boston by Miss E. B. Emery respecting Grand View itself. She says:

"A strategic point is Grand View. It lies right in the heart of the mineral belt of Tennessee, and in the center and just above the gigantic awakening of those mountains and valleys. It is the northern end of Walden's Ridge, which lies fifty miles along the Cincinnati Southern Railway. This ridge terminates with a precipitous bluff 1,000 feet above the valley below, and this bluff is Grand View. Negotiations are now in progress, and it is thought that the Association may plant its chief school buildings upon the edge of this bluff, and they could be seen miles away. The view from the crest is grand and picturesque, very similar to that from Lookout Mountain in Chattanooga, sixty miles to the south. Just back of Grand View is a deep canyon, and from a shelving rock pours a heavy stream more than a hundred feet upon the rocks below, while you walk thirty feet behind it through an immense amphitheater of stone hollowed out by the spray.

"Going to Grand View at present is no joke. The first thing you do is to ford a stream four or five rods wide, and so deep that the horses flounder and the heavy wagon sways, while you know that the only footing for the beasts is on loose rolling stones. Then the climb begins up the mountain road, over rocks and trees, through mud and ditches such as New England never saw. To your surprise, on reaching the top, there is nothing to indicate a place of importance—a few comfortable dwelling houses of Northern families, three or four small school buildings and several shanties, or cow-sheds, one of which is used as a dormitory for boys who board themselves.

"The general missionary, Rev. G. S. Pope, lives here, and with his team of ponies, or on horseback, he traverses these frightful mountain roads 300 or 400 miles a month, organizing churches and Sunday-schools, inspiring Christian Endeavor Societies, and superintending all mission work with a zeal equaled only by his discretion. The pastor at Grand View is Rev. Mr. Chittenden, a man of ability and missionary spirit. I was the guest of Professor and Mrs. Dickson, a lovely young married couple from Windsor, Ct. These three men have such faith in the possibilities of Grand View that each has bought a house. As Mrs. Dickson said one day very simply, 'There are many things one must do without here.' Fresh meat is uncommon and fruit scarce. Each of these house-keepers is a woman of delicacy and culture, but help is seldom to be had, even for washing. But they are very happy, and there are, besides, three fair young ladies from the North, full of missionary grit.

"You go into chapel, and there are a hundred pupils of all ages between five and thirty. They seem to spring out of the earth, and, when school closes, they disappear as mysteriously. They are veritable rabbits. I rode one entire afternoon around the mountain, and saw only two cabins of the natives. Many come from the valleys, but many also live away from the roads at points inaccessible. How they live you can judge by their faces and step and manner. Mr. Pope says that the true mountaineers are not reached very much yet, and cannot be but by missionaries of their own people, who will go to them, and it will take years and years, for the work is but commenced."

"I have seen a great deal of the A. M. A. work, and everywhere the accommodations are inadequate; but nowhere have I seen so much work done with so little to do it with as at Grand View. A boarding-school of 500 pupils is possible there to-day, and what have they? A miniature chapel with school desks, a dormitory of four small rooms, with four boys in each room, a single-boarded house for lady teachers, and a small boarding-house where two girls room, and two rooms are used as class rooms—and the latter building, not belonging to the Association, can no longer be rented. That is all. Who speaks first to build or help build a boarding-school on Grand View, which is destined to be one of the attractions of this country? Who wants to help on this boom in Tennessee? This is the investment which is going to pay the mightiest dividends, and not a moment is to be lost. Hold up your hands! How many? Too many there cannot be."

Under the Kansas State law defining public nuisances and forbidding the sale of liquor to minors and habitual drunkards, the county attorney of Topeka has caused the arrest of six "original package" house keepers. Judge Guthrie sent them to jail, and then ordered the establishments closed. Judge Foster, of the Federal Court, released them on writs of habeas corpus. The county officers say they will continue making arrests.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—Three of the branches of the Norwegian Lutheran Church in America, the Anti-Missourians, the Norwegian-Danish Conference, and the Norwegian Augustana Synod, commenced a union meeting at Minneapolis Wednesday for the purpose of forming a union church.

—At the Wednesday session of the convention of the Lake Shore Baptist Association at Racine, Wis., resolutions protesting against the State interfering with the use of the Bible in the schools were unanimously adopted.

—A monster meeting was held at Burlington, Iowa, Wednesday, for the purpose of organizing a branch of the Sabbath Association of Iowa, an organization formed to fight Sunday amusements.

—The commission of the Methodist Episcopal church having in charge the location of the next general conference, decided that it should be held in Omaha some time in 1892.

—Rev. Dr. Geo. F. Pentecost has been engaged to preach for the Church of the Redeemer, New Haven, for three months.

—In the Park St. Church, Boston, last Friday a meeting of profound interest in connection with the departure of thirty-one missionaries of the American Board was held.

—The meeting of the American Home Missionary Society at Saratoga, N. Y., was one of great interest and importance to the work of that organization. The meeting next year will be held in San Francisco.

—It is announced from the Moody Northfield school that Rev. Geo. F. Pentecost, D. D., speaks daily at Stone Hall from June 1-14, and for the next two weeks daily in the village church. Mr. Moody will give the baccalaureate sermon to both schools on the 15th, while Rev. Lyman Whiting, D. D., will in the evening address the Missionary Society and the Y. M. C. A. June 17, at Mt. Hermon. Major General O. O. Howard will give the graduating address, followed in the evening by his lecture on General Grant. The next day commencement exercises at Northfield, Rev. George F. Pentecost giving the annual address.

—In a letter addressed from Northfield, Mass., to his fellow-laborers in the evangelical field, bearing date of June 4, Mr. D. L. Moody announces a conference, which will be held at Northfield, Mass., July 31 to August 9. He says: "At this meeting a number of God's honored servants from this and other lands, whose praise is in all the churches, will be present as helpers of our joy and ministers of grace. Among them are Rev. A. J. Gordon, D. D., of Boston; Professor Moorehead, Major D. W. Whittle, Dr. Marcus Rainsford, of London; Mr. John G. Wooley and Mr. George Mackay, of New York; Rev. Dr. Gumbart, of Boston, and others. The leaders of song will be Mr. Ira D. Sankey and Mr. George C. Stebbins. All Christians who long for closer communion with God and more spiritual wisdom, zeal and power to do his work, are most heartily invited to assemble with us."

—The statistics of the Christian Endeavor Societies on record to June 1st, have just been completed in preparation for the International Convention at St. Louis. It has been found that societies exist in every State and Territory in the Union, and in every English-speaking land in the world. In all there are 11,013 societies with 660,000 members, a gain of 3,341 societies and 185,000 members in eleven months. This is by far the largest gain ever recorded in the same length of time, and equals the entire membership of the society during the first seven years. New York leads the list with 1,795 societies; Pennsylvania follows with 818, then comes Massachusetts with 813, Illinois with 809, Ohio with 681, Iowa with 494, Connecticut with 442, New Jersey with 414, and Michigan with 408. The society is making gratifying progress in the South, Maryland, Kentucky and Florida having the largest numbers. In the British Provinces are 413 societies. So far as can be ascertained an average of about seven from each society have joined the Evangelical churches during the year, or a total of 70,000; a number equal to about two-thirds of all the associate members at the beginning of the year.

—According to figures collected by Rev. J. B. Hamilton, of Brooklyn, N. Y., during the period from 1833 to 1872, deficiencies in the salaries of Methodist ministers in thirty-five conferences amounted to $5,450,000. These deficiencies occurred for the most part on salaries of ministers who could least afford to bear the loss.

—The "American Baptist Year Book" for 1890 gives large figures for the regular Baptists in the United States. They have 21,175 ordained ministers, 33,588 churches and 3,070,047 members. These figures include white and colored, Northern and Southern Baptists. The number of baptisms last year was 144,575. They have 17,096 Sunday-schools, with 1,158,665 pupils, the value of their church property is $53,568,502, and the aggregate of their contributions last year was $9,363,377.

—Boston, since 1830, has increased in population about 400 per cent. During that time Congregationalism has increased 250 per cent, Baptists 475 per cent, and the Episcopalians 1,000 per cent.

—The great movement in the American Baptist mission among the Telugus in India, in which 30,000 converts have been gathered in twelve years, still continues, and is spreading into the interior of the country. In the Nalgunda district fifty-two were recently baptized in one week.

—The first ecumenical Methodist conference was held in London in September, 1881. A second is to be held in America in 1891. A large commission, appointed by the Methodist Episcopal church, has the preliminary arrangements in hand. The time fixed upon by the commission is between Oct. 10 and Nov. 10. The place has not yet been chosen.

—In answer to an overture from the Presbytery of Bismarck on lotteries, the General Assembly at Saratoga made this declaration: "In view of recent notorious attempts to force the lottery system upon some portions of our land by legislative enactments, the General Assembly does hereby reiterate in the most emphatic manner its condemnation of all lotteries, as immoral in their nature, and ruinous in their effects upon individual character and public welfare. The members of our church are exhorted to discountenance all forms of resorting to chances, even for professedly praiseworthy objects, inasmuch as it is not allowable to do evil that good may come. The presbyteries under our care are also recommended to press upon the consideration of ministers and sessions the vicious influence of lotteries, and urge them to do what they can to arouse public conscience against this and every other species of gambling."

—Out of 900 foreign missionaries at present in India, representing various lands and peoples, the oldest is an American, Rev. John Newton (of the Presbyterian church), the veteran missionary of Lahore, who at the age of 78 is still a happy worker in his chosen field. Mr. Newton landed in Calcutta in February, 1835, almost 54 years ago; he has labored since in connection with the well-known Lodianna mission. Four sons born here and educated in America, returned to this country as missionaries; one of these, Dr. J. Newton, died in India after 22 years' service; the others are still in the ranks; the five laborers have given 125 years of service to India. A daughter returned to India as a missionary, and afterward married Rev. Dr. Forman, of Lahore, whose two sons and daughter have recently returned to India as missionaries, the first representatives of the third generation in this grand missionary family.

—The Korean Alphabet is phonetic and so simple that any one can learn to read in a day. Nearly all the women in Korea can read.

—Rev. J. S. Stone, formerly of Bombay, now engaged in mission work in New York, testifies that the moral degradation of that city equals the worst phenomena of the Black Holes of sin in Calcutta and Bombay, where the depravity of the Orient shows its darkest sides. At times, he says, it is appalling even to an Indian missionary.

—Every friend of the Young Men's Christian Association should feel an interest in the School for Christian Workers at Springfield, Mass. This school is the only institution of its kind established as a normal school in the interests of the Y. M. C. A., where all students are given a thoroughly Christian training, and many are fitted to become competent general secretaries and physical directors. The school needs the hearty support of all friends of the association to enable it to carry on the good work so well begun.

LODGE NOTES.

The Iowa Sons of Veterans were meeting at Washington last week. There are 110 camps of the order in the State with a membership of 2,641.

The Missouri Order of Ancient Hibernians began its biennial session at Sedalia, Sunday. It passed a resolution endorsing Parnell and denouncing Balfour.

On Tuesday Grand Commander Moulton of the Knights Templar announced that the annual encampment for the Northern district of Illinois would be held at Rockford in August.

At the meeting of the General Executive Board of the Knights of Labor in Philadelphia it was decided that the grand assembly of the order be held in Denver, Col., beginning November 11.

On Tuesday Hon. P. C. Haley, Democratic candidate for Congress in the Eighth Illinois District, announced his withdrawal in favor of Major J. M. Thompson, Master of the Illinois State Grange.

The Grand Lodge of Ohio Knights of Pythias meeting at Cleveland decided not to admit saloonkeepers to membership in the order. The question has been agitated for years, but never before could the opponents of the saloonkeepers secure the necessary two thirds vote.

At noon Saturday 6,000 cutters, cloak and suit makers were locked out by the different cloak and suit firms of New York. The great portion locked out are union men, while several hundred are non-union. The trouble arose over the refusal of the union cutters to turn their work over to non-union men.

The Salem, Mass., News notices the progress of a new secret order in that city thus: "A special meeting of Abraham Lincoln Camp, No. 1, Independent Order Loyal Americans, was held in Grand Army Hall last evening. A large number were obligated; 47 were elected as members of the order, and twenty-six new applications were received."

The American Protestant Association held the fortieth annual convention of its "Right Worthy Grand Lodge" at Lincoln Hall in this city last week. Its deliberations were secret. The main topics to receive attention were the public schools and unrestricted immigration. This lodge has a membership of 35,000. Our public schools can never be saved by a secret society.

A personal sketch of Daniel Dustin, of Sycamore, Ill., lately appointed by President Harrison to the responsible position of sub-treasurer in Chicago, closes thus: "He is an active member of the First Congregational church and a Mason of high degree. In 1872 the Knights Templar elected him to the highest office within their gift, that of Right Eminent Commander of the Grand Commandery of the State."

The sixteenth annual State convention of the Board of Erin, Ancient Order of Hibernians was meeting in this city last week. The principal question before the convention was the proposed consolidation of the two branches of the order. Years ago dissensions caused a split in the ranks and one faction seceded and called themselves the American Board. The other is known as the Board of Erin. An effort will be made to unite the two branches. Before the hanging of a few years since the Mollie Maguires formed a very important part of this organization in Pennsylvania.

The action of the Rochester convention of railroad conductors in eliminating the anti-strike clause from the constitution of the Order of Railway Conductors is likely to disintegrate that organization. The Hoboken division has surrendered its charter and the New Haven division withdrew its delegate. An eastern delegate is quoted as saying that the action of the convention would certainly result in the withdrawal of a large majority, if not all of the New England, New Jersey and Pennsylvania divisions, from the order and the formation of a new organization on a strictly non-striking basis.

Mayor Cregler does not always greet the lodges that come to Chicago. The

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable, causing distress after eating, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn, loss of appetite, a faint, "all gone" feeling, bad taste, coated tongue, and irregularity of the bowels. Dyspepsia does not get well of itself. It requires careful attention, and a remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acts gently, yet efficiently. It tones the stomach, regulates the digestion, creates a good appetite, banishes headache, and refreshes the mind.

Distress
After Eating

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. After eating I would have a faint or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My trouble was aggravated by my business, painting. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, which did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced."

Heart-
burn

all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My trouble was aggravated by my business, painting. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, which did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced."

Sour
Stomach

all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My trouble was aggravated by my business, painting. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, which did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced."

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

Patriarchal Circle, seceders from the Odd-fellows, came here lately and the mayor sent Col. W. J. Onahan, a Romanist, to welcome the lodge to Chicago. He said the character of the organization of the Patriarchal Circle commended it to the sympathy and good will of all citizens. Chicago was proud to welcome all conclaves. The "Supreme Oracle" is the great man of this order. A committee was appointed last year to prepare a ritual for the new degree of the "Golden Band," and it is suggested that this committee at once present a plan for a charter, initiation fees, etc.

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from June 9 to 14 inclusive:

G McKerrow, A C Lane, A B Lipp, W O Norval, L A Phillips, Rev A Dresser, Sr, C C Martin, F R Robbins, R Coulter, M K Smiley, Mrs T Gorsline, R A Clark, O N Carnahan, N Miner, D E Votaw, J Stradling, H Wolf, W Sontor, Eld W W Payne, J G Scott, F Brouse, Mrs J M Byers, J Razor, F W Sewart.

McCook, Neb.

Thanks for the group of noted anti-secret men [Washington and his Co-Patriots] and their forcible testimony against secrecy. I shall have to frame and hang it on the wall that it may be a silent but powerful testimony against "false worship."

W. O. NORVAL.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—No. 2.....	87½@	88¼
No. 3.....	76 @	85
Winter No. 2.....	87½@	87½
Corn—No. 2.....	34½@	35
Oats—No. 2.....	29 @	30
Rye—No. 2.....	46½@	46½
Bran per ton.....	9 50	9 50
Hay—Timothy.....	6 50 @	12 00
Butter, medium to best.....	10 @	14
Cheese.....	06 @	10½
Beans.....	1 25 @	1 75
Eggs.....	12 @	12
Seeds—Timothy.....	1 25 @	1 35
Flax.....	1 22 @	1 40
Broom corn.....	02¼@	06¼
Potatoes, per bu.....	20 @	45
Hides—Green to dry flint.....	03 @	07
Lumber—Common.....	10 00 @	13 00
Wool.....	15 @	34
Cattle—Choice to extra.....	4 50 @	5 15
Common to good.....	2 00 @	4 40
Hogs.....	3 80 @	4 00
Sheep.....	3 25 @	5 90

NEW YORK.

Wheat.....	94 @	90½
Corn.....	40 @	42½
Oats.....	32¼@	40
Eggs.....	14 @	14
Butter.....	6 @	15
Wool.....	14 @	39

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle.....	1 75 @	4 70
Hogs.....	3 40 @	3 60
Sheep.....	2 50 @	5 10

STANDARD WORKS

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES.

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Association,

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. A liberal discount to dealers.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 75 cents. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Knights Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive. Vol. II. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished. 25 cents each.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe. 20 cents each.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. In cloth, $1.50 each. Paper, 75 cents each.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical. explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pages, 75 cents.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance. Bound in one volume. In cloth, 589 pages, $1.00.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. 25 cents each.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper, 35 cents.

Hon. Thurlow Weed on the Morgan Abduction. This is the legally attested statement of this eminent Christian journalist and statesman concerning the unlawful seizure and confinement of Capt. Morgan in Canandaigua jail, his removal to Fort Niagara and subsequent drowning in Lake Ontario. 5 cents each.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a League with the Devil. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason. 15 cents each.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church. Paper covers, price, 20 cents each.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each.

Anti-masonic Sermons and Addresses. Composed of "Masonry a Work of Darkness;" the Sermons of Messrs. Cross, William M'Nary, Dow and Sarver, the two addresses of President Blanchard, and the addresses of President H. H. George, Prof. J. G. Carson and Rev. M. S. Drury; "Thirteen Reasons Why a Christian cannot be a Freemason," "Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion," and "Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate?" 287 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate. By Rev. L. A. Post. 5 cents each. Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper cover, 35 cents.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin trials. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each.

Stearns's Inquiry into the Nature and Tendency of Freemasonry. 338 pages. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor United Presbyterian church. 5 cents each.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. 10 cents each.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void; or Freemasonry Self-Convicted. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. 207 pages. Postpaid, 40 cents each.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian), a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. 15 cents each.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. H. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each.

Masonic Salvation, as taught by its standard authors. This pamphlet is a compilation from standard Masonic works, in proof of the following proposition: Freemasonry claims to be a religion that saves men from all sin, and purifies them for heaven. 111 pages, price, postpaid, 20 cents.

Freemasonry at a Glance illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the first three degrees. Paper cover, 32 pages. Single copy, six cents.

Masonic Outrages. Compiled by Rev. H. H. Hinman. Showing Masonic assault on lives of seceders, on reputation, and on free speech; its interference with justice in courts, etc. Postpaid, 20 cents.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret Societies. A most convincing argument against fellowshipping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each.

HOME AND HEALTH.

TAKING CARE OF FURNITURE.

Furniture can be kept looking nice with so very little care that it is too bad to deny it this little, yet, with the exception of the usual dusting now and then, it seldom gets any better in the majority of homes. Very ordinary articles of furniture may, with care, be kept looking well for years, while handsome furniture may by neglect be made to appear dingy and worn out long before its time.

Upholstered furniture that is in everyday use should be cleansed thoroughly once a month at the least. The articles, with the exception of the very heavy ones, should be taken into a yard or room with open windows, choosing a day when the wind is not in the direction to blow the dust into the room. Take each article to the open window or in the yard, and with a bristle brush clean out as much dust as possible. The above, to be sure, is only for such as are upholstered in plush or any goods with a pile. To clean haircloth, if possible, take into the air, and with a light switch beat out the dust, afterward wiping the dust on the surface with a damp cloth. Wipe over the woodwork with a damp cloth, and if there are any dents in it, place on the dents several thicknesses of wet blotting paper, and to this hold a warm flatiron until the paper is dry, and, unless the dent is a very deep one, this one trial will remove it. When the woodwork is thoroughly dry, take some warm linseed oil and with a soft flannel cloth rub it well into the woodwork, using a very little oil and a good deal of strength. Rub it over with a soft silk cloth or chamois leather to obtain a nice polish.

It is claimed that stains can be removed from furniture by washing it in vinegar, then rubbing the stains with a soft flannel dipped in spirits of salt. When the stains are removed rub with warm linseed oil, and polish with a piece of chamois. White spots can be removed by applying alcohol.

It requires only a little to remove the spot and should be simply pressed on the spot with a cloth that is not linty, and never rubbed, or the varnish will come off. After taking out the spots rub with linseed oil when the surface of the article is dry and polish the same as usual. To remove scratches and make the furniture look almost as good as new use crude oil and apply with a soft brush, then wipe off dry and polish with a soft flannel cloth.

A WIFE'S JUST COMPLAINT.

Farmer Bell did not believe in mental or moral sugar plums—at least within his own family circle. He was quite willing to commend friend or acquaintance, but he had a theory that his own family would be best improved by a species of Spartan discipline. The children must learn to do their duty without the meed of praise, and, as for his wife, she had toiled for fifteen years without having once been told that she was a satisfactory housekeeper.

One night the two came home from a tea party at a neighbor's house, and Mrs. Bell, with the courage of the meek, opened fire upon her husband.

"Ezra," she said, "seems to me I heard you praisin' up the mottoes the Smith girls worked?"

"Yes, I did," said Mr. Bell. "Real pretty they were for such fancy nonsense."

"Your own girls have made some just like 'em. You'd better praise them. It'll tickle 'em to death. And didn't I hear you say that squash pie for supper was powerful nice?"

"Well, Miranda, 'twas a good pie."

"Was it a mite better'n mine, Ezra?"

"Well, no, I can't say as 'twas."

"When have you ever said one word to praise a pie or cake I've set afore you?"

"Maybe I ain't praised ye much, Miranda, but then I ain't complained."

"Yes, you have," said Miranda. "Yes, you have! Sayin' nothin' 's complainin' sometimes. It's just like pushin' a heavy load up hill, besides what you've agreed to carry, to go along day arter day an' not hear a word o' praise. I tell you,

KISSED ANOTHER MAN'S WIFE.

"You scoundrel," yelled young Jacob Green
At his good neighbor, Brown,—
"You kissed my wife upon the street,—
I ought to knock you down."

"That's where you're wrong," good Brown replied,
In accents mild and meek;
"I kissed her; that I've not denied,
But I kissed her on the cheek—" and I did it because she looked so handsome—the very picture of beauty and health. What is the secret of it?"

"Well," replied Green, "since you ask it, I will tell you; she uses Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I accept your apology. Good night."

An unhealthy woman is rarely, if ever, beautiful. The peculiar diseases to which so many of the sex are subject, are prolific causes of pale, sallow faces, blotched with unsightly pimples, dull, lustreless eyes and emaciated forms. Women so afflicted, can be permanently cured by using Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription; and with the restoration of health comes that beauty which, combined with good qualities of head and heart, makes women angels of loveliness.

"Favorite Prescription" is the only medicine for women, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. This guarantee has been printed on the bottle-wrapper and faithfully carried out for many years. It is a positive specific for leucorrhea, painful menstruation, unnatural suppressions, prolapsus, or falling of the womb, weak back, anteversion, retroversion, bearing-down sensations, chronic congestion, inflammation and ulceration of the womb.

As a regulator and promoter of functional action, at that critical period of change from girlhood to womanhood, "Favorite Prescription" is a perfectly safe remedial agent, and can produce only good results. It is equally valuable when taken for those derangements incident to that later and critical period, known as "The Change of Life."

A Book of 160 pages, on "Woman and Her Diseases, their Nature, and How to Cure them," sent sealed, in plain envelope, on receipt of ten cents, in stamps.

Address, WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, No. 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

DR. PIERCE'S PELLETS

Purely Vegetable and Perfectly Harmless.

Unequaled as a Liver Pill. Smallest, Cheapest, Easiest to Take. One Tiny, Sugar-coated Pellet a Dose. Cures Sick Headache, Bilious Headache, Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, and all derangements of the stomach and bowels. 25 cents, by druggists.

Ezra, you're a man, an' you don't know anything about it!"

Ezra began to think he didn't, and although he by no means changed his spots entirely, he did from that time forth try to act on the theory that "women folks" are fond of commendation. — Youth's Companion.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is peculiar in strength and economy—it is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "100 doses one dollar." Try a bottle and you will be convinced of its merit.

To cure Biliousness, Sick Headache, Constipation, Malaria, Liver Complaints, take the safe and certain remedy, SMITH'S

BILE BEANS

Use the SMALL SIZE (40 little beans to the bottle). They are the most convenient, suit all ages. Price of either size, 25 cents per bottle.

KISSING at 7, 17, 70: Photo-gravure, panel size of this picture for 4 cents (coppers or stamps).

J. F. SMITH & CO.,
Makers of "Bile Beans," St. Louis, Mo.

One person in each locality can earn a good-sized bag of gold at work for us during the next few months. Some earn $20 a day and upwards, and all get grand wages. No one can fail who follows our directions. All is new, plain and easy. Experience not necessary. Capital not required, we start you. Either sex, young or old. You can live at home, giving work all your time or spare time only. One person has earned $5000 during past few months; you can do as well. No room to explain here. Full particulars and information mailed FREE to those who write us at once. Better not delay if you want work at which you will be sure of earning a large sum of money every month. STINSON & Co., Box 699, Portland, Maine.

HELPS TO

BIBLE STUDY

With Practical Notes on the Books of Scripture.

Designed for Ministers, Local Preachers, S. Teachers, and all Christian Workers.

Chapter I.—Different Methods of Bib Study.

Chapter II.—Rules of Interpretation.

Chapter III.—Interpretations of Bible Types and Symbols.

Chapter IV.—Analysis of the books of the Bible.

Chapter V.—Miscellaneous Helps.

Cloth, 184 pages, price postpaid, 50 cents.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

The

Washington Souvenir,

Size 18x24 inches, and containing the portraits of

Washington and his Com-Patriots,

WITH THEIR TESTIMONY ON

FREEMASONRY.

It contains the portraits of

Washington.
John Adams, 2nd President of the United States.

James Madison, 4th President of the United States.

Joseph Ritner, Governor of Pennsylvania.
Richard Rush, Secretary of State and of the Treasury.

Alexander Hamilton, the friend of Washington.

Samuel Adams, the Father of the Revolution.

John Hancock, President of the Continental Congress.

Samuel Dexter, Secretary of War and of the Treasury.

William Wirt, Attorney-General.

John Marshall, Chief Justice of U. S. Supreme Court.

John Quincy Adams, 6th President of the United States.

Benjamin Rush, the Father of Temperance Reform in America.

Lebbeus Armstrong, Founder of the first Temperance Society.

Framed, it is an ornament to please the eye, and a testimony to gladden the heart. Sent safely packed in a mailing tube, postpaid, for ten cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

SCOTCH RITE MASONRY ILLUSTRATED.

The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33d inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all Masonic rites, and are fully and accurately given in

"FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED,"

as advertised, but the signs, grips, passwords, etc., of these three degrees are given at the close of Vol 2 of

'Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated'

Vol. 1 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3d to 18th inclusive. Vol. 2 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 19th to 33d inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each; in cloth, $1 each. Each volume per dozen, paper covers, $4; per dozen, cloth bound, $9.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

MASONIC OUTRAGES.

BY REV. H. H. HINMAN.

The character of this valuable pamphlet is seen from its chapter headings: I.—Masonic Attempts on the Lives of Seceders. II.—Masonic Slander. III.—Masonic Assault on Free Speech. IV.—Freemasonry Among the Colored People. V.—Masonic Interference with the Punishment of Criminals. VI.—The Fruits of the Masonic institution as seen in the Conspiracies and Outrages of Other Secret Orders. VII.—The Relation of the Secret Lodge System to the Foregoing and Similar Outrages.

PRICE, POSTPAID, 30 CENTS.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

THE BROKEN SWORD.

Or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan.
By Samuel D. Greene.

One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $4.00.

This deeply interesting narrative shows what Masonry has done and is capable of doing in the Courts, and how bad men control the good men in the lodge and protect their own members when guilty of great crimes. For sale at 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

IN BRIEF.

A telephone has been established between Yokohama and Striznoka, a distance of 100 miles, in Japan, by order of the Mikado. It is the first in the country and works finely.—Electrical Review.

A new census of the New York police force shows that there are 3,410 policemen in all. Of these 2,273, or 66.66 per cent are native born. The remaining 33.34 per cent are foreign born, and 26.71 per cent, or 911 policemen, were born in Ireland. There are 144 Germans, 5 Frenchmen, 30 Englishmen, 8 Scotchmen, and the remainder are divided among twelve nationalities. Let us hear from Chicago.

Light, we now learn, not only has sound, but can be heard. A beam of sunlight is made to pass through a prism, so as to produce the solar spectrum. This is turned upon a disk containing colored silk or wool, and, as the colored lights of the spectrum fall upon it, sounds are given by different parts of the spectrum, and there is silence in other parts. For instance, if the green light flashes upon red worsted, loud sounds will be given. Only feeble sounds are heard when the red and blue parts of the rainbow fall upon the worsteds, and other colors evoke no sound at all. Green silks give sound best in red light. Every kind of material gives more or less sound in different colors and no sound in others.

Two new finds of unusual interest are announced by Egyptian explorers. The first is the discovery of a tomb believed by eminent archaeologists to be that of the famous Cleopatra. It is twenty-five feet under ground in a chamber ten feet long, with a sarcophagus in the form of a pyramid and decorated with exquisite carvings. The investigations are not yet complete, but have proceeded far enough to make it certain that the tomb is that of some extraordinary personage. The other discovery is that of a will at Illahun. The will was written on papyrus, and dates back to the reign of Amenemhat III., 2,550 B. C., the name of the month and day being given. The phraseology is quite modern in form, and shows that people even in that early day knew how to give away their property, when they could no longer use it, as well as they do now. As the testator settles his property upon his wife it indicates the legal status of woman. It is also another proof that the Egyptians had a written language in that far-off day.

The English postal conveniences are far greater than ours in this country, as is pointed out in a recent article in Harper's Weekly. The postal telegraph system, free delivery in country villages, and the large number and accessibility of postoffices are features that first catch the tourist's attention: "The English go farther than to merely register a letter. They insure letters as well. Every letter on which only the stamps for postage have been put is insured to the amount of one pound ($5), and that sum will be paid if it be damaged or goes astray, and if the postmaster-general be satisfied that it was of that value. Registered letters cost two-pence extra, and carry with them a guarantee of five pounds in case they are lost or damaged. For still another two-pence the insurance is raised to ten pounds, or whatever part of that sum the proven loss or damage amounts to. The government or postoffice savings banks are distinctly the depositories of the poor. You cannot bank money at a postoffice if you have an account in any other savings bank, and you may not deposit more than $150 in a year, or $750 altogether. Interest is not paid on less than a pound, and then only at the rate of twelve cents a year on five dollars. After the limit of deposit is reached, the depositor can buy government stock, provided he does not buy more than $500 worth in a year, or more than $1,500 worth altogether. He may withdraw all his money from the postoffice bank at a day's notice, and he can sell his government stock at the market price the moment he desires, a commission being charged for the sale. There is also a charge of a commission of nine-

Convincing Evidence

That Ayer's Sarsaparilla cures Rheumatism and kindred complaints is abundant. This medicine eradicates from the blood all trace of the disease, and so invigorates the system that a perfect restoration to health is inevitable.

"In Oakland, La., 22 years ago, I had been sick a year and a half with sciatic rheumatism. The extreme pains that I suffered wasted my flesh to the bone, and my strength and vitality were well nigh exhausted. My skin was yellow and rough, showing a bad state of the blood, and it is more than likely that blood poison existed, as I have taken large quantities of mercury. After the sciatica was in a measure under control, I was put under treatment to cleanse the blood and give me strength. This was continued several weeks, but to no purpose. My physician then suggested the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and it is to this medicine I owe my restoration to health. From actual experience in the use of various blood-purifiers, I am confident that Ayer's Sarsaparilla has no equal."

J. W. Pickle, Farmerville, La.
"I have known Mr. J. W. Pickle for many years, and consider him a truthful man."
—R. B. Dawkins, Mayor of Farmerville, La.
"Be sure, in making your purchase, that the druggist gives you

"During the past year my joints, which had become stiff and sore, caused me great pain, especially at the close of a day's work. At times my fingers were so lame I was unable to hold a needle, while the pain at night prevented my sleeping. I suffered also from nervous chills and a want of appetite. I tried outward applications and took remedies prescribed by my doctor; but all to no purpose. A short time ago my son-in-law, Wm. Woods, of Hollis, N. H., was cured by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla of an inflammatory disease of the eyes, and seeing him so much benefited, I thought I would try this medicine for my own trouble. The result is a complete cure of the pains, stiffness, and swelling from which I suffered so much. The Sarsaparilla has had a good effect on my appetite and nerves, so that I have better strength and no more chills."—Eliza Halvorson, Nashua, N. H.

"After being many years afflicted with rheumatism, I have used Ayer's Sarsaparilla with great success."—J. B. Bridge, Boston, Mass.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla
—FOR—
Rheumatism.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

Prepared by DR. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass. Sold by all Druggists.

Price $1. Six bottles, $5. Worth $5 a bottle.

SAVE YOUR MONEY

BY SUBSCRIBING FOR ANY OF THE FOLLOWING PERIODICALS IN COMBINATION WITH THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

	Regular yearly subscription price.		Regular yearly subscription price.	Our price for both.
Forum,	$5.00	and Cynosure	$1.50	$5.50
North American Review,	5.00	" "	1.50	5.50
Popular Science Monthly,	5.00	" "	1.50	5.50
Century Magazine,	4.00	" "	1.50	5.00
Harper's " "	4.00	" "	1.50	4.50
" Weekly,	4.00	" "	1.50	4.75
Scribner's Magazine,	3.00	" "	1.50	4.00
Independent,	3.00	" "	1.50	4.00

If any periodical not in the above list is wanted, in combination with the Cynosure, send for terms and enclose stamp for reply.

W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.

pence on all purchases exceeding twenty-five pounds worth of stock. Thus, in all ways, private banks and brokers are measurably protected against undue rivalry by the government."

For restoring the color, thickening the growth, and beautifying the hair, and for preventing baldness, Hall's Hair Renewer is unsurpassed.

THE CHRISTIAN CONFERENCE

—ON THE—

Secret Lodge System.

The Proceedings of the late Christian Conference, containing the addresses of Joseph Cook, Drs. Goodwin, Wallace, Mc Dill, Col. Clarke and others, is now ready in a handsome pamphlet of 130 pages. It is one of the very best documents ever issued on the lodge question. The price was advertised at 15 cents, but the actual cost of publication was 20 cents, and of mailing 5 cents, making total cost 25 cents.

It will, however, be sent postpaid for 15 cents.

Only those who are able and willing need send more.

THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
W. I. Phillips, Pub'r and Treas.,
221 West Madison St.,
Chicago, Ill.

KNIGHT TEMPLARISM ILLUSTRATED.

A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $0.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50c; $4.00 per dozen. Furnished in any quantities at

FIFTY YEARS and BEYOND;

OR,

Old Age and How to Enjoy It.

A most appropriate gift book for "The Old Folks at Home."

Compiled by REV. S. G. LATHROP.

Introduction by

REV. ARTHUR EDWARDS, D. D.,
(Editor N. W. Christian Advocate.)

The object of this volume is to give to that great army who are fast hastening toward the "great beyond" some practical hints and helps as to the best way to make the most of the remainder of that now is, and to give comfort and help to those who are to come.

"It is a tribute to the Christianity that honors the gray head and refuses to consider the oldish man burden or an obstacle. The book will aid and comfort every reader."—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

"The selections are very precious. Springing from such numerous and pure fountains, they can but afford a refreshing and healthful draught for every aged traveller to the great beyond."—Witness.

Price, bound in rich cloth, 400 pages, 50c

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago Ill

PATENTS

Obtained, and all PATENT BUSINESS attended to for MODERATE FEES. Our office is opposite the U. S. Patent Office, and we can obtain Patents in less time than those remote from WASHINGTON. Send MODEL, DRAWING or PHOTO of invention. We advise as to patentability free of charge and we make NO CHARGE UNLESS PATENT IS SECURED.

For circular, advice, terms and references to actual clients in your own State, County, City or Town, write to

C. A. SNOW & CO.

Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

REMARKABLE OFFER!

Nearly everyone is familiar with the name, but it has been estimated that only one in every two hundred and eighty persons in the United States is fortunate enough to have access to the valuable information contained within the covers the grandest work ever written by mortal man,

Webster's

UNABRIDGED DICTIONARY.

That this is an unfortunate state of affairs will be admitted by all, and it is due to the fact that no one save the rich could afford them.

The Dictionary is a necessity in every home, school and business house. It fills a vacancy and furnishes knowledge which no one hundred volumes of the choicest books could supply, and all young or old, educated or ignorant, rich or poor should have it within reach and refer to its contents every day in the year.

The Loomis reprint contains all the matter as compiled and arranged by our esteemed and honored author and statesman,

NOAH WEBSTER.

About forty years of his life was devoted to this great work, and when we consider the fact that this book contains about 100,000 words, we will appreciate that these years must have been well spent.

Some idea of the magnitude of this book may be gained from the fact that it contains over 440 cubic inches of paper and has about 300,000 square inches of printed surface.

In addition to the 100,000 words it contains a portrait of the author, together with his biography and a valuable table of 12,000 synonymous words.

By special arrangement with the publishers, we are permitted to furnish this valuable volume: 1st. To any subscriber to our paper; 2nd. To any renewal subscription; and 3rd. To any person who has paid a full year's subscription within the past six months, on receipt of $1.50 for the paper one year, and two dollars and seventy-five cents to cover express charges, packing, etc., of the Dictionary.

Address

CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

$10 REWARD TO ANY ONE

Who will obtain 20 New Subscribers to

BUDS AND BLOSSOMS

AND

FRIENDLY GREETINGS.

The Christian at Work writes: "No parent, with young folks in his household, can do a better or wiser thing than to subscribe for 'Buds and Blossoms,' a monthly illustrated magazine, published by Rev. J. F. Avery, pastor of the Mariner's Temple, No. 1 Henry St., New York, and thus secure its regular visitation throughout this year. Send for a copy and let it speak for itself, which we are sure it will do more effectively and eloquently than any words we can say in its behalf."

ONLY ONE DOLLAR PER YEAR.

Send a stamp for specimen.

You can earn $10 in Gold

Address Rev. J. F. Avery,

Pastor Mariner's Temple,

166 Henry Street, New York City.

A WOMAN'S VICTORY;

OR

THE QUERY OF THE LODGEVILLE CHURCH,

BY JENNIE L. HARDIE.

This simple and touching story is worth reading by every Anti-mason—and especially BY HIS WIFE. Get it and take it home to cheer the heart of your companion who may desire to do something for Christ against great evils, but is discouraged from making any public effort. PRICE, FIFTEEN CENTS. Two for a dollar

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison Street, Chicago

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—U. S. Government Report, Aug. 17, 1889.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

Mr. Blair of the United States Senate introduced a bill Thursday to prohibit the exportation of alcoholic liquors to Africa and the islands of the Pacific Ocean.

Senator Hoar Monday introduced in the Senate a joint resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution providing for the election of postmasters by the people.

Senator Edmunds, from the committee on judiciary, yesterday reported back favorably with amendments the bill recently introduced by him providing for the reorganization of the government of Utah.

Major Powell, Superintendent of Geological Survey, who was sometime a student at Wheaton College, has been completely vindicated by the Secretary of the Interior of the charge made in the Senate that he had misapplied funds appropriated for the irrigation survey.

The protracted negotiations between the Senate and House respecting the differences arising from conflicting amendments to the Morrill pension bill were brought to a successful conclusion Tuesday by a final agreement of the conferees. By the terms of the agreement the Senate recedes from its insistence upon the dependent pension feature, and the House agrees to drop the service pension provision, leaving the bill a disability pension bill.

In the course of some remarks on the conference report and the urgent deficiency pension appropriation bill, Representative Henderson (Iowa) in the House Thursday made the following statement of the appropriations made by the present House for the benefit of the soldier: Regular pension bill, $98,427,461; urgent deficiency, $21,613,009; soldiers' homes (deficiency), $81,609; expenses of pension office, $2,439,150; records and pension division, war department, $337,837,270; artificial limbs (deficiency), $60,000; pay and bounty claims, $1,123,629; soldiers' homes, $2,601,765; aid for State homes, $400,000; artificial limbs, $402,000; pay and bounty claims, $660,000; act for total helplessness, $45,000; general pension act (passed yesterday), $35,000,000; urgent deficiency, $3,708,838; total, $167,419,731.

COUNTRY.

A cyclone at Channahon, Ill., Tuesday night, moved buildings and leveled out-houses and trees, but no lives were lost. The lightning and thunder are said to have been terrific.

An express train on the St. Louis, Arkansas and Texas Railroad was wrecked in Arkansas Monday night by bandits, who, after stealing the contents of the safe in the express car, made their escape.

A correspondent of the Daily News, writing from Arkansas City, Kan., imparts the interesting information that not a little of the opposition to the re-election of Mr. Ingalls to the United States Senate is due to his open hostility to woman suffrage.

At Decatur, Ill., Tuesday, Richardson Washington was sentenced to two years in the penitentiary for perjury. He accused another man of robbing a dead man of his clothes, but it was shown that Washington himself was the criminal.

In the Wabash wreck near Warrenton, Mo., Monday, J. Kellar, of Cynthia, Ky., his son, and the five race-horses owned by them were all killed.

At Springfield, Ill., Thursday the Supreme Court filed its decision in the bucket shop case of William Sobey on appeal. This decision holds that buying on margins is gambling within the statute and therefore unlawful.

Six of the dog-bitten boys who were sent on from Illinois to be inoculated in the Pasteur Institute, New York, have started home after having been successfully treated by Dr. Gibier.

A terrible rainstorm visited some sections in Illinois Friday night, and did a great deal of damage to the crops, as well as disaster by the sudden rise of the rivers and creeks, the loss at Rockford alone being estimated at $300,000.

FOREIGN.

The Freissinige Zeitung says that the Emperor has refused to assent to the suggestion that Prince Bismarck be prosecuted for divulging state secrets.

It is announced that the Canadian government is about to advertise in English papers for a fast Atlantic steamship service, the minimum average speed to be eighteen knots an hour.

The announcement that Chancellor von Caprivi will accompany Emperor William on his visit to the Czar is regarded as changing the meeting of the sovereigns from an exchange of imperial courtesies to a diplomatic event. The interview is to take place August 2. Herr von Schweinitz, the German Ambassador to Russia, will be present. Emperor William, escorted by a squadron, sails from Kiel to Cronstadt, and will remain with the Czar three days.

NOTICE.

Do not send to this office anything intended for the little paper called the Home Guard. It has no connection with the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, but is a private enterprise, and located at Boston, Mass.

Any one who fails to take advantage of the offer of the Proceedings of the late Chicago Conference, at 15 cents per copy, will miss more than simply a store-house of the best and latest thought upon this reform,—he will miss the encouragement and uplift of feeling and enthusiasm which is given by the sight of a report of such a grand meeting. If you are somewhat discouraged by what you see around you, lift up your eyes, take a look at the many stars that are seen in this report shedding light upon the darkness. "We are not so lonesome as we used to be."

10,000

Another ten thousand edition of the tract,

KILLED, AND NO INQUEST.

This is a large 4-page tract at 30 cents per pound, 15 cents for half pound, and 10 cents for a third of a pound. It is an illustrated account of the death of Rev. J. W. Johnston, while being initiated by the officers of Huntington Lodge, W. Va., in January of this year. Sent postpaid at the above price. Address,

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
221 W. Madison St. Chicago

The MOST RELIABLE FOOD For Infants & Invalids. Not a medicine, but a specially prepared Food, adapted to the weakest stomach. 4 sizes cans. Paraphilfree. Wm. Ridge & Co. (on every label). Palmer, Mass.

Its superior excellence proven in millions of homes for more than a quarter of a century. It is used by the United States Government. Endorsed by the heads of the Great Universities as the Strongest, Purest and most Healthful. Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder does not contain Ammonia, Lime, or Alum. Sold only in Cans. PRICE BAKING POWDER CO. NEW YORK. CHICAGO. ST. LOUIS.

20% U. S. Title a sure 20 per cent profit. Invest your small savings. TACOMA $100 LOTS $5 CASH $5 MONTHLY. Tacoma Investment Co., (capital $100,000) Tacoma, Wash.

KEYSTONE MORTGAGE COMPANY. Aberdeen, S. Dak., offers guaranteed 7 per cent Farm Mortgage, Electric and Gas Bonds, Bank and other dividend paying stocks. Address us for particulars. Eastern Office, 1238 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

$75.00 to $250.00 A MONTH can be made working for us. Persons preferred who can furnish a horse and give their whole time to the business. Spare moments may be profitably employed also. A few vacancies in towns and cities. B. F. JOHNSON & CO., 1009 Main Street, Richmond, Va.

AGENTS WANTED Ladies or Gents. Old reliable house permanent business. Quick sales. Valuable Sample Free. Rare chance. F. M. Brooks, Secretary, 821 Broadway, N. Y.

I CURE FITS! When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. H. G. ROOT, M. D., 183 Pearl St. New York.

Our High Grade List and Bargain Book sent to any address on receipt of a 2-c stamp. LORD & THOMAS, NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING, 45 RANDOLPH STREET, CHICAGO.

WHEATON COLLEGE.

WHEATON, ILL.

FALL TERM BEGINS IN SEPTEMBER.

A College for Men and Women.

For Catalogue address with stamp.

C. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

SEE THIS!

The latest, most complete edition.

Over 235 choice

Reform Songs for the Times.

Only 30c a copy, or 20c by the 100.

—AND—

"THE TOBACCO MANIA."

$1 per 100.

For sale here and by the author,

GEO. W. CLARK,

76 W. Montcalm St., Detroit, Mich.

Standard Works

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Associat'n

771 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. A liberal discount to dealers.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10cts each.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims by Rev. David McDill, Pres. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. In cloth, 35cts each; paper covers, 15cts each.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinions of many prominent college presidents and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25cts each.

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of his sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5cts each.

Sermon on Secretism. By Rev. R. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational church, Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear array of the objections to all secret societies, and to Masonry especially, that are apparent to all. 5cts each.

Pres. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to dis-fellow-ship secret societies. 10cts each.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and Church. By Rev. M. S. Dury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church, is clearly shown. 10cts each.

Holden with Cords. OR THE POWER OF THE SECRET EMPIRE. By E. E. Flagg, author of "A Sunny Life," etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story, accurately true to life because mainly a narration of historical facts. In cloth, $1.00; in paper, 50 cents.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and law of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved. 15cts each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. J. Day Brownlee. In reply to a Masonic Oration by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio. 5 cents each.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on Masonry. Paper covers, 25 cents each.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion. 5 cents each.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by ex-President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; paper cover, 50cts.

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own utterances; its doctrine and practice examined in the light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth 50cts; paper covers, 25cts.

Patriarchs Militant Illustrated. The complete ritual of the Patriarchs Militant degree. This is an accurate copy of the Charge Book furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge of the Independent Order of Odd-fellows, with the eighteen military diagrams and the unwritten (secret) work added. Paper cover, 25cts each.

Exposition of the Grange. Edited by Rev. A. W. Geeslin. Illustrated with engravings. 25cts each.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XXII., No. 41.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JUNE 26, 1890.

WHOLE No. 1,052.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION;

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.

Address all letters for publication to EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, CHICAGO. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Address all business letters and make all drafts and money orders payable to the Treasurer and Publisher, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address always give the former address.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill., as Second Class Matter]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:	THE N. C. A.
State and Prospects of our Reform..... 8	Proceedings of the Annual Meeting..... 4
Personal Notes..... 8	Report of the Directors..... 4
CONTRIBUTIONS:	Report of the Corresponding Secretary and General Agent..... 5
Elizabeth E. Flagg..... 1	NEW ENGLAND LETTER..... 9
A Song of the March (poetry)..... 2	WASHINGTON LETTER..... 9
A Remarkable Experience..... 2	THE N. C. A..... 7
Lotteries and Gambling..... 3	LECTURE LIST..... 7
God's Providence in Reforms..... 3	College Anniversaries..... 8
SELECTED:	THE HOME..... 10
The Covenanter Testimony..... 3	TEMPERANCE..... 11
CORRESPONDENCE:	LITERATURE..... 12
Masons feed on this Trash; Dr. Milligan in the Synod; Non-partisan in Churches..... 6	BIBLE LESSON..... 12
IN BRIEF..... 7	RELIGIOUS NEWS..... 12
	LODGE NOTES..... 13
	MARKETS..... 13
	HOME AND HEALTH..... 14
	FARM NOTES..... 15
	NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 16

ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

AN AUTOBIOGRAPHY.

The editors of the Cynosure have kindly asked me to write down some reminiscences connected with my earlier days, and in particular—as the thing which will most deeply interest the readers of this paper—of those influences which gave my mind its lifelong bent in the direction of reform work.

My birthday, as recorded in my father's handwriting, occurred Feb. 3, 1847. I was not a strong or healthy child, and being confined to the house so much by sickness, and without brothers or sisters, I was thrown back on myself for amusement, and I suppose this made me rather old-fashioned in manner, and strengthened my tendency to quieter and graver pursuits than most children naturally take to. But though thus "hedged in," mine was a happy childhood. Its days of weariness and pain, and doses of nauseous medicine, are no more remembered, save as they make a background for the patient, loving care of one of the tenderest of mothers. My favorite and earliest amusement was to draw on a slate, and make believe write. I remember how a sight of the starlit heavens, or the rare beauty of a perfect summer day, would fill me with a strange, silent ecstasy; and how the wind at night seemed to tell me stories and sing me poems which I afterwards tried to write out. Many were the wonderful effusions which I thus committed to paper without the slightest risk that anybody would ever read them, being written in self-invented characters that would have puzzled the most learned savant to decipher.

One of my earliest recollections is of my mother's taking me to Sunday-school, which was held in the basement of the church, or "meeting-house," as the old folks called it; and as I recall the steep, narrow stairs down which we little ones went tumbling, my only wonderment is that there were no broken necks. The Sunday-school was then the principal recognized channel for layworkers. My father was a teacher for many years, and every Sunday morning—for we were early risers on Sundays as well as on week days—he made it a point to sit down with Bible and question book before him and look over the lesson. As soon as I was able to read—almost before—he associated me in its study, and some of the pleasantest recollections of my childhood are connected with bright Sabbath mornings when I sat in my high chair, proud and happy to think my father "wanted his little daughter to help him about his lesson." By putting it in this light he eliminated every element of compulsion or drudgery from the exercise; and any one who knows anything about the nature of childhood need not be told that he won from the start, if not a very helpful, at least a very earnest and eager little assistant. My father did not follow the renowned example of the man who made a hole for his cat to go through, and then a smaller one beside it for the kitten. He believed that my childish understanding could grasp all the fundamental truths of the Bible as well as the adult. Mature years have shown me the wisdom of his plan. I owe to it my lifelong interest in Bible study, and I would recommend to every parent, who wishes his children to grow up lovers of the Sunday-school, a similar course. I am sure that but a small percentage will ever think themselves "too old to go" that have from their earliest years been thus trained.

Wellesley was not then the famous college town which it has since become. It was but a bare country hamlet in which there was much that was still primitive and local. And indeed, it was not Wellesley at all, but West Needham; that is, the western division of the town of that name. "Its first settlers," to quote from an historical sketch now before me, "were Puritans, who sought here the civil and religious liberty denied them in England. They were of noble origin and sustained the character of princely and pious farmers." At its first town meeting held in 1711, measures were taken for the construction of a meeting-house, and soon after a school-house was erected "fast by the oracles of God." This was the history of most of those early settled Massachusetts towns whose God-fearing founders builded better than they knew. There was nothing about the place in any sense prophetic of the celebrity it was yet to attain as an educational and literary center. It was nicknamed Faggot Town, because the gathering of faggots to sell in adjoining villages was quite an important industry—so much so that it went by the name of "Needham currency." Of course this was anterior to my day, yet in my early childhood the place had not changed very materially from what it was in the early part of the century.

In these times, when there is such a multiplicity of children's books, my library would have been considered unique as well as meagre. I had "Songs for the Little Ones at Home," a "New England Primer," "Little Henry and his Bearer," and a few picture books. But I think among them all none made so deep an impression on my childish mind as an illustrated pamphlet published by the Temperance Society, with pictures, and short stories under each, illustrating the dreadful effects of alcohol. Not being able to attend school, owing to my feeble health, my father taught me to read and spell Sunday evenings, varying the monotony occasionally by other exercises, such as showing me the pictures in the aforesaid pamphlet, and explaining what a dreadful thing alcohol was and how much the drunkards' poor wives and children had to suffer because there were men wicked enough to sell rum. If I am to-day a prohibition crank, that little book, with my father's Sunday evening talks thereon, made me one; and as the best means of multiplying the race, I would recommend, not less scientific instruction in our schools, but more of such home talks from parents.

My jubilation was great when I made the discovery one day that I could put syllables together and in a very halting fashion read, and from that time I became an omnivorous devourer of everything printed that came in my way. This passion for reading is often a child's greatest danger. But my parents were judicious enough to see that it was at least as important to feed the young and growing mind on good literature as the young and growing body on good food.

I had a daily reading lesson with my mother from the New Testament, and some simple recitations in other branches. My parents also took a good weekly newspaper. I believe that as an instructor of youth, bringing out their latent powers of thought, and that enthusiasm for the right which ought to be inherent in every young mind, nothing can exceed a well conducted journal. My father was Abolitionist to the backbone, and always took an anti-slavery paper. I especially recollect the Independent and the Telegraph—the latter published by Henry Wilson. Many fathers would not have taken the trouble to talk with a child, and particularly a daughter, on political questions, but I remember that my father always did; that he never poured cold water on my interest in the great national topic of the day, but fanned it instead, and certainly the year of the Fremont campaign, when I was nine years old, it was at white heat. I believe that to win a slave's freedom I could have died with pleasure.

Though fond of study, at least of those particular lines of study that accorded with my natural bent, I do not think I was a precocious child. As to my religious impressions, I scarcely remember a time when I was not subject to seasons of unusual seriousness that came and went as alternate sunshine and shadow will chase each other across the meadows on a summer day. I knew very well that the one thing my parents desired for me before anything else was that I might become a Christian, and I frequently enough wished I was one. But my ideas on the subject were anything but clear. I had a general impression, however, that I must be like the good children I sometimes read of in memoirs who always died young; and I knew this was far enough from being the case. Indeed, in my secret heart I think I did not want to be like them. This was not entirely owing to inward depravity. One reason was that in that case I, too, should have to die young, and I did not want to die. The other was that the unchildish and unnatural type of character, usually portrayed in said memoirs, did not strike me as lovely; and I may add that on this latter point my mind remains unchanged. A child's instincts are generally true.

The fleeting, evanescent character of my early religious experiences—if experiences they may be called—is by no means a proof that they were valueless, but quite the contrary. And I would say to every teacher and parent, Do not be discouraged when the young minds under your charge show a disposition to ignore or treat lightly the very subjects in which perhaps only the day before they had seemed to evince an unusual interest. Youth, and especially childhood, is a period of moods and tenses, when the mind and will are in the formative, chaotic period; and though many an anxious father and praying mother has bitterly repeated the prophet's lament, "O Ephraim, what shall I do unto thee? for your goodness is as a morning cloud, and as the early dew it goeth away," they have forgotten that the dew, though speedily dried up, takes the place of the showers withheld, and is one of Nature's most beneficent gifts. These indefinite yearnings, these longings after the Christian life, these spasmodic endeavors to live it, may not be in themselves an actual experience of religion, but I do assert that they keep the mind open to religious influences, and in the soil thus watered by heavenly dews the good seed stands a much better chance to spring up and bear fruit a hundred fold, than where no such gracious strivings of the Spirit have been felt. I suppose there must have been a particular moment when I made the final decision to live for Christ, but I do not know when, nor do I deem it of importance to know. We are born as spiritual babes into the kingdom, and the claim that we must know the exact date always seemed to me absurd. Christ keeps the record for all his children and that is enough.

My mother had a cousin, a Mrs. Mason, who went with her husband among the first missionaries to Burmah as associates of Dr. Judson. Whatever may be said of our missionaries at the present day, those early pioneers who went forth into the untrodden wilds of heathenism to plant the standard of the cross, were a band of genuine heroes. None more so have appeared since the days of Paul. The names of these and other noted missionaries I always heard mentioned with such affectionate veneration that I grew up in the firm belief that there was no honor in this world quite equal to that of being a foreign missionary. It can easily be imagined that my view of such a life was taken through the rose-hued spectacles of romance rather than hard reality. It was a mere dream, and God did not intend it should ever be anything else. With maturer years came firmer health and also the knowledge that my mother needed me—her only child—at home.

My childish passion for using the pen had only strengthened with my growth, and very naturally I began to employ my leisure time in writing for the press. I shall never forget the delight which I felt when the Congregationalist accepted an article and paid me five dollars. My first published book was a Sunday-school story—"The Flower by the Prison," which was followed by a collection of short stories for children that were gathered into book form after being published in the Sabbath at Home, of which Rev. I. P. Warren, D.D., was then editor. At the same time I kept up a course of extensive reading and home study, but I was haunted all through the years of my early womanhood with the feeling that I had not found my right vocation; that the Lord had something for me to do—I did not really know what. I often look back to that unrestful period, wondering if we must all wander our forty years in the wilderness before we can go up and possess the promised land, and learn what are the special and particular Anaks whom the Lord wants us to fight. Certainly the last thing that occurred to my mind was that he would ever put me in the forefront of a great and unpopular reform.

I lived in a village where there was neither saloon nor, at that time, any lodge. I had no brothers or near relatives to fall a victim to either of these evils; and indeed as regarded secret societies my thoughts had never been turned to the subject. Masonry I considered a very foolish thing, made up of equal parts of fuss and feathers, but I never thought of it as inimical to religion or good government. However, if I was ignorant I was also unprejudiced; for I had no male friends, as before stated, who belonged to the order to tell me "what a good thing it was." My first gleam of light on this subject did not come in Masonic fashion "from the east" but from the west. The Christian Cynosure began to visit us. The paper was then in its infancy and very different from the comely and attractive sheet into which it has since ripened. I well remember looking carelessly over one of the first numbers and remarking, "Why, this seems to be all about Masonry, and that is nothing I am interested in." The paper continued to come, and, as we afterwards learned, was the gift of our dear and venerated Deacon I. Leadbetter, whose money and prayers were given without stint to help the cause at a time when its friends in New England could be counted on one's fingers. At the same time, by a providential coincidence, Finney's work on Freemasonry fell in our way. My father and I read the book together in mutual astonishment and horror at its revelations. From that time the Cynosure was eagerly welcomed, and the cause of which it is the organ took its place in our hearts as one demanding the earnest support of every Christian who would be loyal to his Saviour. Dimly at first and little by little my work began to unfold before me. Here was a gigantic system of heathenism right in our own land—nay, in our beloved New England, and carrying on its rites under the very shadow of her church steeples. I saw that one need not go to Africa or India to be a missionary; but while I earnestly longed to be able to help in the warfare against Baal I did not know how to begin. It did indeed occur to me that I might use my gift of writing, but the fear that I was too ignorant of the matter to engage in so great a work held me back. For a year at least I nursed in secret this strong desire. Rev. E. D. Bailey, then New England agent, coming to Wellesley to lecture, I took the chance to speak with him on the subject. He at once suggested that I write a story embodying the principal events of the Morgan period. I at once began the task—if task that could be called which soon became an absorbing delight—and thus it was that "Holden with Cords" was written. It was not a made book, but "growd" like Topsey out of the intense longings of my heart to do something, however small, to help destroy the vulture which was preying on Christianity's vitals.

Time would fail—certainly Cynosure space—should I attempt here to pay a grateful tribute to all who have stretched out kindly hands and given me words of cheer which have been truly as cold waters to a thirsty soul. But I cannot close without at least adverting to one especial friendship which I formed about this time with an aged blind lady, the Mrs. F. of the Week-day Sermons, whose warm and unflinching interest in my work was a constant help and stimulant. She and her husband were old residents of Ohio, and as they had formerly been very active in the work of the underground railroad, I need not say that they were out and out for reform on every line. She had a wonderful grasp of spiritual realities, combined with sound practical sense; and also in no small measure that strange gift which the Scotch Highlanders call "second sight." More than once her prophecy of a time of trouble and woe yet to come on our nation, which should dwarf in sanguinary terrors even the French Revolution, has made me shiver. She had the Quaker calmness, never excited, never speaking above a certain low pitch; she was an utter disbeliever in spiritualism, she pinned her faith on the plain Word of God and nothing less, yet I am personally knowing to more than one occasion on which things and events were revealed to her, of which she could never have received knowledge from any human source. The veil which hid from her the common sights and sounds of earth seemed to grow luminous on the spiritual side. In the night which surrounded her the pillar of cloud became the pillar of fire, instinct with oracles from the other world.

Let me say in closing that ever since my pen has been identified with the anti-secret cause, I have been given the blessing for which the psalmist prayed: the way has been made straight before my face. No haunting doubt that I may have missed my vocation has tempted me to turn to the right hand or to the left. I know that my work has found me, and that I have found my work.

My life has been far too quiet and peaceful to afford any but scant materials to a biographer;

yet I have been impressed with the hope that in thus writing out what may seem the trifling details of my own childhood, those readers of the Cynosure who are parents may see the importance of giving the young minds under their charge a reform bent, if they would have their places worthily filled in the coming years. And to all who want a place to work for the Lord, but are in doubt what that place is, or what kind of work he wants them to do, let me say in the words of the wise old motto engraved over the mantel of an English parsonage, "Do ye next thyng." Seize the opportunities as they come, for be sure they will come; and say like Jacob, "I will not let thee go until thou bless me."

A SONG OF THE MARCH.

BY VICTORIA ALEXANDRA BUCK.

Down upon the earth's dark lowlands
Bright the lights of God have shone,
Where he sits with lifted scepter
On his bright and gleaming throne,
Just behind the cloudy pillar,
Keeping watch above his own.

Hark! the ocean's waves are sounding
On the shores of every clime,
While the voice of my Redeemer
Rings above in tones sublime;
And the old world swings in silence
Down the changing grooves of time.

Shall we falter now, my comrades,
At the burdens we must bear?
No! the ranks are moving onward,
Flags are waving, bugles blare,
And the sabers upward swinging
Leave their lightnings in the air.

Perish every foul ambition,
While the great Creator's plan
Sweeps from glory unto glory,
Making strong the heart of man;
While the Prince of our salvation
Marches with us in the van,—
Marches with us o'er the highlands,
Where the lights and shadows play,
Though our camp is on the mountain,
Yet we cannot go astray;
And we've learned the "swing of conquest,"
As we march along our way.

All along Time's misty borders
Waves are breaking on the shore;
All the hosts of heaven are charging
With their shining ranks before;
And the bugles blown by angels
Sound above the thunder's roar.

And the warm breath of Jehovah
Has across our spirits blown,
Where he sits with lifted scepter
On his alabaster throne,
Just behind the shadow, keeping
Watch and ward above his own.

East Randolph, N. Y.

A REMARKABLE EXPERIENCE.

BY OBED H. KING.

I was converted in early manhood, much the same way as are other sinners. I had a bright evidence of sins forgiven and could never doubt my conversion. I then supposed I had reached the summit of Christian experience in this life. My education was such, that in all good conscience I rejected and condemned water baptism as a relic of Judaism and improper to be tolerated in the church. For thirty-nine years I lived a wilderness life of sinning and repenting, with many severe trials, and sore afflictions for disobedience, and at different times near unto death. Becoming tired and heartsick of it, I longed for a better experience.

During a revival meeting of Friends, I became greatly interested, and while in deep contrition before the Lord, I heard a voice saying, "Be at peace with all men and prepare to meet thy God." Regarding this as a heavenly warning, it aroused my slumbering soul, and at once I began to obey. I had long been in a lawsuit with a neighbor, and in difficulties with several others. The suit was soon compromised, and all other difficulties adjusted, as far as in my power. And in great contrition of heart, while on my knees in open supplication, I consecrated my all to the Lord the best I knew. In great mercy he filled my soul and whole being full of the Spirit, and with glory. I was as happy as I think Abraham was when Isaac was born. I now thought that surely I had reached an end of all my trials and testings. I saw the Scriptures in a new light, and next morning while praising the Lord, I seemed to see the Saviour upon the cross as clearly as the noonday sun. A man in dark clothes was standing near the cross with the Bible in his arms. I heard a voice say, "Behold a man of God." The impression made upon my mind was, that man is a sample of what I should be, in taking the Word of God for the man of my council. In an ecstasy of joy I covenanted anew to do so, and in confirmation of my vow I kissed the open pages of the sacred book. I had for twenty years been a member of the Odd-fellows, and attained the highest position in a subordinate lodge, and also in other secret societies. But upon examination of God's Word, I found the whole system to be in opposition to the revealed truth, and at war with the church. So for conscience sake I relinquished my connection with these unfruitful works of darkness. Upon further examination, to my great surprise I found Christ's commission to his disciples to be a plain command to baptize, and "add to the church such as were saved." I also saw Peter's command to Cornelius, applicable to my case, and that I too should be baptized. It was greatly against the will of my family and friends; and taking into view my official position in the church, to which I was as warmly attached as was Joseph to his native land, it was a severe test. But my convictions were strong, and became a burden, so that it seemed that my Isaac (sectarian prejudice) had not yet been given up. But the way was plain, and in view of my last covenant, I dare not resist the Spirit, and trusting the Lord, I obeyed from the heart the form of doctrine, and was "buried with Christ in baptism." And now the peace of God truly passeth all understanding. Praise the Lord. Amen.

LOTTERIES AND GAMBLING.

BY ANTHONY COMSTOCK.

Unless the laws against these evils are more rigidly enforced, the time is not far distant when employers will have to organize a vigilance committee to prevent the pilferings of their employes. Merchants complain of gambling houses in close proximity to their places of business, and demand that they be closed to remove temptations to dishonesty from their employes. A Broadway business man recently said to me, "Merchants should combine to sustain your Society for their own protection."

We are glad to note that the President of the United States in his message to Congress has heartily indorsed the Postmaster-General's recommendation of further legislation against the use of the mails by lottery companies. The Louisiana Lottery, a national scourge, in its heartless greed has recently increased the price of tickets so that if all are sold each month, the annual income is increased from $3,000,000 to $28,000,000. The Society for the Suppression of Vice closed their New York office in 1879, and notwithstanding an offer of $25,000 annual contribution to our work if we would not interfere again with their doing business openly in this city, they have never dared to either open an office, nor can they advertise as they formerly did in this State. It has been publicly stated that this monster public plunderer, in order to secure a renewal of its charter, which expires in 1893, for fifty years more has offered to bribe the whole State of Louisiana by paying the State debt of over $12,000,000, and erecting a public library for the city of New Orleans to cost $100,000. During the past year no less than four so-called Little Louisiana Lotteries have sprung into existence. We arrested one Olin D. Gray, a lithographer and printer in this city, for printing tickets for these snide affairs, seizing in his possession over 1,500,000 tickets at one time, besides fifteen lithographic stones.

The ravages of pool, gambling and bookmaking in the past year have been fearful to contemplate. From all sides come accounts of dishonesty, embezzlements, defalcations, breaches of trust, robbery, suicide and murder. The warning prophecy of our Secretary before the Legislative Committee and the Governor of this State, made prior to the passage of the infamous Ives' Pool bill (allowing gambling during a part of the year on race tracks), are fully realized. The large space given to these crime breeders, under the heading of "Sporting News," in some daily papers is fostering crime and promoting dishonesty. This sort of highhanded robbery, when boss gamblers and their touts invade not only every race course, but maintain open pool rooms in the midst of the marts of trade, is a constant menace to industrious habits. To spread glittering inducements of gain before the hardworking and ignorant classes, to take the poor man's dollar that should go to buy bread for his family, is the quintessence of cruelty, but to legalize a scheme that induces and entices men and women of all classes in society to become gamblers is to outrage the fundamental principles of good government.

New York.

GOD'S PROVIDENCE IN REFORMS.

BY REV. H. H. HINMAN.

God's providence is in all reforms. Without divine intervention they fail, and this is true of political as well as moral and social reforms. All history is replete with evidences of this fact, but none more so than in the great anti-slavery struggle. During the thirty years of discussion from 1833 to 1863 the cause seemed at times to go backwards. The public wearied of the agitation. The church had more immediate and seemingly pressing interests that demanded her attention. The efforts of the Abolitionists seemed impracticable if not hopeless. Business men and especially the commercial classes were disturbed by the agitation and not only longed for but *demand*ed peace. Politicians saw that the hope of immediate success was in placing themselves squarely against all discussion of the rights of the slave. The American people, of the North as well as the South, voted down all agitation and declared Abolitionism dead and buried, without possible hope of resurrection. But for the continued interventions of divine providence the predictions of the selfish politicians would have been fulfilled.

But God was in it, and therefore it did not fail. The madness of the slave power was the means of its overthrow. The denial of the right of petition, the mobbing and murdering of those who plead for justice, the annexation of Texas and the war with Mexico which had for its object to extend the area of slavery, the Fugitive Slave law, the repeal of the Missouri Compromise, the Dred Scott Decision, the hanging of John Brown; and last, the secession of the Southern States and the firing on Fort Sumter, all these continued to arrest attention and prevent the relapse into moral insensibility that the mass of the people so much desired.

A precisely-similar series of moral phenomena are presented by the efforts to abolish the liquor traffic. The intense earnestness, the aggressive spirit, and utter disregard of all moral principles that characterize the liquor interest is the main reason why the temperance reform does not die. Men are murdered to defend the liquor traffic just as they were to defend slavery. The example of high license at Dracut, Mass., shows the utter absurdity of such a remedy for the evils of intemperance. The "Original Package Decision" has forced the American people to regard the liquor traffic as a National, rather than a State issue, and by showing the utter impotence of any system of regulation to shut out the sale of liquor has compelled all classes of temperance men, without regard to previous convictions, to unite in demanding National legislation. The passage of the Wilson bill in the Senate by the decisive vote of 34 to 10 shows how wide-spread and earnest is this demand. It may or may not pass the House. If it does not it will be a heavy blow to the Republican party. If it does, it will be an immense gain to the cause of prohibition.

Berea, Ky.

One million dollars worth of gold was dug from the earth in the four continents during the year 1889. And yet this vast sum would not pay the rum bill of this nation for six weeks! Is ours a race of madmen? Can it be that the people, the great, privileged people, who rule the United States, will never come to their senses and put a stop to this waste and ruin? So long as it lies in their power to do so, God, at whose judgment bar every soul must one day appear, holds them responsible for the result of their great sin.

THE COVENANTER TESTIMONY.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON SECRET SOCIETIES.

Most of the secret orders are well known by their own published works, and by those who have renounced them, exposing their secrets. They unite Christians and wicked men in unholy rites. Oaths and penalties, like whips of scorpions, compel conformity. Family ties are weakened by the husband and father concealing from his wife and children a large part of his nights and days, his money, effort and influence given to the lodge. The church is paralyzed by secret combinations among her members, by the alienation of many who prefer lodge associations to church ordinances, or by the silencing of ministers in respect to certain Gospel truths. Also the state is antagonized by a secret empire which arrogates civil authority, neutralizes loyalty, perverts justice, and so menaces the peace and stability of society.

Some orders claim to be religious institutions, to provide an ideal and universal worship of God, and to assure dying members of their entrance into the Grand Lodge of the great Architect of the Universe. This claim exalts them above voluntary human associations as divinely approved, and equal, if not superior, to the church of Christ. But secrecy is their essential character; and this is condemned by the Bible, and is wholly opposite to the Christian religion.

When Simeon and Levi avenged their sister's wrongs by a secret conspiracy against her betrayer, dying Jacob denounced their secrecy and uttered this inspiring rebuke: "O my soul, come not thou into their secret; unto their assembly, mine honor, be not thou united." The Prophet Ezekiel, 8: 5-18, describes the idolatrous rites brought into Israel; and secrecy is its chief feature. He digs through a wall, opens a secret door, and finds "the wicked abominations that they do in the dark, every man in the chambers of his imagery; for they say, The Lord seeth us not;" and he denounces against them the Lord's fury, who sees them and says, "Mine eye shall not spare, neither will I have pity."

Christ's testimony is explicit against secrecy as hostile to true religion. He gives his own example, John 18: 20: "I spake openly to the world; I ever taught in the synagogue and in the temple, whither the Jews always resort; and in secret have I said nothing." He defines religion, John 8: 12: "I am the light of the world; he that follows me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." He commands his disciples, Matt. 10: 27: "What I tell you in darkness, that speak ye in light; and what ye hear in the ear, that preach ye upon the housetops." He warns hypocrites of the exposure of their secrets, Luke 12: 2: "For there is nothing covered that shall not be revealed; neither hid that shall not be known." He denounces the falsehood, Matt. 24: 26, that says, "Behold, he is in the secret chambers," and bids us, "Believe it not." He exposes the motives of secrecy, John 3: 19-21: "Men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil; for every one that doeth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light, lest his deeds should be reproved; but he that doeth truth cometh to the light, that his deeds may be made manifest that they are wrought in God."

The apostles condemn secret systems. Paul describes the principle and practice of secrecy as heathen, and says, Rom. 13: 12: "Let us therefore cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armor of light; let us walk honestly as in the day." He warns the Corinthians not to join in the secret rites there practiced, 1 Cor. 4: 5, for the Lord "will bring to light the hidden things of darkness." Also, 2 Cor. 6: 14-17, he rebukes the secrecy and boasted charity that harmonizes all religions: "What communion hath light with darkness? and what concord hath Christ with Belial? or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel? Wherefore, come out from among them and be ye separate, saith the Lord." John testifies, 1 John 1: 6, 7: "If we say that we have fellowship with him, and walk in darkness, we lie and do not the truth; but if we walk in the light as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ, his Son, cleanseth us from all sin."

But it is objected that secrecy is often necessary and approved of God and good men. There is such a privacy. Every heart has that with which no stranger meddles. In every home there is much that is private, and into which others may not pry. Nations have secret leagues; armies have sentinels, signs and grips, and may punish with death the betrayal of their resources and plans of campaign. Why, then, oppose secret orders? Why is secrecy right in the one case, and wicked in the other? Lawful privacy differs from sinful secrecy.

1. Lawful privacy is in matters that concern only ourselves; the inner life belongs only to self and God. To know it all does not benefit wife or child; to be ignorant of it may save them much useless sorrow. Only as we need and can be helped by others is it wrong to hide heart secrets. So far as secret orders conceal only private affairs, and reveal the truth as it affects other men, families, churches and the state, they are not immoral, disloyal or unchristian.

2. Lawful privacy is where safety and life make it necessary. We conceal private matters to guard against wrong and injury. Church courts conceal what might wrong the innocent, or scandals that decency and justice require to be secret. State secrets are in time of war or diplomatic conflicts. Any lawful society may act with utmost secrecy if it is needed to protect from injustice or violence.

3. Lawful privacy is a matter of choice with those who keep the secret; it leaves full liberty of action and freedom, conscientiously to determine what is right and will best promote public and private interests. Secret orders give no such privilege; but each initiate, on the judgment of others, swears not to reveal but ever conceal what he does not know, and what may be duty to declare. He makes himself a slave to do or not to do what conscience, public welfare, and God's Word may demand otherwise; freedom is gone, but responsibility remains. No oath-bound secretist is free to obey God, or church or state; he must obey the behest of an irresponsible society, or, as it may be, a band of infamous conspirators.

4. The breach of privacy is only punishable by authorized officials, with just penalties, after crime is proved in a fair trial. The telling of secrets is only criminal, as it slanders, brings scandal on religion, or aids and comforts the country's foes. But if, under oath in church or state, a witness reveals the crime or immorality of a fellow-secretist, he may be punished even with death, by a self-constituted court, without public trial. Dr. Finney's book on Masonry gives this as part of a Master Mason's oath: "I promise and swear that a Master Mason's secrets, given to me in charge as such, and I knowing them to be such, shall remain as secure and inviolable in my breast as in his own, murder and treason excepted, and they left to my own election." The Royal Arch oath binds to concealment, "murder and treason not excepted," and to espouse the cause of a companion "so far as to extricate him from the same, if within my power, whether right or wrong."

Thus, openness and secrecy distinguish the true and false religions. Christianity invites all to see its mysteries and make them known; and in the light of day its blessings are universally offered for acceptance. Secrecy boasts of its beneficence, but guards against giving a crumb to any but the initiated. Its mysteries are magnified, but only can be seen in the dark, and under the strongest restraints, lest its fraudulent promises should be exposed. The Christian's duty is declared by the Apostle, Eph. 5: 2: "Have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them."

J. C. K. MILLIGAN,
J. M. FOSTER,
WILLIAM GRAHAM,
DAVID HENDERSON,
WILLIAM BROWN, } Com.

THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual meeting of the N. C. A. convened at 10:30 Thursday morning, June 19, and was called to order by the president, Elder J. L. Barlow, and W. B. Stoddard led in the opening prayer. The roll call by the secretary showed a fair representation of the corporate members present, but at the same time the number of absentees among members within easy reach of this city was discouragingly large, and suggested the need of special missionary efforts among the corporate members themselves.

The annual reports were then heard. The Corresponding Secretary and General Agent, J. P. Stoddard, not being present, his report was read by the secretary. The report of the treasurer and auditors was attended by much explanation of the auditors' work and some details of the treasury accounts, and it was voted to reimburse Mr. Colver, the auditor, whose report was read, for his labor, and the thanks of the Association was added. The secretary of the Directors' Board read the report of that body. The reports were all accepted, those of the treasurer and auditor approved, and the others referred to a committee to present the recommendations contained in them.

Committees were then selected.

On Nominations: Elliot Whipple, H. A. Fischer, G. R. Milton, Wm. Pinkney, J. M. Hitchcock, M. R. Britten, J. A. Richards, E. D. Bailey.

On Official Reports: C. H. Abbot, C. F. Hawley, John Gardner, M. R. Britten, J. A. Richards.

On Resolutions: Alexander Thomson, C. A. Blanchard, B. F. Worrell, W. B. Stoddard.

On Obituary: J. A. Richards, Wm. Pinkney, John Sutcliffe.

After recess business was resumed after prayer by receiving the report of the Nominating Committee. The discussion on the part of the report relating to the office of Corresponding Secretary and General Agent was prolonged, since it was understood from unofficial correspondence with Mr. Stoddard that he preferred to remain in New England for the present. Some desired that more time should be had for consultation with him; and if a change was necessary, that an able and zealous man should be secured after careful deliberation, who should take up the general management of the N. C. A. work as Secretary and Agent. Others thought, as a temporary arrangement, that the office work of Corresponding Secretary should be given Mr. Phillips, who has efficiently managed this business for some time, and that Mr. Stoddard should be continued as General Agent. Since he had been sent to New England by the Board, he should be maintained there if he preferred that field. There was, however, no division of sentiment on the question of a renewal of energy in the management of the general work. A change must be made in this direction without delay and the interest in the South and among the State Associations of the North must be revived. It was finally determined to refer the matter to the Board after electing Mr. Phillips Corresponding Secretary. The selection of auditors was also left to the Board. The remainder of the report of the Nominating Committee was thus adopted:

President—Bishop Milton Wright.

Vice-president—Rev. G. R. Milton.

Recording Secretary—Rev. E. R. Worrell.

Corresponding Secretary and Treasurer—W. I. Phillips.

Directors—T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, John Gardner, J. M. Hitchcock, Jerome Howe, G. R. Milton, Wm. Pinkney, J. P. Richards, Alexander Thomson, E. Whipple, E. R. Worrell.

Rev. Wm. Pinkney, in behalf of the committee on obituary notice reported the following paper, which was adopted without especial remark:

Your committee on obituary notices would respectfully report:

That during the past year four members of the Association have passed from their toils on earth to their rest in heaven, namely, F. W. Capwell, Mrs. M. A. Blanchard, Rev. David McFall, Rev. W. W. Stewart.

In the death of F. W. Capwell, the Association has lost an efficient leader and conscientious Christian worker, but in our sorrow we rejoice to know that our loss is his gain.

In the death of Mrs. M. A. Blanchard, there passed away a devoted wife, a noble Christian mother and an earnest worker in the church, for the Sabbath-school, the temperance cause and Sabbath reform, and all lines of charitable effort, all found in her a warm heart and kind friend. And while we mourn our great loss with bereaved loved ones, we rejoice in believing that she is in the enjoyments of the blest in heaven.

In the death of Rev. David McFall, the Association has lost a great champion, a fearless leader in all principles of reform, and an earnest Christian worker. May his mantle fall upon many in our future work.

* Rev. W. W. Stewart was a life-long supporter of the principles which, as an Association, we represent. Always ready to throw the whole weight of his manly, godly life against the powers of evil, he sweetly fell asleep in Jesus at the close of a long and useful life.

Thus the workers pass away, the ranks are thinned, but there is one to whom we may pray, "Lord, send forth more laborers into the harvest, and may their lives and self-sacrifice for God's cause stimulate us to use all our powers in carrying on the work God has given us to do, knowing that we too will soon be called to follow them to the land free from conflict and strife. May the inspiration of truth and the Holy Spirit, which moved them on to final victory, move us and thousands of others whom God shall raise up to fill our ranks, to more earnest work in the cause of reform.

The names of several friends were properly presented and elected without opposition. They were S. F. Porter, C. C. Foote, J. C. Carr and C. S. Bullock.

The report of the committee on resolutions was read by Alexander Thomson and adopted without debate and unanimously. The report reads:

WHEREAS, such organizations as the Clan-na-Gael and Freemasonry are proved to be hostile to civil government and the church of our Lord,—proved to be thus by their own writings; by the revelations of good men who have left them because of their wickedness, and by their fruits known to all thoughtful men who have examined the subject; and

WHEREAS, such minor organizations as the Good Templars, Sons of Temperance, the Grange, the Woodmen, etc., have a decided tendency to alienate the hearts of men from the Lord Jesus Christ and his church; therefore,

Resolved, 1. That it is the duty of all Christians to oppose such organizations in the Spirit of the Master.

2. It is the duty of all thoughtful citizens to oppose the elevation of lodge men into places of official power.

3. That we recognize Jesuitism as one of the most dangerous of secret societies. And since we have not the power at present to exclude them as some nations have done, therefore we should oppose their every step to power, and especially their unhallowed attack on the school of our children.

WHEREAS, the circulation of the Christian Cynosure among colored pastors and colleges in the South has been the means of enlightening many on the evils of the lodge system; and as the secret lodge, like popery, thrives where ignorance and superstition abound; therefore,

Resolved, That we recommend the solicitation of further contributions to aid the circulation of our organ among this people.

Resolved, That we approve the political work of the N. C. A. as carried on by the American Anti-secrecy League, and urge its vigorous prosecution.

Resolved, That we deprecate the introduction of the "original packages" as we deprecate the introduction of original sin, without discriminating as to the source whence they come.

WHEREAS, the World's Fair, to be held in this city in 1893, will afford a special opportunity for a general dissemination of the light given by our Association, and as the secret labor lodges, awake to the importance of this question, are already making preparations for a great union effort at the same; therefore,

Resolved, That we instruct the N. C. A. Board to take such steps as they may deem advisable to secure an International Conference of Christians to consider the secret lodge question in this city at that time.

The committee on the official reports presented the various recommendations of the General Agent and Directors in order.

1. In reference to the continued employment of special or district agents during the coming year, the services of brethren Porter, Hawley and W. B. Stoddard were voted to be continued.

2. The changes in the By-laws recommended by the Board and its committee were all adopted. They relate to the popular representation in the annual meeting, to the purging of the roll, honorary membership, election of officers, the time of holding the annual meeting, and the national convention. The By-laws, with all revisions incorporated will be printed in the Cynosure according to the vote of the Association.

3. It was voted to approve the establishing of a Book Depository in Boston so soon as the friends in New England shall raise the funds to sustain it.

4. The plan of holding four conferences in different parts of the country, namely, Boston, Chicago, the South, and the Pacific Coast, was approved.

5. The reports of all agents must be made out in full so as to show clearly the extent of their labors. If this is not done it was the vote of the meeting that the treasury should not respond to their knocks for salary.

6. It was also ordered that these monthly agents' reports should be presented to the Board for examination.

7. The Washington building not having been for two or three years so remunerative as was expected, the question of its sale was referred to the Directors.

The report of W. B. Stoddard, the Washington agent, was heard with much interest. He referred to the difficulties attending the beginning of his labor in Washington,—the new field, the death of his child, change of climate, and perplexing questions with the tenantry of the Washington building. Elder Bancroft was with him for a time, and rendered much aid. His work as lecturer had been done in New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland and Virginia. A successful State meeting was held in Houghton, N. Y., and excellent meetings have been held in Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, New York, Brooklyn, and Norfolk. A large number of subscriptions for the Cynosure were taken in these cities. His work has been largely among the testifying churches, but has extended also among others at every opportunity, and it was a matter of peculiar gratification to find, on the part of both pastors and their churches, a growing desire to have the lodge question fairly discussed. In some places the demand for lectures was great beyond the possibility of meeting it. The report includes a period of fourteen months previous to May 30, 1890. In this time he gave 149 lectures, collected at meetings, $275.09; incurred an expense of $266.49; and secured 631 subscriptions to the Cynosure. Some books were sold. The total receipts were $1,050. This report was very heartily approved by the Association. The records of the meeting were read and passed upon and after a closing prayer the Association adjourned.

[The Treasurer's report is crowded over to another week.]

REPORT OF THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

The Board met for organization at the close of your last annual meeting, June 20, 1889. Rev. Alexander Thomson was elected chairman, and E. R. Worrell, secretary. A. Thomson, J. P. Stoddard and H. L. Kellogg were constituted a committee on buildings; H. A. Fischer, Jno. Sutcliffe and E. R. Worrell, finance committee; E. Whipple, H. L. Kellogg and J. L. Barlow publication committee. These three are the usual standing committees of the Board.

Meetings have since been held on the following dates: June 29, July 29, Oct. 31, Dec. 27, 1889, and Feb. 10, Apr. 19, and June 7, 1890,—seven meetings, at one of which, that held in October, there was no quorum, five members only being present. At two other meetings, seven were present, at the other four, eight. At the meeting held in July, the resignation of Prof. H. A. Fischer was accepted, and Mr. J. M. Hitchcock elected to fill the vacancy.

The organ of your Association, the Christian Cynosure, has been, during the past year, under the same management as for several previous years,—Rev. J. Blanchard, editor in chief; H. L. Kellogg, associate editor; and W. I. Phillips, publisher. We note but one item of unusual expense in connection with the publication of the paper, viz., new type at an expense not to exceed $250, ordered by the Board at their June (1889) meeting. We believe that the paper has maintained a high standard of excellence as a Christian reform journal. For courage, purity and truth it is equal to any with which we are acquainted and is of literary merit as well. Were it not for its peculiar duty of antagonism to all secret orders and its faithfulness in that duty it might attain self-support through an increasing subscription list. But now it needs and should have the steady support of all its friends that its influence may be extended. That your Board believe in its efficiency as an instrument for spreading intelligence and a fit representative of our reform everywhere is evidenced by the action taken in July of devoting a page of the paper to matter relating to the Boston Conference, and ordering one thousand copies to be sent to New England ministers. Also the vote in October by which eight hundred copies were ordered sent to the colored ministers of the South. Every moral leader should have the Cynosure, whether he be white or black, educated or uneducated. In this connection it would be proper to mention that your Board at its last meeting (June 7, inst.) voted to recommend to this body the carrying out of the recommendation of the latter Conference held in Chicago concerning a special edition of the Christian Cynosure.

Other publications have been put forth as events transpired which by their character seemed to lend emphasis to the truth of our testimonies against secretism, such as 40,000 tracts showing the origin and character of the Clan-na-Gael society. These were distributed in Chicago and vicinity about the time of the famous Cronin trial. Another such incident was the accidental killing of a minister in West Virginia, while he was being initiated into the Royal Arch degree of Freemasonry. Twenty thousand tracts relating to this have been issued, i. e., two editions of ten thousand each. The Board also voted fifty dollars to aid students in securing a bureau of information among themselves upon the secret lodge question.

Several agents associated with our General Agent, Rev. J. P. Stoddard, have been doing field-work for the N. C. A. throughout the year under the direction of the Board. The work of agents with whom this body has long been acquainted need receive no comment in this report. Mr. Enos Shaw, who was new to the work, has shown faithfulness and zeal throughout the year. In a friendly letter to the Board he has indicated his intention not longer to engage in N. C. A. work. Rev. S. F. Porter, who has represented the interests of this Association among educational institutions during the year, was present at the meeting of the Board held the 7th inst., and made report of fourteen anti-secret libraries placed in Illinois and Iowa colleges, besides several in schools at the South. Mr. Porter has issued two tracts to aid in his work. It is proper to add that Mr. Porter does this work at his own charges. The Board recommends him to the Association for employment for the coming year in our work upon such terms as may be agreeable to him. Rev. C. F. Hawley is also recommended as your representative for the coming year.

At the Board meeting held Feb. 10, the Finance Committee were directed in addition to their usual duties to make special examination of agents' monthly reports as to their fullness and accuracy. At the last meeting it was voted that in view of the statement of the Finance Committee to the Board that the monthly reports of field agents are not usually made in satisfactory form, that we recommend to the Association that they require their Board of Directors for the ensuing year to take measures to secure accurate monthly reports from field agents made out according to blank forms furnished them.

Two anti-secret conferences or conventions have been held during the year; one in Boston, the other in Chicago. That in Boston was held at an expense of $338.25, $180.54 of which was raised on the field. The deficit, $157.71, was paid out of the general fund. In view of the representation that this convention had awakened public sentiment and that ways were now open through which the N. C. A. work could be organized and put upon a good basis financially and otherwise in the New England States, your Board directed the General Agent, after doing some preliminary work for the Chicago Conference, to return to the East about the middle of January and labor at his discretion until the annual meeting. The Board has not now definite information upon which to base recommendations concerning the work of this Association in New England.

The second meeting was held in Chicago in April last at an expense of about $475, all of which was raised in Illinois and adjoining States for the purpose, and a small balance remaining, to which was added out of the general fund enough to send a report of the convention to those who contributed to its expenses. The success of this convention is largely due to the tireless labor and executive ability displayed by our treasurer, W. I. Phillips.

Little that could properly be called political work has been done the past year, though at the first meeting of the Board a committee was appointed to make and circulate a petition to Congress. This committee has reported that 10,000 copies were sent out for signatures and that 2,653 names have been subscribed, and recommend that this petition be taken to Washington and placed in the hands of some Congressman who will present the same either in the Senate or the House.

What is known as the Foreign Fund, i. e., money given by friends for N. C. A. work on mission fields, now contains $101.64. Your Board has requested H. L. Kellogg to open correspondence with missionaries with a view to purchasing with this money N. C. A. literature and forwarding it to foreign fields for distribution according to the terms of subscription to that fund.

The report of the committee on buildings owned by the Association shows: for the Carpenter building, total receipts $1,593.09; expense $564.87; net receipts $1,028.22. It should be stated, however, that more than ordinary expense has been incurred, $235.45, in reflooring and a thorough repair of the basement, otherwise the net receipt would be about $1,225. As it stands, however, it represents an income of 5 per cent, estimating the value of this building at $20,000. The above net income of $1,028.22 includes an estimate of $300, the rental value of the second floor of this building to the N. C. A.

The report of the committee on the Washington building shows a gross income of $631.97; expenses for taxes, repairs, etc., $586.69; net income, $45.28. To this net income should be added $120, estimated value of the rooms of the building occupied by Mr. W. B. Stoddard, agent of the Association, and counted as a part of his salary. This would make the net income of the building $165.28. The report states that no extraordinary expense has been incurred. Valuing the Washington building at $8,000, the income this year has been 2 per cent. In view of this report your Board has directed the treasurer, Mr. Phillips, to secure from the real estate agent who has been managing the building a statement of its present and prospective market value.

According to the recommendation of S. A. Kean, auditor, the property of the Association formerly held by J. P. Stoddard, trustee, has been transferred so that it is now held directly by the Association.

We append herewith the report made to the Board by the committee having in charge the revision of your By-laws, and suggest that all the By-laws as revised up to date be incorporated into the minutes of this meeting. [The N. C. A. By-laws will be published next week.—Ed.]

Approved in session of the Board, June 19, 1890.

ALEXANDER THOMSON, Pres.

EDWIN R. WORRELL, Sec.

REPORT OF THE CORRESPONDING SECRETARY AND GENERAL AGENT.

BOSTON, Mass., June 14, 1890.

Dear Brethren of the National Christian Association, in Annual Session at National Headquarters in Chicago, June 19, 1890:

My own judgment, and that of your retiring Board of Directors, is that it is neither necessary or expedient for me to attend your present anniversary gathering. The time and money required to make the journey, it is thought, can be more profitably employed in furtherance of the objects you seek to promote. As full records of the year's work are at your command in the general office, and each department will be reported in detail by your retiring Board and the several employees under your appointment, it is only necessary for me to refer briefly to the more prominent events of the year, and offer suggestions for your consideration in outlining the work of the coming year.

I have attended and distributed literature and found friends to our cause at many meetings of eminent Christian workers with encouraging results. Among the more noted of these gatherings I will mention the National Congregational Council at Worcester, Mass.; the Baptist State Association at Putnam, Conn.; the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions in New York; Convention of Christian Workers in Buffalo; the A. M. A. and National W. C. T. U. in Chicago; the World's Evangelical Alliance in Boston; two meetings of the N. E. Evangelical Alliance, Crescent Beach; the N. E. Evangelical Association, of Boston; a meeting of the Evangelical Church Union in Providence; the N. E. Holiness Convention in Putnam, Conn., and numerous conferences, ministerial gatherings and missions of local importance.

Of the two prominent meetings held during the year in the direct line of our work, you are already informed. The Conference held in Chicago April 22 and 23 was a decided advance upon that held in Boston, Dec. 11 and 12, and both were eminently successful. My opportunities for noting results of the Boston Congress have been more favorable than that of the later gathering in Chicago, and I say, without any hesitation, those results fully justify the effort. The eminent men who gave countenance publicly to these meetings have strengthened public confidence in our work, while the able presentation of the principles of the N. C. A., and thorough analysis of the lodge system, has awakened inquiry and opened a wide door for discussion. This is shown by the increasing frequency of calls for tracts, books and information on the subject at your New England office, and orders by mail. While new allies have been drawn to our cause, old friends have been encouraged to redouble their efforts, and give a forward impulse to the cause in New England.

The New England Christian Association is ably officered by Bro. Conant, its president, and sister Flagg, its secretary, and their associates; and while there are friendly differences as to methods of work and topics included in the special object of the organization, there is entire unanimity in the body, so far as I know, regarding its relation to the N. C. A. Its willingness to co-operate with and contribute to the general movement is apparent, and when the work is fairly inaugurated upon a catholic co-operative basis, no section of this broad land will furnish more hearty co-operation or liberal support than New England. An encouraging feature of our work is seen in the increased number of women who have become actively enlisted, and the willingness with which they distribute anti-secret literature in W. C. T. U. conventions. Many of these have been reached through the Home Guard, and from it have received their first knowledge of our movement. Among the numerous letters received by the publisher there have been many of thanks and warm commendation, and but one of a censorious character. Three thousand, five hundred of the last number, containing extracts from speeches at the Chicago Convention, were mailed, and over 450 went to the wives of clergymen in Massachusetts. Necessary funds for this work have been furnished, and the work done without expense to the N. C. A. or New England Association, and I believe with great benefit to the cause. I wish the July number of the Home Guard might present a full-page advertisement of the Cynosure, which the publisher would gladly insert if desired and furnished with the electrotype plate. Since the Home Guard goes to prominent W. C. T. U. workers in every State and Territory in the Union, it would doubtless reach many homes where the "Polar Star" is needed, and somewhere it would find a weekly welcome. All funds received by me, or expended in the work during the year, have been

(Continued on 13th page.)

CORRESPONDENCE.

MASONS FEED ON THIS TRASH.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 27, 1890.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Desiring all the light I could get in regard to Masonry, I subscribed for the Masonic Review, a monthly magazine published by Henry D. Moore, a 32-degree Mason, living in Cincinnati, Ohio.

I have read this magazine, as time would permit, for over two years. Had I only received light from its pages on this subject, I should be about as much in darkness as to the teachings of Masonry as when I commenced its perusal. It contains more contradictions than any magazine of which I have knowledge. Some buncombe orator will state certain things in regard to the order on one page which another orator of the same style will deny on the next, and so leave the honest inquirer in total darkness as to the facts.

The May number lies before me. For the benefit of any who like myself desire light, I will review what I have just read.

The first article by "Bro. Jacob Norton," Boston, Mass., professes to give two letters from Dr. Manningham, D. G. M. of England, by which he attempts to prove that there were no Knights of the Sword, Eagle, Malta, etc., connected with Freemasonry in England. After giving what seems to him proof of this fact, he concludes: "But, strange to say, we have amongst us pure minded Christian Masonic luminaries who will swear up and down that Masonic Templarism and other moonshine Masonic degrees have existed in Scotland since the days of Robert Bruce, or even before the days of Bruce!" (Page 198.)

On page 203, under the heading "A Woman's Conception of Freemasonry, by a Mason's Wife," I find the following: "Of course it is not to be wondered at that Solomon decreed that women should be kept out of the institution; one can readily understand the reason for such a rigid law. If one of his wives had been taken up the storied isles and mystic gloom of the ceremonies, why of course all of them would have clamored for the same right, and the lodge would be a little inconvenienced to have one member bring in three or four hundred wives as candidates; certainly the goat would kick against any such tax upon his strength," etc., etc.

On page 205, under the heading "The Spirit of Masonry," taken from the Sunday Times, the following appears: "The spirit of the law, the unwritten text, the esoteric principle, is what constitutes the true creed, and by this alone can one enter into the inner sanctuary, the spiritual sanctum sanctorum, outside of which no true Masonry can exist."

Again, Grand Master Ingersoll writes (page 214), "Freemasonry is not religion, and yet it inculcates religious thought, sentiment and duty; still less is it theology, though it has a creed. It is not a political organization, though bigoted tyranny has often sought to destroy it, and politicians throng its lodges for favor and influence," etc., etc.

On the next page "Rev. Bro. S. C. Busser" delivers himself as follows: "When Masonry was born the number of persons who believed in God as the self-existent cause of all things was comparatively very small. And even among them atheism and materialism were casting their baleful shadows. At that time the Bible, which is to-day one of the great lights of Masonry, existed only in the traditions of a roving people, or in the hieroglyphics of an obscure literature. It was therefore necessary to stereotype the existence of God and crystalize the truths of the Bible in some form that would not be affected by the changes of history. Masonry, therefore, sprang from the demand of the race for the presence of God in human affairs and a revelation of God to human hearts."

Thus might I continue to quote the twaddle of this Masonic Review. The whole thing is but a combination of goat stories, vain imaginings about religion, science and various things. Founded on a lie, it continues in the business. To read such stuff and consider how many that call themselves wise believe it, makes the heart sick and the head faint.

It seems the law regarding the getting of a lodge demit is different in different States. In some, the applicant can get a demit by paying up his dues and applying for the same without a vote of the lodge. In other jurisdictions a vote of the lodge is required to grant a demit. A lodge brother who seems to be alarmed at the number who are leaving the order by taking demits, argues in favor of a universal law requiring the one taking a demit to get it only by a vote of his lodge. He says, "The lodge voted him in, but he votes himself out. The lodge agreed to stand by him for all time when he became a member, but he agreed to stand by the lodge for no definite time." (Page 234.) If this Mason's view of the lodge is correct there is certainly an inconsistency.

May God deliver those who are following cunningly devised fables to their soul's damnation.

W. B. STODDARD.

DR. MILLIGAN IN THE SYNOD.

A CORRECTION.

NEW YORK, June 14, 1890.

Editor Christian Cynosure,

DEAR BROTHER:—In your issue of June 12 you represent my report on secret societies, made to the Reformed Presbyterian Synod, as failing "to meet the expectation of brethren." I send you a copy of the report that your readers may judge of it for themselves. It was unanimously adopted by Synod without the change of a single word, though subsequently some practical resolutions, reported by Rev. J. S. T. Milligan, were also adopted.

Our Synod provides for a report on secret societies at each annual meeting, and limits such reports to 1,200 words. Each committee chooses its own line of testimony; and I examined former reports so as to avoid useless repetition and to discuss needful points. Finding that the fundamental principle of secrecy had not been formally treated, I took it up. Having written more than double the prescribed number of words, I was compelled to "boil down" the report and to omit the practical suggestions and resolutions which I had intended to offer. This accounts for what is not in my report.

It is true, as your note indicates, that Dr. George was not satisfied with my report; he broadly hinted that it was a weakening of the church's attitude, and said that "secrecy was not the evil." This, and other insinuations against me, grew out of the fact that I have advocated union with the Psalm-singing churches. It is easier to throw dirt than to answer argument, and as such union is unpopular with some Covenanters, it was both insinuated and openly charged that my views would lead to the receiving of secretists into communion, though all these churches testify as we do against secrecy. I have only to say that our church's testimony had no word condemning secret orders, until on my motion such condemnation was inserted; and to that declaration, and to the highest ground ever taken by our church in this matter, I most heartily agree.

There are three views of church union prevailing in our church. First, a conservative party consistently opposes all union except that which comes by other Christians uniting with our church by acceptance of her full doctrinal and practical position. Second, a broad party insists on the maintenance of our distinct and separate denomination till in a general council Christians meet to settle the church's faith and practice; but they are willing then to meet with them and abide by their decision, even though this should sanction fellowship with secretists. Third, a liberal party takes the position of our testimony, that "terms of communion should embrace nothing but what is divine truth, and reject nothing for which the church hath faithfully contended." On this Scriptural basis they now desire union with evangelical Christians who will maintain a testimony for the Psalms and against secret orders, and labor for the reformation of our Government. Dr. George is in the second party and I am in the third. I cannot conscientiously use the hymns in worship nor fellowship the anti-Christian lodge, even to secure Christian union. Denominations that agree on the truths of God's Word ought to unite, even though they differ in some human opinions; but if we reject, or hold in abeyance, any truth of Christ for which the church has contended, we build on the shifting sands of human expediency and are traitors to Christ. "The Scriptures are the only rule of faith and manners." Your brother in Christ,

J. C. K. MILLIGAN.

NON-PARTISAN IN CHURCHES.

BLANCHARD, Iowa, June 13, 1890.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—A rush of correspondence in reference to a Nebraska campaign has prevented me replying sooner to Bro. J. S. T. Milligan's friendly letter about Church Union. No one, I think, would question his opposition to the non-partisan heresy, or his zeal for National Reform. But I must say, the principles Bro. Milligan advocates in reference to Church union are to my mind the same as non-partisanism in politics advocated by Albert Griffin and J. Ellen Foster. They say we must not make prohibition a term of political communion, but stay in your party and work for prohibition as best you can. So Bro. Milligan claims that the churches should unite organically, which would require a compromise of some of the great distinctive principles which now distinguishes them. His idea of church unity, expressed in a letter to me a few years ago, is in his own words as follows:

"The true idea of church unity is: 1. That the church is catholic, or universal. 2. That every true child of God is a member. 3. That the order is Presbyterian and majorities rule, so far as interpretation of law and election of representatives go. 4. That an Ecumenical Council is the last court of interpretation and appeal. 5. That agreement and unity must obtain as to essentials. 6. That liberty under dissent must be allowed in non-essentials. 7. Nothing, therefore, should divide but essentials, which are, 1, the being and authority of a triune God. 2. The deity and authority of the Mediator. 3. The authenticity and authority of the Bible. This would unite all the churches organically. The Psalm-singing ones especially should come together on this basis at once."

Now, if we come together on this platform, we simply go over into the large Presbyterian church, for this is nothing more nor less than their platform. They receive into church fellowship Freemasons, and the whole brood of secret societies. To be sure they receive anti-secretists, and would be glad to receive Bro. Milligan and give him all the liberty of dissent he pleased, just as Republicans would be glad to take in Prohibitionists and let them dissent to their hearts' content, provided they only stick to the party.

I hold as an essential, not only the "Deity and authority of the Mediator," but the Supreme authority of the Mediator; and as Elijah disfellowshipped the worshipers of Baal, so I disfellowship those who swear supreme allegiance to any covenant or constitution that disowns this only Supreme. I long and pray for the unity of the churches, but do not want it at the sacrifice of the great central doctrine of Christ's mediatorial dominion. I have watched this non-partisan movement in the Covenanter church, and find it is instigated by the same compromising spirit that has recently divided the United Brethren church, resulting in the majority of them going back on their testimony against Christ-rejecting lodges. The same spirit is at work in the United Presbyterian church, and if it is not soon checked will produce the same result.

I have observed that with few exceptions the leaders in this agitation for compromise are in sympathy with the J. Ellen Foster non-partisanism in politics, and denounce the Prohibition party. The editor of the Banner, who has written the most in the interests of this compromise movement, says, "I never believed in the Prohibition party, but have called it a delusion and a snare;" and he might have added, "I have bitterly denounced John P. St. John." It is as easy to class such a reformer as it would have been forty years ago to have classed a reformer who would have denounced the old Liberty party and Wendell Phillips.

A young Covenanter minister who had left the church and turned his back on the testimony which he had solemnly sworn to maintain, wrote much in favor of this compromising union, and also argued for non-partisanism in politics; and to our amusement the editor of the Psalm Singer struck up the same tune, which was almost enough to rattle even the bones of the Sweet Singer of Israel in his tomb. But next week we will have more to say along this same line.

M. A. GAULT.

IN BRIEF.

The substitution of electricity for horses on the street car lines of St. Louis saves about 40 per cent of the operating expenses.

The industrial people of America are generally good liver, being so much better paid than foreigners of the same classes. And so it happens that 65,000,000 Americans consume more than double their number in Europe. The home market is the best always.

An electric fire engine is reported as a recent invention. It is claimed that this engine can be started at full speed whenever wanted, is noiseless, makes no smoke nor ashes, is lighter than a steam engine of equal power, costs one-third less, is safer and more economical.

The United States now produces 30 per cent of all the iron, and 32 per cent of all the steel manufactured, and the world's production of iron has increased 76 per cent, and of steel 248 per cent within twelve years. All this progress has been made in this country under the protective policy, while consumers have enjoyed the benefit of decreasing prices.

It was at Columbus that a Cincinnati drummer happened to put up at a table with a number of legislators, and the courtly way in which they addressed each other greatly bored the commercial traveler. It was "Will the gentleman from Hardin do this?" and "The gentleman from Franklin did that." They invariably spoke to each other as the gentleman from whatever county they happened to hail from. For ten or fifteen minutes the drummer bore it in silence. Then he suddenly crushed the statesmen by singing out in stentorian tones to the waiter, "Will the gentleman from Ethiopia please pass the butter?" That ended "the gentleman from" business.

When the late Civil War closed, twenty-five years ago, there had been called to arms by the government during the four years, 1861-5, no less than 2,759,049 men, and 2,666,999 had responded to the call for different periods of service. Of these 186,097 were colored men. The number of lives sacrificed in the Union army was about 300,000, of whom 100,000 died in action or from wounds, and 200,000 died from disease or accident. In Arlington alone 22,000 bodies, gathered from the battle-fields of Virginia and the surrounding country, are interred. One massive granite tombstone marks the graves of 2,111 soldiers, whose bodies, from the fields of Bull Run and the route of the Rappahannock, could not be identified. Their names and their deeds are recorded in the archives of their country.

The new lighthouse at Hostholm is the most powerful in the world. The beam is 2,000,000 candle power, and shows clearly at Blokhus, a distance of thirty-five miles. It is produced by arc lamps, fed by De Meriten's dynamos, driven by steam engines. To prevent the extinction of the light through an accident to the machinery the latter is duplicated, one set coming into play should the other fail. The light is further supplemented in thick weather by two powerful sirens, or fog trumpets, working with compressed air. The fascination which a powerful light exercises on wild birds is curiously illustrated by this lighthouse. It is said that basketfuls of dead snipes, larks, starlings and so forth are picked up in the mornings outside the tower. They kill themselves in dashing against the windows of the lantern.—Montreal Star.

Science is constantly bringing forth from the region of the unknown new substances of benefit to the human race. Among recent discoveries in medical science are some new and powerful antiseptics. Eucalyptia Globulus is said to possess a very high germ-killing power, and at the same time has a refreshing, pleasant odor. It takes but a small quantity to purify the atmosphere of a room. It also possesses valuable properties as a preventive of malarial fever. Pinol is a volatile oil distilled from the needles of the Pinus pumilio, found just below the line of perpetual snow on the Alps. It possesses the most powerful ozonizing properties of any of the turpentine oils, and the odor is very pleasant. Salol is by many surgeons in Europe considered exceedingly valuable in the treatment of old burns and ulcers, but its greatest triumphs have been in the treatment of acute rheumatism, excelling all other remedies in its power to abate pain and lessen fever. A dentifrice is also made from salol, which is said to stop and prevent caries in teeth, and impart a delightful odor to the breath. Bartholow has great control over pain, especially in rheumatic and neuralgic cases. With these new disease germ and pain destroyers at hand, the medical men of to-day should find their work of lessening the sum of human sufferings materially aided.

How well we remember grandmother's attic, so fragrant with medicinal roots and herbs! Poor old soul, how precious they seemed to her! And yet, one bottle of Ayer's Sarsaparilla would do more good than her whole collection of "yarbs."

CONSUMPTION SURELY CURED.

TO THE EDITOR:—Please inform your readers that I have a positive remedy for above named disease. By its timely use thousands of hopeless cases have been permanently cured. I shall be glad to send two bottles of my remedy FREE to any of your readers who have consumption, if they will send me their Express and P. O. address. Respectfully, T. A. SLOCUM, M.D., 181 Pearl St., New York.

FLOWER SEEDS.

To any one sending 15 cents in stamps or silver, I will send five different kinds of Flower Seeds of choice varieties. Send stamped and addressed envelope.

VICTORIA A. BUCK.

East Randolph, N. Y.

CONCERNING PREMIUMS

We offer premiums to compensate such of our subscribers as take the pains and trouble to secure new subscribers to the Cynosure. Many who do this refuse to receive pay, and work because they love the work; others are glad to receive premiums. But,

First, We do not offer any man a premium to renew his own subscription. If a man has taken this paper a year and does not care enough about it to take it longer without being hired to, we do not offer him a premium.

Second, We do not offer a premium to a new subscriber to hire him to take the paper. When he has subscribed for the paper and paid for it himself, and knows its worth, then if he will take the trouble to introduce the paper to others, he can have a premium on the new subscription, but not on his own.

Third, We do not offer a premium where one member of a family stops the paper, and another member of the same family subscribes for it. We do not consider such a name the name of a new subscriber.

Any book we publish or sell can be had as a premium at reasonable rates. We will allow thirty cents' worth of any of our publications, at retail rates, post-paid, for one dollar's worth of new subscriptions to the Cynosure.

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 20 cents per pound:

1. Historical Sketch—National Christian Association.
3. Address to American Pastors.
4. Freemasonry in the Family.
5. President C. G. Finney on the duty of Christians towards the Lodge.

7. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
8. Modern Heathenism.
9. Ministers at Rival Altars.
12. Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodge.
15. Secrecy and Sin.
16. Selling Dead Horses.
17. History of Masonry.
18. Despotism Character of Freemasonry.
19. Freemasonry, a Christ-excluding Religion.
22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.
28. Nathaniel Colver, D.D., on Masonry.
33. Hon. Wm. H. Seward on Secret Societies.
37. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).
39. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?
44. D. L. Moody on Secret Societies.
45. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?
49. John Quincy Adams on the duty of American Voters.

Chapters in American Politics. Masonry vs. Prohibition. Decline of the G. A. R. Christianity and Odd-fellowship. Part 1, 4 pages; part 2, 4 pages. The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—20 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

GENERAL AGENT AND LECTURER, J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

WASHINGTON DEPARTMENT, No. 215 4½ St., N. W.: FIELD AGENT, W. B. Stoddard.

NEW ENGLAND AGENT, Miss E. E. Flagg, Wellesley, Mass.

COLLEGE AGENT, Rev. S. F. Porter, Cynosure office.

SPECIAL AGENT, Eros W. Shaw, Cynosure office, Chicago.

STATE AGENTS.

Illinois, Rev. C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, DuPage Co., Illinois.

Minnesota, E. Hanson, Minneapolis.

New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimball, New Market.

Ohio, Rev. H. H. Hinman, Oberlin.

Pennsylvania, Rev. J. T. Michael, 2942 Westmont Street, Philadelphia.

Alabama, Rev. G. M. Elliott, Selma.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.

Nathan Callender, Montdale, Pa.

J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa.

T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.

E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.

H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.

J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.

A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.

J. E. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.

W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.

J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.

Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.

J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.

Rev. E. Mathews, Long Island City, N. Y.

E. Barnetson, Haskinville, N. Y.

Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.

D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.

A. W. Parry, Annawan, Ill.

THE N. C. A. FUNDS.

The General Fund is that from which the running expenses of the Association are paid. From it the agents on the field are supported.

The Foreign Fund is that from which the foreign demand for literature against the lodge is supplied to missionaries.

The Free Tract Fund clearly states by its name the object for which contributions are solicited. Millions of pages have been distributed by means of this fund.

The Cynosure Ministers' Fund. The donations to this fund have enabled the Association to send many copies of the Cynosure to the ministers of the South, especially to pastors of colored churches. The result has been a blessing to them and their churches.

Contributions to any or all these funds are urgently solicited.

FORM OF BEQUEST.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of — dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be sufficient discharge.

THE N. C. A. BUILDING
(The gift of Philo Carpenter.)

The Christian Cynosure,

221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

The National Christian Association

PRESIDENT—Eld. J. L. Barlow, Bloomington, Wis.

VICE PRESIDENT—Rev. M. A. Gault, Blanchard, Iowa.

COR. SEC'Y and GENERAL AGENT, J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SEC'Y and TREASURER—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

DIRECTORS—J. L. Barlow, C. A. Blanchard, A. J. Chittenden, H. A. Fischer, John Gardner, G. R. Milton, J. P. Richards, John Sutcliffe, Alexander Thomson, E. Whipple, E. R. Worrell.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

PRESIDENT—Rev. Henry T. Cheever, Worcester, Mass.

SECRETARY—Henry L. Kellogg, Chicago, Ill.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS.

NEW ENGLAND.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic, Conn.; Sec'y and Agent, Miss E. E. Flagg, Wellesley, Mass.; Treas., Z. Graves, Harris, Mass.

ALABAMA.—Pres., Prof. Pickens; Sec., G. M. Elliott; Treas., Rev. C. B. Curtis; all of Selma.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., Rev. G. R. Milton, Elgin; Sec., A. H. Hiatt, Wheaton; Treas., Ezra A. Cook, Chicago.

INDIANA.—Pres., William H. Figg, Reno; Sec., S. L. Cook, Albion; Treas., Benjamin Ulsh, Silver Lake.

IOWA.—Pres., Wm. Johnston, College Springs; Cor. Sec., C. D. Trumbull, Morning Sun; Rec. Sec., W. L. Enlow, Birmingham; Treas., Wm. Crawford, Washington.

KANSAS.—Pres., J. S. T. Milligan, Denison; Sec., S. Hart, LeCompton; Treas., J. A. Torrence, Denison.

MAINE.—Pres., Isaac Jackson, Harrison; Sec., L. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W. Goddard, West Sidney.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Treas., David Manning, Sr., both Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., S. B. Sjoblom,ergus Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul; Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., B. F. Miller, Eagleville; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec., A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

NEBRASKA.—Pres., S. Austin, Fairmount; Cor. Sec., W. Spooner, Kearney; Treas., J. C. Fye.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., A. A. Hoyt, Littleton; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., Isaac Hyatt, Gifford Village.

NEW YORK.—Pres., Prof. A. R. Dodd Houghton; Sec., Rev. W. A. Hazlett, Belmont; Treas., P. D. Miller, Newfane.

OHIO.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Parry; Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Seneca; Cor. Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Seneca.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., Nathan Callender, Montdale; Cor. Sec., E. J. Chalfant, York; Treas., J. C. Young, Custer City.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. W. Wood, Baraboo; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie; Treas., M. R. Britten, Vienna.

The Christian Cynosure.

J. BLANCHARD, EDITOR.

HENRY L. KELLOGG, ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JUNE 26, 1890.

STATE AND PROSPECTS OF OUR REFORM.

In 1717, four lodges of working Masons met at the Apple-tree tavern in Covent Garden, London; voted themselves a "Grand Lodge"; voted to drop stone and brick masonry; to charter and rule all the lodges in the world, and form a religious order, without Christ, to fit men (in the words of their standards) for the "house not made with hands," i. e., heaven. Thus, in the words of Edward Beecher's report, adopted by the Illinois Congregational Association, "By it Christ was dethroned and Satan exalted." (See Minutes State Ass'n. 1866.)

This false religion spread into twenty-five countries in thirty-seven years. Its first lodge was planted in the United States in 1733, and was universally detested by the Gospel ministers of that day. Dr. Storrs of Braintree, Mass., father of Richard S. Storrs, said to the writer, when asked the opinion of the early ministers of New England concerning Masonry, that it was held in abhorrence by them: "My grandfather Williston used to say, 'A Freemason is hand-in-hand with the devil.'" In this, said Dr. Storrs, he was not singular. The Revolutionary war for seven years, in the words of Burke, "suspended all the ordinary rules of moral obligation," and Masonry flourished. In 1826, forty years after the war closed, there were two thousand lodges in the United States, three-fourths of which fell by the murder of Morgan. The slavery war followed, and in it the lodge revived.

In 1867 a thousand people, at the call of Philo Carpenter and others, met in the City Hall, Aurora, Ill., and called a national convention at Pittsburgh which formed the National Christian Association. This was in May, 1868. After twenty-two years' discussion, and under written sanction of Drs. Collins and Stephenson of Philadelphia, Drs. McCosh, Hodge and Paxton of Princeton, Drs. Gordon and Gifford of Boston, and Dr. Richard S. Storrs of Brooklyn, we have held three national conferences, the last in Chicago, Apr. 22-3, which was addressed by such men as Dr. E. P. Goodwin of Chicago, and Joseph Cook of Boston. These meetings discussed the secret lodge system, which like the brothel system, its scriptural emblem and type, has answered us by silence; and silence is confession. We have also put forth a political platform, pronounced by the Christian Statesman the best ever put before the American people, and now ably represented by the Iowa Birmingham Free Press. The political, like the religious press, has generally eschewed the discussion, while some scurvy politicians have made three attempts to steal our name of "American," and a few Masonic prints falsely certified our first candidate, Charles Francis Adams, to be a Royal Arch Mason. The rise of the Prohibition party, to which we all belonged, and our heavy labor with the churches, have pushed aside our political labors somewhat for the present, though the murder of Dr. Cronin by a Masonic lodge with an Irish name, and Judge Anderson's decision that Mormon Masonry destroys American citizenship, is slowly bringing the lodge question back into the political arena.

THE ANNUAL MEETING OF THE N. C. A.

This meeting was held June 19th inst. The meeting was well attended, and after full and harmonious discussion and election of officers the new executive Board was charged with the responsibility of arranging details and putting our machinery in motion. See the report of their meeting.

WHAT TO DO NEXT.

Opposition to secret lodges never stood on so high vantage ground as since our April Conference. Public sentiment has felt the impetus of that great meeting from the Atlantic to the Pacific. The minutes of that august assemblage are now being widely read; and the question is now carried to the churches and ministry at large. At one time there were two thousand active anti-slavery societies registered in the United States. In three years there were not three to be heard from. The Abolition question had gone into the churches and political parties; and the secret lodge question is following its example.

The thing for us now to do is, by counselling with the leading ministers now committed to the cause, to establish concerts of prayer for the overthrow of the secret lodges; to obtain access to churches which will allow contributions to be taken up; to hold further national conferences; if possible to enlist the co-operation of the Scandinavians, and have agents who will address them in their loved mother tongue; to encourage the Students' Bureau of Correspondence and obtain standing committees in colleges and theological seminaries; to have a Corresponding Secretary who will address every presbytery, conference and association which will receive him; to refuse to vote for Freemasons and Odd-fellows at local, State and federal elections, and to prepare by all possible endeavor to call the attention of the civilized world to the treasonable character of the secret orders in connection with the Columbus Fair at Chicago in 1893.

No person who believes the Revelation to be part of the sacred canon can read the 14th to the 19th chapters of that wonderful book, without perceiving that the fall and extermination of the false religions, mystic Babylon and her hateful progeny is drawing nigh.

—The N. C. A. Board held a very important meeting all day Monday, for the report of which we must wait until next number.

—Every reader of the Cynosure will welcome the cheerful face of our dear friend and co-worker, Miss E. E. Flagg, on the first page. And inasmuch as her connection with the Cynosure is of so interesting a character, we have thought that no pen could tell the story of her life so agreeably to every one as her own. We are sure that this number of the paper will be one worth preserving.

—The California Voice, the ably edited prohibition paper of the Pacific Coast, returns to Los Angeles from San Francisco. The editors, Capt. A. D. Wood and Rev. George Morris, thoroughly know the whole coast, and the decision to return to Los Angeles, where the Voice flourished for years, shows it to be their judgment that the strongest support for their reform must come from the beautiful valleys of southern California, which have been so largely settled by intelligent Christian people from New England and the Interior States.

—Husted, the well-known Freemason who has several times been speaker of the lower house in the New York State Assembly, announces that he has enough of politics and retires to private life. He publishes the fact that he is proud of his reputation as a presiding officer. The most significant fact of the brilliant reputation in which he glories, is that he uses the raps of a master in the Masonic lodge to direct the lawmakers of New York, and so many of them are slaves to the order that they obey its most insignificant commands with alacrity.

PERSONAL NOTES.

—The presence of E. D. Bailey and W. B. Stoddard from Washington City at the annual meeting was a gratifying incident. The former with Mrs. Bailey is visiting friends in this city and Wheaton. Our Washington agent expects to spend a few days in Chicago and vicinity, making himself useful in every possible way for the cause. After visiting some of the Chicago pastors he hopes to attend a large meeting of the German Lutheran pastors in Milwaukee.

—The death of Prof. I. E. Dwinell of the Congregational Theological Seminary of Oakland, Cal., is a great loss to California as well as to the churches on the Pacific Coast and the institution. He was not quite seventy years of age, a faithful and successful pastor and teacher. He was present in the Congregational ministers' meeting at the Palace Hotel, San Francisco, four years ago, when the lodge was discussed, and gave his opinion against the orders with firmness.

—Rev. Dr. J. B. Dales of Philadelphia has lately completed his fiftieth year of service as pastor of the Second United Presbyterian church of that city. His congregation suitably celebrated the interesting anniversary. From 1846 to 1878 Dr. Dales, beside his pastoral work, edited the Christian Instructor. In the latter year the Instructor removed to Chicago, but changes in its management returned the paper after a few years to its old home. As corresponding secretary of the United Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions since its establishment in 1859, Dr. Dales is well known within and without the denomination and is as highly esteemed.

COLLEGE ANNIVERSARIES.

AT WHEATON.

Following the discourses of the Sabbath by Prof. F. W. Fisk and Rev. A. N. Hitchcock, the senior class of the Preparatory School gave a very fine entertainment on Monday evening. Of the seventeen members of the class ten were selected to give public orations or essays. The excellence of their productions was highly gratifying to the large audience as well as to their instructors. For original and forcible discussion of practical and public questions, as well as eloquent and pleasing delivery their work would contrast not unfavorably with that of any other the institution has sent out.

The meeting of the Board of Trustees on Tuesday was comparatively brief. No changes were suggested in the faculty except to make more permanent engagements that were before temporary. A special meeting of the Board some time since decided on the new building and arranged for its details. The treasurer reported a good financial year. The income was about $15,000, there being a net gain to the permanent funds of some $3,000, $1,400 of last year's arrearages paid and over $1,000 aid given to students. The donations of the year amount to $7,350. The number of students reported by the catalogue was 223.

In the afternoon the Alumni Association held their annual meeting, and were cheered by the presence of some who had long been absent, or had come long distances to be present. In the evening a number of addresses were made by members of the Association, Rev. E. D. Bailey of Washington City presiding. Entertaining reminiscences of College days were given by Rev. L. N. Stratton of the first graduating class of 1860. The future of the College, its present service for the good of men and the future expectations for usefulness and honor were themes very happily dwelt upon by several speakers. Edgar Wylie of Chicago Theological Seminary spoke a welcome word to the graduating class, in which he referred eloquently to the address of Joseph Cook at the Chicago Conference as a trumpet call to all men to rally for truth and right, like to those of Samuel Adams and Charles Sumner in days past. The Association decided to raise a fund for an observatory for the College.

All nature was propitious on Commencement day. Before the class of 1890 took their places to the entrancing strains of an orchestral piece, the College Faculty and Board took their places attended by a number of friends and guests of the institution. Among these were Revs. Wm. Pinkney of Princeton, A. Ethridge of Marsailles, Wm. Morrow of Chicago, E. R. Worrell of Washington Heights, J. L. Barlow of Bloomington, Wis., E. D. Bailey of Washington City, T. C. Moffatt of Clyde, Kansas, W. L. Ferris of Cherokee, Iowa, J. W. Fifield of Cambridge, J. P. Richards and J. W. Morton of Chicago, B. F. Worrell of Glenwood, J. A. Richards of Ft. Scott, Kansas, and others. While the audience waited in expectancy the stone-cutter's ringing blows on the new wall rising outside beat cheerful time to every hope for the day and the College.

The nine members of the graduating class in the program order were Miss Beulah Cavanaugh of Wheaton, Ira D. Stone of Morrison, Carrie M. Helmer of Wheaton, W. L. Osborn of Winnebago, Alice Armstrong of Glidden, Iowa, S. L. Rathje, of Bloomington, Mabel L. Herrick of Warrenville, Lucius M. Hiatt of Wheaton and Isaac Terborgh of Chicago. Two of the gentlemen named will be remembered as among the speakers in the College contest at the Illinois State Association meeting at Elgin. Miss Cavanaugh opened with a graceful salutatory, and Mr. Terborgh touched a trembling chord in many hearts as he spoke the farewell word for the class. The productions of all were able and their delivery earnest and at times eloquent. Besides the expected applause they were rewarded with a profusion of flowers, albums, vases, huge volumes and sets of books, until it was thought that somebody was giving the young people a hint that it was time they were giving attention to books. The degrees were conferred and the happy audience broke up with hearty congratulations. The evening prolonged the pleasures of the day with a fine instrumental and vocal concert by performers from Chicago, followed by the President's levee.

AT BEREÄ.

Commencement here is the event of the year. The most ancient records of Berea do not disclose the visit of any circus or menagerie. The people are not given to political excitement. Except the stir that occasionally comes from some attempt to introduce the liquor traffic, the people seem to have a political sleep.

Not so with the closing exercises of their college. When, some twenty-five years ago, it was proposed to plant a school here for higher education where there should be no distinction of race, sex or creed, the conservatism of Kentucky was shocked. That the poor, temporary structures then erected should gradually be replaced by others, so that Berea College is not surpassed by any other in the State, was a continual surprise. And now, when they come together and see veritable Negroes, whose fathers and mothers were slaves, standing beside their white fellow students and receiving with them the diplomas that testify to their scholarship and perseverance in study, some of the wiser are more than astonished, and in thankfulness exclaim, "What hath God wrought."

An aged gentleman, a native of this county, who has been a leader in Southern thought, both religious and political, gave his testimony to-day as to the wonderful influence of Berea College and of the marked change it has effected on the minds of the people of Kentucky.

The college campus contains about forty-eight acres, mostly covered with groves of oaks and maples. The commencement exercises are held in a great tabernacle erected for the purpose. Early this morning, though the skies promised rain and kept their promise, there came all sorts of vehicles drawn by oxen and mules, carts and fine carriages. A great multitude on horseback and by the cars spread over the campus. There were about an equal proportion of white and colored. There were the wealthy and cultured from the towns and homes of the Blue Grass, and plain people from the mountains and the glades.

The great tabernacle was well filled, and in the main there was excellent attention both morning and afternoon. Each session lasted just two hours and a half. On the preceding Sabbath (15th) the Baccalaureate sermon was preached by Prof. L. V. Dodge, from Matt. 10: 34, on the conflicts of the Gospel. It was able and timely. At night the pastor, John G. Fee, preached from Mark 11: 22, on faith in God. The address before the Y. M. C. A. on Monday night, by Rev. J. T. McNair of Louisville, was sparkling with wit and replete with sound instruction. President C. L. Loos of Kentucky University, Lexington, addressed the Literary Societies on Tuesday night. The principal address of Wednesday was by Prof. Washington Gardner of Albion, Mich. Like the preceding, it was able and impressive.

There were sixteen essays and orations by students, five of which were by the graduating class. Not one of them was in any sense a failure either in matter or in delivery. All were upon themes that were eminently appropriate, and all exhibited careful thought and clear moral perceptions. The largest and blackest of all the students gave an oration on "The Need of the Southern Whites," in which he considered faithfully the race problem, and yet in a spirit so eminently Christian that no one could justly criticize it.

The concluding exercises were brief speeches by visitors, and were full of encouragements and wise suggestions. The last words were by the veteran John G. Fee, who had been frequently alluded to as the founder of Berea. He ascribed all glory to Christ. He had only tried to apply the Golden Rule to the existing state of society. Berea College is a marvel of success, and its work a beneficence to humanity. H. H. HINMAN.

Berea, June 18, 1890.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

The secretary's report of an important meeting at 309 Tremont street—Some plans formulated for future work—The week's sensation at the State House.

Yesterday, June 18, the writer found herself enjoying the hospitality of Bro. and Sister Stoddard at 309 Tremont St. Sister L. M. Hoyt, whose "good works" have made her name familiar to all readers of the Cynosure, was already there, and after a while others dropped in—enough to make a small but thoroughly representative gathering.

The meeting was opened at 2 p. m. with reading of Scripture by Bro. A. A. Hoyt, Bro. J. P. Stoddard following with an earnest prayer for God's especial blessing on the N. C. A. meeting to be held in Chicago the following day. After some preliminary discussion participated in by Bro. Wm. F. Davis, Sister M. E. Jones and others, a committee was appointed to arrange time and place for a convention to be held at the earliest convenient date. Bro. Wm. Gay proposed that it be held at some popular place of resort near Boston, such as Crescent Beach, thus drawing in a larger attendance of the class that it seems especially desirable to interest. The matter of another meeting at Hoyt's Grove similar to the one held last year was discussed pro and con, and it was decided that while one nearer Boston had better be held first, there could be no objection to a second one later in the season. Sister Hoyt stated that a widespread spirit of inquiry had been excited in her locality by the former meeting. This should not be allowed to die out. Nor in fairness to this good sister and her husband who have stood so bravely for the truth should they be left to bear the brunt of the battle alone. They have kept an open door for us which no persecution of the enemy has ever been able to shut, and the least thing we can do is to take advantage of their self-devotion as far as possible.

The committee chosen were Pres. Conant, Sec. Stoddard and wife, Bro. Hoyt and the N. E. Secretary. It was further decided that the N. E. C. A. would be more efficient if regularly incorporated, and another committee was appointed consisting of Samuel A. Pratt of Worcester, M. J. Whipple, J. A. Conant, Rev. A. A. Hoyt and Rev. J. P. Stoddard, to take the necessary legal steps to this end, also to make arrangements for a permanent headquarters which might be a center where meetings could be held, and anti-secret books and tracts kept for sale in company with other reform literature.

The substance of a letter from Bro. Phillip Bacon was read, urging the employment of more colporteurs. He has started one Christian young man, a student at Northfield, in this business, and his letters show that he would be very useful to the Association could he be employed in this capacity. A telegram of greeting embodying the earnest sympathy and prayers of the Christian workers there assembled, was ordered to be sent to the N. C. A. meeting in Chicago on the 19th; and after a season of devotion the little company, gathered like one of old "in an upper room," dispersed, but not till they had done some very important and satisfactory work which we trust will tell for eternity.

I trust the brethren and sisters who have grown up on the broad western prairies will forgive me for indulging in a little innocent "sectionalism." New England in reform matters has ever held "the key of the situation," and in spite of the changes induced by her rapidly growing foreign element I believe she holds it still. She is continually sending off the young and enterprising part of her population to build up the waste places of the South and West. If they go imbued with the spirit of anti-lodgism as the Free State settlers went to Kansas imbued with the spirit of anti-slavery how soon the entire country might be leavened.

The charge of corrupting the Legislature made against the West End road, has been the sensation of the week. The speech of Mr. Whitney, the president of the road, in rebuttal, would have certainly laid all such charges at rest had it been half as convincing as it was comical. According to his own statement, while he did everything possible to secure the ends of the company with which he is identified, he was actuated by the purest and most unselfish desire for the good of the public, and not in the smallest degree by any less disinterested motive. It is currently reported that the Standard Oil Company, the greatest and meanest monopoly almost on the face of the earth, backs up the West End, and certainly Mr. Whitney has never before posed as a philanthropist, but rather as a shrewd man of business who has been long seeking to get the control of all the streets in Boston, thus excluding every rival line. Some items were brought out in relation to a series of costly dinners, with their inevitable wine and cigars furnished to Senators by the managers of the West End, which seem to imply that however it may be with the average man, the way to the heart (or the vote) of the average legislator lies through his stomach. But how long will Massachusetts persist in sending to her general court men of so low a grade of dignity that they can be influenced by such means? The question was asked but ruled out, "What members were intoxicated at those dinners?" To the ordinary mind it would seem a fair one, however disagreeable the publicity given their names might be to the parties in question, for it may be supposed that men are more easily cajoled and bribed when under the influence of wine than in their cooler and soberer moments. The whole affair has served to emphasize our great danger from unscrupulous monopolies on the one hand and venial legislators on the other.

ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, June 18, 1890.

So far the week has been an interesting and busy one both in the Senate and House of Representatives. In the former the silver debate had the right of way until its subject was remonetized by a vote of 42 to 25. As the discussion drew to a close there was a great display of interest in the proceedings. The attendance of Senators was large and the galleries were well filled. Both sides became excited and wanted to witness the end of it, in that branch of Congress. Of course the concurrence of the House and of the President has yet to be given, but it is pretty well known that the majority of the House favors the bill, and that it would be dangerous for the President politically to veto it. To approve it, he will have to sacrifice his Secretary of the Treasury, but notice was served by the Senatorial vote in a manner that cannot well be ignored.

And now that the silver question is out of the Senate's way, there is likely to be a struggle for precedence of other important matters. Senator Allison wants the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bills considered. Senator Platt wants the bill to admit Wyoming to the Union taken up. Senator Frye wants to press his shipping bills upon the attention of the Senate, and dozens of other Senators have their favorite measures to push forward.

Senator Edmund's latest role is as defender of the body to which he belongs against the imputation of being a clique of monopolists. He said the Senate had so long been regarded as the great bulwark of monopolies and corporations by reason of the large number of millionaires occupying seats in the body, that he felt constrained to assail the impression. The Vermont Senator asserted in contradiction of this position, that all important legislation for the last ten years affecting great corporations had in the outset been the work of the much misrepresented and abused United States Senate.

Representatives of the National Prohibitory Amendment Committee for Congressional work have been heard in the past few days in behalf of prohibition before the Senate and House committees. They also held a temperance mass meeting at the Metropolitan church, at which speakers from various sections made encouraging addresses. Some of the prophecies of the speakers were to the effect that prohibition will finally sweep the land like a mighty cyclone, and that the recent decision of the Supreme Court was only helping the matter along. Representative Pickler, "from the land of the Dakotas," expressed himself as glad the temperance question was in politics, and that it must stay in politics until it was settled. "Each of the old parties," said he, "must be crowded into this question until they can evade it no longer."

The ten principal breweries in San Francisco have been sold to an English syndicate for $7,500,000.

THE HOME.

A PRAYER.

I ask not wealth, but power to take
And use the things I have aright;
Not years, but wisdom that shall make
My life a profit and delight.

I ask not that for me the plan
Of good and ill be set aside,
But that the common lot of man
Be nobly borne and glorified.

I know I may not always keep
My steps in places green and sweet,
Nor find the pathway of the deep
A path of safety to my feet.

But pray that, when the tempest's breath,
Shall fiercely sweep my way about,
I make no shipwreck of my faith
In the unbottomed sea of doubt.

And that, though it be mine to know
How hard the stoniest pillow seems,
Good angels still may come and go
About the places of my dreams.

I do not ask for love below,
That friends shall never be estranged,
But for the power of loving, so
My heart may keep its youth unchanged.

Youth, joy, wealth,—Fate, I give thee these;
Leave faith and hope till life is past,
And leave my heart's best impulses
Fresh and unailing to the last.

—Phæbe Cary.

THE WIDOW BROWN'S INVESTMENTS.

She had been "the widow Brown" for twenty years, called so from no want of respect, but chiefly to distinguish her from several others of the same name in the same place. In money matters she was "well fixed," her neighbors said. Her three children were married and settled to her satisfaction. The handsome farm left her by her husband had increased in value. She hated to part with a single rood of the land that her dear Silas had once owned and occupied, but she was comforted by the thought that if he knew the circumstances, especially the price received for it, he would approve. No doubt he would, for in his day, as in hers, the one distinguishing characteristic of the head of that house was thrift.

To carry out his death-bed instructions seemed to be her supreme desire, not only from loyalty to his memory, but also because she had implicit confidence in his judgment.

"I have left everything to you, Debby," said he. "I know you will do what is right by the children. But I've been thinking since I lay here—perhaps we ought to—you better do—"

"Oh, what is it, Silas? What had I better do?" she asked, as she leaned over him to catch his last words; but his stiffened lips were silent forever, and it was years and years before a suspicion of his meaning dawned upon her.

Mrs. Brown during all the twenty years of her widowhood has gained the reputation of a good manager, and she deserved it. She gave something to the poor every year, and paid her church dues as regularly as she paid her taxes, though since her children were gone and her help attended other churches, she rented but half a pew. She said pew-renting was a business transaction, and it was not her way to pay for more of anything than she had use for. She never failed to drop something into the contribution box whatever the cause might be, and when privately solicited was rather fond of calling her gift "the widow's mite," and not improperly, as it sometimes seemed to the solicitor.

"Oh! if her eyes could once be opened to see things in their true light, what a tower of strength she would become," said Mrs. Scott, a lady foremost in all the benevolent work of the church, to her fellow-worker, Mrs. Edgar. The two were discussing ways and means for increasing certain revenues in which so many ladies are interested at the present time. Mrs. Edgar had pronounced opinions upon most subjects, and she never hesitated to speak her mind.

"Well, that woman's eyes will never be opened," she said, "by anything short of a miracle, such as opened the eyes of the prophet's servant in Old Testament times."

"And that was brought about by prayer," said Mrs. Scott. "Let us pray for this very thing."

"Why, of course I've no objections, but I haven't the least bit of faith," said the loquacious little lady. "I have labored with that woman, off and on, enough to convert a Hottentot, and left her no end of missionary magazines and leaflets, but it all does no sort of good. She said once that some of the reading was 'quite interesting'—think of that! The matter took no more hold of her than the most commonplace events in the daily papers, nor half so much as the market reports. Nobody is better informed upon the price of farm products than the widow Brown, but she cares little for any values not estimated by dollars and cents. If she would only antagonize our work I should have some hope, but her sublime indifference aggravates me."

The same evening Abner Cole, the widow Brown's hired man, came into the sitting-room, as his habit was, to talk over matters of mutual interest with his employer.

"Well, Mis' Brown," said he, "I've got off the last of them fat sheep to-day, and I'll be bound a likelier lot never was shipped from this station. Yes, I shall miss 'em, but I reckon we sold at the right time; sheep won't be any higher. There! I like to forgot the check," and Abner took from his pocket a paper which represented the value of the 100 fat sheep just marketed.

Before going back to his corner by the kitchen stove, the man remarked:

"They say wheat has riz."

"Yes, so I understand," said Mrs. Brown.

"Had an offer?"

"Yes."

"How much?"

She told him.

"Good. Closed the bargain?"

"Not yet. The offer holds until to-morrow. Think I better sell?"

"I reckon you had; it's a big price for wheat this year. More'n anybody else got around here."

The next day the widow Brown sold her wheat and wrote to one Banker Brown that she would come to the city the following week, prepared to purchase another $1,000 bond. Banker Brown was a distant relative and an old friend of her husband. Silas had said to her, "Always consult with Banker Brown, Debby. His advice will be worth more than a lawyer's and cost less;" and she had done so. She and Abner could carry on the farm, but when it came to investing the proceeds, she trusted no one but Banker Brown.

A week later, as she took the morning train for the city, twenty miles distant, she found half a dozen ladies among her fellow-passengers with whom she was acquainted. Among them were Mrs. Scott and Mrs. Edgar, who were going to attend a missionary meeting. They expressed their pleasure at seeing Mrs. Brown, and hoped she was going to the meeting also; but she said her's was a business trip, and she must return by the first train.

"If you have a little time to spare before your train leaves, come in to the meeting. It will be pleasanter than sitting at the station," said Mrs. Scott, as they separated at the church door.

Mrs. Brown thanked her and walked on to the bank, which was closed and a long stream of crape hung from the door-knob. She was shocked beyond expression. Mr. Brown, the president, had died suddenly that morning of apoplexy. The effect upon her was like that of a severe blow. She leaned against the building a moment for support, then put out her hand, like one walking in the darkness, seemed to grope her way down the steps, and slowly turned back towards the station. She had meant to do a little shopping, but she had no heart for it now.

The day seemed to have grown dark and chill. She shivered as she drew her wrap more closely about her, and quickened her footsteps a trifle, oblivious to everything in the busy streets through which she passed, until she came to the church where the ladies were assembled, and she recalled Mrs. Scott's invitation. Surely her own thoughts would be poor company during the two hours before train time if she went to the station, so she entered the church and sat down near the door, saying to the young lady usher who asked her to go up nearer the front, that she must leave soon and preferred her present seat.

It was such a meeting as Mrs. Brown had never attended, and it was a revelation to her. She had not supposed that there were any women in the land who could stand up before an audience, even of their own sex, and talk and pray as these women did during the devotional half-hour at the beginning.

She forgot the train, which had been gone an hour when the morning session closed, and all present were invited to a collation in the church parlors. She would have gone away, but Mrs. Scott laid hold of her, and she was carried along with the crowd contrary to her inclination. And what a pleasant, social hour she spent with these ladies; they were so cordial, and the flavor of their conversation, like that of their viands, was so agreeable that she enjoyed it.

There was no train that she could take until evening, so she made a day of it at the missionary meeting, and not reluctantly either, for her interest continued until the end. But on the whole it proved a trying day for Mrs. Brown. The shock of the morning had its effect upon her nervous system. Then, too, her conscience was ill at ease, which was indeed a new sensation, and finally the promise of fair weather had proved deceptive, for, when the meeting closed, the rain was falling and the sidewalks were sloppy, while she, usually the most prudent person in the care of her health, was provided with neither waterproof, umbrella nor rubbers, and rode home with damp clothing and wet feet.

It was easy to foresee the result. Sally, her faithful maid of all work, used vigorously the simple preventives at hand, but could not avert the dreadful chill, followed by fever and delirium. In the night she roused up Abner to go for the doctor.

"Mis' Brown is out of her head," she said. "And I'm afraid she's going to die, for she's talking religion as I never heard her before."

For a week Mrs. Brown hovered between life and death. It was pitiful to hear her talk so incessantly yet incoherently of talents, stewardship, unprofitable servant, treasures laid up upon the earth, and the like. Once when Abner came to look at her for a moment she exclaimed, "Don't sow wheat this year. Abner, sow the good seed, which is the word of God;" and poor Abner rushed out crying like a baby.

Mrs. Brown came slowly back to health and strength, a holier and happier woman because of the refiner's fire by which she had been tried. She said to Mrs. Scott, sitting by her bedside during the time of convalescence:

"A sick bed is not the worst thing. It has been a blessing to me. For twenty years I have been trying to understand what my husband wanted me to do, and tried to tell me upon his death-bed. It is all clear now, for I have felt in the same way. He was troubled because we had done so little for the Lord, and it is such a mercy that it has not come to me too late, as it did to him. No, I am not talking too much. I shall get well faster if I tell you some things that are on my mind. That day I was at the missionary meeting, I had with me $1,000 in cheques and bank notes, that I was to exchange for a bond. You probably know what prevented. Sad and shocking as that event was, it is well for me that I did not make the investment. I can do better with my money now. Now, in my husband's name I wish to endow a scholarship in some seminary down South, and also take a few shares in that school in Japan, that I never heard of till that day. You may take the money now for both objects, if you will, and then it will be off my mind."—Canada Presbyterian.

THE STREET WAIF.

It was a dirty little face that was upturned toward kind-looking Mrs. Arnold, but the eyes that sparkled under the torn hat were clear and truthful; rather uncommon eyes they were, too, for a "street Arab." For that is what little Jimmie Eckhart undoubtedly was. And yet, the time had been, not many years ago, (it could not have been many, for Jimmie was but a little fellow yet,) when this little street waif had had a happy home and a kind mother,—happy, but not by any means what the petted darlings in wealthy homes would call "nice" or even pleasant. But it was clean and comfortable, and "mother" was always there to welcome her little boy. And "mother's" smile will make a happy home for any little one.

But Mrs. Eckhart had to work very hard to keep the little home together, and the time came after a while when she felt her strength failing. Earthly friends she had none. It is useless to go back over her story; it was simply that of multitudes of others there in the great city. Two words will tell it—poor, friendless. And a year ago she had laid the heavy burden down and gone “over the river.” There, she knew, she had friends waiting for her; and had it not been for her boy, her one treasure, she would have been so glad to go. But she could only commit him into mightier hands, grasping the promise, “when thy father and thy mother forsake thee, then the Lord will take thee up.”

And so, for a year, Jimmie lived as he could; sometimes getting a little job of work, oftener dependent on the charities of his poor neighbors, some of whom pitied the boy and gave him of their scanty food. To-day, in the bright spring sunshine, he is out trying to earn a few pennies by any honest work, for he has not forgotten his mother's teachings.

Whether it was his frank, pleasant smile, or the bright blue eyes that attracted Mrs. Arnold's attention, I don't know. She is a stranger in the city, having come on with her husband from their western home for a sight-seeing trip. Now, as they were passing along the crowded way, she ran against little Jimmie Eckhart. With a pleasant “excuse me” she was going on her way, but the pleasant smile and bonny blue eyes of the little fellow stopped her. Speaking to her husband to wait a moment, she drew Jimmie aside out of the bustle. “What is your name, my little boy?” she said. “Jimmie Eckhart,” was the reply. “And where is your home?” “I have no real home,” he said, “though mostly I stay with Mrs. Flynn in Duane street.” “And have you no parents?” The kind words and pleasant smile soon won the little waif's confidence, and he told her of his mother; of his father he had no remembrance. “And have you no friends to care for you?” continued Mrs. Arnold. “No; mother said that when she was gone I would be alone in the world, but she told me to remember that God would take care of me.”

A quick glance at her husband's face told Mrs. Arnold that he, too, was listening attentively. “How old are you, Jimmie?” was the next question. “Nine years old next month.” She turned to her husband, saying a few words in an undertone, still keeping a detaining hand on Jimmie's arm. After a few words, seemingly of expostulation on his part, and pleasant argument on her side, Mr. Arnold said, laughingly, “Well, do as you think best, Laura, you are generally in the right.”

Turning to the waiting boy, she said, “How would you like to go home with us?” A pleased, wondering look came into the bright eyes, still glittering with the tears the thoughts of his mother always brought. “Do you really mean it?” he eagerly exclaimed. “Certainly I do. You can go with us and live in the country.” “What! where all the green grass is, and the pretty flowers, and the singing birds that I have heard mother tell about?” “Yes, and you can drive the cows, feed the chickens, play with the dog, and do a great many other things that all little boys like to do; will you go?” “Of course I will, and be glad enough, too,” said the happy boy. “Well,” said Mrs. Arnold, “come with us.” Then, turning to her husband, she signified her readiness to go on, and they proceeded to their hotel.

A bath and a new suit of clothes, procured from a store near by, made a great change in Jimmie's looks. A bright, handsome little fellow he was, and Mrs. Arnold felt that if he did as well as he looked, she might well be proud of her protegee.

On the morrow they took the train for their western home. As they were borne rapidly onward, every new object claimed Jimmie's attention, and many were the expressions of delight. The end of the second day found them at the end of their journey by rail. Here, they found a large wagon, drawn by a noble pair of horses, waiting to take them three miles into the country. Jimmie's delight at the country scenes was too great to be restrained, and his kind friends could but smile at the many strange remarks of the boy, all unused as he was to the lovely country. And never had the old homestead looked lovelier than now, bathed as it was in the rays of the setting sun. The cows were coming home to their shelter for the night, the birds were singing their vesper hymns in the trees by which the farmhouse was sheltered. Truly, it was a lovely scene, and glad indeed were our friends to reach their loved and lovely home once more.

On the morrow Jimmie's country life really began, and a happy one it was. Not that it was all pleasure, for in his city life he had imbibed ideas and acquired habits that had to be broken up in that Christian home. But very gently, though firmly, did Mr. and Mrs. Arnold deal with the little orphan, and little by little he yielded to their guidance, until they could say truthfully, “No one has a better boy than we have.”

And as time went on, and he grew into manhood, he almost ceased to remember that he was not, in truth, as everyone called him, James Arnold. Nor did he, in his prosperity, forget the God who had brought him into his pleasant home. For early in life he gave his heart to his mother's God. And Mr. and Mrs. Arnold are reaping the reward of their kind deed, done so many years ago for the Master, for Jimmie is all that any parent could desire. And so let us leave them, with the wish that others may go and do likewise.—Hope Alton in the Christian Intelligencer.

TEMPERANCE.

PROHIBITION IN KANSAS.

A handsome pamphlet issued by real estate men of Topeka, Kansas, contains the following interesting statement respecting prohibition in that State:

In 1881 the first prohibitory law was enacted in Kansas, and strong efforts made to enforce it. But by a persistent adherence to the enforcement of the law, and the adoption of subsequent amendments in 1885 and 1887, making the constitution more effective against the doubts and fears of the press, judges upon the bench, jurors and witnesses, public sentiment is now almost entirely against the saloon. It was the invisible contaminating influence of the saloon in politics and society that warded off the end; but it came at last, and the discordant elements are firmly welded together in one grand union against which the combined influence of the liquor element cannot successfully contend. Too much cannot be said of the good the prohibitory law has accomplished for Kansas. With no experience to guide, and no pattern at hand, it seems almost incredible that the law-making power should be so successful in formulating a law so nearly perfect. It had the effect to close almost every saloon in the State for a short time without the action of any one. But the lawless element soon began to plot to capture public sentiment and devise schemes to evade the law. By July 1, 1881, about three-fourths of all the saloons in the State had opened up, and were violating the law with impunity. A vigorous warfare was waged by prosecuting officers, and public sentiment began to crystallize in favor of the law in some communities, and against it in others. The good results of the enforcement of the law in the communities where the public sentiment was favorable, had the effect to change the sentiment in communities where it had been found against it.

The best obtainable information from official and unofficial sources, in 1888, gives the number of places where liquor was sold as about one place to every 2,220 people. We also elicit the fact that there is not a barrel of bonded liquor in the State, and not a distillery to replenish the storehouse; consequently, the storehouse has been withdrawn. The law, as amended in 1885, imposed a severe penalty or fine of not less than one nor more than five hundred dollars, and imprisonment of not less than thirty days nor more than ninety days for each offense in breaking the law. When it became apparent that the law would be rigidly enforced, and conviction meant a heavy fine and costs and a sojourn in the county jail, the number of liquor dealers and rumsellers became scarce. We do not wish to burden our readers with statistics, but simply state these few facts on a question of vital importance to the nation as well as the State, because it has proven to be a benefactor in the diminishing of crime, improvement of industries, and the elevation of the masses in our great State.

The average percentage of pauperism as shown by the census of 1880 is one to every 750 of the population of the United States. The result of a careful calculation made by the Bureau of Labor Statistics in Kansas, and from other statistics, shows that we have but one pauper in Kansas to every 1,359 people, the smallest percentage of pauperism of any State in the Union.

Records and facts obtained from the authorities at the penitentiary prove conclusively that the enforcement of the law upon crime has steadily diminished the number of inmates in that institution from the year 1880 up to the present time.

Notwithstanding the fact that the population of the State increased at the rate of about 100,000 per annum, the number of convictions for felonies in the State did not reach 291, or as many as were convicted during the last year of the dram-shop act, until 1885. The number of convictions falls far short of the proportionate increase in the population, and the convictions for grand larceny and the crime of assault with intent to kill do not keep pace with the other crimes known to our statutes. If the population of the State increases, and the number of convictions does not increase in proportion to the population, the number of convicts in the penitentiary will necessarily decrease on account of the expiration of the terms of sentence.

On December 31, 1886, there were 898 convicts in the penitentiary, besides government prisoners; on December 31, 1887, there were 900 convicts in the penitentiary—only a gain of two over the previous year, notwithstanding the fact that the population of the State had increased at least 100,000. On August 17, 1888, there were in the penitentiary 845 convicts, an actual decrease in the number, in seven and a half months, of 46, and it is reported that at this date there are 96 persons less in the penitentiary than one year ago.

A great many comparisons might be made to show the advantages of the law, but time and space will not permit, and we simply give these few brief facts to show our readers where it benefits us, not only in the State government, but as a community, in the saving of money, the establishing of homes, increasing of manufactories, and the advancement of agriculture, etc.

Many of the county jails of the State are now empty, and there are no criminal cases upon the dockets of the courts. Shawnee county, the most populous in the State, having within its borders our beautiful capital city—Topeka—with a population of 50,000, has not a criminal case on the court calendar.

ALBERT GRIFFIN'S PLAN.

Because of their importance, I desire to call special attention to the following propositions:

1. So long as the Spirit of Christ pervades the hearts of any considerable number of voters, the saloon cannot be put out of politics by letting it alone.

2. Nor can it be put out by any kind of mere restriction and regulation—no matter how rigidly enforced—as such laws must have exactly the contrary effect.

3. Therefore, those who desire to get the saloon out of politics should seek its suppression at the earliest possible moment.

4. But while prohibition is effective wherever it is sustained by an earnest majority, it is powerless against a hostile majority, for the reason that most men will not punish themselves and their friends for refusing to do what they prefer shall not be done.

The following points should be read with the emphasis of bold-face capitals:

1. The drink habit is the tap-root of the saloon, without which its existence is impossible.

2. Therefore, the surest and speediest way to get the saloon out of politics is to attack its tap-root—the drink habit.

Last year, when the Eastern prohibitory amendment campaigns were being planned, I urged the simultaneous starting of a systematic movement in favor of a five-year total abstinence pledge to diminish the number of those whose personal habits inclined them to the wrong side, and, in connection with the defeat that followed, it should not be forgotten that scores of thousands of anti-saloonists remained at home, or voted no, solely because they believed that the number of drinkers was so large that “prohibition would not prohibit.” Will it not be well for the friends of the amendment in Nebraska to spike the gun which was more destructive than any, if not than all others in the nine lost battles? The experiment could certainly do no harm; is it not worth trying?

For forty-five years I have been combating the liquor power—fighting even when I felt sure of defeat—but I do not believe in deceiving myself or my friends, either by deliberate lying, or by suppressing the truth, and I will close this paper by saying:

1. In my opinion, more votes can be made for prohibition, at this time, and made quicker, by the right kind of total abstinence, pledge-signing work, than by all other possible methods.

2. No substantial progress, on legislative lines, appears to be possible, at least east of the Mississippi, until another moral tidal wave in favor of personal temperance sweeps over the land.

3. I believe that the next great temperance revival will result in the final suppression of the saloon in every part of the nation.

And I will add that I am pervaded by a conviction that an organized uprising will become visible this year, and redeem our country before the century closes. The night is yet dark, but if I read the signs of the times, the dawn is at hand. —The Advance.

REPORT OF CORRESPONDING SECRETARY AND GENERAL AGENT (Continued from 5th page).

included in my monthly statements to your Treasurer, and will doubtless appear in his report; and as all trust funds formerly held by me as your agent have been, under instruction of the Board, transferred to your Treasurer, his exhibit will present the complete financial condition of the Association.

I have not seen the Treasurer's exhibit, and as I have been absent from headquarters the larger part of the year, I can only speak from an imperfect knowledge, but it will doubtless appear that the disbursements have exceeded the receipts of the year, and this important feature of the work will necessarily receive your careful attention in outlining the year's program. If the line of catholicity which has characterized the conventions of the past year is followed, I have great hope for enlargement in funds as well as friends to the cause. It may be necessary to diminish the number of employees for a time, and otherwise reduce expenses, in order to keep within the means at command, which, however undesirable, would be preferable to exposing the hitherto unquestioned credit of the Association to a suspicion of unsoundness. Of this matter you can best judge with facts and figures before you, and in case you deem a restriction wise you can also judge where that restriction can be made with greatest safety, and who can best be spared from the working force.

I find the distribution of literature both an economic and effective method of reaching the people, where it is done with discretion. The indiscriminate scattering of tracts is a wasteful and unpromising business, but a tract, by some well-known man, is often the means of approach to a stranger who proves a friend or an inquirer who is willing to receive the truth. Where Christian men and women meet, a somewhat general distribution is safe, but even in such bodies it requires wisdom not to give offense. This feature of our work can, I feel confident, be carried on in New England with great benefit, especially to the young men, who, I find in a majority of instances, are thinking of this question.

I have already suggested in a statement to your Board that the next annual convention be held in Boston if the known friends here are willing to co-operate. Boston once fairly aroused and New England is reached, which can furnish as many strong men and women, and give as much money in support of a good cause as any other spot of equal size on this continent. I hope you may be favorably disposed towards the New England field, and should you be so impressed I should advise that a suitable room be secured on the street, and a Book and Tract Room, easy of access, be opened, with a full line of our literature, and the cheaper line of reform publications to be had in this city, which would, I am confident, be self-supporting. I would recommend the appointment of a committee by the N. E. Association to take the charge and responsibility of such a room, and that it be carried on under the hearty Godspeed of the N. C. A., and in connection with its New England office. I have invited a number of friends in and near Boston to meet here for conference and to pray for God's blessing upon the annual gathering of the N. C. A. on the 19th instant. Several have signified their intention to be at this gathering on the 18th, and we shall unitedly pray that "God, from whom cometh our help," may guide you by his counsels, and that the annual business meeting of 1890, like the two conventions of the year, may be the most harmonious and the most efficient of any for years, and that it may inaugurate a year of unprecedented growth and prosperity in the work of the National Christian Association. Respectfully your fellow laborer in the Lord's vineyard,

J. P. STODDARD.

Secretary and General Agent N. C. A.

—The receipts of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Reformed Church for the year just closed were about $117,000, an excess of nearly $21,000 over the previous year. The debt of the board has been reduced from $23,500 to $16,500.

LITERATURE.

HOW TO PRESERVE HEALTH. By Louis Barkan, M. D. Pp. 344. Price, $1.00. American News Co., New York.

Among the multitude of books treating of hygiene, it would appear that no more could be said for the information of the public. But, if this were true, the possibility of saying those things better that may have often been said well is an ideal always before us. Beside, so long as experience can teach us anything respecting the laws of health, something new is waiting to be said or written. We cannot attempt to say how much is new in this plainly-printed volume, that must be left to professional gentlemen; but it must be noted in praise of the book that it is written in such beautifully plain and understandable terms that for this one feature it well deserves popularity. But we do not thereby give it a full endorsement. No book that treats of health shall have that, which commends the use of wine. We regret to say that Dr. Barkan does this again and again. This is much to be regretted, since otherwise the work is worthy of hearty commendation for its practical character and evident purpose of usefulness.

The Missionary Review of the World for July opens with an interesting article from Dr. Pierson on the Mc-All Mission in France, the fruit of a personal visitation and inspection during the month of May. All Americans are interested in this mission, since it has been largely sustained from our country. Prof. Hulbert, of Korea, has a well-written paper on the Science of Missions. Dr. Laurie discusses the Law of Advance in Missions in a wise and able manner. Dr. Storrow gives the third paper on Foreign Missions in the seventeenth and eighteenth Centuries—a concise and valuable historical series, to be finished in the next number. Secretary Ellinwood's article on the Indian Somajes will specially interest the students of Oriental systems of faith, showing what they really teach and their hostility to Christianity. A plea for the Seneca Indians, is strong and earnest, and ought to call forth a prompt and powerful response. Dr. Nevins, of China, writes on Famine and the work of Famine Relief; there is also a graphic account of the Revival in the Nestorian Churches in 1890, Dr. Starbuck's translations from foreign magazines, and editorial notices of several new books of a missionary character.

In Our Day for June Robert Ferguson, of Berlin, Prussia, contributes an article of great importance to American readers. Its title is "New Conspiracies of Ultra-montanism in Germany," and it proves with what assurance the Romanists are moving on toward the consummation foretold by Dr. Windthorst, their leader in the German parliament, who declares that the Catholic church must get control of the common schools. Miss Tibbles, the "Bright Eyes" of Indian literature, writes on the "Perils and Promises of Indian Citizenship," a forcible discussion of the Indian Severalty law. "The Louisiana Lottery Octopus" is Anthony Comstock's contribution, always timely and urgent. Mr. Cook's Monday lecture, here officially printed, is on "American Opportunities on the Congo." He reviews the reports of Cannibalism, the Slave Trade and the Rum Traffic, and shows that America has opportunities and responsibilities which cannot be neglected.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE NEW TESTAMENT.

LESSON I. —Third Quarter.—July 6.

SUBJECT.—Lawful Work on the Sabbath.—Luke 13: 10-17.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Wherefore it is lawful to do well on the Sabbath days.—Matt. 12: 12.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

DAILY READINGS.—M.—Luke 12: 35-59. T.—Luke 13: 1-9. W.—Luke 13: 10-17. T.—Luke 6: 1-10. F.—Isa. 58: 1-14. S.—John 5: 1-19. S.—Jer. 17: 21-27.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. The place and time of the miracle. Vs. 10-12. The example of Christ is always in the direction of great reverence and respect for religious ordinances. Even when they have grown to be mere forms they imply that there was once religious life within them, and their constant recurrence keeps the people from relapsing into mere animalism. France a hundred years ago tried the plan of doing away with all religious ordinances. They, together with the church which administered them, had grown hollow and corrupt to a fearful degree; yet the result of the experiment showed that they were better than nothing, and it has never since—not at least on an equal scale—been repeated. The many miracles which Christ wrought in the synagogue and on the Sabbath day show that while with God all times are alike, there are spiritual influences pertaining to certain seasons and places under which it is well to put ourselves if we would benefited.

But holy times and places cannot be desecrated with impunity. There are many churches which hire a popular evangelist, and make great efforts to "get up a revival," as the expression is; yet they fail. If these churches are lent for money-making schemes during the week, and fellowship the lodge with its Christless worship, is it strange that all this begets an atmosphere in which the Holy Spirit neither can or will work, and consequently no one gets helped either in soul or body.

2. The ruler's objection. Vs. 11-14. This woman's affliction was peculiarly terrible. She was "bowed together;" she had lost entirely the upright attitude which distinguishes man from the brute creation, and seemed condemned to pass all the rest of her life in this wretched state. That the ruler of the synagogue should actually oppose such a wonderful work of mercy as her healing because it was the Sabbath day, gives us a glimpse of ecclesiastical bigotry that seems almost incredible. This spirit is not dead, though modern enlightenment will not allow it to be displayed in the same way. There are some who bitterly oppose divine healing and class all diseases cured in this way as "nervous" or "imaginary," instead of rejoicing that the poor victims of sick nerves and disordered imaginations can be cured in any way. There are those who antagonize all Christian work done outside of regular church lines; who would almost seem to prefer that sinners would not be saved at all than saved by the preaching of the Salvation Army or any lay organization. They say in effect, "Here are churches with a regularly ordained ministry where the masses can come and get spiritual healing." But it is a fact that the masses will not enter these churches, and will live and die without the Gospel unless it is carried to them. Like this poor woman, they are spiritually "bowed together;" they have lost the divine image in which they were created, and bear instead only the image of the earthy. Only the touch of Jesus can lift their faces Godward; and if we have his spirit we shall, if necessary, break through all forms and ordinances that hinder their salvation.

3. The Lord's reply. Vs. 15-17. It was not real regard for the Sabbath, but hatred of Jesus that inspired the ruler's opposition. He himself rather than let his property suffer would break even Sabbatic traditions. Bigotry is always inconsistent. It is sure while straining at a gnat to swallow a camel. The more men make of mere forms and so-called "holy days," the less they are apt to make of actual sins. Two things were the outcome of this miracle. His adversaries were ashamed but all the people rejoiced. This always follows any great display of Christ's power. The results of Christianity is the one argument infidels can never gainsay. This is one reason why we are taught to pray for it in its highest development, "Thy kingdom come."

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—Elder Callender, of Montvale, Pa., writes of a gracious revival work at that place, during which some sixty persons have professed conversion. One-half the number have united with the Baptist church, the rest with the Methodist. The former has maintained its anti-secret rule, although amid much censure and trial.

—Bishop Taylor, of the Methodist Episcopal church, who has just returned to this country from Africa, says: "The thirty-five mission stations I have already planted and manned in the midst of purely heathen tribes, furnish but a specimen and earnest of what can be done on a scale commensurate in breadth with the stupendous work to be done. With the funds coming to hand as required, I can yet, in the afternoon of my day, by the will of my Father and Saviour, plant and develop to a self-supporting basis a thousand stations in Africa before I quit the field; and no station shall be the ultimatum of its own existence, but a center of evangelizing light—a beacon amid the dark mountains and a base of evangelizing agency, extending the work in all directions."

—The American Board has, since the 1st of November, appointed 52 persons to the various foreign fields. This is about as many as were appointed in the twelve months of last year; 21 of these are men, and 31 women. The list includes several children of missionaries, which shows that the influence of heredity tells.

—The report of Dr. Houston, Southern Presbyterian Secretary of foreign missions, shows 14 missionaries sent out last year, being more than in any previous year. An important mission was started in the Congo Free State, Africa. Receipts from all sources, $107,527, being $11,000 more than in any other year. From legacies came nearly $15,000. The committee asks for one-fourth of the church collections, instead of one-sixth as now.

LODGE NOTES.

The Sons of Veterans' State Encampment occupies all of this week in Jacksonville, Ill. Gov. Fifer, Gen. R. A. Alger and Hon. John M. Palmer will be present. Large sums are promised in prizes for the best drilled companies of this secret society.

The secret business sessions of the National Council of the Junior American Mechanics were held in Chicago last week. Among the subjects brought up was that of a change of name. The name of "United America" was suggested as a substitute for the present one of "Mechanics." The appointment of a National Organizer for the work in new territories, and the proposed consolidation with the senior order were also considered.

A split occurred in the Central Labor Union of New York on Sunday. The socialistic delegates withdrew and formed a new central body, which will be known as the Central Labor Federation. Anticipating this action the conservatives, at the instance of the building trades' section, passed a resolution denying socialists the right of representation in the original organization. The war of words thus aroused was loud and vigorous, and for a time it looked as though the opposing factions would come to blows. The socialists were called ignorant foreigners, usurpers and nation-wreckers, while they in turn characterized the conservatives as boodlers, scabs and professional politicians, and dubbed the place as "boodler's hall." Then the resolution was passed and the fire-eaters were put out.

A dispatch from Omaha says that J. J. Werner, of Hebron, Neb., rushed into the clerk's office of the Merchant's Hotel in his night gown about 1:30 o'clock Friday morning, exclaiming, "I have killed my best friend." Investigation showed that he had thrown his roommate, L. O. Secrest, from their room in the third story, into the court below, inflicting what will probably prove fatal injuries. Werner and Secrest were delegates to the Grand Lodge of Masons, in session there, and are intimate friends. Werner says he dreamed of fighting a monster, and when he came to himself found that he had thrown his roommate out of the window. There are indications that the men quarreled over the Cerneau Scottish Rite, which has created considerable disturbance in Nebraska Masonic circles. Werner was arrested.

Powderly and Gompers are proving better than we can how futile are secret sworn orders in promoting true brotherhood or the real interests of labor. Read this dispatch to the Inter Ocean: "General Master Workman Powderly's attack on President Gompers and the American Federation of Labor at Cooper Union mass-meeting last night is generally considered as the forerunner of a struggle between the two organizations. President Gompers is up in arms. He was seen at the headquarters of the American Federation to-day, and expressed himself very forcibly concerning Mr. Powderly and the general officers of the Knights of Labor. He said: 'I charge the officers of the Knights of Labor as being cheap and servile labor agents, and that they have placed the Knights of Labor organization in the same relation to the labor movement in general as is held by the Printers' Protective Fraternity, who are organized to furnish "scab" labor, in relation to the International Typographical Union. General Master Workman Powderly insinuates that I am a cur and a coward. If he believed that why did he make it impossible for me to meet him last night, or why does he not accept my proposition to meet him in the future? I will meet him on or off the platform in any way that will satisfy his overweening conceit, and stamp him once for all as a charlatan and an incubus upon the labor movement. I had refrained from showing the villainy of General Master Workman Powderly and some of the officers of the Knights of Labor out of respect for the general labor movement, but I will at the earliest opportunity expose their rascality and treachery.'"

Be Sure

If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. A Boston lady, whose example is worthy imitation, tells her experience below: "In one store where I went to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla the clerk tried to induce me buy their own instead of Hood's; he told me their's would last longer; that I might take it on ten days' trial; that if I did not like it I need not pay anything, etc. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I had taken Hood's Sarsaparilla, knew what it was, was satisfied with it, and did not want any other. When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was feeling real miserable with dyspepsia, and so weak that at times I could hardly stand. I looked like a person in consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me so much good that I wonder at myself sometimes, and my friends frequently speak of it." Mrs. ELLA A. GOFF, 61 Terrace Street, Boston.

To Get

Hood's

Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from June 16 to 21 inclusive:

J B Wells, A Taylor, S McMurdy, Mrs E Brooks, J B Crumb, J McLean, A Geil, J D Russell, J Mintier, J Rowan, E Farrer, W T Peters, A J Richards, J W Cole, J Morrison, M Stubbs, J L Nash, W McCoy, Mrs E C Andrus, S S Grannis, Rev J J Smith, M M Duff, O C Lindley, G Pallister, Mrs J Still, Rev E Barnetson.

WEBSTER'S DICTIONARY and the Christian Cynosure for $4.25, seems a very little amount to pay for so much valuable matter.

You get 832 pages of Cynosure for the dollar and a half!

And whoever has renewed their subscriptions within the last six months can get 1280 pages of Dictionary, sent post-paid for $2.75!!

Read the advertisement on page 15, "A REMARKABLE OFFER."

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—No. 2.....	85 3/4 @	86
No. 3.....		75 1/2
Winter No. 2.....		85 1/4
Corn—No. 2.....	34 1/2 @	35
Oats—No. 2.....	29 @	31
Rye—No. 2.....		46
Brn per ton.....		10 25
Hay—Timothy.....	6 50 @	10 00
Butter, medium to best.....	10 @	14
Cheese.....	06 @	10 1/2
Beans.....	1 25 @	1 75
Eggs.....		12
Seeds—Timothy.....	1 25 @	1 35
Flax.....	1 22 @	1 40
Broom corn.....	02 1/2 @	06 1/4
Potatoes, per bu.....	20 @	45
Hides—Green to dry flint.....	03 @	07
Lumber—Common.....	10 00 @	13 00
Wool.....	15 @	34
Cattle—Choice to extra.....	4 40 @	5 00
Common to good.....	2 00 @	4 35
Hogs.....	3 80 @	4 00
Sheep.....	2 85 @	5 70

NEW YORK.

Wheat.....	86 1/2 @	89
Corn.....	40 @	42 3/4
Oats.....	32 @	41
Eggs.....		14 3/4
Butter.....	6 @	16
Wool.....	14 @	39

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle.....	1 65 @	4 60
Hogs.....	3 40 @	3 67
Sheep.....	3 00 @	5 00

the character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "brilliant" but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75c; per dozen $7.50. Paper cover 35c; per dozen $3.50. No Christian's library is complete without it. Send for a copy in cloth and get a catalogue of books and tracts sold by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

SCOTCH RITE MASONRY ILLUSTRATED.

The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all Masonic rites, and are fully and accurately given in

"FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED,"

as advertised, but the signs, grips, passwords, etc., of these three degrees are given at the close of Vol 2 of

"Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated"

Vol. 1 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3d to 18th inclusive. Vol. 2 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 19th to 33d inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each; in cloth, $1 each. Each volume per dozen, paper covers, $4; per dozen, cloth bound, $9.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St, Chicago,

The Washington Souvenir,

Size 18x24 inches, and containing the portraits of

Washington and his Com-Patriots, WITH THEIR TESTIMONY ON FREEMASONRY.

It contains the portraits of

Washington.
John Adams, 2nd President of the United States.
James Madison, 4th President of the United States.
Joseph Ritner, Governor of Pennsylvania.
Richard Rush, Secretary of State and of the Treasury.
Alexander Hamilton, the friend of Washington.
Samuel Adams, the Father of the Revolution.
John Hancock, President of the Continental Congress.
Samuel Dexter, Secretary of War and of the Treasury.
William Wirt, Attorney-General.
John Marshall, Chief Justice of U. S. Supreme Court.
John Quincy Adams, 6th President of the United States.
Benjamin Rush, the Father of Temperance Reform in America.
Lebbeus Armstrong, Founder of the first Temperance Society.
Framed, it is an ornament to please the eye, and a testimony to gladden the heart. Sent safely packed in a mailing tube, post-paid, for ten cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

FIFTY YEARS and BEYOND;

OR,

Old Age and How to Enjoy It.

A most appropriate gift book for "The Old Folks at Home."

Compiled by REV. E. G. LATHROP.

Introduction by
REV. ARTHUR EDWARDS, D. D.,
(Editor N. W. Christian Advocate.)

The object of this volume is to give to that great army who are fast hastening toward the "great beyond" some practical hints and helps as to the best way to make the most of the remainder of that now is, and to give comfort and help if that is to come.

"It is a tribute to the Christianity that honors one gray head and refuses to consider the old man burden or an obstacle. The book will aid and comfort every reader."—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

"The selections are very precious. Springing from such numerous and pure fountains, they can but afford a refreshing and healthful draught for every aged traveller to the great beyond."—Witness.

Price, bound in rich cloth, 400 pages, $1

Address, W. I. PHILLIP,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago Ill

FOR MINISTERS

THE

"STORIES OF THE GODS"

is especially adapted. They will at once derstand the references to the idolatrous systems of the nations. And the idolatrous worship of the Masonic lodge is thus more clearly seen and easily understood. Will you furnish each pastor in your place with one of these pamphlets?

PRICE, ONLY 10 CENTS.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Standard Works

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Associat'n

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. A liberal discount to dealers.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a second Freemason. 10cts each.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims by Rev. David McDill, Pres. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. In cloth, 35cts each; paper covers, 15cts each.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinions of many prominent college presidents and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25cts each.

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of his sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5cts each.

Sermon on Secretism. By Rev. R. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational church, Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear array of the objections to all secret societies, and to Masonry especially, that are apparent to all. 5cts each.

Pres. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to dis-fellowship secret societies. 10cts each.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and Church. By Rev. M. S. Dury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church, is clearly shown. 10cts each.

Holden with Cords. OR THE POWER OF THE SECRET EMPIRE. By E. E. Flagg, author of "A Sunny Life," etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story, accurately true to life because mainly a narration of historical facts. In cloth, $1.00; in paper, 50 cents.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and law of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved. 15cts each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. J. Day Brownlee. In reply to a Masonic Oration by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio. 5 cents each.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on Masonry. Paper covers, 25 cents each.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion. 5 cents each.

Revised Odd Fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge. Encampment and Rebekah (ladies) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by ex-President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; paper cover, 50cts.

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own utterances; its doctrine and practice examined in the light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth 50cts; paper covers, 25cts.

Patriarchs Militant Illustrated. The complete ritual of the Patriarchs Militant degree. This is an accurate copy of the Charge Book furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge of the Independent Order of Odd-fellows, with the eighteen military diagrams and the unwritten (secret) work added. Paper cover, 25cts each.

Exposition of the Grange. Edited by Rev. A. W. Geeslin. Illustrated with engravings. 25cts each.

HOME AND HEALTH.

We are glad to see that attention is being paid to the hardships and privations of shop girls. At a meeting last week at Chickering Hall, in which Protestant ministers and popish priests took part, a sad representation was made. One of the speakers detailed the wrongs done this class of wage-earners. He spoke of the hardships of women workers in the big stores, from the cash girl at $1.50 a week to the sales-woman. He told of the iniquities of the fining system in vogue, and how a certain shop girl who earned $2 a week sold $167 worth of goods a day and was fined 60 cents a week; how the girls are compelled to stand up for hours at a time, and the many other hardships they endured he dwelt on. In closing he pointed out that women were sometimes driven from a proper life by such inflictions. It is not hard to see the temptations of girls so situated to take up with a life of shame, and society is bound to ameliorate their condition if possible. If many of these girls should seek service in families they would be better paid, have lighter work and get better living.—Intelligencer.

CRUEL CAPS.

The following protest from an article in the Home-Maker is none too strong against the foolish, if not the barbarous, fashion of close-fitting white caps for babies and little children as articles of street wear:

First, the thin material of the cap drawn tightly over the top of the head is no protection whatever. Let a mother who has just sent her two-year-old toddler out for an hour in the park with nothing on his head but a lawn cap, tie a handkerchief over her own head and sit half an hour in the sun; if she returns to the house without a headache, she will be a great exception to the rule. Yet the thought does not occur to her that the baby, whose head is much more sensitive than her own, will suffer the same discomfort as long as he is in the sun. Of course, a child in a carriage, protected by shade or parasol, is saved from this disadvantage of the close cap, and I am glad to say that some caps are made with fancy puffed crowns that obviate the difficulty; but I am inclined to think this is done more for ornament than comfort.

Second, is it not cruel, in warm weather, when every breath of wind is precious, to so cover the back of a baby's head and neck, his ears, and part of his face that the air cannot touch him? And there is not only the cap, but the hair, the warmest kind of a covering, is pressed tight against the neck, so that on removing the cap there is a profuse perspiration all over head and neck and ears. And yet many people think that because the airy-looking little things are so thin and light they must be cool.

Third—and most important—there is not the slightest shade afforded by this perfectly brimless headgear. The little ruffle of lace or lawn is never put far enough over the face to hide the "bangs"; so the tender eyes are utterly unprotected from the glare of the sunlight. Any woman would think it perfectly barbarous if she had to walk in the summer sun with only a small bonnet on and no parasol.

It is a pity that the old-fashioned baby's sun-hat that was made in two pieces, brim and crown, that buttoned on to one another, has quite disappeared. In a hat of this sort there was a fullness formed by the crown being larger than the inner edge of the brim, that caused openings through which the air could pass over the head. They could be made of pique or even embroidery, and were easily laundered.

Surely in this age of dress reform, we should reject a fashion that so sacrifices comfort; and if any member of family should be exempt from dut "the style," it is the little innocent who cannot describe his sufferings, and not knowing their cause, cannot ask for their removal.

There is comfort for the man with a prematurely gray beard in Buckingham's Dye, because it never fails to color an even brown or black as may be desired.

The Pope Favors
Convalescents from the Influenza with exemption from Lenten rules (1890).

Ayer's Sarsaparilla
Restores
Strength and Vigor.
Take it
now.
Prepared by
Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co.,
Lowell, Mass.

By All Odds

The most generally useful medicine is Ayer's Pills. As a remedy for the various diseases of the stomach, liver, and bowels, these Pills have no equal. Their sugar-coating causes them not only to be easy and pleasant to take, but preserves their medicinal integrity in all climates and for any reasonable length of time. The best family medicine, Ayer's Pills are, also, unsurpassed for the use of travelers, soldiers, sailors, campers, and pioneers. In some of the most critical cases, when all other remedies have failed, prove effective.

Ayer's Pills

"In the summer of 1864 I was sent to the Annapolis hospital, suffering with chronic diarrhea. While there, I became so reduced in strength that I could not speak and was compelled to write everything I wanted to say. I was then having some 25 or 30 stools per day. The doctors ordered a medicine that I was satisfied would be of no benefit to me. I did not take it, but persuaded my nurse to get me some of Dr. Ayer's Pills. About two o'clock in the afternoon I took six of these pills, and by midnight began to feel better. In the morning the doctors came again, and after deciding that my symptoms were more favorable, gave me a different medicine, which I did not use, but took four more of the pills instead. The next day the doctors came to see me, and thought I was doing nicely, (and so did I). I then took one pill a day for a week. At the end of that time, I considered myself cured and that Ayer's Pills had saved my life. I was then weak, but had no return of the disease, and gained in strength as fast as could be expected."—F. C. Luce, Late Lieut. 56th Regt. Mass. Vol. Infantry.

"Ayer's Pills are

The Best

I have ever used for headaches, and they act like a charm in relieving any disagreeable sensation in the stomach after eating."—Mrs. M. J. Ferguson, Pullens, Va.

"I was a sufferer for years from dyspepsia and liver troubles, and found no permanent relief until I commenced taking Ayer's Pills. They have effected a complete cure."—George W. Mooney, Walla Walla, W. T.

Ayer's Pills,

PREPARED BY

DR. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass.

Sold by all Druggists and Dealers in Medicine.

To cure Biliousness, Sick Headache, Constipation, Malaria, Liver Complaints, take the safe and certain remedy, SMITH'S

BILE BEANS

Use the SMALL SIZE (40 little beans to the bottle). They are the most convenient; suit all ages. Price of either size, 25 cents per bottle.

KISSING at 7, 17, 70: Photo-gravure, panel size of this picture for 4 cents (coppers or stamps).

J. F. SMITH & CO.,
Makers of "Bile Beans," St. Louis, Mo.

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own utterances; its doctrine and practice examined in the light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth 50cts; paper covers, 25cts.

STANDARD WORKS

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES.

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Association,

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. A liberal discount to dealers.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 75 cents. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive. Vol. II. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprised the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished. 25 cents each.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe. 20 cents each.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. In cloth, $1.50 each. Paper, 75 cents each.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pages, 75 cents.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance. Bound in one volume. In cloth, 589 pages, $1.00.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. 25 cents each.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' LETTERS on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper, 85 cents.

Hon. Thurlow Weed on the Morgan Abduction. This is the legally attested statement of this eminent Christian journalist and statesman concerning the unlawful seizure and confinement of Capt. Morgan in Canandaigua jail, his removal to Fort Niagara and subsequent drowning in Lake Ontario. 5 cents each.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a LEAGUE WITH THE DEVIL. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason. 15 cents each.

Freemasonry Self-Condemed. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church. Paper covers, price, 20 cents each.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each.

Anti-masonic Sermons and Addresses. Composed of "Masonry a Work of Darkness;" the Sermons of Messrs. Cross, William M'Nary, Dow and Sarver, the two addresses of President Blanchard, and the addresses of President H. H. George, Prof. J. G. Carson and Rev. M. S. Drury; "Thirteen Reasons Why a Christian cannot be a Freemason," "Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion," and "Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate?" 287 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the INITIATE. By Rev. L. A. Post. 5 cents each.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper cover, 35 cents.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin trials. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each.

Stearns's Inquiry into the Nature AND TENDENCY OF FREEMASONRY. 338 pages. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor United Presbyterian church. 5 cents each.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 DEGREES OF FREEMASONRY. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. 10 cents each.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void; OR FREEMASONRY SELF-CONVICTED. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. 207 pages. Postpaid, 40 cents each.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian), a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. 15 cents each.

Judge Whitney's Defense before THE GRAND LODGE OF ILLINOIS. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. H. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each.

Masonic Salvation, as taught by its standard authors. This pamphlet is a compilation from standard Masonic works, in proof of the following proposition: Freemasonry claims to be a religion that saves men from all sin, and purifies them for heaven. 111 pages, price, postpaid, 20 cents.

Freemasonry at a Glance illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the first three degrees. Paper cover, 32 pages. Single copy, six cents.

Masonic Outrages. Compiled by Rev. H. H. Hinman. Showing Masonic assault on lives of seceders, on reputation, and on free speech; its interference with justice in courts, etc. Postpaid, 20 cents.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret Societies. A most convincing argument against fellowshipping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each.

FARM NOTES.

SHEEP CENSUS OF THE WORLD.—According to the estimates of a London firm, which has been busy gathering statistics on the subject, the sheep of the world number 521,153,217, distributed as follows: Europe (excluding Turkey) and North America, 233,269,321; Australia, 97,893,896; River Plata district and Brazil, 92,000,000; Cape of Good Hope and Natal, 16,000,000; Sandwich and Falkland Islands, 500,000; Turkish Empire, Greece, Roumania, Persia, North Africa and Russia in Asia, 87,000,000; west coast of South America, Central America and Mexico, 4,500,000.

THE VALUE OF MANURE.—Every soil cultivator is more or less interested in this subject, albeit very few study it properly. Though no correct estimate of the value of manure can be made, yet Prof. Lawes furnishes an estimate that is probably as correct, on the average, as can be arrived at. He gives the value of manure from cottonseed meal at about $28 per ton; linseed meal, $20; beans, $16; clover hay, $10; corn meal $7; straw, $4, and turnips, $1. The value of the manure depends not only upon the food, but also upon the condition of the animal that makes it, and hence the latter should be duly considered in making estimates.

POTATOES IN YOUNG ORCHARDS.—Many oppose the idea, but a writer in the Cultivator thinks there is no particular objection to cropping a young orchard with potatoes. Newly set trees are entitled to the best cultivation, and they are more likely to get it with a hoe and cultivated crop. In this way, too, weeds may be extirpated, so that when the trees get into bearing, and it may be necessary to seed and manure on the surface to induce fruitfulness, the orchard may be almost made into a lawn. A well-tilled potato crop will not injure the trees, provided it be remembered in cultivating that a hill of potatoes is not to be saved at the expense of the trees.

THE BEST GRASS FOR HAY.—Many farmers differ on this question. An Eastern contemporary pertinently observes that some authorities wisely recommend a mixture of clover, timothy, and red top, but spoil their advice by giving as a reason that these three contain the elements of nutrition in better proportion than either alone. So far as food elements are concerned, good clover hay contains more and in better proportion than either of the others. It improves them, but they only improve it by way of change, and in making the clover easier to cure. If clover has not been allowed to heat or get wet, it is a first-class hay alone. But heating makes it dusty, and this dust shows the destruction of many of its most valuable qualities.—New York Witness.

KEEP UP THE FERTILITY.—In a paper read before the West Michigan Farmers' Club, Mr. S. S. Bailey declares that the main elements with which it appears necessary to supply the soil are nitrogen, potash and phosphoric acid. These elements have almost a fixed value the world over—soluble nitrogen at 16 cents per pound, and phosphoric acid at 8 cents. Experiments have shown that $366 worth of these fertilizers is removed in $500 worth of hay that is sold. In the same value of corn, $180 worth of fertilizer; of wheat, $125 worth; of wool, $50 worth; of dairy products, $38 worth; while in $500 worth of fruit sold there is even less loss than the loss sustained in the sale of dairy products. Thus, fruit-growing returns the greatest profits in the least depletion of fertilizer. If wisely conducted the direct profits from sales are equal to if not greater than those of any other system of agriculture. These figures are instructive, and certainly present strong arguments in favor of fruit culture and dairy husbandry as compared with other branches of rural industry.

The earlier symptoms of dyspepsia, such as distress after eating, heartburn, and occasional headaches, should not be neglected. Take Hood's Sarsaparilla if you wish to be cured of dyspepsia.

$10,000 FOUND IN AN ASH BARREL.

A New York rag-picker is reported to have found $10,000 in greenbacks in an ash barrel. This was a rare piece of good luck, but how much more fortunate is the sufferer from consumption who learns that, although the doctors may have pronounced his case hopeless, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will cure him. Consumption is a scrofulous disease of the lungs. The "Discovery," which is the most potent blood-purifier of the age, strikes right at the root of the evil and there is no resisting it, if taken in time and given a fair trial. In the cure of all scrofulous and other blood taints, no matter from what cause arising, scalp diseases, old sores and swellings, it absolutely has no equal.

Thoroughly cleanse and enrich the blood, by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and good digestion, a fair skin, buoyant spirits and bodily vigor and health will be established.

For Weak Lungs, Spitting of Blood, Shortness of Breath, Bronchitis, Asthma, Severe Coughs, and kindred affections, it is an efficient remedy.

"Golden Medical Discovery" is the only blood and lung remedy, sold by druggists, and guaranteed by its manufacturers, to do all that it is claimed to accomplish, or money paid for it will be promptly refunded.

WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, Manufacturers, No. 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

$500 OFFERED for an incurable case of Catarrh in the Head by the proprietors of DR. SAGE'S CATARRH REMEDY.

SYMPTOMS OF CATARRH.—Headache, obstruction of nose, discharges falling into throat, sometimes profuse, watery, and acrid, at others, thick, tenacious, mucous, purulent, bloody and putrid; eyes weak, ringing in ears, deafness, difficulty of clearing throat, expectoration of offensive matter; breath offensive; smell and taste impaired, and general debility. Only a few of these symptoms likely to be present at once. Thousands of cases result in consumption, and end in the grave.

By its mild, soothing, antiseptic, cleansing, and healing properties, Dr. Sage's Remedy cures the worst cases. This infallible remedy does not, like the poisonous irritating snuffs, "creams" and strong caustic solutions with which the public have long been humbugged, simply palliate for a short time, or drive the disease to the lungs, as there is danger of doing in the use of such nostrums, but it produces perfect and permanent cures of the worst cases of Chronic Catarrh, as thousands can testify. "Cold in the Head" is cured with a few applications. Catarrhal Headache is relieved and cured as if by magic. It removes offensive breath, loss or impairment of the sense of taste, smell or hearing, watering or weak eyes, and impaired memory, when caused by the violence of Catarrh, as they all frequently are. By druggists, 50 cents.

THERE ARE MANY USES FOR SAPOLIO.

To clean tombstones. To renew oil-cloth. To renovate paint. To brighten metals.
To polish knives. To scrub floors. To wash out sinks. To scour bath-tubs.
To clean dishes. To whiten marble. To remove rust. To scour kettles.

EVERYBODY USES IT.

Dentists to clean false teeth. Engineers to clean parts of machines. Housemaids to scrub marble floors.
Surgeons to polish their instruments. Ministers to renovate old chapels. Chemists to remove some stains.
Confectioners to scour their pans. Sextons to clean the tombstones. Carvers to sharpen their knives.
Mechanics to brighten their tools. Hostlers on brasses and white horses. Shrodd ones to scour old straw hats.
Cooks to clean the kitchen sink. Artists to clean their palettes. Soldiers to brighten their arms.
Painters to clean off surfaces. Wheelmen to clean bicycles. Renovators to clean carpets.

EVERY ONE FINDS A NEW USE.

KNIGHT TEMPLARISM ILLUSTRATED.

A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $3.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50c; $4.00 per dozen. Furnished in any quantities at.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS ILLUSTRATED.

By a Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00. Address the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 211 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REMARKABLE OFFER!

Nearly everyone is familiar with the name, but it has been estimated that only one in every two hundred and eighty persons in the United States is fortunate enough to have access to the valuable information contained within the covers of the grandest work ever written by mortal man.

Webster's

UNABRIDGED DICTIONARY.

That this is an unfortunate state of affairs will be admitted by all, and it is due to the fact that no one save the rich could afford them.

The Dictionary is a necessity in every home, school and business house. It fills a vacancy and furnishes knowledge which no one hundred volumes of the choicest books could supply, and all young or old, educated or ignorant, rich or poor should have it within reach and refer to its contents every day in the year.

The Loomis reprint contains all the matter as compiled and arranged by our esteemed and honored author and statesman,

NOAH WEBSTER.

About forty years of his life was devoted to this great work, and when we consider the fact that this book contains about 100,000 words, we will appreciate that these years must have been well spent.

Some idea of the magnitude of this book may be gained from the fact that it contains over 440 cubic inches of paper and has about 300,000 square inches of printed surface.

In addition to the 100,000 words it contains a portrait of the author, together with his biography and a valuable table of 12,000 synonymous words.

By special arrangement with the publishers, we are permitted to furnish this valuable volume: 1st. To any subscriber to our paper; 2nd. To any renewal subscription; and 3rd. To any person who has paid a full year's subscription within the past six months, on receipt of $1.50 for the paper one year, and two dollars and seventy-five cents to cover express charges, packing, etc., of the Dictionary.

Address

CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

An Unequaled Triumph. An agency business where talking is unnecessary. Here are portraits of Miss Anna Page of Austin, Texas, and Mr. John Bonn of Toledo, Ohio. The lady writes: "I do business at almost every house I visit. Every one wants your grand photographic album, and were I deaf and dumb I could secure orders rapidly." The man writes: "Your magnificent album is the greatest of all bargains; the people generally are wonderful struck and order at sight. The orders taken last week pay me a profit of over $100." This is the chance you have been looking for. You can make from $25 to $50 and upwards every day of your life. Talk not necessary. You can make big money even though you don't say a word. Our new style album is the grandest success ever known, and the greatest bargain in the world. Double size—the largest made. Bound in richest, most elegant and artistic manner, in finest silk velvet plush. Bindings splendidly ornamented. Inside charmingly decorated with most beautiful flowers. It is a regular $10 album, but it is sold to the people for only $2. How can we do it? It is the greatest hit of the times, we are manufacturing 500,000, and are satisfied with a profit of a few cents on each. Agents wanted. Any one can become a successful agent. Extra liberal terms to agents. We publish a great variety of Bibles and testaments, also subscription books and periodicals. Agents wanted for all. Our agents are always successful. We do the largest business with agents in America, and can give larger value for the money and better terms than any other firm. Particulars and terms for all of above mailed free. Write at once and see for yourself. Address H. HALLETT & Co., Box 999, Portland, Maine.

PATENTS

Obtained, and all PATENT BUSINESS attended to for MODERATE FEES. Our office is opposite the U. S. Patent Office, and we can obtain Patents in less time than those remote from WASHINGTON. Send MODEL, DRAWING or PHOTO of invention. We advise as to patent ability free of charge and we make NO CHARGE UNLESS PATENT IS SECURED.

For circular, advice, terms and references to actual clients in your own State, County, City or Town, write to

C. A. SNOW & CO.

Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

THE BROKEN SEAL;

Or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan.

By Samuel D. Greene.

One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $4.00. This deeply interesting narrative shows what Masonry has done and is capable of doing in the Courts, and how bad men control the good men in the lodge and protect their own members when guilty of great crimes. For sale at 211 W. Madison St., Chicago, by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—U. S. Government Report, Aug. 17, 1889.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

COUNTRY.

One hundred and fifty quarrymen of Lockport, Ill., organized a procession Wednesday, and marching to the Joliet quarries, compelled the men there to quit work. The sheriff formed a posse and intercepted them, and a fight ensued, but in which no one was injured. Eight of the men, including the leader, were arrested.

Benjamin Newgass, of London, England, presented the proposition to the Louisiana legislature Wednesday of paying $1,250,000 annually to the State, with security, for the lottery privileges now asked for by the Louisiana Lottery Company.

Tuesday the anniversary of the battle of Bunker Hill was celebrated at Boston by a general suspension of business for the day.

On Monday Geo. S. Wayze, a colored Republican and former member of the Louisiana legislature, and at the time of his death, a Custom House officer at New Orleans, was lynched at Feliciana, La. He made enemies in that place in the 1876 campaign, and was warned from the parish. Monday he returned for the first time and was murdered.

Commencement exercises at Kalamazoo College, Kalamazoo, Mich., Monday, were marked by the absence of a graduating class, owing to suspensions having been made for hazing. The trustees of the college have finally concluded to invite the entire faculty to remain another year, but at salaries reduced 20 per cent, owing to the loss in revenue occasioned by the withdrawal of nearly the entire body of students this spring.

Monday Thomas Toler, a farmer of Danville, Ill., said he would be obliged to leave the locality where he lived on account of persecutions of enemies. June 6 his home was burned to the ground, and on Monday his new abode, together with all his furniture, was destroyed by a second incendiary fire.

While thousands of people were at Fairview Park, near Indianapolis, Ind., a rain and sand storm sprang up. As many as could sought shelter in the depot, which is being erected by the electric street road. It was blown down and a dozen people injured, five fatally.

Seven Minneapolis census enumerators have been arrested on charges of padding the returns. The charges are preferred by St. Paul citizens, who claim that the names of dogs and other animals have been enrolled in order to swell the population of their rival.

A cyclone and cloud burst in the southern part of Lee county and the northern part of LaSalle county, Ill., wrought terrible havoc. The cyclone occurred about five miles northwest of Earlville at 4 o'clock Friday afternoon, resulting in thirteen persons being killed and a number of barns and houses destroyed. The storm came from the southwest and swooped down on Field's school house, a new building three miles south of Paw Paw, and tore it to pieces. An eye witness says the building was raised, revolving rapidly, several hundred feet into the air, and at a height of five hundred feet was torn asunder with a loud report. The building contained the school teacher and seven of her scholars, all of whom were killed. They had remained in the school house to await the ending of the storm. The others went home and were unhurt.

FOREIGN.

The agreement between England and Germany in regard to Africa concedes to England a few unimportant areas and gives Germany in return the prize of Haligoland, in the German Ocean, which the English have held since the accession of the House of Hanover. Germany has always felt sore at the presence of a foreign flag so near her shore. The island will be strongly fortified, and will be made a German naval station.

In consequence of the outbreak of cholera in Spain the government of Turkey has established a quarantine against all vessels arriving from Spanish ports.

The News' Berlin correspondent says: "The St. Petersburg police have discovered a wide-spread conspiracy against the Czar's life. The Imperial Palace at Gatschina has been undermined. The guards at all the palaces have been doubled. Several arrests have been made."

Henry M. Stanley has been tendered and has accepted the Governor Generalship of the Congo Free State. He will not enter upon his duties until the beginning of 1891 unless he should be called upon to assume them earlier by King Leopold. After his marriage, Stanley will proceed to the United States, where he will remain until summoned to enter office.

It is reported from Victoria, British Columbia, that one schooner has gone to fish for seals in Behring Sea, and that others will soon follow. Owners of the vessels expect protection from the British war ship, Amphion, and hints are thrown out that there may be a fight between the latter and some of Uncle Sam's cruisers.

10,000

Another ten thousand edition of the tract,

KILLED, AND NO INQUEST.

This is a large 4-page tract at 30 cents per pound, 15 cents for half pound, and 10 cents for a third of a pound. It is an illustrated account of the death of Rev. J. W. Johnston, while being initiated by the officers of Huntington Lodge, W. Va., in January of this year. Sent postpaid at the above price. Address,

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St Chicago

The Most Reliable Food For Infants & Invalids. Not a medicine, but a specially prepared Food, adapted to the weakest stomach. 4 sizes cans. Pamphlet free. Woolrich & Co. (on every label), Palmer, Mass.

KEYSTONE MORTGAGE COMPANY. Aberdeen, S. Dak., offers guaranteed 7 per cent Farm Mortgages, Electric and Gas Bonds, Bank and other dividend paying stocks. Address us for particulars. Eastern Office, 1328 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

THE FORSYTH COMBINATION RUG AND EMBROIDERY MACHINE is far superior to anything of the kind now in use. Beautiful new designs for Rug and embroidery patterns. Big inducements to agents. Catalogue and price list sent free. THE FORSYTH MFG. CO., 234 Dearborn st., Chicago.

WHEATON COLLEGE,
WHEATON, ILL.

FALL TERM BEGINS IN SEPTEMBER.

A College for Men and Women.
For Catalogue address with stamp.
C. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

Our High Grade List and Bargain Book sent to any address on receipt of a 2-c stamp.

LORD & THOMAS,
NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING
45 RANDOLPH STREET,
CHICAGO.

Its superior excellence proven in millions of homes for more than a quarter of a century. It is used by the United States Government. Endorsed by the heads of the Great Universities as the Strongest, Purest and most Healthful. Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder does not contain Ammonia, Lime, or Alum. Sold only in Cans. PRICE BAKING POWDER CO. NEW YORK. CHICAGO. ST. LOUIS.

Puget Sound catechism and its chief city SEATTLE, WASHINGTON Send stamp to Eshelman, Llewellyn & Co., Seattle, Wash.

AGENTS WANTED Ladies or Gents. Old reliable house Permanent business. Quick sales. Valuable Sample Free. Rare chance. F. M. Brooks, Secretary, 821 Broadway, N. Y.

BABY CARRIAGES!

I make a specialty of manufacturing Baby Carriages to sell direct to private parties. You can therefore, do better with me than with a dealer. Carriages Delivered Free of Charge to all points in the United States. Send for Illustrated Catalogue. CHAS. RAISER, Mfr., 62-64 Clybourn Ave., Chicago, Ill.

I CURE FITS!

When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. H. G. ROOT, M. C., 183 Pearl St. New York.

SEE THIS!

The latest, most complete edition.

Over 235 choice

Reform Songs for the Times.

Only 30c a copy, or 20c by the 100.

—AND—

"THE TOBACCO MANIA."
$1 per 100.

For sale here and by the author,
GEO. W. CLARK,
76 W. Montcalm St., Detroit, Mich.

Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees. Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington. Send model, drawing or photo., with description. We advise, if patentable or not, free of charge. Our fee not due till patent is secured. A Pamphlet, "How to Obtain Patents," with names of actual clients in your State, county, or town, sent free. Address,

C. A. SNOW & CO.
Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

BIRNEY.

The sketch of JAMES G. BIRNEY candidate of the Liberty Party for President, in pamphlet for 25 cents. A limited number of copies of this handsome pamphlet for sale at the N. C. A. office

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

THE CHRISTIAN CONFERENCE

—ON THE—

Secret Lodge System.

The Proceedings of the late Christian Conference, containing the addresses of Joseph Cook, Drs. Goodwin, Wallace, Mc Dill, Col. Clarke and others, is now ready in a handsome pamphlet of 130 pages. It is one of the very best documents ever issued on the lodge question. The price was advertised at 15 cents, but the actual cost of publication was 20 cents, and of mailing 5 cents, making total cost 25 cents.

It will, however, be sent postpaid for 15 cents.

Only those who are able and willing need send more.

THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
W. I. PHILLIPS, Pub'r and Treas.,
221 West Madison St.,
Chicago, Ill.

PATRIARCHS MILITANT ILLUSTRATED

THE COMPLETE RITUAL

With Eighteen Military Diagrams

As Adopted and Promulgated by the

SOVEREIGN GRAND LODGE

OF THE

INDEPENDENT ORDER OF ODD-FELLOWS

At Baltimore, Maryland, Sept. 24th, 1885.

Compiled and Arranged by John C. Underwood,
Lieutenant General.

ALSO AN

Historical Sketch and Introduction

By Pres't J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College

25 cents each.

For Sale by the National Christian Association

221 W. Madison St., Chicago

A WOMAN'S VICTORY:

OR

THE QUERY OF THE LODGEVILLE CHURCH,

BY JENNIE L. HARDIE.

This simple and touching story is worth reading by every Anti-mason—and especially BY HIS WIFE. Get it and take it home to cheer the heart of your companion who may desire to do something for Christ against great evils, but is discouraged from making any public effort. PRICE, FIFTEEN CENTS. Ten for a dollar

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison Street, Chicago

HELPS TO BIBLE STUDY

With Practical Notes on the Books of Scripture.

Designed for Ministers, Local Preachers, S. Teachers, and all Christian Workers.

Chapter I.—Different Methods of Bible Study.
Chapter II.—Rules of Interpretation.
Chapter III.—Interpretations of Bible Types and Symbols.
Chapter IV.—Analysis of the books of the Bible.
Chapter V.—Miscellaneous Helps.
Cloth, 184 pages, price postpaid, 50 cents.
Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

THE ODD-FELLOWS ILLUSTRATED.

The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encarnated and Rebekah (Ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President Blanchard. The ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover, 50 cents; per dozen $4.00. All orders promptly filled by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison street, Chicago

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XXII., No. 42.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JULY 3, 1890.

WHOLE No. 1,053.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.

Address all letters for publication to EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, CHICAGO. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Address all business letters to the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION as above. Make all drafts and money orders payable to the Treasurer, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address on Cynosure list always give the former address.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill., as Second Class Matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:	NEW ENGLAND LETTER..... 4
Notes and Comments..... 1	WASHINGTON LETTER..... 5
An Important Meeting..... 8	CORRESPONDENCE:
The Moody Institute..... 8	Covenanters and the Pro-
The Bible in Schools..... 8	hibition party; Nation-
Personal Notes..... 9	al Correspondence..... 5
CONTRIBUTIONS:	LITERATURE..... 6
Work, a Christian's Obligation..... 1	OBITUARY..... 7
True Charity..... 2	THE N. C. A..... 7
As I View it..... 2	LECTURE LIST..... 7
SELECTED:	THE HOME..... 10
Secrecy in Africa..... 2	TEMPERANCE..... 11
Worse than the Plagues of Egypt..... 3	RELIGIOUS NEWS..... 11
Swedish Masonry..... 3	BIBLE LESSON..... 12
THE N. C. A.	IN BRIEF..... 13
By-laws..... 3	BUSINESS..... 13
Board Meeting..... 4	HOME AND HEALTH..... 14
Treasurer's Report..... 4	FARM NOTES..... 15
	NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 16
	MARKETS..... 16

A FRIENDLY AND CONFIDENTIAL TALK

WITH THE CYNOSURE READERS.

After twenty years serving you as assistant editor, the N. C. A. Board have asked me to take in addition the business management of the Cynosure. This they did to relieve the pressure of work upon other officers of the Association, and tide over an emergency which is explained elsewhere.

You will understand this emergency by examining the treasurer's report, which shows that the expense of maintaining agents has not been met during the past year, nor probably for several years past. The Cynosure has drawn upon the general funds for near $100. The year before the balance was somewhat the other way. You will note the fact with some satisfaction that the paper is practically able to pay its editors, compositors, printing bills, etc. We do not need to discuss the payment of our agents by subscriptions. It is generally much easier for them to collect from the field in this way.

But the fact is before us that we must renew our former enthusiasm and willingness to sacrifice for the cause if we maintain our meager agencies and enlarge only moderately upon them. In the old convention days when we met at Pittsburgh, Oberlin, Galesburg, Monmouth, the reform was new, we were all eager, sanguine, ready for self-denials. With the passing of years we have settled somewhat into the ruts. Some have grown weary with the length of the way. Many good men and women, our loved leaders and counselors, God has taken home, where they see the victory more clearly than we. Now God's providence plainly calls us to renew the battle in the name of our Great Captain and Saviour.

One question God would have us answer is,

How to raise the $20,000 needed this year to carry on the work.

Let us, dear friends, in the new business relation now begun between us, see what the Cynosure can do toward this good work. There are now nine persons engaged on the paper as editors, regular contributors, compositors and clerks. It requires some $4,500 for the under pay they get. The agents will take, if they raise full pay, $1,800 worth of subscriptions. With a subscription list several times as great as at present, this expense would not be increased more than $200 or $300; and with a list of TEN THOUSAND the increased bills for printing and mailing would yet bring the outlay within $11,000 or $12,000 at most. And with such a list the Cynosure would bring into the N. C. A. treasury at least $5,000.

Now the point I wish to impress is, that in no way can this amount be raised more easily and at the same time profitably for our cause; for the very evident reason that you would every one of you have the privilege of doing something for Christ in this reform, while you may not be able to make public addresses or contribute to the general fund. Every man, woman and child can be an agent for the Cynosure and get a blessing in the work.

Next week I wish to talk with you about the enlargement from another and even better point of view than this. But, meanwhile, let us all begin first with prayer to God, and re-consecration to this holy cause; and as we pray let us plan together for its setting forward: and although the heated term is on us let us use every occasion to secure a new name for the list, and not be satisfied if the week passes without some success in this effort.

Yours for Christ and his kingdom,

HENRY L. KELLOGG.

The school board at Edgerton, Wisconsin, seem to be men of the old martyr spirit. Like Peter they prefer to obey God rather than man (Acts 5: 29) and have therefore retained the reading of the Bible in the public schools of the town. It was here the struggle with Romanism began, which finally resulted in the widely and justly condemned decision of the Supreme Court of the State declaring the Bible a sectarian book, and putting it out of the schools of Wisconsin. Suit was brought some two years since or more, at the instigation of Romish priests, to force the Word of God out of the schools of Edgerton. The lower courts held for the Bible, and it was left for the Supreme Court to lay the cap-stone of folly. But the Edgerton board believed it better to stand by the Word of God than to obey the word of man, until the sheriff of the county has been called on to forcibly cast out the offending book. This reads like a sarcasm on free America.

Mr. Moody has successfully inaugurated some new ideas of a practical nature in theological training, and there seems no less probability that he will infuse some ideas into the ordinary college curriculum that may revolutionize it. Just now he is presiding over a World's Conference of Christian College students—he, a man without education in the schools, and whose grammar is often mixed. But over four hundred delegates from a hundred American colleges are coming to Northfield at his invitation, and the leading European universities are also to be represented. Mr. Moody knows the latent power in these young people, and how much the world may depend on them in a few years. Major Whittle, Dr. Pentecost, Prof. Townsend of Boston, Prof. Weidner of Augustana and others are to aid in this great conference. With such men the testimony of the Christian church against the God-defying lodges should not be neglected. It was at Northfield the student's volunteer missionary movement began. That remarkable work has now enlisted 5,000 young men and women for the missionary field. Why should not this stream of intelligence, enthusiasm and piety be turned against organized paganism in America?

The passage of the bill by the United States Senate to establish the free coinage of silver by which 212 grains of that metal shall have the precise monetary value of 28 grains of gold is an attempt to regulate the prices of the world by the legislation of a single nation. Gold and silver are commercial commodities, whose value in the markets of the world are regulated by the law of supply and demand. So long as 212 grains of silver are not the commercial equivalent of 28 grains of gold, no legislative enactment can make them so; though they may compel a creditor to receive them at the nominal value in discharge of a debt. Nor will the great multiplication of cheap dollars make them more valuable. The tendency will be just in the opposite direction. There was far less objection to the original plan of Mr. Windom, to receive silver bullion at its market value and issue certificates to be used as money, or even in the House bill, which provided for free coinage whenever the price of silver should advance to the nominal standard. Should this measure ever become a law, which is very improbable, it will help to precipitate a silver crisis, which will be only less disastrous than that caused by the paper inflation of 1836.

WORK, A CHRISTIAN'S OBLIGATION.

BY REV. J. F. AVERY, MARINER'S TEMPLE, N. Y.

To work out our own salvation is the privilege and duty of the saved. The fact that the night cometh should urge to activity. We do well to remember that there is a ritualism in religion that leads to spiritual lethargy. True faith never tends to paralysis of nerve or will. To dare, to do or die, is the Christian's motto when the Master's call is heard. Some Christians can never find anything to do. They grant that the harvest is great, the fields are white, the laborers few. They are ready to do some great thing. But in all honesty they remind us of the man who did not care about the work; it was the pay-day he said he wanted. To a sympathizer he thus truthfully expressed himself: "Yes, ma'am; I'm always out of work, but it's all my wretched luck."

"How is that, poor man?"

"It's this way. In the winter I feel like mowing lawns, and in the summer I just actually crave to shovel snow, and nature continually balks me. Have you such a thing as a pie in the house?"

Francis Osgood thus poetically writes of work:

Labor is life!
'Tis the still water faileth.
Idleness ever despaireth, bewaileth.
Keep the watch wound, or the dark rust assaileth.
Flowers droop and die in the stillness of noon.
Labor is glory!
The flying cloud lightens;
Only the waving wing changes and brightens.
Idle hearts only the dark future frightens.
Play the sweet keys wouldst thou keep them in tune.

Remember, God's greatness flows around our incompleteness. Give battle; the truly brave can so fight and work that circumstances must yield. Ignatius Loyola is reported to have said: "At the command of the Pope I would embark on a mission for any shore in a vessel without rudder, sails, mast or stores."

Work and obligation to work for Jesus is a privilege. Let us seize our opportunities. Napoleon said, "Impossible is a fool's adjective." It is certain if we heed the Bible, we, as Christians, must strike it out of our vocabulary. There is a royal road to success if we follow Jesus, but it must be by the Calvary of self-denial.

Strange how lazy, do-nothing Christians can toil at doing nothing, or worse, at mischief! They cannot work for Jesus. But they can dance attendance on the world and its demands. It has been said such dancing has a tendency to drain off all intellectual and spiritual life at the heels. We don't wonder that an American Chinaman, Wah Sam Lung, in the Golden Rule, should express surprise that frail girls who cannot walk a half mile to the dry-goods store, much less to church, can dance thirteen miles and a half in one night. A road a quarter of a mile in length, leading to the prayer meeting, would appall them; but a single dance, six times as long, has no terrors for them. They could not be induced to go once a week to the mission school, three-quarters of a mile from home, "it is too far away," but a polka, three quarters of a mile long, is quite within their powers.

TRUE CHARITY.

IT IS NOT THAT OF THE LODGE.

BY JOSEPHINE SHAW LOWELL.

The parent "Society for the Organization of Charity" was established in London in 1869, by some of the most intelligent men and women of that great metropolis, who had had much experience in work among the poor, and who had come to the conclusion that some system of co-operation was a necessity among those who were all alike seeking to relieve the great suffering among the poor of London, but who were all working at cross purposes, knowing nothing practically of each other's labors, nothing of each other's efforts, and so, too often, interfering with and counteracting each other's best work. To quote from its own statement, "the London Charity Organization Society was established to bring about co-operation between the administrators of charitable relief and the poor law authorities, and amongst the various charities, and to render charitable relief effectual toward its most important object, the cure, as distinguished from the mere alleviation of distress."

"Co-operation and the cure of distress," or rather "co-operation for the sake of curing distress" are the watchwords of similar societies throughout the world.

The London Society divided its monstrous territory into districts, and opened an office in each, which was placed under a local committee, and which was, to quote again, "an inquiry office at the service alike of the poor who needed assistance, and of those who desired to assist them," and it was "a first principle of the society to work purely in the public interest, reserving no privileges for subscribers, and taking equal pains to obtain suitable assistance for cases of distress, in whatever way they may have come under its notice."

The London Society has been the model upon which all the others, numbering 112 in Great Britain and the United States, have been formed, with more or less accuracy.

The first society established in this country was at Buffalo in 1877, where the Rev. Mr. Gurten, a former member of the London Society, found, upon settling in the city as pastor of one of the Episcopal churches, dire confusion and extravagance in relief giving, both public and private, and consequent widespread demoralization among the poor. Mr. Gurten inaugurated one great advance over the practice of the London Society in establishing the Buffalo Charity Organization Society—that is, the Society bound itself by its constitution to give no relief from its own funds, on the ground that what was needed in Buffalo was not "more" relief, but more "charity"—more wisdom, that is, in the administration of such relief as was to be given; and that the new society could better bring about co-operation among existing societies, and work more effectually for the cure of distress and the diminution and destruction of pauperism, were it unhampered by relief-giving functions.

The Philadelphia and Boston Societies followed in 1878 and 1879, and these two societies laid great stress upon another point almost entirely neglected by the London Society; that is, upon finding for each family who have sunk so low as to ask for relief, at least one friend, who shall go to them, not to carry alms, but sympathy, hope, courage; in short, brains and character. These societies proved that the only sure way to cure distress was to remove the cause of the distress, and that only personal help could do this.

New York.

AS I VIEW IT.

BY REV. H. H. HINMAN.

This is the brief preface to many opinions, some of which are wise and some otherwise. Men differ in their views: first, because of a wrong standpoint; and secondly, for want of light.

Three blind men went to see the elephant. One found him to be like a tree. He had reached and clasped one of his legs. Another found him like a fan. He had gotten hold of his ear. The third was sure he was like a rope, for he felt of his flexible trunk. Each had a little truth, but they differed widely from each other, and their conclusions were very inadequate and misleading. They had not had light, nor had they seen the animal from any standpoint.

This is true in numberless instances. The slaveholder saw no wrong in the system of slavery, simply because he never looked at it from a purely Christian standpoint. He was continually in his own light, and his selfishness blinded him. What was so plain to others, as to be self-evident, made no impression on his mind or his conscience. It was needful for him to be lifted out of himself before he could see the truth.

The same is true of the spirit of caste. To the unperverted mind there is no difference in the nature of caste, whether in India or America. In India we hold that character is everything and caste nothing, but here in the South the reverse of this is held to be true. A pure-minded Christian of dark skin may not sit at the Lord's table with his paler brother. What we condemn as abominable heathenism in Asia, we regard as quite appropriate in America. The truth is that men have not looked at this matter in the light of the teachings of Christ. As they view it, it is all right, but they have never viewed it from a Christian standpoint.

The same is true of the secret lodge system. Viewed from a worldly and selfish standpoint it is quite respectable. Some (not many) eminent men have been Freemasons. Looked at simply in the light of human example there is much to say in its favor. When a worldly and selfish man is told that its whole spirit and teachings are selfish, its oaths are unreasonable and profane, and that its religion dishonors the Lord Jesus Christ, he cares nothing. This is in harmony with his principles and his life. As he views it, it is all right. He has never looked at it from a Christian standpoint. He could not do so if he would, for he has no comprehension of the spirit and nature of Christianity.

The "Christian" Mason shuts his eyes to some of these things and swallows the system because others have done so. If ever you can get him to look at it from the standpoint of Christ, and as one who walks with him, he will at once forsake it. It all depends on how he looks at it!

But not only a right standpoint, but a full light is needful in order that we may see the truth. Many honest minds are greatly in the wrong through ignorance. "My people are destroyed through lack of knowledge." Not all those who array themselves against the investigation of the lodge system do so from a perverse spirit. They mean to look at all questions from a purely Christian point of view. If they resist the truth it is because they suppose it to be error. They are innocently deceived. The excellent Christian women who oppose all agitation of the lodge question do so because they do not know, and dare not believe, that Masonry, as revealed, is the Masonry that is practiced by their fathers and brothers. Their very piety and Christian affection has blinded their eyes. It is difficult to tell the whole truth to such persons, but assuredly the light will come, and they that walk in the light will be found arrayed against every form of iniquity.

Berea, Ky.

SECRECY IN AFRICA.

Some years ago, while Mr. Hadley and I were laboring as missionaries in the Sherbro country, West Africa, we kept a mission day-school in the main room of our mission residence near the town of Shengay. A goodly number of the children of the town attended the school. The chapel in our mission yard was so badly eaten by the bug-a-bugs that it was not safe for school or chapel services, and fell to the ground one morning with a crash just before the hour for morning prayers that Bro. Williams, of precious memory, observed with the laboring men, although it looked too unsafe for any one to enter.

The work of the school fell to my charge, as Mr. Hadley was much afflicted; and he and Bro. Williams attended to the Sabbath services and other pressing duties of the station. Matters went on quite well for some time with our school, until all at once it came to a full stop—a teacher and no scholars. Were they intent on quitting school?

One day while this query was in our minds, one of the mission boatmen was wounded in the ankle by a fish while trying to get a boat ashore, and we were called upon to see the man and found him in great agony, rolling on the ground. As I was administering some medicine to the wound, a strange sight met my view. On a log near by sat a number of my school boys in full Purroh dress, which clearly answered our query and settled the fact in our minds, that those children were members of the Purroh secret society, a heathen organization. Their heads were shaved and their almost naked bodies were highly perfumed and anointed, and some of them carried curious Purroh sticks in their hands. The children greeted me with smiles and how-do, as soon as I saw them, but my heart was too sad to give a reply. After my return to the mission house, they came into the yard and sent a message that they wished to tell us how-do, as they, no doubt, thought we surely would honor them, as Purroh boys. We did not grant them the privilege to see us then; but when their hair had grown out, they came back to the mission in their common school dress, headed by the oldest boy, Willie Caulker, son of Chief George Caulker, now deceased, and took their seats in the school room as usual.

After the school was opened, they were called upon to say why they had gone away with the Purroh men who steal, drink and do many other wicked things, and quit the mission school which teaches them to be good children and follow Jesus. In a quick and earnest way, Willie Caulker arose and said: "Please, mam, do not your people in America have secret societies and belong to them and be Christians, too? And then one white man, a missionary, what come to this country, want to be Purroh man, too."

With such words he gave me and my people a blow that made me quail before him, as I knew his words were true of secret societies in America. And alas! my own church was not free from the wily invasions of these secret orders, when we came to Africa in 1866. We also learned the boy was right about the white man, and instructed the children not to follow the Purroh, but seek to be true Christians.

This incident so awakened me on the secrecy question that I wrote out my experience and a few plain thoughts for the Religious Telescope, but I never forwarded it to the publishing house at Dayton, Ohio.

Daniel F. Wilberforce, in his account of his country and people, says: "Organized societies are found among the tribes throughout the West Coast. Among the Sherbros, the Purroh is the most formidable institution. Its laws are binding on chieftain and people alike." "The Boondoo is a society for girls and women, but not as formidable as the Purroh, nor are its penalties as severe. The Yassay holds an important place. The Thomah is open to males and females." He also states "that it must be understood that, as missionaries, we oppose every institution of a heathen origin; whose workings are under cover of darkness. This fact is known to those among whom we labor." While they "may in a measure respect those views," yet they have also shown evident dislike to mission work and mission schools in some villages, during my stay in Africa, when the cry of the Purroh tried to frighten us out of our undertakings. Men and boys are sometimes carried to their "Devil Bush" and made members. Their obligations and penalties resemble those of secret orders in Christian lands.

Can it be that all heavily obligated secrecy had its birth in heathendom, and really belongs there? It surely does not belong to Christ nor to his church. Jesus said: "In secret have I said nothing," and, "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature;" and does not God "hold the wealth of the world in his hand?" or has the power of Jesus failed in heaven or earth? and the promise, "Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world," is it not good still? Secrecy, in the church at home, makes it hard for our missionaries to oppose it in Africa, as has been already shown. And what has it done for the church at home? Has it really increased her wealth and goodness, and made her more meet to win the world to Christ? Have not the seething fires of controversy on this subject increased until, like a hidden dynamite, it has made sad havoc of the church? Now, like a foundered craft on the ocean of time, she is stranded on the rocks of secrecy—broken in midship, the rudder disabled, mast and sails gone, and passengers clinging to both parts—one Liberal and the other Radical.

What a terrible disaster to our Zion! God alone knows how it will end; but we must humbly pray, "Thy will be done." Does he not say of us as of Laodicea, "I counsel thee to buy of me gold tried in the fire, that thou mayst be rich; and white raiment, that thou mayst be clothed, and that the shame of thy nakedness do not appear; and anoint thine eyes with eye salve, that thou mayst see?"

The eyes of my father were once blinded by secrecy until God opened them by a vision on a sick-bed. He seemed to be in general conference and matters went on as usual until the pending of the secrecy question, when controversy went up to a high pitch and utter confusion prevailed in the conference. God's presence overshadowed the scene and revealed to all present that secrecy was wrong, and that the young were fleeced and destroyed by it, as the wolf destroys the lamb. Father never countenanced secrecy in or out of the church afterward, but was very desirous and hopeful that the church would at some time entirely expunge the evil in general conference, as he saw it in his vision. Though he has entered his heavenly rest, his precious words led me to hope that God's holy presence would so fill all hearts at our last general conference that there would be no misgivings in any member's heart as to what would be God's will in this matter.—M. Hadley Bridgeman in the Conservator.

WORSE THAN THE PLAGUES OF EGYPT.

"Knowest thou not yet that Egypt is destroyed?" That is what Pharaoh's servants said to him when by his obstinate refusal to obey the command of God he had brought grievous plagues upon his people. And the same question may well be asked to-day of the church members who obstinately refuse to condemn by their ballots the corrupt methods of the two great parties which are ruling and ruining this noble country.

The ruin which they have brought upon us is not of a material nature like that which overtook the Egyptians of old. This country has far too great natural advantages to be destroyed by bad government; and the judgments of God do not now rebuke iniquity by imposing physical penalties as in former times. What God does now is to give over to wickedness those who deliberately choose the evil and refuse the good. He simply allows them to have their own way. And that way becomes worse and worse by a law of our spiritual nature which makes it necessary for us to go forward in some direction, either upward or downward.

This is the destruction which has already in part overtaken our land—the corruption of its conscience. Self-seeking politicians have persuaded their followers that in order to prevent things growing worse they must connive at a measure of evil. And the measure becomes larger every year; and good men learn to stretch their consciences more every year to make allowance for iniquity, provided always that it results in the success of the party which they consider the more pure, or, it may be, the less impure of the two.

And so men's consciences have become more and more demoralized till they are ready to justify almost anything that their leaders choose to do on the plea that it is necessary to be practical in politics. The meaning of this plea in plain English is that wherever principles are likely to interfere with success, they must be laid aside for the time, because success is the one thing needful.

This plea is in direct defiance of the teachings of Christ, and yet the majority of Christian men accept it as the only sensible rule to be applied to the politics of America in the present generation.—N. Y. Witness.

SWEDISH MASONRY.

In the Masonic department of the New York Dispatch there appears the following account of Masonry among the Scandinavians:

"The organization of Masonic bodies in Norway and Sweden differs materially from that of any other country. The degrees of Masonry are conferred by various bodies:

"1. The Lodge of St. John, which has control of the first three degrees.

"2. The Lodges of St. Andrew, which pass the brethren of St. John Lodges through the fourth, fifth and sixth degrees of the Scottish Masonry.

"3. The Provincial Lodges, which confer the seventh, eighth and ninth degrees.

"4. The Swedish National Grand Lodge, which not only confers the seventh, eighth, ninth and tenth degrees, but also the dignity of Knight and Komthures of Rose Croix, who are entitled to wear the insignia of the Order of Charles XIII. The head of the National Grand Lodge is the Grand Master, and all the Knights and Komthures are members of this body, which in addition is composed of the extraordinary and ordinary officials of the eighth, ninth and tenth degrees.

"The business of the Grand Lodge is conducted through three directories: 1. The directory of finance, which has charge of the finances of the order in general and authority over the works of charity. 2. The directory of the lodges, which superintends the lodges and sees that the statutes and rituals are properly observed. 3. The directory of orphanages, which controls the many orphan asylums. Masonry was introduced into Sweden from England in 1736, and was from the first under government protection. After the coronation of the Duke of Sundermannland as Charles XII, in 1780, he was elected Grand Master, and retained the office until 1811, when he was succeeded by the Crown Prince, Charles John. The 'Order of Charles XIII' was instituted in 1811 as an Order of Knighthood, and has become the highest degree of Masonry in Sweden, and as the King is the Master of that order, he is consequently the Grand Master of Masons in the kingdom. The present membership of the lodges is reported as over 10,000."

A notable wedding took place lately in the chapel of the Catholic University at Washington City. Baron Von Zedtwitz, the German minister to Mexico, was married to Miss Lina Caldwell, the sister of the lady who gave $300,000 to the building of this institution, and whose engagement to, and final rupture with Prince Murat, was the subject of so much gossip some months since. This marriage ceremony lasted forty minutes and was performed in a chapel built by the bride. At the close of the low mass following the ceremony the Bishop turned to the pair and announced to them that he had received the blessing of the head of the church, the Pope of Rome, upon their bridals.

There was a feature of this wedding that was puzzling to the uninitiated. The bride is a Catholic, the groom a Lutheran, and it is an almost unheard of occurrence for a marriage between a Catholic and Protestant to be solemnized in a Catholic church or chapel. Some explained the fact that such a marriage could take place in a chapel which is only dedicated, while it could not take place in a church which is consecrated, but it seems a dispensation was obtained permitting the marriage in the chapel because of the fact that it was a gift of the bride to the University.

To those who watch closely the course of events it would seem as if there was to be no rest for those in the liquor business this side of the grave.—Philadelphia Brewers' and Dealers' Journal.

N. C. A. BY-LAWS

AS REVISED TO DATE.

I.—The membership of the National Christian Association shall consist of the persons incorporated, together with those whom they shall from time to time elect to increase their number or to fill vacancies. Election to membership shall be by a two-thirds vote of members present, on recommendation in writing by three members of the Association; and the person so recommended must be in sympathy with the objects of the Association and signify his acceptance of the election. Two representatives chosen by each State auxiliary association, and one by each county auxiliary, may participate as annual members, having all the privileges of membership during the year for which they were elected.

II.—Those who held life memberships in the unincorporated National Christian Association before the adoption of these by-laws, together with those who shall hereafter contribute twenty-five dollars to the treasury of the National Christian Association, provided, further, that they shall be so elected by the delegates enrolled at the National Anniversary, shall be honorary members of the National Christian Association.

III.—Belonging to a secret society, denying Christ, or immoral conduct, shall forfeit membership in this Association. The names of members who have for five years ceased to communicate with the officers of the Association or to attend its meetings may be either dropped, or placed on the list of honorary members, on recommendation of the Corresponding Secretary and Board of Directors.

IV.—This Association shall meet annually on the third Thursday in June, at their principal place of business, for the election of officers and other necessary business, but the Board of Directors shall have power to change the time and place of meeting for sufficient cause, and special meetings may be called by the President with the concurrence of ten members.

[NOTE.—The above form was approved by the N. C. A. Board for presentation to the annual meeting, but by some neglect was not presented to that body. The Association, however, voted to change the date of the annual meeting but the time is not fixed to which the change shall be made.—ED. CYNOSURE.]

V.—The officers of this Association shall be a President, Vice-President, Recording Secretary, Corresponding Secretary, Treasurer, Auditor, General Agent and Lecturer, and others if judged necessary, and a Board of eleven directors be elected by ballot for a term of one year or until their successors are chosen.

VI.—It shall be the duty of the President to preside at the meetings of the Association. The Vice-President shall aid the President in his official duties, and preside during his absence, and in the absence of both President and Vice-President, the Association shall choose a chairman pro tem.

VII.—The Recording Secretary shall make a correct record of the proceedings and business transacted at the annual or other meetings of the Association, and shall keep the same in a convenient place for the use of the members.

VIII.—The Corresponding Secretary shall conduct the correspondence of the Association, collect funds, and keep a correct record of all matters of interest and importance relating to its condition and work, and with the General Agent shall submit to the Board of Directors, from time to time, such business as may require their attention. He shall sign all certificates of membership, keep a correct list of the same, and perform such other duties as would naturally pertain to his office.

IX.—The General Agent and Lecturer shall act under the instruction of the Board of Directors in carrying out the business and objects of this Association.

X.—The Treasurer's duty shall be to receive all moneys and other valuables donated to the Association and receipt for the same. He shall keep a correct record of all funds received and pay them out as instructed by the Board of Directors. He shall be required to give security for the faithful performance of his duties in such sum and manner as shall be by the Board of Directors be deemed sufficient to guarantee the Association against loss.

XI.—The books and accounts of the officers of the Association shall be open to the inspection of members of the corporation. It shall be the duty of the auditor to examine the financial accounts of the Association and report at each annual meeting.

XII.—The Board of Directors shall meet soon after their election and proceed to elect their officers and organize in due form. They shall duly consider and attend to all matters referred to them by the Association, and transact such other business as the interests of the Association may require. Said Directors shall have a general supervision of the affairs of the society during the recess of the said Association. They shall have authority to act in all matters of interest to the society when the National Christian Association is not in session, but shall not in any case divert the funds of the Association from the "business and objects" of the Association as set forth in its act of incorporation. They shall have authority to fill vacancies in any of the offices of the Association until the next regular meeting of the Association, and may make for themselves such by-laws, rules and regulations as they may deem necessary, provided, however, that said by-laws, rules and regulations contain nothing in conflict with the act of incorporation or by-laws of the National Christian Association. Said Board of Directors shall keep a record of all their proceedings and report their acts in detail to the said Association. They shall at the expiration of their term of office deliver to their successors all books, documents, and valuables in their possession belonging to the Association.

XIII.—The proceedings of the preceding year shall be reported in the several departments by the proper officer at each annual meeting of the National Christian Association, and a summary of such reports shall be published in the organ of the Association.

XIV.—All meetings of the Association and of the Board of Directors shall be opened by prayer, and the following order of business observed as far as practicable: 1st, Prayer; 2d, Reading minutes of last meeting; 3d, Annual reports from Corresponding Secretary, General Agent, Treasurer, Auditor, and Directors; 4th, Reception of members; 5th, Election of officers; 6th, Reports of committees; 7th, Miscellaneous business; 8th, Adjournment with prayer.

XV.—No alterations of these by-laws shall be made without an affirmative vote of two-thirds of the members present at an annual meeting; nor unless the same shall have been proposed in writing, and the proposition sustained by a majority vote at a previous annual meeting, or recommended by the Directors.

THE N. C. A. BOARD MEETING.

The first meeting of the new Board was held Monday, June 23. There were present brethren Milton, Gardner, Worrell, Richards, Blanchard, Hitchcock and Whipple. The Board organized by electing Rev. A. Thomson chairman, and Rev. E. R. Worrell secretary. In the absence of the chairman Rev. George R. Milton presided. After prayer the Board took up the appointment of standing committees. Alexander Thomson, W. B. Stoddard and H. L. Kellogg were chosen Building Committee; H. A. Fischer, E. Whipple and G. R. Milton, Finance Committee; C. A. Blanchard, J. P. Richards and J. M. Hitchcock, Publication Committee.

Pres. J. Blanchard and W. B. Stoddard being present during part of the meeting were invited to sit as corresponding members.

The question of the disposition of the Washington building was brought up by a motion to sell it. The motion was discussed at some length, and finally laid on the table.

The report of the auditor, Mr. John Culver, was read. It was received with thanks for its suggestions, which were approved.

It was voted that the insurance on the Carpenter building should be increased; and the treasurer was instructed to insure the building for $7,500. The Building Committee were also asked to consider the recommendations of the fire underwriters.

The appointment of Rev. J. P. Stoddard as N. C. A. agent for New England was considered and voted. W. B. Stoddard having made a proposal in relation to the Washington building and his agency, a contract was arranged with him that he should take full charge of the building, paying the Association $200 from its income, the N. C. A. to pay insurance and taxes. He is also to have $50 per month and expenses, he to raise both by collections or subscriptions to the Cynosure.

Rev. C. F. Hawley was engaged for the field from Ohio westward. His salary was fixed at $50 per month, to be raised by himself in subscriptions to the Cynosure, and in addition $400 and traveling expenses. Donations from the State of Iowa are to be appropriated to the payment of this amount if not collected on the field.

A vote of thanks to Bro. J. P. Stoddard was taken in these terms:

WHEREAS, Our brother J. P. Stoddard, who has been for many years our General Agent, feels that God calls him to special service in New England; therefore,

Resolved, That we extend to him our hearty thanks for the years of service now closed.

Resolved, That we wish for him every success and blessing in the New England field, and that we will co-operate with him and the New England Association to the extent of our power.

The engagements with the agents were made with a view to future enlargement, but with present retrenchment. Their salaries will be considerably increased if the contract is literally fulfilled. With respect to the Cynosure, though measures of economy were ever in mind, the vote was unanimous to sustain the paper courageously, reappointing the editors and putting the business of publication in charge of H. L. Kellogg. The treasurer was instructed to pay all engaged at headquarters pro rata from the net income, and $100 each was added to the salary of the associate editor and treasurer if the funds allow.

Pres. C. A. Blanchard was appointed financial secretary, and is to have such use of the columns of the Cynosure as may be necessary in the work assigned to him.

The Building Committee was instructed to raise an additional sum from rent if possible.

REPORT OF THE TREASURER.

ANNUAL FINANCIAL STATEMENT.

STATEMENT OF RESOURCES—JUNE 1, 1890.

Real Estate—Carpenter building.....	$20,000.00
Washington building.....	10,000.00
Kansas Farm.....	2,400.00
Dakota Farm.....	600.00	$33,000.00
Bills receivable—Invested loans.....	1,000.00
Pub. house notes.....	3,201.22	4,201.22
Fixtures—Chicago, furniture, etc.....	412.77
Washington, furniture, etc.....	74.09	486.86
Publishing material, type, etc.....		1,794.66
Paper, envelopes, etc.....		12.40
Tracts in stock.....		802.70
Books in stock.....		888.07
The Cynosure stock.....		5,859.50
Cynosure subscriptions due from sub's		252.00
Reference library.....		245.50
Suspense account—Notes past due.....	1,302.50
Accts in arrears.....	277.48	1,579.98
Personal accounts due and good.....		481.89
Cash on hand.....		883.38
		$50,488.16

STATEMENT OF LIABILITIES.

Capital.....	$43,924.56
Subscriptions due subscribers.....	2,383.50
Personal accounts.....	164.32
Wilbur estate, annuity 6 per cent.....	150.00
Sally Gilkey fund, annuity 6 per cent.....	800.00
Cynosure ministers' fund.....	12.32
Cynosure extension fund.....	396.27
Capwell fund, annuity 6 per cent.....	1,000.00
Ohio fund, annuity 7 per cent.....	1,000.00
New York fund, annuity 6 per cent.....	500.00
Foreign fund.....	101.64
Worcester fund.....	55.55
		$50,488.16
LOSSES.
Personal accounts—Notes.....	$ 1,193.33
Bank accounts.....	26.35	$ 1,219.68
Convention and Anniversary expenses.....		886.67
Fixtures—Chicago.....	40.50
Washington.....	146.97	187.47
Publishing material.....		22.55
Current expenses.....		585.59
Salary of agents—J. P. Stoddard.....	1,000.00
H. H. Hinman.....	489.78
W. I. Phillips.....	1,000.00
W. B. Stoddard.....	780.00
E. W. Shaw.....	420.00
C. F. Hawley.....	302.13
E. E. Flagg.....	180.00
F. J. Davidson.....	14.81	4,186.72
Agents' traveling expenses—
J. P. Stoddard.....	543.04
H. H. Hinman.....	59.86
I. Bancroft.....	36.00
W. B. Stoddard.....	270.83
E. W. Shaw.....	131.80
C. F. Hawley.....	45.91	1,087.44
Postage.....		488.77
Special appropriations.....		1,604.46
Assessments on Morgan monument lot		18.00
Cynosure clerical help.....		434.14
Dakota farm taxes.....		62.92
Iowa appropriation to Agent Hawley.....		193.38
Illinois appropriation to Agent Hawley		15.00
Annuities.....		247.18
		$11,239.97

GAINS.

Washington build'g, rents, net, (rooms occupied by N. C. A. valued at $120.00 added to net cash receipts $165.28).....	$ 45.28
Donations to the general work.....	3,987.52
Carpenter building, rents, net, (rooms occupied by N. C. A. valued at $300.00 added to net cash receipts $1,028.22).....	728.22
Tract account.....	17.54
Interest from Pub. House notes.....	63.18
Interest from loans.....	827.83
Washington book account.....	.81
Cynosure.....	334.91
Balance to capital account.....	$ 5,234.68	$11,239.97
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.
1889, June 1, By balance.....		$49,159.24
1890, June 1, To gains and losses, as above.....	$ 5,234.68
To balance.....	43,924.56
		$49,159.24
1890, June 1, By bal., present capital.....		$43,924.56

—Report comes that a syndicate of French Jews has been formed for the purpose of purchasing for the custody of the Jews the copy of the Hebrew Bible which is in the Vatican. The offer which has been made for it is $200,000. But it is stated that the Pope cannot legally sell it. The Jews of Spain, France and Italy tried to buy it about a hundred years ago, offering for it more than its weight in gold. The Bible is in the original Hebrew manuscript, and the exact time when it was written has never been satisfactorily determined, any more than that it came into the possession of the congregation founded by Pope XV. some three hundred years ago. It is the most valuable book in existence.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

Our New England Meetings—A Plan for Summer Work—The A. O. U. W. and Saloonists—An accident to an "original package"—Divers matters—Are the Loyal Women going to form a secret society?

Summer meetings have come to play a very prominent part in the religious and intellectual life of New England. For a large class of people the combined rest and stimulus which they afford could not be replaced by any other form of holiday recreation. To listen to the wisest and best thoughts of wise and good men, while all around and above and beneath one are the thousand blessed breathings and influences which we call Nature, but which are really God himself speaking to all of his children "who have ears to hear," is as near a foretaste of heaven as can be vouchsafed in this mortal life. It will therefore be pleasant news, I trust, to the anti-secret friends of New England to learn that the committee appointed to arrange for summer conventions held a very satisfactory meeting on the 24th, of which the minutes are as follows:

"Moved and seconded that with our present information we do not deem it wise to hold our New England meeting as has been proposed at Crescent Beach; but that it is the sense of this committee that we look at some grounds in Wellesley which have been recommended as suitable for this purpose.

"It was also moved and seconded that we consider favorably the offer of Mrs. L. M. Hoyt, of Ware, of her grove for a convention of the N. E. C. A., and that the Secretary be instructed to correspond with her and learn what time in September would be most favorable for holding it."

Both motions passed without a dissenting voice.

The grounds which the committee hope to obtain in Wellesley are very conveniently located, and if they can be leased for an annual camp-meeting will exactly suit our needs. Their nearness to Boston and the fame of Wellesley as a college town will be likely to attract many, thus giving a grand opportunity to leaven with anti-lodge sentiment the Christian people who live in and around the Hub. If two summer meetings can be held, one in the eastern, the other in the western part of the State, they cannot fail to be of incalculable advantage to our cause. The Lord is going before us, and though the pillar of his presence may seem to show only its cloudy side, it is because we have the daylight of the written word; and that word is the same that was given to the children of Israel, "Go forward." May every anti-secretist in New England feel his or her individual responsibility to support the work, either by attending these meetings; or if that is impossible, by giving what their expenses would be if they went. All great reforms must go through the era of self-sacrifice, and this is just where the anti-secret cause is now; but that is the era which produces all the great men and does all the great deeds.

The Supreme Lodge of the A. O. U. W. has just met in Boston for its 18th annual session. Supreme Master Workman W. B. Graham gave some interesting facts in his address. For instance, he said that "as yet the order has presented no bar to the admission of any applicant for membership on account of occupation," and added, "All know that certain employments are hazardous, and that the burdens are unequally placed, as between a merchant and a miner, a clergyman and a switchman, a farmer and a brakeman, a teacher and a bartender. Would it not be well to draw the lines?" Notice that Supreme Master Graham does not propose to draw them on moral grounds at all, but simply on the physical chance of a long life which an immoral occupational ways tends to lessen. But how does the honest merchant or laborer, the cultured school-teacher or the devout clergyman like to be yoked up with saloon-keepers? There are many interesting questions of this kind which it is high time prohibitionists, particularly the ladies of the W. C. T. U., began to ask. How can Masonry be a universal system of morals when in Missouri the lodge expels the liquor dealer, and in New York gives him public thanks and praise for liberally subscribing to pay off a Masonic debt?

The "original package" decision, I see, is destined to become a bone of contention in the courts, some judges deciding one way and some another. I wonder if it ever occurred to the Supreme Bench that it does not especially redound to their intelligence to make a legal decision that even the courts themselves seem to have great difficulty in interpreting; but perhaps it is only in deference to the common tradition that Justice is blindfold. The express companies are everywhere doing all they can to annul local and State laws in favor of prohibition. In Worcester, the other day, one express car unloaded a keg and over sixty jugs of liquor. The Times states that one of the jugs rolled from the trucks and broke in fragments on the floor of the station, spilling its contents, and one poor fellow who probably had not had a drink since the first of May, made a dive for one of the hollow pieces which contained about half a glassful, and carried it away with careful hand to enjoy it unmolested in some secluded corner. In all questions that affect national morals we surely ought to have national laws. A State has no more right to propagate a moral nuisance than has an individual. In Danbury, Conn., where there are 5,000 operatives employed in the hat factories, one woman got a lottery prize. This has induced a perfect mania to do the same, and thousands of hard-earned dollars have been squandered, families pinched, work neglected, and business among the shopkeepers seriously injured. The rage for benefit orders is only a feature of the same mania, under a different form. While we arraign the drink traffic for the injury which it does legitimate business, few people stop to think that the immense sums paid into the societies means that many families are denying themselves many comforts and even necessities in order to keep up their dues, thus causing an under consumption whose influence must be felt in all branches of trade.

A sensation of a different sort was created in Tremont Temple last Sunday by the appearance of the Indians attached to the Wild West show, now in Boston, in the full glory of their moccasins, leather leggings and aboriginal blankets. It is said they always make a practice of going to church whenever they can and wherever they happen to be, and always behave when there with the most perfect gravity and decorum, in both respects setting a pattern which it would be well for all their pale-faced brothers to imitate.

I see the British American is loudly calling on its constituency, the anti-Romanists, to unite politically with the Prohibition party. Whether the Prohibitionists, who are in some localities rather disposed to pat Rome on the back, out of respect to her Father Matthew and Total Abstinence societies, just as for a similar reason anti-Romanists are disposed to hobnob with Masons, will court such an alliance remains to be seen.

Judge Fallon has resigned from the Boston School Board, and evidently in no sweet temper; but the Board can spare his presence very well. Poor Clio! If Judge Fallon had his way the majestic Muse of History would have at least three-quarters of her Sybilline leaves "blacked out," a la Russia. The British American, though its columns are closed to everything on the opposite line, still continues to print with avidity whole columns of Masonic speeches glorifying the order. Next to Rome, commend me to a lodge orator for falsifying the facts of history. And yet there can be no sound political philosophy where there is no intelligent knowledge of historical truth. It is this which makes the statesman different from the politician, and the freeman's vote different from that of the party slave.

It is to be regretted that the Loyal Women have adopted the methods of the Jesuitism they denounce so far as to hold their sessions behind closed doors. A leading anti-secret woman of Boston, who sought to enter one of their meetings under the impression that it was open to the public, was denied admittance unless she first paid her fee and became a regular member; at which she indignantly left, saying that she had never yet joined a secret society and did not propose to do so now. There are anti-secretists among the Loyal Women who are sorely tried by this procedure and may abandon the society altogether, unless Mrs. Shephard is wise enough to come out on the broad, open ground occupied by Miss Willard and other noble women who founded the W. C. T. U. ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

The greatest victory is dominion over self.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, June 25, 1890.

A notable sermon was delivered at the Church of Our Father last Sunday by a venerable Boston divine on the true means of temperance education. He described the great growth of the temperance movement, and said that it was time that the temperance reformation should proceed on broader and more radical lines. The movement now covers a much larger field than it used to. It enters into all the great questions of life, and its growing influence is altering our ideas regarding our dress, our diet, our houses, our amusements, and all the familiar matters of every day life that might be perverted to the uses of intemperance and lewdness.

Therefore, especial attention should be given to the true means of temperance education. It was easier, he said, to teach one hundred children the principle of temperance than to permanently reform one who had become a drunkard or a liquor seller. True temperance education means more than crowds of children signing temperance pledges that are to be forgotten at the first approach of temptation, more than parading the streets to music of brass bands, more than blue ribbons or red ribbons, more than the study of temperance text books in the schools, however good all these things may be.

He set forth the temptations to intemperance that surround the boy from the time he is twelve until he is twenty-one. The tug of war, he said, was between those years. He told how the growing youth should be trained to regard intemperance as a vice, and as quite as serious a vice as any other. And in this connection I will mention that the ladies of the W. C. T. U. who have been fighting the saloons in a certain disreputable part of the city, can not have better proof of the efficacy of their brave efforts than was expressed in the wail of the saloon-keepers of that neighborhood, who declared their business was being ruined. This quarter of the city is known as "Hell's Bottom," and the way the saloons are fought is by holding temperance meetings, and by opening a free Reading Room in the locality, which last proved to be so popular an institution that the saloons felt the strength of the counter attraction. Some roughs of the neighborhood tried to annoy and discourage the ladies in various ways, but the police authorities pledged them protection and they are going on with their good work.

The likelihood of an adjournment of Congress before the first of September seems to grow less every day. In the first place the leaders in both the Senate and House intend if possible to send a tariff bill to the President before the adjournment of this session. This means extended debate, for the comments of Secretary Blaine on the tariff bill, which have been quoted so widely, and the remarks made by certain Republican Senators in public debate concerning the measure now pending in the Upper House, make it evident that however harmonious the Republican party may be on the question of passing a tariff bill, it is by no means harmonious on the provisions of the bill as it passed the House or as it is reported from the Senate Committee on Finance.

Then Senator Hale of Maine has announced his intention of pressing the reciprocity amendment to the tariff bill offered by him during the past week. This will be in pursuance of the plan for promoting trade with Southern and Central American countries suggested by the International Congress, and outlined by the letter of Mr. Blaine to the President, which was made public a week ago. And as this proposes a decided departure from the policy of the House and Senate committee in several important particulars, it also means extended discussion.

If the free coinage provision of the Silver bill now pending in the House passes that body and gets the approval of the President it will result in a great increase of work in the Treasury department. The great pressure will come upon the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, and it is even thought another building will be required. This bureau is now working under pressure to meet the demand of the Treasurer, and it is difficult to keep up with his requirements. This is because of a lack of room, it is alleged. If this be really the case under existing conditions, under the proposed new law it would undoubtedly be necessary greatly to enlarge the facilities of the establishment. Then, if free coinage prevails, the storage of Uncle Sam's dollars will be a serious problem. This will produce a much heavier out-put of silver coins, and the Treasury has already almost reached the limit of its capacity as a storehouse for wealth.

—The late General Assembly of the United Presbyterian church meeting in Buffalo, N. Y., adopted among other reform declarations on the Sabbath, divorce, Bible in schools, etc., a resolution on secret societies, in which emphasis is given to the soundness and importance of the position held by the church, and enjoining the pastors and other church officers to instruct the people and keep the subject so before them that the United Presbyterian name may be dreaded by the lodge and loved by all good men who pray for the overthrow of secret societies.

CORRESPONDENCE.

COVENANTERS AND THE PROHIBITION PARTY.

Editor Cynosure,

DEAR SIR:—In your issue of June 26, my good brother Gault refers to me and Our Banner in his reply to J. S. T. Milligan.

1st. He quotes me correctly as not in favor of the Prohibition party. My objections are: First, The Prohibition party requires of members a pledge that they will vote for their nominees; and I cannot give it because I am a non-voting Covenanter. Second, The leaders of the party and many of the nominees are secretists. When they hissed President Blanchard at Pittsburgh and refused to hear him, their true colors were shown. Third, They refuse to honor the Lord Jesus. They have receded from the earlier partial recognitions of Christianity; and the Christian features of local organizations are overridden by the national conventions. With the N. C. A. platform I am in accord. If Bro. Gault cannot unite with Christian churches that agree with him in everything except voting, how can he unite with the Prohibition party of voters in which are infidels, secretists, and Christians of all shades?

2d. He says that I "bitterly denounced John P. St. John." I did object to St. John's relations to secretism and to Sabbath desecration in connection with his campaign; but I never denounced him, bitterly or otherwise, unless that be denunciation.

3d. He says "that with few exceptions the leaders in this agitation for compromise are in sympathy with the J. Ellen Foster non-partisanism in politics, and denounce the Prohibition party. The editor of Our Banner, who has written the most in the interests of this compromise movement, says, 'I never believed in the Prohibition party, but have called it a delusion and a snare.'" That is the worst I have said, and that one sentence was all of it. I do not know one of my unionist friends who agrees with me, or ever wrote a word against the Prohibition party; and I do know that many of them strongly oppose Mrs. Foster. I have not written one word in favor of her non-partisan union. I believe that she is an able, earnest, but intensely partisan and ambitious woman. The only reference I have made to the disruption of the W. C. T. U. was in May, when I deprecated the results of the division of forces and contention "about leaders and methods;" but I named neither wing to praise or blame them in the matter.

I make no comments except to say that a good cause rests on facts rather than fictions.

J. C. K. MILLIGAN.

NATIONAL CORRESPONDENCE.

A PORTION OF THE LETTERS ADDRESSED TO THE N. C. A. ANNUAL MEETING.

PRES. H. H. GEORGE, D. D. BEAVER FALLS, PA.

I am sorry that your meeting is quite so soon, as I should like very much to be present. But such meetings cannot accommodate every one. My deepest heart's sympathies are with you, in your department of the Lord's work. You are beyond a doubt working along the line of the Saviour's instructions. Were he on earth to-day his every word and act and step would be against secret fraternities. You should not allow your hearts to grow weary in the good cause. It must triumph by and by. It may be through darkness, but it must be the winning side. Your meeting will have my heartiest countenance, and were I there, I am sure would receive my cordial support. I hope to recover my full strength by rest and relaxation from cares and responsibilities.

BISHOP MILTON WRIGHT, DAYTON, OHIO.

Pressing duties are continually upon me in the peculiar condition of the church which would not at all admit of it. I deeply sympathize with every legitimate effort to overcome the power of secret institutions. I look upon the lodge-power as very difficult to overcome. Secret orders are increasing in their number and wiles, but I know no terms of surrender. Christ came to combat evil. His followers have been in the same warfare for nearly nineteen hundred years. If it takes ten thousand years for complete victory, let the war fare go forward. Let us fight on till we die! The army will still be recruited from those born into the kingdom of grace. There is no change in the Captain of the hosts of righteousness. His campaign has unity in it through all the ages. We may die, but the cause of truth lives and will ever be in good hands. Victory is sure, though the shout of its final host may be over our graves. Let us do our part, content to die without seeing all we wish to see—except as we see it by faith. I think the efforts of the corporation should be directed to ends for the promotion of which all true and earnest anti-secrecy men are a unit. Let special objects for which anti-secrecy men are not united be left to those who favor those special objects. In union there is strength. If all the anti-secrecy elements could be brought into united, earnest effort, they would shake America.

REV. B. T. ROBERTS, EDITOR "FREE METHODIST."

[Written from N. Chili, N. Y.]

I feel a very deep interest in the National Christian Association and in the great Christian and patriotic work it is doing. It would afford me great pleasure to manifest that interest by attending your annual meeting, but from providential causes I am not able to do so. Whoever is absent, may the Master be with you and guide you in all your deliberations and actions.

JOHN A. CONANT, WILLIMANTIC, CONN.

The powers of evil against which we are contending are mighty, but God, in whose name we labor, is almighty. Let us therefore ask him to use us freely in vanquishing the foe of all good. We are living in a peculiar time when, if it were possible, the very elect would be deceived.

As to the work in New England I wish to say a word, and yet I think you must be as well or better advised of the condition of things here through Secretary Stoddard and Miss Flagg than I am.

Brother and sister Stoddard are doing a grand work at the "Hub," which cannot fail to radiate all over New England, and thus arouse the enthusiasm of all in sympathy with our reform and awaken others to see the enormity of the evil of secret societies. We very much desire to keep them in New England, although it may seem like taking from the national field the only man who can acceptably do the general work. Whether New England people who sympathize in this reform are sufficiently aroused to give it the needed financial support just at present remains a question; but I believe if Bro. and sister Stoddard can be materially sustained for a year, working in New England, that after that the work will be self-sustaining here, and better, I believe New England will do considerable towards pushing the work in other parts after having become aroused.

SAMUEL A. PRATT, WORCESTER, MASS.

I do hope and pray that wisdom will be given you in your deliberations, that in the future, as in the past, you will be directed to adopt those measures that will do much to destroy the works of darkness. I feel much encouraged to press on, and this from what my eyes have seen and my ears have heard during the last few months. Bro. Stoddard has done a good work in this part of our land; in Boston, certainly as well as in Worcester.

REV. JOHN D. NUTTING, NEWPORT, KY.

It has been my fortune to be solicited to join two different orders the past year—both of them of a minor character and useful aside from their secretism—but it is hardly necessary to say that the solicitations were not successful. Still the fact may show something of the situation in that respect here. The largest building in town except the Court House and City Hall building is the Masonic Temple, which is by its charter exempt from taxation, though its rental receipts must be nearly or quite $1,700 per year. The next largest is Odd-fellows' building, whose rentals must be about the same, though I do not know as to its taxation or exemption, while Red Men's Hall (the savages are extinct) and Memorial Hall, G. A. R., follow closely after in order of size. We have over 100 saloons open every day, except from 12 to 4 A. M., and in thirty years no attempt has been made to enforce our excellent Sunday law until last fall, when some forty were fined. One saloon-keeper talked of burning me in effigy afterwards, but has since been at my church several times. After these convictions the saloon lawyer secured the passage of a bill in the Legislature repealing the State Sunday law for this county as far as its municipalities are concerned, and putting the whole power into the hands of the city councils on that subject. It is needless to say we have had open Sundays since. My church is small, but enjoys the distinction of being called "the temperance church," and has grown almost one-half in a little over two years—not all during my pastorate, however. It is hard work, with only six churches for 30,000 people, from which anything can be expected along such lines, but progress is being made. The prevailing tone of spiritual life is of course very low, in the churches as well as without.

REV. M. A. GAULT, BLANCHARD, IOWA.

My heart goes out in warmest sympathy for the brethren enlisted in the war against the powers of organized secrecy; not only because it is a question touching the nation's vitals, but because it has enlisted men of the strongest faith and deepest Christian devotion.

But I believe my time can be more profitably spent in the field laboring from pulpit and platform to arouse public sentiment. Convention work can only be strong and efficient as it represents this field work. I think an efficient Lecture Bureau, projecting lecture campaigns out through the States, would greatly facilitate the work. I could give you a long list of points where friends have requested anti-secret lectures. May the Lord richly bless your deliberations is my prayer.

REV. WALTER L. FERRIS, CHEROKEE, IOWA.

My prayers shall be for the success of the meeting. The last year has been the best year in the history of the Association in turning the minds of the people toward this great reform. The bloody Cronin tragedy committed by a secret society, the great convention in April which drew out the utterances of the best minds of our nation, the spread of our reform literature, the splendid work of Wheaton College—these, and a hundred other agencies have combined to make the year just closed a memorable one in the history of the work, and if I mistake not, the turning point in the reform. The entire brood of secret societies combines to deaden the spirituality of our churches, padlock the lips and stifle the conscience of honest men. Hoping God may greatly bless the meeting, I remain yours fraternally.

GEO. B. HOPKINS, GRANVILLE, ILL.

The cause the Association advocates is just as dear to me as ever, and the small mite I give to its support is as freely given as to any cause to which I contribute.

REV. LATHROP TAYLOR, RUTLAND, ILL.

My heart is in the work of the Association and I am more and more impressed with its importance. The obstacles in its way are very great, but not insurmountable, for God will conquer through his people who keep themselves undefiled by the lodge.

PHILIP BACON, WEATOGUE, CONN.

I am heartily with you in the work in which you are engaged. I am persuaded that its importance is beyond the conception of its most ardent friends. Important and extended as the work of your society and its friends and co-workers has been to my mind, it appears but just commenced and I would humbly urge that it be pushed with all the energy possible. To this end I would suggest the employment of tract distributors. Consecrated men and women can be found for this work, and the expense will not be very great. May the Lord guide you in all your doings and deliberation that you may act wisely that the work of the Lord may be accomplished.

REV. JOSEPH TRAVIS, EVANSTON, ILL.

It will be utterly impracticable for me to attend the annual meeting of the National Christian Association, to be held Thursday, June 19. My health at the present time is in a most precarious condition. I don't even get down into the village. Wishing you a harmonious meeting and one which shall be profitable to the work you have in hand, I remain yours cordially.

GEORGE W. NEEDLES, ALBANY, MO.

I am in as hearty sympathy with the objects of our mission as ever and it would please me much to meet with you and mingle in your company. May God direct and bless our efforts for ridding this land of the foul blot of oath-bound conspiracy in the form of secret societies.

REV. WOODRUFF POST, OLEAN, N. Y.

My soul is much troubled and perplexed, though "not in despair," on every hand, in several churches here, and among dens of infamy and drunkenness, and "respectable liquor houses,"—secrecy! secrecy! sworn blasphemers! (a common brotherhood)—largely abound! Our little city of 12,000 to 15,000 persons runs six lodges. On soldiers' G. A. R. day it was my privilege to accept honors connected therewith, but of course this "crank" turned the other way.

With emphasis, denouncement of secret societies in my composition abounds. This is the only way the avenue to heaven and my soul obtains. I am mortified to belong to a church that tolerates it. Yet abiding therein because of conviction of being better qualified to do more good, and having no counter conviction, stand firmly at my post, praying for better days to come. I trust the grand work the Association is doing will result touching secret societies as did the proclamation of Abraham Lincoln concerning slavery. The Lord's ways are unsearchable, past finding out. He knows how to "make the wrath of man praise him, and restrain the remainder."

People have got to be shocked to wake them out of old absurd routine. Use paralyzes us to almost every injustice; when people are shocked they begin to think and inquire,—Harriet Beecher Stowe.

LITERATURE.

Professor L. H. Bailey, of Cornell University Experiment Station, and one of the most practical, successful and popular horticulturists in America, has become editor of the American Garden. The business department of the Rural Publishing Company, which includes the Garden and the Rural New Yorker, now requires all the former editor's (Mr. Libby) time, so fast and securely is the new-old company growing in the estimate and confidence of the rural and suburban public, for which it is working vigorously on a broad and liberal base. "A Farmer's Education Free" is an attractive announcement by this company. They offer to pay the way through college of young men and young women who work for them. Ambitious boys and girls should send for circulars at once. A course of study at any other school or college is given if preferred.

Scribner's Magazine for July begins the eighth volume of that periodical, which promises to contain many features of remarkable interest. Bruce Price, the architect, writes of "The Suburban House" with enthusiasm and full knowledge of the necessities and comforts which it demands, as well as of its picturesque aspects. E. L. Godkin, editor of the New York Evening Post, writes an acute essay, showing how strong a force is exerted in the state and on the individual by the love of social approbation, and how necessary it is that the right of a man to his own reputation should be adequately protected. He makes some pertinent suggestions as to the infringements of these rights by newspapers. "The House of Tembinoka" is one of the first-fruits of Robert Louis Stevenson's long voyaging among the islands of the Pacific. It is the song celebrating his parting from the King of Ape-mama. The illustrations are from original photographs of the king and his subjects. "The Last Slave-ship" is the romantic but true narrative of a voyage on a slaver from New Orleans to the Congo and back to the West Indies in 1859. The author, George Howe, M.D., had just been graduated at a medical school, and accepted an opportunity to go with some freedmen to Liberia. That part of the voyage accomplished, all disguises were abandoned and the vessel sailed to the Congo for twelve hundred slaves. Dr. Howe's description of the voyage is frank, picturesque and exciting. Duffield Osborne describes the peculiarities and dangers of "Surf and Surf bathing." The illustrations suggest the morally doubtful features of the sport. "Bird Cradles," by W. Hamilton Gibbons, is an entertaining account of nest-building in this latitude, with elaborate illustrations by the author.

The annual report of the American Peace Society is the work of Rev. R. B. Howard. It presents the progress and prospects of the peace cause and is a brief but valuable document.

The promised debate on "The Single Tax" will be printed in the forthcoming July Century. It is between Edward Atkinson and Henry George. Mr. Atkinson first writes upon "A Single Tax upon Land," Mr. George replies with "A Single Tax on Land Values," and Mr. Atkinson has a brief rejoinder.

The Cynosure has received the address of Hon. John P. Jones of Nevada on the Free Coinage of Silver, delivered in the Senate May 12 and 13 last; also the speech of Hon. T. C. Catchings of Mississippi in the House on the commercial importance of the Mississippi, the value of levees, etc. These documents are valuable for all who seek information on these topics and can be obtained of these gentlemen by application to them.

In the Ladies' Home Journal for July is a beautifully illustrated article, "A Day with Ida Lewis," the Grace Darling of America, the first authentic description ever published of the home life of the famous heroine who lives alone in Lime Rock Light-House, and has saved so many lives. It is a fascinating article, and is followed by one on "Amateur Photography for Girls," which every girl who has or intends getting a camera should read. Dr. William A. Hammond, the noted physician, furnishes a most practical and timely article on "Hints for Summer Tourists."

TWELVE TONS OF TRACTS. During a vacation in the summer and autumn of 1889 spent by Mr. J. K. Hastings in London, he issued an illustrated edition of H. L. Hastings' "Lecture on the Inspiration of the Bible," which required twelve tons of paper to print it, and numbered more than five hundred thousand copies. This is in addition to a previous circulation of a million of copies of the same lecture in about a dozen different translations, in every quarter of the globe. Copies of this tract may be obtained of H. L. Hastings at 47 Cornhill, Boston, at five cents each, and persons bothered with skeptical doubts will do well to send twenty-five cents for an assortment of his Anti-Infidel tracts, and read them and distribute them.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. MARILLA P. NICHOLS died in Jonesville, Mich., June 11, 1890, of paralysis of the brain.

Mrs. Nichols was born in Plainfield, Vt., and spent most of her life in that State. Her removal to Michigan was only about nine years ago. She was a devoted wife, a careful manager in her home who did not allow mere domestic affairs to so pre-occupy her time as to prevent her becoming well-informed upon the state of affairs in the world. Her mind was well stored, a treasure-house of good things. Her piety was neither formal or superficial, and she was especially interested in mission work, while she also seconded her husband's efforts in Christian reform and in the effort to suppress the Christ-excluding lodges.

"Excuse me, George, but when I saw you a year ago, your face was covered with pimples; it seems to be all right now." "Yes, sir; that's because I stuck to Ayer's Sarsaparilla, the greatest blood medicine in the world. I was never so well in my life as I am now."

FLOWER SEEDS.

To any one sending 15 cents in stamps or silver, I will send five different kinds of Flower Seeds of choice varieties. Send stamped and addressed envelope.

VICTORIA A. BUCK.

East Randolph, N. Y.

10,000

Another ten thousand edition of the tract,
KILLED, AND NO INQUEST.

This is a large 4-page tract at 30 cents per pound, 15 cents for half pound, and 10 cents for a third of a pound. It is an illustrated account of the death of Rev. J. W. Johnston, while being initiated by the officers of Huntington Lodge, W. Va., in January of this year. Sent postpaid at the above price. Address,

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
221 W. Madison St Chicago

CONCERNING PREMIUMS.

We offer premiums to compensate such of our subscribers as take the pains and trouble to secure new subscribers to the Cynosure. Many who do this refuse to receive pay, and work because they love the work; others are glad to receive premiums. But,

First, We do not offer any man a premium to renew his own subscription. If a man has taken this paper a year and does not care enough about it to take it longer without being hired to, we do not offer him a premium.

Second, We do not offer a premium to a new subscriber to hire him to take the paper. When he has subscribed for the paper and paid for it himself, and knows its worth, then if he will take the trouble to introduce the paper to others, he can have a premium on the new subscription, but not on his own.

Third, We do not offer a premium where one member of a family stops the paper, and another member of the same family subscribes for it. We do not consider such a name the name of a new subscriber.

Any book we publish or sell can be had as a premium at reasonable rates. We will allow thirty cents' worth of any of our publications, at retail rates, postpaid, for one dollar's worth of new subscriptions to the Cynosure.

WEBSTER'S DICTIONARY and the Christian Cynosure for $4.25, seems a very little amount to pay for so much valuable matter.

You get 832 pages of Cynosure for the dollar and a half!

And whoever has renewed their subscriptions within the last six months can get 1280 pages of Dictionary, sent postpaid for $2.75!!

Read the advertisement on page 14, "A REMARKABLE OFFER."

FINNEY ON MASONRY.

The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth 75c; per dozen $7.50. Paper cover 35c; per dozen $3.50.

No Christian's library is complete without it. Send for a copy in cloth and get a catalogue of books and tracts sold by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 20 cents per pound:

1. Historical Sketch—National Christian Association.
3. Address to American Pastors.
4. Freemasonry in the Family.
5. President C. G. Finney on the duty of Christians towards the Lodge.

7. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
8. Modern Heathenism.
9. Ministers at Rival Altars.
12. Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodge.
15. Secrecy and Sin.
16. Selling Dead Horses.
17. History of Masonry.
18. Despotism Character of Freemasonry.
19. Freemasonry, a Christ-excluding Religion.
22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.
28. Nathaniel Colver, D.D., on Masonry.
33. Hon. Wm. H. Seward on Secret Societies.
37. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).
39. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?
44. D. L. Moody on Secret Societies.
45. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?
49. John Quincy Adams on the duty of American Voters.

Chapters in American Politics.
Masonry vs. Prohibition.
Decline of the G. A. R.
Christianity and Odd-fellowship. Part 1, 4 pages; part 2, 4 pages.
The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—20 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

GENERAL AGENT AND LECTURER, J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

WASHINGTON DEPARTMENT, No. 215 4½ St., N. W.: FIELD AGENT, W. B. Stoddard.

NEW ENGLAND AGENT, Miss E. E. Flagg, Wellesley, Mass.

COLLEGE AGENT, Rev. S. F. Porter, Cynosure office.

SPECIAL AGENT, Eros W. Shaw, Cynosure office, Chicago.

STATE AGENTS.

Illinois, Rev. C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, DuPage Co., Illinois.

Minnesota, E. Hanson, Minneapolis.

New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimball, New Market.

Ohio, Rev. H. H. Hinman, Oberlin.

Pennsylvania, Rev. J. T. Michael, 2942 Westmont Street, Philadelphia.

Alabama, Rev. G. M. Elliott, Selma.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
Nathan Callender, Montdale, Pa.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa.
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.
Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
Rev. E. Mathews, Long Island City, N. Y.
E. Barnetson, Haskinsville, N. Y.
Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
A. W. Parry, Annawan, Ill.

THE N. C. A. FUNDS.

The General Fund is that from which the running expenses of the Association are paid. From it the agents on the field are supported.

The Foreign Fund is that from which the foreign demand for literature against the lodge is supplied to missionaries.

The Free Tract Fund clearly states by its name the object for which contributions are solicited. Millions of pages have been distributed by means of this fund.

The Cynosure Ministers' Fund. The donations to this fund have enabled the Association to send many copies of the Cynosure to the ministers of the South, especially to pastors of colored churches. The result has been a blessing to them and their churches.

Contributions to any or all these funds are urgently solicited.

FORM OF BEQUEST.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of — dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be sufficient discharge.

THE N. C. A. BUILDING
(The gift of Philo Carpenter.)
—AND OFFICE OF—

The Christian Cynosure,
221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

The National Christian Association

PRESIDENT—Eld. J. L. Barlow, Bloomington, Wis.

VICE PRESIDENT—Rev. M. A. Gault, Blanchard, Iowa.

COR. SEC'Y and GENERAL AGENT, J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SEC'Y and TREASURER—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

DIRECTORS—J. L. Barlow, C. A. Blanchard, A. J. Chittenden, H. A. Fischer, John Gardner, G. R. Milton, J. P. Richards, John Sutcliffe, Alexander Thomson, E. Whipple, E. R. Worrell.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

PRESIDENT—Rev. Henry T. Cheever, Worcester, Mass.

SECRETARY—Henry L. Kellogg, Chicago, Ill.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS.

NEW ENGLAND.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic Conn.; Sec'y and Agent, Miss E. E. Flagg, Wellesley, Mass.; Treas., Z. Graves, Harris, Mass.

ALABAMA.—Pres., Prof. Pickens; Sec., G. M. Elliott; Treas., Rev. C. B. Curtis; all of Selma.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., Rev. G. R. Milton, Elgin; Sec., A. H. Hiatt, Wheaton; Treas., Ezra A. Cook, Chicago.

INDIANA.—Pres., William H. Figg, Reno; Sec., S. L. Cook, Albion; Treas., Benjamin Ulsh, Silver Lake.

IOWA.—Pres., Wm. Johnston, College Springs; Cor. Sec., C. D. Trumbull, Morning Sun; Rec. Sec., W. L. Enlow, Birmingham; Treas., Wm. Crawford, Washington.

KANSAS.—Pres., J. S. T. Milligan, Denison; Sec., S. Hart, Leocompton; Treas., J. A. Torrence, Denison.

MAINE.—Pres., Isaac Jackson, Harrison; Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W. Goddard, West Sidney.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Treas., David Manning, Sr., both Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., S. B. Sjoblom,ergus Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul; Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., H. F. Miller, Eagleville; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec., A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

NEBRASKA.—Pres., S. Austin, Fairmount; Cor. Sec., W. Spooner, Kearney; Treas., J. C. Fye.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., A. A. Hoyt, Littleton; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., Isaac Hyatt, Gilford Village.

NEW YORK.—Pres., Prof. A. R. Dodd Houghton; Sec., Rev. W. A. Hazlett, Belmont; Treas., P. D. Miller, Newfane.

OHIO.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Parry; Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Seneca; Cor. Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Seneca.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., Nathan Callender, Montdale; Cor. Sec., E. J. Chalfant, York; Treas., J. C. Young, Custer City.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. W. Wood Baraboo; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie; Treas., M. R. Britten, Vienna.

The Christian Cynosure.

J. BLANCHARD, EDITOR.

HENRY L. KELLOGG, ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JULY 3, 1890.

A LETTER from the General Agent since the annual meeting of the N. C. A. gives a cheering account of his labors in New England, and the success of Mrs. Stoddard's and Miss Flagg's Home Guard monthly, which, he says, is welcomed by increasing numbers of W. C. T. U. women, whom the paper is drawing into the anti-secret reform. The history of the anti-slavery struggle and triumph; the success of the Christian Witness and like papers; and indeed, the whole history of New England proves it the natural home of reform.

THE DISCOURSE by the editor of the Cynosure to the ministers at San Francisco has appeared in the Pacific, the Congregational organ of that city; and a small package of that paper is received for distribution. Rev. Mr. Kimball, the able editor, assures us that in his paper it will reach the Congregational pastors from Mexico to Alaska, along the coast. The Spanish king suppressed the Jesuits and turned over their property to the Franciscans, who owned the whole of California and planted twenty-one missions there. The sermon shows their identity with Mormonism and the lodge. If extra Cynosures containing it should be wanted, notice should be sent to this office.

THE SALE OF ANTI-LODGE BOOKS moves on steadily; but we have been derelict about it. Every reader of the Cynosure should be a self-appointed agent for the sale of these volumes. Mr. Cook has sold forty or fifty thousands of some and only some eighteen or twenty thousands of others. The hundreds of these sales should be turned to thousands and the thousands to millions. The publisher will, it is hoped, correspond with H. L. Hastings, who knows how to sell reform literature, and he loves our cause. A properly endorsed agent or agents in England could introduce these volumes to English Baptists and Congregationalists, and they would be bought and read by thousands. And though Sweden and Norway do not speak and read English, some thousands of their people do. And our secret lodges are invading them, and they need these books to defend themselves and their free churches. And Waldenstrom, Ekman and other leaders would introduce them and perhaps have them translated into their Northern tongues.

The two-volume book on the Scottish rite is altogether the strongest work out against the lodge. It was written by the Cynosure editor, and intended as a thesaurus of Anti-masonic history and argument; and as the Scottish rite is the ruling Masonic rite in this country and in Europe, and as Masonry is the mother and type of the whole secret progeny, every one who wishes to acquire correct knowledge of the lodge and to speak, act and pray intelligently in this great war against anti-Christ should read the book on that ruling rite.

AN IMPORTANT MEETING.

Our annual meeting Thursday, June 19, was a good one. We were met by a treasury prospectively empty of ready funds, which was a new experience. And the diversity of views and sentiments proved that there had been no collusion or cutting and drying business for the occasion. The one point in which all were agreed was that the cause must not suffer, but go forward. After much earnest and kind discussion, and the transaction of routine business, including the election of officers, some of whom had not accepted their appointments, the unfinished business was referred to the new Board of Directors, who met on Monday last. Mr. Jerome Howe, son of the philanthropist, Peter Howe, accepts his appointment as director, but wrote expressing his regret that he could not attend this first meeting. But there was a strong quorum of the Board of eleven good men, and their important action was harmonious.

1. They reappointed the editors and officers, adopting the pro rata principle, each to share any deficit at the end of the year to avoid debt.

2. The annual meeting chose Mr. Phillips Corresponding Secretary, and the Board relieved him of the duties of publisher of the Cynosure, which they assigned to Mr. Kellogg.

3. They appointed President C. A. Blanchard Financial Secretary, giving him the use of the Cynosure in the discharge of that important office.

4. They continued our former Secretary Stoddard as their agent in New England, which was understood to be agreeable to his wishes.

5. They gave W. B. Stoddard control of the Washington Building, for which he is to pay a stipulated sum to our treasurer.

6. W. B. Stoddard, and other agents who continue in the service of the Association, are to receive compensation in Cynosure subscriptions, which they are to collect on their respective fields.

No business mind can look over the above method of the Board of Directors to meet an exigency, without admiring their skillful and brave action.

The thing now to be done is to replenish the treasury. Agents, if they had the ability of angels, cannot go into towns and counties whose population is entirely committed and completely lodge-ridden, where they themselves are strangers, and convert the people from their lodges, and raise money from them at the same time. "How can they preach except they are sent?"

But the cause of Christ against the lodge-curse never stood on so high vantage ground as since the meeting of April 22; and we must go forward as God leads by his pillar of cloud and fire. We must now go directly to Him who said, "Whatsoever ye shall ask the Father in my name he will give it you."

The American Missionary Association and the old time-honored Home Missionary Society have now secretaries, Strieby and Kincaid, who are at heart with our cause. One of these expends three or four hundred thousand dollars for colored people, mountain people, Chinese and Indians, and the other raises more than half a million annually to aid 1,500 home missionaries. But both these great societies have Masons in their employ; and both are kept from wiping off the devil-worship from their work by fear of the lodges which rule the churches which furnish their funds. But,

"Believing they'll rejoice
To see the curse remove."

So the "New West Commission" last year raised sixty thousand, and this year they raise eighty-three thousand dollars for Christian schools among the miserable Mormons. But, like the other two societies, Secretary Bliss imperfectly comprehends the lodge evil, and Masons, as a Quaker phrases it, "snake their way" into their mission work, and the fear of the lodge in the churches which support the work keeps them from instructing their missionaries to disfellowship the unfruitful works of darkness. So, as societies, they do all the devils ask, viz., LET THEM ALONE.

Now, the April Conference in Chicago has carried the question with the churches, and multitudes who have read and are reading the speeches of Goodwin, Cook, Roberts and the other speakers in the First M. E. Church, are now ready to contribute to the N. C. A., and if but twenty or thirty thousand dollars can be put into our treasury this year, and good agents sent to enlighten the churches, in a very little while the churches will not support missions with Masonry in them any more than they would now support societies whose missionaries should hold slaves, as the M. E. Bishop Andrew and Cherokee and Choctaw missionaries held slaves a few years since. Only let our brave Board of Directors "look right forward and ponder the path of their feet."

—Bro. Gladwin, the Bombay missionary, writes us from Oregon, "There are anti-secrecy men all along this great West Coast. It only needs a thorough and tenacious work to develop a good crusade here." Are we all praying and planning for the work on the Pacific slope as we ought? A man of God seems to be ready for the word; but, straitened in means, the N. C. A. Board does not venture an expense which it has nothing to meet. Let some generous giver help this far Western work upon its feet.

THE MOODY INSTITUTE.

The semi-annual report of the Moody Bible Institute of this city shows how effectually practical work for souls may be done in connection with student life. Observing men have for a long time given warning against allowing the theological school to become too bookish at the expense of a practical application of the truth to the hearts of men. Under the inspiring influence of Prof. Graham Taylor, Hartford Seminary has become distinctly a missionary school. Other seminaries are writhing like giants in toils, and there is an endeavor to throw off the bonds of a mere intellectuality. The Moody Institute during the last six months has put itself into a position to influence the whole world of Bible students, when the facts are known. The Institute will not, can not, take the place of the regular schools, but certain elements of the Institute must be incorporated into the regular work of the seminaries.

First among these is the practical use of the English Bible among inquirers. There is a recognized lack of readiness on the part of the majority of students in the use of the Bible in pointing men away from self to Christ. Familiarity with the Bible makes missionaries. There is a fascination in the use of a book or anything else, of which one is master. The six young men who competed at the McCormick Seminary last year for the prize offered for proficiency in English Bible are booked for foreign fields. Missions, either home or foreign, means hand to hand engagements with the sword of the Spirit.

The following figures are a demonstration of the wisdom of the methods of work at the Institute. Since Jan. 16, 1890, the 200 students, besides attending the regular class-room lectures, have held 1,424 church, cottage, and mission meetings; made 9,330 visits; talked with 4,668 inquirers; held 225 children's meetings; and have been blessed with 1,053 professed conversions.

There are nineteen denominations represented among these students and they come from twenty-three different States. Their work, so far as it can be presented in figures, proves much and promises more for this notable religious enterprise.

One of these promises is that as the number and influence of such schools increase, the rigidity and formality which has often been inimical to reform questions in the churches will give way. It seemed nothing amiss for Prof. Moorehead of Xenia Theological Seminary, while lecturing in the Institute, to urge all the young men to attend the April Conference and hear the lodge discussed from the Christian standpoint. The influence of such a school must help also in the decision of the churches whether the nominal acceptance of a creed shall be the pass to membership, or a practical Christian life: and on this line we divide when we come to the admission of men who adhere to their worldly lodges in defiance of the example and teaching of Jesus Christ. Let us be thankful for every effort that helps to the day when men shall be holy to the Lord and not partly given over to the devil's service in the secret chambers.

THE BIBLE IN SCHOOLS.

A leading editorial in the Independent heartily endorses the decision of the Supreme Court of Wisconsin excluding the Bible from the public schools. It quotes from Judge Lyons' decision as on the following grounds: "The constitution of Wisconsin prohibits sectarian instruction in the public schools. King James's version of the Bible is a sectarian book. Not all the people of Wisconsin believe in it. The Roman Catholics prefer the Douay version, and all Protestants would regard that as sectarian."

We reply that the Douay version of the Scriptures is regarded as sectarian, not because of any essential difference between it and that of King James, but because of the accompanying comment. The Douay version without note or comment, though as a version not acceptable to Protestants, is in no sense sectarian. Neither is our common version sectarian except in the false idea that Christianity itself is a sect as distinguished from other religions. But manifestly this was not the meaning of the framers of the Constitution.

But the reading of the Bible is not restricted to any one version. The Revised version is in no sense sectarian and avoids some of the imperfections of the others. But the argument of the court, and also of the Independent, is that all instruction in the public schools is to be purely secular. Nothing of any religion is to be taught. This is simply impossible, and if it were not so, would be utterly wrong. Students of history have a right to know facts of Christianity, Mohammedanism or any other system of religion. They cannot understand the history of the world without such knowledge.

In this decision and in its defence by the Independent we see a marked illustration of the malign power of Freemasonry. It has taught that Christianity is simply one of the sects. It has prohibited all sectarian teachings in the lodge and has especially applied this to Christianity as the only kind of "sectarianism" that was likely to be taught. Its worship and religious teaching are "pure theism." Christianity, Mohammedanism, Buddhism and Shintoism are all precisely on a level. So widespread has this idea become that it is influencing our courts and corrupting our religious press. Not all the opposers of the Bible in schools are consciously influenced by Freemasonry, and yet it is the silent force that is supplanting all reverence for the Bible and all honor to our Lord Jesus Christ.

The June number of the Forum is one of universal value. Among its excellent articles is one on "The Interest of America in Africa." It is full of valuable and accurate information as to the state of things in the Dark Continent. Among the facts developed is that the African Arab is not, above all others, a monster of cruelty, but rather an energetic pioneer in trade, and as truly amenable to reason and considerations of justice as other men of like surroundings. As a slave-trader he is no worse than his Negro neighbor, except as he may be more energetic. The author holds that an armed invasion for the suppression of Arab slave-trading would do very little for its removal, while much can be done by purely peaceful methods. He speaks of the liberation of 1,400 slaves at one time. The Arabs are doubtless cruel, but not more so than the Negroes, while among them are many of much intelligence and humanity. The great Congo Valley offers a vast field for legitimate commerce. During the month of February its exports were 8,560,000 francs, and they steadily increase. By the completion of a few short lines of railway, soon to be built, there will be a great highway across the continent from the mouth of the Congo to Lake Tanganyika, Lake Nyassa, the Shire and the Zambesi to the Indian Ocean. The natural facilities for extended internal and inter-oceanic communications are far greater in Africa than in North America. That there will ever be a large emigration of Americans to Africa I do not believe, but that its vast interior offers a grand field for American commerce is unquestionable. Nor is it less true that the great remedy for the slave trade, whether carried on by Negroes or Arabs, is legitimate commerce, and, above all, the extension of Christian missions.

When the National Commissioners of the World's Fair met for organization last Thursday at the Grand Pacific Hotel, their first business after being called to order was to rise while Rev. Dr. John H. Barrows offered a fervent prayer. It is hoped that many of these gentlemen, possibly all, joined in the invocation. This was a good beginning for the official work of this great enterprise. Let it be continued in an earnest effort to secure the observance of the Sabbath day, and the banishment of liquor from the grounds of the fair.

—Bro. E. A. Cook, treasurer of the Illinois State Association, acknowledges the receipt of $4.00 from N. P. Eddy of Wyanet, Ill.

—Our first forms went to press for this number without the changes in the N. C. A. officers, made by the annual meeting, being made in our list. All will be ship-shape in our next.

—As we supposed, the horrifying story widely circulated lately that members of the United Brethren church near Ogden, Mich., were offended at the lodge appointments of the G. A. R. in their house of worship and tore down the U. S.

flag and trampled it under foot, proves to be a canard. The liberal wing of the church had a fellowship meeting with the G. A. R. in the church. The real church occupied the building afterward for religious worship and had to clean up. That's all the story of dishonoring the flag.

—The California G. A. R. made an excursion a while since to the winery of ex-Gov. Stanford. A correspondent writes of the affair: "It was probably the most liberal, grand and unrestricted local drunk the State has ever had. No exclusion on account of sex, age or occupation. Old age, middle age, youth, childhood, manhood and womanhood demonstrated their ability and liability to get thoroughly drunk on 'pure California wines.'"

—"Acacia" is the suggestive name of one of the latest of Chicago clubs. It is composed entirely of Freemasons, and is so well provided with funds that it has lately built a new club house, which was dedicated with a banquet, dancing, billiards, etc. It is evidently not intended for the use of the ordinary lodge man, and like some lodges of the city, will be a convenient citadel within the fortress, or ring within the ring of Masonry.

—The Christian Standard has a correspondent in Van Buren, Arkansas, who has little reverence for the memory of Alexander Campbell, and a Disciple church in that place is equally disregarding the teachings of that eminent preacher, editor and church founder. Campbell was much opposed to the lodge, and the ablest men in the church which he founded from that day to this have been in sympathy with his views, as the late Dr. Isaac Errett, of the Standard, the editors of the Evangelist, Profs. Loos and Ely, Dr. Allen, of this city, in whose church Pres. J. Blanchard spoke last year. But this church in Arkansas thought it a popular move to call in the lodge to lay the corner-stone of their new building, and the correspondent reports, with not a word of rebuke or objection, the whole pagan affair of pouring out the corn, wine and oil.

—A Masonic paper of Australia reports that Rosicrucianism is making progress in the great island continent. Its lodges are under the name of "colleges." One of these at Melbourne called "Demiurgus" and presided over by a "Magister Templi," master of the temple, has its meeting thus reported: "The candidate for advancement not being present, the fraters discussed the future prospects of Rosicrucianism in the colonies, and learned with satisfaction that the Chief Adept Frater, J. d'Drew, has conferred the degree of Zelator 1 deg. on some of the principal officers in the Grand Lodge of South Australia. It was further stated that another college in Melbourne was about to be founded, and that some of the principal scientific gentlemen in the city, whose tastes lead them to the pursuit of the occult sciences, were about to enter the mystic circle of Rosicrucianism."

—At the late commencement of Westminster College, Pennsylvania, the subject of college fraternities received much attention. Their prohibition was the subject of the contest debate between the literary societies, and the liveliest interest was awakened on the subject. The Alumni Association, says the Instructor, in view of statements and charges made about the college, earnestly urged the board to investigate the matter, and if found to exist to cast them out. Their obligations and secrecy and fraternity make investigation very difficult. If all the alumni would lend their hearty assistance, the existence or non-existence of such societies would soon be made clear. Two resolutions, after a spirited discussion, were passed by the Alumni, one asking the Board of Trustees to investigate whether there are secret fraternities in the college or not, and to deal with them if such are found; and one condemning some of the alumni who have been working against the interests of the college by encouraging students to go to other colleges, and in other ways injuring their Alma Mater.

—Few ministers of the Gospel are not at times perplexed with invitations to assist at funeral occasions, when some secret lodge with its paganizing ritual is also expected to bear a part. Rev. J. P. Hentz of Avila, Indiana, in making some statement of his position toward the secret lodges in a local paper deals with the funeral question in the following original manner: "Lodges and societies claim that they ought to be accorded the right to come in between the church and her service, and they grow very indignant when the claim is disputed. The minister who has the hardihood to inform these gentlemen to stand aside is denounced publicly and privately in most unmeasured terms. The papers never get done with him in holding him up to the odium of the public. But let us reverse the case: let the minister knock at the door of the lodge to perform religious service there; will these gentlemen accord him his request? Beware, no! Don't ask, gentlemen, for that which you won't grant in return. We have never yet been able to see any useful place on God's earth for any secret, oath-bound society, but if there is, it is not in the church, nor by the grave."

—Mrs. Bittenbender of Washington is superintendent of the W. C. T. U. department of work which affects legislation. She was lately influential in arranging a "hearing" before the Congressional committees to whom was referred the joint resolution proposing an amendment to the national Constitution in favor of prohibition. It had been provided that, beside the legitimate temperance organizations, the following high-titled orders should have equal prominence in the meeting: "The Right Worthy Grand Lodge Independent Order of Good Templars, National Division of Sons of Temperance of North America, High Tent Independent Order of Rechabites of North America, Supreme Council Templars of Honor and Temperance, and the Supreme Council Royal Templars of Temperance." Inasmuch as many of the members of Congress belong to some lodge, and it is notorious that the reason for such membership is political preferment, it would be natural that they should judge these temperance lodges by their own experience, and wonder what hidden and selfish scheme they were endeavoring to promote. As the men of national reputation in the prohibitory ranks were conspicuously absent on the occasion, it is not likely that legislation will be very seriously affected by the "hearing."

PERSONAL NOTES.

—Prof. J. C. Hutchinson of Monmouth College has resigned the chair of Natural Sciences, after having been identified with the institution for thirty years.

—Rev. W. F. French, D. D., so long and favorably known as pastor of the United Presbyterian church of Cincinnati, has removed lately to Rushville, Indiana.

—Prof. Joseph Moore of Earlham College, Richmond, Ind., whose address on secretism appears in the record of the April Conference, gave an address at the anniversary of Spiceland Academy early in June.

—Rev. C. D. Trumbull, the faithful pastor of the Reformed Presbyterian church of Morning Sun, Iowa, has received the D. D. attachment from Monmouth College. The Cynosure holds with Albert Barnes respecting this degree, but few men are more worthy of the honor, if so it may be called.

—President Benjamin Trueblood, of Penn College, Oskaloosa, Iowa, sails for Europe this week, to be absent a year or more. He has given eleven of his best years to the institution, which is now well established among the Iowa colleges. An additional wing is being erected to the college building. There were twelve graduates this year, and several of the students have the foreign mission work in view.

—A letter from Bro. M. A. Gault, who is now lecturing for the Prohibitory Amendment in Nebraska, indicates that he does not find it altogether smooth sailing. While speaking on the street at Exeter, the meeting was nearly broken up by a whisky crowd. At Chester, after a choir had sung a few pieces on the street and a Methodist brother was leading in prayer, a boy came running around the corner yelling "Fire! Fire! Hastings' house is on fire!" The crowd immediately stampeded for the fire, which was discovered to be only a bon-fire in a back yard. The crowd returned in a few minutes and Bro. Gault went on with his speech.

THE HOME.

GOD IS MY TRUST.

When on my day of life the night is falling,
And in the winds from unsunned spaces blown,
I hear far voices out of darkness calling
My feet to paths unknown,—

Thou who hast made my home of life so pleasant,
Leave not its tenant when its walls decay;
O Love divine, O Helper ever present,
Be thou my strength and stay!

Be near me when all else is from me drifting—
Earth, sky, home's pictures, days of shade and shine,
And kindly faces to my own uplifting
The love which answers mine.

I have but thee, my Father! Let thy Spirit
Be with me then, to comfort and uphold;
No gate of pearl, no branch of palm I merit,
Nor street of shining gold.

Suffice it if—my good and ill unreckoned,
And both forgiven through thy abounding grace—
I find myself by hands familiar beckoned
Unto my fitting place.

Some humble door among thy many mansions,
Some sheltering shade where sin and striving cease,
And flows forever through heaven's green expansions,
The river of thy peace.

There, from the music round about me stealing,
I fain would learn the new and holy song,
And find at last, beneath thy trees of healing,
The life for which I long.

—J. G. Whittier.

WHAT IS PATRIOTISM?

"No," said my friend, "I do not think that I am patriotic. I suppose that I ought to be ashamed to confess it, but to tell the truth, I am neither patriotic nor ashamed. Oh, yes, I have had some of those feelings you speak of. One night in Paris I was lying awake, thinking of home, when a military band marched past, playing 'Yankee Doodle.' It brought me to my feet in a minute, and I thought it the sweetest music I ever heard. I had all sorts of fine thrills run down my back; but that wasn't patriotism, that was homesickness. And when we came into Boston Harbor, I thought the old forts, and that old grain elevator over in East Boston, finer specimens of architecture than any I had seen in my two years of travel. But then, I thought my mother and father, standing on the pier, were grander than all the crowned heads of Europe; so that wasn't patriotism, that was joy at getting home. Don't I glory in the Fourth of July? No, I don't. I am tired of the Fourth of July, and much prefer the third or the fifth. I detest the smell of gunpowder, and I expect that all my small brothers and sisters will be blown to pieces with their toy-pistols and mock-cannon. The event it commemorates?

"Now, I think you have asked me questions enough. Suppose I take my turn. Don't you think we have commemorated the battle of Bunker Hill and the surrender of Yorktown, and even the signing of the Declaration of Independence, until all the meaning of the festival is lost? Does this Fourth of July celebration mean anything to ninety-nine persons out of a hundred, except no work and lots of play? Oh, I know what you are going to say! Of course it ought to inspire all sorts of grand feelings, but does it? When I was a child, each Fourth of July my mind was filled with most intense hatred for the English, and I used to throw my fire-crackers at imaginary 'red-coats' with commendable vehemence. Occasionally, when I hear an eloquent and patriotic oration, I have an attack of what my good German friend calls 'the Bunker Hill fever,' and I glory anew in the work my forefathers did in the last century. Oh, yes, I am always glad that we ceased to be a British colony, and when I think of what this country has accomplished, I am very proud! But I don't think that is patriotism; for immediately follows the thought of what is to be accomplished, and my mind is filled with fears for our future. It seems to me that we rely too much on what we have done, and forget what we have not done. Just think for a moment of the way our politics are conducted, of the disgraceful and disreputable jobbery and buying and selling that goes on every election day! Think of the thousands of ignorant, miserable creatures we are turning into 'enlightened citizens' every year! What are we doing to purify our politics? What are we doing to educate and elevate our immigrants? Don't you think it is time that we clear away some of the rum and Mormonism and anarchy and ignorance, instead of ringing all the bells and parading the streets, and 'giving free drinks?'"

I stood dumb before such a torrent of words. I was shocked at my friend. Evidently two years in Europe had destroyed all the good of her Yankee inheritance. Suddenly an idea occurred to me: "Is that the reason that you give two evenings a week to amusing those dirty little newsboys?" I said. My friend blushed as she answered, "Partly; but that isn't patriotism, that is my duty."

Plainly she was incorrigible. But as I hurried away to buy a toy pistol for my youngest nephew I kept asking myself, "What is patriotism?" Kind reader, I offer it to you as a Fourth of July riddle, "What is patriotism?" Is it not possible that my blushing friend was an unconscious, but a real patriot, when from a sense of "duty" she went to teach the ragged newsboys, that they might become better men and better citizens.—Selected.

THE NATION'S PERIL.

The dangers that hang over us are of subtler kind than those of open violence, of assassination from without, or secession from within. Irreligion and irreverence work like poison in the blood until all sense of obligation ceases, and patriotism dies. A nation without faith cannot fight, nor can it long live. When Washington began the Presidency, France, under the inspiration of our great example, was entering upon a revolution which ended as did ours, in a republic. But behold the contrast! Since then France has had two empires, two monarchies, and three republics; and the republic of to-day is waiting for the empire of to-morrow. It is for the next successful soldier to build his throne on the foundations of a liberty-loving but unbelieving people. Victor Hugo struck the key-note of France's deepest need when he exclaimed: "What France must have is a revival of religious faith!"

The foundations of this government were laid with prayer. The Constitution got its very breath in the air of faith. In every crisis of our affairs it has been the sense of divine help that has put wisdom into the brains of statesmen and courage into the hearts of soldiers. Washington prayed amidst his freezing army at Valley Forge. Franklin prayed, free thinker as he was, in the confusion and despair of the constitutional convention. Lincoln prayed in the carnage at Chancellorsville and in the victories of the Wilderness. Give us, straight on, reverence for God, obedience to his laws, and respect for his ordinances; and all the other evils which sometimes fill us with consternation as we eye their increasing magnitude, will fade away. The gross materialism of the hour, the fierce greed for office; the corruption of the ballot, the evils of unchecked immigration, of intemperance, of ignorant suffrage, of Mormonism—these, one and all, would disappear in the dissolving light of a faith which can bring men under the power of supernatural sanctions, thus restraining the violence of the masses and the selfish indulgences of the individual.—Dr. Spaulding.

TEN FACTS ABOUT FLAGS.

1. To "strike the flag" is to lower the national colors in token of submission.
2. Flags are used as the symbol of rank and command, the officers using them being called flag officers. Such flags are square to distinguish them from other banners.
3. A "flag of truce" is a white flag, displayed to an enemy to indicate a desire for a parley or consultation.
4. The white flag is a sign of peace. After a battle, parties from both sides often go out to the field to rescue the wounded or bury the dead, under the protection of a white flag.
5. The red flag is a sign of defiance, and is often used by revolutionists. In our service it is a mark of danger, and shows a vessel to be receiving or discharging her powder.
6. The black flag is a sign of piracy.
7. The yellow flag shows a vessel to be in quarantine or is the sign of a contagious disease.
8. A flag at half-mast means mourning. Fishing and other vessels return with a flag at half-mast to announce the loss or death of some of them.

9. Dipping the flag is lowering it slightly and then hoisting it again to salute a vessel or fort.

10. If the President of the United States goes afloat, the American flag is carried in the bows of his barge or hoisted at the main of the vessel on board of which he is.—Selected.

THE DAYS OF THE ROSES.

[Translated from the German of Otto Roquette.]

This is the bright, golden blossoming time,
When fair Earth and Life in harmony chime!
And so wide is my heart, and so blue is the day,
And the sky, reveled in by the larks so gay!
Ye Joyous Ones, sing, in your life's early prime:
This is the beautiful, blossoming time,
These are the days of the roses!

Free is the heart and free is the song,
And free is the youth as he roams along,
And a sweet, rosy kiss is not the less free,
Though bashful and coy the red lips may be.
The song and the kiss may be in any clime,
And there is the bright, golden blossoming time,
These are the days of the roses!

Deep in our hearts will forever remain
The blossoms of joy, and the buds of pain.
If gay be the heart, then, and happy the thought,
We dare ye, oh, storm, and ye rage for naught,
While we are e'er ready to join in the rhyme:
This is the bright, golden, blossoming time,
These are the days of the roses!

—The Standard.

JACK'S FORTUNATE FOURTH.

"Don't be worried if I'm not home to-night, mother. The fire-works may last too late for me to come home, and I'll stay all night with Tom Hackett—he said I could."

"Very well, Jack, but be careful not to get into any trouble. I don't know what I would do if anything should happen to you."

"There is no danger, mother. I won't get into the thick of the crowd. And when I come back I'll bring you the fifty cents Professor Mayton will give me for fixing up his books."

"Every little helps, of course, but fifty cents won't go far toward buying the cow, my boy," said Mrs. Dane. "You'd better give up all idea of that cow, Jack, we'll never be able to save enough to buy her."

"Yes we will," rejoined Jack, cheerily. "I'm going to work like a trooper all haying time," and he went off whistling and waving a long stick with which he snapped off the heads of the weeds that lined the roadside.

Mrs. Dane stood in the doorway of her little cottage and watched him until he disappeared around a bend in the road. Jack was a great comfort and help to her, though he was only thirteen, and small for his age. She had been advised to bind him out to some farmer, and so rid herself of his support, but she was anxious that he should receive at least a fair education, and had decided to allow him to attend school a year or two longer—a privilege which the boy appreciated at its just value.

Though only in the preparatory school of college, he was well known, and was a great favorite with the students and professors, for he possessed a wonderfully happy, obliging disposition, and was always ready to do a favor for anyone.

Jack had looked forward to this fourth of July with great impatience, for it was to be celebrated with unusual ceremony. At twelve o'clock a cannon was to be fired; then there would be a grand comic procession, in which all the tradesmen of the town were to take part, and in the evening fire-works on the common in front of the town-hall.

The college proper had been closed on the 25th of June, and the regular students and professors had left for their homes, north, south, east and west, but a summer school had taken its place for three months, the students of which were of both sexes and all ages, and Jack found an opportunity to earn many a dime in their service.

Several of the "summer teachers," as they were called, had chosen to spend the fourth at their homes, and had gone away on the third. Among them was Prof. Mayton, and happening to meet Jack Dane on the way to the depot, he had been struck by a sudden thought.

"Jack," he said "would you like to earn fifty cents? All the books in my book-case are covered with dust, and ought to be taken down carefully, brushed off, and put back again. Now I know I can trust you to do it as it ought to be done. As the greater number of the books do not belong to me, I would not trust every boy to handle them, but I am sure you will be careful."

"I'll do my best, sir," said Jack, much gratified at the praise bestowed upon him.

"Here's the key of my room, which you can leave with Professor Dryley when you are through," said Mr. Mayton, and he put a big, brass key in Jack's hand, and hurried away.

So that was the reason Jack left home so early on the morning of the fourth. He knew he would have to work diligently in order to get through with the books by noon. The college buildings were in the suburbs, and Prof. Mayton occupied a room at the extreme end of a long hall in the third story of one of them. It was not a cheerful nor particularly pleasant room, for its two windows overlooked a barren, marshy piece of land, unbroken by even a hazel bush.

There was no temptation for Jack to look out, and he began his work at once. The books were large and heavy and very dusty, and he was often tempted to pause and rest, but the thought of the celebration on the common, which would begin punctually at twelve, kept him steadily at his task. But there were so many books, and it took so long to put them all back in their places that it was ten minutes to twelve when at last he was through and free to go. He thought he was free, but when he went to the door he discovered that he was a prisoner. The door was locked, and the key was gone.

He understood at once what had happened. The janitor of the building had seen the key in the door, and, supposing that the professor had carelessly gone off without locking it, had taken that duty upon himself at once. Jack had heard footsteps in the hall, but had been too busy over the books to notice the turning of the key in the lock, and now he was a prisoner with little chance of release. The room next to the professor's was used as a store-room, and was seldom entered, and the one below it was a laboratory, which was closed for the summer; so Jack felt that it was of no use to try to make his situation known. Nevertheless he pounded on the door, hoping the janitor had not yet left the building, and he screamed "Help" at least a dozen times; but no one came. He went to one of the windows and looked out anxiously, thinking that perhaps by some strange chance some one might be on the marsh; but it was utterly desolate.

"I might as well settle myself down to stay here until to-morrow," thought the poor boy. "It's clear that I won't get out to-day."

At twelve o'clock he heard the booming of the cannon, and a feeling of the most bitter disappointment crept over him. He would miss everything—the great procession, the music, the speeches, the fireworks and the crowd. Oh, it did seem too bad to be shut up in this dreary, warm room, while every one else was celebrating the glorious fourth!

But great as was his disappointment, Jack did not fret long over it, but resigned himself with a good grace to his hard lot, and was thankful that his mother had put such a substantial wedge of bread and butter in his pocket for lunch. He had food for his mind, too, and read steadily all the afternoon, occasionally pausing to wonder "what the boys were doing now," and to walk to the window to look out on the lonely marsh, hoping some one might pass by.

When night came he lay down on the professor's sofa, and was soon sound asleep; and there the professor found him when he came in the next morning at seven o'clock, having arrived in town on an early train.

"Jack!" he exclaimed, "what are you doing here, my boy?"

Jack, springing to his feet, gazed about him in a bewildered way a moment, before he could remember the events of the previous day.

"I was locked in," he said, at last.

"And spent your fourth of July in here! That was a shame! The janitor handed me my key as I entered the building, and I was mentally reproaching you for having left it in the door! Jack, I must make this up to you somehow."

In half an hour the story of Jack's imprisonment was all over town, and when one of the students, a generous-hearted, impressive woman, went around with a small bag to take up a collection for the boy, that he might have another fourth of July of a different kind, the dimes and half-dollars dropped in from every side. All entered into the spirit of the affair, and were glad to give.

"There, Jack, buy all the fireworks you want," said the fair collector, as, having finished her rounds, she handed the bag to the astonished boy, who had been detained by Prof. Mayton to get some breakfast. "You deserve the biggest kind of a fourth."

Jack could not realize his good fortune at first, and when he found there was nearly thirty dollars in the bag, he was completely overcome.

But he did not buy fireworks. On his way home he stopped at Farmer Dale's, and when he entered his own gate an hour later, he was driving before him a sleek black and white cow, which he had already named Beauty.

This was the beginning of good fortune at the Dane's. The cow gave an abundance of milk, and Mrs. Dane made so much butter for market that she was soon able to buy another cow, and in time had a flourishing dairy which kept her busy from morning to night.

"Jack," she used to say, "it was a good thing for us all that you were shut up that fourth, and lost the celebration." And Jack agreed with her most heartily.—The Standard.

TEMPERANCE.

JOSEPH COOK IN THE NATIONAL TEMPERANCE CONFERENCE.

Joseph Cook's words were listened to eagerly and rapturously applauded. He said the church of God was pushing against the rock of the liquor traffic a cask that had no hoops to it, the forces were all in disorder and disagreement, and gave seven propositions, or hoops.

1. The church ought at least to rise to the level of the attainments now made necessary in the public schools—pointing significantly to a map showing the twenty-seven States and Territories under scientific temperance. That Sunday-school scholars should be taught morally what the school children are being taught scientifically, and if teachers have to abstain from liquor and tobacco to be effective teachers, so should preachers and all church members. Mr. Spurgeon used to drink wine and think it all right; now he says, "Grape juice has killed more people than grape-shot."

2. No rum-seller should ever be accepted as a church member.

3. If so, then all churches should rise to the declaration of the M. E. church, and declare that the traffic can never be legalized without sin.

4. If these two last propositions are true, it follows inevitably that church members ought never to vote for or with any one in favor of licensing the traffic.

5. Church members should work for the enforcement of all laws, as they stand against the traffic.

6. There should be visitation from house to house; personal contact with all tempted ones.

7. Church members should unitedly insist on Sunday and election day closing, and for the prohibition of sales to habitual drinkers and minors. If there is unanimity along these lines there will be victory!—Union Signal.

THE DRACUT, MASS., CASE.

Poor Dracut has not yet seen the end of her $8,000 license saloon. It seems that the State, in its unholy partnership with the rum business, has a claim on a portion of the money, and the town would be liable for it even after it had been refunded. So the majority, when they held their town meeting, instead of choosing the plain, straight path, hedged about, refused to accept the surrendered license and refund the fee under the belief that the saloonist who held it was too thoroughly frightened and disgusted by the scenes of debauchery attending the first opening of his place to try it again, and would give up his $8,000 rather than continue. But saloon-keepers are not usually inclined to make financial sacrifices for the public good, so he has again resumed business. Yet is he more—nay—is he not less blame-worthy by far than the citizens of Dracut, who for a paltry money consideration are willing to make the name of their fair town, in the words of Scripture, "a hissing and a reproach?"

A SAD CASE.

Years ago Charley — was a bright, promising boy, engaged at work in the glass factory here, where he continued for eight successive years. One night he was out late with a young companion. They went into a saloon. While there a drunken woman entered and stated that she did not know the way home on Sixth street. These two boys were asked by the saloon-keeper to see the woman home. They started with her, and but a few steps from the saloon another man came up and offered to escort the lady home. She was so willing to go with him that the young men supposed him to be her friend, and at once left her in his care. This man (?) after going about two blocks with her committed an outrageous assault upon her, for which he and the other two were arrested. At the trial which followed the man offered no defence, virtually acknowledging his guilt. He also stated that the two young men were innocent. Charley had no money to pay counsel, and was convicted as an accessory. He was sentenced to the State prison for a term of forty years, and the actual criminal for fifty. The man has long ago been pardoned, while Charley remains at San Quentin, an innocent convict, and will there have to stay for some thirty years longer unless some State officer will prove himself a humanitarian, willing to do something for the sake of justice and right without reference to boodle.

Poor Charley! Forty years at hard labor for being in bad company one night.—California Voice.

Drink sends one hundred thousand children to alms-houses yearly.

Miss Leila Bull, a former member of the Young Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Pittsfield, Mass., has been a missionary in Osaka, Japan, for nearly two years. She reports that the temperance society organized there among the women by Mrs. Leavitt now numbers two hundred women, and that the officers, except the president, are Japanese.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—The Presbyterian church, Northern, reports total receipts of the Board of Foreign Missions, $794,066.44. From churches, $291,791; from Sabbath-schools, $36,061; from woman's boards, $280,285; from legacies and from miscellaneous sources, $73,120. There was a decrease of $58,599 as compared with last year. Thirteen less churches contributed. There is at present a deficit of $60,275. There were sent out during the year to Mexico 5 missionaries; to Columbia, 4; to Brazil, 8; to Syria, 6; to Persia, 13; to Laos, 3; to Korea, 5; to China, 26; to Japan, 15; to Guatemala, 2; to Africa, 3; and to India, 16—total, 106. Besides out-stations there are in the Indian mission 6 stations, in the Mexican 5, in Guatemala 1, in the Brazilian 8, in the Columbian 3, in the Chilian 4, in the African 17, in India 19, in the Siamese 5, in the Chinese 13, in the Japanese 5, in the Korean 1, in the Persian 6, and in the Syrian 5—in all 98.

—Rev. Dr. and Mrs. G. T. Washburn, missionaries of the American Board in Madura, India, for many years, have returned to this country for a brief vacation. So great is the need of workers in the field where they labor that their stay at home will last only six weeks. When some one told them that it hardly paid coming back, they said it was that or nothing. The Madura Mission has a flourishing seminary, with a theological department, a normal school, a college and high school, and a middle school, of which Dr. Washburn is principal. There are twelve stations connected with this mission. Several of the older missionaries who have done a grand work in that field have returned to this country, and their places are not filling so rapidly as they could desire.—Tribune.

—The Christians of Great Britain gave altogether to foreign missions last year $6,672,455. Over one third of the amount came from the Established Church.

—A society for missionary work among the Norwegian Laplanders was formed in Norway in 1888. The Episcopal Recorder says that it has sent two itinerant preachers to visit the people in their huts and tents, and has begun publishing parts of the Bible and other books in their language.

—Much awakened religious interest, with some conversions, is reported at Marsovan, Turkey, and the whole work is now spoken of as a revival. Here is one of the missions of the A. B. C. F. M., and a similar interest has lately existed at Hadjin, in Central Turkey. At Erzroom and Erzingam special quickening has also been evident, and at Marash (all Turkish stations) one hundred persons have been examined for admission to the church.

—Mr. T. R. Sampson, an intelligent missionary at Salonica, admits that the call for laborers in Greece is not so urgent as in China or Japan, but says that there is now an opportunity in Macedonia, Epirus and Asia Minor such as has never existed before, and may not exist there long, should Russia or Austria come in. The work can be done only by Americans, for they are not mixed up with politics abroad, nor embarrassed by state establishments at home. The rest of the world is open to Christians of all nations alike, but in this part of Europe the circumstances particularly favor those who come from the western world.

—The first Protestant missionary landed in Japan in 1854; the first baptism took place in 1865; the first church was organized in 1872. Now there are 28 missionary societies at work, with a force of 443, male and female foreign missionaries, 142 native ordained missionaries, 252 native helpers, 8 colporteurs and 70 Bible women. There are 396 stations and out-stations, 92 of the churches are self-supporting, and 157 partly so, with a total membership of 25,514, whose gifts, for all purposes, in 1888, amounted to $48,340.93. The Sunday-schools number 295, with 16,634 scholars in attendance. There are 14 theological schools, with 287 students, and 9,698 have been gathered into the missionary day schools. The translation of the New Testament was not completed until 1880, and the whole Bible at the beginning of 1888. A few months later one society had distributed over 100,000 copies of the complete Bible, and, previously, more than twice that number of the various parts. No less than 575 daily and weekly newspapers and 111 scientific periodicals are printed in Japan. There is also a good system of postal and telegraph service, with extensive lines of railway in course of construction. They manufacture their own locomotives and steamships, while last year's imports with the United States from Japan amounted to $16,000,000 in value.

—Swedish missionaries, numbering about twelve, who were originally connected with the Livingstone Inland Mission on the Congo, but who, at the time that mission was transferred to the American Missionary Baptist Union, came under the direct supervision of the Swedish Missionary Society, will soon be reinforced by seven new helpers from Sweden. They have already had some fruit from their labors; the congregations are increasing, and the children are coming to school.

—The United Presbyterian church of Paxton, Ill., is enjoying a blessed revival experience. Fifteen members were received June 15, and forty have come in during the year.

—While the United Presbyterian Assembly was in session at Buffalo, a movement was started by a few of the delegates to give a stimulus to liberal giving. An association was formed whose constitution is comprised in the following pledge: "We, the undersigned, hereby agree to give to God, as thank-offerings for his manifold mercies, especially through the Boards of the United Presbyterian church, or its enterprises, not less than one-fifth of our respective incomes, as the Lord may prosper us, for the year ending July 1, 1891; each donor to decide for himself what division he will make of his offerings."

—Sweden seems desirous of taking its share in African enterprise and exploration. Mr. Sachrisen is the leader of a projected Swedish expedition to the Victoria Nyanza; 100 Swedish artisans have entered into arrangements extending over three years. The intention is to form stations from the northeast of Lake Tanganyika in the direction of the Victoria Nyanza, designed to co-operate in the suppression of the slave trade. Fifteen hundred native carriers are to be employed. Twenty-five thousand pounds, it is estimated, are needed for the enterprise, of which about £15,000 have been subscribed. Mr. Sachrisen has already had considerable experience—in 1880 at Boma and Leopoldville, and later, in 1884, in a scientific expedition near the Zambezi.

—A mission school is to be established at Point Barrow, the northernmost point of the mainland of the continent, above Behring Strait. It has a permanent population of about five hundred Eskimos. Last summer the Government erected at that point a refuge station for shipwrecked whalers, and during the summer there are from 1,500 to 2,000 sailors of the whaling fleet in the vicinity.

—Rev. John Hall, D.D., of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian church, New York, goes as a delegate to the Jubilee Assembly of the Irish Presbyterian church, at Belfast, in July, from the General Assembly North. The Fifth Avenue church will be open all the summer, however, the pulpit being supplied during Dr. Hall's absence.

—In the international Sunday-school convention at Pittsburg, Pa., quite a contest took place between St. Louis, Chicago, Denver, Los Angeles, and Toronto for the next international convention in 1893, but Chicago withdrew in favor of St. Louis and that city was selected. The time for holding the convention, however, was left to the discretion of the executive committee. Both the international and world's Sunday-school conventions will probably be held in that city at the same time. In extending the invitation to hold the convention in St. Louis the Rev. William Randall said: "The trains running to St. Louis can afford ample accommodations to delegates to this convention in 1893, for the world, the flesh, and the devil will all then be in Chicago attending the world's fair."

—The recent convention at St. Louis surpassed in size and enthusiasm any that has gone before it, and exceeded the expectations of the officers of the United Society. Fully eleven thousand were present at the sessions of the last evening of the convention; nearly seven thousand in the Music Hall of the Exposition Building where the convention was held and over four thousand in the five overflow meetings which were held at the same hour in different churches. More than a thousand went away who could not get into the Music Hall. Texas, Arkansas and several other Southern States were represented for the first time at this convention. Many delegates came from each of the States named and State Christian Endeavor Unions were formed at St. Louis which will advance the work effectively in those States during the coming year.

—The Lutheran Annual for 1890 gives the following statistics of the Lutheran church in the United States: 50 synods, 4,612 ministers, 7,911 congregations and 1,086,048 members. An increase of about two thousand ministers, five thousand congregations and nearly two hundred thousand members has been made in the last twenty-five years.

—The signs all are that the ladies are to have increasing prominence and influence in the churches. The Presbyterian General Assembly submitted an overture which provides for their election and ordination to the office of deaconess, "in a manner similar to that appointed for deacons, and be set apart by prayer." It is evident that in some way there will have to be more distinct and formal recognition and definition of woman's work and its sphere in the church. The best intentions will not make complication and even conflict impossible. —United Presbyterian.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE NEW TESTAMENT.

LESSON II. —Third Quarter.—July 13.

SUBJECT.—The Great Supper.—Luke 14: 15-24.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Blessed is he that shall eat bread in the kingdom of God.—Luke 14: 15.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

DAILY READINGS.—M.—Luke 13:18-35, T.—Luke 14: 1-14. W.—Luke 14: 15-24, T.—Matt. 22:1-14, F.—Isa. 61: 1-II. S.—John 6:35-58, S.—Rev. 21:1-27.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. The Gospel invitation.—vs. 15-17. Jesus was always ready to go where he saw a chance to do good, nor have we on record a single instance where he refused offered hospitality. Surely if he was ready to enter the house of publican or Pharisee who invited him, he is no less ready now to enter any heart that sincerely bids him welcome. We find him in our lesson the guest of a leading Pharisee. There was none of the clique spirit in Christ; and there ought to be none about his followers. He had just been discoursing to his host on true benevolence. There is none in making a feast and inviting to it only those who will do the same to us in return; but the maimed, the halt, the blind—all poor and unfortunate ones who can give us no recompense, are the ones that true benevolence singles out. We can imagine what our Lord would have to say about lodge charity if he were a guest in one of our homes today, and this subject was discussed; how his scathing denunciations would shrivel up its false pretensions, and show the difference between the true gold and the base alloy. A guest made the remark in answer—how sincerely we do not know: "Blessed is he who shall eat bread in the kingdom of God." His words have a pious sound like Baalam's, "Let me die the death of the righteous," but they are what any one might say who thinks more about gaining the reward than of living the life of a righteous man. Our Lord at once proceeds to show him in the following parable that who would eat bread in the heavenly kingdom must begin on earth to eat the spiritual manna; that the Gospel feast was already spread and only the guests were lacking.

2. The invitation rejected.—vs. 18-20. Christ here shows what frivolous excuses keep men away from the kingdom. They show their falsity on the surface. Man's "I cannot" to God's invitation always means, "I will not." Only a fool would buy property that he had not seen; but this is what God's Word calls every one who lets the claims of the world come in between him and eternal life. The plea, whether expressed or not, is always similar to that of the invited guests in the parable. "I want to prove life's pleasures before I renounce them for the sake of Christ."

Yet life's real pleasures are doubled by adding to them the hope of the life to come. All which will drop away is the unreal, the unsatisfying delights of sin. The land, the oxen, the wife, would not have been lost by attending the supper. They would still have had all these things and the pleasure and honor of going to the feast would have been only so much added. "Godliness hath profit of the life that now is, and of that which is to come;" but the devil says the contrary and multitudes believe him.

3. The house filled.—vs. 21-24. It has been said, "there will be no empty seats in heaven." God wants his house to be full of happy guests. Therefore when the rulers and higher classes generally reject the Gospel he turns to the common people. No great revival preacher from Christ downward has had any marked success among the wealthy or ruling classes. But the common people, the laborers in mines and shops, have greeted with gladness the message from heaven, which has lent a glory to their bare and sordid existence, and given to the humblest life a preciousness of which they had never before conceived. While this parable was spoken to the Jews it has an application for us. The highways and hedges outside of the city limits may represent the heathen world. The servant, who with sweet, compelling force brings in these late guests to the feast, is commanded to "go out quickly." The banquet waits; there is no time for dallying. The Gospel makes no use of the future tense. What we have to give to God is to be given at once; what we are to do is to be done now!

HELPFUL THOUGHTS FROM PELOUBET.

Excuses and reasons are often very different things. Men are often ashamed of their real reasons for their conduct and for rejecting Christ; have to hide them not only from others, but from themselves, by some plausible excuses. And if we wish to reach men who neglect the Gospel, we must be far more careful to understand and remove the reasons than to try to answer their excuses. It is for this reason that much of the arguing with irreligious men is so useless.

MODERN HIGHWAYS AND HEDGES.—It is still the business of all Christians to go out into the highways and hedges, and invite all, both good and bad, to come to the Gospel feast. (1) The worse men are, the more degraded and sinful, the fewer their opportunities, and the more they are opposed to good, so much the more do they need the invitations of the Gospel. (2) It will not do to wait for people to come to the churches; the churches must go to them. (3) We must use all moral forces to attract and win and persuade men. (4) This effort must be persistent. (5) This applies to our interest in home and foreign missions. (6) This is the way to fill up the Sunday-schools. Train each scholar to go into the highways.

The celebration of days grows in our church and among our people. Time was when no such celebrations were countenanced among Protestants. It was thought their tendency was to exalt human authority and supplant divinely-appointed days. Certainly there is danger here. We see it in the Roman Catholic church, and in ritualistic churches generally. We do not regard these as sacred days, it is true, but they occupy the time, and rival God's appointed day, and sometimes exclude the proper services of the Sabbath to make way for human ceremonies. It is time the church should put a check to this tendency. If God's people would keep the Sabbath more carefully, and let the semi-holy days alone, God would receive more honor and men more of blessing.—Christian Instructor.

Sunday base ball playing, which has been tolerated longer than it would seem possible by a Christian public, has evidently about run its course. The vigorous expression of public sentiment against this last form of Sunday desecration is making itself felt through the country. The Sunday clubs are meeting with considerable opposition in many places and some of their officers already have been arrested. Sunday ball playing is a nuisance and a desecration of the day set apart for rest and religious contemplations. The law is explicit enough on this point and can, and doubtless will, be enforced.—Weekly Ithacan, Ithaca, N. Y.

GEORGE WASHINGTON. Rev. Ezra Styles, D.D., in the "Philadelphia," July 23, 1830: "Hitherto I have neither advocated nor opposed Masonry, unless it be in the relation of a conversation between General Washington and Governor Jonathan Trumbull the second, which the latter more than once repeated to my father. The latter, when aid de camp to the former, asked him if he would advise him to become a Mason. General Washington replied, that Masonry was a benevolent institution, which might be employed for the best or worst of purposes; but that for the most part it was merely child's play, and that he could not give him any advice on the subject."

IN BRIEF.

London has no Sunday mail. At 10 o'clock Saturday night the postoffice is closed and no letters are received or delivered.

The attempt to start a Robert Elsmere religion in London has been a partial failure. It is much easier to make such a negative creed a success in a novel, where disagreeable facts can be ignored, than in real life.

The Nashville Issue claims that the money that Tennessee pays annually for whisky ($15,000,000) would meet all the regular expenses of the State for ten years. Nashville saloon receipts alone would carry on the government.

The German Emperor having issued an order suppressing the use of all French words in the postal service, the Czar has antagonized it by a circular which declares that all letters, telegrams and packages sent abroad must be addressed in French, and the Russian authorities will not be responsible for the transmission of any mail matter that is not addressed in that language.

The Forth bridge cost the lives of fifty-six workmen during the seven years of its construction, but the engineers insist that this is a remarkably good showing. They say: "The fact that the loss of life has not been larger on a work of such magnitude, with so large a number of men employed in dangerous positions, shows that no reasonable precautions for their safety have been omitted."

The use of electric lights is increasing with great rapidity among the London shopmen. A walk down the Strand or Oxford street after dark will show that every second or third store has now given up gas, which would have been entirely superseded some time ago if it were not so cheap. Many of the other large cities in England are now using the arc light, and at Brighton it is almost universal.

Florence Nightingale, the world-famed philanthropist, will reach her seventieth birthday in May. The event is to be celebrated in many towns and villages throughout England, as well as at the invalid's quiet home in Derbyshire. The Queen herself is personally interested in doing this honor to the heroine of the Crimea and will be represented on that day, at the "Nightingale Home," by some member of the royal family.

The Manchester ship canal, which is slowly approaching completion, is one of the greatest engineering works of the age. The engineer, Mr. Leader Williams, recently stated that there were employed upon it 11,489 men and boys, 182 horses, 5,000 wagons (including cars, as we call them), and 169 locomotives. The work necessitated the laying of 213 miles of railway, and there were used every month 8,000 tons of Portland cement and 10,000 tons of coal.—Railway Age.

A curious incident is reported from Scotland. In Wigtonshire a mother had a child 18 months of age so delicate of health and in appearance that it was supposed to be under the influence of the evil eye. The mother determined to make a heroic effort to wrest her babe from the power of the devil and she called a council of the crones in the village. These worthy dames recommended that the ancient process of exorcising the evil spirit be resorted to, and to this extraordinary proposition the mother consented. Accordingly the party, carrying the child with them, repaired to a lonesome spot outside the village and formally exorcised the devil in this wise: Securing a hoop twenty-four inches in diameter, they twisted straw around it, and, saturating the straw with oil, set fire to it. Then two of the women laid hold upon the naked infant and passed it vertically through this ring of fire eighteen times (once for every month of its age), meanwhile commanding the devil within to begone and remain forever therefrom. This brutal office having been performed, the blistered babe was taken home and put to bed and a bunch of bog-myrtle was hung up over its cradle. Strangely enough, the tortured child did not die, but the injuries it sustained, will make it

SCROFULA

Is that impurity of the blood which produces unsightly lumps or swellings in the neck; which causes running sores on the arms, legs, or feet; which develops ulcers in the eyes, ears, or nose, often causing blindness or deafness; which is the origin of pimples, cancerous growths, or "humors;" which, fastening upon the lungs, causes consumption and death. It is the most ancient of all diseases, and very few persons are entirely free from it.

How Can It Be CURED

By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by the remarkable cures it has accomplished, has proven itself to be a potent and peculiar medicine for this disease. If you suffer from scrofula, try Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"Every spring my wife and children have been troubled with scrofula, my little boy, three years old, being a terrible sufferer. Last spring he was one mass of sores from head to feet. We all took Hood's Sarsaparilla, and all have been cured of the scrofula. My little boy is entirely free from sores, and all four of my children look bright and healthy." W. B. ATHERTON, Passaic City, N. J.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by E. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

a cripple for life. A movement was begun by certain persons in the neighborhood to secure the apprehension and punishment of the perpetrators of this cruel torture, but the movement had to be abandoned for the reason that the other folk of the village rose en masse, clamoring that the old women had acted wisely and religiously and that any attempt to punish them for their religious deed would be heretical and an abominable league and co-operation with Satan.

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from June 23 to 28 inclusive:

Mrs J Potter, I. Crane, G Baker, Mrs R Park, F Wells, J H Stutzman, I H Jones, Rev C W Grey, J B Stowell, Rev G F Albrecht, A Johnston, R H Orr, B Smith, J Powers, E Jarvis, F Morath, E Osborn, Rev V B Skov, Mrs E Brooks, Mrs C L Dyer, H W Goddard.

As soon as you discover any falling of the hair or grayness always use Hall's Hair Renewer to tone up the secretions and prevent baldness or grayness.

CONSUMPTION SURELY CURED.

TO THE EDITOR:—Please inform your readers that I have a positive remedy for above named disease. By its timely use thousands of hopeless cases have been permanently cured. I shall be glad to send two bottles of my remedy FREE to any of your readers who have consumption, if they will send me their Express and P. O. address. Respectfully, T. A. BLOOM, M. D., 181 Pearl St., New York.

EVERY WATERPROOF COLLAR OR CUFF

THAT CAN BE RELIED ON

Not to Split!

Not to Discolor!

BEARS THIS MARK.

NEEDS NO LAUNDERING. CAN BE WIPED CLEAN IN A MOMENT.
THE ONLY LINEN-LINED WATERPROOF COLLAR IN THE MARKET.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS ILLUSTRATED.

By a Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank. The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips etc., are shown by engravings. 32 cents each; per dozen, $2.00. Address the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 331 W. Madison St., Chicago.

PATRIARCHS MILITANT ILLUSTRATED

THE COMPLETE RITUAL

With Eighteen Military Diagrams

As Adopted and Promulgated by the

SOVEREIGN GRAND LODGE

OF THE

(INDEPENDENT ORDER OF ODD-FELLOWS)

At Baltimore, Maryland, Sept. 24th, 1885

Compiled and Arranged by John C. Underhill, Lieutenant General.

WITH THE

UNWRITTEN OR SECRET WORK ADDED.

ALSO AN

Historical Sketch and Introduction

By Pres't. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College.

25 cents each.

For Sale by the National Christian Association

331 West Madison St., Chicago.

FIFTY YEARS and BEYOND;

OR,

Old Age and How to Enjoy It.

A most appropriate gift book for "The Old Folks at Home."

Compiled by REV. S. G. LATHEOP.

Introduction by

REV. ARTHUR EDWARDS, D. D.,
(Editor N. W. Christian Advocate.)

The object of this volume is to give to that great army who are fast hastening toward the "great beyond" some practical hints and help as to the best way to make the most of the remainder of that now is, and to give comfort and help to those who are suffering from old age.

"It is a tribute to the Christianity that honors one gray head and refuses to consider the oldish man burden or an obstacle. The book will aid and comfort every reader."—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

"The selections are very precious. Springing from such numerous and pure fountains, they can but afford a refreshing and healthful draught for every aged traveler to the great beyond."—Witness.

Price, bound in rich cloth, 400 pages, $1

Address, W. I. PHILLIP,
331 W. Madison St., Chicago Ill

HELPS

TO

BIBLE STUDY

With Practical Notes on the Books of Scripture.

Designed for Ministers, Local Preachers, S. Teachers, and all Christian Workers.

Chapter I.—Different Methods of Bible Study.

Chapter II.—Rules of Interpretation.

Chapter III.—Interpretations of Bible Types and Symbols.

Chapter IV.—Analysis of the books of the Bible.

Chapter V.—Miscellaneous Helps.

Cloth, 184 pages, price postpaid, 50 cents.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
331 W. Madison St., Chicago.

MASONIC OUTRAGES.

BY REV. H. H. HINMAN.

The character of this valuable pamphlet is seen from its chapter headings: I.—Masonic Attempts on the Lives of Seceders. II.—Masonic Slander. III.—Masonic Assault on Free Speech. IV.—Freemasonry Among the Colored People. V.—Masonic Interference with the Punishment of Criminals. VI.—The Fruits of the Masonic Institution as seen in the Conspiracies and Outrages of Other Secret Orders. VII.—The Relation of the Secret Lodge System to the Foregoing and Similar Outrages.

PRICE, POSTPAID, 20 CENTS.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
331 W. Madison St. Chicago.

A WOMAN'S VICTORY;

OR

THE QUERY OF THE LODGEVILLE CHURCH.

BY JENNIE L. HARDIE.

This simple and touching story is worth reading by every Anti-mason—and especially BY HIS WIFE. Get it and take it home to cheer the heart of your companion who may desire to do something for Christ against great evils, but is discouraged from making any public effort. PRICE, FIFTEEN CENTS. Ten for a dollar

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
331 W. Madison Street, Chicago

The Christian's Secret

OF

A Happy Life.

28th THOUSAND.

Baptist Commendation.

"We are delighted with this book. It reaches to the very core of Christian experience, and is eminently experimental in its teachings. It meets the doubts and difficulties of conscientious seekers after the bread and water of life, but whose efforts result only in alternate failure and victory. The author, without claiming to be a theologian, sends out the results of a happy and rich experience to help others into a happy Christian life."—Baptist Weekly.

Presbyterian Endorsement.

"The book is so truly and reverentially devoted in its spirit that it disarms criticism. It contains so much that is sound and practical, so much that, if heeded, will make our lives better, happier and more useful, that the intelligent reader who really wishes to lead a life 'hid with Christ in God' can scarcely fail to derive profit from its perusal."—Interior.

Methodist Word of Praise.

"We have not for years read a book with more light and profit. It is not a theological book. No effort is made to change the theological views of a one. The author has a rich experience, and tells it in a plain and delightful manner."—Christian Advocate.

United Brethren's Approval.

"We have seldom met with a more interesting volume, abounding throughout with apt illustrations we have failed to find a dry line from title-page to end."—Religious Telescope.

Congregational Comment.

"It contains such clear pungent reasoning and interesting incident. It is a practical and experimental lesson taught out of God's word, and is worthy universal circulation."—Church Union.

This enlarged edition is a beautiful large 12mo volume of 240 pages.

Price, in cloth, richly stamped, 75 cts.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
331 West Madison Street, Chicago, Ill

FREEMASONRY AT A GLANCE BY

E. RONAYNE,

Past Master of Keystone Lodge,
No. 639, Chicago.

Illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the Lodge, with a brief explanation of each. This work should be in every lodge and leaves all over the country. It is so cheap that it can be used as a tract, and money thus expended will bring a beautiful harvest. 32 pages. Price, postpaid, 10 cents. Per 100, $3.00. Address,

National Christian Association,

331 West Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

REVISED ODD-FELLOWS ILLUSTRATED.

The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Entered Apprentice and Fellowcraft degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. The ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper covers, 50 cents; per dozen $4.00.

All orders promptly filled by the

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
331 W. Madison street, Chicago.

FARM NOTES.

THE HERO OF THE PLOW.

Clear the brown path to meet his coulter's gleam!
Lo! on he comes behind his smoking team;
With toil's bright dewdrops on his sun-burnt brow,
The lord of earth, the hero of the plow!

First in the field before the reddening sun,
Last in the shadows when the day is done,
Line after line, along the burning sod,
Marks the broad acres where his feet have trod;

Still where he treads the stubborn clods divide,
The smooth, fresh furrow, open, steep and wide,
Matted and dense the tangled turf upheaves,
Mellow and dark the ridgy cornfield cleaves;

Up the steep hillside, where the laboring train
Slants the long track that scores the level plain,
Through the moist valley, clogg'd with oozy clay,
The patient convoy breaks its destined way;

At every turn the loosening chains resound,
The swinging ploughshare circles glistening round,
Till the wild field one billowy waste appears,
And weary hands unbind the panting steers.

These are the hands whose sturdy labor brings
The peasant's food, the golden pomp of kings;
This is the page whose letters shall be seen,
Changed by the sun to words of living green;

This is the scholar whose immortal pen
Spells the first lesson hunger taught to men;
These are lines that heaven-commanded Toil
Shows on his deed—the charter of the soil!

—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

DECLINE OF FARMING.

The farming interest is the great foundation interest of our country, and though it is that on which we most depend, and which of all others ought to have "protection," it is that which is being gradually taxed to death by our "tariff," not for the sake of raising the necessary expenses of the government, but to put money into the pockets of those engaged in other interests and to roll up immense sums in the national treasury which are but a temptation to politicians and which lead to a thousand needless, if not injurious, expenditures. During the ten years from 1850 to 1860 the increase of value of our farms was $3,373,000,000, or over 10 per cent yearly; while for the twenty years from 1860 to 1880 it was only $3,374,000,000, or but about 2½ per cent yearly. In New England, farming, as a business, is well nigh a thing of the past; and even in Pennsylvania—in Lancaster county, which used to be called the "Garden of the State"—farming does not pay, and farms are selling for less than half what they did thirty years ago. Illinois was formerly one of the profitable farming States; but only last month, when at the annual meeting of the Swedish Lutheran church, at Rockford, a resolution was proposed thanking God for the general prosperity of the last year, it was defeated by the farmer delegates, who denied that there had been any prosperity to the farming interests of the State. Prosperity there is in the country—prosperity to manufactures, and mining, and railroads, and capitalists, but the increase of wealth is at the expense of the farming interests, which, under our tariffs, are taxed 40, 50 and 60 per cent on the very articles needful for their families, or for conducting the business of farming, while many of the large moneyed interests of the land are taxed only some 10 or 12 per cent, thus widening the space between labor and capital, making the rich richer, and the poor poorer, and so gradually undermining the very foundation of our permanent prosperity as a nation. If the farmers do not wake up to these facts, and make themselves felt by their votes—if they do

Permanent Results,

And not a mere temporary exhilaration, are produced by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This medicine, being an alterative, and working constitutionally, through the blood, its effects may not be immediately apparent in all cases, but the gain in health and strength, through its persistent use, is real and lasting. It reaches every drop of blood in the body.

"I have none but good words to speak regarding Ayer's Sarsaparilla. All during the winter I was languid, tired, and without any appetite, until I commenced the use of this remedy. I took three bottles. Its effects have been revivifying, and I feel as if I had entered a new life. I did not think it was in the power of medicine to produce such a wonderful change, as has Ayer's Sarsaparilla in my case."—Mrs. C. Johnson, 310 Hicks st., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"I have used Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and also other preparations of a like nature, for the purposes of a blood-purifier, and, while receiving no good, but often positive harm, from others, I have always derived benefit from Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and have no hesitation in recommending it to any one in want of a reliable blood-purifier."—Mrs. M. C. Hopkinson, 110 Merrimack Corporation, Lowell, Mass.

"The safest and most reliable tonic, alterative, and diuretic is

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

—FOR—

Debility.

"I was a great sufferer from a low condition of the blood and general debility, becoming, finally, so reduced that I was unfit for work. Nothing that I did for the complaint helped me so much as Ayer's Sarsaparilla, a few bottles of which restored me to health and strength. I take every opportunity to recommend this medicine in similar cases."—C. Evick, 14 E. Main st., Chillicothe, Ohio.

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla is one of the very few proprietary medicines that I can honestly recommend. I have seen it used in this place, in a number of cases, with very satisfactory results, and I have used it in my own family, for salt-rheum, with abundant success. I consider it to be the leading blood-purifier of the day."—Charles C. Davis, Nashua, N. H.

"I suffered from general debility for fifteen years. A few bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla completely cured me, and I now enjoy good health."—Mrs. J. F. McElhinney, Truro, N. S.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

Prepared by DR. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass. Sold by all Druggists.

Price $1. Six bottles, $5. Worth $5 a bottle.

SAVE YOUR MONEY

BY SUBSCRIBING FOR ANY OF THE FOLLOWING PERIODICALS IN COMBINATION WITH THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

	Regular yearly subscription price.		Regular yearly subscription price.	Our price for both.
Forum,	$5.00	and Cynosure	$1.50	$5.50
North American Review,	5.00	" "	1.50	5.50
Popular Science Monthly,	5.00	" "	1.50	5.50
Century Magazine,	4.00	" "	1.50	5.00
Harper's	4.00	" "	1.50	4.50
" Weekly,	4.00	" "	1.50	4.75
Scribner's Magazine,	3.00	" "	1.50	4.00
Independent,	3.00	" "	1.50	4.00

If any periodical not in the above list is wanted, in combination with the Cynosure, send for terms and enclose stamp for reply.

W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.

To cure Biliousness, Sick Headache, Constipation, Malaria, Liver Complaints, take the safe and certain remedy, SMITH'S

BILE BEANS

Use the SMALL SIZE (40 little beans to the bottle). They are the most convenient: suit all ages. Price of either size, 25 cents per bottle.

KISSING at 7, 17, 70: Photo-gravure, panel size of this picture for 4 cents (coppers or stamps).

J. F. SMITH & CO.,
Makers of "Bile Beans," St. Louis, Mo.

not sustain that party, whichever it may be, that will modify these tariff exactions, and equalize the taxes that are now so burdensome to themselves, they will suffer for their indifference to their own interests and can hardly expect the sympathy of those who would gladly rejoice in their prosperity.—Detroit Free Press.

"Protection for Plantsmen" is the title of a circular sent out by the Rural New Yorker and the American Garden, jointly, proposing a unique plan for protecting originators and discoverers of new varieties of useful and ornamental plants. It covers the ground about as thoroughly as the patent laws do for inventors, and proposes to increase the scope and importance of the State Experiment Stations and the United States Department of Agriculture.

Master Bobby's father is the owner of a hatching machine. The other day, as little Bobby was watching a chicken energetically breaking its way through its shell, he remarked, "I see how he gets out, but how did he get in?"

You can make a large sum of money at work for us in your own locality. During the past few years, those who have thus worked have received over Five Millions of dollars for their services—more than a barrel of money. We want a few more workers at once. The work is easy, pleasant, adapted to both young and old of either sex. You can work all the time or in spare time only. Any one can do the work after studying our directions for a day or two. This is the chance of a lifetime for those who apply at once. Any one anywhere can earn $100 per month. Great workers, under the most favorable conditions, earn $20 a day and upwards. No class of people in the world are making so much money, without capital, as those at work for us. Whatever you have done, or whatever you may do, you should look into this royal chance. You will find that you can easily make all that we claim and more. If you write to us before we secure all the workers we need, we will lay all before you FREE. Better write before you rest, and then if you conclude not to go to work, or if we cannot employ you, no harm is done. Every one of our workers makes big money. True & Co., Box 399, Augusta, Maine.

PATENTS

Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees. Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington.

Send model, drawing or photo., with description. We advise, if patentable or not, free of charge. Our fee not due till patent is secured. A Pamphlet, "How to Obtain Patents," with names of actual clients in your State, county, or town, sent free. Address,

C. A. SNOW & CO.

Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

REVISED ODD-FELLOWSHILLUSTRATED.

The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. The ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $6.00. Paper cover, 75 cents; per dozen $4.00. All orders promptly filled by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

REMARKABLE OFFER!

Nearly everyone is familiar with the name, but it has been estimated that only one in every two hundred and eighty persons in the United States is fortunate enough to have access to the valuable information contained within the covers of the grandest work ever written by mortal man,

Webster's

UNABRIDGED DICTIONARY.

That this is an unfortunate state of affairs will be admitted by all, and it is due to the fact that no one save the rich could afford them.

The Dictionary is a necessity in every home, school and business house. It fills a vacancy and furnishes knowledge which no one hundred volumes of the choicest books could supply, and all young or old, educated or ignorant, rich or poor should have it within reach and refer to its contents every day in the year.

The Loomis reprint contains all the matter as compiled and arranged by our esteemed and honored author and statesman,

NOAH WEBSTER.

About forty years of his life was devoted to this great work, and when we consider the fact that this book contains about 100,000 words, we will appreciate that these years must have been well spent.

Some idea of the magnitude of this book may be gained from the fact that it contains over 440 cubic inches of paper and has about 300,000 square inches of printed surface.

In addition to the 100,000 words it contains a portrait of the author, together with his biography and a valuable table of 12,000 synonymous words.

By special arrangement with the publishers, we are permitted to furnish this valuable volume: 1st. To any subscriber to our paper; 2nd. To any renewal subscription; and 3rd. To any person who has paid a full year's subscription within the past six months, on receipt of $1.50 for the paper one year, and two dollars and seventy-five cents to cover express charges, packing, etc., of the Dictionary.

Address

CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

The Washington Souvenir,

Size 18x24 inches, and containing the portraits of

Washington and his Com-Patriots,

WITH THEIR TESTIMONY ON

FREEMASONRY.

—O—

It contains the portraits of

Washington,
John Adams, 2nd President of the United States.
James Madison, 4th President of the United States.
Joseph Ritner, Governor of Pennsylvania.
Richard Rush, Secretary of State and of the Treasury.
Alexander Hamilton, the friend of Washington.
Samuel Adams, the Father of the Revolution.
John Hancock, President of the Continental Congress.
Samuel Dexter, Secretary of War and of the Treasury.
William Wirt, Attorney-General.
John Marshall, Chief Justice of U. S. Supreme Court.
John Quincy Adams, 6th President of the United States.
Benjamin Rush, the Father of Temperance Reform in America.
Lebbeus Armstrong, Founder of the first Temperance Society.
Framed, it is an ornament to please the eye, and a testimony to gladden the heart. Sent safely packed in a mailing tube, post-paid, for ten cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

"THE WHOLE IS BETTER THAN A PART,"
AND YOU HAVE IT HERE IN A
"NUT-SHELL."

SECRET SOCIETIES ILLUSTRATED.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc. of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite). Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 25 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen. For sale by the National Christian Association, at Headquarters for Anti-Slavery Literature, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

HOME AND HEALTH.

A HOUSEKEEPER'S DON'TS.

Don't fill the best windows in the family living room with plants.

Don't allow soiled clothes to remain in the bedrooms. They taint the air and make it impure.

Don't forget that a broom will last much longer if, after using, it is dipped in boiling water for a few minutes.

Don't allow the broom to stand on the brush end when not in use; hang it on a nail by means of a ring in the top of the handle.

Don't keep for company the best room, the best dishes, and especially the pleasantest smile and most entertaining conversation.

Don't neglect to air the house thoroughly every morning. Open opposite doors and windows for five or ten minutes, even if it is stormy.

Don't think when you sit down to rest that it is necessary to pick up that unfinished mending. Ten minutes' absolute rest is worth much to the tired muscles.

Don't neglect to have your name plainly painted on all jugs or bottles that are sent to the store for vinegar, molasses, etc. Then you will be sure to get back your own.

Don't undertake extra work to give pleasure when you know that you have neither time nor strength for it, and that, as a result, some one will be sure to be overtired and cross.

Don't forget, if you are a tall woman, to have your work-table and ironing-board a few inches higher than they are usually made. This little precaution will prevent many a backache.—American Agriculturist.

THE ACIDS OF FRUITS.

Mr. George W. Johnson, in his Chemistry of the World, says, in describing the "vegetable food of the world:"

"The grateful acid of the rhubarb leaf arises from the malic acid and bioxalate of potash which it contains; the acidity of the lemon, orange, and other species of the genus Citrus is caused by the abundance of citric acid which their juice contains; that of the cherry, plum, apple, and pear from the malic acid in their pulp; that of gooseberries and currants, black, red and white, from a mixture of malic and citric acids; that of the grape from a mixture of malic and tartaric acids; that of the mango from citric acid and a very fugitive essential oil; that of the tamarind from a mixture of citric, malic and tartaric acids; the flavor of asparagus from aspartic acid, found also in the root of the marshmallow; and that of the cucumber from a peculiar poisonous ingredient called fungin, which is found in all fungi, and is the cause of the cucumber being offensive to some stomachs. It will be observed that rhubarb is the only fruit which contains bioxalate of potash in conjunction with an acid. It is this ingredient which renders this fruit so wholesome at the early commencement of the summer, and this is one of the wise provisions of nature for supplying a blood-purifier at a time when it is likely to be most needed.

"Beet root owes its nutritious quality to about 9 per cent of sugar which it contains, and its flavor to a peculiar substance containing nitrogen mixed with pectic acid. The carrot owes its fattening powers also to the sugar, and its flavor to a peculiar fatty oil; the horseradish derives its flavor and blistering power from a volatile acrid oil. The Jerusalem artichoke contains 14½ per cent of sugar and 3 per cent of inulin (a variety of starch), besides gum and a peculiar substance to which its flavor is owing; and lastly, garlic, and the rest of the onion family, derive their odor from a yellowish, volatile, acrid oil; but they are nutritious from containing nearly half their weight of gummy and glutinous substances not yet clearly defined."

The peculiar medical properties of Hood's Sarsaparilla are soon apparent after taking it. One lady says, "It shows its good effect quicker than any other medicine I ever saw." Try it.

STANDARD WORKS

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES.

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Association,

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. A liberal discount to dealers.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 75 cents. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive. Vol. II. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished. 25 cents each.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe. 20 cents each.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. In cloth, $1.50 each. Paper, 75 cents each.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pages, 75 cents.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance. Bound in one volume. In cloth, 589 pages, $1.00.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. 25 cents each.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' LETTERS on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper, 35 cents.

Hon. Thurlow Weed on the Morgan ABDUCTION. This is the legally attested statement of this eminent Christian journalist and statesman concerning the unlawful seizure and confinement of Capt. Morgan in Canandaigua jail, his removal to Fort Niagara and subsequent drowning in Lake Ontario. 5 cents each.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a LEAGUE WITH THE DEVIL. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason. 15 cents each.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church. Paper covers, price, 20 cents each.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each.

Anti-masonic Sermons and Addresses. Composed of "Masonry a Work of Darkness;" the Sermons of Messrs. Cross, William M'Nary, Dow and Sarver, the two addresses of President Blanchard, and the addresses of President H. H. George, Prof. J. G. Carson and Rev. M. S. Drury; "Thirteen Reasons Why a Christian cannot be a Freemason," "Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion," and "Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate?" 287 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the INITIATE. By Rev. L. A. Post. 5 cents each.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper cover, 35 cents.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin trials. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each.

Stearns's Inquiry into the Nature AND TENDENCY OF FREEMASONRY. 338 pages. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor United Presbyterian church. 5 cents each.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 DEGREES OF FREEMASONRY. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. 10 cents each.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void: OR FREEMASONRY SELF-CONVICTED. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. 207 pages. Postpaid, 40 cents each.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian), a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. 15 cents each.

Judge Whitney's Defense before THE GRAND LODGE OF ILLINOIS. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. H. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each.

Masonic Salvation, as taught by its standard authors. This pamphlet is a compilation from standard Masonic works, in proof of the following proposition: Freemasonry claims to be a religion that saves men from all sin, and purifies them for heaven. 111 pages, price, postpaid, 20 cents.

Freemasonry at a Glance illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the first three degrees. Paper cover, 32 pages. Single copy, six cents.

Masonic Outrages. Compiled by Rev. H. H. Hinman. Showing Masonic assault on lives of seceders, on reputation, and on free speech; its interference with justice in courts, etc. Postpaid, 20 cents.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret SOCIETIES. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each.

General Washington Opposed to SECRET SOCIETIES. This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10cts each.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims by Rev. David McDill, Pres. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. In cloth, 35cts each; paper covers, 15cts each.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinions of many prominent college presidents and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25cts each.

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of his sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5cts each.

Sermon on Secretism. By Rev. R. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational church, Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear array of the objections to all secret societies, and to Masonry especially, that are apparent to all. 5cts each.

Pres. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to disfellowship secret societies. 10cts each.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and Church. By Rev. M. S. Dury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church, is clearly shown. 10cts each.

Holden with Cords. OR THE POWER OF THE SECRET EMPIRE. By E. E. Flagg, author of "A Sunny Life," etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story, accurately true to life because mainly a narration of historical facts. In cloth, $1.00; in paper, 50 cents.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and law of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved. 15cts each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. J. Day Brownlee. In reply to a Masonic Oration by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio. 5 cents each.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on Masonry. Paper covers, 25 cents each.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion. 5 cents each.

ON ODD-FELLOWSHIP.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by ex-President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; paper cover, 50cts.

Patriarchs Militant Illustrated. The complete ritual of the Patriarchs Militant degree. This is an accurate copy of the Charge Book furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge of the Independent Order of Odd-fellows, with the eighteen military diagrams and the unwritten (secret) work added. Paper cover, 25cts each.

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own utterances; its doctrine and practice examined in the light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth 50cts; paper covers, 25cts.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and other secret societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms, and the duty to disfellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers, is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10cts each.

Odd-fellowship: ITS HISTORY AND ITS WORK. By President J. Blanchard. A neat pamphlet with cover. Postpaid, 5 cts.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Anti-masonic's Scrap-Book, consisting of 53 "Cynosure" tracts. In this book are the views of more than a score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of secret societies. Postpaid, 25 cts.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret tradesunion of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords, etc. 15cts each.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc., and the ritual of the Machinists' and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—U. S. Government Report, Aug. 17, 1889.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

Seven women, at the suggestion of Miss Anthony, have incorporated themselves into a new organization in this city under the name of "The Wimodaughsis," with a capital stock of $25,000 in $5 shares. The object of the "Wimodaughsis" is the education of women in political science, in art, literature and physical culture.

The attorney general this afternoon ordered District Attorney Hay of Minneapolis to begin immediately the prosecution for conspiracy to defraud of the three enumerators of the census who have been accused of making false returns of the population of Minneapolis.

President Harrison has approved the act granting a pension to Mrs. Parnell, mother of Charles Stewart Parnell.

According to estimates recently made by the director of the mint, the 204,839 passengers who left the United States for Europe during the last fiscal year took with them not less than $92,000,000 in gold or its equivalent in letters of credit.

The dependent-pension bill has been signed by the President, and thus the surplus is to be reduced between $40,000,000 and $60,000,000. Over 300,000 pensions will be added to the pension rolls under the provisions of this law.

Superintendent of the Census Porter says that from present indications the returns of the enumerators would show a total population of the United States of $64,500,000, against 50,155,783 in 1880.

CHICAGO.

Professor E. B. Hulbert, D.D., of Chicago, has been chosen president of College University at Hamilton, N. Y.

The National Commission for the World's Fair elected ex-Senator Thomas W. Palmer of Michigan as their president.

A dispatch from Paris, Texas, announces the capture of Tascott, the supposed murderer of the millionaire Snell in this city. Trainmen who arrived here on the Frisco Road state that five Pinkerton detectives got aboard the north-bound train at West Fork Station, in Washington county, Ark., with Tascott, who had been under surveillance for some time, and parties had come from Chicago and fully identified him.

Saturday the Chicago directors of the World's Fair voted 23 to 10 to locate the great exhibition of '92 3 on the Lake Front. The plan is to fill in the Lake and enlarge the present Lake Front park for the main buildings, and secure at Jackson Park on the south or Garfield Park on the west other large grounds which will be connected by a four-track road with free trains with the Lake Front. There is much objection to an 80-acre cattle yard on the Lake Front.

On Saturday there were officially reported 135 cases of sun stroke, 18 of which were fatal.

COUNTRY.

From Wisconsin, Kentucky, Missouri and all parts of Illinois the report of the excessive heat of last week is unusual.

Cases of sunstroke, often fatal, were experienced in scores of places. In Chicago 27 cases were reported Friday, several of them fatal.

On Thursday Mary Vetter, a sane woman who has been confined in the insane asylum at Kalamazoo, Mich., for nine months, secured her release. She will bring suit against the authorities for heavy damages.

Five hundred and forty-five graduates were sent out from the University of Michigan Thursday. Andrew D. White delivered the address to the graduating class.

At St. Louis, Mo., Thursday, nine deaths from the heat and sixteen prostrations were reported up to 3 P. M.

For participating in the Sullivan-Kilrain prize-fight, Muldoon was fined $250 at Purvis, Miss., Wednesday. Cleary and Donovan were let off with $100 each.

By the explosion of a boiler in Frank Gardner's stove mill at North Star, Mich., Wednesday, three men were instantly killed and four more fatally injured.

The whisky trust on Wednesday refused to accede to the demands of the Dealers' Association, and the association immediately decided to build distilleries to compete with the trust and appointed a committee to take subscriptions for that purpose.

At Brooklyn, N. Y., Monday, the tug Alice E. Crane was blown up and her crew of five and a watchman on a scow, which was lying alongside and which was sent to the bottom by the explosion, were killed.

Reports of many fatalities from the heat were continued until Monday when a favorable change occurred. The region of greatest heat was from Kentucky to Minneapolis.

An express train on the Philadelphia & Reading railroad jumped the track near Reading, Pa., Monday morning. The engineer was killed and several other trainmen injured.

Pleasanton, Neb., was completely wiped out by a cyclone, June 22, and several persons were badly injured. Every building in Sweetwater, Neb., was also destroyed and a number of the citizens of that town injured.

Minnesota Prohibitionists nominated P. Pinkham, of Minneapolis, for Governor Wednesday, and also an entire State ticket.

Monday at Des Moines, Iowa, Judge Eggleston discharged the members of the St. Paul and Des Moines ball teams, who were arrested for playing ball on Sunday, on the ground that the ball game was a charity benefit for the families of the players.

FOREIGN.

The Russian government has made a peremptory demand on the Turkish government for the war indemnity which that country agreed to pay Russia at the close of the Russo-Turkish war.

Erzeroum in Asia Minor is reported to be in full revolt. In the conflicts that have taken place eighty Armenians and nine Turkish soldiers were killed and many on both sides were wounded.

President Menendez, of San Salvador, died suddenly Sunday night, causing a panic at the capital, during which General Marcow and several other officers were killed.

The Earl of Warwick has caused the arrest of a young tourist who was scribbling his name and that of a young woman with him on the walls of Warwick Castle.

A convention has been signed between the postmaster-general of Canada and the postmaster-general of Japan for the establishment of a direct parcel-post service between Canada and Japan.

A correspondent at Tokio, writing under date of June 1, says that the excitement following the recent depredations of the students of Tokio has decreased a little since they apologized to the Rev. W. Imbrey, the New Jersey missionary who was cut and bruised by them two weeks ago. That gentleman has entirely recovered and it seems nothing more is to be heard of the matter. The government seems to be doing all in its power to deal with the students as a class, but no incivility can be offered them as individuals because of their desperate character. In the meantime distress among thousands of starving people of Tokio and other large cities is being ameliorated to a great extent by foreigners as well as by Japanese noblemen. One nobleman is feeding 1,000 people a day out of his own funds. The price of rice is higher than ever before both in Japan and Corea. The outlook for the growing crop of rice is not good owing to heavy and continued rains.

Rev. H. Charles Spurgeon of London has refused to accept a bequest of $150,000 made him by a wealthy man in Leeds, who recently died.

During the progress of a magisterial election at Kalocsa, Hungary, a mob made an attack upon a voting place, but was repulsed by the gendarmes and three of the attacking party killed.

PLAYS

Dialogues, Tableaux, Speakers for School, Club & Parlor. Best out Catalogue free. T. S. DENISON, Chicago, Ill.

RIDGE'S FOOD

Will be found invaluable for Cholera Infantum and all Summer Complaints, child or adult. It's non-melline but will be retained & sustain life when everything else fails. 4 sizes 35 cts. up.

KEYSTONE MORTGAGE COMPANY. Aberdeen, S. Dak., offers guaranteed 7 per cent Farm Mortgage, Electric and Gas Bonds, Bank and other dividend paying stocks. Address us for particulars. Eastern Office, 1323 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

$75.00 to $250.00 A MONTH can be made working for us. Persons preferred who can furnish horse and give their whole time to the business. Spare moments may be profitably employed also. A few vacancies in towns and cities. B. F. JOHNSON & CO., 1009 Main Street, Richmond, Va.

LADY WANTED SALARY $35 to $50 AND EXPENSES (LADIES $1.50 SPECIALTY FEES) For our business in each locality. Intelligence and honesty, but no experience, necessary. Also good MAN for section; Salary $100. GAY BROS. & CO. (rated Capital $800,000—credit High), 34 Read St., N. Y.

Our High Grade List and Bargain Book sent to any address on receipt of a 2-c stamp.

LORD & THOMAS.
NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING
45 RANDOLPH STREET,
CHICAGO.

I CURE FITS!

When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. H. G. ROOT, M. C., 183 Pearl St. New York.

WHEATON COLLEGE,

WHEATON, ILL.

FALL TERM BEGINS IN SEPTEMBER.

A College for Men and Women.

For Catalogue address with stamp.

C. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—No. 2.....	85 1/4 @	86
No. 3.....		75 1/2
Winter No. 2.....		85 1/4
Corn—No. 2.....	34 1/4 @	35
Oats—No. 2.....	30 @	31
Rye—No. 2.....		46 1/2
Bran per ton.....		10 25
Hay—Timothy.....	6 50 @	11 00
Butter, medium to best....	10 @	16 1/2
Cheese.....	06 @	10 1/2
Beans.....	1 25 @	1 75
Eggs.....		10 1/2
Seeds—Timothy.....	1 25 @	1 35
Flax.....	1 22 @	1 40
Broom corn.....	02 1/4 @	06 1/4
Potatoes, per bu.....	20 @	45
Hides—Green to dry flint....	03 @	07
Lumber—Common.....	10 00 @	13 00
Wool.....	15 @	34
Cattle—Choice to extra....	4 45 @	5 10
Common to good....	1 60 @	4 40
Hogs.....	3 50 @	3 70
Sheep.....	3 00 @	5 25

NEW YORK.

Wheat.....	92 1/4 @	97 1/2
Corn.....	40 @	42 1/2
Oats.....	32 @	41
Eggs.....		14 1/2
Butter.....	6 @	16 1/2
Wool.....	14 @	39

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle.....	1 66 @	4 50
Hogs.....	3 40 @	3 55
Sheep.....	2 00 @	5 50

Its superior excellence proven in millions of homes for more than a quarter of a century. It is used by the United States Government. Endorsed by the heads of the Great Universities as the Strongest, Purest and most Healthful. Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder does not contain Ammonia, Lime, or Alum. Sold only in Cans. PRICE BAKING POWDER CO. NEW YORK. CHICAGO. ST. LOUIS.

THE CHRISTIAN CONFERENCE

—ON THE—

Secret Lodge System.

The Proceedings of the late Christian Conference, containing the addresses of Joseph Cook, Drs. Goodwin, Wallace, Mc Dill, Col. Clarke and others, is now ready in a handsome pamphlet of 130 pages. It is one of the very best documents ever issued on the lodge question. The price was advertised at 15 cents, but the actual cost of publication was 20 cents, and of mailing 5 cents, making total cost 25 cents.

It will, however, be sent postpaid for 15 cents.

Only those who are able and willing need send more.

THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
W. I. Phillips, Pub'r and Treas.,
221 West Madison St.,
Chicago, Ill.

SCOTCH RITE MASONRY ILLUSTRATED.

The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all Masonic rites, and are fully and accurately given in

"FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED,"

as advertised, but the signs, grips, passwords, etc., of these three degrees are given at the close of Vol 2 of

"Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated"

Vol. 1 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3d to 18th inclusive. Vol. 2 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 19th to 33d inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each; in cloth, $1 each. Each volume per dozen, paper covers, $4; per dozen, cloth bound, $9.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St. Chicago,

SEE THIS!

The latest, most complete edition.

Over 235 choice

Reform Songs for the Times.

Only 30c a copy, or 20c by the 100.

—AND—

"THE TOBACCO MANIA."

$1 per 100.

For sale here and by the author,

GEO. W. CLARK,

76 W. Montcalm St., Detroit, Mich.

FINNEY ON MASONRY

The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "British Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In clc' 75c; per dozen $7.50. Paper cover 35c; per dozen, $3.50. No Christian's library is complete without it. Send for a copy in cloth and get a catalogue of books and tracts sold by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST. CHICAGO.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XXII., No. 43.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JULY 10, 1890.

WHOLE No. 1,054.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.

Address all letters for publication to EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, CHICAGO. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill., as Second Class Matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:	REFORM NEWS:
Notes and Comments... 1	From Chicago to Wash- 5
Is Anything too hard for the Lord?... 1	CORRESPONDENCE:
Does the New Testament Teach a Future Life?... 8	Parties, Unions and Covenants; Dangerous
The Trouble with Kansas 8	Extremes; The Lord's
Prof. I. E. Dwinell..... 8	Money; Liberalism in
The Lifetime of Reforms 8	the Church; Pith and
A Change Needed..... 8	Point..... 5,6
No Salvation in Them... 8	OBITUARY..... 7
Personal Notes..... 9	THE N. C. A..... 7
CONTRIBUTIONS:	WASHINGTON LETTER..... 9
Powerful Weak..... 1	THE HOME..... 10
The Organizing Drift..... 2	TEMPERANCE..... 11
The Era of Missions..... 2	BIBLE LESSON..... 12
SELECTED:	RELIGIOUS NEWS..... 12
The Cost of Striking... 2	LODGE NOTES..... 13
The Lodge and the Apoc- 3	BUSINESS..... 13
alypse..... 3	MARKETS..... 13
NEW ENGLAND LETTER..... 4	HOME AND HEALTH..... 14
The Floating Chapel..... 4	FARM NOTES..... 15
LITERATURE..... 6	NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 16

IS ANYTHING TOO HARD FOR THE LORD?

This is the text selected for the Cynosure campaign of 1890-91, from Gen. 18: 14. We have seen in last number that a practical, earnest and united effort on the part of our friends would greatly help the general work of the National Association and sustain it nobly. And this could be done by every man, woman and child who could get a subscriber. Nothing more feasible could be mentioned, since the help given is:

1. For value received.
2. The amount of each payment is small.
3. And the cause is so good that it should enlist five thousand volunteer agents at once.

Now there is a better, wholesomer and nobler view of this matter. The dear friend of our cause who suggests the text above believes with us that the Cynosure is good enough to be read in

FIFTY THOUSAND

American homes. There is no paper like it exactly; and as we view the situation in church and state, none is more needed. To secure the reading of 50,000 copies of the Cynosure in America before the World's Fair is opened must be God's work. That is, the Spirit of the Lord must put a burden for this work on thousands of good people; must work through them to this end. Now, dear reader, as you glance over these lines, God is asking you to volunteer for this work.

WILL YOU PUT DOWN YOUR NAME?

"I know that thou canst do everything," Job says of the Lord (42: 2). Let us have faith to take in an enterprise like this, and falter no more than did Abraham at the promise given him of a son when he was an hundred years old. He made no account of objections or difficulties, but took the word of the Lord for what it said and meant. Let us, with like faith and enthusiasm, begin to-day a work which appeals to us by every reason. Let us all say, GOD HELPING US, IT SHALL BE DONE.

The "original package" business is overrunning the country and making havoc in every quarter. No local option or prohibitory law can fence it out. Why should not Congress by a single vote put an end to this ravage? The Senate passed a bill weeks ago. But the House must show the originality of its statesmanship and corrupt policy. There a new bill is up which makes the law apply to oleomargarine or any other product which may be the subject of State restriction. The effect of this movement is to prolong the agony and put off as far as possible the day when the mischief of these liquor sellers shall be stopped.

The Sunday newspaper is not beyond the reach of a proper moral sentiment. The community which sustains them can root out the evil. In Rochester, New York, this has been demonstrated. A corrupt city government aroused the people in a movement which turned naturally into the channel of Sabbath reform. Municipal corruption generally begins with Sabbath desecration. A new set of officers obeyed the popular will, and became committed to a reformation in this respect which has already produced most happy results in which every good citizen rejoices. This occasion gave the better portion of the community such an opportunity for an expression of their opinion that business of all sorts feels the effect of the strong and prevalent convictions. The leading daily, the Democrat and Chronicle, has gracefully accepted the situation, and last Sabbath discontinued the edition which has for some years been a paying investment, with a determination to keep the Sabbath hereafter.

The Louisiana Lottery, which some hoped had been defeated, has conquered by the corruption of a bribe, and a bill for its continuance has passed both branches of the legislature by more than a two-thirds majority. It seems to those astute legislators to be immeasurably wicked to sell this franchise for a trifle, but when they were offered $1,250,000 per year, the moral aspect was greatly changed. We do not think the Louisianians are sinners above all others. They are simply carrying out the doctrine of high license to its legitimate conclusion. It is true that the Louisiana Lottery is, and has been, a source of wrong and the corruption of morals to the people of the entire nation, and as such ought to be effectually suppressed. But it is not a greater wrong to people of the State than a licensed saloon is to the community where it exists. Let not those who clamor for high licensed saloons throw stones at their Louisiana neighbors. They have as good a right to high license at one end of the Mississippi river as other men have at the other.

The discussion of the opening of the World's Fair on the Lord's day has begun in earnest. Dr. W. W. Everts, president of the Sabbath Association of Illinois, is addressing union meetings wherever possible, arousing an interest in the Sabbath movement, securing the adoption of resolutions that express the sentiment of the community, and petitioning for the Sabbath closing of the fair of '93. The popular sentiment of Chicago represented in the powerful and wealthy lodges of Freemasons, and which control the city through their "Past Master" Cregier, are against the Sabbath. But if his already notoriously corrupt administration continues as at present, the revulsion of public feeling will carry the Sabbath movement to a successful issue. A Unitarian clergyman who attacked old John Brown a few years ago as an imposter and hypocrite, is preaching for Sunday opening. Dr. Henson and others have replied with great power, urging that the Sabbath must be maintained at any cost, for thereon rests the perpetuity of American institutions.

The strike just settled by the Illinois Central railroad was one of the most unreasonable ever attempted by labor unions. Without giving a reason or a notice the men went out, and afterward explained that they disliked the division superintendent. Their charges were all disproved, except that the officer had a few times spoken harshly to individual men. For several days the whole business of the road was tied up, causing a loss of hundreds of thousands to the company, and probably an equal amount to the public at large. And yet a part of the strikers came the other day to demand pay for the time they stopped the working of the road! Truly these lodges have no shame. In Massachusetts train men are by law not permitted to desert a train in transit, and in other respects must have some respect for the public when they strike. There should be national laws that will make strikes a heavy cost to these lodges, when they so interfere with the business of the whole people.

The Bohemians in this country have generally been given an ill name. In our great cities they are supposed to form a dangerous part of the population, living often in poverty and in near proximity to the saloons. There are thousands of them in Chicago and a devoted missionary, Mr. Adams, is giving his life to their elevation. The City Missionary Society, sustained by the Congregational churches, has built a fine mission building for Mr. Adams' work and God is blessing the effort to evangelize this people. Last Sabbath revealed another encouraging feature in the character of the Chicago Bohemians. It was the anniversary of the death of John Huss, who was burned at Constance in 1413. The occasion was suitably observed by his countrymen, who dwelt upon his virtues and Christian courage as well worthy of emulation in any age. They also proposed a fund to erect a monument to his memory in one of our parks. No memorial to any foreigner should be more acceptable to Chicago, but the Romanists and their tools will prevent any such monument. A people that revere the memory of John Huss and emulate his virtues have in them the foundation of a good citizenship.

"POWERFUL WEAK."

BY REV. W. J. GLADWIN.

About twenty-two years ago I visited a poor, sick old man in western Arkansas and asked after his health. "I'm powerful weak," he replied. Some of our modern missionary work may be described by the same queer phrase. Missionaries who take their beer and brandy, pleading that these are "good creatures of God," will do a work which is "powerful weak." That is, it is powerful for the drink devil, and weak for the Saviour who comes to destroy the works of the devil.

Some missionaries abroad, like some ministers at home, preach a religion which is all brains and no heart. The work of such men is "powerful weak"—powerful in making conceited bigots, but weak in producing meek and lowly saints.

But there is one class I wish to note especially. Do you know that the base Hindu Shasters, the bloody Koran of Mahomet, and the silly Zendavesta of the Parsees are often put on a par with God's Holy Bible, and that by professed Christians? "Who? How?" you ask. "Surely not by missionaries!" Well, let me tell you. Worldly and wicked Europeans go to India full of schemes, and they meet with crafty and educated natives of means and position, who gladly join in their plots. You can easily see that such men would naturally join together in secret societies. Founded upon the mysteries of ancient heathen systems, and at the same time highly popular among European "gentry," the Masonic lodge serves as the ready channel of fellowship between these Western and Eastern schemers. As Freemasonry is a "universal religion," it easily adopts the symbols of all nations. Hence, by common consent the various "national creeds" are placed side by side!

"But what have missionaries to do with all that?" You can see at a glance where that fact puts the missionary. Many of your churches are as full of secretists as Egypt was of frogs, etc. They send out oath-bound missionaries, men who have gone through pagan mysteries here in your Christian lands. Those missionaries go out to heathendom and find influential Europeans and leading natives in their pet fraternities. Why should not the missionaries join with those "brother" heathen to draw them toward Christianity with a cable-tow? The heathen are glad to join with shallow Christians who will let them put their vile books on a par with the Bible. Do you see the wretched compromise? Do you see how "powerful weak" such Christianity is? Should not American Christians refuse to send out men who will thus debase God's Word? "First pure, then peaceable."

Miles, Iowa.

"THE ORGANIZING DRIFT."

BY REV. L. W. FRINK.

In the Congregationalist of May 8th, 1890, A. H. Quint, D. D., who is not unknown in Boston's Congregational circles, writes under the above caption, in all probability to his own gratification, but certainly to the astonishment and disgust of others who have never pledged themselves to "ever conceal and never reveal" the truth to which humanity is everywhere entitled. After referring to the drift, he says: "1. Mutual affinities are a frequent cause." "2. Rearrangements for practical work" seem to demand them. "3. Personal gain or increased strength by combination" is the object sought by some. Then after expatiating upon these points, he asks, "What is the church to do?" and answers (or tries to) his own question by stating five things.

In the first place he says that "the church is peculiar," "the possessor of Christian truth," "the agent of Christ's power to renovate the world." Then in the second place, he claims that "it is a mistake to suppose, or try to make it true, that many of these external organizations are dangerous to the church." "3. It is the work of the church to send out its light where it can,"—"its mission is to Christianize." For his fourth point he draws a comparison between the church and Masonry by imagining that in the church there may be "the $100 pew, reserved for the one-hundred-dollar man," and away in the gallery corner "a $5 pew, reserved for the five-dollar man;" but in the Masonic society the poor man is the peer of every other person, and adds, "no poor pew stigmatizes him as a poor man."

His fifth and last point is that "the church can not compete with insurance societies, because that is out of its province, and they have a proper field of their own." The article ends with the following question, "Shall Christian thinkers be able enough and bold enough to deal with social problems on a Bible basis?"

I have given very briefly the outline of the article, so that the readers of the Cynosure may see for themselves a specimen of lodge defence, a specimen coming from a man who is supposed to follow the Bible, being a professed "doctor of divinity." It is not needful for me to write much by way of criticism, since the fallacy is so clear no one who is "compos mentis" can fail to see it. I would like to ask Dr. Quint how he imagines the church can "send out its light where it can," with reference to the Masonic society. Does he not know that the Masonic society "sends out the light of the church" from its tyled halls? And can he be so deluded as to suppose that "Christian thinkers," in these days especially, believe his statement, that in Masonic halls "no poor pew stigmatizes" the poor man "as a poor man?" Do they not know that such halls are destitute of "pews"? and practically of poor men also? and that one's Christianity must be very defective when he can conscientiously make any such comparison with the church of Jesus Christ?

Chase's Digest of Masonic Law, p. 207, says that "Blue Lodge Masonry has nothing whatever to do with the Bible. It is not founded on the Bible; if it was it would not be Masonry; it would be something else." Consequently, whatever worship Blue Lodge Masons may have in their halls, it would appear cannot be the worship of Jesus Christ, since he is excluded therefrom.

Indeed, instead of such halls being places where the spirit of Christianity abounds, do not "Christian thinkers" know that such places are infested with "ruffians," if not with actual "murderers?" Are they not the favorite hiding-places of those notorious fellows "Jubela, Jubelo, and Jubelum?" And was it unto such tutors that Dr. Quint applied for instruction, so that he might "learn to subdue his passions?"

Such incongruities might be winked at in the dark ages and in heathenism, but under the full-orbed system of truth of the nineteenth century they are too enormous to be passed by in silence in America, especially in "modern Athens."

West Boylston, Mass.

THE ERA OF MISSIONS.

BY REV. J. M. FOSTER.

God has removed the obstacles out of the way of the missionaries, the gates of all nations have been thrown open. The people are calling for the Word of Life in every kingdom, and this providentially makes ours the pivotal age. Much has been done. "During less than one hundred years," says Dr. Pierson, "the number of translations of the Word has increased five-fold,—from fifty to two hundred and fifty; of Protestant missionary societies, fourteen-fold,—from seven to one hundred; of male missionaries, eighteen-fold,—from one hundred and seventy to three thousand; of contributions, forty-fold,—from two hundred and fifty thousand to ten million of dollars; of converts, fifty-fold,—from fifty thousand to two and a half million; of mission schools, two hundred-fold,—from seventy to upwards of fourteen thousand." These facts are a sufficient answer to those who cry, missions are a failure.

"We have heard of an English colonel who, though a resident in India, saw and shot thirty tigers, but never saw a convert. We have also heard of a devoted missionary in India who never saw one tiger, but spent his life among converts; and we conclude that each saw what he chose to see. Tigers are not generally found on the mission premises, nor converts in the jungles; but either tigers or converts may be found if you go where they are."

Missions are cheaper than war. "General Sherman's campaign against the Cheyennes is reported to have cost $5,000,000; it costs $500,000 to kill an Indian, and $500 to convert one. Those who estimate every question on a financial basis may do well to consider these comparative figures. History may yet prove that there are some 'good Indians' who are not 'dead Indians.'"

Little has been done comparatively. Out of 1,500,000,000 at least 1,000,000,000 have never heard of the Saviour. "Let us consider that here is the command of the King of kings, for more than eighteen centuries waiting for obedient disciples to carry it out. Mordecai, five hundred years before Christ, issued a decree in the name of Ahashuerus. It was the third month Sivan, on the three and twentieth day, that the king's scribes were called to put that decree in writing; it was addressed to the Jews, lieutenants, deputies, and rulers of the provinces which reached from India to Ethiopia,—a hundred and twenty-seven provinces; it had to be translated into the language of each province, and promulgated with haste. There were no facilities for doing this work such as we possess; no printing-presses, postal unions, telegraphs; no railroads and steamships. Every copy must be transcribed by hand, and the messengers must go only so fast as horses and mules, camels and dromedaries, could carry them. And yet through all those hundred and twenty-seven provinces the decree was published upon the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, Adar. Less than nine months to bear the king's message throughout his wide domain, while the church of Christ, after nearly nineteen hundred years, has reached only one-fourth of the human race with the Gospel of salvation."

An English preacher asked some British soldiers, "If Queen Victoria were to issue a proclamation, and, placing it in the hands of her army and navy, were to say, 'Go ye into all the world and proclaim it to every creature,' how long do you think it would take to do it?" One of these brave fellows, accustomed to obey orders without hesitation or delay, and at peril of life, promptly answered, "Well, I think we could manage it in about eighteen months."

There are, perhaps, in round numbers, one hundred million Protestants in the world. Could each of that number somehow reach ten of the unsaved, the whole thousand million would be evangelized; and could each be brought to give one cent a day, our missionaries treasuries would overflow with three hundred and sixty-five millions of dollars every year. But let us suppose that there are ten millions of true disciples who can be brought into line, and who by systematic effort can be made to furnish men and money for this work, even with this tenth part of Christendom the world may be evangelized before the twentieth century dawns. We are not responsible for conversion, but we are responsible for contact.

As to the fruits take this as a sample: "When Robert Moffat proposed to go to Africaner, the terrible demon of the dark continent, he was warned that he was an incarnate fiend, who would make a virtue of cruelty, and murder him that he might make a drum-head of his skin, and a drinking-cup of his skull. But Moffat had faith in the Gospel of the grace of God. This Hottentot chief had been driven north by Dutch invaders until, taking his refuge beyond the Orange river, he became a daring and desperate outlaw, robbing and murdering his victims, and swaying a wide region with the iron scepter of terror. The colonial governments set a price upon his capture, dead or alive, and hired neighbor chiefs to make war upon him; but in vain. In 1818 Moffat ventured to take up his abode with Africaner. A change took place in the diabolical ruffian, so complete that it was a new creation. The man who combined in himself wolf, bear, leopard, and lion, was turned into a lamb." "The heir of the Rajah of Chesra, India, Bor. Sing, was converted by the Welsh missionaries. After the death of Rham Sing, the chiefs met and decided that Bor. Sing must renounce Christ or forfeit the throne. He replied: 'Put aside my Christian profession? I can put aside my head-dress, or my cloak; but as for the covenant I have made with my God, I cannot for any consideration put that aside.' Here is a convert rejecting a crown for Christ!"

Cincinnati, O.

COST OF STRIKING.

It should be a forceful sermon which the Bureau of Labor statistics of New York preaches in its current report. It says that in the Empire State during the past five years, employers have lost $5,000,000 by strikes, while employees have lost $8,000,000. It would be a stupid person who could not understand these figures, and would he not be a stubborn one who would not profit by them? Nominally, the employers lost $5,000,000, but their actual losses were very little. This vast sum is made up largely of the money that would have been made if there had been no strikes, and wages and prices of commodities had remained as they were at the time of the strikes. Furthermore, the manufacturer, the mill owner or the contractor generally has it in his power to recover what he loses by reason of strikes. In fact, the strike simply suspends his income temporarily; his returns come later. He suffers only from delay, the actual loss being small indeed. But how is it with the employee? His loss is real and cannot be made good. If he strike and remain idle a week or a month he loses a week or a month's pay, which can never be recovered no matter how industriously he may labor thereafter. The money is lost to him forever. The laborers of New York thus lost during the five years, by reason of strikes, enough money to have kept 2,000 men employed at fair wages every day for the five years. Not only did the strikers deprive themselves, but in many instances they brought suffering and want to their families. Strikes are sometimes necessary and unavoidable; oppressed workingmen are driven to resort to them in order to obtain their rights or redress for grievances; but it seems to us that only in extreme cases where no other course can be followed with anything like self-respect ought there to be a strike, as the poor striker imposes upon himself greater injury than he inflicts upon his employer.—Salt Lake Herald.

THE LODGE AND THE APOCALYPSE.

[Read by ex-President J. Blanchard before the Monday Club, San Francisco, Cal.]

"Woe to the inhabitants of the earth and of the sea; for the devil is come down unto you, having great wrath; because he knoweth that he hath but a short time" (Rev. 12: 12).

Moses Stewart, the celebrated Hebraist and commentator, taught us at Andover that the Revelation had been a sealed book to the church by reason of false principles of interpretation—attempts to apply its august and awful symbols to particular historic persons and events. He said that the Apocalypse was a "pictorial and pantomime" sketch of "the fate and fortune of the church down to the close of time"—that, like all prophecy, it is highly generic, and is fulfilled by whatever fulfills it.

The very remarkable passage, cited above, teaches, as the whole Bible teaches, that the ceaseless struggle between right and wrong and the devil, who is the author of that struggle, did not originate in our little earth; but that evil has affected natures superior to ours, and has "come down" from them to us; and that, in this stupendous conflict, Christ is the leader on one side and Satan on the other.

There is a book, now going on its third century, whose author was called by John Howe, one of Cromwell's chaplains, "the inimitable Ralph Cudworth." The title of Cudworth's book is "The Intellectual System of the Universe;" and Robert Hall called John Howe, who so strongly endorses Cudworth, "a lumbering wagon loaded with gold." This book, "The Intellectual System of the Universe," produced by the intellectual giants of Cromwell's time, and in the furnace which forged out our English and American liberties, paints Christ as the "Captain of the heavenly militia," sure, at last, to triumph over the hosts of darkness. And the Apocalypse is the text of their teaching. Beginning with an august angel-photograph of Christ and a sketch of the seven churches, the Apocalypse moves on through seven seals opening, seven trumpets sounding and seven vials poured out. And it leaves Christ, "the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world," in the midst of God's throne (Rev. 5: 6); while it lands Satan, the head of all trickery, secrecy and shams, with his battalion of beasts, images, false priests and false prophets, in a "lake of fire and brimstone," which is the last we see of them; and, whatever this lake picture of horror means, it cannot mean a bed of roses.

Then follows the finale of this stupendously magnificent drama, ushering us into a state of human existence, described in less than thirty words; to utter the full import of which would require the accents of angels and the intonations of heaven: "God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes, and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain" (Rev. 21: 4).

Christ must reign till he hath put all enemies under his feet (1 Cor. 15: 25). And Paul teaches the Philippians (2: 10) that to Christ "every knee shall bow, and every tongue confess that he is Lord—of things in heaven, in earth and under the earth." And John (Rev. 5: 13) saw that universal worship of Christ being enacted. But we must not forget that Christ had before said of those on the left hand, "These shall go into everlasting punishment;" and, even in the closing chapter of the Apocalypse, "He that is filthy, let him be filthy still," which seems to exclude some from the bliss of the new heavens and earth. It is now fashionable to impute these terrible doctrines of future final "wrath to come" to the Middle Ages, to priests, to ministers and fanatics, forgetting that the direct forms and endless duration of future punishment are uttered by Christ, who died for sinners, who prayed for his murderers, and whose nearly last word spoken on earth was the pardon of a thief.

OUR TEXT.

Let us now turn to the passage at the head of this paper. Let us consider its import; and whether, as Congregational ministers, especially on this Pacific Coast, we have any particular concern in it.

A prominent citizen on this coast, Dr. R. H. McDonald, on clear and substantial authority, has given to his church (the First Congregational) the fearful fact that there are 4,500 drinking places in San Francisco. Thus, with only half the population of Chicago, this city has 500 more drinking places, and Chicago averages one murder in its saloons for every Sabbath in the year. This fair city has, perhaps, the worst drink record on earth, if Dr. McDonald's facts are true. While I was a student in Andover, in the long ago, Cheever was whipped and imprisoned for writing up "Deacon Giles's Distillery," which sold Bibles and manufactured whisky. And the same New England coast still sends missionaries and New England rum to Africa, in the same bottoms, which destroys many times over more natives than Livingstone, Stanley, and our missionaries can save. And voters who are called Christian license and legalize this liquor traffic.

And when we consider the mixed people in San Francisco, drawing its population from around the globe, and so sharing not only the opium which British cannon forced on China, but arrack, date-juice and the intoxicants of the whole world; and as we want no Bible, but the daily press and the records of our criminal courts to prove that intoxicated men are children of the devil, liars and murders from the beginning—we have only to open our eyes to see that "the devil is come down to us in great wrath." God grant that "he may know he hath but a short time."

FALSE WORSHIP.

Liquor intoxicates, but by false worship Satan chloroforms men. Hence, by far the most universal, fearful and fatal of all intoxicants on our globe, what makes nations heathen, and earth an Aceldama and Golgotha, is false worship, which includes all self-projected worships, worships invented by men, administered by priests, and inhabited by devils.

When the Son of God assumed our nature and began his kingdom to fill the world with "righteousness, peace and joy," the devil met him with the proposition to allow him (Satan) to have the worship, and the Saviour might have the kingdoms of the world and the glory of them.

He well knew, from his experience in Eden, that Cain's religion, which had no Christ or Mediator, would murder Able's followers, whose religion had both. He knew that a Christless religion would make the true, Infinite God, inaccessible to finite minds. So that a false worship would make man serve false gods. And this has been the experience of mankind, and is so unto this day.

SOME HISTORY.

When Columbus discovered America, three men, born ten years apart, soon came to rule Europe, which ruled the world. These were Henry VIII., of England, Francis I., of France, and Charles V., of Spain.

The religion of these three monarchs was, at first, much the same. Henry wrote against Luther, till he wished to be a pope himself. But the great Alfred had translated Scripture, and Wickliffe had taught the Bible to the English people; and, in the reign of his daughter Elizabeth, a handful of pious peasants, afterwards called Congregationalists, with a sprinkling of small gentry, in Nottinghamshire and Scrooby Manor, in the North of England, cut loose from priestism, and proclaimed a church of God, to be a little independent republic. And Hume, Macaulay and Lord Brougham, in nearly the same words, declare that handful of peasants and their Puritan associates the source of British liberty, the vanguard of the freedom of the world.

The monarchs, Francis and Charles, busy with their wars and rivalries, allowed the Pope to teach and tax their people, and to rule kings by his money, and the superstition of their people. And for two centuries and upward, till the United States arose, the religion which teaches salvation by sacraments and ceremonies, has sunk Spain from a first to a sixth or seventh class nation; and produced people, multitudes of whom could not write a vote, or read one if written for them. The descendants of those people settled, and according to their ideas, sanctified California.

Their first mission in this city, properly named "Dolores" (for it was indeed dolorous), was planted here in 1776, the very year when a people who had escaped from the prisons and pillories of priests in Europe, issued their "Declaration of Independence," written in the New Testament 1,800 years before, but buried for all that time; declaring that men are of "one blood," and therefore equal and free.

From Boston, the city of Hancock and Sam-

Adams, and birthplace of the American Revolution, to San Francisco, and its "Dolores" Mission, there stretch 3,000 miles of land, which in 1776 was substantially one wide wilderness; but now the two cities are neighbors, within speaking distance. Sam Adams was a Puritan. The missionaries were priests. In 124 years the Puritans and their children and followers have bound the two cities together by a commercial railroad, and planted its stations across the continent with flowers.

The Spanish priests, who were under solemn vows of poverty, then owned this whole coast. They planted here twenty-one missions, whipped 20,000 Indians into service, taught them some man invented rites, and in 1825 owned millions of domestic animals, and millions of gold and silver. Their missions have vanished, and their masses died into echoes. The explanation of this contrast is not in inferiority or superiority of races. Isabella of Castile was not inferior to Victoria of England, nor are Spaniards naturally inferior to Englishmen. The whole historic riddle is solved by this single fact. The Puritans went to Christ for their salvation, while the Spaniards took their religion from priests, and since Christ there are no priests but counterfeits and usurpers. This man, Christ, is our only priest, because he continueth ever—hath an unchangeable priesthood. (Heb. 7: 24.)

JESUITISM AND FREEMASONRY.

But there is difference in priests. The Jesuits are universally unpopular and dreaded. All good Catholics hate them; and even the Pope holds his breath before the General of their order. The order was formed by Ignatius Loyola, at midnight, in an underground chapel, beneath the Convent of Martyrs, Paris, in 1540. One hundred years later the English people executed their king, Charles I., for treason. He was corrupted by Jesuits through his queen. The Jesuits undertook to restore his son, Charles II., to his father's throne, overthrown by Cromwell, and succeeded. They induced Charles, while an exile in France, to join secretly, both the papacy and the Freemasonry. In the Jesuits' College, of Clermont, "Paris, which was the headquarters of the exiled Stuarts, the Jesuits formed what they called chapter degrees, up to the Royal Arch, in which Masons swear obedience and assistance to their superiors, right or wrong." The name "Chapter," signifying a "dean and his clergy," shows the priestly origin of these upper degrees. And they swore in enough Protestant Masons in England to put Charles II. on the throne. This union of popery and Freemasonry to crush Protestantism and free government in Europe, is explicitly stated in Rebold's "General History of Masonry in Europe" (page 54), a work dedicated to all the lodges on both continents; and these facts are confirmed by other Masonic authors. The scheme of the Jesuits failed by the interposition of God. James II., brother to Charles II., came out an open papist, threw the mace into the Thames, and followed his mother and brother to France. The French called him "the simpleton who lost three kingdoms for a mass." The Prince of Orange came in, and Protestantism and constitutional government were saved. But the identity of Jesuitism and Freemasonry is not in their history alone, but in their nature. Both rest on two pillars—sworn secrecy and subjection of man to man. Both promise salvation by ceremonies, and both are thus sworn substitutes for and subversion of free government and of the atonement of Christ. Even the papist, Mr. Powderly, begins his ukase to his Knights of Labor thus, "What we require is secrecy and obedience."

If any one has a lingering doubt whether Masonry and its modern progeny are opposed to the religion of Christ, he has only to open his eyes and inform himself. Chicago has one thousand secret lodges to three hundred and nineteen churches. Thousands of colored women in the South stand at their wash-tubs, and board their husbands, whose wages support the secret lodges. The Sovereign Commander of Masons in the United States is Albert Pike, a New Englander, who, under the weak Buchanan, drew Indian school money from the United States Treasury, and with it raised a brigade of Indians, who fought under the rebel Van Dorn against General Curtis at Pea Ridge. There are men now living who, after that battle, saw our Union soldiers in blue uniform on that battle field, cold and stiff, with their scalps torn off and holes in their skulls. Before Gen. Pike could induce Cherokees and Choctaws to fight the flag that fed them, he took fifty of their leaders to Washington, and, by cut-throat and blood-curdling oaths, in Federal Lodge, No. 1, bound them to obey their Masonic superiors. The ten lodges in the District of Columbia "all went for secession." Oaths are administered on the Bible in the United States Supreme Court, and at the inauguration of Presidents at our National Capitol. But if a quotation from that Bible should be needed in a Masonic lodge, the name of Christ is omitted where it occurs. And if any one, blinded by the glaring falsehoods of the lodge, doubts whether it is a false religion, let him look in his dictionary at the meaning of the words "altar" and "priest," and one glance at the brood of "unfruitful works of darkness" will dispel his doubts.

But the nature and fate of these false worshipers are settled so far as discussion and the Scriptures can settle them.

Sixty years ago the lodge murdered Morgan for revealing its secrets, and the discussion went to the people. There were then 2,000 lodges, and 50,000 Masons in the United States. Of these, the digest of the Grand Lodge of Iowa tells us that 1,500 lodges went down, and 45,000 Masons withdrew; thus confirming the revelation and confessing the crime. Several States passed laws to suppress Masonry. All that was venerable in talent and patriotism and statesmanship condemned the lodge as treason; and 228,000 votes, one-fourth or fifth of our entire poll in 1832, were cast for its demolition. That year the slave question arose and drove the lodge out of politics. But the slave question was the lodge question. All but a few lodges went South, and their lodge-rooms hatched treason and secession. The lodge discussion was re-opened 23 years ago. National Conferences have lately been held in Boston and Chicago, endorsed by such men as Dr. McCosh, of Princeton; Storrs, of Brooklyn; and Joseph Cook, of Boston. A Bureau of Correspondence is formed in the Congregational Theological Seminary of Chicago, and students in 30 institutions are united in it, and men from 19 denominations have made addresses against the lodge. And this great jury for God and humanity are agreed in the following particulars; at least, no dissent has appeared in our papers or conventions. Thus we hold:

1. That the secret lodge system spurns the example, teachings, and claims of Christ.
2. That the lodge worshipers, being Christless, are Gentile, and so paid to devils.
3. That the high places, shrines, and side-altars of the Bible were secret lodges.
4. That popery is the mother of Masonry; that Jesuits manufactured most of the 33 degrees of the ruling Masonic rite; and oppose only such Masons as Mazzini and Garibaldi, who oppose the Pope.
5. That Masonic mysteries came from Chaldea and Egypt, through Assyria and Greece, and so are heathen; and Paul commands us to disfellowship them as "unfruitful works of darkness" (Eph. 5:11), and "fellowship with devils" (1 Cor. 10:20).
6. That the Jesuits are the head secret society of the world.
7. That the Apocalypse designates these priest systems as "Babylon, the Great," "the Mother of Harlots," "Beasts!" and an image of the first Beast; and "the Great Whore sitting on many waters," which the Book identifies as "the city which reigneth over kings," which is Rome, (Rev. 17:18).
8. That this complex system of abominations must speedily fall, as a millstone into the sea, and "be found no more at all" (Rev. 18:21). Christ, not Satan, will have the worship of mankind, and truth and right prevail, and the Lord's prayer be answered—"his kingdom come, and his will be done on earth as in heaven."
9. That this final triumph of the Lamb, the suffering Conqueror, must be preceded and attended by fearful antagonisms and convulsions, as the mightiest triumph of truth and right in the United States filled eighty-two Southern graveyards with Northern dead, and "the acceptable year of the Lord" is, in the Scriptures, always joined with "the day of vengeance of our God." But though earthquakes rend the earth to atoms, and its internal fires consume it, Christ has said to his disciples, "There shall not a hair of your head perish" (Luke 21:18).—The Pacific.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

The 250th anniversary of Haverhill—Puritan housewives—Some New England antiquities—The winner of the Sargent prize—An extraordinary legislature—Legalizing the lobby—The fruits of lodge-training in our public men.

Two hundred and fifty years ago a dozen men of the brave, hardy Puritan stock that settled Newbury and Ipswich, built some rude cabins on the spot where now stands Haverhill. This rough, pioneer village has now celebrated her 250th anniversary under circumstances that to those early town fathers would have seemed wilder and less believable than any tale of the Arabian Nights. What would they have said to the marvels of labor-saving machinery? or the throngs of native and foreign workmen that now crowd the streets of this busy manufacturing center? What would they have thought of "strikes" and "boycotts," and the whole labor question generally? If they could have been told that the tour of the world would yet be made in sixty days; that America and England would hold tete-a-tetes across the water, and London's morning gossip be printed in our daily papers before night; or that the British prime minister, without moving from his armchair, would deliver an address in New York City by simply speaking into a box-shaped thing called a phonograph, so far from "believing his report," they would, without doubt, have shut the prophet up in a mad-house. As looking backward is much easier than looking forward, we have a very decided advantage over our ancestors, and in the words of Whittier's poem, written for the occasion, can summon at will "Weird memories of the border town,

By old tradition handed down;
* * * * *
The terrors of the midnight raid,
The death-concealing ambuscade,
The winter march through deserts wild
Of captive mother, wife and child."

What an Elysian time must those good Puritan housewives have had who got up in the morning with the pleasant consciousness that they had all the day before them; whose souls were never tried with uninvited company on Monday, nor importunate book agents just at dinner time, nor clumsy Bridgets, whose particular mission in life seems to be to smash dishes. What did they think about as they sat spinning through the long summer afternoons? What did they know of Browning societies and Woman Suffrage clubs, and all the thousand and one social and public interests which occupy the minds of their fair daughters to-day? Yet let us not rashly assume that the circle of their thoughts was only bounded by parson Holdfast's Sunday sermon on the Divine Decrees, or the possibility of an Indian foray. These same worthy foremothers, as they sang their babes to sleep in the shadows of the solemn wilderness, where even then the lurking foe might be in ambush, had the whole gamut of earthly fears and hopes to range through; and how strangely sweet must have grown the sense of an Infinite Presence ever about them! how vivid the thought of eternity when any moment the terrible Indian warhoop might strike on their terrified ears! It is doubtful, however, whether many of them had the phlegm or the trust in providence of a certain Madam Boardman, a parson's wife in New Milford, Conn., of whom the story is told that during King Philip's war, when fears of an Indian raid had alarmed the whole community, she quietly answered the messenger sent to warn her of the approaching peril and help her and her children to a place of safety, that "she would be ready to start as soon as she had knit into her seam needle!" Verily, Madam Boardman was a woman who couldn't be hurried.

New England is old enough to realize the value of her few antique treasures. Harvard College Library owns the first book printed on this continent north of Mexico—the Bay Psalm Book. It has also Elliot's Indian Bible, the Bible used by John Bunyan, as well as autographs of Locke and Milton. In the new Art Building at Wellesley is a collection of rare old laces, so old that the hands which wrought their fairy-like texture have been dust for centuries. One especially interesting specimen dates back to a period anterior to the battle of Hastings, when William the Conqueror was plain Duke of Normandy, and the whole British constitution, language and laws, was in the teeming womb of the future.

It is rather singular that two young women, one at Harvard and the other at Oxford, should have simultaneously won the highest college honors that have hitherto been only given to men. Miss Reed, the winner of the Sargent cup prize, has refused to let her face be caricatured in the daily papers; she is, however, a very pleasant, unassuming person, and though her features are rather plain, they are lit up by those lovely dark eyes which Nature seems to delight in bestowing on women of genius, as if to make up for their lack of beauty in other directions.

Our Massachusetts legislature has once more distinguished itself. The West End bill has passed the house, and what is even more to its shame, instead of voting down the lobby it has actually passed a bill to legalize and regulate it as a necessary evil! This is certainly legislation extraordinary. It is the first time that a public body, elected as representatives of the people, has applied the whitewash of law to the instruments of its own corruption. The remark of a West End man in reference to the dining and wining of members by the company, "It was all the way we could reach them, through a good dinner with plenty of champagne," was probably true, but to what a pitch of degradation has our General Court sunk thus to sell the public interest for an hour or two of gormandizing at a public hotel! No downright bribery has actually been proved. All the worse. It is bad enough when a great, greedy, conscienceless monopoly can buy up our legislatures with money, but it is worse when they can be bought up with a good dinner.

The West End kept a paid corps of thirty-five lobbyists to influence individual members in every way, directly and indirectly—to be a constant annoyance to honest men and a source of temptation to weaker and less scrupulous ones. The lobby has nothing to do with the right of petitioners to appear before committees with counsel to defend and explain the objects for which they desire legislation, which is sacred and inalienable. But this is all open and above board. The lodge is secret and underhand. A strong speech against the bill was made by Mr. Williams, who said, amid great applause from the galleries, that "he would rather go back to the old cow-paths of Boston than to have an elevated road at the expense of the public honor."

The fact is that the lodge has been for years familiarizing our public men with the idea of secrecy, so that these dark, intriguing ways do not come to them with the shock that they would have come to our law-makers fifty or sixty years ago. It is only one among the bitter fruits that the lodge-tree is bearing. This same body of men has steadily voted down woman suffrage, though, as Lucy Stone points out in a late article in the American, they have abolished the two-dollar poll tax for men, preserved the male right to vote, undisturbed by change of residence, or even the commission of infamous crimes. But introduce a moral measure, especially if it is backed up by women, and it and they will become the butt of low wit until it is summarily squelched, only a few solitary Abdiels standing for its defence. Reverence for woman dies out where Masonry rules, whether in its own name or another's.

ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

THE FLOATING CHAPEL.

The builders have had much to contend against. Rain and high water have hindered. The boat broke loose one day and went down the Ohio a mile or more before it could be secured and towed back by a steamer. The timbers are very large and heavy, the head beams being twelve inches square and thirty feet long. The bottom is of oak plank two and a quarter inches thick. Everything about it seems to be first class, and will be ready for paint and seats in less than two weeks. We lack only about $300 to paint and seat the chapel, and we would like within four weeks to have it in active service. We believe every Antimason and every one interested in temperance work and Gospel and reform work among the Freedmen will enjoy having a little financial interest in the Floating Chapel.

Friends have responded nobly; and now, when the load is so nearly lifted, the work so nearly completed, shall we lose a week or more of valuable time for lack of a few dollars when we could have the chapel painted, seated and in active service inside of four weeks with another financial lift? Every dollar sent in by Cynosure friends will hasten the completion of the Floating Chapel, and will again be used to send the paper to colored preachers. Send to us at Wheeling, W. Va., or Marietta, O. I. R. B. ARNOLD.

—Bro. J. P. Stoddard is attending a couple of meetings in the vicinity of Boston this week, and may afterward go to Northfield to visit the Students' Missionary Conference.

REFORM NEWS.

FROM CHICAGO TO WASHINGTON.

A CHEERFUL VIEW OF THE SITUATION.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 1, 1890.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—God has watched over me during my trip of nearly two thousand miles, and once more I address you from the capital city.

The annual meeting of our Association and meeting of the Board of Directors which followed were sources of much inspiration to me. As we felt the great need of God's Spirit and aid in our great work, he manifested himself very precious to us. I shall enter upon a new year of work with renewed courage and faith, knowing that I toil side by side with those who are willing to sacrifice for Christ's sake, who seek not their own but Christ's glory. We are constantly reminded that this world is no friend to grace. It is only by God's help we can win. Should the spirit that pervaded these meetings be shed abroad in the lives of all our friends in the coming months, what a grand going forward there will be! United with Christ, what shall stand in our way?

During my last trip I was permitted to shake the hand and look into the faces of many friends of former years. How the wheels of time roll on! I cannot pause here to give the thousand recollections which come with a visit to the old home.

At Columbus, Ohio, I was made very welcome by Bro. Orvis and family. When a stranger in a strange land, I found a home with Bro. Orvis. His love of our principles grows no less as he nears the further shore.

Two days were spent very pleasantly at Cedarville, O. As this was where I found and married Mrs. Stoddard, I shall always have a high regard for Cedarville.

There had been a change of pastors in the reformatory churches in Utica, O., since my last visit, Rev. Thompson taking the place of Rev. Coleman in the Reformed Presbyterian, and Rev. Huston the place of Rev. Orr in the United Presbyterian church. These brethren are in full accord with the position taken by their churches on the secrecy question. There was no abatement of the interest of our old friends here. At my suggestion over forty dollars were pledged or paid to start what shall be known as the Co-operative Cynosure fund. Bro. Caleb Lyons, in addition to a contribution, pledges $2 per month for one year to this fund.

I stopped off one train at New Concord, Ohio. The Muskingum College graduation exercises were in progress. I was told that seventeen graduated with honor to themselves and the college. On the train I met an elderly man who spoke of his Christian experience. This led to the exchange of cards and better acquaintance. His name was Abel Ammon, of Willis, Brown Co., Kan. He was a member of the Wesleyan church of Willis, and had heard my father lecture. He expressed much interest in our cause, and took a supply of tracts and Cynosures to give his friends.

When preparing for church last Sabbath we heard a band of music, and looking out saw some five hundred colored Masons parading on Pennsylvania avenue decked in all the colors of the rainbow. At Zanesville, Ohio, a number of secret lodges are to parade on the 4th of July. At Barnsville, Ohio, the I. O. O. F.'s are to lead the 4th of July parade, and wind up at night with what is called a "grand ball." So the devil is driving men like sheep in flocks to hell and thousands sitting quietly watching the show. How appropriate would be the ecclesiastical text of the wisest king of Israel, "Vanity of vanities, saith the preacher; vanity of vanities, all is vanity." Eccl. 1: 2.

A German paper, the Witness of Truth, published in New York, says that on June 4 the Grand Master of Masons for that section made a speech in which he declared that in the State of New York 703 of the preachers were Masons. Of this number 288 were Methodist, 146 Episcopalian, 112 Baptist, 59 Presbyterian, 11 Lutheran and 8 Israelites. Is it any wonder that spirituality wanes and so many churches are vacant? Should not the crying need cause every friend of righteousness to redouble their activity?

W. B. STODDARD.

CORRESPONDENCE.

PARTIES, UNIONS AND COVENANTERS.

DENISON, Kans., June 28, 1890.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—I am afraid you are having "the Covenanters" ad nauseam: and still I wish a little more space, not so much to reply to my good brother Gault,—who is as usual as earnest as he is honest, but still a little prone to misjudge some men and things—as to fulfill an obligation I owe to the cause of anti-secrecy as a delegate from the Church Conference to the Synod of the Reformed Presbyterian Church. This matter has queerly got mixed up with the feeling that exists among us on the subject of union. A word of explanation with the report you have already published of the committee on secret societies ought to suffice.

Brother Robb and myself, who were the delegates from the Church Conference, thought best to embrace the opportunity of the consideration of Synod's report to discharge our duty as delegates. We were heard by Synod and appointed a committee to suggest action to be taken in response to the desire of the Conference. This we did, and our report will in due time be sent you for publication.

This report was not intended in any sense to reflect upon the committee of Synod and its report, and but for the feeling alluded to, and the misjudging it usually excites, no one would even dream that the church of the Covenanters was other than a unit on the question of secrecy. Both the reports were adopted unanimously and heartily, and so far as I know we are one and all unalterably opposed to secret societies. We have certainly fallen on a time when it becomes essential to heed the Master's injunction, "Judge not that ye be not judged."

I regret that my brother, J. C. K. Milligan, seemed to reflect on the broad Unionists in our church in his remarks in your last issue. Drs. McAllister and Stevenson are the able exponents of that kind of union, and with their philosophy I am in accord, as Bro. Gault shows in his last article. But I am glad to state only what every one knows who knows these brethren, that no more devoted and true men to the cause of anti-secrecy exist than they are. The only reason they have not been more conspicuous in it has been the marvelous work they have been doing in another reform.

It is true that I yielded to my brother's line of action on union at last Synod and voted for union with those who are noted and known anti-secretists, knowing as we all did that it would hinder rather than help the broader union. This I did because I cannot clearly see the expediency of even a lawful union with secretists.

I may say now a brief word in defense of my brother and the Banner against the charges preferred by my good Bro. Gault.

It seems the Banner and the Psalm-Singer have come far short of my good brother's idea of party prohibition. I confess that I do not see a clear consistency in the Psalm-Singer who favors political relations and action when it has neither endorsed either the American party or the Prohibition party, and still we all know that its editor is radically opposed to both secrecy and the liquor traffic. As to the Banner's consistency and fidelity I think there should be far less question, because it opposes all political relations and action under the United States Constitution.

I think I know that both these papers are as unequivocally in favor of prohibition and anti-secrecy as Bro. Gault or myself. What they want is a party that will be unequivocally and unmistakably a Christian party. They both demur to the statement by the American party that "this is a Christian nation,"—that is, if we use the word nation in the sense of government. The nation at large is measurably Christian, but the Constitution of the government has some radical defects.

Then I think they both deplore the utter want of testimony against secrecy in the Prohibition platform, and this refusal to own and honor Christ. Rather than see a new party so wanting in reference to these reforms come into power, they would prefer to wait and see what the Republican party may be constrained to do in other States, as they have done in Iowa, Kansas and the Dakotas. Now, while I am like Bro. Gault a little more inclined to endorse and encourage the Prohibition party, yet I do demur to his whispering so loud against good and true men who differ with him and me in regard to methods. Does Bro. Gault himself really belong to the Prohibition party and swear by St. John, so that he can allow no possible reflection on their methods or views? I guess we had better conclude that it is not wise to judge other men by our consciences, lest they should want to judge us by theirs.

If reformers can do nothing but act the censor on men and churches who are not of their way of thinking, nor see their way clear to act as they do in certain matters, and especially in matters extraneous to their reforms, then they should cool down to the point of using soft words and hard arguments and reform will take a boost.

Yours truly, J. S. T. MILLIGAN.

DANGEROUS EXTREMES.

BYRON, Neb., June 30, 1890.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—The Covenanter church in its supreme council decided last year that its members may vote for constitutional amendments. This has been the opinion of the most faithful and intelligent people in that church from my earliest recollection. They hold not only that the Christian may vote for prohibition amendments like the one now pending in Nebraska, but it is his solemn religious duty to vote for it. He commits a positive sin if he does not vote for it.

Our argument is this. The Christian is a member of the moral person called the Nation. He may exercise any natural right in the nation if there is no sinful requirement by the government. If the government, for instance, would require that the election should be held on Sabbath, or that the voter must swear allegiance to the Roman pontificate, then the Christian could not go to the ballot box, because of that sinful requirement. But there is no such sinful requirement in voting for an amendment. Voting in a republican government is a natural right. It is a duty enjoined in the Bible upon every citizen. The people are commanded (Deut. 1:13), "Take you wise men, and understanding, and known among your tribes, and I will make them rulers over you." It is true that in voting for civil rulers, if either the voter or the official who represents him is required to swear supreme allegiance to a constitution ignoring Christ, it is a sinful requirement which excludes the loyal Christian from the ballot-box, because it is the same in principle as swearing supreme allegiance to the Pope. The theory of the Constitution in crowning the people supreme only differs from the Romish idea in that they crown one pope, while the Constitution crowns about fifteen million.

But there is a small minority in the Covenanter church who hold extreme views on this question. They claim that the government is so completely in rebellion against Christ that the Christian should not vote or take any part with it even when it permits him to do so without swearing him to the Constitution. They illustrate the attitude of the government toward Christ by the attitude of the Southern Confederacy toward the United States during the late war. If they had been living in South Carolina during the war, and the Confederate government had asked them to say yes or no, as to whether they would put a prohibition amendment in their constitution, and would permit them to vote on it without swearing them to the Confederate government, they would have refused to touch it.

During the war when as many, if not more, Covenanters in proportion to their numbers went to the front with their muskets to defend their homes against that worst despotism, Southern slavery, there was a small minority of Covenanters who opposed their brethren defending the Union, notwithstanding they were received into the army without being sworn to the Constitution. When the supreme council of the church during the war was in session, some patriotic Covenanter soldiers floated the Union flag from the roof of the church. But a few of these extremists complained so about it that it had to be taken down. One of them, Rev. Wm. Milroy, said on his death-bed, that he never had faith to work in the National Reform movement, so strong was his conviction that the government was too corrupt to be reformed. I am glad to say that the large majority in the Covenanter church who have lent their influence to push the National Reform cause, hold very different views on this subject. We believe that our government has not yet assumed the attitude toward Christ that was taken by the Southern Confederacy toward the Union. It makes many discriminations in favor of Christian morality, such as recognitions of God in State constitutions, Sabbath laws, the Bible in the schools, religious instruction in prisons, prayer in legislative bodies, the oath in the courts, etc. The Lord would not destroy Sodom if there were ten righteous in it, so we believe there is salt enough in this nation to save it. As we went through the anti-slavery struggle, so we have faith that God will lead us on to victory in other great moral reforms, until the nation puts the crown upon the head of Prince Immanuel.

Brethren, let us avoid going to right hand extremes. I was once on a train that jumped the track on the right hand side, and it took us as long to get on as though we had been ditched to the left. A minister said he had a horse that was blind in one eye, and it was always dangerous on a bridge, for it required careful driving to prevent the animal from going off on the other side. So we account for the fact that some in our church who argued so strenuously against voting for amendments, even where no immoral condition was required, now go to the other extreme, and propose to unite in church fellowship with infidel politicians and secretists and those in favor of license. Let us try to follow the advice of the colored preacher "to keep in de middle of de King's highway." M. A. GAULT.

THE LORD'S MONEY.

WENONA, ILL.

No matter what enterprise is undertaken, this question always arises, Where is the money to come from? That money is needed to carry on the Lord's work is self-evident and needs no argument to establish the fact. Where is the money to come from to carry on the work of counteracting the evil influences of secret societies? Out of the pockets of those who are opposed to the evil, if necessary, We cannot expect the promoters of secret societies to contribute.

Many of us are placed in an embarrassing position in this matter. The writer is at present passing through a lively experience in this respect. Briefly stated, it is this: He has concluded that, for the present, his money will accomplish more for the salvation of souls to devote his contributions to enlightening the people of his own neighborhood, as well as throughout the country, upon the subject of secret societies. This is bringing down upon him some pretty severe criticisms. As some of these criticisms have been hurled at him from the pulpit, by an M. E. minister, he asks the privilege of putting in a rejoinder through the columns of the Cynosure.

The criticisms amount to this: that persons have no right to contribute money to side issues and make that an excuse for withholding contributions from the Lord's work.

Now, Bro. King has been a Freemason, and we believe he is free to acknowledge that he no longer fellowships with the lodge. We do not believe his position a practicable one, "that he is neither for nor against the lodge system." Christ says: "He that is not for me is against me." Again he says he "came into the world to destroy the works of the devil." Of what force are ministers in "destroying the works of the devil" when "sitting on the fence?" And if Freemasonry, which teaches another way of salvation, is not a work of the devil, what is it? The writer feels that he must act on his own convictions. At least he don't feel like consulting the "man on the fence."

The Lord needs money to "destroy the works of the devil." Now, are the suppression of drinking-saloons and the lodge system side issues? They are not. They are living issues, and we need live preachers to bring them before the people, and these men must have money to live. It is because of the unfaithfulness of ministers who "are neither for nor against," that the Lord has sent out those martyr spirits to do a work they have not the moral courage to do. Suppose these reform lecturers do turn the world upside down, is not that what Christ and his apostles did? Suppose that, through their influence, Masonic ministers are forced to pass through the humiliation of confessing the sin of going into the lodge, should they not be willing to practice repentance and confession of sin, as they preach it to others? Suppose churches are turned inside out, and are led to betray the fact that they possess the spirit of the lodge instead of the Spirit of Christ, will it not be a blessing to any community that they be forced to reform or pass for what they really are, religious organizations run in the interest of the devil?

Reader, don't shudder at this plain talk. Churches that are run by lodge men are doing more to make infidels than any other influence in the land. Said a gentleman who had paid little attention to the question until Bro. Hawley lectured here. "We can see now who are wrong. It is the ones who get mad."

Said another, "You may have done some good; but you have done a great deal of harm. The young people will have no confidence in any one now."

Of course, to have influence for good, men must have the confidence of others. If it is a loss of confidence in church members who belong to lodges to whom reference was made, the remedy is simple; let them repent and confidence will be restored.

S. J. WHITE.

LIBERALISM IN THE CHURCH.

DEKALB, IOWA.

The United Brethren in Iowa, as a church, are aggressively right on intemperance and the secret society question. The new liberal church is like its real name, "Liberal" with popular sin, though many of them are anti-secretists; but not aggressive. Consequently many of their sons are trapped by the devil's lodges. A lodge is the devil's church in which he is worshiped by rejecting Christ in prayer. In initiation into the kingdom of Satan a fatal accident always happens to the soul, and many times to the body. Anti-secret non-aggressiveness is a rut of liberalism, and if there are those in the old U. B. church who remain retrogressive it will be a source of weakness, consequently a hurt to sound conversion. Conversion to God is conversion from every known wrong. To preach that "we should reflect the image of God in all we do" is preaching the Gospel in its purity: then to plead for non-essentials would be adding to the Gospel.

We know not how many have been accidentally killed while being initiated into lodgery. Who ever heard of any one ever being accidentally killed while being initiated into the kingdom of Christ?

CYRUS SMITH.

PITH AND POINT.

SATAN FLEEING.

"The way-faring man, though a fool," knows that lodgery could not create internal division without first getting inside, and that dividing a church of Christ is the work of Satan. In order to secure the promise, "He will flee from you," the fight must be without the camp, just as it was with the slave devil. The church did not take slaveholders into fellowship to fight them, and where is slavery now? If all professed Christians would "resist the devil" at the door of their hearts and at the door of the church, just as sure as God is true, the devil would "flee." "One can chase a thousand and two put ten thousand to flight," if they only obey God in Christ. —CYRUS SMITH, DeKalb, Iowa.

FRIENDS, THOUGH UNSEEN.

I was delighted to see the bright, sweet face of my dear, though unknown friend, Miss E. E. Flagg, in last week's paper. I never met her personally, but have received several nice letters from her. Her autobiography cheered me very much, for in many respects her life and mine have been strikingly similar.—MRS. V. A. BUCK.

A PARABLE FROM THE TREES.

It is hard work to keep apple-tree worms out of fruit trees or Canada thistles out of fields, when all around tolerate them. No other church in this part of Pennsylvania, save the Scott Valley Baptist church, objects to receiving members of the various "orders," and hence we must be belabored with "reproaches for doing plain duty in not fellowshipping the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reproving them." Apple-tree worms make havoc with fruit trees, all the more for the indulgence of farmers, and farmer A has to be doubly diligent if they do not desolate his orchard. But ought not neighbor A to conform to his community, and let in the worms? No; burn them, mash them, or they will mash us. No fruit pests can dwell in quietude where we preside. It is doubly hard to fight a successful battle amid regiments of deserters.—NATHAN CALLENDER.

A CYNOSURE TESTIMONY.

Your paper has induced me to wash my hands of the lodge.—(Rev.) GEORGE BAKER, Hillsdale, Wash.

LITERATURE.

LIVE QUESTIONS: Including our Penal Machinery and its Victims. By John P. Altgeld. Pp. 320. Donohue and Henneberry, Chicago.

Judge Altgeld, for some years before he was honored by his fellow citizens with a seat on the bench, was quite well known for his dispassionate discussion of public and reformatory questions. His work on "Our Penal Machinery and its Victims," issued first in 1884, has passed to the third edition and is included in this volume. It was favorably noticed in these columns on its first appearance. In the discussion of Live Questions, Judge Altgeld has selected the following for a somewhat thorough discussion: Compulsory Arbitration of Strikes; Pensions for Soldiers; The Administration of Justice in Chicago—Unanimous Juries; Anonymous Journalism and its Effects; The Immigrant's Answer; The Eight-hour Movement. More briefly he writes on the abolition of the constabulary system, the Australian system of voting, legislation for working girls, divorces and moral training as an indication of general declension. These topics, which have a wide interest, are considered in a perspicuous and logical style. To the ordinary reader, who is apt to review such questions with a narrow and partial view, the judicial and critical examination into which the writer leads him, is most instructive and broadening. We regret to notice occasionally a lack of reverence for religion, and failure to estimate at full value the influence of Christianity upon the public mind and conscience.

Perhaps the most striking feature of the July Century is the long-expected debate on "The Single Tax," by Edward Atkinson and Henry George. Mr. Atkinson opens the discussion in a paper on "A Single Tax upon Land"; Mr. George replies in "A Single Tax on Land Values," and there is a rejoinder by Mr. Atkinson. Another article that marks this number is the beginning of the Century's "Prison Series," the first paper being a thrilling account of the life of "A Yankee in Andersonville," by Dr. T. H. Mann, accompanied by a plan, and pictures made from rare photographs. The first of two papers on "Provence" describes and brilliantly illustrates an unbacked region of the Old World: that part of France which is like Italy—with its splendid Roman remains, its palace of the Popes, and its associations with Petrarch and Laura. Dr. Edward Eggleston in an illustrated article tells the story of "Nathaniel Bacon, the patriot of 1676,"—and prints for the first time certain details obtained from manuscripts recently acquired by the British Museum and the Congressional Library. John Burroughs, who has not lately appeared as often as usual in the magazine, prints a characteristic out-of-door paper entitled "A Taste of Kentucky Blue-grass." The pictures are by a Kentucky artist, W. L. Maclean. The Editorial Topics are: "On Lack of Conscience as a Means of Success," "New York's Reformed Electoral System," "A Recent Sermon," and "Tom-Toms in Politics." There is an Open Letter on "The Inside Facts of Lincoln's Nomination."

The July St. Nicholas has several reminders of Revolutionary days and the "glorious Fourth." In "The Baby a Prisoner of War" Margaret Forster Owen relates the capture and return of a grandniece of Washington. Julia C. R. Dorr tells in verse of "The Armorer's Errand," a preliminary to the storming of Fort Ticonderoga; Laura E. Richards and Jane Ellis Joy contribute amusing verse about the Fourth, and M. M. D., in the Jack-in-the-Pulpit, gives a side view of the same inspiring subject. The sports of summer are prominent: Mrs. Pennell writes charmingly of "Cycling," Mr. Pennell furnishing the illustrations; F. W. Pangborn tells "How to Sail a Boat," and Edward Burgess, the distinguished designer, has made complete working drawings of a boy's sail-boat. H. W. Henshaw contributes a study of the commoner American hawks, which are described and pictured in such a way as to leave no excuse for the ignorant slaughter of useful varieties, which is denounced by the writer.

The TRUTH TELLER is a very ingenious application of the Scriptures to the great variety of topics that make up an ordinary newspaper. Advertisements, news headings, obituaries, correspondence, leaders, etc., etc., are all so pertinently set forth in Bible terms as to make a very attractive little document which is sure to have readers everywhere. Published by Silas Farmer & Co., 31 Monroe Ave., Detroit, at 3c. per copy.

"Raising the Schoolhouse Flag" is the title of a full page illustrated poem by Hezekiah Butterworth in the 4th of July double number of the Youth's Companion. This noble poem expresses the sentiments of the many thousands of schoolboys and girls who have been working for a flag to be raised over their own schoolhouses.

OBITUARY.

REV. W. W. STEWART died at his home in Wheaton, Ill., April 19, 1890, at the age of 87 years. The following sketch of the life of this excellent man is from an account in the Wesleyan Methodist, and is a deserved tribute to the oldest member of the National Christian Association who died during the past year.

He was born in Rockland, Sullivan Co., N. Y., June 10, 1803. His father was a soldier in the Revolutionary war. He experienced religion at the age of six years, joined the M. E. church, and was licensed to preach in 1825.

In the year 1828 he was married to Sarah Gidney, of Newburg, N. Y., and commenced married life in the city of New York. From there he moved to Sullivan Co., N. Y., and thence, in the year 1846, to Waukegan, Ill.

Being of strong anti-slavery and anti-secret society convictions, he joined the Wesleyan Methodist Connection soon after coming to Illinois. He preached as a local preacher for some years, and in the fall of 1859 joined the Illinois Conference and was stationed at what was then Ross county circuit. He continued in the traveling connection for several years, serving the churches of Oplane, Diamond, and Lake. He was missionary in Lake county three years. Then his health failed and he was superannuated for several years. His wife died in the year 1873. His health gradually improved, and he entered upon the active work of the ministry again, serving successfully Caledonia and Beaver circuits and the Alden and Lawrence churches. In the fall of 1879 the Conference appointed him to the Ball Bluffs work.

He moved to Wheaton some eight years since. Here he remained until it pleased the Lord to take him home. During all his life he was an earnest and devoted Christian and minister. Many are the souls in the different places where he lived and labored, who were won to the Saviour by him.

In his opposition to slavery, secret societies and the saloon he was consistent, determined and outspoken, and drew upon himself in consequence much persecution, which he bore manfully for Christ's sake. His place was never vacant at the house of God, except sickness, which was very rarely the case, kept him away. His presence there was always a benediction and an inspiration.

Though he loved his church second only to his God and his Bible, yet he was no sectarian, but would cordially join in any union efforts to advance the kingdom of Christ, and would rejoice most deeply in the salvation of sinners, under whosoever auspices it might occur.

All who knew Father Stewart loved him. Every one feels he or she has lost a friend, a brother indeed, and a bright, Christian example whom it was safe to follow, for he followed Christ. He lived in a constant state of readiness to depart at the Lord's call.

REV. JOSEPH D. BAKER, for many years pastor of the Congregational church in Cambridge, Ill., died May 24 last in that place at the age of 75 years.

Mr. Baker was born in Otisco, N. Y., graduated at Amherst College and Auburn Seminary, and was ordained and installed pastor of the Congregational church at Hartford, N. Y., June 8, 1841. After serving as pastor, also, of the Presbyterian church at Scipio, N. Y., he came to Illinois, taking charge of the Congregational church at Bloomington in 1850.

In June, 1852, he removed to Cambridge, where he remained seventeen years, doing a most useful and valuable work, whose fruits will long remain. He then served as pastor of the church at Malden five years, and of that at Plymouth two years, when he removed to Oskaloosa, Iowa. At this place, Eddyville and Danville, he labored until 1882, when he returned to the old home of his strongest affections, to spend the remainder of his days. His wife and only son died not long after, leaving him without the care and loving attention of kindred, but surrounded by the people to whom he had ministered for so many years, and who made it their delight to supply his every want, and so he has gone in and out among them during his last years, his presence a benediction and his life like that light which shineth more and more to the perfect day. He was a helpful friend to the new pastor, Bro. J. W. Fifield, a wise counselor to the old people of his love, always studying the things that make for peace and in everything seeking to please and honor the Master whom he joyfully served. He always had a hearty sympathy with Christian reform work, though a man of retiring disposition. He was for many years a reader of the Cynosure and for the success of the cause which it urges he ever prayed.

He suffered the amputation of his right arm several years ago, the result of a disease of the bone, but learned to use his left hand with surprising skill. He bore all his afflictions with a patience and cheerfulness that were a marvel to those who saw him, and that impressed them with the depth and strength of his Christian character. A quiet, devoted life consecrated to the work of doing good, without any seeking for the notice and applause of the great world, he filled up a rare measure of usefulness, and has left behind a shining example and a blessed memory that will long abide.

"When your heart is bad, and your head is bad, and you are bad clean through, what is needed?" asked a Sunday-school teacher of her class. "I know—Ayer's Sarsaparilla," answered a little girl, whose sick mother had recently been restored to health by that medicine.

To strengthen the hair, thicken the growth, stop its blanching and falling out, and where it is gray to restore the youthful color, use Hall's Hair Renewer.

WEBSTER'S DICTIONARY and the Christian Cynosure for $4.25, seems a very little amount to pay for so much valuable matter.

You get 832 pages of Cynosure for the dollar and a half!

And whoever has renewed their subscriptions within the last six months can get 1280 pages of Dictionary, sent postpaid for $2.75!!

Read the advertisement on page 14, "A REMARKABLE OFFER."

CONCERNING PREMIUMS.

We offer premiums to compensate such of our subscribers as take the pains and trouble to secure new subscribers to the Cynosure. Many who do this refuse to receive pay, and work because they love the work; others are glad to receive premiums. But,

First, We do not offer any man a premium to renew his own subscription. If a man has taken this paper a year and does not care enough about it to take it longer without being hired to, we do not offer him a premium.

Second, We do not offer a premium to a new subscriber to hire him to take the paper. When he has subscribed for the paper and paid for it himself, and knows its worth, then if he will take the trouble to introduce the paper to others, he can have a premium on the new subscription, but not on his own.

Third, We do not offer a premium where one member of a family stops the paper, and another member of the same family subscribes for it. We do not consider such a name the name of a new subscriber.

Any book we publish or sell can be had as a premium at reasonable rates. We will allow thirty cents' worth of any of our publications, at retail rates, postpaid, for one dollar's worth of new subscriptions to the Cynosure.

10,000

Another ten thousand edition of the tract,

KILLED, AND NO INQUEST.

This is a large 4-page tract at 30 cents per pound, 15 cents for half pound, and 10 cents for a third of a pound. It is an illustrated account of the death of Rev. J. W. Johnston, while being initiated by the officers of Huntington Lodge, W. Va., in January of this year. Sent postpaid at the above price. Address,

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St Chicago

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 20 cents per pound:

1. Historical Sketch—National Christian Association.
 3. Address to American Pastors.
 4. Freemasonry in the Family.
 5. President C. G. Finney on the duty of Christians towards the Lodge.
 7. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
 8. Modern Heathenism.
 9. Ministers at Rival Altars.
 12. Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodge.
 15. Secrecy and Sin.
 16. Selling Dead Horses.
 17. History of Masonry.
 18. Despotism Character of Freemasonry.
 19. Freemasonry, a Christ-excluding Religion.
 22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.
 28. Nathaniel Colver, D.D., on Masonry.
 33. Hon. Wm. H. Seward on Secret Societies.
 37. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).
 39. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?
 44. D. L. Moody on Secret Societies.
 45. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?
 49. John Quincy Adams on the duty of American Voters.
 - Chapters in American Politics.
 - Masonry vs. Prohibition.
 - Decline of the G. A. R.
 - Christianity and Odd-fellowship. Part 1, 4 pages; part 2, 4 pages.
- The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—20 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

THE N. C. A. FUNDS.

The General Fund is that from which the running expenses of the Association are paid. From it the agents on the field are supported.

The Foreign Fund is that from which the foreign demand for literature against the lodge is supplied to missionaries.

The Free Tract Fund clearly states by its name the object for which contributions are solicited. Millions of pages have been distributed by means of this fund.

The Cynosure Ministers' Fund. The donations to this fund have enabled the Association to send many copies of the Cynosure to the ministers of the South, especially to pastors of colored churches. The result has been a blessing to them and their churches.

Contributions to any or all these funds are urgently solicited.

FORM OF BEQUEST.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of — dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be sufficient discharge.

THE N. C. A. BUILDING
(The gift of Philo Carpenter.)

—AND OFFICE OF—
The Christian Cynosure,

221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

The National Christian Association

PRESIDENT—Bishop Milton Wright, Dayton, O.

VICE PRESIDENT—Rev. Geo. R. Milton, Elgin, Ill.

COR. SEC'Y and TREASURER—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SECRETARY—Rev. E. R. Worrell, Washington Heights, Ill.

DIRECTORS—T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, John Gardner, J. M. Hitchcock, Jerome Howe, G. R. Milton, Wm. Pinkney, J. P. Richards, Alexander Thomson, E. Whipple, E. R. Worrell.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS.

NEW ENGLAND.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic Conn.; Sec'y, Miss E. E. Flagg, Wellesley, Mass.; Treas., Z. Graves, Harris, Mass.

ALABAMA.—Pres., Prof. Pickens; Sec., G. M. Elliott; Treas., Rev. C. B. Curtis; all of Selma.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., Rev. G. R. Milton, Elgin; Sec., A. H. Hiatt, Jr., Wheaton; Treas., Ezra A. Cook, Chicago.

INDIANA.—Pres., William H. Figg, Reno; Sec., S. L. Cook, Albion; Treas., Benjamin Ulsh, Silver Lake.

IOWA.—Cor. Sec., C. D. Trumbull, Morning Sun; Rec. Sec., W. L. Enlow, Birmingham; Treas., Wm. Crawford, Washington.

KANSAS.—Pres., J. S. T. Milligan, Denison; Sec., S. Hart, LeCompton; Treas., J. A. Torrence, Denison.

MAINE.—Pres., Isaac Jackson, Harrison; Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W. Goddard, West Sidney.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., S. B. Sjoblom, Ferguson Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul; Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., B. F. Miller, Eagleville; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec., A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

NEBRASKA.—Pres., S. Austin, Fairmount; Cor. Sec., W. Spooner, Kearney; Treas., J. C. Fye.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., A. A. Hoyt, Littleton; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., Isaac Hyatt, Gilford Village.

NEW YORK.—Pres., Prof. A. R. Dodd Houghton; Sec., Rev. W. A. Hazlett, Belmont; Treas., P. D. Miller, Newfane.

OHIO.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Parry; Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Seneca; Cor. Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Seneca.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., Nathan Callender, Montdale; Cor. Sec., E. J. Chalfant, York; Treas., J. C. Young, Custer City.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. W. Wood Baraboo; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie.

HAVE YOU EXAMINED

The list of Books and Tracts for sale by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. Look it over carefully and see if there is not something you want for yourself or for your friend. Send for full catalogue to 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.

The Christian Cynosure.

J. BLANCHARD, EDITOR.

HENRY L. KELLOGG, ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JULY 10, 1890.

DOES THE OLD TESTAMENT TEACH A FUTURE LIFE?—In the eleventh of Hebrews Paul says of the Old Testament worthies who confessed themselves "pilgrims and sojourners": "They that say such things declare plainly that they seek a country," that is "a heavenly." This they could not have done if they had not been taught a life beyond this, into which saints enter at death. Read and ponder this whole chapter, and also the Westminster Catechism, which says the saints, at death, enter into glory.

THE TROUBLE WITH KANSAS.—A letter from a Presbyterian brother in Kansas says: "At our church prayer meeting last week there were fifty females present and two males beside myself. The lodge and the devil rule everything here. Vigorous efforts are making to change the constitution of Kansas from prohibition to liquor; and the husbands and brothers of those fifty praying women may have been, that night, in secret lodges under solemn pledges of their honor or their life to conceal their deliberations. If Kansas, the standard-bearer of prohibition, faints and falls, those secret lodges which sunk St. John will sink Kansas; and the mammoth Presbyterian papers, as a rule, suppress all such information and shelter the lodges by keeping their people reading platitudes and general information. Give the Cynosure 50,000 subscribers and this whole thing will be changed. The people of Kansas have shown themselves able, willing and ready to suppress the liquor curse; but their religious papers take their time and money and keep them ignorant of what the lodges are doing. If the Cynosure list is run up a few thousands, the organs of the denominations will open on the lodges in self-defence.

PROF. I. E. DWINNELL.

The Pacific (June 11) gives several columns to the character and memory of this excellent and eminent man, who died at his home in Oakland, Cal., June 7th ult., in the vacation of the Theological Seminary of which he was at once a founder and professor. Dr. Goodell, who died at St. Louis, was a friend and townsman of Dr. Dwinell. Both were born in East Calais, a mountain town in Vermont. Both traveled together in Europe, and, now, both are removed to the "better country, that is an heavenly." The senior editor of the Cynosure eleven years since preached to a large congregation in Dr. Dwinell's church in Sacramento, as he had done in Dr. Goodell's church, St. Louis; and as we three were Vermonters, their death deeply affects us. Dr. Kimball, editor of the Pacific, also a native of Vermont, furnishes in his paper, the Congregational organ of that coast, a charming delineation of Prof. Dwinell's person and character, and gives an affecting description of the worship kept up in his household till within a few days of his death. In these services, he read from the Hebrew Bible, Mrs. Dwinell from the French, the rest of the family from the English, and all prayed.

It seems but yesterday when we were at his pleasant home in Oakland; and also met him in the ministers' meeting in San Francisco. We had but just left the coast when the news of his death followed us. "Help, Lord, for the godly man ceaseth; for the faithful fall from among the children of men."

THE LIFETIME OF REFORMS.

Thomas Clarkson wrote a Latin prize essay at Cambridge, England, on a theme given by Dr. Peckard. That essay was re-published in 1816 in Maysville, Ky., entitled "Clarkson on the Slave Trade." The horrors and wholesale murders of the traffic led Clarkson to devote his life to its abolition. When one hundred slave ships were owned in Liverpool alone, Wilberforce and Macaulay, with the Abbe Gregoire of France, and other philanthropists joined their committee. They dropped opposition to slavery and confined their opposition to the slave trade; thinking that if the trade was made piracy, slavery would fall. After twenty years' toil Wilberforce's motion carried and the slave trade was declared piracy by Parliament in 1807. Next year (1808) it was abolished by our Congress. The U. S. Constitution protected it up to that year.

British philanthropists then took up opposition to slavery, and after another struggle of twenty-seven years, West India slavery fell. Aug. 1, 1834, eight hundred thousand West India slaves were set free.

Garrison formed "The New England Anti-Slavery Society" in 1832, two years before British slavery fell. In thirty-one years, Jan. 1, 1863, American slavery fell by Lincoln's proclamation. Thus these three great reforms were carried in from twenty to thirty years each.

The false worship of the earth have existed from Cain's altar down: and the true worship (Abel's) has come down the ages mixed with them. Sixty or seventy years ago missionaries of the American Board were stripped and sworn into the blasphemy and idolatry of Masonry, to get access to and save idolaters, though Masonry, as a substitute for Christ's atonement, like all idolatry, promises salvation by ceremonies. Since 1867 false altars and ceremonial salvation were denounced. This was twenty-three years ago. And the time of their destruction and Christ's reign draws on apace.

A CHANGE NEEDED.

Among Congregational churches the American Missionary Association, the American Home Missionary Society, and the New West Commission are organized under the motto "Save America to Save the World," and yet they are seeking salvation by the help of Masonry. The pulpits of the churches, which supply their million dollars a year, are silenced by the lodge. But for this American Christianity would shake off lodge fellowship as Paul shook the viper from his hand. The secretaries of these Gospel societies, Kincaid, Stricby and Bliss, are all good men, and all three abhor the secret altars. They would suffer death sooner than be stripped and sworn into the abominations of Christless lodges.

But these three great instrumentalities for saving America, all three employ Masons in their work, and depend on funds from churches controlled and silenced by lodge influence. They are related to lodge idolatry as the American Board was to slavery, when their missionaries in the Cherokee and Choctaw nations held slaves, and Gen. Cooke, a slaveholder, was a corporate member of the Board.

This false fellowship should cease. It grieves the Holy Ghost. In Matthew 15th and Mark 7th chapters Christ charged the scribes and Pharisees with making the worship of God "vain" and the law void by their traditions, "teaching for doctrines the commandments of men;" which is precisely what the lodges do.

We lately asked a secretary; "You oppose Mormon oaths, and stand by Judge Anderson's decision which makes those oaths a bar to citizenship, do you?"

"Yes, certainly," was the reply.

"But," we said, "Mormonism is Masonry. Masonic oaths equal the Mormon oaths, and yet you work with Masons against Mormonism, and bear no open testimony against it! If Christ had allowed his disciples to do precisely what he denounced in scribes and Pharisees, would he have been THE TRUTH?"

"No," was the secretary's answer.

NO SALVATION IN THEM.

The streets of Chicago were lately resounding with the tramp and martial music of a highly decorated procession of men calling themselves the "Junior Order of United American Mechanics." Whatever may be in a name like this we cannot fathom. Shakespeare says the rose by any other name would smell as sweet; and on the same principle this "Jr. O. U. A. M." would march as handsomely with a reasonable title at their head.

This order was holding its national meeting here, and was much heralded in the papers as a patriotic body, sworn to maintain American institutions from the assaults of foreign foes. Even the spirited, eloquent and alert America lays aside its iconoclasm to pat this "Junior order of Mechanics" on the head and give them editorial commendation. Their objects are said to be—

- "1. To maintain and promote the interests of Americans and shield them from the depressing effects of foreign competition.
- "2. To assist Americans in obtaining employment.
- "3. To encourage Americans in business.
- "4. To establish a sick and benevolent fund.
- "5. To maintain the public-school system of the United States of America, and prevent sectarian interference therewith, and to uphold the reading of the Holy Bible."

But to promote these objects, which are more or less commendable in themselves, the editors of America might have seen a large body of men tricked out like Italian bandits or Knight Templar Masons, with feathers, gauntlets, gold lace, spangles and tinsel stuff, to encourage Americans in business. Why, they were causing the loss of thousands of dollars in their parade through our crowded streets, where everything and everybody had to wait for them to strut by and air their clothes. And as for upholding the Holy Bible in that way, the Word of God is full of condemnation of it.

But this is a bagatelle beside the real work of this order, which swears or pledges, with a solemnity which is to exert the force of an oath, its members to perpetual secrecy from the rest of their fellow citizens, concerning the means they are using to encourage Americans in business, or uphold the reading of the Bible. It should not require any argument to prove that American institutions are not to be saved in that way. If they are it is pretty sure they are not worth saving. Christ might as well have secured his kingdom at once by worshiping the devil according to the temptation. It is the merest deception to suppose that these Jr., or Sr., or any other American Mechanics, male or female, or Patriotic Orders of the Sons of America, or National Videttes, or Know Nothings, or what not, are adding, or can by any possibility add, one grain or iota to the salvation of this Republic. That salvation means the resisting and casting out of a legion of devils that are corrupting, bribing, deceiving, besotting and murdering our American people. Is this to be done by the devil's own methods? Never. Satan does not cast out Satan to-day any more than in Christ's time.

We may grant that the purpose of the managers and members of these lodges is most patriotic and pure, but their methods surely do no credit either to the integrity of their purposes, to their good taste, or their good sense. Not by such means did our fathers gain for us this goodly heritage. Not so did they plant and nourish these institutions under whose grateful shade we sit to-day. The testimony of the true Americans of the elder day was against the lodge. It was for the Burrs and the Arnolds to foster and promote secretism.

Will not America and all other journals which are promoting this class of secret orders, we believe with mistaken zeal, study the character of American citizenship as revealed in Washington, Webster, Lincoln, the Adamses, Hamilton, Madison, Marshall, Rush, Wirt, and a score of like names. They will find the testimony uniform. As says the gifted editor of Harper's Weekly (June 22, 1889, p. 491):

"Whatever may be the faults of the English-speaking nations, they pursue their objects, even when they are revolutionary, openly and frankly. It was in the town meeting, with free public speech, not in a secret chamber, with passwords and grips, that Sam Adams inspired the American Revolution; and it was in the open field; under the recognized laws of war, not by assassinations and by wholesale crimes that involve men, women and children in indiscriminate slaughter, that Washington and his soldiers fought for American independence."

—Let other friends follow the example of Bro. S. C. Kimball of the Christian Witness, in writing frankly to the editor respecting an improvement of the paper, and especially how to get it into an hundred thousand American homes, where it should be.

—Mr. Adelbert Beach of this city lately replied in the Inter Ocean of this city to "The Age of Lodges" by Pres. C. A. Blanchard in Our Day of last August. The same paper has just printed an able reply from Pres. Blanchard, which our readers will wish to see.

—Our excellent contemporary, the Free Methodist of this city, has received a new outfit of handsome type, greatly improving its appearance and thereby adding interest and value to its contributions. We hail every token of prosperity in those journals that stand wholly for Christ and take the lodge into the circle of evils to be destroyed.

—The Lake Bluff Assembly management have this year set apart one day for secret societies in the midst of their temperance efforts. The grounds and buildings are to be set apart one day for the G. A. R. and all kindred organizations. So there will be a grand picnic for this order, the Sons of Veterans, Ladies of the G. A. R., Woman's Relief Corps, etc., all the various growths of lodge-ry that have twined their poisonous tendrils about the strong pillar of patriotism.

—Teed, the manager of one of the modern deceptions known as mental or Christian science, calls his theory Koreshan Science, and his headquarters the College of Life. He is reported by the Herald of this city to say that all the members of his society are solemnly sworn to protect one another. Other reports in the Journal indicate that the institution is little better morally than a Masonic lodge, whose members are also sworn to keep lecherous hands off the female kindred of their fellows.

—In his sermon last Sabbath evening Dr. Goodwin of the First Congregational Church, of this city, related an incident of his study life. A poor fellow, broken down with drink, came to him for relief and aid. Dr. Goodwin talked with him kindly until he repented and promised to quit drinking, giving his word as a Mason that he would be true to his vow. Like a faithful Christian Dr. Goodwin remonstrated with him for trusting in Masonry or a Masonic oath. No lodge oath could avail anything, but Christ alone could help him. Let us thank God for such testimonies and pray that they may be freely spoken in every pulpit.

—The petition to Congress asking for the prohibition of the organizations referred to by Washington in his Farewell Address, and in general all societies requiring an oath or pledge of perpetual secrecy of their proceedings, has been circulating several months. There has been no strenuous effort to secure signatures, but 2,700 names are on the list. Of these one old gentleman, John Leiper, of Senecaville, Ohio, has secured 1,033—a noble record, worth putting on his monument. In the years to come it will be worth remembering that the effort of one individual secured over a thousand names to one petition for the prohibition of the lodge.

—The Watchman of Bombay, India, is true to its name. Its voice is ever raised for a pure Gospel that will eradicate every iniquity. Its most important advertisement in the June number is, "IMPORTANT BOOKS ON SECRET SOCIETIES," and it gives editorially the following important testimony against the organized paganism which prevails in Christian lands: "We recently attended a Christian temperance meeting. A well-known Christian general, a few years since one of the most influential Freemasons of high rank, in making a short temperance address took occasion to say that he was once a Mason, but was not now, having given it up and believing it to be inconsistent with a Christian profession. Thank God for this word of humble, fearless, faithful testimony from a Christian character who is above aspersion and who is abundant in every good work."

—The Good Templar lodges in and about Washington city are attempting a revival. Belva Lockwood, the well-known lawyer of that city, presided on one occasion. At one of these meetings a correspondent says they attempted to open a kind of experience meeting in imitation of a Christian prayer meeting. The reasons given by many of the speakers why they joined this professedly temperance lodge are very characteristic, and will help every reader see what reliance can be put upon such a broken reed in our great fight with the devil of drink. These are the reasons why some persons become Good Templars: One, a lady, joined because a party of young men in a North Carolina town where she then resided dared her to. One gentleman from Wisconsin joined because his young wife was a member, and he knew she would make it lively for him if he didn't. A lady from the same State joined to satisfy her curiosity about the "secret work" of the order. A number of gentlemen said they joined because they hoped the lodge fellowship would help them to resist the dreaded desire for drink. So even the best of these reasons shows a weak leaning upon a human arm, in the fight with an enemy that God alone can help us overcome.

—The note about the discussion of the lodge report in the Reformed Presbyterian Synod has brought out so much strong and excellent writing from the Covenanter brethren that we begin to think it a blessing in disguise. The Cynosure confesses that it was misled by the first press report of the Synod's debate. The correspondent had probably never before heard secret societies criticised or discussed, and in his trepidation and alarm exaggerated the remarks of our earnest brethren into a personal encounter. The letters of this week and last sufficiently explain the situation. If they do not, the very able report adopted by the Synod which we printed two weeks ago, and the courageous and uncompromising resolutions appearing in this number (12th page), should satisfy the most critical. The report itself is a valuable document, and the N. C. A. committee on publications immediately recommended it for a tract.

PERSONAL NOTES.

—Rev. Wm. Moerdyke presided at the Alumni Reunion of Hope College during the late quarter centennial.

—A very cordial letter from Bro. S. C. Kimball, New Hampshire agent and editor of the Christian Witness, cheers us amid heavy labors. Bro. Kimball is fruitful in suggestions, some of which can be made immediately useful, and all of which we hope to inwardly digest for mutual profit.

—Pres. J. Blanchard, our editor, is off this week for the East. He is accompanied by Mrs. Kellogg, also one of "us" and a daughter. They will stop first with Dr. Emory Potter of Elmwood Hall, Saratoga, and will visit other places in New England and New York where special and personal efforts for our reform promise to enlist leading men in the churches against the destroying lodge enemy.

—Pres. M. Loy, of Capital University, Columbus, Ohio, has for twenty-five years maintained ably the editorial department of the Lutheran Standard of that city. He resigned last year, but continued to do the editorial work, as no one seemed available for the position. Prof. A. Pflueger, of the same institution, has been at last engaged, however, and Pres. Loy bids the readers of the Standard an affectionate farewell as their editor. He will continue to write, and in the future as in the past the paper will take strong ground on the Word of God against the lodge.

CYNOSURES FOR THE FREEDMEN.

We hope within four or five weeks to begin active work among the Freedmen with our Floating Chapel. We can then use thousands of copies of the Cynosure, and other good papers to advantage. Instead of putting a one-cent stamp on one paper, we would suggest that the neighbors be invited to put their papers with yours, fill a box or barrel, and let some neighbor who has no papers contribute dimes enough to prepay the freight. Send to us at Marietta, O., at any time before Aug. 10.

I. R. B. ARNOLD.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 2, 1890.

Vice-President Morton has greatly disappointed the religious and temperance people at the National capital by going away for the summer vacation without issuing the necessary order to stop the disgraceful traffic in intoxicating liquors which daily goes on in the Senate restaurant, which is immediately beneath where our highest legislative body sits to make laws for the country. Mr. Morton must have forgotten this matter, for surely a gentleman of his fine feelings and refinement can have no sympathy with rum-sellers, and with Speaker Reed's praise-worthy example in stopping the sale of liquor in the House restaurant, before him, there can be little doubt that he would have done likewise at his end of the Capitol building had he not have overlooked the matter.

The ministers of Washington are still showering down commendations upon the authorities of the District of Columbia for having had the moral courage to prevent Sunday base-ball playing in Washington, even in the absence of any express law against it, and now there is still another cause for congratulation. The authorities in Virginia, where these Sabbath desecrators went when driven out of Washington, have risen to the occasion, and there will be no more Sunday base-ball playing on the Southern shore of the Potomac to entice young men from this city to violate one of the Commandments. Truly this is something to be thankful for. The temperance societies of Washington are constantly up and a doing. Neither warm weather nor the absence from town of many people stops their enthusiasm, which is manifested by the large attendance at their meetings.

That noble band known as the Woman's Christian Temperance Union anticipate the accomplishment of much good if Congress can be persuaded to pass a bill which Senator Frye has introduced in the Senate, and Representative Laws in the House, providing for the appointment by the President of a commission of five persons to make a thorough and impartial investigation of social vice, in all its numerous phases, in relation to labor and wages, marriages and divorce, and the general welfare of the people. The bill provides that when this investigation is completed the commission shall make a report of its results to the President who shall transmit the same to Congress. There seems to be no good reason why Congress should not pass this bill, and the Woman's Christian Temperance Union are prepared to present a hundred excellent reasons why it should become a law.

The United States flag will soon have an addition of two stars to its constellation, the Senate having passed bills admitting the Territories of Wyoming and Idaho as States, which had already passed the House.

Senator Morgan has introduced a bill which meets the approval of every opponent of polygamy, and that means about everybody in this country. The bill provides that no person shall enter any of the public lands of the United States, in Wyoming, under the homestead or other laws, who is a bigamist or a polygamist, or who teaches, counsels, aids or encourages others to enter into bigamy or polygamy or who is a member of any association that teaches polygamy. Not the slightest objection has so far been raised to this bill, but it would unquestionably be improved, and be more satisfactory to the good people of the country if the words "in Wyoming" were struck out, making it applicable to all public lands of the United States, wherever situated.

HON. WILLIAM H. SEWARD, Speech in the Senate: "Secret societies, sir? Before I would place my hand between the hands of other men, in a secret lodge, order, class or council, and bending on my knee before them, enter into combination with them for any object, personal or political, good or bad, I would pray to God that that hand and that knee might be paralyzed, and that I might become an object of pity and even the mockery of my fellow men. Swear, sir! I, a man, an American citizen, a Christian, swear to submit myself to the guidance and direction of other men, surrendering my own judgment to their judgments, and my own conscience to their keeping! No. No, sir. I know quite well the fallibility of my own judgment, and my liability to fall into error and temptation. But my life has been spent in breaking the bonds of the slavery of men. I, therefore, know too well the danger of confiding power to irresponsible hands, to make myself a willing slave."

GEN. HENRY SEWELL, a Companion of Washington: "I was initiated an Entered Apprentice to the Masonic rites in October, 1777, at Albany, soon after the capture of Burgoyne, being then an officer in the American army. . . . I was led by the influence of this 'Perfect Rule of faith and practice,' during the year 1784, to view speculative Masonry in a shape still more deformed. Its character appeared to be selfishness, because restricted to its own members; its religion, deism, because entirely devoid of the Gospel. Its history appeared fabulous; its claims to antiquity, unsustainable; its titles, tulsome; its rites, barbarous and absurd; its oaths, extra-judicial, unlawfully imposed and blindly taken; and the penal sanctions annexed, horrid and impious."

THE HOME.

SLEEP.

While children sleep
They know not that their father toils;
They know not that their mother prays,
Bending in blessing o'er their beds,
Imploring grace for after days.

While children sleep
They never dream that others work
That they may have their daily bread;
When morning comes they rise and eat,
And never ask how they are fed.

While children sleep
They do not see the shining sun—
They do not know the gracious dew,
In daily miracle of love,
Is ever making all things new.

Do we not sleep?
And know not that our Father works
With watchful care about our way.
He bends in blessing from above—
His love broods o'er us day by day.

Do we not sleep?
And never dream that others work,
Reaping the sheaves that might be ours;
We see not how the shadows fall,
Which mark the swift departing hours.

Ah, still we sleep!
Our drowsy eyes see not the light,
See not the hands stretched out to bless,
See not that waiting for us stands
God's kingdom and his righteousness.
—"Dagmar" in Good Words.

THE HOME-MAKER.

Woman's rightful sphere is—home. No matter how gifted she may be, or to what high position she may have been exalted, she can never rise above the work for which she was designed by her Creator—that of being a home-maker.

By this I do not mean that her labor is to be circumscribed by the four walls of the house in which she lives, or that she is to be a drudge to the art of housekeeping. While home-making is closely allied with housekeeping in many points, there is a vast difference between a house and a home. Though ordinary things, like cooking, baking, sweeping, dusting, washing, or scouring, jar inharmoniously upon the poetic rhythm of life, the home is not long established before both husband and wife discover that something more substantial than sweet words and tender smiles is required to make the home a success.

But good housekeeping alone, even when carried to a high degree of perfection, cannot satisfy the longings of the human heart when sick and weary with the sorrows and toils of life. Some of the best housekeepers I ever knew, by their constant nagging and over-anxiety, succeeded only in making a splendid prison for their loved ones.

Home-making is an art, and the woman who succeeds, by her tact, in making a happy home for husband and children, has gained no small victory.

Among the winning graces of the true home-making, pleasantries take a very high rank. No matter how talented or accomplished the queen of the home may be, if she is not pleasant and cheerful, it will be hard for her to retain her legitimate reign in the hearts of her subjects.

The happiest home I ever knew was presided over by a bright little woman, who made no pretensions to ambition. She could not read Latin or Greek, and never troubled herself in the least about philosophy or woman's rights. She felt that she had all the rights she wanted—the right to love her husband and children and to keep a bright hearth-stone for their coming and going.

In this world of toil and worry, what higher, better or more enduring work can any woman find than that of simply making home happy?

If all the husbands and sons could carry the recollections of smiling faces and cheerful firesides into the cares and temptations of their busy lives, there would not be forever tales of trusts betrayed, of characters blighted, of homes wrecked by crime and dissipation, and of lives cut short by suicidal hand.

Then, dear wives and mothers, send your husbands, sons, aye, and daughters, too, if need be, into the world, from sunny hearth-stones. It is all right and proper to attend missionary societies and Dorcas circles and mother's meetings, providing you can find time outside of your home duties, but God does not require you to leave your own firesides in search of work while the dear ones in the home-nest require your services. There is a glory in all the sweet charities which Christian women are founding and conducting, and there are many free to devote their life and labor to the cause; but the first duty of every wife and mother is the making and keeping of her own home. Her first and best work belongs to her husband; and while this remains undone she has no right to go outside in search of work for others. Some wives and mothers, in their zeal to alleviate human need and human sorrow in the broad fields far away from home, have neither eye nor heart for the work of love about their own feet. While they are ministering to the poor and needy in the alleys and by-ways of the city, the angels drop tears of pity over their neglected duties in the hallowed precincts of their own homes.

Instead of the home being a place in which to eat and drink and sleep, it should be a haven of peace—a place in which to rest when one is tired—a place of blessed comfort, the sweetest spot on earth, because the wife and mother, the best-loved being on earth, is there to brighten it with her presence and good cheer.

To the living let us give our smiles and cheers, then, when we are called to bid farewell, coming earth's shadows, we will merit the sweetest tribute ever paid to woman, be she mother, wife or sister.

"She always made home happy."—B. V. C., in Christian at Work.

WHAT IS A MODEL WIFE?

A model wife is the woman in whom the heart of her husband doth safely trust.

She is the woman who looks after his household, and makes her hospitality a delight to him, and not a burden.

Who has learned that a soft answer will turn away wrath.

Who keeps her sweetest smiles and most loving words for her husband.

Who is his confidant in sorrow or in joy, and who does not feel the necessity of explaining her private affairs to the neighborhood.

Who respects the rights of husband and children, and in return has due regard paid to her.

Who knows that the strongest argument is her womanliness, and so she cultivates it.

Who is sympathetic in joy or in grief, and who finds work for her hands to do.

Who makes friends and keeps them.

Who is not made bitter by trouble, but who strengthens and sweetens under it.

Who tries to conceal the faults of her husband rather than blazon them forth to an uninterested public.

The woman whose life-book has love written on every page.

Who makes a home for a man—a home in a house and in a heart. A home that he is sure of, a home that is full of love, presided over by one whose price is above rubies.

She is the model wife.—Ladies' Home Journal.

THE HAPPIEST BOY.

Who is the happiest boy you know? Who has the best time? Is it the one who last winter had the biggest toboggan, or who now has the most marbles, or wears the best clothes? Let's see.

Once there was a king who had a little boy whom he loved. He gave him beautiful rooms to live in, and pictures and toys and books. He gave him a pony to ride, and a row boat on a lake, and servants. He provided teachers who were to give him knowledge that would make him good and great.

But for all this the young prince was not happy. He wore a frown wherever he went, and was always wishing for something he did not have.

At length, one day a magician came to court. He saw the boy, and said to the king: "I can make your son happy. But you must pay me my own price for telling the secret."

"Well," said the king, "what you ask I will give."

"So the magician took the boy into a private room. He wrote something with a white substance on a piece of paper. Next he gave the boy a candle, and told him to light it and hold it under the paper, and then see what he could read. Then he went away and asked no price at all. The boy did as he had been told, and the white letters turned into a beautiful blue. They formed these words:

"Do a kindness to some one every day!"

The prince made use of the secret, and became the happiest boy in the kingdom.—Our Sunday Afternoon.

LEARNING TO FLOAT.

"Walter, did you ever learn to float? said a minister to a young man in his congregation who had been seeking salvation for some time.

"Yes," said Walter; "but why do you ask me the question?"

"You shall see presently. You remember you were told that water was heavier than your body, and that if you laid yourself on your back quite still, with nothing but your face above the surface, it would support you."

"Yes, and so it did."

"But did you find it easy to trust yourself to it? Did you float the first time you tried?"

"No; I could not lie quite still, and trust to nothing but the water. I struggled, or tried to catch at something to keep me up, and down I went."

"Just so, Walter; and that is the reason why you do not find rest and peace in Jesus. You do not trust him. You struggle to get some sense of pardon, or you catch at some frames or feelings, and down you go into the depths of despondency, and, if God's grace prevent not, you will sink into the bottomless deep of despair."

"Am I then to be content without a sense of pardon and peace, and a feeling of love and joy in salvation from guilt and sin?"

"Most assuredly not. Never rest, my friend, until you find, not only pardon, but an assurance of it; and never be content until you are sensible of a thorough change, and feel in your heart the fruits of the Spirit. But how did you get to feel at ease resting on such an unstable element as water?"

"I got to believe that it would support me, and I saw it supported others, and after a few trials, when I trusted myself on it, and felt it supported me, I lost all fear, and could throw myself into it at any depth."

"Just so; you believed the truth that water could support you, and acted on that belief. That is, you trusted it, and then you felt it held you up. It is the very same with Christ and his Word. Believe in him, i. e., trust him practically, and then you will feel that he supports or saves you. If you had been like many timid people, who wish to be able to float, but never learn, because they lay themselves only half down, or struggle and sink, and can never rest quietly on the water, because they do not feel it supporting them, you, too, would never have learned to float. Yet that is what you are doing with Christ and his Word. Because you do not feel a sense of pardon; you will not trust him, and because you do not feel peace, you will not trust in the peace promised. You practically say, 'I will not trust in the solemn promise of the Saviour until I have got the thing promised in my possession. I will not trust my pardon and peace in his hands; I must feel it in my own heart.' If I were to say to you, 'Come to me, to-morrow, and I will give you a book,' you would not say, or even think within yourself, 'I'll believe that when I have got the book in my own hands—not before.' Yet that is virtually what you are saying in regard to Christ's promises, at the very time you profess to be going to him, or trusting him for pardon and eternal life."

(With a deeply thoughtful look,) "I think I now see where I was wrong, and I am sorry for having dishonored the Saviour so much. But how am I to learn to trust him?"

"How did you learn to float?"

"Oh, as soon as I had trusted to the water alone, without looking to any other thing to support me, I found I was safe, and could throw myself on it freely."

"My dear young friend, do the same with Jesus Christ. Is his Word in the Gospel not to be trusted as much as the law which governs that most unstable element, water? He says, 'Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest.' Don't begin to say, I do not feel my load of sin heavy enough; I have not labored long enough in repenting of my past life. Christ's reference to the heavy laden and the laboring is to encourage the very worst, and who might think they are the least likely to get rest. He does not add these words to hinder any one from coming. In other places, he makes no reference to the load and the labor, when he says from his throne in glory, 'Whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely;' and his gracious lips have said, 'Him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out.' Don't trouble yourself about the way of coming—that is, trust him just as you are. Don't look at yourself, except to see your sins and your needs. Look to Jesus as he is. 'I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me.' Listen to what Paul said to the hardened gaoler at Philippi. 'Believe in the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved.' Notice—'Believe, and thou shalt be saved, whether you feel it or not.' And we are told that the man did believe, and at once he felt assured of his salvation, and rejoiced in God that very night. It requires no preparation to do this, just as it required no preparation to enable you to float. It needs much preparation to fit us for the work of the Christian life. We need training to make us good soldiers of Jesus Christ. But for the first act of the Christian, we may be anything that is weak, unworthy, and sinful. We enter the kingdom as a little child. Go home, my dear young friend, and go to Jesus by faith, just as you learned to float."—The Ensign.

THE REASON.

Grandma Gruff said a curious thing—
"Boys may whistle, but girls must sing."
That's the very thing I heard her say
To Kate, no longer ago than yesterday.

"Boys may whistle." Of course they may,
If they pucker their lips in the proper way,
But for the life of me I can't see
Why Kate can't whistle as well as me.

"Boys may whistle, but girls must sing;"
Now I call that a curious thing.
If boys can whistle, why can't girls, too?
It's the easiest thing in the world to do.

First you do that, then you do this,
Just like you were fixing up for a kiss.
It's a very poor girl, that's all I say,
Who can't make out to do that way.

"Boys may whistle, but girls may not;"
A whistle's a song with the noise knocked out,
Strayed off somewhere down in the throat,
Everything lost but the changeful note.

So if boys can whistle and do it well,
Why cannot girls, will somebody tell?
Why can't they do what a boy can do?
That is the thing I should like to know.

I went to father and asked him why
Girls couldn't whistle as well as I,
And he said, "The reason that girls must sing
Is because a girl's a sing-ular thing."

And grandma laughed till I knew she'd ache
When I said I thought it all a mistake.
"Never mind, little man," I heard her say,
"They will make you whistle enough some day."

—Selected.

BEYOND THE ROPES.

One of the life-guards at Atlantic City, a popular resort on the New Jersey coast for sea-bathing, said lately: "All the accidents which have taken place here for years are due to the disregard by some bathers of proper precautions.

"Ropes, as you see, are set on stakes through the surf to mark the limits beyond which it is not safe to go. But many persons insist on venturing outside of these ropes at the imminent peril of their lives.

"The majority of these foolhardy swimmers are young women. Every day the guards go out to bring them in. Sometimes they cannot be reached, and go down in sight of their friends on shore. If they would stay inside of the ropes there would be no danger."

The reader of this, if a girl or woman, is no doubt inclined to censure severely the silly foolhardiness of these other women who risk their lives merely to show they dare venture where law and experience declare that it is unsafe to go.

But is she herself on safe ground?

The young girl who dresses in such a way as to attract attention in public, who talks loudly in the car or on the street, who tosses her head and gives saucy glances when she meets a group of young men unknown to her, may be as yet innocent of evil intentions, but she is venturing beyond the lines which have been drawn for the protection of modest women.

The girl who receives letters and maintains intimacies which she dares not bring before her mother's eyes is going beyond the ropes into dangers compared with which the depths of the cruel sea are kind and pitiful.

It is often a fault of innocent girls to look with contempt upon the old-fashioned rules and precautions which society has laid down for their safeguard and protection. It seems to them picturesque and charming to be unconventional and daring.

Keep within the ropes! Beyond them wait ruin and death!—Youth's Companion.

Mr. Spurgeon has a poor opinion of the Christianity of Great Britain. In a recent sermon he exclaimed: "Ah me, this is a miserable age! Go with a lancet throughout these isles, and you could not get enough martyr-blood to fill a thimble. Backbones are scarce, and grit is a rare article."

TEMPERANCE.

THE MINISTRY AND THE CAUSE OF TEMPERANCE.

BY REV. ISAAC HYATT.

There is no traffic that hinders the progress of Christianity more than the rum traffic. Hence it ought to receive the candid, intelligent, and prayerful consideration of the ministry. The ministry should clearly point out its evils, make apparent its iniquity, and show its ruinous effects upon the body, the mind, and the heart. It should heartily support all wise measures to suppress or remove the accursed traffic from our State and Nation. It should utter its earnest protest against all who aid or even tolerate the saloon in its work of damnation. It should faithfully warn and entreat all to avoid and pass by it as they would a pest-house. It should emphasize and make manifest the wisdom of Solomon when he said, "Look not thou upon the wine when it is red, when it giveth his color in the cup, when it moveth itself aright; at the last it biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder."

Most assuredly, as things now exist, the ministry should not rest satisfied till this great curse is exterminated from our land. An old proverb says, "Fire is a good servant, but a bad master." On some quiet evening, while the fire shines brightly on our hearth, we might wisely discuss the wisest methods of regulating it—whether with grate or stove, Baltimore heater or furnace. But when our house is on fire or the great city in flames, such reasoning is folly. Under such circumstances wisdom would say, "Sound the alarm, hasten on the firemen and put out the fire."

We might change the proverb a little and say, "Alcohol is a tolerably good servant and a very bad master." While beholding its helpful service for mechanical purposes or beneficent aid as a medicine we might wisely discuss the best way to regulate its use. But when strong drink is raging through our land, turning our financial resources into devouring flames of misery, preventing the education of a large proportion of our youth and allowing them to grow up in ignorance and vice; paralyzing the most potent agencies of church and state in their efforts to ameliorate the condition of society, so that the noblest characteristics of manhood are consumed, the purest virtues of womanhood crushed, and the fairest prospects of our Nation are blighted; it becomes our first duty to consider the most efficient means for its prohibition. It is time the axe be laid at the root of this gigantic tree of iniquity.

The Atlanta Constitution recently said, "The race question is largely the whisky question." With ninety per cent of our crimes traceable to strong drink, it is clear as a sunbeam that its declaration is true. For with the removal of this evil the supremacy of intelligence and virtue could be easily secured. Under their dictation the "race problem" would soon be disposed of, enabling the South to breathe freely. And under the same dictation all other evils, whether open or secret, would be overcome.

It is Christianity alone that can achieve this victory. Not that sentimental kind of Christianity that loves to retire into pleasant places of ease to admire its excellencies, but that goes out into the world to "fight the good fight of faith," and secure the rights of mankind. "For this purpose the Son of God was manifested, that he might destroy the works of the devil" (1 John 3: 8). Not that he might nestle down by his side to enjoy a pleasant co-partnership with him, and divide the spoils of victory with him.

The need of the hour is an advanced attack on the strongholds of iniquity that will make itself felt at the ballot box, on the judge's bench, in the halls of Congress, and in the executive chair, as well as in our Christian homes and temples of worship. The good prayers of Nehemiah would forever remain ineffective if he had not joined with them the sword and the trowel.

So if we render our prayers effective for the overthrow of the rum traffic, we must enter joyfully and heroically into the sufferings of Christ, as well as into the joy of his presence. Certainly the ministry ought to take the front in this warfare, enlightening, awaking, and inspiring the people to follow.

Who can touch the conscience of the nation so that it will cast its ballot for the prohibition of the liquor traffic as can the ministry? So, logically, as well as by divine appointment, the ministry is placed in the front to lead the people to act and stand firm "for God and home and native land." Then let the ministry shake the shaky things pertaining to this unrighteous traffic till the things which cannot be shaken remain, and the people will understand where they are and what to do.

John the Baptist was a burning and a shining light. Not simply because his spiritual apprehension was so keen, but on account of the energy of his conviction. However intelligent, cultivated, and courteous the ministry may be, without the energy of this conviction it is insufficient to move the people to action against any great evil.

Hence our great need is conviction. Conviction is contagious. And when a conviction of the evils of intemperance permeates the ministry, it will spread among the people.

Everything appertaining to the drink traffic is exceedingly sinful. It is a sin to sell intoxicating drink, and God has pronounced a woe upon him who does it. It is a defiling sin to drink. It is a presumptuous sin to tolerate it. It is a sin of so great magnitude to get drunk that it is written, "No drunkard shall enter the kingdom of heaven." And it is a murderous sin to license the traffic. And when the ministry becomes baptized with a conviction of these facts, it cannot help but cry aloud and show the people their transgression while they allow this traffic to receive the support and following that it does. But the ministry should not only stand courageously at the front in this temperance conflict; but press the warfare in the spirit of love, patience, sympathy, and charity. For while the iniquities of the drink crime ought to be courageously exposed and rebuked, we should be patient with those whose moral acumen is not as clear and far-reaching as our own, and exercise charity toward those who differ with us in opinion.

It is a fact full of promise that so many ministers are prohibitionists; but no prohibitionist ought to be so egotistic as to think all prohibitionists are in the Prohibition party. Doubtless it would be better if they were. But facts ought to be taken as they are, remembering our mission is to enlighten, inspire, and harmonize, so that the discordant forces in the temperance cause will come together and move onward in the right way. And if we feel our way along prayerfully, with unwavering confidence in God, this unification of action on right lines will be secured. It is not the mission of the ministry to act politically, so much as to agitate principles that will give birth to statesmen who will act in the fear of God and for the right.

The ministry should not suffer itself to be molded and directed by politicians, but create a state of morals that will influence politicians to act for the highest good of their fellow-men. In other words, the ministry should not be steadied by the politicians, but steady the politicians.

When this order dawns upon us, politicians will cease to be demagogues and become statesmen. And when a few more statesmen are born and come to the front, like Gov. D. H. Goodell, this liquor traffic will be suppressed.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE NEW TESTAMENT.

LESSON III.—Third Quarter.—July 20.

SUBJECT.—Taking up the cross.—Luke 14: 25-35.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Whosoever doth not bear his cross, and come after me, cannot be my disciple.—Luke 14: 27.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

DAILY READINGS.—M.—Luke 14: 25-35. T.—Matt. 10: 16-42. W.—Mark 10: 17-31. T.—Matt. 5: 13-20. F.—1 Kings 18: 21-39. S.—Rom. 12: 1-21. S.—Matt. 16: 21-28.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. The first condition of discipleship. Vs. 25-27. Christ was now in the zenith of his popularity. "There went great multitudes with him." If he had been an ambitious human leader, his only thought would have been to swell the ranks of his followers; but Christ's plan was always to set the truth before the minds of men, thus sifting out the half-hearted who could only hinder and not help his cause. The early monks understood the word "hate" literally, and so they sundered every family tie, and denied themselves every earthly comfort and went into the deserts to live. We are not to do like them, but we are to make Christ the object of our supreme and undivided affection. If we do this it will make more precious and endearing every human relationship, and in a true and literal sense we shall receive a hundredfold more in this life. The second condition, cross-bearing, follows from the first. Self-denial always comes easy if we love supremely. So does the third condition, of following after him. What we most love and admire we most want to imitate. These conditions are not arbitrary. They are the great natural laws which stand at every door, whether of knowledge, science, or art, which we may seek to enter. Christ simply takes the law of all spiritual progress, eliminates from it all that is mystical or hard to understand and makes it simple enough for the simplest child or most unlettered person. How shall we make Jesus the supreme love of our lives? By being much with him, studying his character, and in every act and word thinking what he would say and do in similar circumstances, thus making him the dominant presence in our lives. Any one who sincerely tries this has learned the way to make his discipleship easy as well as a daily joy.

2. Counting the cost. Vs. 27-33. Every great undertaking involves cost, and the greatest undertaking of all can be no exception to the rule. The law of compensation holds true in the Christian life. Will you pay the cost? If you are going to make your life a noble, finished building, raised on sure foundations, there is a price to pay. Or, considering life as a battle field, will you accept an inglorious peace, or as good soldiers of Jesus Christ welcome hardship, wounds, death itself to win the victor's laurel at last? We must remember, however, that the compensations are not always on one side. Many a coward and traitor has paid more for defeat than the martyr ever paid for victory. It costs more to make a failure of life than it ever can to work out its true ends according to God's original purpose. The great trouble with the church at the present day is that so many of her nominal members "desire conditions of peace" with the world. This is why the churches so generally took the wrong side on the slavery question, and why they are silent on the lodge evil to-day though it is eating out their very vitals like a cancer. It is because they need sifting like Gideon's army. Their ranks are full of worldly Christians who see with alarm the numbers, the wealth and the influence that is on the other side, and are ready to capitulate at once without striking a blow. Notice that the embassy is sent "while the other is yet a great way off." Those who make peace with the world and popular evils are not apt to wait for the conflict to begin, but strike their colors before the enemy is in sight. High license clergymen and lodge apologists are generally those who have never taken nor given a single blow in defence of the truth. They have not let the foe come in sight before they are ready to make a shameful peace.

3. The savorless Christian. Vs. 34, 35. When a Christian ceases to leaven the world he becomes, like savorless salt, the most useless thing on earth. When he refuses to bear testimony against sin his Christian profession is worth nothing except to be trodden under foot by sinners and worldlings.

HELPFUL THOUGHTS FROM PELOUBET'S QUARTERLY.

BEARING THE CROSS.—(1) We bear our cross when we mortify the deeds of the flesh for the sake of the Spirit (Col. 3: 5), or when we gladly suffer the loss of all things that we may be found in Christ (Phil. 3: 8-10), or share his sufferings and self-sacrifices that we may minister to his suffering ones (Matt. 25: 35, 36). (2) All self-denials for Jesus' sake are bearing the cross. The cross is the symbol of death. But often many small self-denials, a continual enduring of little crosses, are more difficult to bear than martyrdom, and are as real a sacrifice of the life to Jesus. (3) Each one must bear his own cross; the one the good Father lays upon him. (4) He must bear it voluntarily. (5) He must bear it after Christ, in Christ's spirit, in his way, in doing his work. "The cross for the cross never; but the cross for the Lord, ever." (6) Every person needs a cross to make him better in this world and fit him for heaven. No true life is lived without some cross. (7) The cross is a test whether we are disciples indeed, or are only following in the sunshine for the loaves and fishes. (8) There is always a crown surmounting the cross.—P.

COUNTING THE COST.—It costs something to be a Christian. (2) Every one should see clearly what that cost is, or he will fall back when he learns the truth by experience. (3) Counting the cost will keep people from joining the church unworthily. (4) Counting the cost will make us so realize the greatness of the work, and our own inability of ourselves to pay it, as will lead us to Christ himself, who has abundant supplies. (5) Counting the cost will show us not only the difficulties, but also the value of religion. It will point out the crown as well as the cross, the glory that far outweighs the shame.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—Rev. A. Ethridge received into the Marseilles, Ill., church some thirty new members at last communion. During July and August Prof. D. A. Straw of Wheaton College supplies the pulpit during Bro. Ethridge's vacation. The College Church, Wheaton, does not secure his services as pastor.

—A training school for deaconesses is to be established at No. 802 Broadway, New York, adjoining Grace Episcopal church. The attention of several religious denominations is being given lately more than ever to the subject of deaconesses as an order or office in the church.

—Mr. Moody will hold his eighth general conference or school for Bible study at Northfield, Mass., beginning July 31 and closing August 9. He will be assisted by Dr. A. J. Gordon, Dr. Marcus Rainford and Professor Moorehead.

—The Congregationalist reports over thirteen thousand additions to the churches since January.

—Rev. Dr. Phillips Brooks will take no vacation this year, but will preach in his Boston church every Sunday this summer.

—A "Presbyterian Headquarters" at Chautauqua—the first of the denominational houses—is to be erected, a brick building with stone trimmings.

—The thirteenth annual meeting of the Church Congress of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States will be held in Philadelphia in November.

—At the late grand rally of the Salvation Army in New York Marshal Booth reported that the Army in the United States has about three hundred and fifty thousand members.

—The commission appointed to select the place of meeting for the next General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, to meet in 1892, has fixed upon Omaha, Neb.

—Rotation in the eldership, or "rotary eldership," was defeated by nine votes at the late meeting of the Cumberland Presbyterian General Assembly—a two-thirds vote being necessary to its adoption.

—The Methodists of Cleveland, Ohio, after two years of unremitting effort, have raised $50,000, and have paid all debts on the twenty churches of that city, and $5,000 remains in hand to apply to two new mission chapels.

—The addition of twenty-seven to the Ottawa Congregational church, Illinois, Rev. W. F. Day, pastor, at the last communion, makes seventy-seven which have been added to its membership within two months, all but twelve of the number on confession.

—The quadrennial session of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South has been in session at St. Louis, Mo. The church reports the following statistics: 4,862 itinerant preachers; 6,269 local preachers; 1,161,666 members (white), an increase of 38,168; 520 colored members, a decrease of 125, and 3,833 Indian members, a decrease of 1,125. The total number of preachers and members is 1,177,150, showing a total net increase of 37,053. The value of church edifices is reported at nearly $17,000,000.

—The English Wesleyan Church reports 423,555 members and 28,142 probationers.

—The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church of Ireland will hold a jubilee on July 7, the fiftieth anniversary of the union, which has been a hearty and blessed one. Rev. John Hall, D. D., will be present as a delegate from our General Assembly North.

—The Salvation Army in Paris has been reinforced by a Salvation Navy. A church boat floats on the river Seine, near the Pont de la Concorde. The "floating temple," as the Parisians call it, has been named the "Herald of Mercy." In the hall amidships there is accommodation for 200 persons.

—The total income of the English Presbyterian Church, numbering 288 congregations, for 1889 amounted to $1,170,315, as compared with $1,051,875 in 1888, being an increase of $121,440. The membership numbers 65,055, and shows an increase of nearly 1,000. The value of the church property is estimated at more than a million and a half sterling, and on it there remains now only $425,000 of debt. The Sunday-schools number 78,490, and the teachers 7,340, being in the proportion of one to nine of the membership. The Christian workers number 13,770, or nearly a fourth of the whole membership.

—The next International Sunday-school Convention will be held in America in 1893, and the executive committee recommend that it be held in Chicago, as the World's Fair will be opened in that year in that city. It is proposed that the Sunday schools of America erect a building in connection with the other World's Fair buildings at Chicago, in which there may be such an exhibit as will illustrate the Sunday-school institute, lasting an hour or more each day, and extending through sixty or ninety days. The proposed cost of the building is $100,000.

—According to the latest statistical exhibits of the missions in Japan, there are now 274 churches in the empire, of which number 153 are self-supporting. The total membership is 31,481, the accessions for the year being 5,542. The contributions reached $40,662. The whole number of missionaries in the field, including women, is 527.

—There are 400,000 converts to Christianity in Africa.

—Rev. Alfred Robert Tucker, as Bishop of Eastern Equatorial Africa, and the Rev. Dr. Noel Hodges, for the diocese of Travancore and Cochin, were consecrated in England on St. Mark's Day, April 25. Mr. Tucker started for his diocese the same evening, and expected to reach Mombasa on the 17th of May. He will stay but a short time on the coast before starting for Uganda where he is anxious to be as soon as possible.

—A pamphlet has been issued on "The Beginnings of the Moravian Mission in Alaska," by J. Taylor Hamilton. The description of the hardships and sufferings of the first missionaries in that field is very vivid and touching. The work begun under such difficulties is already exerting a wonderful influence among those most degraded savages and the Indians and Esquimaux in Western Alaska. The Moravians number 98,227, and yet they have sent out during the century, 25,000 missionaries and $300,000 yearly. They have nine mission ships.

—The friends of the American Board are making strenuous efforts to increase the gifts to that excellent missionary society. President Storrs, Secretary Clark, Dr. Taylor and others urge the importance not only of increasing the sum given last year, but also of raising it to a million dollars. The Independent and the Advance heartily favor this plan.

THE REFORMED PRESBYTERIAN SYNOD.

REPORT OF SPECIAL COMMITTEE ON SECRET SOCIETIES.

Whereas secret oath-bound societies are almost universally at variance with the essential principles of the Christian religion, in that they are at best merely theistical, often deistical and some of them atheistical;

And whereas they use forms and ceremonies that are unmistakably heathenish and even give encouragement and hope of celestial felicity without faith in Christ;

And whereas their obligations and operations are incompatible with those we owe to the family, to the church and to the state; therefore,

Resolved, 1. That the followers of Christ should have no fellowship with them, but should rather faithfully reprove them; and this Synod reiterates its warning against union with them by members of the church.

2. That all our ministers and members be directed and urged to use their best effort to arrest this overflowing flood of evil.

3. That we will heartily co-operate with the Christian brethren and churches who are laboring through the National Christian Association against secret orders.

4. That we commend the Christian Cynosure to our members and ministers as the exponent of anti-secret reform, as well as a fearless and faithful advocate of all Christian reforms.

5. That presbyteries be directed to appoint strong committees to organize and carry on anti-secrecy work.

6. That the standing committee of this Synod be empowered to represent this Synod in National Conventions, or to appoint delegates to do so.

7. That our ministers be directed to preach at least once a year on this subject, and to warn our members against fellowship with these systems.

8. That we warn our members of the danger of compromising our testimony by connection with the minor orders—and especially college fraternities.

J. S. T. MILLIGAN, }
T. P. ROBB, } Committee.
DAVID METHENY, }

THURLOW WEED: "I now look back through an interval of fifty-six years with a conscious sense of having been governed through the Anti-masonic excitement by a sincere desire, first to vindicate the violated laws of my country, and next to arrest the great power and dangerous influences of secret societies."

LODGE NOTES.

The corner stone of the new capitol of Colorado was laid at Denver, Friday, by the Masonic fraternity.

Grand Chief Conductor Howard and Grand Conductor Clark of the Order of Railway Conductors, and T. T. Slattery, grand organizer of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, held a secret session in Newton, Kas., with the grievance committee of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railroad. There is considerable dissatisfaction at present among the trainmen of the road.

The Culinary Alliance is a secret labor union among colored waiters. In their late strike in this city they suffered at the Palmer house their first repulse. The waiters' opportunity came Thursday night, and they took advantage of it. Just after 6 o'clock yesterday afternoon, within half an hour of the time he expected to open the doors of the dining-room for a banquet to the Columbian Fair Commission, Mr. Palmer was waited on by a committee from the Culinary Alliance. The alternative was presented of signing the union scale or having no waiters for his banquet. Mr. Palmer saw the point and signed.

The camps of the Modern Woodmen in Western Illinois have formulated a call for a convention of members of the order to be held in Rock Island July 24 to take action with reference to a double assessment issued by Head Consul Root for the month of June. It is the first instance where the members have had a double-header for a single month and coming on the heels of a report that the head officers are about to establish a sovereign camp at Omaha and dissolve the old order, a meeting has been called to investigate it. The order is composed of 40,000 members in Illinois, and has a large representation in Iowa and Missouri and all the central States.

Charles Roome, one of the leading Freemasons of America, died last week. He was 88 years old. His connection with Freemasonry dates back to 1866. He was a Past Master of Kane Lodge No. 450, Past Grand Master of the Grand Lodge, State of New York, member and Past High Priest of the Jerusalem Chapter No. 8, member and Past Commander of the Cœur de Leon Commandery, Knights Templar; Past Grand Commander of the Knights Templar: State of New York; Past Grand Master of the Grand Encampment, Knights Templar of the United States and honorary member thirty-third degree of the Scottish Rite, Northern and Southern Masonic jurisdiction.

The Clan-na-Gael Guards, says the Inter-Ocean, will give a picnic Sunday at Englewood Grove. "The guards have recently reorganized their ranks thoroughly. Larry Buckley and his Triangle followers have been expelled and only loyal American citizens who are opposed to secret assassination and have no affiliation with the infamous Camp 20 crowd, are eligible to membership. Since this weeding out of the Triangles the Clan-na-Gael Guards have recovered much of their old time prestige among Irish-Americans. Frank M. Sullivan has been elected Captain in the place of odious Larry, and all seems to be well with the guards. They expect and deserve the presence of all their friends at their picnic, and the indications are that their expectations will be nearly if not quite realized. Time was when the guards were under a cloud of murder and Trianglism." What change has taken place in the principles of this secret order that would prevent another Cronin murder? The Inter-Ocean will not easily answer this.

There is a demand coming up from southern Indiana that Gov. Hovey take some heroic steps toward breaking up the organizations of White Caps which are again becoming bold in their doings in several counties. Within the last year several arrests of persons who were known to be active members of these secret organizations have been made, but in each case the county courts failed of conviction. The last legislature, with a view of wiping out this secret order, passed a law which declared that "If three or more persons shall unite or combine together for the purpose of doing any unlawful act in the night time or for the purpose of doing any unlawful act, while wearing whitecap masks or being otherwise disguised, shall be deemed guilty of a riotous conspiracy, and upon conviction shall be confined in the State prison for not more than ten years, and fined in any sum not exceeding $2,000," but the enactment of such a law seems to have only strengthened the organizations and added to their boldness. Since June 1, Gov. Hovey has received several letters from prominent citizens of Crawford, Harrison, Orange and Perry counties, asking him if he could not do something to stop the outrages. The governor, in each instance, has expressed a willingness to do what he can. He believes, however, that the bands of regulators will never be broken up until public sentiment in the counties afflicted changes and juries can be obtained that will convict.

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from June 30 to July 5 inclusive:

J P Hammond, H Cole, Mrs R Schnellbacher, W H Morrow, J A VanEpps, S H Moore, Mrs M Spaulding, Mrs S A Proctor, E Wylie, O A Thoreson, J Howe, T Ruth.

Copies of the following valuable books have been left in this office for sale at second hand and favorable rates:

Mackey's Masonic Jurisprudence.
Chase's Digest of Masonic Law.
Mackey's Lexicon of Freemasonry.
Bernard's Light on Masonry.
Horton's Image of the Beast.
Prices will be given to proposing purchasers.

FLOWER SEEDS.

To any one sending 15 cents in stamps or silver, I will send five different kinds of Flower Seeds of choice varieties. Send stamped and addressed envelope.

VICTORIA A. BUCK.

East Randolph, N. Y.

CONSUMPTION SURELY CURED.

TO THE EDITOR:—Please inform your readers that I have a positive remedy for above named disease. By its timely use thousands of hopeless cases have been permanently cured. I shall be glad to send two bottles of my remedy FREE to any of your readers who have consumption, if they will send me their Express and P. O. address. Respectfully, T. A. SLOUM, M. D., 181 Pearl St., New York.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—No. 2.....	88 1/4 @	89
No. 3.....	78 @	82
Winter No. 2.....		88 1/4
Corn—No. 2.....	34 1/4 @	35
Oats—No. 2.....	29 @	32
Rye—No. 2.....		47 1/4
Bran per ton.....		9 00
Hay—Timothy.....	6 50 @	9 00
Butter, medium to best.....	10 @	15 1/2
Cheese.....	06 @	10 1/4
Beans.....	1 25 @	1 75
Eggs.....		10 1/4
Seeds—Timothy.....	1 25 @	1 35
Flax.....	1 22 @	1 40
Broom corn.....	02 1/4 @	06 1/4
Potatoes, per bu.....	20 @	45
Hides—Green to dry flint.....	03 @	07
Lumber—Common.....	10 00 @	13 00
Wool.....	15 @	34
Cattle—Choice to extra.....	4 45 @	5 00
Common to good.....	1 60 @	4 40
Hogs.....	3 90 @	4 05
Sheep.....	3 50 @	4 50

NEW YORK.

Wheat.....	96 @	1 01 1/4
Corn.....	41 @	43 1/4
Oats.....	32 @	41
Eggs.....		14 1/4
Butter.....	6 @	17 1/4
Wool.....	14 @	39

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle.....	1 66 @	4 50
Hogs.....	3 40 @	3 55
Sheep.....	2 00 @	5 50

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS ILLUSTRATED.

By a Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge room, signs, countersigns, grips etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00. Address the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

The importance of purifying the blood cannot be overestimated, for without pure blood you cannot enjoy good health.

At this season nearly every one needs a good medicine to purify, vitalize, and enrich the blood, and Hood's Sarsaparilla is worthy your confidence. It is peculiar in that it strengthens and builds up the system, creates an appetite, and tones the digestion, while it eradicates disease. Give it a trial.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is sold by all druggists. Prepared by C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

HELPS

TO

BIBLE STUDY

With Practical Notes on the Books of Scripture.

Designed for Ministers, Local Preachers, S. Teachers, and all Christian Workers.

Chapter I.—Different Methods of Bible Study.
Chapter II.—Rules of Interpretation.
Chapter III.—Interpretations of Bible Types and Symbols.
Chapter IV.—Analysis of the books of the Bible.
Chapter V.—Miscellaneous Helps.

Cloth, 184 pages, price postpaid, 50 cents.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

THE BROKEN SEAL;

Or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene.

One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents per dozen, $3.50.

This deeply interesting narrative shows what Masonry has done and is capable of doing in the Courts, and how bad men control the good men in the lodge and protect their own members when guilty of great crimes. For sale at 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

FINNEY ON MASONRY

The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75c; per dozen $7.50. Paper covers 50c; per dozen $5.00.

No Christian's library is complete without it. Send for a copy in cloth and get a catalogue of books and tracts sold by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

KNIGHT TEMPLARISM ILLUSTRATED.

A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $5.00 per dozen. Paper covers, 50c; $4.00 per dozen. Published in new quantities at

"THE WHOLE IS BETTER THAN A PART," AND YOU HAVE IT HERE IN A "NUT-SHELL."

SECRET SOCIETIES ILLUSTRATED.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc. of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adaptive Masonry, Revised Odd Fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts and paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen. For sale by the National Christian Association, at Headquarters for Anti-Secret Societies, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

MASONIC OUTRAGES.

BY REV. E. H. HINMAN.

The character of this valuable pamphlet is seen from its chapter headings: I.—Masonic Attempts on the Lives of Seceders. II.—Masonic Blander. III.—Masonic Assault on Free Speech. IV.—Freemasonry Among the Colored People. V.—Masonic Interference with the Punishment of Criminals. VI.—The Fruits of the Masonic institution as seen in the Conspiracies and Outrages of Other Secret Orders. VII.—The Restoration of the Secret Lodge System to the Foregoing and Similar Outrages.

PRICE, POSTPAID, 20 CENTS.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

A WOMAN'S VICTORY; OR THE QUERY OF THE LODGEVILLE CHURCH.

BY JENNIE L. HARDIN.

This simple and touching story is worth reading by every Anti-mason—and especially BY HIS WIFE. Get it and take it home to cheer the heart of your companion who may desire to do something for Christ against great evils, but is discouraged from making any public effort. PRICE, FIFTEEN CENTS. Ten for a dollar

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago

The Christian's Secret OF A Happy Life. 28th THOUSAND.

Baptist Commendation.

"We are delighted with this book. It reaches to the very core of Christian experience, and is eminently experimental in its teachings. It meets the doubts and difficulties of conscientious seekers after the bread and water of life, but whose efforts result only in alternate failure and victory. The author, without claiming to be a theologian, sends out the results of a happy and rich experience to help others into a happy Christian life."—Baptist Weekly.

Presbyterian Endorsement.

"The book is so truly and reverentially devout in its spirit that it disarms criticism. It contains as much that is sound and practical, so much that, if heeded, will make our lives better, happier and more useful, that the intelligent reader who really wishes to lead a life 'hid with Christ in God' can scarcely fail to derive profit from its perusal."—Interior.

Methodist Word of Praise.

"We have not for years read a book with more light and profit. It is not a theological book. No effort is made to change the theological views of a one. The author has a rich experience, and tells it in a plain and delightful manner."—Christian Advocate.

United Brethren's Approval.

"We have seldom met with a more interesting volume, abounding throughout with apt illustrations we have failed to find a dry line with title-page rule."—Religious Telescope.

Congregational Comment.

"It contains much clear pungent reasoning and is a most interesting incident. It is a practical and experimental lesson taught out of God's word, and is worthy of universal circulation."—Church Union.

This enlarged edition is a beautiful large 12mo volume of 240 pages.

Price, in cloth, richly stamped, 75 cts

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 West Madison Street, Chicago, I.

FREEMASONRY AT A GLANCE BY E. RONAYNE,

Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 630, Chicago.

Illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the Lodge. Gives a brief explanation of each. The work should be in every lodge and leaves all over the country. It is so cheap that it can be used as a tract, and money thus expended will bring a bountiful harvest. 32 pages. Price, postpaid, 5 cents. Per 100, $3.00. Address,

National Christian Association,

221 West Madison St., Chicago, I.

REVISED ODD-FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED.

The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. The ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover, 50 cents; per dozen $4.00. All orders promptly filled by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

HOME AND HEALTH.

HOUSEHOLD BREVITIES.

Boil clothespins in clean water once a month, and they will be much more durable.

Open canned fruit an hour or two before it is needed for use. It is far richer when the oxygen is thus restored to it.

Beat an egg thoroughly in a bowl and add one teacup of cold water to it. Use enough of this to thoroughly moisten coffee when making it. Keep in a cold place, and waste no more eggs by drying.

Save the small paper bags carefully which groceries come in; they are useful in many ways. Slip the hand in one when you black the stove, and you will not soil it. When flies abound, slip them over the clean lamp chimneys during the day. After fruit is canned draw them over the can, and label them plainly; the action of the light causes more fruit to spoil than any other one thing.

Beat an egg thoroughly in a bowl and add one teacup of cold water to it. Use enough of this to thoroughly moisten coffee when making it. Keep in a cold place, and waste no more eggs by drying.

Granulated sugar is the purest brand; consequently the cheapest. Do not use quite as much as of other kinds—one half inch less for a cupful. Cake batter made with granulated sugar requires longer beating than usual, as the sugar is longer in dissolving.

To beat the white of eggs stiff, with ease, they should be cold, with a very small pinch of salt added.

Egg-shells are somewhat porous, and like butter and cheese absorb unpleasant odors. Therefore eggs should be kept in a sweet, clean, cool place.

All floor and whisk brooms should be thoroughly wet in scalding hot brine before using them. It will effectually prevent the straws from breaking.

Add two tablespoonfuls of kerosene to the pail of water with which you wash grained or other varnished furniture.

Cut a piece from the top of old kid shoes and insert it inside the ironing-holder you are going to make.

Make boiled starch with a weak soap suds made of white soap instead of with clear water, and you will have no difficulty with its sticking.

Do not wring woolen underwear through a wringer. Use the hands and shake it thoroughly before drying. When perfectly dry, fold it smoothly, but do not iron. See if the odor is not more agreeable than when a hot sad-iron has passed over them.

Never slice apples for making pies; quarter and core, and if an apple is large cut each quarter in two pieces.

Sift a tablespoonful of pulverized sugar over the top of two-crust pies before baking, and see how delicious it makes them.

Never put tea leaves on a light-colored carpet; they will surely leave a stain.

After thoroughly sweeping a dingy carpet, wipe it with a damp cloth partially wrung out of a mixture of water and ox-gall in the proportion of two tablespoonfuls of the latter to a gallon of lukewarm water.

In packing bottles or canned fruit for moving, slip a rubber band over the body of them.

A small teaspoonful of powdered borax added to a bowl of cold starch will give more stiffness to linen than any of the numerous things I have tried.

When you are hurried and a postage stamp will not stick, moisten it and rub it on the flap of an envelope, and then quickly put it in its place.

Mix stove-blackening with spirits of turpentine. It will take off the rust, polish easier, and stay glossy longer than when water is used.

Add a tablespoonful of borax to a pan of hot soap-suds; put your table silver in it, and let it stand two hours. Rinse it with clear water, and polish with a soft cloth or chamois.

Warm dishes for the table by immersing them in hot water, not by standing them on a hot stove.

Coffee boiled longer than one minute is coffee spoiled.

March, April, May

are the Months
when the Blood should be renovated with

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

and the System fortified for the change of Seasons.

Prepared by
Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co.,
Lowell, Mass.

Wonders

Are wrought by the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor in restoring gray hair to its original color, promoting a new growth, preventing the hair from falling, keeping it soft, silky, and abundant, and the scalp cool, healthy, and free from dandruff or humors. The universal testimony is that this preparation has no equal as a dressing, and is, therefore, indispensable to every well-furnished toilet.

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for some time and it has worked wonders for me. I was troubled with dandruff and was rapidly becoming bald; but since using the Vigor my head is perfectly clear of dandruff, the hair has ceased coming out, and I now have a good growth, of the same color as when I was a young woman. I can heartily recommend any one suffering from dandruff or loss of hair to use Ayer's Hair Vigor as a dressing."—Mrs. Lydia O. Moody, East Pittston, Me.

"Some time ago my wife's hair began to come out quite freely.

Ayer's Hair Vigor

not only prevented my wife from becoming bald, but it also caused an entirely new growth of hair. I am ready to certify to this statement before a justice of the peace."—H. Hulsebus, Lewisburgh, Iowa.

"Some years ago, after a severe attack of brain fever, my hair all came out. I used such preparations for restoring it as my physicians ordered, but failed to produce a growth of hair. I then tried, successively, several articles recommended by druggists, and all alike fell short of accomplishing the desired result. The last remedy I applied was Ayer's Hair Vigor, which brought a growth of hair in a few weeks. I think I used eight bottles in two years; more than was necessary as a restorative, but I liked it as a dressing, and have continued to use it for that purpose. I believe Ayer's Hair Vigor possesses virtues far above those of any similar preparation now on the market."—Vincent Jones, Richmond, Ind.

Ayer's Hair Vigor

PREPARED BY

DR. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass.

Sold by Druggists and Perfumers.

See back numbers of this publication for notices from all parts.

Portrait of Kline. From a Photograph.

never before known. Great profits await every worker. Agents are making fortunes. Ladies make as much as men. You, reader, can do as well as any one. Full information and terms free, together with particulars and terms for our Family Bibles, Books and Periodicals. Better write us at once and see for yourself. After you know all, should you conclude to go no further, why no harm is done. Address, ALLEN & CO., AUGUSTA, MAINE.

PATENTS

Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees.

Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington.

Send model, drawing or photo., with description. We advise, if patentable or not, free of charge. Our fee not due till patent is secured.

A Pamphlet, "How to Obtain Patents," with names of actual clients in your State, county, or town, sent free. Address,

C. A. SNOW & CO.

Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

SEE THIS!

The latest, most complete edition.

Over 235 choice

Reform Songs for the Times.

Only 30c a copy, or 20c by the 100.

—AND—

"THE TOBACCO MANIA."

$1 per 100.

For sale here and by the author,
GEO. W. CLARK,
76 W. Montcalm St., Detroit, Mich.

SCOTCH RITE MASONRY ILLUSTRATED.

The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all Masonic rites, and are fully and accurately given in

"FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED,"

as advertised, but the signs, grips, passwords, etc., of these three degrees are given at the close of Vol 2 of

"Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated"

Vol. 1 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3d to 18th inclusive. Vol. 2 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 19th to 33d inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each; in cloth, $1 each. Each volume per dozen, paper covers, $4; per dozen, cloth bound, $9.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St, Chicago,

REMARKABLE OFFER!

Nearly everyone is familiar with the name, but it has been estimated that only one in every two hundred and eighty persons in the United States is fortunate enough to have access to the valuable information contained within the covers of the grandest work ever written by mortal man,

Webster's

UNABRIDGED DICTIONARY.

That this is an unfortunate state of affairs will be admitted by all, and it is due to the fact that no one save the rich could afford them.

The Dictionary is a necessity in every home, school and business house. It fills a vacancy and furnishes knowledge which no one hundred volumes of the choicest books could supply, and all young or old, educated or ignorant, rich or poor should have it within reach and refer to its contents every day in the year.

The Loomis reprint contains all the matter as compiled and arranged by our esteemed and honored author and statesman

NOAH WEBSTER.

About forty years of his life was devoted to this great work, and when we consider the fact that this book contains about 100,000 words, we will appreciate that these years must have been well spent.

Some idea of the magnitude of this book may be gained from the fact that it contains over 440 cubic inches of paper and has about 300,000 square inches of printed surface.

In addition to the 100,000 words it contains a portrait of the author, together with his biography and a valuable table of 12,000 synonymous words.

By special arrangement with the publishers, we are permitted to furnish this valuable volume: 1st. To any subscriber to our paper; 2nd. To any renewal subscription; and 3rd. To any person who has paid a full year's subscription within the past six months, on receipt of $1.50 for the paper one year, and two dollars and seventy-five cents to cover express charges, packing, etc., of the Dictionary.

Address

CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill

The Washington Souvenir,

Size 18x24 inches, and containing the portraits of

Washington and his Com-Patriots,

WITH THEIR TESTIMONY ON

FREEMASONRY.

—O—

It contains the portraits of

Washington.
John Adams, 2nd President of the United States.

James Madison, 4th President of the United States.

Joseph Ritner, Governor of Pennsylvania.
Richard Rush, Secretary of State and of the Treasury.

Alexander Hamilton, the friend of Washington.

Samuel Adams, the Father of the Revolution.

John Hancock, President of the Continental Congress.

Samuel Dexter, Secretary of War and of the Treasury.

William Wirt, Attorney-General.

John Marshall, Chief Justice of U. S. Supreme Court.

John Quincy Adams, 6th President of the United States.

Benjamin Rush, the Father of Temperance Reform in America.

Lebbeus Armstrong, Founder of the first Temperance Society.

Framed, it is an ornament to please the eye, and a testimony to gladden the heart. Sent safely packed in a mailing tube, post-paid, for ten cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

"THE WHOLE IS BETTER THAN A PART,"
AND YOU HAVE IT HERE IN A
"NUT-SHELL."

SECRET SOCIETIES ILLUSTRATED.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc. of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen. For sale by the National Christian Association, at Headquarters for Anti-Secret Society Literature, 221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

THERE ARE MANY USES FOR SAPOLIO.

To clean tombstones. To renew oil-cloth. To renovate paint. To brighten metals.
To polish knives. To scrub floors. To wash out sinks. To scour bath-tubs.
To clean dishes. To whiten marble. To remove rust. To scour kettles.

EVERYBODY USES IT.

Dentists to clean false teeth. Surgeons to polish their instruments. Confectioners to scour their pans. Mechanics to brighten their tools. Cooks to clean the kitchen sink. Painters to clean off surfaces. Engineers to clean parts of machines. Ministers to renovate old chapels. Sextons to clean the tombstones. Hostlers on brasses and white horses. Artists to clean their palettes. Wheelmen to clean bicycles. Housemaids to scrub marble floors. Chemists to remove some stains. Carvers to sharpen their knives. Shrewd ones to scour old straw hats. Soldiers to brighten their arms. Renovators to clean carpets.

EVERY ONE FINDS A NEW USE.

FARM NOTES.

MILKERS' NOTES.

Never drive milch cows or fattening stock faster than a walk.

Do not allow or force milch cows to drink ice cold water.

You have no need of a dog in bringing the cattle home from the pastures.

If you are musically inclined you may hum in a low tone. The cow will like it and commence ruminating.

To sell milk pays better than to make it into butter or cheese and sell it as solids.

If you desire your cows to do their best at the pail, give them a change of food as often as possible.

After you have brushed the udder clean milk the cow as fast as you can and milk her clean to the last drop.

Your cows will certainly fall off in their milk unless housed in a warm stable during inclement or very cold weather.—St. Paul Globe.

LIGHTNING RODS.

Professor Henry in the Western Farmer says: "I should say that a common two strand, galvanized barb-wire, well put up, is superior to many of the rods as put up by 'agents' at great cost. If one intends to use barb-wire it would be better to twist half a dozen strands into one than use a single wire. Having done this, bury the lower end of the wire in moist earth, digging if possible down to water; or, all the better, running the wire into a well or cistern below the water. Without a good ground connection the wire may be more than useless. Having the wire properly 'planted,' attach it firmly to the building every two or three feet by common staples, just as you would to the posts when using the wire for fencing. The common practice of using glass thimbles for insulators to keep the rods away from the building is altogether wrong; agents no doubt use this plan to add to the expense and mystify people. Carry the wire to the highest points of the building, and let it rise several feet vertically, supported by a staff raised to the roof. The wire may be supposed to insure safety for a distance in every direction equal to its height above the building. Thus, if it rise eight feet above the peak of the house it guards a circle sixteen feet in diameter."

WEATHER WISDOM.—The man who is out of doors at sunrise, can form a pretty accurate opinion of what the day may be. If just before sunrise the sky—especially in the west—is suffused with red, rain generally follows in the course of the day. In the winter, often snow. If, however, it be frosty weather, the downfall is somewhat delayed. On the other hand, if the sky be a dull gray, and the sun rises clear, gradually dispersing the vapors, it will be fine. If it retires behind the clouds, and there are reddish streaks about it, it will rain. Should the sun, later in the day, shine through a gray, watery haze, it will probably be a rainy night. The sunset is very unreliable. Often a beautiful sunset will be followed by a bad day. After a rainy day, suddenly at sunset, in the far west, will appear a magnificent streak of crimson (not copper-color)—this generally foretells a fine day. A tinted halo round the sun at setting occurs in long-continued rainy weather. A halo round the moon, especially if some distance from it, is a sure indication of downfall at hand.

The importance of keeping the liver and kidneys in good condition cannot be overestimated. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a great remedy for regulating and invigorating these organs.

BIRNEY.

The sketch of JAMES G. BIRNEY candidate of the Liberty Party for President, in pamphlet for 25 cents. A limited number of copies of this handsome pamphlet for sale at the N. C. A. office

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

STANDARD WORKS

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES.

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Association,

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. A liberal discount to dealers.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 75 cents. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive. Vol. II. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished. 25 cents each.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe. 20 cents each.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. In cloth, $1.50 each. Paper, 75 cents each.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical. Explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pages, 75 cents.

Mah-Hab-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance. Bound in one volume. In cloth, 589 pages, $1.00.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. 25 cents each.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper, 35 cents.

Hon. Thurlow Weed on the Morgan Abduction. This is the legally attested statement of this eminent Christian journalist and statesman concerning the unlawful seizure and confinement of Capt. Morgan in Canandaigua jail, his removal to Fort Niagara and subsequent drowning in Lake Ontario. 5 cents each.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a League with the Devil. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason. 15 cents each.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church. Paper covers, price, 20 cents each.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each.

Anti-masonic Sermons and Addresses. Composed of "Masonry a Work of Darkness;" the Sermons of Messrs. Cross, William M'Nary, Dow and Sarver, the two addresses of President Blanchard, and the addresses of President H. H. George, Prof. J. G. Carson and Rev. M. S. Drury; "Thirteen Reasons Why a Christian cannot be a Freemason," "Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion," and "Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate?" 287 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate. By Rev. L. A. Post. 5 cents each.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper cover, 35 cents.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin trials. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each.

Stearns's Inquiry into the Nature and Tendency of Freemasonry. 338 pages. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor United Presbyterian church. 5 cents each.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. 10 cents each.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void; or Freemasonry Self-Convicted. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. 207 pages. Postpaid, 40 cents each.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian), a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. 15 cents each.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. H. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each.

Masonic Salvation, as taught by its standard authors. This pamphlet is a compilation from standard Masonic works, in proof of the following proposition: Freemasonry claims to be a religion that saves men from all sin, and purifies them for heaven. 111 pages, price, postpaid, 20 cents.

Freemasonry at a Glance illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the first three degrees. Paper cover, 32 pages. Single copy, six cents.

Masonic Outrages. Compiled by Rev. H. H. Hixman. Showing Masonic assault on lives of secedors, on reputation, and on free speech; its interference with justice in courts, etc. Postpaid, 20 cents.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret Societies. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a republication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10cts each.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims by Rev. David McDill, Pres. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. In cloth, 35cts each; paper covers, 15cts each.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinions of many prominent college presidents and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25cts each.

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of his sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5cts each.

Sermon on Secretism. By Rev. R. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational church, Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear array of the objections to all secret societies, and to Masonry especially, that are apparent to all. 5cts each.

Pres. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to disavow secret societies. 10cts each.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and Church. By Rev. M. S. Drury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church, is clearly shown. 10cts each.

Holden with Cords. Or the Power of the Secret Empire. By E. E. Flagg, author of "A Sunny Life," etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story, accurately true to life because mainly a narration of historical facts. In cloth, $1.00; in paper, 50 cents.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and law of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved. 15cts each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. J. Day, Brownlee. In reply to a Masonic Oration by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio. 5 cents each.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on Masonry. Paper covers, 25 cents each.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion. 5 cents each.

ON ODD-FELLOWSHIP.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by ex-President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; paper cover, 50cts.

Patriarchs Militant Illustrated. The complete ritual of the Patriarchs Militant degree. This is an accurate copy of the Charge Book furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge of the Independent Order of Odd-fellows, with the eighteen military diagrams and the unwritten (secret) work added. Paper cover, 25cts each.

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own utterances; its doctrine and practice examined in the light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth 50cts; paper covers, 25cts.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and other secret societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms, and the duty to disavow Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers, is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10cts each.

Odd-fellowship: Its History and its Work. By President J. Blanchard. A neat pamphlet with cover. Postpaid, 5 cts.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Anti-mason's Scrap Book, consisting of 53 "Cynosure" tracts. In this book are the views of more than a score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of secret societies. Postpaid, 25 cts.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret tradesunion of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords, etc. 15cts each.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc., and the ritual of the Machinists' and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—U. S. Government Report, Aug. 17, 1889.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

The dissatisfaction felt by some of the citizens of St. Louis with the result of the recent census has led to a request for an entire recount. Until the rough count has been made by the census office no action will be taken in regard to this request. The subject has been brought to the attention of Secretary Noble.

The pension office issued during the fiscal year just closed 151,658 pension certificates. The number issued during the preceding year was 145,292. Of the number issued during the year just closed 66,637 were original pensions, which is an increase of nearly 15,000 as compared with the number issued during the preceding year.

CHICAGO.

The Chicago Stock Yards will not pass into English hands, but will be controlled by Americans.

The local board of Directors and the U. S. Commission also have their calculations for the site of the Fair much hindered by a corrupt city council who have for a second time refused to approve the location selected, which includes the Lake Front and Jackson parks.

COUNTRY.

The recently-discovered comet may be seen during the whole night by the use of a telescope. The comet forms a triangle with the stars Zeta and Eta in the Big Dipper. July 16th it will be midway between these stars.

A conference of Americans and Russians has been held looking to the construction of a railroad between Asia and Alaska. The Russian government is said to look upon the project with favor.

The new bridge authorized by Congress to be built across the Hudson River between New York and Jersey City will be 7,000 feet long and have one central span 2,850 feet in length.

A falling sky-rocket stick struck John McMullen, of Cincinnati, on the head Thursday night penetrating the brain.

Citizens of Colorado Springs carried to the summit of Pike's Peak a large quantity of kerosene and a barrel of red fire and at 8:30 p. m., July 4, a great blaze was started, illuminating the country for miles. It resembled a volcano.

Gov. Nicholls of Louisiana vetoed the Lottery job Monday. But over two-thirds of the legislature will pass it in spite of him.

Fargo, N. Dakota, was struck by a tornado Monday morning. Many buildings were unroofed and damaged and nine persons were killed.

A team carrying Henry Henderson and family, of Huron, Mich., took fright and a daughter and son were instantly killed, Mr. Henderson injured, and Mrs. Henderson so badly that she will die.

Five acres of fire was the awful sight witnessed at the Standard Oil Refinery in Louisville, Kentucky, on the morning of June 30. The immense structure was blazing at every point and the heat was so intense that even two hundred yards away persons were overcome. Three persons were fatally burned and several others seriously. A tank was opened which contained a large quantity of gas, and the gas escaped, and spread itself around, finally coming into contact with a fire. There was a flash as the inflammable vapor ignited, and immediately after there was a tremendous explosion. The tank was blown to pieces, and the hundreds of gallons of burning oil were scattered all over the great works.

A keg containing fifty pounds of powder exploded in August Smith's grocery store at Industry, near Scott Haven, Pa., Saturday evening, completely wrecking the building and injuring seven children. The explosion was caused by sparks from a Jackson cracker, which exploded prematurely in the hands of August Smith, aged 14 years. The store was a resort for children, and at the time of the accident a large number were present firing crackers. The powder exploded with terrific force, lifting the building, which was a two-story structure, from its foundations, and wrecking it completely. The ruins took fire, but were extinguished before the flames had gained much head. Several kegs of powder were stored in the cellar, and a more horrible calamity was averted by the prompt and heroic work of the neighbors in extinguishing the fire. Five of the seven little victims of the powder explosion have died. The father of one of them, crazed with grief, tried to kill Smith, the owner of the building where the powder was stored.

FOREIGN.

The London Herald has learned from M. Ribot, the French Foreign Minister, that England gives to France an island in the Caribbean Sea and recognizes the French protectorate over Madagascar.

The Vatican has approved the proposal of the New Orleans priests to create a new Romish bishopric to be known as the diocese of Dallas, Texas.

The Armenian patriarch has sent to the Sultan a note giving details of the grievance of the Armenian Christians. He says that numerous Armenians have been arrested on suspicion of wrong doing, that their churches have been profaned and other outrages committed against them. In conclusion he declares that he will resign the patriarchate unless the grievances complained of are remedied and justice is done.

A railroad is to be built from Archangel to Vologda to unite the extreme habitable north of the Russian empire with the interior. The contractors are merchants of Vologda, who carry on a large business with the natives of Archangel.

According to a recent ukase of the Czar no one who is not of the Christian faith will be allowed to serve on a jury unless by the special approval of the Minister of the Interior and the Minister of Justice.

The German Students' Club at Prague subscribed 1,000 marks to the Bismarck memorial fund. The local police ordered the club dissolved unless the members canceled their subscriptions.

There are growing signs of an impending storm in the Balkans. The situation is so grave that the holiday vacations of the leading officials of the foreign office at Berlin have been stopped. Germany's policy in the Balkans has undergone a momentous change. Instead of pursuing the semi-neutral policy of Prince Bismarck, the Emperor has directed Herr Radowitz to take the initiative in advising the Porte how to meet the contending claims of Bulgaria and Russia. A general explosion in the Balkans may occur before the powers have time to consider Emperor William's proposals.

Lord Salisbury's announcement in the House of Lords that the agreement with Germany concerning the partition of Africa and the concomitant bargain has not been received with very good feeling, and the bill affirming the cession of Heligoland, which is to be read in the House of Lords for the second time Thursday, will be vigorously opposed when it comes to the committees. A memorial severely criticising the defects of the bill has been largely signed by both sides, the government supporters as well as the opposition, and will be sent to Lord Salisbury as a protest against his action. The government of the Cape has wired to Lord Salisbury protesting against the German acquisitions in Damaraland and Makuloland. The opposition to the Heligoland part of the settlement with Germany is not directed so much against the cession of the island, as it is against the terms of agreement by which Heligoland passes over to German ownership.

Its superior excellence proven in millions of homes for more than a quarter of a century. It is used by the United States Government. Endorsed by the heads of the Great Universities as the Strongest, Purest and most Healthful. Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder does not contain Ammonia, Lime, or Alum. Sold only in Cans. PRICE BAKING POWDER CO. NEW YORK. CHICAGO. ST. LOUIS.

Puget Sound catechism and its chief city SEATTLE, WASHINGTON. Send stamp to Eschelman, Llewellyn & Co., Seattle, Wash.

Will be found invaluable for Cholera Infantum and all Summer Complaints, children or adults. Its non-medicine but will be retained & sustain life when everything else fails. 4 sizes $35 cts. up.

THE FORSYTH COMBINATION RUG AND EMBROIDERY MACHINE is far superior to anything of the kind now in use. Beautiful new designs for Rug and embroidery patterns. Big inducements to agents. Catalogue and price list sent free. THE FORSYTH MFG. CO., 204 Dearborn st., Chicago.

WHEATON COLLEGE,

WHEATON, ILL.

FALL TERM BEGINS TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 16TH.

A College for Men and Women.

For Catalogue address with stamp, O. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

BABY CARRIAGES!

I make a specialty of manufacturing Baby Carriages to sell direct to private parties. You can therefore, do better with me than with a dealer. Carriages Delivered Free of Charge to all points in the United States. Send for Illustrated Catalogue. CHAS. RAISER, Mfr., 62-64 Clybourn Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Our High Grade List and Bargain Book sent to any address on receipt of a 2-c stamp. LORD & THOMAS, NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING 45 RANDOLPH STREET, CHICAGO.

To cure Biliousness, Sick Headache, Constipation, Malaria, Liver Complaints, take the safe and certain remedy, SMITH'S

BILE BEANS

Use the SMALL SIZE (40 little beans to the bottle). They are the most convenient; suit all ages. Price of either size, 25 cents per bottle.

KISSING at 7, 17, 70; Photo-gravure, panel size of this picture for 4 cents (coppers or stamps).

J. F. SMITH & CO., Makers of "Bile Beans," St. Louis, Mo.

FREE FOR 20 DAYS

this special offer. Send us a picture of yourself or any member of your family, living or dead, and we will make you a LIFE SIZE CRAYON PORTRAIT FREE OF CHARGE, provided you exhibit it to your friends as a sample of our work, and use your influence in securing us future orders. Place name and address on back of picture and it will be returned in perfect order. We make any change in picture you wish, not interfering with the likeness. Refer to any Bank in St. Louis. Address all mail to PACIFIC PORTRAIT HOUSE, Odd Fellows' Bldg., ST. LOUIS, MO.

I CURE FITS!

When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. H. G. ROOT, M. D., 183 Pearl St. New York.

THE CHRISTIAN CONFERENCE

—ON THE—

Secret Lodge System.

The Proceedings of the late Christian Conference, containing the addresses of Joseph Cook, Drs. Goodwin, Wallace, Mo Dill, Col. Clarke and others, is now ready in a handsome pamphlet of 130 pages. It is one of the very best documents ever issued on the lodge question. The price was advertised at 15 cents, but the actual cost of publication was 20 cents, and of mailing 5 cents, making total cost 25 cents.

It will, however, be sent postpaid for 15 cents.

Only those who are able and willing need send more.

THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, W. I. PHILLIPS, Pub'r and Treas., 221 West Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

FOR MINISTERS

THE

"STORIES OF THE GODS"

Is especially adapted. They will at once understand the references to the idolatrous systems of the nations. And the idolatrous worship of the Masonic lodge is thus more clearly seen and easily understood. Will you furnish each pastor in your place with one of these pamphlets?

PRICE, ONLY 10 CENTS.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

PATRIARCHS MILITANT ILLUSTRATED

THE COMPLETE RITUAL

With Eighteen Military Diagrams

As Adopted and Promulgated by the

SOVEREIGN GRAND LODGE

OF THE

INDEPENDENT ORDER OF ODD-FELLOWS

At Baltimore, Maryland, Sept. 24th, 1885.

Compiled and Arranged by John C. Underwood, Lieutenant General.

WITH THE

UNWRITTEN OR SECRET WORK ADDED.

ALSO AN

Historical Sketch and Introduction

By Pres't. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College.

25 cents each.

For Sale by the National Christian Association

221 West Madison St., Chicago

FIFTY YEARS and BEYOND;

OR,

Old Age and How to Enjoy It.

A most appropriate gift book for "The Old Folks at Home."

Compiled by REV. S. G. LATHROP.

Introduction by

REV. ARTHUR EDWARDS, D. D., (Editor N. W. Christian Advocate.)

The object of this volume is to give to that great army who are fast hastening toward the "great beyond" some practical hints and helps as to the best way to make the most of the remainder of that now is, and to give comfort and help life that is to come.

"It is a tribute to the Christianity that honors one gray head and refuses to consider the old man burden or an obstacle. The book will aid and comfort every reader."—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

"The selections are very precious. Springing from such numerous and pure fountains, they can but afford a refreshing and healthful draught for every aged traveller to the great beyond."—Witness.

Price, bound in rich cloth, 400 pages, $1

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago Ill

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XXII., No. 44.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JULY 17, 1890.

WHOLE No. 1,055.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrears paid.

Address all letters for publication to EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, CHICAGO. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Address all business letters to the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION as above. Make all drafts and money orders payable to the Treasurer, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address on Cynosure list always give the former address.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill., as Second Class Matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:	REFORM NEWS:
Notes and Comments.... 1	As Hot for the Lodge as
Editorial Correspondence 8	for the People..... 5
Death Loves a Shining	CORRESPONDENCE:
Mark..... 8	Prohibitionists Defend
Pillows for Lodge Arm-	ed; Reformers Needed
holes..... 8	in Arizona; Trials in
Odd-fellowship against	New Orleans; The
Christ..... 9	Death of an old Friend;
Temple-Building..... 9	An Explanation; Pith
Personal Notes..... 9	and Point..... 5,6
CONTRIBUTIONS:	WASHINGTON LETTER..... 4
Why does not Congress	LITERATURE..... 6
Hang the Lottery..... 1	LODGE NOTES..... 7
American and Bible Poli-	THE N. C. A..... 7
tics Compared..... 2	THE HOME..... 10
The Dying Soldier's Last	TEMPERANCE..... 11
Song (poetry)..... 2	BIBLE LESSON..... 12
The Federal Election Bill	RELIGIOUS NEWS..... 12
From Earth to Heaven.. 3	BUSINESS..... 13
SELECTED:	IN BRIEF..... 13
Sons of Veterans..... 3	HOME AND HEALTH..... 14
Jesuits on Masonry..... 4	FARM NOTES..... 15
NEW ENGLAND LETTER..... 4	NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 16

HOW TO DO IT.

Some of the reasons why the Cynosure should be circulated by tens of thousands have been given to our readers. No one who desires this proposal to be a grand success will fail to take note of some practical suggestions:

1. If this is the Lord's work, it must be done in his way. Prayer for a blessing on the paper and its circulation must therefore be first, midst and last.

2. Make a list of friends and acquaintances whom you would desire to read the Cynosure. Write down their names that they may be more certainly remembered when you see them.

3. Have enough sample papers to assist you in canvassing. They will be sent free from this office to every local agent or occasional canvasser. Copies can be sent direct to the person you wish to address if you prefer.

4. Have also at hand a few good tracts to aid in arousing an interest. Often they are a convenient introduction. In a shop, store or other place of resort the Washington Souvenir, nicely framed, is of great value.

5. Be confident in the goodness of the cause; and keep in mind for encouragement—

In the first place, that the paper is well worth subscription.

In the second place, that much depends for the success of the reform on a large list.

In the third place, that there is no easier way to raise a good fund to sustain other branches of the work than by subscriptions.

This is the plan of a good work, and God's blessing will go with you if in the name of his dear Son you endeavor to help accomplish it.

A short note is going the round of the press saying that Miss Amy Fowler, daughter of an English clergyman, has left a luxurious home to devote her life to the leper outcasts of Molokai, of the Sandwich Islands, where the Jesuit Father Damien lived and died. Miss Fowler studied medicine in Paris for several years, and was at Pasteur's Institute. She will have charge of all the leper hospitals of the island and will infuse new life in the place of sluggish death so long permitted by the Jesuit management. But the press that has been fulsome in its laudation of a priest of doubtful character, has little or nothing to say of this heroine. If she was a Jesuit or a Freemason they could not praise enough.

THE LATE CLINTON B. FISK.

[See page 8.]

President Harrison will do well to read carefully Governor Ritner's vindication of George Washington from lodge aspersions. The National Grange is holding an exhibition at Carlisle, Pa., and Saturday it was famously advertised by a letter, said to be from President Harrison addressed to the managers of the lodge show. It was published broadcast instantly. But the gentleman at the White House pronounces it a forgery. Ritner shows that Masons profess to have commendatory letters from Washington which he never wrote.

A great debate took place at the Nebraska Chautauqua at Beatrice lately between the Prohibition champions, Prof. Dickie and Sam Small and two men who wish to drag the noble young State of Nebraska at the wheel of the saloon. A vast crowd heard the Omaha editor and his lawyer colleague in their attempt to stand up against the solid shot of argument and the bombs of eloquence which Dickie and Small hurled at the saloon, and were well satisfied at their victory. The noble effort made by the best men and women of the State for liberty under law against this liquor curse is the admiration of the whole country. God give them the victory.

The new Baptist University of Chicago has organized its Board of Trustees with E. Nelson Blake as president, and Prof. William R. Harper of Yale is understood to be the unanimous choice of the Board for president. Prof. Harper has long been identified with Baptist educational interests in this city, having been professor of Hebrew in Morgan Park Theological Seminary before going to New Haven. He is an able instructor and possesses great executive ability. His election will doubtless soon be published and the new institution will begin its career under happy auspices. Both Mr. Blake and Prof. Harper are well known to have no sympathy for secret societies. Dr. Lorimer, Masonic Grand Lecturer, was a while since mentioned prominently as the head of the future university. It is a matter of no small concern, therefore, that so excellent a change has taken place. The trustees have $1,200,000 in real estate and money to begin their great work.

Some of the Democratic papers are quite displeased that the 4th of July added the forty-third State to our Union and another star to our flag. The fact should rather kindle our patriotic spirit. But Idaho which then came into the Union sisterhood has had trouble with the Mormons who have been pushed over into her valleys by the ambitious priesthood of Utah; and she made a test oath to put in their mouths for a strong bridle. All the courts to the highest at Washington have declared this test lawful. But this is the sole objection raised to the new State. It is altogether to her credit. The real trouble, however, is party politics; for Idaho is Republican.

WHY DOES NOT CONGRESS HANG THE LOTTERY?

BY REV. WILBUR F. CRAFTS.

Is it a golden paper-weight from Louisiana that holds down the anti-lottery bills that Congress referred to committees six months ago? Surely there can be no good reason for the delay of these emergency measures. These brave Louisianians who are trying to prevent their State from continuing to be the receiver of stolen goods from all the other States, ought to be reinforced at once by the passage of the Colquit Senate bill to cancel the charters of national banks that guarantee lottery payments, and the Wilson Senate bill to shut out all newspapers that advertise lotteries from the mails; to which should be added as the third strand of the halter that is to hang the lottery—whatever Louisiana may do—the House "original package" bill which would apply to lottery tickets as well as liquors—that express companies may no longer be the pals of the greatest of robbers. Congress should also revive the bill, so strangely defeated in a former session, to forbid the advertising of lotteries in the District of Columbia. Washington is said to be only second to New Orleans in gambling of all sorts.

With Congressional reinforcements the anti-lottery people of Louisiana would win in the people's vote, as the chief inducement to vote for the lottery is the desire of corrupt business men to have a share in the plunder taken from other States. If the lottery represented only the "State right" of Louisiana to rob itself, its own people would quickly vote it out and turn into their shoe stores and dry goods stores and other lines of honest trade the millions now taken from its half-clad, half-fed poor by the New York multi-millionaire who is the chief beneficiary of the lottery.

Even in Nevada, after the legislature had been "induced" to submit a constitutional amendment, the people refused it. It will be so in Louisiana, unless its giant robber can buy Congress as well as the Legislature.

Let every paper that believes that only "a fair exchange is no robbery," send its anti-lottery editorials again and again to hesitating Congressmen, and let every citizen who is not a gambler send letters to both his Senators and his Congressman, asking for the speedy passage of the anti-lottery bills already proposed and others that are needed. A blizzard of such letters will yet stop the lottery train in spite of its mighty golden engine, and put lotteries, with dueling, among the antiquities.

The whole nation needs an anti-lottery crusade. Let us hang the lottery and turn over its twenty millions per year of spoils to boom all honest lines of trade.

Let writing to Congressmen about pending legislation become the people's habit. That is the way to make "government of the people by the people, for the people" something more than a pretty saying. Legislators tell me they seldom get any letters that are not selfish—if not applications for office at least for seeds. A letter that urges attention to a great moral question from philanthropic motives is "as rare as a day in June," that is, there are only about thirty such in a Congressman's big mail in a year. They are, therefore, influential, even though badly written. Such letters have been quoted in the Senate as evidence of the workingman's interest in pending bills. The Sunday rest bills for the capital and for all under the jurisdiction of Congress would doubtless become a law during this Congress, and also the lottery bills and the pending temperance bills, if every one who believes in them would at once write to his two Senators and his Congressman, the stockholders in the national corporation, thus informing the directors of their wishes.

New York.

AMERICAN AND BIBLE POLITICS COMPARED.

BY REV. M. A. GAULT.

To teach politics without the Bible is like teaching navigation without a compass, or astronomy without reference to the stars. God gave the preference to republican government, by giving that form to the United States of Israel. The tribes of Israel were so many state governments under one federal constitution. The Ten Commandments was their national constitution. In accordance with the idea of republican government, God allowed the people in a national convention to vote on the acceptance and ratification of this Constitution, see Ex. 19: 8. Like ours they had the legislative, executive and judicial departments of government clearly defined. From Num. 1: 16, we find they had a Congress composed of the "renowned of the congregation, princes of the tribes," etc. They had a Senate composed of "seventy men of the elders of Israel," see Num. 11: 16. Their judicial system was composed of four lower and higher courts, see Ex. 18: 21.

But in many points our government is defective when compared with this Bible republic of Israel. It was based on Divine authority behind law; the idea that law was not merely the will of the people, but the will of God. The first article in their constitution was, "Thou shalt have no other gods before me," Ex. 20: 3. But in our Constitution we recognize no authority higher than the will of the people. Their government required all officials to be elected by the people, see Deut. 1: 13, whereas there are 100,000 of our officials, including our postmasters, in whose appointment the people have no choice. They enfranchised women, as is evident from the part women took in their elections, and the fact that Deborah judged Israel forty years; but we deny this privilege to one-half of the most moral and intelligent portion of our citizens. They required a moral qualification for officials, see Deut. 17: 19, and Ex. 18: 19. In some of our States we have moral qualifications for saloon-keepers, but our Constitution prescribes none for a President or Congressman; and Senator Ingalls says, "The Decalogue and Golden Rule have no place in a political campaign." Their officials were qualified by an oath in the name of God (see Deut. 6: 13), but our Constitution prescribes a form of oath from which the name of God is excluded.

Their laws required a man to be put to death if his carelessness resulted in the death of his neighbor, but our government legalizes 215,000 saloons. This results in the death of 100,000 victims of intemperance every year. Their laws required that no satisfaction shall be taken for the life of the murderer. He must surely be put to death, see Num. 35: 31-33. In the United States there are 4,570 murders in a single year, and only about 100 of these murderers are put to death; and there are more murders in proportion to our population than in any country in the world, except Italy and Spain.

We prohibit Chinese laborers from coming to our shores, because we cannot compete with them in labor, owing to their temperate, economical habits; but God has decided the Chinese question in Lev. 19: 33, 34. Our law of the coroner's inquest is laid down in Deut. 21: 1-9. God prohibits all secret oath-bound societies in Lev. 5: 4. He prohibits the Chicago syndicate from getting up a corner on grain in Prov. 11: 26. He decides the capital and labor question in Matt. 7: 12, and in James 5th chapter. The Farmers' Alliance grievance growing out of mortgaged lands is settled in Neh. 5: 1-14. The best anti-monopoly legislation is found in Lev. 25: 10, and the best homestead law in Num. 33: 54. The form of securing property by written deed is prescribed in Jer. 32: 44. No better stock law can be found than in Deut. 22: 1, 2. The fate of the two old political parties and the triumph of a third party is declared in Zach. 13: 8, 9. They had a national Sabbath law, as the central article of their constitution, see Ex. 20: 8-11, while our national Constitution contains no Sabbath law; and the general government is the greatest Sabbath-breaker, robbing half a million of the Sabbath rest by its mail service and railroad corporations. The Bible strongly prohibits the traffic in liquor, see Hab. 2: 12 and 2: 15. But our government legalizes this traffic and receives the largest share of revenue from it.

THE DYING SOLDIER'S LAST SONG.

BY VICTORIA ALEXANDRA BUCK.

[A true incident of the late war.]

The strife was hushed and the cloud of death
Hung o'er that Southern meadow;
The air was still, while the battle-wreath
O'er the green hills flung its shadow.
The strife was o'er and the cannon's roar
Was hushed where the dead were lying,
And the grass and flowers were dashed with red,
Where the boys in blue lay dying.

And down beside a tinkling stream
Amid the fern and heather,
Where the violets starred the woodland wild
And friend and foe together
Lay cold and dead in their last long sleep
Where the bugle lately sounded,
With face upturned to the burning sky
A soldier-lad lay wounded.

They bore him gently to the camp
Where the watchfires bright were glowing,
And tender fingers washed the blood
That down his breast was flowing.
They saw that death had touched him there
As round his side they gather,
So they asked him, "Where is thy native land?"
"Hast thou a home and mother?"

The lad looked up and a golden gleam,
Like light from starry fountains,
Flashed from his eyes as his soul recalled
His loved New England mountains.
"Now call the Regiment's band to me!"
They came and hailed him kindly.
With a wave of the hand the lad said, "Play
'The girl I left behind me.'"

Then screamed the fife and rolled the drum
And hearts that death was chilling,
Kept time, while pain-dimmed eyes grew bright
At the strains so sweet and thrilling.
The music pealed like a bugle-blast
Above that field so gory,
And the soldier's face gleamed like the light
That shines from the hills of glory!

"I see my village home once more,
I hear its tinkling fountains;
I smell its balsam-laden woods,
I see its hills and mountains;
I see our cabin in the glen,
And my father's face so kindly,
For oh! it all comes back with the tune
Of 'The girl I left behind me.'"

The music ceased, the sun went down,
The midnight stars shone brighter,
The hills seemed wreathed in a golden crown
And the soldier's face grew whiter.
The night-wind tossed his waving hair.
(No more he gropeth blindly.)
And so, his spirit passed with the air
Of "The girl I left behind me."

East Randolph, N. Y.

THE FEDERAL ELECTION BILL.

BY REV. H. H. HINMAN.

The Federal Election bill has passed the House and is likely to be accepted by the Senate and become a law. Perhaps no measure since the Reconstruction Period has met such united and determined opposition from the Democratic party, and especially from the "solid South." It is not improbable that its enforcement, if enforcement is attempted, will provoke resistance and develop the crisis on the suffrage question that has for years been impending.

Ever since the adoption of the war amendments (13th, 14th, 15th,) opposition to Negro suffrage in the South has been steadily increasing; but it is only until recently that leaders in Southern opinion have felt strong enough to declare openly that the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments of the Constitution shall not be enforced. The appeal is everywhere to race prejudice. It is maintained that "Negro suffrage" and "Negro rule" are synonymous. In Kentucky and other Southern States where the white majority is very decided there is no active resistance to a full vote and a fair count. But among Kentucky politicians the right of the National Government to compel a fair election is as strenuously denied as in Mississippi or South Carolina. Nor has the increased education of the Negro at all mitigated the bitterness of this opposition to his vote. It has tended rather to increase it; for ignorant Negroes are practically powerless. Their vote can easily be suppressed or counted out. Not so with men of education. Their intelligence makes them at once more sensitive and better able to secure their rights.

While it is not probable that this measure originated in pure patriotism or far-reaching philanthropy, and it is quite possible that it will be used for the promotion of party purposes rather than the maintenance of justice to the colored voter, yet there are abundant reasons why such a measure should be adopted, and why it will, ere long, commend itself to the more thinking people of all sections of our land.

First, on general principles it is the right and duty of the general government to see that national elections are lawfully and fairly conducted. There is always a liability to frauds, not only in the South, but wherever any party is habitually dominant. No question can be more important than purity of the ballot. No party or section ought to be afraid of honest elections, or of proper means to secure them. Experience has shown that in all our Southern tier of States the denial of the Negro's right to a voice in national affairs has not only been a great but a growing evil. These States, which contain a majority of the entire colored population of the nation, did not, by official count, send a single colored member to the present Congress.

Second, the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments of the Constitution securing the Negro his equal rights as a citizen, are a solemn compact binding on the entire nation, which it is the sworn duty of every member of Congress to see duly executed. Especially are they binding on the States of the so-called "Confederacy," since they not only ratified them, but their ratification was made the condition of their restoration to the Union.

Third, these amendments were a solemn covenant with the ex-slaves, a guarantee on the part of the government that they should be protected in all their rights as citizens of the nation. If this solemn pledge has been broken or neglected it constitutes no reason why we should continue to exercise bad faith. It is too late to say that it was a mistake to put the ballot into the hands of men that could not read it. Perhaps it was, but after nearly a quarter of a century we cannot well take back what we solemnly promised, and especially when the number of those who can read their ballots is both absolutely and relatively vastly larger than when the franchise was bestowed.

Fourth, there is a solemn duty resting on the people of the nation to maintain the principles enunciated by the Declaration of Independence, the preamble to our national Constitution and in the noble words of Abraham Lincoln. This government is not for a race, but "is for the people and by the people." Greatly as a renewal of sectional and political animosities is to be deprecated, yet this question must be met, for on the maintenance of Constitutional law depends the perpetuity of our free institutions.

Berea, Ky.

FROM EARTH TO HEAVEN.

BY REV. S. F. PORTER.

The question has often been discussed by Bible students, When do God's people enter heaven? and there is some diversity in the answers given.

I. One class of believers teach very positively that all mankind become unconscious at death and remain without any thought or feeling until the end of the world. Thus Noah, Abraham and Moses have never known anything since they ceased to breathe, and the untold millions who have passed away from earth possess no conscious existence. This view, I think, is a great mistake. It assumes that the human race has no real life, apart from the animal frame, and hence it teaches that what the Bible says about the death of the body applies to the soul as well. But the Bible is explicit. Gen. 2:7. God formed man of the dust of the ground and breathed into him the breath of life, "and man became a living soul." "So," Gen. 1:27, "God created man in his own image." We are told in Eccl. 12:7 of death: "Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was, and the spirit shall return to God who gave it." We must take this statement with us in all our Bible readings about death, and be careful to apply what is said of the body to the body, and what is said of the spirit to the spirit or soul. Eccl. 3:21, "Who knoweth the spirit of man that goeth upward, and the spirit of the beast that goeth downward to the earth?" John 11:26, "And whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die." This is said of the spirit or soul. But in Eccl. 9:5 the expression "for the dead know not anything," refers to the body "which returns to the earth."

II. There is another theory, very ancient, held by a large number of professed Christians, viz., the doctrine of an intermediate state. According to this view, mankind after death continue in a state of conscious existence in a place prepared for them where they remain until the end of this world. Upon this theory rests the doctrine of purgatory, taught by the Roman church, and the dogma of a second probation, supported by some German critics and some Germanizing American professors. But it is not taught in the Bible. One passage is brought forward which, by a sharp exegesis, is made to support it, 1 Peter 3:18-20. When I read Greek under Prof. C. E. Stowe in 1833, the class understood it in substance as follows: In what way did Christ preach? In the spirit.

How long did he preach? For one hundred and twenty years.

When did he preach? While the Ark was preparing.

To whom? To the world of mankind before the flood.

How many were saved? Eight.

What became of the remainder? The flood swept them all away. And they went to the penitentiary of the universe where they were when Peter wrote this epistle. And I have not the shadow of a doubt that this is the true meaning of the Apostle. And it contains not a whisper of Christ's going to hell to preach the Gospel on the day of the crucifixion. So narrow is the margin for purgatory and a second probation in the Bible!

III. But most Bible Christians hold that, at death, the body of believers returns to dust, and the spirit, the image of God, goes to heaven to abide in the presence of the beloved Jesus. Our Lord himself told the disciples that they should be with him where he was, in the Father's house, where there were many mansions. John 14:1-3. And Paul says, Phil. 1:23, "I have a desire to depart and to be with Christ, which is far better." And such was the evident consensus of the Apostles and the whole primitive church. And the views of the present generation of Christians are the same, if we may judge from the burial discourses, the memorial sermons, and the general teaching of to-day.

Enoch's happy transfer to heaven was pleasing evidence to the world, before the flood, that believers enter at once into the future endless life. Heb. 11:5. But the most wonderful testimony of the ancient scripture is the translation of Elijah, 2 Kings 2:11. "And it came to pass as they still went on and talked, behold! a chariot and horses of fire parted them asunder and Elijah went up by a whirlwind into heaven." Stephen's prayer, Acts 7:59, "Lord Jesus, receive my spirit," was evidently answered, and his eyes were enabled to see the Son of man standing on the right hand of God, as he went up into glory. It is a remarkable word picture that the evangelist Moody draws of the death of Paul in his discourse on heaven:

"Look at the little tent maker as he goes along the crowded way. Look at that giant as he moves with a firm tread through the streets of Rome. He is on his way to execution. Take your stand by his side and hear him. He is talking of the glory beyond. He says, 'To be absent from the body, is to be present with the Lord. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness. I shall be there to-night. I shall see the King in his beauty to-night. I have longed to be with him. This is my crowning day.' The hour has come; and we can see Paul, with a joyful countenance, stand bending forward his head: and the Roman soldier, with a sharp, heavy sword, smites it off and sets his spirit free. If our eyes could look as Elisha's looked, we would have seen him leap into a chariot of light, like Elijah, and go through limitless space. Look at him now as he mounts higher, and higher! See him move up, up, ever upward. See, he is entering now the eternal city, and Jesus stands there saying, 'Well done, thou good and faithful servant; enter thou into the joy of thy Lord.' Oh friends, your turn and mine will come, bye and bye, if we are but faithful; let us see that we do not lose the crown."

Another example, from the same preacher, illustrates the popular thought in our churches. The child of a Christian father had been for some time sick, and upon going home one day, he found him much worse. Upon examination he became convinced that he was soon to be taken away, and he said to him: "My son, do you know you are dying?"

The little fellow looked up and said, "No, am I? Is this death that I feel creeping over me, father?"

"Yes, my son, you are dying."

"Will I live the day out?"

"No, you may die at any moment."

He looked up at his father and said, "Well, I will be with Jesus to-night, won't I, father?"

And the father said, "Yes, my boy, you will spend the night with the Saviour."

And seeing his father's tears, he said, "Father, don't you cry for me; when I get to heaven I will go straight to Jesus, and tell him that ever since I can remember you have tried to lead me to Him."

Dr. Nelson in his work on infidelity has given several instances which indicate the continued activity of the soul as it passes away. They have a slight resemblance to the experience of Paul, 2 Cor. 1. He was taken up into the third heaven, and in paradise saw unutterable things. Whether he was in the body or out of the body, he could not tell. So in these cases, whether the soul went out of the body for a moment and then returned, it is difficult to say. But they saw things unutterable, i. e., which they could not describe. The doctor was called to visit a lady afflicted by a disease which produced repeated attacks of fainting. At length in one of them she appeared to be entirely gone. Her weeping relatives clasped their hands and exclaimed, "She is dead!" But she revived once more, and looking at one near her, said, "Oh, Sarah, I was at an entirely new place;" and then she passed on and remained ever more insensible to the things of this world.

Again, a woman died in St. Louis who was a ripe Christian. After many struggles and much apparent insensibility, not being able to speak aloud, she whispered to her pastor, "I had a sight of home, and I saw my Saviour," and so she passed away.

Nelson says he was surprised to find that the condition of mind, in the case of those who were dying and those who only thought themselves dying, differed very widely. Why should not the Christian, who believes himself to be dying, rejoice as readily as when he is departing this life? For instance: there was a man who thought he was a Christian, and judging from his life, his friends believed that he was. This man was taken sick and he supposed he was passing away. His mind was dark, his soul was clouded, and he felt no joy. But he was not dying; he recovered. After this he was taken again, and believed himself to be dying, and he was not mistaken. But all was peace, serenity, hope and triumph to the last.

Again, there was a man that mocked at Christianity, who became seriously ill, and supposed he was dying. He was not frightened. His fortitude and composure were his pride and the boast of his friends. But it was a mistake, he was not in the line between the two worlds. He did not die. Afterward he was taken ill again, and he supposed as before that he was entering the next state, and he really was, but his soul seemed to be in a terribly different atmosphere. The horrors of these scenes have often been described, but we will not dwell upon them here.

"Again, I have seen cowards die. I have seen those depart who were naturally timid, who expected themselves to meet death with fright and alarm. I have heard such sing, as it were, before Jordan was half forded. I have seen faces, pallid as they were, where more celestial triumphs shone than I had ever witnessed anywhere else."—Nelson on Infidelity.

But there are thousands in this Christian country who testify to instances of the same character which they have witnessed. Near and dear relatives and Christian friends have entered into glory, and the chariot of light in which they were taken up seemed almost visible to the eye. How strong is the argument and how mighty is the motive which calls upon us to enter upon the same race that we may win a like crown.

Earth is the infant school and the training school of the human race. The mature, the real life is spent elsewhere, and it is according to the grade. They that have done evil go out, ashamed of themselves, and with the shadow of universal and everlasting contempt resting upon them. But the true scholar of Jesus Christ is translated at death from earth to heaven. Those who enter there will find it endless. They will also find it perfect. "Eye hath not seen nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him." 1 Cor. 2:9. They will reside with Christ in the heavenly mansions in the Father's house. And they will be like him for they will see him as he is. GLORY TO GOD IN THE HIGHEST!

SONS OF VETERANS.

The last week furnished to many of our citizens, old and young, and to interested people of the general community, opportunity to see some hundreds of the new order known as Sons of Veterans, and to hear speeches from Gen. Alger, of Michigan, Gov. Fifer, and ex-Gov. Palmer, of Illinois. The extreme heat prevented many from going to the fair grounds, and made those who did go very uncomfortable. The Jacksonville papers gave daily and interesting reports of the doings at camp. The city saloons received less patronage from the young men than they probably expected, for the chief support of these legalized schools and manufactories of vice and crime is now from the young men. The military discipline and distant location of the camp served to prevent most of those who might have wished to visit the saloons from doing so, and we judge that a large percentage of the young men would of choice keep away from them. That military organizations should be attractive to unconverted young men is what might be expected, and that the organizing of the Sons of Veterans for purposes such as are contemplated in this order should seem a matter of special interest is not strange. Such things in the nature of the case, will be, and yet morally, there is evil in them, and the promise of greater evil is manifest to us. Jesus was hated because he testified of the world that its works were evil; i. e., of course, its characteristic works, representative of its heart and governing spirit. Thus it is to-day, and thus it will ever be while the world is the world, and while Christ is Christ. But let a minister possess the world by spirit, and, belonging to a worldly order or two, preach that "the world is growing better every day," and he will not be hated. No, indeed, "the world will love its own," and discerning its own, will not be slow to applaud and support its pious representatives. But let a minister stand forth as a reprover of sin and worldliness, and set forth the holiness which antagonizes and casts down and out the spirit of this world, and the love of the world for him will wish to manifest itself in helping to bury him.

The Sons of Veterans belong to the families, many of them Christian, of the country, and have not been exposed to the temptations, vices and looseness of soldier life; and yet falling in company with less than a dozen of them at Chapin, as they were returning to their homes, we were pained, mortified, and disgusted with the profanity and free talk of the lads as to Jacksonville harlots, etc. And when mildly suggesting the discontinuance of the disgraceful talk, we were given to understand by a fine-looking young man with shoulder straps and bars, that our meddling was not called for. Alas for the progress of the world purity-ward!—Bible Banner, Jacksonville, Ill.

THE JESUITS IN MASONRY.

The latest foreign contribution to the history of Freemasonry is a curious volume relative to "Freemasonry at Angouleme in the eighteenth century," particularly interesting at this moment as displaying the part taken by the provincial Masons of France in the memorable movement of 1798, whence was born the French Republic, now a hundred years old.

The author, Br. . Mamoz, informs us, among other curious facts, that the Lodge Perfect Union was founded December 2, 1764, and progressed slowly until, upon April 2, 1766, it received an addition of eighteen members, among whom could be reckoned a Cordelier, a choir-master of the cathedral, two Capuchins, and three Carmelites, all monks of standing in their respective orders. To account for the presence of these ecclesiastics, who nowadays would hold Masonry in holy horror, Br. . Mamoz simply remarks that, in addition to the presumption that Catholicism in France, with a clergy, of which Talleyrand, Sieyes, and Raynal were luminous examples, was not of the quality as at present, "the Jesuits were endeavoring to administer the institution for their influence." Of this endeavor we have a pertinent remnant in the original Rose Croix, with the emblems, word, and signs still in use, but bereft of religious significance, having been remodeled in 1786 as the veritable ne plus ultra of French Masonry, without which degree the system remains incomplete, as the legend of the Third Degree is merely introductory to an ungiven explanation. —Masonic Chronicle.

What is a drunkard? I have gone through the whole creation that lives, and I find nothing in it like the drunkard. The drunkard is nothing but a drunkard. There is no other thing in nature to which he can be likened. The drunkard is a self-made wretch, who has depraved and has gratified the depraved cravings of the throat and body, until he has sunk his soul so far that it is lost in his flesh, and has sunk his very flesh lower down beyond comparison than that of the animals which serve him. He is a self-degraded creature, whose degradation is made manifest to every one but himself; a self-made miserable being, who, while he is insensible to his own misery, afflicts every one around him or belonging to him with misery. The drunkard is let loose upon mankind like some foul, ill-boding and noxious animal, to pester, torment and disgust everything that reasons or feels, while the curse of God hangs over his place, and the gates of heaven are closed against him. Drunkenness is never to be found alone; never unaccompanied by some horrid crime, if not by a wicked crowd of them. Go to the house of the drunkard, consider his family, look on his affairs, listen to the sounds that proceed from the house of drunkenness and the house of infamy as you pass. Survey the insecurity of the public ways and of the night streets. Go to the hospital, to the house of charity, and the bed of wretchedness. Enter the courts of justice, the prison, and the condemned cell. Look at the haggard features of the ironed criminal. Ask all these why they exist to distress you, and you will everywhere be answered by tales and recitals of the effects of drunkenness. And the miseries and the vices and the sorrow and the scenes of suffering that have harrowed up your soul, were almost without exception either prepared by drinking, or were undergone for procuring the means of satisfying this vice, and the vices which spring from it. —Zion's Advocate.

Better be small and shine, than be great and cast a shadow.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

A Negative Legislature—Original Packages—Dr. Pentecost—The Carpenters' strike—Death of an old time reformer—Early Methodism in New England.

Prohibitionists cannot take much encouragement from the proceedings of the Massachusetts Legislature for 1890. On no subject has it left a more unsatisfactory record; and that is saying much. Its sins however have been rather those of negation than of direct commission. It has disappointed the W. C. T. U. by refusing to pass a stronger law for temperance instruction in the public schools. It has also refused to allow search to be made for concealed liquors, to regulate their transportation, to allow women to vote on the issue of licenses, or to forbid liquor sellers sitting as jurors on liquor cases; while its very last act was to enact the West End bill and legalize the lobby. Our Masonic Governor Brackett signed both bills without any apparent difficulty. It is safe to say that his action in this matter will not make it any smoother sailing for the Republican party next fall. The public have many and well-grounded reasons for complaint against the West End. Scores of persons have been either killed or injured by the electric cars since they began to run, and to grant them still further privileges will not make this great monopoly any more careful of human life. But "whom the gods destroy they first make mad." The expenses of the West End investigation summed up reaches a total of $3,385.55. It would pay the grand old commonwealth to elect honest legislators, and thus save the expense of whitewashing over their irregularities.

The City Solicitor of Bangor, Me., has rendered the opinion that parties seizing beer or liquor in the original, unbroken packages are liable for the value of the goods seized. This has paralyzed the police officers who are not willing to lay themselves liable to prosecution. Yet it is a perfectly consistent decision and only carries out to its logical conclusion the infamous law behind it. I doubt if there was ever a single moral question, not even excepting slavery, that admitted of so many legal quirks and quibbles as the liquor question. The town of Holbrook, in Massachusetts, though "but a little one," is large enough to admit of quite a curious complication, the chairman of the selectmen and the town clerk both refusing to sign any druggists' licenses, thus annulling the action of the rest of the board which voted to grant them. As a consequence, Holbrook druggists will have to wait till the next spring town meeting before the matter can be adjusted. It is said that there was more drunkenness on the Fourth in Boston than at any time for years, which does not speak well for the success of the no-bar clause.

Dr. Pentecost made the announcement at Northfield last Wednesday that in seven weeks he expected to sail for India. He believes that the next great outpouring of the Lord's spirit will be on that country; and naturally his address, in which he unfolded his plans and hopes, created a great deal of missionary enthusiasm. A young man who is now at Northfield as a Bible student, but who has been a very successful distributor of anti-secret literature, writes of his experience in conversing with some of the young men who expect to go out as volunteer missionaries. They counseled him to follow their example instead of wasting time and strength in warring against such a formidable foe as the lodge;—to which he makes this very pertinent comment, "that a young man who cannot do missionary work in his own land will not be likely to do it very effectually anywhere else." To fight heathenism in India while leaving heathenism in America to run rampant will be found in the long run to act disastrously even on the foreign missionary work. I trust the way will open for Mr. Weed, which is the name of this young brother, to attend our next annual meeting, and give some account of his work in this arduous but much needed line.

The carpenters' strike for eight hours still continues in Boston, much embarrassing building operations. The Society of Christian Socialists, whose president is Rev. O. P. Gifford, issued an address to the public at their recent meeting, strongly condemning the action of the Carpenter Builder's Association, which, while thoroughly organized themselves, deny the same right to the workers, and refuse to hold any conference with them except in an individual capacity. The time will come, if our world stands as long, when our present wage system which gives all the profits to capital and none to labor will seem as unbearable and monstrous an injustice as feudalism does now.

The death of Willard Sears, one of the oldest master builders in the country, has removed from our midst a remarkable exemplar of the old-time Puritan spirit. He was one of the first men in Boston to aid the anti-slavery cause, and what is an equally great distinction, he with his brother Eben were the very first employers to dispense with the custom of giving alcohol to their workmen by offering an increase of wages as a substitute. He was also the first to break through Northern color prejudice so far as to take a colored man for an apprentice. In order to secure a platform for free speech he built a chapel of his own, and among other unpopular reform advocates who occupied it was Dr. Graham, the founder of the vegetarian system of diet. The mayor refusing to interfere for the protection of the chapel when the bakers and liquor men stirred up a mob of the baser sort, Mr. Sears himself dispersed the doctor's assailants with a liberal use of lime and old plaster from the upper windows.

An aged Methodist divine, Rev. John Atkinson, is now living in Michigan, who knew Jesse Lee, the first Methodist minister who ever preached in New England. The lodge had not then swallowed up all the zeal and devotion of the Methodist clergy, who spared not to rebuke their flock when they saw occasion,—especially the feminine part, if they seemed unduly disposed to plaiting of the hair and other forbidden vanities. If their reproofs were not always in the best of taste, they were at least pointed and energetic enough to be remembered by their recipients through a life time. He tells this story of the noted Joseph Totten, who one day thus rebuked two young ladies, daughters of a prominent lawyer, who made a point of disturbing the service by entering the church late: "Here you come prancing in with the devil's toy-shop on your heads and hell's bells in your ears." This can be matched with a tale told to me by an aged Methodist lady who in her youth attended Methodist meetings held in the upper loft of a mill. The services were long, and some who had strayed in out of curiosity got weary and left, among them a gaily-attired young lady, one of the elite of the place. "There goes another and Satan after her," shouted the preacher. At that instant the culprit happened to look up and saw just behind her at the top of the stairs the form of a burly negro who, sitting next the door, had taken occasion to leave at the same time; and exclaiming, "I believe to my soul he is," she made quick time out of the building and away from the clutches of the evil one who had so nearly made her a captive.

We laugh over the oddities, the quirks and humors of early Methodism, but at least these men were sincere. Their very roughness showed their terrible earnestness. Would that such an unction of Holy Ghost power as enwrapped them like a mantle might fall on the ministry of New England to-day.

ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 9, 1890.

Mr. Harrison and his Postmaster General are both Christians and God-fearing men, therefore it is the more surprising to many people, who are more or less familiar with the circumstances, that that gigantic octopus of evil known as the Louisiana State Lottery company should be allowed to continue using the United States mails to reach out in all directions after its unfortunate victims. For some years past this mammoth gambling institution has published a weekly paper in Washington for no other purpose than to entice new victims into its capacious maw; the paper is filled with marvelous stories of poor persons becoming suddenly rich by the purchase of lottery tickets and with commendations of this particular lottery.

Every week the great United States government lends its aid to the publishers of this paper to scatter thousands of copies in every section of the country, where they may corrupt the morals of good and pure men, women and children; and what makes the matter still worse, these papers, which mostly go out as "sample" copies, are sent through the mails in direct violation of law. It is well known, or if it isn't it ought to be, to some of the minor officials of the Post-office department that this paper is neither a newspaper nor a periodical in the meaning of the law, and that it has no legal right to send out thousands of "sample" copies every week without having a fraction of the number sent out each week on its books in the shape of bona fide paying subscribers, and doubtless these facts would long ago have been known to Mr. Wanamaker, and the paper denied the right to use the mails in sending out what is no more nor less than a lottery circular, at pound rates, if there had not been some underhand work going on somewhere.

Congress, the highest law-making power in the United States, will shortly be called upon to pass upon a question which is of special interest to the temperance people. A bill has been prepared by the House committee on the District of Columbia,—and it has practically been agreed by a majority of that committee to report it to the House—which provides for the establishment of a "High Liquor License" in this city.

Some, a great many, oppose it, as they do anything which recognizes the legal status of the horrible rum traffic, and believe it to be the duty of the temperance people here and elsewhere to exert all their influence against this or any other bill which does not prohibit the sale of the vile stuff at the national capital. Others say that while they would much prefer the enactment of a law prohibiting the sale of liquor entirely, they recognize that "half a loaf is better than no bread," and that "High License" would result in a large reduction in the number of places where liquor is sold, they would have the temperance folks support the measure.

There are still others who are opposed to having the temperance organizations, either as bodies or as individuals, take any part whatever in the controversy. They argue that to support the bill would be to recognize the legality of a business which they have sworn to do all in their power to destroy; and to oppose it, knowing that it is certain to lessen the number of rum-sellers, is further than they care to go.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, to Friends in 1794, Quoted by Myron Holley: "The real people occasionally assembled in order to express their sentiments on political sentiments, ought never to be confounded with permanent, self-appointed societies, usurping the right to control constituted authorities, and to dictate to public opinion. While the former was entitled to respect, the latter was incompatible with all government, and must either sink into general dis-esteem, or finally overturn the established order of things."

REFORM NEWS.

AS HOT FOR THE LODGE AS FOR THE PEOPLE.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 10, 1890.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—I am learning more and more the power of simple Gospel truth. Goliath in all his armor can not stand before it. Sometimes when our minds are clouded with the fogs of earth we forget that truth is sure to triumph. "The eternal years of God are hers."

Last Sabbath evening I felt especially the presence and blessing of God as I plead for the honor of his dear Son's name. By invitation of Rev. Brooks, the pastor, I addressed a large audience in the colored Baptist church, corner I and 19th streets. I was disappointed in finding my special theme had not been announced, and that the pastor had been called suddenly away. I was made aware that a large majority of my audience were either members of the lodges or in full sympathy with them. Seeing my opportunity and the great need, I was enabled by divine assistance to so bring the truth home that it had the desired effect. Those who were not convinced were deeply moved. I did not know but they would move me before I got through. Men walked clear across the church and looking at me held excited consultation, but evidently seeing no way to get me out of the pulpit till I got through, they sweat and endured it the best they could. No sooner had I concluded than a number gathered about the pulpit. Some shook their fists and made all sorts of foolish statements, such as angry men are apt to do. Others shook my hand and rejoiced that I dare speak so fearlessly. In short there was a general waking up. I believe many of the lodge worshipers are conscientious.

They as thoroughly believe that John the Evangelist and Solomon were secret society leaders as they believe their Bibles. What they need is the truth.

I am now canvassing the leading members to secure subscriptions to our paper. Several who are both Masons and Odd-fellows have subscribed. Bro. W. H. Pierre, seemingly a most exemplary Christian and deacon in this church, said, "I never heard anyone talk like you. You brought the truth so clear right from the Bible that I don't see how they could get around it. I used to be an Odd-fellow, but I am convinced that secret societies are wrong," etc. Bro. Pierre has a son and son-in-law who are ministers. He will see that they have a chance to read the Cynosure.

I am beginning to plan my fall campaign. Will not friends in Pennsylvania, New York, or Maryland, who desire lecture work in their communities, write me at once, that I may plan work accordingly. I am sure all will be interested in the large new chart showing the process of initiation into the Masonic order, so kindly prepared by pastor Johannes of Baltimore. During the hot days I have felt I could do as telling work here as anywhere. We should be looking constantly to God for his blessing on this fall and winter's work.

W. B. STODDARD.

CORRESPONDENCE.

PROHIBITIONISTS DEFENDED.

WALTON, N. Y., July 7, 1890.

Editor Christian Cynosure,

DEAR SIR:—I feel it to be my duty to reply to some objection which Rev. J. C. K. Milligan makes against the Prohibition party, in your issue of July 3d. His first objection is that "the Prohibition party requires of members a pledge that they will vote for the nominees." Certainly he is mistaken on this point. Since 1878 I have been a Prohibitionist in the State of New York; was a member of the Pittsburg convention; have been for years at the New York State convention, and never have I seen members pledged to support the nominees. If such a thing has been done in some local place, surely the party is not composed of such men as to pledge members to support nominees. Prohibitionists are supposed to support the nominees unless some mistake is made in nominating an objectionable person.

His second objection is that "the leaders of the party and many of the nominees are secretists." We doubt the correctness of this statement. It is certain that there are very many in the party opposed to secretism; but if the leaders of the Prohibition party are secretists it is an argument against those who are not secretists and an argument that they are in advance of the writer making the objection.

That a wrong was committed in Pittsburg in hissing President Blanchard is true, and that one, since at the head of the party, led in the hissing is also true. But the Lord has rewarded that one, and the act was not approved by the mass of Prohibitionists. The writer also did John P. St. John injustice. That he has been a secret man is true; that he is not now, nor has been for some years a member of any secret organization, we have understood from his own lips to be also true.

His third objection is that the Prohibitionists "refuse to honor the Lord Jesus." In 1888, at the New York convention, assembled at Syracuse, I presented an amendment to the platform embodying the National Reform ideas. In a speech I also presented Christ's claims to acknowledgment. But the telling argument which was made on the other side was that in the acknowledgment of God made in the platform there was an acknowledgment of Christ. At the convention held in 1889 I was on the special committee appointed to draft the platform, and I again presented the claims of Christ. All who were on that special committee were known to me to be Christian men, and the same point was taken that such an acknowledgment was not necessary, as it was included actually in our acknowledgment of God. What the Prohibition leaders need is enlightenment on this point, and not condemnation as worse than the old parties. It hardly seems right to condemn a party now under the influence of Christian men, and working for the triumph of Christian principles, simply because it has not received all the light, and purified itself from all evil. The Prohibition party is fully abreast or far ahead, as a rule, of the different bodies of Christians; and although all the churches are not right on the question of secrecy, and the acknowledgment of Christ, yet Bro. Milligan should unite in labor with them, if they work for the prohibition of the liquor traffic.

So far as desecration of the Sabbath, in connection with St. John's campaign, was practiced, it may be said that in a few instances the zeal of Prohibitionists perhaps went too far; but it is more likely that the efforts of Prohibitionists to loose men, on the Sabbath day, from the grasp of the rum shops would be condemned more by self-righteous Republicans than by the Lord Jesus himself. It, however, is to be hoped that Prohibitionists will never again allow their zeal to lead them to violate the Sabbath by gatherings seemingly political.

Yours truly,

W. N. HOWIE.

REFORMERS NEEDED IN ARIZONA.

PRESCOTT, Arizona, July 5, 1890.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—I am stopping for a short time at this place, partly for my health. It is called a very healthy place, and people affected with rheumatism and lung complaints are benefited. The climate usually is warm and dry, and yet not so oppressive as it is farther east; for cases of sunstroke are scarcely known here. At present we are having daily showers, which make it very pleasant. This is principally a mining and stock-raising country. The city has a population of about two thousand and is elevated about 6,000 feet above sea level.

I have just returned from viewing a cavalry dress parade, there being a military station here. With the exception of the Catholics, the churches of this place are at ease, or at most simply making dress parades. Mammon controls everything. I judge that there are more saloons and gambling dens than all other places of business. I find one man in the place who is a seceding Mason and not afraid to say so. The principal ministers say they have no use for secret societies, neither have they for the Cynosure. There is with me a young man formerly from St. Louis organizing Christian Endeavor work. At one time there was a society here, but it failed for want of vitality in the churches to support it. A new society has been organized, but I fear that the cold, formal and worldly spirit of those who should support it will freeze it to death.

To legislate on the temperance, secret society and other reform issues is all right, but vital godliness in the churches by individual experience alone will save the nation and our children from these terrible pests.

HORACE W. FOWLER.

TRIALS IN NEW ORLEANS.

NEW ORLEANS, La., July 1, 1890.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—Many weeks have passed since your readers have heard from New Orleans, and some may think we have lost our zeal for reform work. Not so. Thanks to our Heavenly Father, we are here still battling against the iniquitous lodge system. Through the kindness of Mr. C. W. Sterry, of Pontiac, Ill., the St. Matthews Baptist church, of which I am pastor, succeeded in purchasing two lots, corner Second and Clara streets. During March and April we succeeded by earnest laboring to erect a small, but respectable, house of worship. We made preparations to dedicate the new building and lay the corner-stone the 27th of April. The Freemasons had only one month before laid the corner-stone of the Mount Moriah Baptist church, and a few weeks before they had laid the corner-stone of the Old Baptist church, and of course this was quite an inducement to some of my members for the lodge to lay our stone. I, of course, received a proposition to that effect, but I sternly met it with an emphatic "No!" One of my trustees suggested that I go in the country and allow the lodge and music to turn out to the church during my absence, and of course I would not be responsible, as the trustees would have control of the church that Sabbath. This I also refused to accede to, which, of course, greatly angered my official board, and as they thought I was a stumbling-block in their financial path, a part of them agreed among themselves to have a meeting and prefer such charges against the pastor as would divide opinion in the church, and cause a speedy removal. (The leader of this affair was an Odd-fellow and a trustee of the church.) I was informed of this plot. The time of their meeting was only one day off. I set to work to inform the church of their devilish conspiracy. While exposing their folly to the church, the young Odd-fellow trustee arose and demanded me to desist exposing his meeting or he would run me out of the church. This aroused the church to his pernicious and evil intention, whereupon they at once excommunicated him. This so angered him that he jumped over a bench and made for the pastor in the pulpit, screaming at the top of his voice, "Just let me git to him." He also drew a revolver, but was prevented from doing any violence.

The First Recorder's Court settled the matter by fining the lodgeite $10, and putting $250 peace bonds on him for six months. This, of course, has caused a renewal of the old lodge opposition to me, and they are now circulating all kinds of slanderous reports against me and my little church. I recently preached a sermon against their pernicious lodges, which has greatly angered the lodge element.

Rev. Reuben Kendricks, of Amite City, La., was driven away from his home last Saturday. He reached the city yesterday and spoke of his narrow escape last night to my church. He stated that Dr. J. S. Manning, of Michigan, general missionary of the Freewill Baptist connection, in company with another white missionary, reached Amite City two weeks ago, and assisted him in conducting religious meetings one week. He says all of their meetings were public, but of course the white missionaries boarded with a Negro woman while in the town, to the disgust of the prejudiced whites. On Monday, the 23rd of June, an armed mob of fifty or sixty whites surrounded Elder Kendricks's house and demanded the missionaries to be brought forth. Finally, when they could not find them, they gave Elder K. orders never to allow those Yankees (with an oath) to visit him again. While giving Kendricks his orders some unknown party fired upon the mob and wounded six of their number. They at once dispersed, but renewed their attack upon the defenceless June 28, between 7 and 8 A. M., with an armed mob of bull-dozers from Pike county, Miss., Washington, Tangipahoa and St. Helena parishes, La. Elder K. is an anti-secret-society man since 1884. It seems as though there is no protection for Negroes in the South at all; no, not so much as for jack rabbits.

Now, dear friends, once again I appeal to you in the name of our Lord Jesus, to pray for me in this, my hour of trial. My church owes $275 on their lots, and we lack about $200 for ceiling and painting our church, putting in pews, etc. If any friend can help us, even the very least will be thankfully received. Yours in Christian love,

FRANCIS J. DAVIDSON.

THE DEATH OF AN OLD FRIEND.

BOSTON, Mass.

On Thursday, the 26th ult., I attended the funeral of Robert Mansfield, who lived and died in the "precious faith." He heard and obeyed the voice of warning and invitation in his youth and continued steadfast in the doctrine and duties of discipleship until at four-score and two years the Master said, "It is enough, come up higher." He not only had "no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness," but actively opposed and fearlessly rebuked them. He knew that the hour of his departure was at hand, and fearing his strength might not continue to the end he sent for his children and their children, who with the faithful companion of his later years gathered to hear such words and receive the last counsel. Even the youngest of those present will never forget that hour, when, like the Patriarch in Egypt, he blessed and gave counsel to his children and to his children's children, and bade them an affectionate farewell for a little season. A few days later he "fell asleep," leaning on the arm of his devoted companion, saying, "Take me to Jesus, precious Jesus."

To say that he was an Abolitionist and associated with Garrison and Phillips in efforts to arouse and educate public sentiment on that question is to say much. To say that he was a radical Prohibitionist is a greater honor, but these cost him less than his uncompromising opposition to the "secret empire." With the Leadbetter, father and son, his membership was in a church which fifty years ago, even as to this day, would not tolerate a free discussion of the lodge. The elder Leadbetter was expelled for persisting in exposing what he clearly saw to be a secret system of iniquity. When the trial was in progress young Mansfield said, "When you strike Bro. Leadbetter's name from the roll I am no longer a member of this church." And when they cast the old man "out of the synagogue," he redeemed his word and refused to "fellowship the unfruitful works of darkness," choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season." With a few others of "like precious faith," associated in the covenant of grace, he was chiefly instrumental in erecting the house where they worshiped, and in which his funeral services were held.

After some practical lessons suggested by Psalm 37:37, Dea. Increase Leadbetter, in a few timely and well chosen words, spoke of his fidelity and commended his example as worthy of emulation.

The wife of his youth and mother of his five children had gone before, but God had given him a ministering angel to share the joys and trials of the last seventeen years of his journey, whose companionship and kindly ministrations gave to her husband all the sympathy and solace which human devotion can bestow. His two sons and only surviving widowed daughter, with the eight grandchildren are comforted in the hope of the Gospel and look with assurance to a happy reunion when Christ shall appear "in the clouds of heaven."

A devout company of friends and neighbors gathered to pay their tribute of respect, and eyes were dimmed with tears as they looked for the last time upon a familiar face, which, though silent, seemed to say, "Mark the perfect man and behold the upright, for the end of that man is peace."

J. P. STODDARD.

AN EXPLANATION.

NEW YORK, July 3, 1890.

Editor Cynosure,

DEAR SIR:—I have received a private note from Dr. H. H. George in reference to his strictures on my report upon secret societies. He entirely disclaims the intent and meaning put upon his words and says, "I agreed with all that you said in the report; but I said then, and say still, that bad as secrecy is, it is not the great evil or greatest evil of these societies. Their Christless and religionless character is their untold evil and harmfulness." He also adds: "I did not have you in mind as the writer of that report when I said what I did."

I readily accept Dr. George's disclaimer and make it public for his benefit. But whatever he said or meant, the Associated Press reporters understood and published him as charging me with infidelity to the known views and position of our Synod. My letter which appeared in your issue of June 26th was not at all called out by my "suspicions" as to what Dr. George meant, nor was it my misinterpretation of his remarks; for any injustice done to him I am not responsible. In form and in fact my letter was a reply to a public charge, which the reporters, rightly or wrongly, took from Dr. George's remarks on my report. The injustice was done to me by what he was understood to have said. Yours in the cause of anti-secrecy,

J. C. K. MILLIGAN.

PITH AND POINT.

IN TIME TO SAVE A COLORED PASTOR.

The paper is a great help to me. When I fail to get it it seems as if I had failed to eat my dinner or supper. Many thanks to my dear friend for it. If I had not the Cynosure, to-day I would have been a Mason. I thank my God that it came in time to save me.—(Rev.) H. C. CADE, Camden, Ark.

WILL WORK FOR A GOOD YEAR.

Shall do all I can to make the year one of financial prosperity to the Cynosure. Think we shall much enjoy our work with the convenience of the chapel.—I. R. B. ARNOLD.

KEEP CLOUDS AWAY FROM THE POLE STAR.

I read with so much interest your appeal to friends to help our noble "Pole Star" of reform, now that it has reached a crisis when it needs a good, strong, united lift on the part of all such, that I intended to write you and ask what I could do to further the work. I sincerely think our little Home Guard is going to pave the way for the Cynosure to enter many homes that would, before its advent, have rejected an anti-secret paper. Before the Cynosure can be widely taken, a strong interest must be aroused in the reform it advocates. Women must be reached. A man will often take a paper in which his wife is interested, and become interested himself in time. —E. E. FLAGG.

LITERATURE.

ALDEN'S MANIFOLD CYCLOPEDIA of Knowledge and Language. Vol. 20., "Infant" to "Joppa." Garretson, Cox & Co., New York.

The appearance of the twentieth volume of the MANIFOLD CYCLOPEDIA is of interest not only on account of the great value of its contents, but also because it marks the completion of the first half of this important work. These twenty volumes make a goodly library. They are wonderfully clear in their treatment of topics, and are in a remarkably convenient form for use. Among the large number of topics worthy of special mention we notice Insects, nearly 9 pages; Insurance, 15 pages; Interest, including two valuable tables of the interest laws of the various States; International Law; Interoceanic Ship Canal, over 4 pages; Interoceanic Ship Railway; Interstate Traffic on Railroads; Iron, over 20 pages; Jews, over 31 pages; Iowa has 8 pages; and there is an interesting sketch of Johnstown, Pa., including the terrible disaster of 1889, which is a good illustration of how close to date a cyclopedia can be and needs to be brought. Among the foreign nations fully treated are Ireland, Italy, Japan, Java, also the city of Jerusalem.

"Who Made the New Testament?" is an essay upon the Canon of the New Testament. It contains in small compass, facts collected from many larger works, that will be useful to young Bible students and to skeptical readers as well. The pamphlet forms No. 9 in a serial published under the general title of The Anti-Infidel Library, of which several millions of copies have been circulated since 1882. There are many valuable books upon Christian evidences, but generally they are too bulky and expensive to be of service to the persons who most need them. The Anti-Infidel Library is an endeavor to present Christian evidences to the masses in readable yet inexpensive form, and this number is so valuable a contribution to this end that we cheerfully commend it. Published by H. L. Hastings, editor of the Christian, 47 Cornhill, Boston.

The Asiatic Society of Bengal has succeeded in procuring from Thibet, through the agency of a native emissary, a copy of the Tangyur, a monster encyclopedia of Thibetan Buddhism, comprising 225 volumes, each volume two feet long by six inches thick. No less a sum than 3,000 rupees has been given for the work to a Buddhist monastery in Thibet, and the amount has been in great part provided by the government of India out of the usual grant to the Oriental translation fund. Some years ago the Russian government obtained a copy from Pekin, but only 700 rubles was given for it. We in England possess the 225 volumes of the Tangyur in the Secretary of State's library at the India office.—Galignani's Messenger.

The American Law Register, of Philadelphia, is a publication of great value to students of American history, and, indeed, to all patriotic citizens who pray for the perpetuity of the system given us by God through our fathers. The May number of the Register contains an examination of the doctrine of Christianity as a part of the common law as developed in the practice of courts and decisions of eminent jurists. The second article is a legal statement of the case of the Edgerton public school board against the Romanist assaults on the schools, and the use of the Bible in them with annotations. These documents are of great value for study and reference.

The Fourth of July number of America presents a unique appearance in its extra patriotic cover of red, white and blue. This is printed in blue on a specially designed chromatic paper, in which the national colors are strikingly blended by a newly-patented process.

Knowledge, the weekly magazine of popular information, has issued numbers 3, 4 and 5, and the value of the publication is becoming more evident with each issue. The Society of Christian Endeavor is noticed down to the national meeting in St. Louis just closed.

Vick's Magazine for the present month is pleasant summer reading, and the flowers that delight the senses are made to give us all the greater pleasure when we are told so carefully and intelligibly about their habits and culture.

Thomas Baley Aldrich, the poet-editor of the Atlantic Monthly, retires from the position so excellently filled by him, and will be succeeded by the well-known author Horace E. Scudder.

LODGE NOTES.

Several Chicago camps of the Patriotic Sons of America invaded Joliet the other night. They paraded the streets, led by a band playing patriotic airs. They assembled at the Opera House, where the principles of the order were expounded in an address by W. A. Saunder. Rev. H. W. Bolton of a Chicago Methodist church also delivered an address on the object and methods of the order, and an interesting program was carried out. An exposition of the rubric of the principles of the order was made to prove false the statements denouncing it as a political organization akin to Know-nothingism and opposed to Catholicism.

The White Caps took August Colin from the side of his sweetheart at Corydon, Ind., Sunday night and gave him a severe flogging. He is a young man of good reputation, and it is not known why he was whipped. The same night about 11 o'clock a band of nearly thirty visited the county poor-house in Harrison county and took Superintendent John H. Denboe from his bed and gave him twenty-five lashes on his bare body. He was charged with mistreating the inmates. Hickory switches were used in his castigation, and he was very severely handled. His flesh was cut in places, and he was left bruised, bleeding, and almost insensible.

The Grand Lodge meeting of the "Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks" was convened at Cleveland last week. Dr. Simon Quinlan, of Chicago, is the "Exalted Grand Ruler" of the order. It is said that every one of the 198 lodges of the order is represented either by delegates or letter. The most important matter before the meeting is the fight which is on with New York Lodge, No. 1, which has been suspended by Exalted Grand Ruler Quinlan, for insubordination. The trouble all grew out of the Grand Lodge meeting being held in Cleveland, the New York people wanting the Grand Lodge to be permanent in New York, instead of migratory. The New York lodge also called a meeting of the Grand Lodge, and there is a decided split, each faction having cast out the other.

The Philadelphia Daily Times, reporting a meeting of the Knights of Malta lodge in that city, says: "The meeting of the Knights of Malta of the Chapter General of New York and the Grand Commandery of the Ancient and Illustrious Knights of Malta in this city, which convened on Saturday evening, remained in session all night, and had not the police been called in, the meeting most probably would have resulted in a free fight. The meeting was called for the purpose of discussing which is the representative order of the Ancient and Illustrious Order of the Knights of Malta in this country. At 8:30 Saturday night the representatives of the Chapter General arrived dressed in full regalia and entered the hall with drawn swords. The two factions seemed most bitter and antagonistic towards one another during the meeting. Each cheered and applauded its speaker and hooted and jeered their opponents. The officers and members of the Chapter General and their followers occupied the front portion of the hall. The Knights of the Grand Commandery took the rear portion of the hall and flocked themselves around Most Eminent Grand Commander George H. Pierce. They were much larger in numbers than their opponents. Major R. Reed, of this city, occupied the chair and introduced Most Eminent Commander Land, of New York, who argued that the Chapter General was the true representative of the Knights of Malta in this country. Mr. Land was frequently interrupted and jeered. After a number had debated and put forward the claims of their respective organizations, Most Eminent Commander Pierce took the floor. After showing that the Chapter General was not the true Knights of Malta, he said that for nine years it had been working to secure a foothold in Philadelphia, but had never succeeded, not even a hearing of their claims, until they had formed a union with men in our own ranks who are traitors to the order. Some very hot words followed. The hall was by this time in a wild state of excitement, and to add to the trouble the frightened janitor turned down the gas. A policeman who saw the act collared him and made him turn it up again. The Knights were armed with swords and a desperate fight seemed imminent when a squad of policemen that were stationed outside, hearing the uproar, entered the hall and separated the factions. The meeting broke up amid the wildest excitement. Commander Pierce said that had the officers of the Chapter General drawn their swords they would have got the worst of it."

As there is no royal road to learning, so there is no magical cure for disease. The effect, however, of taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla for blood disorders comes as near magic as can be expected of any mere human agency. This is due to its purity and strength.

CONCERNING PREMIUMS.

We offer premiums to compensate such of our subscribers as take the pains and trouble to secure new subscribers to the Cynosure. Many who do this refuse to receive pay, and work because they love the work; others are glad to receive premiums. But,

First, We do not offer any man a premium to renew his own subscription. If a man has taken this paper a year and does not care enough about it to take it longer without being hired to, we do not offer him a premium.

Second, We do not offer a premium to a new subscriber to hire him to take the paper. When he has subscribed for the paper and paid for it himself, and knows its worth, then if he will take the trouble to introduce the paper to others, he can have a premium on the new subscription, but not on his own.

Third, We do not offer a premium where one member of a family stops the paper, and another member of the same family subscribes for it. We do not consider such a name the name of a new subscriber.

Any book we publish or sell can be had as a premium at reasonable rates. We will allow thirty cents' worth of any of our publications, at retail rates, postpaid, for one dollar's worth of new subscriptions to the Cynosure.

WEBSTER'S DICTIONARY and the Christian Cynosure for $4.25, seems a very little amount to pay for so much valuable matter.

You get 832 pages of Cynosure for the dollar and a half!

And whoever has renewed their subscriptions within the last six months can get 1280 pages of Dictionary, sent postpaid for $2.75!!

Read the advertisement on page 14, "A REMARKABLE OFFER."

10,000

Another ten thousand edition of the tract,

KILLED, AND NO INQUEST.

This is a large 4-page tract at 30 cents per pound, 15 cents for half pound, and 10 cents for a third of a pound. It is an illustrated account of the death of Rev. J. W. Johnston, while being initiated by the officers of Huntington Lodge, W. Va., in January of this year. Sent postpaid at the above price. Address,

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
221 W. Madison St Chicago

ANTI-SECURITY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 20 cents per pound:

1. Historical Sketch—National Christian Association.
3. Address to American Pastors.

4. Freemasonry in the Family.
 5. President C. G. Finney on the duty of Christians towards the Lodge.
 7. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
 8. Modern Heathenism.
 9. Ministers at Rival Altars.
 12. Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodge.
 15. Secrecy and Sin.
 16. Selling Dead Horses.
 17. History of Masonry.
 18. Despotism Character of Freemasonry.
 19. Freemasonry, a Christ-excluding Religion.
 22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.
 28. Nathaniel Colver, D.D., on Masonry.
 33. Hon. Wm. H. Seward on Secret Societies.
 37. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).
 39. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?
 44. D. L. Moody on Secret Societies.
 45. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?
 49. John Quincy Adams on the duty of American Voters.
 - Chapters in American Politics.
 - Masonry vs. Prohibition.
 - Decline of the G. A. R.
 - Christianity and Odd-fellowship. Part 1, 4 pages; part 2, 4 pages.
- The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—20 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.
- NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

WASHINGTON DEPARTMENT.—W. B. Stoddard, Agent, No. 215, 4½ St., Washington, D. C.

NEW ENGLAND DEPARTMENT.—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent, No. 309, Tremont St., Boston.

COLLEGE AGENT, Rev. S. F. Porter, Cynosure office.

SPECIAL AGENT.—Rev. C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Du Page Co., Ill.

STATE AGENTS.

Minnesota, E. Hanson, Minneapolis.
New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimball, New Market.
Ohio, Rev. H. H. Hinman, Oberlin.
Pennsylvania, Rev. J. T. Michael, 2942 Westmont Street, Philadelphia.
Alabama, Rev. G. M. Elliott, Selma.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
Nathan Callender, Montdale, Pa.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa.
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.
Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
Rev. E. Mathews, Long Island City, N. Y.
E. Barnettson, Haskinsville, N. Y.
Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
A. W. Parry, Annawan, Ill.

THE N. C. A. FUNDS.

The General Fund is that from which the running expenses of the Association are paid. From it the agents on the field are supported.

The Foreign Fund is that from which the foreign demand for literature against the lodge is supplied to missionaries.

The Free Tract Fund clearly states by its name the object for which contributions are solicited. Millions of pages have been distributed by means of this fund.

The Cynosure Ministers' Fund. The donations to this fund have enabled the Association to send many copies of the Cynosure to the ministers of the South, especially to pastors of colored churches. The result has been a blessing to them and their churches.

Contributions to any or all these funds are urgently solicited.

FORM OF BEQUEST.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of — dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be sufficient discharge.

THE N. C. A. BUILDING
(The gift of Philo Carpenter.)

The Christian Cynosure,

221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

The National Christian Association

PRESIDENT—Bishop Milton Wright, Dayton, O.

VICE PRESIDENT—Rev. Geo. R. Milton, Elgin, Ill.

COR. SEC'Y and TREASURER—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SECRETARY—Rev. E. R. Worrell, Washington Heights, Ill.

DIRECTORS—T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, John Gardner, J. M. Hitchcock, Jerome Howe, G. R. Milton, Wm. Pinkney, J. P. Richards, Alexander Thomson, E. Whipple, E. R. Worrell.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS.

NEW ENGLAND.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic Conn.; Sec'y, Miss E. E. Flagg, Wellesley, Mass.; Treas., Z. Graves, Harris, Mass.

ALABAMA.—Pres., Prof. Pickens; Sec., G. M. Elliott; Treas., Rev. C. B. Curtis; all of Selma.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., Rev. G. R. Milton, Elgin; Sec., A. H. Hiatt, Jr., Wheaton; Treas., Ezra A. Cook, Chicago.

INDIANA.—Pres., William H. Figg, Reno; Sec., S. L. Cook, Albion; Treas., Benjamin Ulsh, Silver Lake.

IOWA.—Cor. Sec., C. D. Trumbull, Morning Sun; Rec. Sec., W. L. Enlow, Birmingham; Treas., Wm. Crawford, Washington.

KANSAS.—Pres., J. S. T. Milligan, Denison; Sec., S. Hart, Leocompton; Treas., J. A. Torrence, Denison.

MAINE.—Pres., Isaac Jackson, Harrison; Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W. Goddard, West Sidney.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., S. B. Sjoblom, Fergus Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul; Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., B. F. Miller, Eagleville; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec., A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

NEBRASKA.—Pres., S. Austin, Fairmount; Cor. Sec., W. Spooner, Kearney; Treas., J. C. Fye.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., A. A. Hoyt, Littleton; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., Isaac Hyatt, Gilford Village.

NEW YORK.—Pres., Prof. A. R. Dodd, Houghton; Sec., Rev. W. A. Hazlett, Belmont; Treas., P. D. Miller, Newfane.

OHIO.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Parry; Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Seneca; Cor. Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Seneca.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., Nathan Callender, Montdale; Cor. Sec., E. J. Chalfant, York; Treas., J. C. Young, Custer City.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. W. Wood, Baraboo; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie.

HAVE YOU EXAMINED

The list of Books and Tracts for sale by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. Look it over carefully and see if there is not something you want for yourself or for your friend. Send for full catalogue to 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.

The Christian Cynosure.

J. BLANCHARD, EDITOR.

HENRY L. KELLOGG, ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JULY 17, 1890.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

LIONS, SPELLED WITH A "Y."

ELMWOOD HALL,
SARATOGA, N. Y., July 11, 1890. }

Gen. Grant appointed Wm. H. Lyon chairman of the Indian Peace Commission to succeed Hon. Wm. E. Dodge, deceased. This interesting gentleman, who now lives in Brooklyn, was born in Windham county, Conn., which was the home of a numerous Puritan family of Lyons, some of whom, as Gen. Nathaniel Lyon, who fell at Springfield, Mo., warring against the rebel Gen. Price, possessed courage, capacity and conduct which may have given to their ancestors a name taken from the king of the animal creation.

This friend and appointee of Gen. Grant was our companion in travel from Chicago to Schenectady, and as he is an interesting character, the readers of the Cynosure who are young men will thank us for his story.

Mr. William H. Lyon was taught industry and the Lord's Prayer by a pious Connecticut mother. He "picked up chips" for her as soon as he could "go alone," before he could "feed the pigs" or "bring up the cows." He went to the district school, and afterwards to Munson Academy, whence the stream of population bore him to Lyons, N. Y. (which forest town was named for an ancestor), in the then wilderness of western New York. His neighbors insisted he should teach school and "board round" with the parents of his pupils. And as we swept through the town of Clyde he showed us the high school building, with its modest cupola, still standing, to which he was promoted from the little school-house at the "forks of the roads."

This was long years ago. While in that high school he invented the material parts of the telegraph for which Morse received the patent and the fortune; which he lost; as the man who was offered a thousand acres in the site of Chicago for a pair of boots, failed to make the purchase "because he didn't have the boots."

He left Clyde and went into business in New York; rose to be a merchant prince; backed the Union flag with his wealth; sustains the Christian religion by helping a variety of churches; owns land in several western States; has just visited an estate where a thousand acres bears a single crop; has distributed under Grant millions of merchandise and provisions to our Indians, which he insists can and will be civilized by teaching their children to work.

This will do for a farmer's boy from the hard hills of Connecticut, who never joined a secret society or patronized a saloon. May our young men who are coaxed to join the lodges as a means of success in life, consider the life of this good man and representative American.

Gen. Nathaniel Lyons, a cousin of the above gentleman, went to West Point. At the opening of the Rebellion, when Lee, Beauregard, Johnston and others turned traitors to the flag which educated them, Lyon was in command at St. Louis; but rebels were swarming in Camp Jackson there; and the citizens of St. Louis who were not secessionists wished to stand neutral, and put the Union on a level with the Confederacy. A club of leading men met Gen. Lyon for consultation and to urge him to allow Missouri to stand neutral.

Gen. Lyon pointed his finger to each one present in succession and said, "Before I will allow the United States to be sunk to a level with the Rebellion, I will see you and you and you and every man and woman and child in Missouri dead and buried!"

And then added, "Gentlemen, we shall meet here to-morrow evening at 6 o'clock; but my command will take Camp Jackson first!" They did take it at 4 o'clock. That man was a Lion, without the "y."

J. B.

—We hear grand news from the great national gathering of teachers just closed at St. Paul. It was a discussion of the secret society question, and especially the Greek letter end of it, with a very generally expressed condemnation, and this without the effort, collusion or assistance of our well known Anti-masons present. The discussion began with a paper by the president of Iowa Wesleyan University, who has secret societies in his college, but wishes to root them out. As an aid to his effort he wrote to a large number of college presidents for their opinion, which was by a large majority against the pests. We are promised a full account of this note-worthy debate for next week.

BE SURE to read the Business department, page 13, this week and every week.

DEATH LOVES A SHINING MARK.

General Clinton B. Fisk died Wednesday, July 9, at his home in New York city. The announcement sent a thrill through the nation. Few men have been so universally esteemed, for every righteous cause found in him a friend.

The cause of his death was a severe illness which began seven weeks before his death with a relapse of the grip, which attacked him while attending the funeral of his mother at Coldwater, Michigan. He was born in 1828 in York, Livingston Co., N. Y., and was 62 years old. He was raised in Michigan, and though too poor to secure a thorough education, he was diligent in the use of meager opportunities. In 1859 he found a home in St. Louis and was true to his abolition principles and became a worker on the "underground railroad." When the war broke out in 1861 he enlisted in a St. Louis regiment and soon became colonel of the 33rd Missouri regiment. He was made brigadier general in 1862 and brevet major general of volunteers in 1865. After the war he became one of our most conspicuous citizens in connection with philanthropic enterprises. He was assistant commissioner of the Freedman's Bureau in Kentucky and Tennessee under General O. O. Howard. In 1865 he was actively engaged in establishing the Fisk University in Nashville, Tenn., and has been for years president of its board of trustees. He was also a trustee of Dickinson College, of Drew Theological Seminary and of Albion College, Michigan. He was a trustee of the American Missionary Association, and a member of the book committee of the Methodist Episcopal church. From 1873 he was president of the Board of Indian Commissioners.

The alliance of General Fisk with the Prohibition party in 1884 was hailed with joy by all who were at that time seeking the election of St. John. He was nominated for governor of New Jersey in 1886 and received nearly 20,000 votes. At Indianapolis he was unanimously nominated for President by the enthusiastic Prohibition convention.

General Fisk was an earnest Christian who carried his religion into all the concerns of life. He was converted at the age of 12 and grew up into a robust Christian life. In the Methodist church he was a kind of lay bishop, being everywhere loaded with honors in every department of church work.

The following story is told of his Christian tactics while in the army:

The General has always had a great desire to circulate the Scriptures, and during his army life made heavy requisitions on the American Bible Society, so that during his soldiering he helped to distribute 25,000 Bibles and Testaments. He believed in putting the Word of God beside the "Army Tactics."

An amusing story is told of Col. Rice, who called at the General's tent frequently to get copies of the "Army Tactics," and no supply was on hand. One day a box of Testaments came in, and Col. Rice seeing them remarked:

"So the 'Tactics' have come. I'm glad of it."

"Yes; Colonel, the 'Tactics' have come," said Gen. Fisk.

"Can I make my requisition for them in the morning?"

"Certainly."

"General," said the Colonel, "have you read these 'Tactics'?"

"Indeed I have. I have not only read them, but studied them carefully, and I intend to do so, morning and night, while I live."

Col. Rice made his requisition for forty-two copies of Casey's "Tactics." A package of the Testaments was sent over to his headquarters. His officers gathered round to get the new books. Of course there was a moment's disappointment in the group, but it was the means of leading more than one to the saving knowledge of the tactics of the army of the living God.

In our especial reform General Fisk had not become particularly interested. Some four years ago when visited by the editor of the Cynosure he expressed his approval of our work against all secret societies; and in 1888 to the committee of correspondence of the American Anti-secrecy League he responded through his secretary that he was not a member of any secret association. He was supported very heartily by every voter for American principles.

His loss will be as widely lamented as that of almost any other American citizen who could be named, and memorial services will be held in a score of great gatherings during this vacation season.

ARE YOU, kind reader, making those 50,000 subscribers a matter of prayer? If you pray well, you will think well, plan well, and work well for such a list.

PILLOWS FOR LODGE ARMHOLES.

The Religious Telescope of Dayton, Ohio, has served our reform well by reprinting a large part of Joseph Cook's address before the Chicago Conference. But the editor seems to dread the effect of Mr. Cook's fearless language, especially when he says that secret societies "are forbidden to church members by some Christian denominations, AND OUGHT TO BE BY ALL." Such language is so plain a condemnation of the course of the Telescope and the branch of the United Brethren Church which it leads, that the editor is constrained to explain away its force to accommodate the policy-seekers of the denomination. It is at least fortunate that this explanation is a week late, and Mr. Cook's reasonable and Christian argument has been so well digested by the readers of the paper that the editorial laxative can have much less effect.

The Telescope says: "We believe, with Mr. Cook, that many Christian men belong to these orders." Mr. Cook does not say so. He speaks of "good" men and "excellent" men, but it is the Telescope's own inference that he means Christian men by these terms. His argument is that these secret oaths are un-Christian, and he is not so inconsistent as to maintain that a man can take these oaths, understandingly, and adhere to them in the midst of the light thrown upon them by the Word and providence of God, and still maintain a Christian character. The Telescope, however, frankly says that its platform is that each man has the right to decide for himself. He can join the lodge or not just as he thinks best, and for his decision he is responsible to God alone. If that be true, why is not a horse-thief, or pick-pocket, or a seducer, or counterfeiter, or other violator of law, responsible to God alone, if he thinks best to begin the practice of any crime? But, it is said, these fellows injure society. They are responsible to laws which the whole body of society have agreed upon. They must be punished for breaking them. Very well; but cannot the church of Christ be injured as well as society; and if a man sins against God in the matter of worship, is not the church made the painful loser? And has she not the right to say to such a worshiper at false altars and swearer of false oaths, "You have no part or lot in this matter" of Christianity while you so disown Christ? and should these not be separate from the company of those who do love the Lord and follow him? Has not the church this right, if society may say to offenders, You cannot stay with other men whom you harm; you must be shut up in prison?

We are thankful that the editor of the Telescope urges his readers to "read carefully Mr. Cook's lecture." That is good advice; why necessary to modify and explain and make exceptions, and with such exceeding care repeat that each man must be a law unto himself respecting the lodge? Why, unless the supporters of the Telescope are turned squarely on the heel and now face away from their former position of SEPARATION FROM THE LODGE, which is the only defensible one from the Gospel standpoint. Mr. Cook plainly puts it in the line of DUTY, that the churches should thus be separate from the lodge altars. The Telescope commends his address, but directly finds a soft place for lodge members to fall upon. This is not a defense of the truth, for which religious papers are founded; it is making easy the path of sin, so that men may go quick to death.

ODD-FELLOWSHIP AGAINST CHRIST.

"So these nations feared the Lord and served their graven images." 2 Kings. 17:41.

The following from the report of the semi-annual session of the Grand Lodge of the I. O. O. F., of Massachusetts, Feb. 14, 1889, gives a marked illustration of the character of the mixed religion of the Samaritans and of its extensive prevalence in our own land:

"Question.—Is it lawful for a chaplain to commence and finish his prayer in the name of Christ?

"Answer.—Our order only requires the belief in the existence of a Supreme Being as a qualification for membership, and has no affinity with any religious sect, or system of faith; hence everything savoring of sectarianism is not to be tolerated. The words system of faith or sect do not have reference merely to sects within the pale of Christianity, but have a far broader significance, and include all the religions of the world. In this sense Christianity is a sect; hence it is inexpedient and unwise and, I think, unlawful to make prominent reference to it in the lodge work."

On this we notice 1: that it is a clear statement of the religion of Odd-fellowship and of Freemasonry, to which half a million of each of these orders are committed, and among this million of men there is a large number of members of churches, and professed ministers of the Gospel of Christ.

2. The obvious teaching is that true religion and acceptable worship do not of necessity imply any recognition of Christ or any dependence on him as an Intercessor or Advocate with the Father; and that whatever may be the ground of our salvation the confession of Christ before men is not the indispensable prerequisite.

3. It teaches that for all practical purposes one religion is as good as another; that it is ethics, and not faith that justifies men; that they are saved by the "works of the law," rather than by a Divine Sacrifice for sin.

4. It teaches that Christianity is but one of the sects into which religion is divided, and while it is the right of all men to choose which of these sects they will be united with, whether Christian, Mohammedan or Parsee, no one has a right to manifest a sectarian spirit by giving special prominence to his religion. He may be a Christian if he will; but he must keep his Christianity out of the lodge. His worship there must be such as those who hate his divine Saviour can partake of.

5. We see the obvious influence of these orders on our public school system. The Bible teaches Christianity. But if Christianity is sectarian, then the Bible must be ruled out of our public schools, and such decisions as that of the Supreme Court of Wisconsin are likely to be repeated in each of the other States. The two-fold enemy of our public school system and of our Christian civilization is False Religion and Infidelity. The right wing of this mighty host is the Roman church. The left wing is the vast army of secretists who hold and teach the doctrines of the Odd-fellows and Freemasons that Christianity has no pre-eminence over any other of the "sects."

TEMPLE BUILDING.

The Chicago press has lately given us illustrations of two immense structures which are planned for erection in this city. The first is a house of Masonry planned by Norman T. Gassette, "Commandant-of-the-Lines" in the great fiasco of the Knight Templars in this city ten years ago. The ex-commandant has been in the real estate business ever since and his experience in this line has had a kind of effervescent influence on his Masonry: or possibly the two have had some kind of a soda-fountain chemical affinity. At least they have begotten in the chimerical brain of Mr. Gassette a scheme as vast as his big Masonic parade, and more difficult of execution. The failure of 1880 is a matter of history; we hope to live to say the same of his new project, which is no less than a Masonic temple that shall eclipse in altitude and cost anything of the kind the world has ever known. The pictures of this proposed temple given in the daily papers remind us of the pictures of the castle of "Diabolus" we sometimes see in Bunyan's "Holy War"—a huge, ungainly, uncouth structure, without grace, though not without symmetry, its vast height and wearisome exterior producing a feeling of gloom and oppression. Gassette hopes to raise over $2,000,000 for this structure, and raise it twenty stories or some 250 feet in air. The two upper stories will be for lodge use, the rest for business.

We turn with great relief from the survey of this cheerless Masonic structure to the account of another temple upon whose foundations work has already begun in this city. The Temperance Temple of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union will soon begin to rise above the ground level and bear a silent testimony for everything true and noble and good. Every stone will have a tongue to speak out of its wall against the corruption and vice of this great city. Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, to whom the world will be indebted for this noble enterprise, has shown a singular devotion to this work, and has been as nobly sustained by our best American women. Marshall Field, our "merchant prince," gives the use of the ground on the corner of LaSalle and Monroe streets for $40,000 annual rental for 200 years. The building itself will cost some $800,000, a handsome structure of ten stories which the architects intend to make their masterpiece in construction and convenience of interior arrangement. The contract for the building is let and it is to be completed by May, 1892. In its construction every citizen of Chicago should have an honorable pride. It will not only be one of our finest buildings—and there are not a few already to be seen here—but it will stand as a continual protest against Cregierism, the saloon, the social vice, the gambling den and the lodge. There is nothing in the constitution and practice of the W. C. T. U. which should not loudly cry against every one of these great but popular evils. The Masonic temple planned by Mr. Gassette we do not expect ever to see completed,—we hope not begun. Its site alone is to cost nearly a million; and before the sum is raised to finish it we pray for such a cyclone of public opinion enlightened by the fear of God as shall forever humble the towering ambition of its projectors. The crimes against mankind which the Temperance Temple will forbid this would foster. Let the curse of Babylon be on it. See Jeremiah 51st chapter, especially verses 53 to 58.

—A lady of this city who has lately read Ronayne's "Master's Carpet" was especially impressed with the vigorous and striking comparison of Romanism with Freemasonry. She wishes her judgment published that the book should be in every Sabbath-school library in the land; and the Cynosure agrees with her.

—The commendation of the Cynosure by the Reformed Presbyterian Synod was an act of kindness and appreciation which will be remembered with gratitude. It will be our constant endeavor and prayer to make the organ of the National Christian Association worthy the hearty approval of all who pray and labor for the coming of the kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ and the defeat of all his enemies.

—The editor of the Living Way, Memphis, is aroused and indignant at the folly of the colored people of that city. A wife-murderer was hung, and the body was taken to the Beale St. Baptist church to lie in state and receive a grand funeral service. Bro. Brinkley speaks with great earnestness against paying honor to the memory of a criminal, whatever his state of contrition and humility for his misdeeds.

—The great students' meeting at Northfield is not to be forgotten. Through the efforts of Bro. J. P. Stoddard a good selection of documents respecting American paganism were sent for distribution among them. The student's Bureau of Correspondence will also be represented and will gain, we hope, many friends who will co-operate in its important work. The Cynosure expects two or three letters from the conference that will be welcome reading.

—The letter of Rev. Mr. Howie we take pleasure in commending to any who have been led into any misapprehension by the letter of Rev. Mr. Milligan. At the same time none must suppose from Mr. Howie's language that he places a political party before the church. This he does not do, though it is true, as he says, that the party is in advance of some churches in some lines of practical Christianity. Let us all be admonished also to be diligent in efforts to inform Prohibitionists on cognate lines of reform to that which directly interests them. Let not our light be under a bushel.

PERSONAL NOTES.

—Bro. C. F. Hawley is in Iowa spending several weeks. We do not know his location.

—Bro. W. B. Stoddard writes of intense heat in Washington city, the thermometer ranging from 105 to 110 in the shade for several days. Great physical prostration results throughout the city.

—Our editor reached Saratoga Springs on Wednesday evening last and is enjoying the celebrated waters of the place which have always benefited him. He will after a few days pass on through Vermont and Massachusetts.

—Bro. L. G. Jordan, who represented the N. C. A. in several months' work in Mississippi some two years ago, is striking hard for prohibition in Nebraska. The Omaha Leader notices his work in Sarpy county, with enthusiastic meetings at Bellevue, Springfield, Gretna and Papillion.

—Rev. S. F. Porter, our college agent, has his vacation along with the institutions which he has been visiting. He has been a few weeks in this city, but has just started for Dakota where he will assist some needy church during the summer months. He carries on the way a few days with Bro. M. L. Worcester of Kingston, Ill.

—Pres. C. A. Blanchard with Mrs. Blanchard and Prof. H. A. Fischer of Wheaton College attended the National Teacher's convention at St. Paul last week. On Wednesday Pres. Blanchard addressed the department of Higher Education on the topic, "What Have the People to ask of the College?" He argued that college men should be more emphatically leaders of public opinion and public enterprise than now.

—Bro. J. F. Browne, formerly lecturer in Illinois and Wisconsin, and more lately teaching in New Iberia, La., called on the Cynosure last Tuesday, going on to Odell, Ill., next day. He desires to study next year in some institution of northern Illinois where he can at the same time be preaching the Gospel. During the last year he has attended Antioch College, at Yellow Springs, Ohio. Until September he will be free to lecture on the lodge in northern Illinois or southern Wisconsin. He may be addressed at Martin, Greene Co., Wis. There are many who remember his very able addresses when before in the lecture field. We cordially recommend him to the friends in these States and urge that he be kept busy for a few weeks.

—The Union Signal publishes the following note of Bro. Gladwin's work on the Pacific coast. We heard last from him at Portland, Oregon: "During Mr. Gladwin's recent tour of lectures in California, he gave several addresses for the W. C. T. U. The State president, Mrs. Rosamond R. Johnson, writes thus of his work: 'It is with pleasure that I introduce the Rev. W. J. Gladwin, missionary to India, and co-editor of the Banner of Asia, who always talks to the point concerning the curses of opium and liquor, as he has seen them in the Orient, as well as on our occidental shores.' Mr. Gladwin expects to labor for some months in Iowa, and the adjoining States. He has had eighteen years' experience in foreign mission work, and his addresses are highly commended."

An oculist in New York recently answering inquiries, said that wearing eye-glasses, as many do, because they think it adds to their personal appearance, is very hurtful, as is also the use of spectacles, when needed, that are not properly selected. But he added: "The greatest enemy to the eyes of the young men is the cigarette. Recently a disease has appeared among smokers which is dangerous, and after careful investigation the best authorities, who for a long time were at a loss to understand the peculiar malady, have traced it to the small, paper-covered tobacco sticks. It is now known as the 'cigarette eye,' and can be cured only by long treatment. Its symptoms are dimness and film-like gathering over the eye, which appears and disappears at intervals. If young men continue to smoke cigarettes excessively, they may expect to be afflicted with this troublesome disease; and it is not relieved by spectacles."

THE HOME.

IN ERROR.

"Give me, this day, dear Lord," I cried,
 "Some blessed station near Thy side;
 "Some work in very deed for Thee,
 That I may know Thy need of me."
 Thus pleading, praying, up and down
 I wandered, searching field and town,
 Intent on task, the very best
 Eluding still my eager quest.
 And morn to noonday brightened; night
 Drew slowly towards the fading height.
 Till I, low kneeling at the throne
 With empty hands, made weary moan:
 "Thou hadst not any room for me?
 No work was mine, dear Christ, for Thee?"
 Then sudden on my blurring sight
 Swept majesty and love and light.
 The Master stood before me there
 In conscious answer to my prayer.
 He touched my eyes. In shame I blushed,
 In shame my weak complaining hushed!
 For lo! all day, the swift hours through,
 The work, Christ given, for me to do
 In mine own house had slighted been,
 And I, convicted so of sin,
 Could only lift my look to His,
 The grace of pardon ask for this,
 That I had wandered far and wide,
 Instead of watching at His side;
 That I had yet to learn how sweet
 The home tasks at the Master's feet.

—Margaret E. Sangster.

IS THE BIBLE INSPIRED OF GOD?

Says one, "I think that the Bible may be a true history, but that is no proof of its inspiration. It does not require divine inspiration to write a true history." So you think it an easy matter to tell the truth, do you? I wish you could make other people think so. Suppose you go and read a file of the newspapers published just before the last election, and see if you do not think it requires divine inspiration to tell the truth, or even to find it out after it is told. Truth is mighty hard to get at, as you can see by perusing the daily papers on the eve of an election.

There are certain things in the Bible which, to my mind, bear the impress of Divinity. A skeptic will tell you what a race of old sinners we read about in the Bible! Noah got drunk; David was guilty of adultery and murder; Solomon was an idolater, and wrought folly; Peter denied his Lord, and Judas sold him for thirty pieces of silver; all these people that the Bible tells about so much to us, are a pretty set of men!

Very well; what kind of men do you expect to read about in the Bible? Noah got drunk. Is that strange? Did no one else ever get drunk? Peter cursed and swore. Are there not other men who curse and swear? Judas, an apostle, sold his Lord, who said he had chosen twelve and one of them was a devil. Do you not sometimes find a Judas in the church even now-a-days? One in twelve was a thief and a traitor then; and we need not be surprised if we find about the same average now.

But you seem to think that when you read about a man in the Bible he is sure to be free from all kinds of errors, frailties, faults and sins. You have formed this idea of men from reading in Sunday-school books about good children, who usually die young; or perusing excellent biographies, which, as you read them, cause you to exclaim, "I wish I could be as good as that person was, but I never shall." No, I presume you never will, and if you knew the whole story about the person you might not feel so deeply on the subject.

Do you suppose that if the Bible had been written by some learned doctor, revised by a committee of eminent divines, and published by some great religious society, we should ever have heard of Noah's drunkenness, of Abraham's deception, of Lot's disgrace, of Jacob's cheating, of Paul and Barnabas' quarreling, or of Peter's lying, cursing, or dissembling? Not at all. The good men, when they came to such an incident, would have said, "There is no use in saying anything about that. It is all past and gone; it will not help anything, and it will only hurt the cause." If a committee of such eminent divines had prepared the Bible, you would have had a biography of men whose characters were patterns of piety, and propriety, instead of poor sinners, as they were. Sometimes a man writes his own diary and happens to leave it for some one to print after he is dead; but he leaves out all the mean tricks he ever did, and puts in all the good acts he can think of; and you read the pages, filled with astonishment, and think, "What a wonderfully good man he was!" But when the Almighty writes a man's life he tells the truth about him; and there are not many persons who would want their lives printed if the Almighty wrote them.

You find a man who will tell the truth about kings, warriors, princes, and rulers to-day, and you may be quite sure that he has within him the power of the Holy Ghost. And a book which tells the faults of those who wrote it, and which tells you that "there is none righteous, no, not one," bears in it the marks of a true book; for we all know that men have faults, and failings, and sins; and among all the men whose lives are recorded in that book, each man has some defect, some blot, except one, and that is "the man Christ Jesus."—From The Inspiration of The Bible, by H. L. Hastings.

"I THIRSTED STILL."

The following incident will show how God is longed for as the true source of happiness, even by the poor Hindoo. A missionary and his wife in India itinerating among the villages connected with their station, passed a few days in the home of one of the catechists. A little room, a kind of "prophet's chamber," with a cot, a stool, and a lamp stick, had been prepared for them. The missionary had gone on to another village, his wife remaining behind. Having spent a somewhat tiring day, she was about retiring for the night, when an old man came to her, saying, "Salaam, ma'am, I have many words to say to you, I have much to tell you, and I must tell you. Please allow Moses and his daughter to sit by while I speak to you."

So Moses and his daughter and the old man sat down on a mat, and the lady seated herself on the side of the cot to listen. The room was but dimly lighted by the tiny lamp fixed to the stick. As the old man went on with his story, a light not of earth seemed to fill the room."

"Salaam, ma'am, I am an old man. Gray hairs have long been on our head, and for many years I was a sorrowful man. I worshiped idols as my fathers and grandfathers had done; but I had no comfort; I wanted something more. I thirsted, oh, how I thirsted for something better than my idols could give. I went to a goaroor; I told him I wanted God—to see God. He told me to perform ceremonies and repeat muntrums. I did this, but it was like digging in a dry well; not one drop of water came, and I thirsted still.

"I went to a Brahmin. He told me to wash the Brahmin's feet and drink the water, and perform many other abominable rites. I obeyed him; but, alas! without effect, and I thirsted still.

"Then I was told to visit some holy places and take money and clothes to the priests, and they would show me their god. This I did, and many a weary mile I travelled, hungry and thirsty; but the hope of gaining what I wished helped me on, and mile after mile I journeyed. But this, too, was all in vain; I thirsted still.

"In despair I came back to my own village, thinking it was of no use; I must give up. But, oh, ma'am, God had mercy on my weary, thirsty soul. One day I met this man" pointing to Moses, "and he gave me a little book. I read in it these words (John 4: 14): 'Whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst.' I read, I stopped, I asked, 'Who is this "I" that will give this water?' Oh, ma'am, I can never tell what I felt as I read these words again and again. I can say no more now." Here the dear man broke down, and, turning to Moses's daughter, said, "Child, sing."

She had a peculiarly sweet voice, and started a Telugu hymn on the loveliness of Christ. He soon joined in, his voice tremulous with emotion. We all sang. It was a small and humble choir, but the music was such as angels love to listen to. After we had sung, he began to speak again.

"Well, ma'am, I went to Moses and asked him what these words meant. He said it meant the well of salvation opened by Jesus Christ. 'Oh,' I said, 'will He give me the water?' He said, 'Yes; and I believed, and found it was quite true. Oh, lady, lady, how many wells I had dug in, but they were all dry. But this well of salvation through Jesus bubbles up and up. I feel it now.' And again he began to sing. He said: 'I have written some hymns about Jesus Christ. May I sing one of them?' This he did. Then he said, 'Now I must confess Christ before the world, and be baptized in that precious name.'

"Yes, father," said Moses, "but you know you will lose your caste then."

"Ay, my son, I know it, I know it, and my own sons will, perhaps, not allow me to live in my own house. But never mind, I shall find a corner to live somewhere. Jesus will take care of me. The water will still spring up to everlasting life."

Midnight passed ere he finished the "many words" he had to say. The oil in the little lamp was well-nigh consumed, but still he lingered. It seemed as though he would never tire of talking of the love of Christ.

Some time after this he was baptized. Truly in losing his caste he lost his home. His sons turned him out of his house, but the catechist, Moses, took him in; as he said, he found "a corner to live in." He was so anxious to tell others of the "living water" that he used to travel from one village to another and sing Christian songs, telling of the love of Christ. When he grew blind and unable to guide himself he paid a boy a small sum to guide him about and read the Scriptures to the people. After a while he fell ill. Moses nursed and cared for him till he passed away to see Him for whom his soul had thirsted; and now what draughts of joy will he drink from the "river of the water of life."—London Christian.

A BABY ORGAN IN ASIA.

BY REV. G. H. KRIKORIAN, YOZGAT, ASIA MINOR.

This organ is a gift to our mission by our beloved Bible class, well known for many years as "Mark Ayer's Bible Class" in the First Congregational Church of Chicago, of which class I had the pleasure of being a member while attending the Chicago Theological Seminary. With a desire to keep up our relation with them, and to show their interest to our work the young people of the class voted upon to present this Mason and Hamlin "baby organ" to be used in our field.

In accordance with the desire of our young friends we have consecrated this organ to a service quite in keeping with the nature and spirit of the gift and its givers. There is, in our field, a community where there are some twelve villages within one to six miles distance from each other. In some of these villages we have congregations, in others only the beginnings of one; while the rest have simply a good leaven of truth put in them. This is eminently a good community, for its fields are ripe for the sickle of the Christian reapers. At any of these villages a missionary can have a good chance to preach the Gospel in their own churches and public places.

At Eglenje is the home of our baby organ, where we have the best congregation; and it being at the center of this community it is easy to carry the organ to other villages when necessary. This is the mission field of our baby organ; and now let me give you some items of interest about its mission in this community.

What I have witnessed at Eglenje about the peculiar mode of carrying the organ to the church was quite suggestive of the mode of carrying the "Ark of the Covenant" in the olden times. It was one Sabbath morning, and the beating of a piece of steel was announcing the time of the meeting. But none moved from their places at the first or even at the second beating of the steel. Then they raised the baby organ upon the shoulders of young men to take it from the house of the minister to the church. As soon as the people saw the organ coming they all crowded around it and from all directions began to flock into the meeting house. We had an interesting meeting, and after the service the organ was carried back to its place. I was informed by the minister that such is the respect of the villagers for the organ that whenever they carry it to the church, they are sure to get a good audience, and when the organ stays at home few of the "outside" people will attend the meeting.

In case of holding special services or making missionary tours the organ is carried to other villages, and adds much to the interest. Wherever it is taken, it is sure to attract crowds to listen to the preaching of the Gospel. In January we appointed one of our young men, a member of our High School and of the Christian Endeavor Society, to one of these villages to teach school. He has, beside teaching, been doing excellent work in preaching and carrying on missionary campaigns with our baby organ. An interesting account of such meetings came to us recently. They had preaching at Eglenje (Lodging-place) on Sabbath morning; and in the afternoon they carried the organ to Saatli (Healthy) where they had communion services. In spite of all opposition and devices of the priest to keep the people back from attending these services, the attraction of the organ compelled the people to come to listen to its music and hear the preaching. The charms of music, and the mode of carrying it, would almost arouse the whole village wherever it went. On Monday our young teacher wanted to carry the organ to Kediler (the Cats), the village where he is laboring, and they had to pass through another village called Satchli (Hairy). The attention of the people was attracted when the organ passed through this village; but did not at first know what it was; but when they learned that it was the baby organ, they regretted not causing the organ to stop that they might hear it played. So, the chief men of the town, holding a meeting together, sent a request to Kediler to please to pass the organ through their village; they would gladly open their church for a special service to listen to the music and preaching. We have no work at this place; but such is the attraction of our baby organ that it prepares the hearts of the people to listen to the preaching of the Gospel. Now, appeals come from surrounding villages that they want to have the organ visit their villages.

Wherever we make missionary tours among these villages, and hold special services at different places, our baby organ will do for us an invaluable service. Wherever we find the strongholds of the enemy set against the entrance of the Gospel truth, and when the enemies of truth increase and become fierce, then we can, by raising this "ark," successfully carry on the campaign of the New Covenant, i. e., "salvation in Christ Jesus," to the hearts of the people. We feel that our baby organ has a good mission in this community. Will not our Christian friends pray for our mission?

THE INELEGANCE OF HURRY.

Haste which the occasion demands is never undignified. A fireman running to a fire is a rather inspiring sight. We would despise him if he walked. It is rushing in the ordinary affairs of life which demand deliberation, steadiness, control, which destroys dignity and so destroys good manners. The man in a hurry we feel at once is so because he is not master of the situation. He would not be compelled to gorge his breakfast, to walk so fast that he looks like an animated wagon wheel, or to slight his work if he had his affairs in control. The effect of leisure on conversation is magical. Not driven to conclusions, the subject may be looked at on all sides. The fancy may play with it, the reason weigh it, the memory enrich it, the judgment pronounce upon it. The mind is never so true, so subtle, so discriminating as when working spontaneously and leisurely. When it must pounce down on its ideas and bear away only what it can snatch in the instant, it must miss all more delicate meanings, larger generalizations, and keener comparisons.—Sel.

Make life a ministry of love, and it will always be worth living.—Robert Browning.

When men are rightly occupied, then amusements grow out of their work as color petals out of a fruitful flower; when they are faithfully helpful and compassionate, all their emotions become sturdy, deep, perpetual and vivifying to the soul as the natural pulse of the body.—John Ruskin.

TEMPERANCE.

SHIPPED THE LIQUOR BACK.

The citizens' committee of 100 at Ottawa, Kansas, unhitched the horses attached to a wagon loaded with "original packages," which was about to be unloaded and transferred to the store, and ran the wagon back to the depot. There the packages were reshipped to the house in Kansas City, where they came from. The committee has a watch upon another consignment which is at the depot. It is thought the agents will replevin the goods. In case they do an indemnity bond is ready and any damage the court or jury may award will be paid.

CHICAGO AND THE SALOON.

Rev. Charles Boaz, pastor of Bethany Baptist church in this city, is preaching a series of sermons on "National Perils." His subject was lately "The Saloon in Politics." He said that the Republic rested upon the foundation of the church, the school, the press, and the home. To secure prosperity and good order all legislation should be pure and honest—impossible conditions so long as the saloon remained the dominant, demoralizing element in our government.

That the liquor interest controlled legislation the speaker showed by citing the manner in which the law-making powers treated all petitions and appeals made by Christian organizations, and the fact that neither political party had the courage to embody anything in its platform looking to the annihilation of the liquor traffic.

Mr. Boaz continued: "The fearful power of this liquor interest is seen most clearly in our municipal government, where the saloons and gambling houses run riot without hinderance." The reasons he offered for this disgraceful state of affairs were the great number of aldermen who were saloon-keepers; the fact that these men were easily bought; the great foreign element without conscience or principle, who would sell their vote for a drink, and the fact that the balance of the political power lay in the hands of the saloon element. He forcibly brought into notice the fact that gambling houses were run in spite of the law and in the face of the earnest protest of all good citizens, and he deplored the condition of a municipal government that could uphold such flagrant lawlessness and disregard the efforts of the Daily News and reputable private citizens toward the destruction of these gambling dens. He illustrated the power of the saloon vote by the mayoralty contest a few years ago, when the churches of the city united all their forces for a fight upon the corrupt administration and found themselves overwhelmingly defeated by Carter Harrison and the saloon element.

Continuing, Mr. Boaz said: "The same lamentable condition exists to-day. The mayor is the creature of the liquor interests and to them he looks for his maintenance in office. As a voice of the best people of Chicago the Daily News has again and again pointed out the lawless gambling houses to the city administration, but the mayor and his men have shut their eyes to all such information. There is a sentiment deep-seated and unwavering among the intelligent citizens of Chicago that will uphold this voice against the corruption of our municipal affairs. This city problem is but a phase of a great national question upon which the American people must render a verdict. It is the question of the saloon, an institution which is undermining our liberties, and which, if it is not checked by the strong power of the people, will ruin us as a nation."

DRINKING A FARM.

My homeless friend with the chromatic nose, while you are stirring up the sugar in a ten-cent glass of gin, let me give you a fact to wash down with it. You may say you have longed for years for the free, independent life of the farmer, but have never been able to get enough money together to buy a farm. But this is just where you are mistaken. For several years you have been drinking a good improved farm at the rate of 100 square feet a gulp. If you doubt this statement, figure it out yourself. An acre of land contains 43,560 square feet. Estimating for convenience the land at $43.56 per acre, you will see that it brings the land to just one mill per square foot, one cent for ten square feet. Now pour down the fiery dose and imagine you are swallowing a strawberry patch. Call in five of your friends and have them help you gulp down that 500-foot garden. Get on a prolonged spree some day and see how long a time it requires to swallow a pasture large enough to feed a cow. Put down that glass of gin; there's dirt in it—100 feet of good rich dirt, worth $43.56 per acre.—R. Burdette.

For every rich rum seller there must be 100 poor drunkards. For every fortune gained in the rum traffic a score of fortunes must be lost by its patrons. For every rum seller riding in his carriage, we may expect to find 100 feeble women bending over the wash tub, 100 helpless children thinly clad, poorly shod, plodding their way through snow and slush, and seeking their scanty sustenance by toil or beggary.—Safeguard.

The trend of the temperance movement is well illustrated by the late Temperance Congress in New York. Third party Prohibitionists have never been more than a fraction of the great temperance host. But though only a fraction they are its animating spirit. They were in a large majority in this congress because they had the intense interest that caused them to attend. They are to the temperance what the radical Abolitionists were to the anti-slavery reform. They were a still smaller fraction, but were none the less the very soul of the great movement, which culminated in the emancipation of four millions of slaves. Intense earnestness in any undertaking gives to men a power out of all proportion to their numbers. That the Prohibition party, as such, will ever include a majority of American voters is highly improbable. That they will compel the nation to destroy the liquor traffic is quite as probable as that the Abolitionists should have overthrown slavery.

The hesitancy and delay in passing the Senate bill amending the Inter-state Commerce law, so as to give the States power to control the liquor traffic when carried on in "original packages," shows the subserviency of the House of Representatives to the liquor interests, and their blindness even to political considerations. The Republicans of the House have now an opportunity to do something for temperance that will command the approval of all classes of temperance people, whether prohibitionists, believers in local option, or high license. If they shall fail to meet the crisis, they will alienate the great mass of Christian men and women all over the land. So far as the Republican party is concerned the issue is fairly made up. It is free whisky everywhere or the right of restriction and prohibition. There can be no doubt as to the attitude of the great majority of American people of all parties on such an issue. We repeat that if the House fails to pass this measure, there will be a revolt against party supremacy, that has not been surpassed in many years.

The International Fair and Exposition to be held in Detroit, from August 26 to September 5, sets a good example to the Columbian Exposition by rigidly excluding gambling and liquor selling from its grounds. To prevent evasions of its temperance rules, the association puts in all its contracts and licenses for restaurant and other refreshment privileges this notice: "All forms of gambling and selling of intoxicating liquors prohibited. This license may be revoked by order of the secretary for violation of above rules." Also the further warning: "Accepted by—subject to the above conditions.—Sig." As this great International Fair was attended last year by a quarter of a million of people, and a much larger attendance is expected this year, many thousands of dollars have been vainly offered the managers for privileges to sell intoxicating beverages, and also many thousands for licenses for various gambling devices. Not only is this an example to be commended, it also shows great advance in Christian and temperance principles, when such a course is adopted by managers of a great exposition, not only because it is right, but because as shrewd, experienced business men, they consider it the policy best calculated to attract great numbers of well-to-do people from all over the continent.—The Union Signal.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE NEW TESTAMENT.

LESSON IV. -Third Quarter.-July 27.

SUBJECT.—Lost and Found.—Luke 15: 1-10.

GOLDEN TEXT.—There is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth.—Luke 15: 10.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

DAILY READINGS.—M.—Luke 15: 1-10. T.—Matt. 18: 1-14. W.—John 10: 1-21. T.—John 10: 22-42. F.—John 3: 1-17. S.—Ezek. 34: 1-16. S.—Ps. 23: 1-6.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. The complaint of the Pharisees.—vs. 1, 2. The narrow, self-righteous spirit which made the Pharisees oppose Christ at every turn of his public ministry we find cropping out in the times of the apostles; and what is more surprising, among those who called themselves Christians. The Jewish converts found fault with Paul because he ate with uncircumcised Gentiles, and if we follow in the footsteps of Christ, seeking always and everywhere to save the lost, we shall also without doubt suffer from the same prejudice. Rumsellers may be called the publicans of our day. Why are they worse than the men who give them their licenses to sell, but who would on no account meet them in a social way or treat them as friends and equals? Great evils are apt to create two classes—publicans and Pharisees,—the men who get their living by means of these evils, and men who, though far above them socially and religiously, are, by their guilty indifference, partners in the same. It is noticeable that while the scribes and Pharisees were all the time putting their own false construction on everything Christ said and did, we never read that publicans and sinners so misunderstood him, or even thought that because he thus freely associated with them he condoned their sin. The degraded and the fallen have always been quickest to respond to the appeal of Christian love, and the least apt to put their own false interpretations on the Gospel doctrines.

2. The lost sheep.—vs. 3-7. These sinners who thronged to hear Christ did not go up to the temple on feast days, nor attend the synagogue service, nor do any of the other things expected of devout Israelites. The Pharisees kept the letter of the law without the spirit. The publicans had broken away from both the formal observance and the truth underlying it. Our cities, our large towns, our country hamlets are full of these lapsed classes—people who never go to church, who never read the Bible, perhaps have none in their dwellings; and the great problem with which Christianity has to deal is how to reach these ever-increasing lost sheep and win them back to the fold. The answer will be found in studying the methods of the Good Shepherd. He goes after them. Those who are still in the fold, who have Christian friends and religious influences all about them can come to him, but those who have strayed away from the sound of church bells and all the means of grace will never return unless they are sought. It would be well if the church would raise a higher barrier between herself and the world; if she would mend the gaps in her hedges and thus prevent the sheep from straying. Worldly amusements, fairs, and Sunday-school theatricals have too often been the hole through which the innocent lambs have wandered off and been lost forever; while in allowing the rival religion of the lodge she breaks down her own walls and leaves her fold free for the enemy to enter. No other single cause has done so much to draw away our young men from the sanctuary and keep them outside of all religious influences which might act on their lives and draw them to Christ. The lodge question is therefore the most important that confronts the church to-day, because it not only directly concerns her prosperity but her very life. And indeed when the church takes the wrong side or is indifferent to the claims of temperance, labor, or any moral question, her hedges are broken down. What is to keep out the destroyer?

3. The lost silver.—vs. 8-10. The sheep could suffer—could feel the pangs of hunger and thirst. The very fact that it had strayed away showed that it was possessed of life. A backslider must have some spiritual life or he couldn't backslide. The inanimate silver lost without its own volition may represent the class in which no breath of spiritual life has ever stirred. It is wonderful to think of God as rejoicing over such and calling all heaven to rejoice with him. Should it not stimulate us to do all we can to save the lost, and thus cause joy in heaven?

HELPFUL THOUGHTS FROM PELOUBET.

JOY OVER THE REPENTING SINNER.—Verse 7 opens a window in heaven from which a ray of light comes, revealing (1) the employments and interest of heaven. The angels are ministering spirits, missionaries, doing all they can for the salvation of men. (Heb. 1: 14.) (2) The value of the soul. Cities and empires may rise and fall, but nothing is said of joy in heaven over it, but there is joy all through heaven over one soul saved. (3) The awful danger of the sinner. Deliverance from some small pain or danger would occasion no such joy. The greatness of the joy is a measure of the greatness of the danger. (4) We see here the desire of God and of all holy beings for the salvation of men. (Ezek. 18: 31, 32.) (5) It shows there is no other way of salvation. (6) Some have strongly felt the objection to the Gospel that it is not probable that the Son of the infinite God would leave all the measureless stars without redemption, and come to this little world which is but a mote in the sunbeam compared with other worlds, and here become man and die for us, the almost invisible atoms in this obscure corner of the universe. But here the enigma is solved. Wherever the lost are, there he must go for them. The hearts of all the family go after the lost one.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—While lecturing before the Moody Bible Institute in this city, Prof. Moorehead of Xenia, O., occasionally held religious services with the Italians and addressed them in their own tongue.

—Major Whittle, the well-known evangelist, has just returned to this country after a prolonged tour in Great Britain. He arrived in New York June 28, and repaired at once to Northfield, Mass. He is now holding daily meetings in the Bible Institute of the Chicago Evangelization Society. The hour of his lecture is from 11 A. M. until noon. Sabbath morning in the Chicago Avenue church he delivered a discourse before a large audience. In the evening he preached at the Clybourn Avenue Mission church. Major Whittle will remain here until the end of July, when he will again join Mr. Moody at Northfield, Mass., to assist in the great summer convention.

—Results of the enthusiasm developed by the volunteer missionary movement among students are found in the fact that fifty-three new appointments to foreign missionary service have been made by the American Board since last October, which is one in excess of the exceptionally high number appointed during the whole of the preceding year; and in the sending of seven of the thirty-nine graduates of the McCormick Presbyterian Theological Seminary, at Chicago, to the foreign field. At Oberlin there are one hundred student missionary volunteers.

—According to the latest official report, the United States, Great Britain, Germany and Holland, the four countries that have done most to spread the Bible in Asia, Africa and the Pacific, now send the most rum to these same people. Eight hundred and seven thousand four hundred and seventy-four gallons of rum went to the Congo Free States from this country last year, most of it from Boston.

—Less than one hundred years ago was organized the first Protestant Foreign Missionary Society. Now there are more than 200 such societies. These have a force of more than 7,000 missionaries and assistant missionaries, and more than 35,000 native helpers, of whom 3,000 are ordained. Thirty years ago there was not a Woman's Foreign Missionary Society in America. Now there are thirty-nine, with 25,000 auxiliaries, more than 8,000 children's bands, and an aggregate income of more than $1,730,000.

—Dr. George F. Pentecost will remain during most of the summer at Waterbury, Conn., and will then proceed to India.

—Mr. Moody announces that gifts amounting to $110,000 have been received by his Mount Hermon and Northfield Seminary schools, $10,000 to come from O. H. Greenleaf of Springfield, Mass.; $50,000 promised by Frederick Billings of Woodstock, Vt., and $50,000 willed by the late D. M. Weston.

—The closing consecration meeting in connection with the recent International Christian Endeavor Convention at St. Louis will never be forgotten by those present. Nearly seven thousand people were present. The utmost solemnity prevailed and the spirit of eager desire for better service on the part of the throngs of young people could be felt. Many State delegations unitedly pledged themselves to Christ's work.

—Rev. Dr. Wm. M. Taylor, of the Broadway Tabernacle, New York, with characteristic enthusiasm, has undertaken the task of raising a fund for aged Congregational ministers, and has just returned from the West, where he secured $6,000 for this purpose. His own people have given $3,000 more, and these subscriptions render available the $10,000 legacy of Mr. Knowles, of Worcester. Dr. Taylor does not intend to rest until the fund amounts to $100,000.

—Elder R. E. Howell, minister of the Christian church, at Illiopolis, Ill., has resigned and gone to Springfield, Mo. His difficulty with the church was caused by his remaining away from the weekly prayer-meeting in order to play croquet.

—When the Louisiana Lottery Company was striving last winter to get hold of North Dakota for their immoral purposes, the chaplain of the House, Rev. James M. Anderson, prayed against the scheme and called a meeting in his unfinished church to protest against it even under threats of withdrawal of support. The story was told in the General Assembly, and a member was moved to call Mr. Anderson aside and present him with a check for $1,000 to finish his church.—Christian Statesman.

—The total number of Young Men's Christian Associations in the United States and Canada is 1,341; 305 of these are in colleges; 82 are railroad branches; 10 German branches; 36 among colored young men; and 11 among Indians. Associations numbering 1,172 report an aggregate membership of 212,676; and 1,109 report an active membership of 104,435; 205 buildings (against 156 reported a year ago) owned by the associations are reported valued at $8,352,910; the total net property of the associations, including buildings and building funds paid in, furniture, libraries, etc., amounts to $10,433,647. In addition to this the reports show that over $1,500,000 is pledged for buildings. During the past year $1,654,750 were contributed for current expenses of the local work; and $162,000 for State and international work. The list of general secretaries shows 619 associations employing 1,095 secretaries, assistants, physical directors, etc.; 611 associations report libraries containing 422,912 volumes; and 277 report educational classes with a total membership of 17,143 different young men; 349 associations report 487 Bible classes; and 389 report 544 training classes; 580 report 798 weekly prayer meetings; and 628 report 648 Gospel meetings.

—The next General Conference of Christians of all nations, convened by the Evangelical Alliance, will be held in Florence, Italy, in April, 1891. The Alliances of Europe and America will co-operate in making the Conference a success. Our Protestant brethren in Italy are so poor that it will be necessary for the British and American Alliances to bear the expenses of the Conference, which will amount to about $5,000. In many instances, in order to secure the attendance of Italian pastors, it will be necessary to pay their expenses. At a recent Waldensian gathering last year some delegates walked hundreds of miles in order to be present. That the influence of this great Protestant gathering may do great things for Italy, there should be delegates from all parts of the kingdom. The Alliance for the United States asks the prayerful sympathy of the Christian public with this Conference, and invites contributions for its expenses. Money may be sent to the Evangelical Alliance, 117 Bible House, New York City.

—The International Sunday-school Convention began its sixth annual session at Pittsburg, June 24, with 1,300 delegates present from all parts of the United States and Canada. The delegates represented 112,897 Sunday-schools, with 1,178,301 teachers and 9,149,997 scholars. The membership of the International Lesson Committee was made fifteen instead of fourteen, and the following ministers constitute that committee: Bishop John H. Vincent, Methodist, chairman; Rev. Warren K. Randolph, D.D., Baptist, Providence, R. I., secretary; B. Jacobs, Baptist, Chicago; Rev. A. E. Dunning, D.D., Congregationalist, Boston; Rev. John Potts, D.D., Canadian Methodist, Toronto; Rev. D. Berger, D.D., United Brethren, Dayton, Ohio; Prof. J. I. D. Hinds, Cumberland Presbyterian, Lebanon, Tenn.; Rev. John Hall, D.D., Presbyterian, New York City; Hon. S. H. Blake, Canada Presbyterian, Toronto; Rev. Moses D. Hoge, D.D., Southern Presbyterian, Richmond, Va.; Rev. W. G. E. Cunningham, D.D., Methodist South, Nashville, Tenn.; Rev. John A. Broadus, D.D., Baptist South, Louisville, Ky.; Rev. H. Lewis Baugher, D.D., Lutheran, Gettysburgh, Pa.; Rev. B. B. Tyler, D.D., Campbellite, Louisville, Ky.; Rev. John S. Spahr, D.D., Reformed, Lancaster, Pa.

GEORGE WASHINGTON. Rev. Ezra Styles, D.D., in the "Philadelphia," July 23, 1830: "Hitherto I have neither advocated nor opposed Masonry, unless it be in the relation of a conversation between General Washington and Governor Jonathan Trumbull the second, which the latter more than once repeated to my father. The latter, when aid de camp to the former, asked him if he would advise him to become a Mason. General Washington replied, 'that Masonry was a benevolent institution, which might be employed for the best or worst of purposes; but that for the most part it was merely child's play, and that he could not give him any advice on the subject.'"

• CHIEF JUSTICE MARSHALL was the intimate friend and biographer of Washington, and was himself a Freemason in his youth. Marshall left the lodge in 1793. He had then for some sixteen years been acquainted with Washington, who died six years later. Marshall wrote to Hon. John Bailey from Richmond, Oct. 18, 1833, of Washington and Freemasonry: "I do not recollect ever to have heard him utter a syllable on the subject."

CHARLES P. SUMNER, father of the Senator, and a renouncing Mason: "Masonic engagements, whether they are called oaths, obligations, or promises, ought never to be made. They are not sanctioned by law and are not obligatory. They make it a Masonic crime to divulge that which the good of the community requires should not be concealed."

BUSINESS.

TO THE READER.

It has been suggested that many thousands would be interested and benefited by the circulation of Joseph Cook's address on the Disloyal Secret Oaths of MORMONISM, the CLAN-NA-GAEL, JESUITISM, and FREEMASONRY. The Association has not the funds needful for notifying the public through the newspapers, that so valuable a document is in print, and hence this appeal. We wish to send out Joseph Cook's address to one thousand newspapers for review and comment. This should be done during the next two weeks. TWENTY DOLLARS ARE NEEDED. Who will send it? It will be worth several times that amount to the cause.

"PAID IN ADVANCE."

Some papers discontinue on expiration of subscriptions and some continue until orders are received to discontinue. If a classification is made it will be found that those papers which appeal mainly to the lower tastes of their readers, to their love of news (daily papers), their love of excitement (story papers), or their love of beauty (literary and art journals) generally do not trust their readers; while those who appeal mainly to their higher instincts, to their love of home (country weeklies), or their love for God (religious papers), do trust their subscribers. There is no inflexible rule, but the general custom is as stated.—Christian Patriot.

BOOKS AND TRACTS.

There is missionary work for summer as well as for winter months. One form is the never-ending and often blessed work of giving a tract or selling a pamphlet to the uninformed. Among the many who have greatly aided this reform and benefited their neighbors is Burgess Smith of Pennsylvania. In sending for a new supply he writes cheerfully of the interest shown in the "Proceedings of the Chicago Conference." Sow your neighborhoods two or three times a year with fresh, readable tracts, and God will give you a harvest that rust and blight cannot touch.

Your attention is especially called to the 12-page program gotten out for the Chicago Conference, a limited quantity of which are on hand. They are a 12-page tract, wire stitched, on nice book paper and contain portraits of Moody and Pentecost and the testimony of evangelists. We will send these at the rate of twenty cents per pound or ten cents per half pound, postpaid. It will pay to distribute these.

Copies of the following valuable books have been left in this office for sale at second hand and favorable rates:

- Mackey's Masonic Jurisprudence.
 - Chase's Digest of Masonic Law.
 - Mackey's Lexicon of Freemasonry.
 - Bernard's Light on Masonry.
 - Horton's Image of the Beast.
- Prices will be given to proposing purchasers.

We have over $1,500 worth of literature on the shelves which your friends would be benefited in seeing. Will you help us send it to them?

Have you read the advertisement headed SPECIAL BOOK SALE? Only a few of some kinds are in stock. It is not our intention to replenish after these are sold. If not satisfactory after examination, books from this list may be returned and money will be refunded.

MSS. pages 247 to 292 have been received.

DONATIONS.

General Fund:

H. Curtis	$ 5.00
J. S. Rice	1.00
A. Hamilton	10.00
J. W. Cole	1.50
W. B. Stoddard	55.52
Collected in June by agents—
J. P. Stoddard	16.00
C. F. Hawley	7.75
W. B. Stoddard	7.50

$104.27

Cynosure Minister's Fund:

W. H. Layton	$ 10.00
S. M. Neff	3.00
N. P. Eddy	3.00
M. Stubbs	1.50

$17.50

Cynosure Extension Fund:

J. Blanchard	$50.00
--------------	---------

Foreign Fund:

N. P. Eddy	$3.00
------------	--------

W. I. PHILLIPS, Treasurer.

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from July 7 to 12 inclusive:

R Riggs, J N Norris, Mrs C W Crabtree, W Rogers, G L Emerson, F M Mitchell, E J Chalfant, S Jackson, D H Bicknell, J M Marvin, W Barrus, Mrs M Good, F A Armstrong, Rev H C Cade, G McCullough, R Montgomery, S A George, R W Wass, H W Fowler, Rev A Hannon, Rev M Tyler, J L Glasgow, J Humble.

IN BRIEF.

It is expected that the Belgian Cabinet will propose an immediate advance of $1,000,000 to Congo State and an advance of $400,000 annually for ten years, the Congo State to be mortgaged to Belgium.

There are seven ditches being constructed in New Mexico, which, when completed, will irrigate 720,000 acres, or more than 1,100 square miles. This is almost 100,000 acres more than the land now subject to irrigation in that territory.

Dr. Charles K. Barlow, a leading dentist of Poughkeepsie, New York, has taken no food of any kind except a glass of milk or a cup of coffee each day for forty-five days. When he commenced fasting he weighed 245 pounds and measured 49 inches around the body. He now weighs 201 pounds and measures 36 inches around the body. When the forty-five days were up he was ready to eat something substantial, but his appetite failed him and has not yet returned. His board bill for fifty-three days has been less than $2. He says he feels well and has worked hard every day during his fast. His entire food to-day consisted of a glass of milk and a plate of ice cream. He is about 40 years old. His eyes are bright and his movements sprightly.

It is claimed for Chicago that, in proportion to its population, it has more benevolent societies than any other city in the world; that the percentage of its dependent classes is less than in any other great city; that there are only two other cities in the country as well supplied with Sunday-schools, and, finally, that its Newberry Free Library starts with a fund of $3,000,000, the largest ever given a free library. Besides this library the late Mr. Cregar left more than $1,000,000 for another, and, in addition, the City Library has an income of nearly $100,000 from taxation. The city appropriates one-third of its revenue to the public schools, and during the past year its citizens raised $475,000 for the Chicago University and $800,000 for the Lake Forest University. The McCormicks have given nearly $1,000,000 for theological education, and not long ago Mr. Moody easily raised $250,000 in Chicago for his training school. In view of all this it might possibly be advisable for the humorists to stop manufacturing squibs about Chicago's pork and lard. She is a city of which all Americans, New Yorkers included, can be justly proud.—New York Tribune.

A Danbury correspondent of the Hartford Courant writes that that Connecticut city is at present well-nigh demoralized by a lottery craze. It seems that an operative in one of the hat factories drew a big prize in the Louisiana Lottery recently, and a large proportion of the 5,000 operatives in Danbury have been buying lottery tickets ever since. The craze has gone to such extent that business is interfered with. Families suffer and store-keepers complain loudly. All the working people are talking lottery, and it is not the poor alone who buy tickets. It is estimated that Danbury has lost more money in this manner than from all other calamities put together for a long period. There is reason to believe that the prize referred to was allowed to go to Danbury to revive drooping interest, as it is openly charged that the lottery managers shrewdly drop a prize in communities and among classes of workmen where it will excite the gambling instinct. Not long ago a prize was drawn in this way, doubtless, by a Boston barber, and it is said to have been the worst thing that ever happened to barbers in this city. The gambling instinct is strong in human nature, and an institution which panders to that instinct and provokes it where it would not otherwise be aroused is a curse to the whole nation. Our government ought to be sufficiently paternal to prevent the ignorant and credulous from being victimized in this way. The business is largely done through the mails.

Peculiar

Peculiar in combination, proportion, and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the curative value of the best known remedies of the vegetable kingdom. Peculiar in its strength and economy, Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "One Hundred Doses One Dollar." Peculiar in its medicinal merits, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures hitherto unknown, and has won for itself the title of "The greatest blood purifier ever discovered." Peculiar in its "good name at home,"—there is more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell than of all other blood purifiers. Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales abroad no other preparation ever attained so rapidly nor held so steadfastly the confidence of all classes of people. Peculiar in the brain-work which it represents, Hood's Sarsaparilla combines all the knowledge which modern research in medical science has developed, with many years practical experience in preparing medicines. Be sure to get only

Sarsaparilla

Peculiar

To Itself

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

HELPS

TO

BIBLE STUDY

With Practical Notes on the Books of Scripture.

Designed for Ministers, Local Preachers, S. Teachers, and all Christian Workers.

Chapter I.—Different Methods of Bible Study.

Chapter II.—Rules of Interpretation.

Chapter III.—Interpretations of Bible Types and Symbols.

Chapter IV.—Analysis of the books of the Bible.

Chapter V.—Miscellaneous Helps.

Cloth, 184 pages, price postpaid, 50 cents.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS, 231 W. Madison St., Chicago.

CHICAGO CONFERENCE.

130 PAGES. A HANDSOME PAMPHLET

SENT POSTPAID FOR ONLY FIFTEEN CENTS.

CONTENTS:

Proceedings, Resolutions, Plan of Work, Letters and Addresses.

Letters from Rev. P. S. Henson, D.D., First Baptist Church, Chicago.
Rev. John Lee, M. E. Church, Lockport, Ill.
Pres. Benj. Trueblood, Friends' College, Oskaloosa, Iowa.
Pres. L. Larsen, Lutheran College, Decorah, Iowa.
Prof. W. G. Moorehead, D.D., U. P. Theological Seminary, Xenia, Ohio.
Pres. James W. Strong, Cong'l. College, Northfield, Minn.

Addresses by Col. George R. Clarke, Chicago.
Rev. Halleck Floyd, United Brethren Church.
Rev. J. S. T. Milligan, Reformed Presbyterian Church.
Prof. Henry C. King, Oberlin College.
Rev. H. A. Day, Wesleyan Methodist Church.
Rev. Thomas D. Wallace, D. D., Presby. Church, Chicago.
Rev. W. P. McNary, United Presbyterian Church.
Pres. C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton College.
Prof. David McDill, D. D., U. P. Theological Seminary.
Ex-Pres. A. A. Smith, Evangelical Association Church.
Rev. David Metheny, Reformed Presby. Missionary, Syria.
Rev. B. T. Roberts, Free Methodist Church.
Prof. Joseph Moore, Friends' College, Richmond, Ind.
Rev. E. P. Goodwin, D. D., Cong'l. Church, Chicago.
Rev. J. E. Ambrose, Baptist Church, Chicago.
Laura S. Haviland, Quaker Church, Chicago.
Joseph Cook, Boston.

The supply is limited; the selling price is less than the pamphlet cost. It is so low that every one can send for one. Its representative character and ability are indicated above.

SENT POSTPAID FOR 15 CENTS.

The National Christian Association,

W. I. PHILLIPS, TREASURER.

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.

HOME AND HEALTH.

The excellent hints in this department last week should have been credited to the American Agriculturist.

NOTES FOR WARM DAYS.

The two following drinks, both delicious and wholesome, serve to satisfy thirst, and are refreshing and inexpensive as well.

To two pounds of light-brown sugar add one-half pint of molasses, two ounces of tartaric acid, and one quart of boiling water. Stir till thoroughly dissolved, and then stir in one ounce of essence of wintergreen, or sassafras, if preferred. When cold, bottle it; it will fill two quart bottles. To serve put two spoonfuls in a tumbler, fill two-thirds up with cold water, stir in one-quarter teaspoonful of carbonate of soda and drink while effervescing. The materials do not cost over 35 cents; well-corked, it will keep perfectly all summer.

Cream soda is rather more delicate; but requires a few moments' boiling. The materials required are one ounce of tartaric acid, the juice of one lemon, one and one-quarter pounds (pints) of loaf sugar, and one and one-half pints of boiling water. When cold stir in one ounce of essence of wintergreen and the whites of two eggs beaten to a stiff froth; also one-quarter cup of flour, blended in a little cold water. Bottle and serve one spoonful of the syrup, three-quarters of a glass of cold water, and one-quarter teaspoonful of carbonate of soda. Drink while effervescing.

Nature seems to call for an acid in the hot season. Naturally we incline to lemons, which are plentiful now, and should be used liberally. Take the juice clear with water without sugar. There are many conditions for which lemon juice is a specific, notably a torpid liver. Summer fruits, acid berries, strawberries generously used, will often set these ailments right without the use of medicine. Stewed rhubarb, a strong acid, slightly sweetened, has the same effect. It is very healthful. So is a good "towel bath" every morning, with a little ammonia added to the cold water, or even a little salt. It is wonderful how it will brace one up for the "heated term." Yet after all, with a busy day, one often finds the feet tired and aching and swollen with the heat when night comes. Nothing so rests and relieves them as rubbing with spirits of camphor. If not at hand, alcohol alone has a very comforting effect. Stout people are more apt to be troubled with aching feet in warm weather than those who are spare. We have known the trouble greatly relieved by putting the feet in cold water for ten minutes at bedtime. When aching feet seem persistent, and do not yield to simple remedies, the trouble is apt to be rheumatic, and a liniment made of olive oil with all the gum camphor it will absorb will be apt to relieve at once.—Independent.

—Eat all cold food slowly. Digestion will not begin till the temperature of the food has been raised by the heat of the stomach to 98 degrees. Hence the more heat that can be imparted to it by slow mastication the better. The precipitation of a large quantity of cold food into the stomach by fast eating may, and often does, cause discomfort and indigestion, and every occasion of this kind results in a measurable injury to the digestive function. Ice-water drunk with cold food of course increases the mischief. Hot drinks—hot water, weak tea, coffee, chocolate, etc.,—will, on the contrary, help to prevent it. But eat slowly, any way.

—A rather sensational article has been going the rounds of the medical press concerning the danger of contracting consumption in sleeping-cars where the berths have previously been occupied by those afflicted with the disease, and making several absurdly impracticable suggestions in regard to the prevention of the infection. It might be going too far to say that there is no danger at all from such a source, but it is a very small one. There is little proof that the bacillus tuberculosis retains its vitality outside of the body long enough to infect another

Stomach Troubles,

Such as indigestion and loss of appetite, are extremely common. The functions of the stomach being weakened, the blood soon becomes impure, the system loses vigor, and you fall an easy prey to any prevailing epidemic. What you need to restore tone to the digestive organs is Ayer's Sarsaparilla, the best and most economical of all blood-purifiers.

"For several years I was troubled with indigestion, accompanied with pains in my side. My appetite was poor, and my health was gradually failing. Medicine recommended to me by my friends, did not have the desired effect. Finally I was advised to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and have done so, with the most beneficial results. My appetite is now good, I am free from pain, and feel once more in good health."

—T. Loney, 32 Fairmount st., Cambridgeport, Mass.

"About a year ago, I found myself in failing health. I suffered indescribably from stomach trouble, blood disorder, and various weaknesses, and almost despaired of relief. Thinking Ayer's Sarsaparilla might possibly benefit me, I began taking it, and am pleased to state that a few bottles wrought an entire change in my condition. My health has been restored by its use, and I feel stronger and more vigorous than I have for many years."—Mary A. Garland, 1407 Michigan ave., Chicago, Ill.

"During the summer and fall of 1887 I suffered very seriously from dyspepsia. Knowing the high standard of Ayer's medicines, I decided to try what Ayer's Sarsaparilla could do for me. It has helped me wonderfully. I regard the Sarsaparilla as invaluable in such cases."—James R. Williams, Delana, Ill.

"About a year ago I was greatly afflicted with indigestion, and suffered from headache and terrible pains in my stomach. I consulted a physician, who prescribed various remedies, but all to no purpose. I became worse instead of better, and was compelled to give up work. A friend finally advised me to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I purchased a bottle, took it according to directions, and soon had the satisfaction of knowing that my health was improving. After taking two bottles of this medicine, I was able to resume work. My appetite returned, my food digested well, I was free from headache, and to-day I am as well as ever."—P. Dubé, Holyoke, Mass.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

—FOR—

Dyspepsia.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

Prepared by DR. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass. Sold by all Druggists.

Price $1. Six bottles, $5. Worth $5 a bottle.

EVERY WATERPROOF COLLAR or CUFF

THAT CAN BE RELIED ON

BE UP
TO THE MARK

Not to Split!

Not to Discolor!

BEARS THIS MARK.

NEEDS NO LAUNDERING. CAN BE WIPED CLEAN IN A MOMENT.

THE ONLY LINEN-LINED WATERPROOF COLLAR IN THE MARKET.

SAVE YOUR MONEY

BY SUBSCRIBING FOR ANY OF THE FOLLOWING PERIODICALS IN COMBINATION WITH THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

	Regular yearly subscription price.		Regular yearly subscription price.	Our price for both.
Forum,	$5.00	and Cynosure	$1.50	$5.50
North American Review,	5.00	" "	1.50	5.50
Popular Science Monthly,	5.00	" "	1.50	5.50
Century Magazine,	4.00	" "	1.50	5.00
Harper's "	4.00	" "	1.50	4.50
" Weekly,	4.00	" "	1.50	4.75
Scribner's Magazine,	3.00	" "	1.50	4.00
Independent,	3.00	" "	1.50	4.00

If any periodical not in the above list is wanted, in combination with the Cynosure, send for terms and enclose stamp for reply.

W. I. PHILLIPS,

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.

person under such circumstances. While consumption is probably a communicable disease, we can by no means consider it a contagious one, in the same sense that the term is applied to small-pox, scarlet fever, or similar diseases.

Yes, Hood's Sarsaparilla is really "peculiar." Prepared by a combination, proportion and process unknown to other medicines, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures hitherto unknown.

The presence of dandruff indicates a diseased scalp, and if not cured, blanching of the hair and baldness will result. Hall's Hair Renewer will cure it.

One person in each locality can earn a good-sized bag of gold at work for us during the next few months. Some earn $20 a day and upwards, and all get grand wages. No one can fail who follows our directions. All is new, plain and easy. Experience not necessary. Capital not required; we start you. Either sex, young or old. You can live at home, giving work all your time or spare time only. One person has earned $500 during past few months; you can do as well. No room to explain here. Full particulars and information mailed free to those who write us at once. Better not delay if you want work at which you will be sure of earning a large sum of money every month. STINSON & Co., Box 699, Portland, Maine.

KNIGHT TEMPLARISM ILLUSTRATED.

A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 841 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $2.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50c; $4.00 per dozen. Furnished in any quantities at

REMARKABLE OFFER!

Nearly everyone is familiar with the name, but it has been estimated that only one in every two hundred and eighty persons in the United States is fortunate enough to have access to the valuable information contained within the covers of the grandest work ever written by mortal man,

Webster's

UNABRIDGED DICTIONARY.

That this is an unfortunate state of affairs will be admitted by all, and it is due to the fact that no one save the rich could afford them.

The Dictionary is a necessity in every home, school and business house. It fills a vacancy and furnishes knowledge which no one hundred volumes of the choicest books could supply, and all young or old, educated or ignorant, rich or poor should have it within reach and refer to its contents every day in the year.

The Loomis reprint contains all the matter as compiled and arranged by our esteemed and honored author and statesman

NOAH WEBSTER.

About forty years of his life was devoted to this great work, and when we consider the fact that this book contains about 100,000 words, we will appreciate that these years must have been well spent.

Some idea of the magnitude of this book may be gained from the fact that it contains over 440 cubic inches of paper and has about 300,000 square inches of printed surface.

In addition to the 100,000 words it contains a portrait of the author, together with his biography and a valuable table of 12,000 synonymous words.

By special arrangement with the publishers, we are permitted to furnish this valuable volume: 1st. To any subscriber to our paper; 2nd. To any renewal subscription; and 3rd. To any person who has paid a full year's subscription within the past six months, on receipt of $1.50 for the paper one year, and two dollars and seventy-five cents to cover express charges, packing, etc., of the Dictionary.

Address

CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill

The Washington Souvenir,

Size 18x24 inches, and containing the portraits of

Washington and his Com-Patriots,

WITH THEIR TESTIMONY ON

FREEMASONRY.

It contains the portraits of

Washington.

John Adams, 2nd President of the United States.

James Madison, 4th President of the United States.

Joseph Ritner, Governor of Pennsylvania.

Richard Rush, Secretary of State and of the Treasury.

Alexander Hamilton, the friend of Washington.

Samuel Adams, the Father of the Revolution.

John Hancock, President of the Continental Congress.

Samuel Dexter, Secretary of War and of the Treasury.

William Wirt, Attorney-General.

John Marshall, Chief Justice of U. S. Supreme Court.

John Quincy Adams, 6th President of the United States.

Benjamin Rush, the Father of Temperance Reform in America.

Lebbeus Armstrong, Founder of the first Temperance Society.

Framed, it is an ornament to please the eye, and a testimony to gladden the heart.

Sent safely packed in a mailing tube, post-paid, for ten cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,

221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

"THE WHOLE IS BETTER THAN A PART,"

AND YOU HAVE IT HERE IN A

"NUT-SHELL."

SECRET SOCIETIES, ILLUSTRATED.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc. of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite). Adoptive Masonry, Revived Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen.

For sale by the National Christian Association, at Headquarters for Anti-Slavery Literature, 221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

FARM NOTES.

The farm that does not improve in fertility and value from year to year is in the hands of an unprogressive and unthrifty owner.

For the annual nourishment of 15,000,000 cows and 12,000,000 horses there are needed 30,000,000 tons of hay, 90,000,000 bushels of corn meal, the same of oat meal, 275,000,000 bushels of oats, 2,000,000 bushels of bran, and 30,000,000 bushels of corn, at a cost of $450,000,000.

The farmers of this country last year sold more than $60,000,000 worth of butter, eggs, milk and cheese, and that, too, in addition to their own consumption of those articles. The total is more than twice the value of the cotton crop and more than the value of any single crop except corn.

Bradstreet's says: "The opinion gains ground that we are to carry over nearly 40,000,000 bushels of wheat July 1 next in excess of the quantity carried over one year ago. Believers in higher prices point to reported prospects for a crop of only 412,000,000 bushels of wheat this year as compared with 490,000,000 bushels in 1889 as an offset with a tendency to favor holders of grain."

A dispatch from Sidney, Ohio, June 25, says: "Something remarkable happened here yesterday to a cow. There were two large trees close together on the edge of a clover field. A fence touched either tree, but the gap had no fence. The cow squeezed into the gap, and without passing through began to browse. She soon began to swell with gas generated by the green clover, and to get her out one of the trees was cut."

The Indian corn exhibition at Edinburgh, Scotland, is leading the Scotch to eat America's great staple, and they express a preference for it to oatmeal. A local paper says, "Indian corn bread is pleasant to the taste and lighter than oatmeal, and if the people are once acquainted with the really wholesome and nutritious food that can be made from this corn, it is thought that exportation may prevent the waste in America."

THE ART OF STACKING.

Few understand the art of stacking hay so that rain will not get into the center, says Mr. W. H. Doane in the Orange Judd Farmer. One great enemy to the keeping of hay is the wind, especially in Kansas. Many times the farmer gets his hay and grain stacked up in good condition, and along comes a gust of wind and all his labor is swept away, as far as the keeping qualities of his stack is concerned. Enough hay goes to waste every year on many farms to pay for lumber to cover it. In Illinois, years ago, stacks of hay were roofed with three-eighths or five-eighths inch ceiling. They were hip-roofed, making them as solid as light material could make them; then to hold them in place four 4x4-inch posts were set in the ground 14 feet high, with four plates at the top to hold the posts in position and keep them plumb. The roof was placed in position before the posts were set up, having the corners at the eave ends of the roof gained in to permit the roof to slide up or down on or between the posts. Holes were bored in the posts to put in pins to hold the roof up. When it is time to begin stacking, fasten the roof at the top of the posts and begin the stack between the posts. Build to a finish, or in case there is not enough hay cut, put in what there is, stopping work on the stack for any length of time, take out the pins and lower the roof down upon the hay, leaving the hay level, or nearly so. As the stack settles the roof will follow the hay down and protect it from rain and wind. If I were going to build one I should build it for ricks instead of stacks; it would be cheaper in the long run in cost of lumber and the work generally. Then when not in use as covers for hay they could be used for storing of farm tools, wagons or anything that should be housed from sun or rain.

STANDARD WORKS

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES.

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Association,

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. A liberal discount to dealers.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 75 cents. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive. Vol. II. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprised the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished. 25 cents each.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe. 20 cents each.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. In cloth, $1.50 each. Paper, 75 cents each.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pages, 75 cents.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance. Bound in one volume. In cloth, 589 pages, $1.00.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. 25 cents each.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper, 35 cents.

Hon. Thurlow Weed on the Morgan Abduction. This is the legally attested statement of this eminent Christian journalist and statesman concerning the unlawful seizure and confinement of Capt. Morgan in Canandaigua jail, his removal to Fort Niagara and subsequent drowning in Lake Ontario. 5 cents each.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a League with the Devil. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason. 15 cents each.

Freemasonry Self-Condemed. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church. Paper covers, price, 20 cents each.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each.

Anti-masonic Sermons and Addresses. Composed of "Masonry a Work of Darkness;" the Sermons of Messrs. Cross, William McNary, Dow and Sarver, the two addresses of President Blanchard, and the addresses of President H. H. George, Prof. J. G. Carson and Rev. M. S. Drury; "Thirteen Reasons Why a Christian cannot be a Freemason," "Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion," and "Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate?" 287 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate. By Rev. L. A. Post. 5 cents each.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper cover, 35 cents.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin trials. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each.

Stearns's Inquiry into the Nature and Tendency of FREEMASONRY. 338 pages. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor United Presbyterian church. 5 cents each.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of FREEMASONRY. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. 10 cents each.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void; or FREEMASONRY SELF-CONVICTED. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. 207 pages. Postpaid, 40 cents each.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian), seceding Mason of 21 degrees. 15 cents each.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. H. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each.

Masonic Salvation, as taught by its standard authors. This pamphlet is a compilation from standard Masonic works, in proof of the following proposition: Freemasonry claims to be a religion that saves men from all sin, and purifies them for heaven. 111 pages, price, postpaid, 20 cents.

Freemasonry at a Glance illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the first three degrees. Paper cover, 32 pages. Single copy, six cents.

Masonic Outrages. Compiled by Rev. H. H. Hinman. Showing Masonic assault on lives of seceders, on reputation, and on free speech; its interference with justice in courts, etc. Postpaid, 20 cents.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret Societies. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10cts each.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims by Rev. David McDill, Pres. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. In cloth, 35cts each; paper covers, 15cts each.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinions of many prominent college presidents and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25cts each.

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of his sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5cts each.

Sermon on Secretism. By Rev. R. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational church, Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear array of the objections to all secret societies, and to Masonry especially, that are apparent to all. 5cts each.

Pres. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to disfellowship secret societies. 10cts each.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and Church. By Rev. M. S. Dury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church, is clearly shown. 10cts each.

Hidden with Cords. OR THE POWER OF THE SECRET EMPIRE. By E. E. Flagg, author of "A Sunny Life," etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story, accurately true to life because mainly a narration of historical facts. In cloth, $1.00; in paper, 50 cents.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and law of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved. 15cts each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. J. Day Brownlee. In reply to a Masonic Oration by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio. 5 cents each.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on Masonry. Paper covers, 25 cents each.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion. 5 cents each.

ON ODD-FELLOWSHIP.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by ex-President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; paper cover, 50cts.

Patriarchs Militant Illustrated. The complete ritual of the Patriarchs Militant degree. This is an accurate copy of the Charge Book furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge of the Independent Order of Odd-fellows, with the eighteen military diagrams and the unwritten (secret) work added. Paper cover, 25cts each.

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own utterances; its doctrine and practice examined in the light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth 50cts; paper covers, 25cts.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and other secret societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms, and the duty to disfellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers, is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10cts each.

Odd-fellowship: ITS HISTORY AND ITS WORK. By President J. Blanchard. A neat pamphlet with cover. Postpaid, 5 cts.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Anti-mason's Scrap Book, consisting of 33 "Cynosure" tracts. In this book are the views of more than a score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of secret societies. Postpaid, 25 cts.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret tradesunion of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords, etc. 15cts each.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc., and the ritual of the Machinists' and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—U. S. Government Report, Aug. 17, 1889.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

The Navy Department Thursday ordered two war vessels to proceed to Central America to protect American interests and subjects in the event of war between Salvador and Guatemala.

CHICAGO.

The First Regiment Armory was dedicated Saturday. The Freemasons were not invited, poor fellows.

The propeller Tigra, one of the finest and fastest of the lake steamers, and the first built of steel, was blown up Friday evening at her dock near Washington street. Fire followed the explosion, which is believed to have been caused by the leakage of naphtha or petroleum, and the vessel sunk aft. It is supposed that some thirty men were killed.

Active work is on the program for the World's Fair directors in the next two weeks. Congressman Butterworth of Ohio has been elected secretary and will come to Chicago in a few days to confer with the local board concerning his work and he will probably assume the duties of a director-general until that officer is elected.

COUNTRY.

Bishop Ireland delivered a stirring address before the National Educational Association in St. Paul, in which he denied that Catholics were opposed to State schools.

On Tuesday at Pittsburg a formal transfer was made of the property of the Westinghouse Electric Company to the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, and the capital stock increased to $10,000,000.

The National Educational Association began its sessions Tuesday at St. Paul, and the National Educational Council closed its meetings with an election of officers, President S. H. Peabody and many of the other officers being re-elected.

A severe shock of earthquake Tuesday afternoon in the Norris Basin in Wyoming caused an eruption of the geyser known as the "New Crater," which is now reported to be throwing up "a column of steam, stones, and water 200 feet in circumference."

By a vote of 68 to 31 the Louisiana Lottery bill passed the House, Tuesday, over the Governor's veto.

Nine members of the Salvation Army were arrested for parading the streets of Eau Claire, Wis., Tuesday, in violation of an ordinance prohibiting such displays.

There are 5,000 insane people in the city of New York, and experts on insanity say that the ratio of lunatics is increasing much faster than that of the population.

At Chamberlain, S. D., word was received Monday that Clerk of Court Spalding and Nogay, an India guide, had been killed by Sioux in the western portion of the reservation.

Wednesday night, near Sidney, Nebraska, cowboys amused themselves by firing at telegraph wires and insulators, cutting every wire with their bullets and severing communication with the West and the Pacific coast. It took a large force of men all day Thursday to repair the damage.

A race riot occurred at Star's Millpond, Fayette county, Ga., Thursday, in which eighteen men were killed and wounded. Four Negroes are reported dead.

The most densely populated square mile in the world is in the City of New York. It is inhabited by 270,000 people, the larger part of whom are Italians, who speak only their native language.

The Law and Order League, at Peru, Ind., recently organized, has ordered all places of business closed on Sundays under threat of prosecution.

A cyclone or hurricane struck Lake City, Sunday night, located on Lake Pepin, Minn., and a large number of people were lost by the sinking of a steamer. The steamer Sea Wing was coming up the lake at about 9 o'clock, and when opposite the city the storm struck it and sent it to the bottom. There were on board about 350 people from Diamond Bluff and about fifty more were on a barge which was in tow. A late estimate says that at least two hundred persons were drowned, among the number being some of the best known and most prominent people of Red Wing and vicinity. The cyclone struck on the shore of Lake Gervais. The funnel-shaped cloud swooped down on them, demolishing two dwellings and a number of other buildings in the same neighborhood. In the wreck five were killed and ten injured.

FOREIGN.

According to advices received at Constantinople, a number of Armenian peasants at Alakiles who failed to pay their taxes were burned alive by Turkish Zaptiehs.

The authorities at Trebizond have sent 26,000 cases of paraffine to Dersim for the purpose of firing an extensive dense forest which is likely to serve as a refuge for Armenians if pursued by Turkish troops.

On the Fourth, at Mount Hope, Ontario, Joel Smith hoisted the stars and stripes over his house. Neighboring farmers requested the flag's removal and, when refused, shot it into shreds and divided the pieces among the crowd. Smith floated a second flag with similar results.

Four English war ships are daily expected to put in an appearance in Behring Sea, to be prepared for emergencies in the seal-fishing dispute.

The marriage of Mr. Henry M. Stanley and Miss Dorothy Tennant took place Saturday in Westminster Abbey. Mr. Stanley showed the effects of the illness by which he was attacked the day before. He rose from his bed to go to the ceremony and was compelled to use a stick to assist him in walking to and from the altar. The abbey was crowded with friends of the bride and groom.

A terrible accident occurred in Dartmouth, N.S., Friday night, in which a great number of people were drowned. The disaster happened by the slipping out of place of the chain attached to a ferry float, allowing the front of the bridge to sink and precipitate a crowd of about 700 men, women and children into the water. The people were crowded waiting for the new ferry steamer Annex, just arrived from New York. When the steamer got within two feet of the landing a number of persons jumped on board, and at that moment the accident occurred. The outer end of the bridge went down suddenly and the terror-stricken crowd slipped off into the harbor as though they were descending a slide, piling upon each other, shrieking for help, and scrambling for means of safety.

Our High Grade List and Bargain Book sent to any address on receipt of a 2-c stamp.
LORD & THOMAS,
NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING
45 RANDOLPH STREET,
CHICAGO.

Its superior excellence proven in millions of homes for more than a quarter of a century. It is used by the United States Government. Endorsed by the heads of the Great Universities as the Strongest, Purest and most Healthful. Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder does not contain Ammonia, Lime, or Alum. Sold only in Cans.
PRICE BAKING POWDER CO.
NEW YORK. CHICAGO. ST. LOUIS.

$75.00 to $250.00 A MONTH can be made working for us. Persons preferred who can furnish a horse and give their whole time to the business. Spare moments may be profitably employed also. A few vacancies in towns and cities. B. F. JOHNSON & CO., 1009 Main Street, Richmond, Va.

GREAT FALLS, MONTANA. City of wonderful resources, immense water power, gold, silver, copper, lead, lumber, coal, iron, cattle, horses, wool and agriculture. Phenomenal growth. For full particulars address SECRETARY BOARD OF TRADE, Great Falls, Montana.

Will be found invaluable for Cholera Infantum and all Summer Complaints, children or adults. It is a non-medicine but will be retained & sustain life when everything else fails. 4 sizes 35 cts. up.

MISSOULA Garden city of MONTANA. Railroad and manufacturing center, fine water power, rich agricultural lands, mines, lumber, etc. A prosperous city and rich country. Full particulars, including beautiful book, "MISSOULA ILLUSTRATED" SENT FREE upon application to FAIRCHILD, CORNISH & CO., MISSOULA, MONT.

WHEATON COLLEGE,

WHEATON, ILL.

FALL TERM BEGINS TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 16TH.

A College for Men and Women.

For Catalogue address with stamp.
C. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

To cure Biliousness, Sick Headache, Constipation, Malaria, Liver Complaints, take the safe and certain remedy, SMITH'S

BILE BEANS

Use the SMALL SIZE (40 little beans to the bottle). They are the most convenient; suit all ages. Price of either size, 25 cents per bottle.

KISSING at 7, 17, 70; Photo-gravure, panel size of this picture for 4 cents (coppers or stamps).

J. F. SMITH & CO.,
Makers of "Bile Beans," St. Louis, Mo.

Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees.

Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington.

Send model, drawing or photo., with description. We advise, if patentable or not, free of charge. Our fee not due till patent is secured.

A Pamphlet, "How to Obtain Patents," with names of actual clients in your State, county, or town, sent free. Address,

C. A. SNOW & CO.

Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

BIRNEY.

The sketch of JAMES G. BIRNEY candidate of the Liberty Party for President, in pamphlet for 25 cents. A limited number of copies of this handsome pamphlet for sale at the N. C. A. office

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
321 W. Madison St., Chicago

SPECIAL BOOK SALE!

- | Regular Price. | | Selling Price. |
|----------------|--|----------------|
| $.10 | "REPORT OF THE TRIAL of Rev. J. T. Michael," an Elder in the M. E. Church, for arraigning the Bishops, Elders and Preachers in charge for being Freemasons contrary to the Discipline of the M. E. Church. Paper, 28 pages. | $.05 |
| $.75 | "BEREA COLLEGE," Kentucky. An interesting history of the founding of that College for white and black in a slave State. Cloth, 87 pages. | $.25 |
| $.30 | "SONGS FOR THE TIMES," by Geo. W. Clark. Words and Music. Intended for Prohibition and W. C. T. U. meetings. Boards, 152 pages. | $.20 |
| $.25 | "MASONIC DEGREES ILLUSTRATED." Containing all the pass and real words, all the pass and real grips and signs of the first three degrees of Freemasonry, from the time of King Solomon, King Hiram of Tyre, and Hiram Abiff, the Widow's Son, to the present time. Compiled by E. M. Trowbridge. Paper, 39 pages. With certificate and demit showing that the author was a Freemason. | $.05 |
| $.20 | "THE INTERIOR OF SIERRA LEONE, West Africa." A lecture delivered at the Government Practicing School-Room, Freetown, Sierra Leone, together with remarks and addresses of gentlemen present, and the lecturer's replies. By J. Augustus Cole, of Shaingay, W. Africa. Paper, 54 pages. | $.10 |
| $.25 | "RELIGIOUS PERSECUTION." An examination of Cardinal Manning's letter in the New York Tribune, on Irish affairs and bearing on Home Rule. By Rev. John Lee. Paper, 83 pages. | $.15 |
| $.25 | "SKETCH OF THE LIFE OF JAMES G. BIRNEY." His relation to the Anti-slavery movement and place in history. By General William Birney. Paper, 32 pages. | $.10 |
| $.75 | "LUCILE VERNON, or the Church at Lansington. The experience of a young pastor. A novel. By Rev. W. T. Meloy, D. D. Cloth, 208 pages. | $.35 |
| $1.00 | "NATIONAL SUICIDE AND ITS PREVENTION." The following will show the drift of the book: Measure or Standard of Value; What is Honest Money; Our National Banks; Paper Money; Land Tenure, etc. By O. F. Lumry. Cloth, 224 pp. | $.50 |
| $.15 | "A WOMAN'S VICTORY, or the Query of the Lodgeville Church." By Jennie L. Hardie. Paper, 21 pp. | $.05 |
| $.15 | "MY EXPERIENCE WITH SECRET SOCIETIES." By a Traveler. Paper, 51 pp. | $.10 |
| $.10 | "WASHINGTON SOUVENIR." Portraits of Geo. Washington and his Co-patriots, with their testimony on Freemasonry. Size 18x24 inches. Framed it is an ornament to any home. | $.05 |
| $.10 | "SECRET SOCIETIES." A Lecture delivered at Oberlin College, Jan. 9, 1890. By Prof. Henry C. King. Paper, 36 pp. | $.06 |
| $1.50 | "HISTORY OF SECRET SOCIETIES IN FRANCE," or "THE CRADLE OF REBELLIONS." By Lucien De La Hodde. Translated from the French by Gen'l. J. W. Phelps. Cloth, 479 pp. | $.50 |
| $.25 | "THE PURITY CRUSADE." With portraits of some of its leaders. Paper, 114 pp. | $.15 |

Sent postpaid to any address on receipt of the selling price.

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
Wm. I. Phillips, Treasurer,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REVISED ODD-FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED.

The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. The ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover, 75 cents; per dozen $6.00.

All orders promptly filled by the
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
321 W. Madison street, Chicago.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XXII., No. 45.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JULY 24, 1890.

WHOLE No. 1,056.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.

Address all letters for publication to EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, CHICAGO. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Address all business letters to the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION as above. Make all drafts and money orders payable to the Treasurer, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address on Cynosure list always give the former address.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill., as Second Class Matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:	CORRESPONDENCE:
Notes and Comments.... 1	Notes of Summer Travel; A Day or two of Lake Bluff; A Faithful Friend Gone Home; A Splendid Company; The Juvenile Good Templars; Mass for Aggression and Victory; Reformers Stand by One Another; Pith and Point..... 5,6
Masonic Declarations.... 8	LITERATURE..... 6
Not a Peter Cartwright Meeting..... 8	LODGE NOTES..... 7
Forcing the Prohibition Issue..... 8	THE N. C. A..... 7
The Sons of the Revolution..... 8	LECTURE LIST..... 7
Personal Notes..... 8	REFORM NEWS:
CONTRIBUTIONS:	The River Mission; Pennsylvania Harvests..... 9
Mohammedans vs. Masons..... 1	THE HOME..... 10
The Resurrection..... 2	TEMPERANCE..... 11
SELECTED:	BIBLE LESSON..... 12
Soldiers, Awake! Arise! March..... 3	RELIGIOUS NEWS..... 12
Secretism and Conspiracy..... 3	IN BRIEF..... 13
AMONG THE COLLEGES:	BUSINESS..... 13
The National Educational Association helps us. 4	MARKETS..... 13
The Students' Missionary Conference at Northfield..... 4	HOME AND HEALTH..... 14
College Fraternities Go Down in Debate..... 4	FARM NOTES..... 15
WASHINGTON LETTER..... 9	NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 16
NEW ENGLAND LETTER..... 9

A STANDARD—LET US LIFT IT.

We ask every reader of the present number to look through its pages a moment with us. Articles worth your careful attention are on every page. If you can be profoundly interested in any question that affects our government, you should be in the fact that dangerous conspiracies lurk in the very constitution of our schools of higher education upon which our churches are lavishing millions of money, you should read what is being said about the college secret societies, which are like a poison cup dripping into the fountain head of our national life.

What are you interested in? Summer travel, summer assemblies, camp meetings, church union, Congress and the saloon, the Prohibition party or some other party, National Reform at Washington, re-submission in Kansas, your Sabbath-school class—What is it? Now, please mark! These and other themes that surely are engaging the thought of a vast majority of our American people, are here discussed as in no other paper in the world. The United States needs not less than copies of the Cynosure read every week,—that would hardly be one to a family. And this ought to be done before the World's Fair is on us! The enemy is "coming in like a flood." Shall the Cynosure be a standard which the Lord shall lift up against him. It rests with you,—and you,—and you, kind friends and readers. With such a list of subscribers our cause will be a NATIONAL ISSUE that cannot be ignored by our church assemblies or our legislatures.

FIFTY THOUSAND

Let us begin by: 1. Making a list of all friends who should read this paper. 2. Get sample copies to show them. 3. Have sample copies sent from this office to them. 4. Be sure to get their subscription. 5. Contribute to the funds for sending the paper to the South and to reading rooms. All together and the work is done.

Another proof that the Christian people of this city are awake to the importance of Sabbath-keeping in connection with the fair of 1893 was a large and influential meeting in Farwell Hall on Saturday last. Mr. T. M. Harvey, a well known business man, who is a strong financial backer of Mr. Moody, presided and presented resolutions calling upon the special legislature of the State, which meets this week, to rule for Sabbath observance at the fair; approving of the example at Philadelphia and Paris, and demanding for the working-men of the city and State a quiet rest day. These were heartily supported by able speakers and unanimously adopted.

George W. Cable, the noted Southern author, and friend of the black man, is said to have little intimacy among his literary brethren. Although respected very highly, he is not so warmly embraced as many less worthy. The reason for this is said to lie in Mr. Cable's serious Christian life. He is devoted to orthodox religion, while many of his literary friends are content to be merely religious. Being in Boston recently Mr. Cable found himself on the Sabbath at the home of William D. Howells, the novelist and late editor of the Atlantic Monthly. Mr. Cable asked Mr. Howells if he would not go to church, but Howells declined and Mr. Cable left him at home and went alone. His loyalty to Christ hurts Mr. Cable only among the enemies of Christ.

Our Chicago papers report five lodge picnics last Sabbath. Each of them filled a long train and went out into the country to spend the day in various sorts of merry-making and riot, disturbing the Sabbath quiet in a hundred peaceful towns. Their day of Sabbath-breaking was spent by some in drinking, dancing, foot races of women and the like carousing, but one order, the Swedish Good Templars, confined themselves to "innocent pastimes." It is worth the careful attention of all who are observing the character of secret societies, favorably or otherwise, how these Swedish people are transformed by secretism. They come to us from fatherland, a Sabbath-keeping and lodge-avoiding people; but, tricked into a secret society under the pretense of subserving the virtue of temperance, directly the breaking down of conscience begins, and Sabbath picnics are as sacred to them as their lodge prayers and lodge altars. This case is deserving careful study, because of the manifest breaking down of conscience under the lodge influence.

The skies are not all dark over the heads of our colored brethren in the South. The Associate Presbyterian of South Carolina calls attention to the fact that large appropriations are made from the public funds in most of the States for the education of Negro children. On the 4th a reunion of ex-Confederate soldiers was held at Chattanooga. The Stars and Stripes waved from a thousand staves and not half a dozen of any other kind were seen. The mottoes were of a patriotic nature, and the great speech of the occasion, by General John B. Gordon, an ex-officer of the rebellion, was inspired by the same patriotism and full of loyal sentiment. So much so, indeed, as to beget a controversy with Jubal Early, a companion officer, who is now with Beauregard engaged in managing the truly treasonable and infamous Louisiana lottery.

One of our good South Dakota friends writes us this week of the sad effects of hot winds upon the growing crops in his State. Sincerely do we sympathize with hard-working men who see their labors shrink to tinder before their eyes, without a possible remedy or hope of saving a tithe from the ruin. From portions of Kansas a similar report comes of the destructive hot winds: and these disasters will possibly continue until the tree growth modifies the conditions of climate. From other reports we hope, however, that these ruinous effects are but local. The general crops in the Dakotas are said to be excellent, and on the whole these great wheat-raising States will be fairly prosperous this year. The farmers have other enemies however, and these are of their own genus. The elevators upon which they all depend for grain storage until they care to sell, are refusing to take grain out of spite toward a new State law which requires a license fee. The effect of this scheme is to compel the farmer to sell his grain at whatever price the elevator owners may agree upon. This loss is harder to bear than the other, for most men are in their better moments like David, more willing to fall into the hands of the Lord than to be at the mercy of their fellow-men.

The recent death of John C. Fremont recalls the memories of his heroism as the explorer of the great mountain region of the West and his hardships in seeking mountain passes in mid-winter. This gave him the name of "the Pathfinder." The exploration and acquisition of California was mainly due to his efforts. If subsequent events did not add to the brilliancy of his career it was not for want of capacity and earnestness, but mainly because his zeal for the right out-ran his prudence and the support of public opinion. The following extract from a poem by John G. Whittier, which was written just after Fremont's emancipation proclamation (which Lincoln felt constrained to recall), shows that much credit is due him for the final overthrow of slavery:

"Thy error, Fremont, was to act

A brave man's part without a statesman's tact.

* * * * *

But if thine be the fate of all that break

The ground for truth's seed, or forerun the years

Till lost in distance, or with stout heart make

A lane for freedom through the level spears,

Still take thou courage! God has spoken through thee

Irrevocable the mighty words, Be free!

The land shakes with them, and the slave's dull ear

Turns from the rice-swamps stealthily to hear."

MOHAMMEDANS VS. MASONS.

BY REV. L. W. FRINK.

In the Missionary Review for last month there is an able article entitled, "How shall Mohammedans be evangelized?" It is written by one who has resided forty years in the Turkish Empire, and is thoroughly conversant with the subject.

In the article I find several statements which seem to be equally applicable to the Masons; and the analogy is so complete I feel moved to lay the matter before the readers of the Cynosure. The following is the language used:

"In the Turkish empire at this time the death penalty hangs over every Moslem who becomes a Christian. The Koran authorizes this. Religious liberty is a doctrine inconsistent with the spirit of Islam. It is almost certain that a Mohammedan who professes faith in Christ must leave the country, if he can, or be impressed into the army, or be arrested and imprisoned on false pretences, and all trace of him be speedily lost. This terror, so imminent, hinders Moslems from indulging any disposition to examine carefully the Christian religion and to balance properly the claims in its favor. To be known to be an attendant upon the religious services of Christians subjects a Moslem at once to a warning from the heads of the sect; and if he perseveres, he soon feels the weight of their power to compel him to separate himself from such associations." . . . "Another obstacle exists in the misconception by Moslems of the cardinal truths of Christianity . . . no matter how absurd or how many thousand times refuted."

"Another obstacle is that there is no liberty of the press in Western Asia, nor liberty of public discussion, by which the fallacies of Mohammedanism might be exposed. Custom house officers and public censors watch jealously to prevent foreign importation of books exposing Mohammedan errors . . . and if the missionaries braved all personal risks and denounced openly in their pulpits the prophet of Mecca, not only would they fail to reach Mohammedans with their message, but speedily their churches would be closed."

Then another obstacle is "the indifference of many native Protestants," who "for political reasons pay the most profound respect to their superstitions and their vain worship." Among the things suggested by way of remedy I notice that "those who expect to influence Mohammedans should make their religious belief a study; they should know what the Koran teaches, its truths and its errors."

Now if this is not a vivid picture of Masonry, then I confess I have not read through clear glasses. The "death penalty" prevents many from speaking out their convictions concerning the heathenish rites of Masonry, while the deceptions which are so common to the order pervert "the cardinal truths of Christianity."

Nor is there any liberty of discussion of the Masonic creed, or any dissemination of books exposing Masonic errors, tolerated if in the power of Masons to prevent it. Then to cap the whole there are those who, entirely ignorant of Masonic devices, coddle the institution, and evince the most profound respect for its vain (Christless) worship.

Instead of asking, "How shall the Mohammedans be evangelized?" let us begin at home and ask, "How shall the Masons be Christianized?" Whatever significance its religious rites may possess to an unprejudiced and candid student of the Christian religion, and of the Masonic religion, but one conclusion is possible, viz., they are diverse, the one from the other. The religion of the church of Christ and that of the lodge in which candidates are received "on the point of a sharp instrument, piercing the naked left breast," are not the same, but are in the very strictest antagonism. When will members of evangelical churches, who are also members of Masonic lodges (and members of all other lodges too) have the veil taken from off their minds, so they can see light?

"There is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved" but the name of Jesus. He is not the Saviour of Masons, because from their halls he is excluded.

Dear reader, "Be not deceived;" go not where Jesus is denied entrance, but follow him, love him and serve him with the "WHOLE HEART," leaving ALL for his sake, and he will conduct you safely to glory. "Buy the truth," and "sell it not."

Baptist Church, West Boylston, Mass.

THE RESURRECTION.

BY REV. S. F. PORTER.

"But some one will say, how are the dead raised up? and with what body do they come?" 1 Cor. 15: 35.

The Apostle Paul seems to have met with considerable opposition as to his views of the resurrection. This came mainly from the Gentiles; for the Pharisees and Essenes, the most numerous sects of the Jews, acknowledged the doctrine. But the heathen world adopted various theories; and among them the transmigration of souls was very ancient and wide-spread. The Catacombs of Egypt, filled with myriads of embalmed human bodies, testify to this. They believed, it is said, that the souls of the dying were transferred into various animals or trees, in which forms they continued to live, changing at times from one to another. After three thousand years they would return again to inhabit the former body if it still existed. And so it was manifest duty of friends to preserve it by embalming and placing it in a secure position. This was before the days of Moses.

The Brahmins of India still teach the doctrine of transmigration. I heard a noted lecturer, an Englishman, say that, while residing in India, when he told his servant to cut down a certain tree to improve the lawn, he started up with horror. "Oh!" said he, "you want me to cut down my grandfather." He believed his grandfather had gone into that tree. And many animals and inanimate things are held to be sacred by the heathen in consequence of such views.

Nor need we wonder; for many superstitions darken the minds of some here in our own enlightened country as they read the Bible on this subject. I heard of one man who said that he was careful to raise the best stock, for he believed that at the resurrection he should have the same kind that he raised in the present state. Some seem to think that this "vile body" (Phil. 3: 21) is to exist again as it was, made up of the same materials, and going through the same diurnal changes to all eternity. And they teach that the material bodies of men shall rise from the depths of the ocean (although devoured by fishes) and come forth to a new life: and the limbs dropped a thousand miles apart shall come together again: and the dust which formed the body at its dissolution shall be gathered and rebuilt and made the dwelling place of the soul again forever.

Over how many graves has it been said, "Dust to dust: the body of this friend is here laid to rest in hope of a glorious resurrection at the last day, when it shall come forth to a new and everlasting life." I fell into this mistake in my early ministry, as did a multitude of others; but upon a more careful study of God's Word, I became convinced of the error; and now I feel bound to bear witness to the truth as it is plainly declared by the inspired writers.

Let us listen to Paul (1 Cor. 15: 50): "Now this I say, brethren, that flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God; neither doth corruption inherit incorruption." The resurrection to eternal life, then, does not embrace the earthly materials out of which the human body is composed. That the animal man should rise out of the ground and live forever is all a fancy and a sham. But it is the living again of the spiritual man, the soul, the intelligence, the memory, the reason, the conscience, the will, in a body of spiritual substance, like God's glorious body. If we look minutely at this subject, the natural conclusion appears to be that the animal or earthly part of man belongs to this sphere. What we call the body is formed out of the dust of the ground and "is of the earth earthy" (1 Cor. 15: 47). It has circulation of blood, by heart beat, producing suitable warmth and supplying in part the wastes of the system; it has lungs, by which oxygen is inhaled from the surrounding air for the blood, and worn-out particles are continually carried out of the frame and dropped. These things are essential to animal existence. But an elevation of three miles brings the thermometer down to zero; and at forty miles there is no air, making the way to Heaven or to other realms of God's universe impossible to warm-blooded, breathing animals without a constant miracle. This is not God's way; and we see how it is that "flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God."

The penalty for sin is death: and death stops the action of the bodily organs of men; which are at length utterly dissolved. But the term death, when applied to the soul, means miserable existence, resulting from the misuse of the moral faculties, and the penalty inflicted by the infinite Creator. And this is eternal death—death without end, unless Infinite Mercy interferes. This is evidently the teaching of divine revelation. So when Adam sinned his body began to break up and to lose its original painless action; and finally returned to its original elements. At the same time his soul began to suffer the tortures resulting from the voluntary misuse of his moral powers. This was spiritual death; death to holiness; death to happiness: and without a Redeemer it was eternal death.

The creation design in the formation of man appears to me to have been on this wise: If men had not sinned they would have enjoyed a happy life without pain or sorrow for a thousand years on this planet. God would have conversed continually with the little ones as they grew up; and he would have given daily aid, by what we call miracle, to those who asked him. So when any one had lived a thousand years (more or less), the chariot and horses of fire would have come and he would have been translated to Heaven without seeing death. As he went up, the animal body, the matter belonging to this sphere, would have been dissipated in air without pain, and the spiritual body would have exuded as a fitting tene-ment for the glorified one in the heavenly kingdom. Thus Enoch and Elijah were taken to Heaven in this manner; and the age of men continued to nearly the normal period for several generations. Adam, himself, remained in this sphere 930 years; Methuselah when he died was 969 years old: even Noah, as late as the period of the flood, lived 950 years. And these things are recorded as object lessons for us and for the instruction of mankind all along down the ages.

The infinite Father in pity for sinful, fallen men invented a plan to redeem them from their lost and undone condition. This is the Gospel: and all who accept it are restored at length to all the powers and privileges, and to all the happiness of man's first estate. For this Saviour was constituted by the union of a finite man and the infinite God in one person: and so he suffered the full penalty of sin, even death. But being infinite, he conquered death and the grave for us and rose again and ascended up on high leading, captivity captive. Thus the great Elder Brother reinstated the universal church, and brought life and immortality to light, to all who have the faith of faithful Abraham. At the beginning, Abel and Seth were translated to Heaven at death as truly as Enoch was without death. In God's infinite mind, Christ was "slain from the foundation of the world" (Rev. 13: 8), and the names of all believers were recorded in his book. From the earliest ages of the world Christ was preached. The object lessons were very striking, as lambs and calves and doves were slain in sacrifice. The blood of beasts could not atone for sin, but it could and did represent the atonement made by Christ's blood for the sins of the whole world. Thus all believers were saved under the Abrahamic covenant and translated to Heaven in what might, in a finite sense, be called a provisional way, upon condition that the Saviour should die. But in the infinite mind of God it was absolute; and all believers who died before the crucifixion were translated to Heaven at death as Elijah was without dying.

The teaching of the Master on this subject is explicit and decisive. The Sadducees (Matt. 22: 23) came to him with their (as they thought) unanswerable supposition. Having disposed of this, he continues (Mark 12: 26, 27), "And as touching the dead that they rise" [not will rise], "have ye not read in the book of Moses, how in the bush God spake unto him, saying, I am the God of Abraham and the God of Isaac and the God of Jacob" [not have been nor will be but am]? "He is not the God of the dead, but the God of the living: ye do therefore greatly err." "For all live unto him" Luke 20: 38. Again in the 43d verse of the 23d chapter, he says to the praying thief, "Verily I say unto thee, to-day shalt thou be with me in Paradise." Could words make it plainer that Christ himself, on that same day, bore that ransomed, translated sinner up into glory? I am aware that there has been some diversity of exegesis here. Roman unbelief led that church, centuries ago, to teach that there is a purgatory, midway between heaven and hell: the upper and better part of it they say is Paradise, where Jesus took the penitent thief. But I agree with Paul (2 Cor. 12: 2, 4) that Purgatory is the third or highest heaven.

But the main cause of darkness and unbelief on the subject of the resurrection arises from the disparity between the conditions of the earthly and the heavenly sphere. In the earthly, animal life, our eyes discern the form, size, shape and color of material things. But no man can see God with these eyes (1 Tim. 6: 16). Neither can we see the mighty universe of spiritual substance around us; which is more subtle than electricity and vastly more powerful. Nor can we see the innumerable company of the mighty ones who inhabit it. And therefore thousands will not believe. But the door has been opened into that realm a little, by the raising of the dead, who afterward were taken up to glory, in "a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens" (2 Cor. 5: 1). Jesus says (John 11: 25, 26), "I am the resurrection and the life: he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live."

And whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die." That is, physical death, to the believer, is only translation into the upper kingdom of God. Oh, could we see the myriads of believers, as they die, going up to their homes above, how the shadows of unbelief would flee away! The death-bed, we should call the place of the resurrection. And the moment of dissolution, we should call the hour of translation. And so it is.

SOLDIERS, AWAKE! ARISE! MARCH!

Soldiers, awake! for bright the crimson morning
Shines o'er the hills, far in the eastern sky,
Hark! "the assembly" peals its notes of warning;
So close your ranks, with colors lifted high.
Ah, shall we falter or retreat? No, never!
Strong in the truth of God our hearts shall be!
Our night gives place to light that shines forever,
Age after age, o'er Time's eternal sea.

Soldiers, arise! and think how you have labored
Through days of pain and weary watching oft.
Oh, let your sword leap upward from its scabbard,
And wave it high in circling lights aloft.
For oh! there's victory through Christ the Giver;
In Him we triumph, who our King shall be,
Where we shall have His love that shines forever;
Age after age, beside the jasper sea.

Rise, soldier! Burst the slimy chains that bind thee,
Let the proud world despise thee if it will.
There's one whose love and Spirit hath inclined thee
To bear with fearless front the tide of ill.
Success shall crown thee with a glory grander
Than all the splendors of this earth can be;
And death give place to life with thy Commander
Age after age, beside the jasper sea.

Soldiers, once more "the assembly" pealing,
Wakes the wild echoes of the distant hills,
Close ranks! march on! and let His light revealing
Break through the storm till night with music thrills.
Rise o'er the conflict of thy life's endeavor;
Above it let thy soul mount grand and free;
And night give birth to light which shines forever
Age after age, o'er Time's eternal sea.

—Toria A. Buck, in Messiah's Herald.

SECRETISM AND CONSPIRACY.

PRESIDENT BLANCHARD'S REPLY TO MR. ADELBERT BEACH.

[From the Inter Ocean.]

WHEATON, Ill., July 2.—A friend observing the remarks of Mr. Adelbert Beach in your issue of June 29, replying to an article by myself published in Our Day, entitled "An Age of Lodges," has kindly called my attention to it, and I request the privilege of a hearing in response.

The article by Mr. Beach contains much with which I am in entire sympathy. His doctrine that the state has its field and that the church must not meddle with it while on its own ground is undoubtedly correct. His estimate of the importance of the public school is common to intelligent Americans; we tax ourselves millions of dollars annually to maintain it. His view of the irreligious attitude which our schools in some cities and States are coming to occupy is by no means complete. It is true that our schools should be neither ecclesiastical nor sectarian, but the statement that they are "neither godless nor infidel" must be accepted with limitations. That this is true of our schools as a whole I am happy to believe; that it is not true in part is evident from the exclusion of the Word of God from many of them.

The Bible is not a sectarian book. It is held by more than 400,000,000 of the most virtuous, enlightened and powerful people on the globe to be the word of God. It contains the purest system of morals that the world has ever known; it has furnished themes for the most celebrated paintings and the most magnificent musical creations. It is the treasure-house of poets and the armory of orators. Our Websters, Sumners, Lincolns, and Garfields find in it their most polished blades, their heaviest artillery. It contains the only record we have of 4,000 years of the world's history. To it appeal not only all Christian churches but all thoughtful, civilized men as to the supreme authority on moral questions. From it and from those who received it as a voice from heaven have come all the civil liberty which men enjoy. The Anglo-Saxon race, one hundred millions strong, leads the whole world to-day in the movement for constitutional government, the security of the rights of man, and even Hume says, vol. 4, p. 141:

"So absolute, indeed, was the authority of the crown, that the precious spark of liberty had been kindled and was preserved by the Puritans alone, and it was to this sect, whose principles appear so frivolous and habits so ridiculous, that the English owe the whole freedom of their constitution."

If our schools exclude such a book as this it is not unjust nor inaccurate to call them infidel. It is an attempt to make atheism rational.

But the school question, though interesting and important, is not the subject of Mr. Beach's article nor of my reply. The paper in Our Day alluded to the fact that the male population of the United States was rushing into secret societies. This no one disputes. Your correspondent does not question it. This undoubted fact renders an inquiry into the character and tendency of such organizations imperative on the part of thoughtful men. Consulting the most distinguished members of these orders we learn that which promise their members many privileges here and life eternal hereafter without requiring repentance, conversion or the mediation of Christ.

THEY ARE RELIGIOUS INSTITUTIONS

Of course, such societies are rivals of the Christian faith, and are fatal to the souls of men if the Bible be true.

Your correspondent does not attempt to show that any of the quotations in that article were inaccurately made or that any of the inferences drawn were unwarranted. It may hence be assumed that he admits them to be truthful and just or that he considers that side of the subject as unimportant. On the other hand, he asserts that all worthy members of the popular lodges of our day are loyal Americans, and seems to intimate that they are in some way connected with the maintenance of our schools and resistance to the Romish Church. To the first and second of these propositions I desire to ask the attention of your readers. And

1. It is well known that General Albert Pike and many other leading rebels in the war against the Union were eminent Masons. I mention General Pike because he was, so far as I am informed, the only man who at that late day (1861 or '62) introduced savages into a war between civilized peoples.

2. It is also well known that after the close of that gigantic struggle, involving the expenditure of $8,000,000,000 and the loss of not less than 1,000,000 lives, not one rebel was legally punished for his crimes. It is also known to all who have taken pains to inform themselves that the Masons, Odd-fellows and other lodge men who were in the armies of the rebellion were not deprived of any of their lodge honors or privileges because of their attempt to destroy the United States and set up a slave empire where men could be branded, women whipped, and babies sold in its stead.

3. It is a part of the fundamental law of Masonry that treason on the part of a Mason shall work no forfeiture of any rights which he may have acquired in the order. The second of the Ancient Charges (Freemasons' Monitor, John C. W. Bailey, Publisher, Chicago, 1872, pp. 305-6) says:

"So, that, if a brother be a rebel against the state, he is not to be countenanced in his rebellion, however he may be pitied as an unhappy man; and if convicted of no other crime, though the loyal brotherhood must and ought to disown his rebellion, and give no umbrage or ground of political jealousy to the government for the time being, they cannot expel him from the lodge and his relation to it remains indefeasible."

This is plain, and it accords with the history of our great rebellion. Men who were Masons and traitors had all the rights which Masons had who were loyal. As soon as they had failed to destroy the nation, they began to live on its taxes, and are now, as then and before, high in the lodge.

4. Among the many utterances from Masons which show that the law above quoted and the acts in pursuance of it are recognized generally as authorities I select one from an official of the Missouri Grand Lodge in his report for 1867. It was recently quoted in an address in this city by Joseph Cook. The Missouri official says:

"Not only do we know no North, no South, no East, no West, but we know no government save our own. To every government, save that of Masonry, and to each and all alike, we are foreigners. We are a nation of men bound to each other only by Masonic ties, as citizens of the world, and that world the world of Masonry; brethren to each other all the world over; foreigners to all the world besides."

It is a great pleasure to believe that many lodge men repudiate these sentiments, but still the law of Masonry is plain, and it has been lived up to through the most horrible civil war known in history; a rebel, if a Mason, is entitled to all the rights and privileges of Masonry. A man can be expelled for non-payment of dues; he can not be expelled for being a traitor to his government. Mr. Beach says that members of certain secret societies are loyal citizens. This is probably true, as there is no rebellion at present existing, but it was very far from the truth in 1861, and doubtless will be if ever again we are called to such a bloody atonement for national injustice and sin.

But while secret societies are naturally adapted to conspiracy against the nation, they are also fit instruments for the assassination of individuals. It is said that in the article, "An Age of Lodges," no mention was made of lodges of foreigners. This is true, and the reason for their omission was that press and pulpit were, at the time that article was written, resounding with condemnations of "Irish lodges," "foreign secret societies," etc., as if these were worse than others. Wendell Phillips once said to me:

"Secret societies are needful for no good purpose, and may be used for any bad one."

This is a true testimony. We can never suppress foreign secret orders while we permit native ones, and it would be of no special advantage if we could. But my reviewer is mistaken in supposing that Masonry has never been guilty of assassination. The Hon. John C. Spencer, one of the first lawyers of New York State, was appointed, by the Legislature, I think, to prosecute the murderers of William Morgan. He says:

"It is already too well known that in September, 1826, William Morgan was forcibly carried from Canandaigua to Niagara Fort, a distance of 120 miles, through a well settled country, and directly through five populous villages; was confined in that fort and finally murdered. So well had the plan been digested, and so faithfully was it executed, that not a citizen along this extensive tract was alarmed by and not a suspicion was awakened along the whole route. Five changes of horses were made and three different carriages were employed; more than six persons, besides the ill-fated Morgan, were to be supplied with food and refreshment; numerous drivers and agents to provide relays of horses must have been employed; and yet not a suspicion of the dark deed which was transacting along the whole route. This single fact speaks volumes respecting the capacity of an organized body, like that of the Masonic fraternity, to carry into effect any project, however iniquitous, and even in the heart of our country to immolate its victim without interruption."

ANY APPEARANCE OF VIOLENCE

If the murder of Morgan be compared with that of Cronin, it will be found that the former was the more horrible. Morgan was revealing the ritual; Cronin was hunting down a set of leaders whom he declared to be thieves. Morgan was taken by officers of the law acting for a lodge; Cronin by hired murderers. Morgan's murder required the active participation of not less than eighty or one hundred men; Cronin's demanded not more than five or six. Morgan's abduction and murder was perfectly planned and executed down to the last detail. The men who were to defame his character and the liars who were to swear to having seen him alive after his death, every man was in his place ready to do his work. Even the two ministers who belonged to his lodge qualified his slaughter. Cronin's murder was a horrible, bungling butchery that by a mere chance escaped detection while in execution. Judging the two orders by these two examples of their work any murderer would prefer Masonry to the Clan-na-Gael.

Of course, there were thousands of Masons who were sickened and disgusted by the former crime just as there were multitudes of honorable members of the Clan-na-Gael who were horrified by the latter. The mistake both made was in supposing that in a free land a secret society was "needful for any good purpose," or could not be used "for any bad one." Mr. Beach rationally fears the influence of men blindly subservient to foreign priests on American institutions. Did he never reflect that the secret society which directs the movements of that priesthood is one of its most dangerous elements? No doubt liberty is precious, but history does not record an instance in which the rights of the people have been secured by lodges. Masonry swears men under penalty of having their throats cut to be true to the order. Is that adapted to promote intelligence and freedom?

The fact is that lodges are to a certain extent controlling courts, sheriffs, and legislatures now as slavery did before the war, by craft and manipulation. Whether a few ambitious men shall yet plunge us into fratricidal strife to secure by force offices and taxes remains to be seen. If such a time does come it will be found once more, as in 1861, that the men who stand in "That thin blue line

Just tipped with steel and fire" are not the men who fly the American eagle and spend their time in studying grips, signs and tokens. They will be the honest, hard-working, manly men who attend quietly and faithfully to the business of each day, in shop or mart or office, who do not seek for honor or office but who seek the glory of God and the good of men. These quiet men, boasting naught of patriotism in times of peace, will be found in times of foreign strife or civil discord a rampart of living hearts between fatherland and the enemy, ready to fight, and not afraid to die. Out from their company will come the Grants and Shermans and Howards and Bakers and Sheridans of future battle days, if days of battle are indeed before. To increase the number of such men should be our task and may "God save the State."

CHARLES A. BLANCHARD.

THE ISSUE AMONG THE COLLEGES.

THE NATIONAL EDUCATIONAL ASSOCIATION HELPS US.

THE COLLEGE FRATERNITIES A SMALL AND BAD MINORITY.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—The daily papers have given reports of the great educational meeting held at St. Paul last week, from which you will probably gather such items as will interest your readers. There were some features, however, which were not fully noticed in the newspapers, and which have a special bearing on the reform work in which the Cynosure takes such a leading part.

The National Educational Association is divided into departments, one of which is for Higher Education. The forenoon and evening of each day were given to the general sessions of the Association and the afternoons to the various department meetings. The sessions of the College or Higher Education department were held in the First Baptist church, and between fifty and sixty colleges were represented.

After the opening prayer, President C. A. Blanchard of Wheaton College presented the first paper. His theme was, "What have the people a right to ask of the colleges?" It is needless to say that the author did not spend much time on the generally and openly admitted duties which colleges owe to the world, but rather called attention to some tacitly admitted, and as tacitly omitted, duties. In general two lines were followed: the duty of presenting to the public a clear educational theory, and the duty of leading the way in needed reforms. In the discussion which followed this paper, several acknowledged that colleges were in danger of becoming too conservative; and the whole department subsequently manifested its approval by electing Pres. Blanchard secretary for the ensuing year.

The second day's session was in some respects the most interesting. The first exercise was a very uniquely interesting paper by Pres. Rufus C. Burleson of Baylor University, Waco, Texas, on "Defects in College Discipline." Pres. Baylor has been at the head of his institution for thirty-nine years, and is probably the college president of longest standing in the United States. His paper showed that he is opposed to all forms of college rowdiness, and also that he has a fatherly interest in all his students. He said that the faculty stood in loco parentis, but that he occasionally had teachers who declared that they came to their positions expecting to teach and that they would not play "papa" or "mamma" to the students; he got rid of such teachers as soon as he could. In exercising his function as parent of the students, he even had, in the past gone so far as to use Solomon's rod, as he thought, with excellent results.

The next paper read was on

"COLLEGE FRATERNITIES: THEIR CONTROL AND INFLUENCE."

The author, Pres. J. T. McFarland of Iowa Wesleyan University, Mt. Pleasant, Iowa, had written to a large number of colleges and received replies from 130 of them. Of these, 83 were free from the secret fraternities and 47 had them. The presidents of 27 of the latter considered them useful on the whole, while 20 thought they were an injury. Of the 83 who were free from them, only one had a president who wished to have one organized. Of the whole number reporting, only 28 therefore were favorably disposed towards the fraternities, while 102 may safely be counted as opposed to them.

This paper was followed by the most lively discussion of the whole meeting. The college men participating were so generally opposed to the secret fraternities that an Episcopal clergyman felt called on to enter the lists as their champion. He was politely listened to until he finished, and then his arguments were thoroughly overthrown by a number of speakers, most of whom had been members of one or more of these fraternities. Among those who, in this discussion, bore emphatic testimony against lodgery, were Prof. Bartholomew, of Augustana College, Rock Island, Ill., Pres. Scott, of Hope College, Holland, Mich., and Pres. Burleson of Texas.

My observations during these meetings lead me to the conclusion that we must push the work among colleges, and in short, work all along the lines of our National Christian Association. Although my benevolences for some years ahead are pledged to various causes, yet this work seems so important that I will join others in an endeavor to raise a fund to send the Cynosure to every college in the United States where it is not now received. Will the editor and publisher kindly inform us how many copies this will require?

H. A. FISCHER.

THE STUDENTS' MISSIONARY CONFERENCE AT NORTHFIELD.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—The fifth summer school for college students has been held at Northfield, Mass., and the best, as it was thought, by all who attended. The great object for which the students came was (as Mr. Moody asked them the first night they came together in the Northfield Seminary) that they might be filled with the power of God and be better able to do the will of their blessed Master when they went back to their homes and colleges; that they might be better instruments in God's hands for leading their fellow men to Christ Jesus, their Lord and Master. It seemed to me that many of the students were like the young man who came to Christ (Matt. 19: 16-22) who said, "All these commandments have I kept from my youth up, what lack I yet?" Christ answered, "Go sell that thou hast and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven." Can it be that we will almost give up and yet not make a full surrender for Christ? One thing seemed to be lacking when there was no public warning given of the great evil of secret societies. When the Holy Spirit in the Word says, "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers," we as Christians will be lacking one thing surely if we do not warn our fellow men of this great evil that is keeping so many of our fellow men from having power with God.

It was proposed by Mr. Moody during the meeting that we had better not call other nations heathen any longer. It may be well, for we are as much a heathen nation in some respects as any.

It was said here also that there are only forty-eight people to every minister on an average throughout the United States, and there is therefore a wider field of work for God among other nations. This may be true, but if a man cannot work for God in this land what can he do in other lands? Christ said to the disciples, "Tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem until ye be endued with power from on high." So I would say to those expecting to preach the Gospel in other lands, Begin at your own home; at your own Jerusalem.

The Conference held only ten days. Nothing was said publicly about secret societies, but some excitement was aroused among the young men as I distributed tracts and talked with them on this great matter, and no doubt some good will come of it.

I had a talk with Mr. Moody yesterday about the matter. He is strongly opposed to secret lodges, but a little in doubt about the college secret societies, and said he thought it not best to mention the subject just then. I cannot see but that college societies are a chip of the old block, simply a beginning of a road that leads to ruin. Oh, that God would help us; that the eyes of the blind might be opened to see that this is one of the greatest evils in the nation.

F. W. WEED.

COLLEGE FRATERNITIES GO DOWN IN DEBATE.

During the commencement anniversary at Westminster College, New Wilmington, Pa., the annual contest between the two literary societies was enlivened by a debate on the question, "Should college authorities prohibit secret societies as they now exist in American colleges?" Mr. R. K. Aiken of Mt. Jackson, Pa., who took the affirmative, won the decision in triumph. His speech, as published in outline in the Holcad, the college paper, was as follows:

College authorities have the legal right to prohibit secret societies in the college. The question involved in the famous Purdue case is foreign to this question and the right to prohibit is clearly stated in the decision of the Superior Court of Indiana in that case.

The question presents a positive affirmative and a positive negative. It is a question of principle, and not of policy and expediency. It is proposed to establish the truth of the following proposition: That secret societies as they now exist in American colleges are wrong in principle, unjust and hurtful in their operations, and should be prohibited by college authorities. This declaration contains a statement of principle and an inference from it, the latter following as an irresistible consequence from the former, a conclusion that college authorities cannot avoid by excuse or compromise.

1. They are wrong in principle because their secrecy is unnecessary for any good purpose.
2. Their secrecy deservedly meets with suspicion and distrust.
3. Their secrecy is a temptation to vice.
4. The secrecy to which they bind their members by solemn promise or oath is ensnaring to the conscience and dangerous to society.
5. They are unjust and hurtful in their operations, because they are a fruitful source of disorder and mischief.
6. They produce narrowness and foster snobbery.
7. They are secret cliques that seek to control college politics.
8. They have an evil influence on the regular literary societies.
9. They interfere with a faithful course of study.
10. They have introduced unnecessary expense and extravagance into college life.

To say that they cannot be prohibited is to make the fatal admission that the law-making and controlling power of college authority is to be rendered nugatory and powerless by the organized supremacy of the stealthy planning and sleepless cunning of students' secret societies. Where this law has not succeeded it is because the law has not been enforced in good faith. The question does not propose prohibition for one college and not for another. It is a united, concerted effort on the part of all colleges, and not the weak, feeble attempt of one.

—Rev. Dr. Gulian Lansing, of the United Presbyterian church, and for forty years a missionary in Egypt, is now in this country, and is enjoying a season of well-earned rest at his old home, now the residence of his brother, V. Lansing, Esq., of Lisha's Kill, N. Y. Dr. Lansing is the father of Prof. J. G. Lansing, D. D., of the theological seminary of the Reformed Church. He will remain in this country until fall, when he proposes to return to the land of his adoption and the work of his love.

ARE YOU, kind reader, making those 50,000 subscribers a matter of prayer? If you pray well, you will think well, plan well, and work well for such a list.

CORRESPONDENCE.

NOTES OF SUMMER TRAVEL.

VISIT TO THE ANCESTRAL HOME IN VERMONT AND SKETCHES BY THE WAY.

WELLESLEY, Mass., July 16, 1890.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Here in the quiet retreat of one of the Cynosure's most gifted writers, Miss Elizabeth E. Flagg, we pause to rest a little, and as every one may not travel, an account of some of the scenes and events of our journey which we recall as a pleasant dream, may interest some of your readers.

We reached Saratoga after a comfortable and uneventful journey. In several respects this city is quite different from Chicago or any Western city we have seen. The large number of boarding houses or hotels is noticeable at once. Every third house seemed ready to accommodate strangers. These hotels all have large and high verandas and, especially toward evening, these are full of people.

Of the springs there are a great and increasing number, and they possess, without doubt, medicinal qualities of great value, but of these, as of every other earthly fountain, it is true that "who-soever drinketh of this water shall thirst again."

We all expect when leaving the cars in any great city to be offered the use of hack or carriage, but here the streets are lined on both sides with equipages of every style, size and color, from morning to evening, waiting to be hired.

On the Sabbath we attended church and listened to a sermon we need not say was good, by my father, on the lodge as a hindrance to the coming of the kingdom of Christ, at the First Free Methodist church. In the afternoon we attended the Woman's Christian Temperance Union meeting, which was large and interesting.

On the way to Rockingham, Vermont, much of the scenery from Saratoga to Rutland, where we change cars, is enchantingly beautiful. The pale-blue flax blossoms, large white daisies and brown-eyed Susies smile from all the fields; and in the wooded districts ferns grow rank and tall. As we approach the mountains we see evergreen woods of pine, spruce and hemlock, interspersed with familiar and beautiful oaks and poplars.

At Rutland we wait an hour. Here, all around us, mountains rise pine-clad and—

"Hills of unfading green, whose summits proud
Whisper the things of earth into the skies;
And the low-bending heavens
Speak, in sweet tones, yet awful,
To the heart of him who listens,
Of the great God who made both earth and skies
And brought them thus together."

Not far away Ethan Allen passed with his brave band to take Ticonderoga from the British. He came to the fort at four o'clock in the morning and demanded its surrender.

"By what authority," asked the astonished Red Coats.

"In the name of the great Jehovah and of the Continental Congress," he replied.

We hardly need add that even English soldiers dared not resist such authority and they immediately surrendered.

While passing East Clarendon father told us the following interesting story of slavery times. A Southerner had followed a poor fugitive slave to this mountain town and was about to take him back to the South, but was compelled to bring him to court and prove property. An old judge named Harrington was on the bench. As one after another the witnesses came in and swore that the slave belonged to the white man, the judge replied, "In the opinion of the court the evidence is insufficient." Finally the would-be master asked, "Will your honor please tell us what evidence will be sufficient?"

"A bill of sale from the Almighty," replied the judge; "nothing short of that will take a man out of this court." Would that we had more such truly brave judges to-day!

And now comes the most difficult part of my task. Words fail and my pen drops as we assay to describe the surpassing beauty of Rockingham:

"Side by side the rock-crowned mountains stand in solemn grandeur,
And from the neck the little rill trickles between the shoulders down,
And, laughing in the sun, or chattering over rocks in cooling shade,
Carries the secrets of their summits to the sea."

An hour we spend in the old church yard and standing by their graves listen to tales about our ancestors which seem to link our lives to theirs. Then we take a peep into the old church with its little square pews where my grandfather and mother sat surrounded by their children seventy-five or eighty years ago.

Taking now a carriage we are carried over the very hills father played upon, and drink from the same cool, sweet spring he drank from when he was as young as the little child who drinks beside us and who asks in wonder if grandpa could go to the spring alone when he was as little as she. Then we go to the "sugar grove," now long unused; and now we stand on the spot, now smooth and green like the quiet grave where hopes lie buried, where once the old home stood, and children flocked around the door at evening time. Over the pastures we wandered and through the orchard and gazed upon the woods,

"Where the little bird

Springs from her tiny nest in hemlock shade,
And pours into the near and listening ear of heaven
Her song of praise."

And as night shades draw around and we go to rest it is to dream that we have been to heaven.

NORA B. KELLOGG.

A DAY OR TWO OF LAKE BLUFF.

LAKE BLUFF, July 14, 1890.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—The tenth annual Temperance Convocation at Lake Bluff is now in full blast. Rev. Dr. Evans, president of Abingdon College, is superintendent. It was our privilege to spend last Sabbath there. At 10:30 Miss Willard preached from the text, "The Master is come and calleth for thee." It was the most unique sermon I ever heard. If all the women who aspire to the ministry could preach as she does, the walls of prejudice against them would fall as quickly as Jericho's walls before the rams' horns of the Israelites. Miss Moreland, the young pastor of the Congregational church at Wyand, Ill., led in prayer. A more simple, beautiful, earnest prayer I never heard offered. There were perhaps 700 present.

At 3 p. m. a memorial service was held in honor of Gen. Clinton B. Fisk. Miss Willard made the principal address. It was a brilliant review of his character as a man, a patriot, a Christian, and a husband and father. Hon. J. B. Hobbs spoke briefly before her, and Rev. Dr. Boole, from New York, spoke at the close. Resolutions were adopted.

At 8 p. m. I preached on "The Righteous Nation." We had an inspiring audience. Dr. Evans said, "Lake Bluff wants hot shot and plenty of it." Miss Esther Pugh, treasurer of the W. C. T. U., Rev. Davies of Pontiac, Ill., Presbyterian church, Mr. and Mrs. Tuley of Bloomington, Ind., and many others spoke words of cheer. Mrs. Anna Pritchard said, "The only salvation I can see for our nation is for consecrated men to canvass the country and proclaim the terrible law of Sinai."

To-night a Republican and a Prohibitionist will discuss their respective methods of dealing with the liquor traffic. This is an age of discussion. Every thing is discussed. Low license, high license and prohibition are advocated from the same platform. Secret and anti-secret society men meet in friendly combat. Open and close communion, hymns vs. Psalms in the worship of God, election and reprobation,—every thing is discussed. These discussions serve to bring out the truth, and if conducted good-naturedly, they develop character. And character is all we get out of life.

The Reformed Presbyterian Synod at its last meeting in New York passed a resolution intended to put a gag on the free discussion of her distinctive principles. That action is out of harmony with the spirit of the Reformation. I am a conservative. I have always been on that side. I belong to that small minority which Bro. Gault writes down as unwarrantable extremists. But I am on that side voluntarily, because I believe it is right. And I am ready to accord my brethren the same privilege to be liberals. Of course I know they are wrong and will come to see their mistake by and by. But I am ready to take the open field and argue every question. Martin Luther gave the key note to the Reformation when he said, "Over the soul God can and will allow no one to rule but himself." Nothing is infallible but the Bible.

J. M. FOSTER.

A FAITHFUL FRIEND GONE HOME.

OGDEN, Utah, July 7, 1890.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—You will find on your list of early subscribers, Isaac Townshend, Tabor, Iowa, our husband and father, who has left us alone at his bedside for his glorious, eternal home.

We have read the Cynosure so long together that we desire to say good-bye for him. He died June 2d of pneumonia after a week's intense suffering. He was one of your most appreciative readers. He would not fellowship a church whose doors were open for those who were yoked up with the Christless, dissipated brotherhood of Masons, and left the church of his love and choice, sadly, but conscientiously, the moment they condescended to soil their garments by such contact. Later on in Kansas, I shall not forget his return from a Masonic funeral, attended by Baptist and Presbyterian ministers. He had hoped to enjoy the society of the Presbyterian people of the place. It was the funeral of an intemperate infidel. How sadly he looked when he returned as he said, the man had gone to the grand lodge above; was made out to be quite worthy to do so—as he had money to keep up his dues. The ministers stood with uncovered heads through the ceremonies of the lodge. He was faithful to them, but his Christian respect for those ministers was gone. I knew it was his last hope of joining a church of his choice on earth, and said, "Father, we have got our Bibles, and they will take us safely through. What more can we do than to live by them?" And he said, "That's all, I guess."

He had just entered his seventy-eighth year, and had been able to perform manual labor till a few months before his death. He always so arranged his work that he never touched any labor on the Sabbath. If a letter was brought to him from the office it was laid by till Monday. A few days before his last sickness one of our family said, "We cannot leave our work during the week; will it be wrong to drive out into Ogden Canon on Sunday?" He quickly answered, "If I cannot go during the week I shall never go." He made many unfriendly for a short time in his last years by his conscientious voting; but they quickly saw he voted from pure principle.

He always kept anti-secrecy reading to lend, tracts to circulate as opportunities presented. He left nine children, seven sons, two daughters; his oldest daughter having died in Ceylon, a missionary. May his strong principles be practiced by his children, is my prayer; and may they have his abiding strong confidence in the atoning power of Christ's righteousness and death. I know the Spirit drew nearer to him as he threw off the power of the enemy and stood by the truth fearlessly.

For him, I say good-bye to the many he was allied to through the Cynosure. Father's chair is empty; his spectacles where he laid them on the shelf; his Bible on the table; his cane at the door. We miss him. There is only one way to meet the departed saved ones: forsaking sin and clinging to the righteousness of Christ.

S. L. TOWNSHEND.

A SPLENDID COMPANY.

A GLANCE AT THE PAST AND THEN TO THE FUTURE.

AVALON, Mo.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Twelve years' acquaintance and association with American workers has fully persuaded us that they are the grandest company of reformers in America to-day. Their ability, devotion and heroism place them in the front rank. Take the degree workers, Ronayne, Good, Starry, Lowe, Rathbun, Ferguson and Glassford. What a brave, daring set of men. They will go down to history as the embodiment of courage and determination. Then the lecturers, the Blanchards, J. P. Stoddard, Barlow, Bancroft, Browne, Loggan, Hinman, Caldwell, Matthews and all the pioneers. Add the names of Capwell, Carpenter, Howe, Pettengill, Dorcas, Britten, Needles, Conant, Rufus Smith, and others with whom we met and mingled our prayers and efforts at conventions and in the field in years ago. Closely following will come the names of W. B. Stoddard, Hawley, Dissette, Countee, and a growing list of bold, fearless champions. Warrington, Day, Johnston, Bourne, Love, Dolan, Bailey, Enlow and those who have held the batteries of cold type on the foe will need no double-leaders to claim our remembrance. But time and space will not permit of mention of all those noble co-workers of our earlier experience. A galaxy of heroes once known never to be forgotten. We have lost trace of many, but how glad we are to hear from those that yet remain and know that they are still at their posts. And then the splendid new recruits that are coming in, ready to dare and do for right and good government. God bless them all and bind us heart and hand as we march shoulder to shoulder in the battle. There is work ahead, and after this glance backward to sacred memories, we again move forward to close in with the enemy. DOWN WITH PAGAN, OATH-BOUND LODGERY IN THE UNITED STATES! "Old Guard" and new recruits, up and at them, till right shall win the day. M. N. BUTLER.

THE JUVENILE GOOD TEMPLARS.

HILLSDALE, Mich.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—The Good Templar lodges number about 6,000 members in Michigan. They have been operating in this State for several years but for some reason do not seem to be very prosperous. For a year or so they have been gaining strength a little. I was not aware until within a few weeks that they were working the device of organizing the children into these secret lodges. No one under sixteen years of age can be initiated into a regular Good Templar's lodge, but of late they are organizing Juvenile lodges for children between the ages of five and sixteen years. This fact I learned from the Chief Templar of the Grand Lodge of Michigan. The readers of the Cynosure may not all know of this work among the children, beginning with them at the tender age of five years to instruct them in the demoralizing arts of secrecy.

The lodge seems to be working every scheme to win favor and get an influence with the people. I can but think if the ministers and churches would but refuse it their sanction and influence its doom would be sure and speedy. To me it seems that this effort among the children is one of the boldest acts of lodgery yet, and I trust the good sense of parents will prove a barrier in the way of its success. (Rev.) JOEL MARTIN.

MASS FOR AGGRESSION AND VICTORY.

YORKSHIRE, N. Y.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—With unutterable longings for securing the highest good of mankind and in conjunction therewith the glory of the infinitely Holy One, the question of necessity arises, by what means and through what agency shall these ends be secured?

It must of necessity and of right be conceded that there is a Being infinite in power, wisdom, goodness and holiness; the Creator and rightful Ruler of all available agencies. That Being has laid out plans for the guidance of his subjects, the following out of which, by them, would secure the ends referred to, as also every desirable good. A plain record of these plans is found in the Holy Scriptures. In them we learn that "The earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof; the world and they that dwell therein." This being fact, he is of right the Sovereign, and the only lawful Sovereign over all created beings and all material existence.

Then it clearly follows that the how, the when and the wherefore is all referable to his instructions and commands. One Psalm of 176 sections, almost every one of which extolls and enforces especially the law and its Maker, may be found recorded in the guide book above referred to.

The way out of difficulty and to complete victory then is to take the highway of perfect obedience to the mandates of the Sovereign.

None can be depended upon with certainty to do battle against Masonry, rum, schisms and other forms of iniquity, but those who have enlisted for life as Christian soldiers of our Immanuel. Even they will accomplish but little towards the destruction of the enemies' strong fortresses if divided into exclusive squads, as they now are, in their denominational schisms which are subversive of God's law. An editorial article on the first page of June 12th, 1890, Cynosure, states the truth clearly when it declares that, "so long as the church is divided into denominations it is inevitable there will be rivalries and all the attendant evils of sectarian strife."

Being of the age of more than eighty years, and having been a member of the Christian family for more than sixty-seven years, I confidently appeal to my Christian brethren as from an elder brother, that they desert their unwarranted and condemned sectarianism and come up unitedly "to the help of the Lord, to the help of the Lord against the mighty," and thus avert the curse pronounced against Meroz. R. W. LYMAN.

REFORMERS STAND BY ONE ANOTHER.

DE KALB, Iowa.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—It seems to me that the Prohibition party is very inconsistent in ignoring the secret society question, because they find fault with those who ignore prohibition. People have just as good a right to ignore one reform as the other. Every real reform is akin to all others. No reform organization can afford to ignore any other. The organ of the National Christian Association, and other papers on the same line, does not ignore any reform question. The Christian Cynosure represents a real reform, and is right on the secret society question, if the lodge murder of Cronin is wrong.

Prohibition papers that ignore the secret society question are inconsistent when they blame the President for ignoring prohibition in his message. If Prohibitionists set the example of ignoring a reform, why should they rebuke others for doing the same thing?

Those who covet the name "crank" and ignore the secret society question do not turn well in prohibition in letting their light shine on the dangers to prohibition from the "secret empire." They may say they have "no light on that subject," but the light has come; and they have no right to "love darkness rather than light." All reforms are akin; so is all evil. The lodge in many places has ruined men who oppose the saloon. CYRUS SMITH.

PITH AND POINT.

SEPARATE THE LIVING FROM THE DEAD.

In my short acquaintance (one year) with the Cynosure I have learned to appreciate it very highly. May God bless you in your work to loose this dead body from the church.—C. E. GIBSON, Pastor M. E. Church, Pullman, Washington.

GOSLINGS AND GANDERS.

I do want to continue the visits of the Cynosure. It speaks out in plain terms against the evils of the day, and keeps abreast of the times in general reform, a work so much needed in our day, and so few have the moral courage to boldly face the foe, and speak out in plain English, showing up the evil and laying it bare to an intelligent, but often thoughtless, public! Sometimes I think that secrecy is being weakened, and there is evidence of it, in many places, but when we see so many new organizations springing up of a similar character with the old ones, we are led to think as the boy did of the goslings,—they will make ganders by and by. But when we look back at the workings of slavery in its day, we may take courage, believing that God in his wisdom is giving rein to these evils, that they may show themselves in their true light, and wake up public sentiment against them and put them down. Let us take courage and stand firm for the right, and God will give the reward in due time.—GEO. McCULLOUGH, Braddyville, Iowa.

SHOOT AS YOU PRAY.

Praise God for the truth. The more I read the Cynosure the more highly I prize it, and shall do what is in my power to increase its circulation, and push forward the glorious cause. My prayer (and I intend to shoot as I pray) is for the overthrow of the lodge power, the rum power, and whatever is opposed to Christ and his rule. God bless his workmen and give them grace and courage. Amen. Yours for the war on evil and error.—R. CANNING, Galva, Illinois.

STILL EXCELSIOR!

I cannot well get along without it. It grows better and better as the years go by.—M. N. BUTLER, Avalon, Missouri.

THIS APPEALS TO OUR SYMPATHY.

I am sorry to say that it is impossible for me to renew for the Cynosure at this time. Two weeks ago our prospects were fine, never better for good crops; but now all prospects are gone; that is, we will not have enough to carry us through and meet our obligations. Everything is ruined, or nearly so, not from drought, but by the extreme heat for the last ten days and one day of hard wind from the south. We are as bad off as last season. I had been calculating to send my subscription, and also to contribute to the several funds which are mentioned in your paper, and also try to get subscribers for the paper, there are so many totally ignorant of the workings of secret societies; but it would be of no use now with the present prospect; every one has been looking forward to pay up old scores of past years, but now they will have a double load, last year's and this together, and nothing to meet either. How we are to get through is more than I can see at present.—A. J. FOORD, Frederick, S. Dakota.

LITERATURE.

THE SABBATH: its permanence, promise and defence. By W. W. Everts, D. D. Pp. 278. Price, $1.00. Chicago, F. H. Revell, 150 Madison St.

The Sabbath is a theme of such common discourse that we often lose sight of its nobility and magnificence, of the important place it occupies in God's plan of redemption as well as in the history of our race. Dr. Everts has admirably succeeded in exalting the Sabbath to its true place in men's esteem. His conceptions are not only enlarging, but his language is eloquent. He has considered this great theme in three parts: first, the law of the Sabbath; second, its promise; third, its defence. For its law, he finds the day instituted in Eden, enforced by Moses, reaffirmed by Christ, perpetuated in the Lord's day, observed by the church from the first, a day for a memorial and a holy day. Its promise is fulfilled in the body and the mind of man, in his home life, in the state, in society, moral reform and religion. Its defence is most ably conducted against the cavils of objectors; the Sabbath laws are vindicated; the desecration of the day in saloons, theatres, excursions, museums, etc., kindly but firmly rebuked; and an appeal for the sacred observance of the day closes the book. Dr. Everts' eloquent and fervid style is not unfamiliar to many who have heard him for years as the pastor of the First Baptist church of this city, or more lately in his addresses on this topic as president of the Illinois State Sabbath Association. We cannot forbear giving our readers a paragraph or two which prove this work to be, for its literary merit alone, deserving of highest praise. The first shows how man's life and work are elevated and ennobled by the Sabbath:

"Man's greatest happiness culminated in celebrating God's glory. After working as God wrought, man is commanded to rest and hallow the Sabbath, because God rested and hallowed the seventh period of time: 'For in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is, and rested the seventh-day, wherefore the Lord blessed the Sabbath-day, and hallowed it.' The divine example and sanction alone were adequate to arrest the world's pursuit of gain and pleasure, enforce the Sabbath observance, and call the swarthy smith from his forge, the bronzed husbandman from the field, and the naked fisherman from the sea to rest and worship God. Man's work was ennobled by comparison with God's creative acts; and his rest was hallowed by association with his complaisant review and contemplation of his own works and glory. Only as rounded out, completed, and glorified by hallowed rest could man's toil rise from drudgery to dignity, from servility to sanctity. Life was not to be a perpetual and forced march, but was to celebrate weekly reviews and triumphs. It was not to be a harp of one string, snapping the monotonous twang of labor; but a harp of a thousand strings, thrilling earth with heavenly harmonies."

Another selection gives a view of Christ and this day of days:

"In none of His replies does the Saviour impinge on the Fourth Commandment. He leaves it standing, no longer covered with the rubbish of traditions and unnatural restrictions, but in the native grandeur of its primitive enactment. The scribes had made it a heavy burden: Jesus restored it as a heavenly benediction. They had inclosed it as a prison: He opened it as a day of spiritual emancipation. They were content to make it a day of selfish ease: He consecrated it to active ministries of charity. They misapprehended and perverted the Law: He explained and fulfilled it. He appealed from their prejudices to their better understanding. He unfolds the unsuspected depth of the commandment of Sabbath rest: 'But if ye had known what this meaneth, 'I desire mercy, and not sacrifice,' ye would not have condemned the guiltless.' Though He claimed, as Son of man, to be Lord of the Sabbath, He kept it as a king keeps his own laws. Such was the influence of His own example that His grave remained unvisited all through the hours of the Sabbath."

The whole work abounds in eloquent passages that we read and read again with profit and delight. Its wide circulation will do much to redeem Sabbath observance from a serious decline.

The American Garden for the present month is an excellent number. The hickory tree photographic frontispiece is a beautiful picture. Economic Entomology, model farm work-shops, canning and preserving, over-shaded houses, and a large and varied table of other matters of interest and importance to the farmer, fruit grower, florist, gardener, and practical people of all sorts, make up a large and very readable magazine. The Garden aims to be first. It seems to be there.

Biblia for July is a Bible student's storehouse of working plans. Dr. F. W. Bartlet continues his notes on the proper names in Genesis. The editor, Rev. Dr. Davis, writes of the "Beginnings of Literature in Israel." The topics for Christian Endeavor Societies and Epworth Leagues, and notes for the quarter million members of the Bible Reading association are a prominent and useful part of the magazine.

"The Perils and Romance of Whaling" is the title of an article by Gustav Kobbe to be published in the Midsummer (August) Century. It is composed largely of anecdotes of whaling experiences, much of the material for the article having been gathered from log books, old newspapers, and records in possession of F. C. Sanford of Nantucket. It is illustrated by three full-page engravings and a number of smaller pictures.

Our Day for July opens with the concluding portion of Dr. Rankin's poem, "Broken Cadences." Architecture, sculpture, painting, and music are the cadences of art whose uncompleted strains leave us yet an ideal to aid endeavor. Prof. Scarborough of Wilberforce University is sure that the national election law, which the Democrats so eagerly call the "force bill," is a national necessity. The intervention of the General Government is needed to maintain the Constitution and the laws in southern elections. Rev. Wilbur F. Crafts, who has just completed a trans-continental tour in behalf of Sabbath reform, writes briefly but pithily of this great work. The Monday lecture by Mr. Joseph Cook is on "New Rules for Congressional Procedure." The editorial department, notes, "vital points of Expert Opinion," etc., are not the least valuable part of the magazine.

LODGE NOTES.

The name of the Illinois Masons' Benevolent Society of Chicago has been changed to the "Illinois Masonic and Pythian Benevolent Society."

Monday morning a band of White Caps beat John H. Deutts, superintendent of the Harrison County (Ohio) poor house, until he was insensible. His condition is critical.

Representatives from the labor organizations of Minnesota and the Farmers' Alliance went into secret session on the afternoon of July 7, in St. Paul. There were ten delegates each from the State Eight-Hour League, the District Knights of Labor, the Railroad Employees' Association, and the Executive Committee of the Farmers' Alliance, five delegates from each of the trade and labor associations in St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth, Winona, and St. Cloud, making sixty-five delegates in all. The preliminary work of organizing a State Federation of Labor was done. Politics was only brought up in a general way, but this will come up at the meeting to-morrow. As one of the Knights of Labor said, every effort will be made to show both the farmers and the laboring men that their affairs can only be bettered through legislation, and, therefore, it behooves them to try to capture the State Legislature at the next election.

The first annual session of the Independent Order of Railway Conductors was held at the Coleman House, New York, July 13. This organization is an offshoot of the old National organization, which at its last convention, held at Rochester, N. Y., decided to abolish the clause in its by-laws that forbids its members to take part in any strike. At the session of the discordant ones there were thirty-one delegates present, representing the conductors of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad, the Grand Trunk and the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroads. The only material difference between the constitution of the new organization and that of the old is one of the points of the strike clause and the insurance. In the old organization the insurance is a separate feature, and its membership form a separate order, which pay $2,500 on each death or total disability. In the new constitution each member is entitled to $1,000, for which an assessment of $1 is to be levied on each member. It now has a membership of 300, with five divisions.

The announcement of General Master Workman Powderly, of the Knights of Labor, that he has embraced socialism will not cause as much surprise as it would have done some time ago. Of late Mr. Powderly's socialistic tendencies have hardly been concealed. There was a time when he was a cool, level-headed labor leader who saw, and did not hesitate to say, that capital had rights to be respected as well as labor. There was nothing in common between him and the professional agitator, and he earned the respect of all. But Mr. Powderly has changed. His denunciations from the platform are now those of the average agitator. He no longer sees the better sides. He denounces politicians, trusts and capital with equal fervor. As soon as a man becomes dissatisfied with the whole world he becomes a socialist or an anarchist. The machinery of this mundane sphere has not been running in a manner to suit Mr. Powderly for some time past. Hence no one will be astonished to hear that he has become a socialist.—Philadelphia North American.

Don't be discouraged about that eczema till you have given Ayer's Sarsaparilla a persistent trial. Six bottles of this medicine cured the complaint for George S. Thomas, of Ada, Ohio, when all other remedies failed to afford any relief.

WEBSTER'S DICTIONARY and the Christian Cynosure for $4.25, seems a very little amount to pay for so much valuable matter.

You get 832 pages of Cynosure for the dollar and a half!

And whoever has renewed their subscriptions within the last six months can get 1280 pages of Dictionary, sent postpaid for $2.75!!

Read the advertisement on page 14, "A REMARKABLE OFFER."

10,000

Another ten thousand edition of the tract,

KILLED, AND NO INQUEST.

This is a large 4-page tract at 30 cents per pound, 15 cents for half pound, and 10 cents for a third of a pound. It is an illustrated account of the death of Rev. J. W. Johnston, while being initiated by the officers of Huntington Lodge, W. Va., in January of this year. Sent postpaid at the above price. Address,

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
221 W. Madison St. Chicago

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 20 cents per pound:

1. Historical Sketch—National Christian Association.
2. Address to American Pastors.
3. Freemasonry in the Family.
4. President C. G. Finney on the duty of Christians towards the Lodge.
5. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
6. Modern Heathenism.
7. Ministers at Rival Altars.
8. Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodge.
9. Secrecy and Sin.
10. Selling Dead Horses.
11. History of Masonry.
12. Despotism Character of Freemasonry.

19. Freemasonry, a Christ-excluding Religion.

22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.

28. Nathaniel Colver, D.D., on Masonry.

33. Hon. Wm. H. Seward on Secret Societies.

37. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).

39. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?

44. D. L. Moody on Secret Societies.

45. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?

49. John Quincy Adams on the duty of American Voters.

Chapters in American Politics.

Masonry vs. Prohibition.

Decline of the G. A. R.

Christianity and Odd-fellowship. Part 1, 4 pages; part 2, 4 pages.

The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—20 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

NEW ENGLAND DEPARTMENT.—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent, No. 309, Tremont St., Boston.

WASHINGTON DEPARTMENT.—W. B. Stoddard, Agent, No. 215, 44 St., Washington, D. C.

COLLEGE AGENT, Rev. S. F. Porter, Cynosure office.

SPECIAL AGENT.—Rev. C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Du Page Co., Ill.

STATE AGENTS.

Minnesota, E. Hanson, Minneapolis.
New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimball, New Market.

Ohio, Rev. H. H. Hinman, Oberlin.
Pennsylvania, Rev. J. T. Michael, 2942 Westmont Street, Philadelphia.

Alabama, Rev. G. M. Elliott, Selma.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
Nathan Callender, Montdale, Pa.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa.
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.
Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
Rev. E. Mathews, Long Island City, N. Y.
E. Barnettson, Haskinville, N. Y.
Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
A. W. Parry, Annawan, Ill.

THE N. C. A. FUNDS.

The General Fund is that from which the running expenses of the Association are paid. From it the agents on the field are supported.

The Foreign Fund is that from which the foreign demand for literature against the lodge is supplied to missionaries.

The Free Tract Fund clearly states by its name the object for which contributions are solicited. Millions of pages have been distributed by means of this fund.

The Cynosure Ministers' Fund. The donations to this fund have enabled the Association to send many copies of the Cynosure to the ministers of the South, especially to pastors of colored churches. The result has been a blessing to them and their churches.

Contributions to any or all these funds are urgently solicited.

FORM OF BEQUEST.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of — dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be sufficient discharge.

USED ODD-FELLOWS. ILLUSTRATED.

The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Recantment and Rebekah (ladder) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with sketch of the origin, history and character of the order. Over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. The ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Book" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover, 50 cents; per dozen $4.00.

All orders promptly filled by the
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.

THE N. C. A. BUILDING

(The gift of Philo Carpenter.)

—AND OFFICE OF—

The Christian Cynosure,

221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

The National Christian Association

PRESIDENT—Bishop Milton Wright, Dayton, O.

VICE PRESIDENT—Rev. Geo. R. Milton, Elgin, Ill.

COR. SEC'Y and TREASURER—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SECRETARY—Rev. E. R. Worrell, Washington Heights, Ill.

DIRECTORS—T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, John Gardner, J. M. Hitchcock, Jerome Howe, G. R. Milton, Wm. Pinkney, J. P. Richards, Alexander Thomson, E. Whipple, E. R. Worrell.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS.

NEW ENGLAND.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic Conn.; Sec'y, Miss E. E. Flagg, Wellesley, Mass.; Treas., Z. Graves, Harris, Mass.

ALABAMA.—Pres., Prof. Pickens; Sec., G. M. Elliott; Treas., Rev. C. B. Curtis; all of Selma.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., Rev. G. R. Milton, Elgin; Sec., A. H. Hiatt, Jr., Wheaton; Treas., Ezra A. Cook, Chicago.

INDIANA.—Pres., William H. Figg, Reno; Sec., S. L. Cook, Albion; Treas., Benjamin Ulsh, Silver Lake.

IOWA.—Cor. Sec., C. D. Trumbull, Morning Sun; Rec. Sec., W. L. Enlow, Birmingham; Treas., Wm. Crawford, Washington.

KANSAS.—Pres., J. S. T. Milligan, Denison; Sec., S. Hart, LeCompton; Treas., J. A. Torrence, Denison.

MAINE.—Pres., Isaac Jackson, Harrison; Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W. Goddard, West Sidney.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt, Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., S. B. Sjöblom, Ferguson Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul; Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., B. F. Miller, Eagleville; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec., A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

NEBRASKA.—Pres., S. Austin, Fairmount; Cor. Sec., W. Spooner, Kearney; Treas., J. C. Fye.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., A. A. Hoyt, Littleton; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., Isaac Hyatt, Gilford Village.

NEW YORK.—Pres., Prof. A. R. Dodd, Houghton; Sec., Rev. W. A. Hazlett, Belmont; Treas., P. D. Miller, Newfane.

OHIO.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Parry; Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Seneca; Cor. Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Seneca.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., Nathan Callender, Montdale; Cor. Sec., E. J. Chalfant, York; Treas., J. C. Young, Custer City.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. W. Wood, Baraboo; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie.

HAVE YOU EXAMINED

The list of Books and Tracts for sale by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. Look it over carefully and see if there is not something you want for yourself or for your friend. Send for full catalogue to 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.

The Christian Cynosure.

J. BLANCHARD, EDITOR.

HENRY L. KELLOGG, ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JULY 24, 1890.

MASONIC DECLARATIONS.

The Christian Standard being asked if it approved of the dedication of a church with Masonic ceremonies, replies: "Most assuredly we do not. Of the inside of Masonry we know nothing. From the character of many whom it embraces in its membership we are forbidden to doubt that it has much to commend it. But the characteristic of primitive Christianity is its simplicity and openness and no abracadabra is in place at any of its ceremonies."

We are glad that our brother of the Standard does not approve of the mingling of heathen with Christian ceremonies, and we consider his reasons quite adequate. But when he says that he knows nothing of the inside of Masonry he confesses to an ignorance that, in an editor of a religious journal, is not commendable. All the facts of Masonry, so far as its essential character is concerned, can be learned outside the lodge. The means of information are abundant and trustworthy. The confession of ignorance carries with it the implication that the Masonry of to-day has not been published on the housetops. This is agreeable to the fraternity, but misleading to the uninformed.

Nor can we see the propriety of saying that judging from the character of some who are Masons there seems much to commend it. We might with equal propriety form a similar judgment of tobacco-using and wine-drinking. The mistakes and short-comings of good men are not to be plead in justification of the evil which they practice and sanction.

NOT A PETER CARTWRIGHT MEETING.

A "Methodist" in the Chicago News contrasts the old-fashioned Peter Cartwright style of camp-meetings with the present gathering at DesPlaines near this city. This meeting had been advertised as one of the old type—all for salvation. But the good Methodist objector says that tennis and croquet have stated hours for games, and sometimes the meeting has to take care of itself until the games are done.

We could remind the brother of a more sure word of exhortation and reproof. Peter Cartwright used to say of about the only secret society he knew of: "Masonry originated with the devil and will end with the devil." That is rough-hewn, but true as prophecy. Now Rev. H. W. Bolton, pastor of the First Methodist church of this city, has charge of the DesPlaines meeting. Mr. Bolton is an orator of standing appointment for several secret societies; and, while Dr. Goodwin and Joseph Cook were speaking at the April Conference in his church against the lodges, he was taking the Scotch-rite degrees of blasphemy and denial of Christ with a lot of Freemasons of all sorts of morality over on another street.

With such a leader, what shall be said of the meeting? May God take it out of such hands and bless the prayers and testimonies of the truly pious souls who may be there, that men may be converted to Christ—the leader among them.

—Since writing the above we have a further report direct from the DesPlaines meeting. Dr. Lowry of New York, editor of one of the Methodist journals, and a man of fervent piety, preached a very earnest and searching discourse one day last week. During the sermon he quoted the passage which has become familiar to the Cynosure readers—2 Cor. 6: 14-18, beginning, "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers," closing with the command to "come out" and "be separate," and the promise of God's adoption. This, said the eloquent speaker, is a passage seldom quoted among us, and its depth and scope are little understood. A chorus of fervent "Amen's" showed the sympathy and approval of the hearers, and he went on to expound the passage and enlarge on its positive commands, that men who are faithful to the Lord Jesus Christ must come out from the unlawful associations with unbelievers. The church of Jesus Christ is the only organization for Christians who hope to maintain their faith. It was plainly noticed that the manager of the camp-meeting shrunk and was much moved by this pointed exhortation.

A brother who has attended the meeting gives us also the following note of his experience there:

"Previous sessions of the DesPlaines Methodist camp-meeting have been noted for large attendance and great spiritual power. It is not so with the present meeting. While on the ground one day last week it was evident to us that what a leading Methodist minister said in private conversation is eminently true. In reference to the leader of the meeting this year (Dr. Bolton of this city) he said:

"There is no doubt that since becoming so deeply engaged in advocating secret societies he has lost a large part of his former remarkable evangelistic power. He never rises before an audience now without reminding them that he is a denier of Jesus Christ by his affiliation with the Masonic lodge. No forced enthusiasm or superficial sanctimoniousness can make amends for the outraged sensibilities of the audience."

"This is more true now than ever before. Now as never before the principles of the lodges are being weighed to be found wanting in every case. Wanting just what humanity needs most—the Lord Jesus Christ. And it is no longer safe for ministers of the blessed Gospel to run the gamut of thirty-two degrees of Masonry. Such an affiliation was always harmful, but now it is known to be so."

FORCING THE PROHIBITION ISSUE.

The outraged communities in a dozen States whose local provisions against the liquor nuisance are annulled by the Supreme Court may cry out with Hamlet at "the law's delay," as they see how Congress dallies with the "original package" bills. The Senate measure seemed to be an honest one, intended to remedy the case where it was most needed. But in the House there were too many politicians ready to parley with the devil; and the longer they remain in this attitude, the more desperate does the case grow for the poor people upon whom the saloon has its hungry dragon-eyes. The mischievous consequences of the decision of the Supreme Court are daily manifest in reports from prohibitory States. The people are defenseless, disarmed before the remorseless liquor-dealer. Local courts seem bound to whistle the tune set for them at Washington. Indignation meetings are held and the law appealed to in vain. It no longer has power to protect the home. There is no doubt that serious consequences will follow, either to the public peace or to political parties. Either Congress must act, or the Court reverse its bad decision. The bills before Congress, giving the States power to legislate, are already objected to as unconstitutional. It is contended that as the Supreme Court has decided that the power in question belongs to Congress and not the States, it can not be delegated or transferred to the States by any act of Congress; that the respective powers of Congress and of the States are defined and fixed by the Constitution and that to concede to Congress the right to add to the powers of a State is to make that body paramount to the Constitution. The Washington correspondent of the Inter Ocean in considering the difficulty proposes the most reasonable way out of it thus:

"By far the best and most desirable remedy lies with the court itself—reversal of its ruling. It has stripped the States of the greatest and most salutary power that belongs to a commonwealth—the power to legislate for the morals of the people. That the court has made a serious error in this case is believed not only by its own members, but by the ablest constitutional lawyers in the country."

But now a Chicago Representative, Mr. Adams, has a measure which may pass the House (for the Democrats all want it) defining what shall be an original package under the Supreme Court's ruling. This measure would fasten that ugly decision upon the country and overthrow every hope of State prohibition. Under it liquor dealers would be allowed to sell five-gallon kegs or cases of a dozen bottles, and there would be no help for it but to BEGIN A REBELLION.

And that, it seems to us, is what God is leading us to in his providence. It seems now probable that the infamous, murderous saloon will be fastened upon a long-suffering or indifferent people by act of Congress and decision of the Supreme Court. This Adams' bill should be the last straw to break the backs of a servile people. Let them writhe under the heel of this destroyer until they are willing to strike through every party shield that protects him. There is no help if it comes to this in any local option or State measure. The men whom we have sent to Washington have decided it for us. They say the issue must be national; and so let it be, if they must have it so. There is conscience and patriotism enough left in the country we believe to meet it.

—Next week we shall print an appeal from Pres. C. A. Blanchard, who was appointed financial secretary by the N. C. A. Board. Let no one fail to read it.

—In response to Prof. Fischer's inquiry in his report of the exceedingly important discussion at St. Paul, the Cynosure promises next week to give the number of colleges in the country and to propose a plan for sending a copy of our paper to every college and Y. M. C. A. reading room. We hope also to have a free and able discussion of college secret societies in the Cynosure, which every educator in the country will wish to read.

PERSONAL NOTES.

—Pres. J. Blanchard and his little party, whose movements are followed eagerly from the Cynosure office, after a visit and consultation with Bro. J. P. Stoddard, expected to spend the Sabbath with Thomas White, Esq., of Brooklyn.

—Rev. L. I. Crawford, editor of the News, of Sandy Lake, Pa., has been for some time laid aside from editorial duties by serious illness. Our sympathy is sincerely extended to this brother. His home has welcomed the lecturers of our reform and his paper has always spoken for Christ against the lodge. We hope to hear soon of his recovery, the Lord willing.

—Dr. J. E. Roy, of the American Missionary Association, knows how to dovetail two kinds of work together with the skill of a master mechanic, and make both better for the union. He frequently puts in some good speeches for temperance during his missionary jaunts. Saturday morning he returned home from a trip with his case of temperance views, which the oxygen light and a skillful operator had thrown out to the eye of a number of fine summer audiences while his eloquent speech sunk deeply into the conviction of the people.

—Rev. C. C. Harrah, pastor of Plymouth Church, Peoria, has resigned that labor to the great sorrow of his people, and will remove to the home of his parents at Newton, Iowa. His health has been much impaired, and perhaps permanently, by his severe pastoral labors. He will continue to preach as health and opportunity permit. Bro. Harrah's many friends in any other parts of the country will learn of this forced retirement from the active ministry with regret, with the hope that restored health may soon return this useful pastor to work again.

—The Daily Saratogian of Saratoga, N. Y., has a cordial personal note on the Cynosure editor who spent a week at the celebrated springs and was in the vicinity of Boston when last heard from. The Saratogian of July 14th says: "Yesterday, at Elmwood Hall, I had a delightful talk with Rev. Jonathan Blanchard, a well-known pioneer in 'every good word and work,' beginning with the days when to be identified with the cause of abolitionism meant more than is commonly dreamed of nowadays. Rev. Mr. Blanchard has traveled extensively on this continent as well as in Europe, and is one of the few clergymen who, like the late Albert Barnes, refused to be D. D.'d. He was graduated from Middlebury College, Vt., nearly half a century ago, was president of Knox College, Galesburg, Ill., for thirteen years, and of Wheaton College for twenty-six years. He has been editor-in-chief of the Christian Cynosure, Chicago, for twenty-two years, and, although well advanced along life's journey, his intellect seems to be as clear as when he was hoeing his row with the boys of the long ago. His recollections of Thad. Stevens, and of other departed leaders, are exceptionally interesting. Yesterday morning he preached at the Free Methodist church."

REFORM NEWS.

THE RIVER MISSION.

MARIETTA, Ohio.

While our boat was tied up at Sistersville, W. Va., we received a visit from Rev. A. W. Gruber, pastor of the M. E. church at New Matamoras, O., six miles down the Ohio. He said, pointing across the river: "That little place is called Stringtown, and is the only place in Washington county where whisky is sold. Those skiffs you see coming from up and down the river every day, every night, every Sunday, are taking young men to Stringtown for whisky. They are to have an election there in about two weeks. Mass meetings are to be held in every part of the township, and we want you to come over and help us drive out those two saloons."

We told him we would spend one night the following week in the fight if he would arrange for it. Now, if we only had our floating chapel finished, we could take it to the Ohio shore and it would seat every man, woman and child in Jackson township.

At the appointed time with wife and five daughters, armed with violins, flute, viola, 'cello and organ, we began the fight, using a number of stirring temperance songs which were well received by a large audience.

Now for the pictures! Out of a thousand, which shall we select to make the most vivid and lasting impressions on the hearts and minds of these people, and turn them against the saloon? After a few introductory scenes we threw upon the screen a representation of a lonely road in India, infested by Thugs who could not be punished for robbery and murder because they had paid for and obtained a license. Their work was done more quickly than that of the saloon-keeper, who takes the money over the bar and lands his victim in a drunkard's grave, but the one word "murder" will cover both. The pictures representing the human stomach from a healthy condition through the various stages of alcoholic medication and drunkenness seemed to leave the people very thoughtful.

Other pictures were then shown introducing the audience to the popular young lawyer treating his political friends in grand style, and his return to the bar five years later, a beggar. We tried to show that the whisky party is the power behind the throne that elects or defeats the candidates of either political party as they may favor or oppose the saloon. Many other scenes were presented before the audience, closing with the "Rock of Ages."

So the battle has been fought, and a week will tell whether or not the victory has been won.

A WEEK LATER.

"How went the election in Jackson township?"

"The saloon is defeated by a large majority."

A MONTH LATER.

"Bro. Gruber, how is Stringtown?"

"The saloons are both dead. We had one of the keepers in jail for illegal selling, and the prosecutions have been pressed so hard that no liquor can now be bought there?"

There are many such opportunities for victories if we are only prepared for the conflict. We are asking God to provide the money to seat the floating chapel, that we may push the battle into every city and village along the river.

I. R. B. ARNOLD.

PENNSYLVANIA HARVESTS.

STEWARTSTOWN, Pa., July 18, 1890.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—The anti-secrecy discussion which I began in York county, Pa., last January, did not stop with my departure. The result is a growing sentiment in favor of the right. Several who then knew little of the lodge or its teachings are now active opponents. The weekly visitation of the Cynosure keeps the subject constantly before those who kindly subscribed. No reformer can afford to be without such a reform journal. Bro. Wm. Secrist in renewing his subscription to our paper induced two of his neighbors to join him. Every Cynosure reader has an influence which, exerted in behalf of our paper, would soon more than double our list. I am in the country at the home of an old friend, Israel Gable. On every hand the reapers are gathering the golden grain. Local showers have greatly revived and helped the growing crops. There will be a heavy crop of hay in this section. Wheat and oats are perhaps more than half a crop. Corn and potatoes look well. I shall, D. V., spend a little time here reviewing fields where I have formerly lectured. I can do little aside from personal work till the rush of harvest is over.

W. B. STODDARD.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 16, 1890.

Is the United States a Christian nation? Probably nine hundred and ninety-nine intelligent persons out of every thousand would answer this question in the affirmative; and rightly, because a very large majority of the most intelligent inhabitants of this country consider themselves Christians, which very naturally causes them to speak of the United States as a Christian nation. But officially speaking the United States is not a Christian nation; its Constitution, owing to a grievous oversight on the part of our forefathers, caused doubtless by the wave of atheism which swept over the civilized world about the time that the foundation of our present government was being laid, does not recognize the existence of a Supreme Being.

Ever since then good and holy men and women have been striving to have the grievous error corrected; but up to the present time all that they have succeeded in having done was to have "In God we trust" stamped upon certain of our coins. But they have not given up the good fight, nor will they until God and Christianity are recognized in the Constitution. Numerous signed petitions from seven States have been presented in the Senate, asking that an amendment to the Constitution, to that effect, be adopted.

It seems strange that there should be any hesitation on the part of Congress in this very important matter. It has been held by the United States Supreme Court more than once that Christianity is a part of the common law of the land. Why then should it, and God Almighty, be denied a place in the Constitution of the United States? It is a shame that the nation which bids fair in a few years to be the most prosperous and populous on earth, does not officially recognize the existence of God and Christianity. Let Christians argue and agitate this question until every member of Congress shall feel heartily ashamed of the delay in correcting this error of the framers of our Constitution.

At last there seems a probability that the sinful and demoralizing practice of selling pools on horse races in the District of Columbia, a practice which has brought disgrace into the family of more than one Christian father and mother, is to be broken up by law. The House Committee on the District of Columbia has decided to report favorably a bill prohibiting pool selling in this District, except (alas, that there should be any "except") during one week in the spring and the same time in the fall, when a local club is to be allowed to debauch those who visit their races by selling pools upon their track. It does seem a pity that in this District, which is directly under the authority of Congress, any kind of gambling should be thus legalized. It would be well for the youth of the country if horse racing were everywhere abolished; its victims number thousands each year, and it accomplishes no good whatever.

The friends of the "Original Package" bill do not fancy the manner in which that measure has been treated by the House of Representatives. It was some time ago reported from committee and placed upon the calendar, and ten days ago it was expected to come up; but when an attempt was made to take it up Representative Cummings of New York contemptuously remarked, "That bill is only intended to please a lot of prohibition cranks, and any time will do to take it up." Unfortunately the House, or rather a small majority of the members present that day, voted against taking up the bill and it has not yet been considered.

A number of petitions have been presented in the House asking that this bill be passed, among them one was presented by Representative Morse, of Massachusetts, who is an ardent temperance man and a very willing and effective speaker for the cause, whenever an opportunity presents itself. There is little doubt about the passing of the bill, if its friends can ever succeed in getting it before the House.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

The assessment orders—Labor matters—How the secret temperance lodges help prohibition—Draught adds another chapter to the story of her shame—A statement retracted.

The Massachusetts Legislature of 1890 has done one good thing. It has prohibited the further incorporation of assessment endowment organizations. We have already a sufficient number to work untold misery and suffering in the future, for when once the deluded multitude lose their confidence in these orders there will be a panic which will act most disastrously on every department of trade and business. The Springfield Republican which has always opposed them, in a recent issue shows up one way in which they contrive to make figures lie, and set at naught every known principle of mathematics. This is by post-dating certificates of membership; that is, by dating them perhaps two months later than the date on which the person entered and paid his fee. This may seem a small advantage, but a delay of two months, multiplied by hundreds and thousands, may mean considerable; while, if it is fourteen instead of twelve months before a member can receive his money, it naturally follows that there will be few to be paid of the first year's endowment members.

Another labor meeting is to be held in Boston this week. Among the speakers will be Harvard's colored class orator, Morgan, Rev. O. P. Gifford, and several noted champions of labor. A master carpenter who is a member of Dr. Gifford's church denies that the Association of Master Builders is in any way a combination against labor. However this may be, he has said a few words as reported in the Transcript that it would be well if all workingmen would hear and heed. "They (the contractors) were once poor men themselves, who by honest industry and untiring toil have attained their present position. The same ladder of success is open to others to mount, but they will always remain at the bottom if they join a society that puts the best workman on a level with the poorest." It is a pity that some method cannot be devised by which laboring men and their employers can meet and honestly discuss their differences untrammelled on either side by any combination whatever. These labor meetings accomplish but little because they fail to recognize the real difficulty.

A correspondent of the Weekly Times, which by the way is one of the smartest and brightest of our prohibition papers, has found out that a secret temperance society is nothing if it does not glorify its own order. Saving the fallen is an altogether secondary consideration. It seems the Northampton Prohibition Club, as a means to vote out the rum business in that city, got up a kind of Temperance Congress at which representatives of the twelve different temperance societies were present. At this conference it was decided by these organizations to hold a series of public meetings, each society taking its turn in furnishing a speaker, but all attending and sharing mutually in the expense. But it was only the old cry over again, "Great is Diana of the Ephesians!" Each speaker took the occasion to glorify—not the temperance cause, but his own order; and naturally enough the hopes of the Prohibitionists who had thought by these union meetings to arouse sufficient temperance sentiment to banish the saloon, were disappointed. The writer of this article, who seems a very earnest and sincere prohibitionist, took especial exception to the speech of Hon. Charles R. Tirrell of Natick on the evening when the Temple of Honor had charge. Now this gentleman not only belongs to the aforesaid organization, but he is a great Mason. Some two years ago at a Masonic celebration in Natick he gave an address which appeared in the local paper, and from which I then clipped the opening part, it being decidedly the plainest and frankest utterance as regards the despotic character of Masonry which I ever saw outside of Morris or Webb:—

"As Master Masons we are accustomed to obey the mandates from the Oriental chair. I do not know of a secret organization where the presiding officer is more the autocrat of its destiny. His orders almost without an exception are implicitly complied with. This is the more remarkable because it embraces men from every walk in life; kings, emperors and nobles, statesmen, professional men and the literati, business men, labor-

(Continued on 12th page.)

THE HOME.

A SONG OF CHEER.

Over the mists of the wintry sea
A message of gladness is sent to me,
And I pass it on to my friends to-night,
This message written in words of light;
Though dense is the darkness in which we stand,
"The night is far spent, the day is at hand!"

Like figures uncertain, we grope about
In dangerous places, in fog and doubt;
In vain we long for a shelter warm,
From the chilling sleet and the driving storm,
But "Be ye patient," is God's command,
"The night is far spent, the day is at hand!"

Men's hearts, like Autumn leaves, are cast
Hither and thither by sorrow's blast;
The air is heavy with want and woe,
And the fierce war tidings we shrink to know,
And a cry of sadness rings through the land,
Yet "the night is far spent, the day is at hand!"

It is always darkest before break of day
Drives the shades of the night away;
The silence is deepest before the song
Bursts into joyousness, loud and long,
And though in the stillness of night we stand,
"The night is far spent, the day is at hand!"

E'en now as we walk in the shadows dim,
The angels are singing the advent hymn;
Faintly we hear it across the snow,
The good, glad anthem of long ago,
And we say as we think of the shining band,
"The night is far spent, the day is at hand!"

All shall be well in the happy morn
When we see His face, the lowly born,
And glad is the message that comes to me
Out of the mist of the wintry sea;
For a star of hope is above the land,
"The night is far spent, the day is at hand!"

—Marianne Farningham.

CORRUPTION IN HIGH PLACES.

There is much complaint of corruption in high places, and the cure for all this is supposed to be in the votes of Christian men. Men must vote as they pray, and then something will be accomplished. But people sometimes overlook the fact that there is something to be done besides voting. Voting is simply the counting of noses, and if the majority of noses are red ones, counting will avail little or nothing for righteousness or temperance.

People need instruction and knowledge. They need to be made acquainted with facts and truth; and above all they need to have their consciences quickened by rebukes of wrong and testimonies on the side of truth and right. If men, accused of crimes and infamies, find their way into places of power and authority, it is either because the truth concerning them is concealed or because the public conscience is debauched, and men are ready to sanction and endorse criminal and infamous characters. The Psalmist tells us that the man who shall abide in the tabernacle of the Lord and dwell in his holy hill is a man "in whose eyes a vile person is contemned, but he honoreth them that fear the Lord," Psa. 15. But he who honors them that fear the Lord, must fear the Lord himself.

The beginning of all effective reformatory work is in the hearts and consciences of individual men, under the rebukes of the Word of God and the convictions of the Holy Spirit. As a general principle it may be said that the rulers are as good as the ruled. God allows bad men to rule over sinful nations. When people are unprincipled, neglectful of God and careless of truth and righteousness, the Lord allows evil men to control them, scourge them, and teach them by bitter experience that the way of the transgressor is hard, and that righteousness tendeth to life.

It is useless to blame rulers, legislators and leaders for doing just the things which their supporters and constituents do without rebuke. A western judge who was sent to the Legislature was accused of getting drunk. The charge was brought home to him, and the reply was, "Yes, I do get drunk sometimes, but I never get too drunk to fairly represent my constituents." There are thousands and millions of men scattered through the length and breadth of the land who could never be adequately represented by men of sobriety, justice or chastity. They select men of their own kind to represent them; and the best remedy for all this iniquity is found in the preaching of righteousness and the faithful testimony against all evil. Politicians cannot be expected to damage themselves by placing in positions of power men whose principles they may admire but do not intend to adopt. Political parties, hunting for votes, offices and spoils, select their candidates to capture the votes of ignorant, unprincipled, corrupt, intemperate men; and the more clamorous and intriguing such men are, the more fearful party managers are of offending and alienating them, and the more willing they are to cater to their appetites and conform to their desires. Whoever conforms to any political party, is apt to have forced upon him unsavory men, who are selected because they are available—that is, they are acceptable to the corrupt, who are given to plotting and wire-pulling, to politicians who love the things which they should hate, and hate the things that honest men should desire.

The grand remedy for political evils is ventilation, and this must be the work of individuals. Parties will not engage in it. One man who will tell the truth will accomplish more than a dozen wire-pullers. He may smash parties, disturb caucuses, and cause as much dismay as a bull in a china shop, but he will teach men a lesson which they need to learn, and what they will not very soon forget.

The world is hungry for the truth. The multitude of men are to a good degree honest, and well-intentioned, but they are misled by evil counsellors. Shrewd, far-seeing, scheming political wire-pullers and rum-sellers, with their priest-ridden followers, deceive the people, poison the fountains of knowledge, lay their hands on the telegraphic wires, manipulate the press, and seek to control thought, conceal truth, and disseminate falsehood. The common people are consequently misinformed, and often helpless and despairing. In such an emergency it needs men, far-seeing, upright, unimpeachable, unpurchaseable, who will simply tell the truth, and shame the devil and all his black host; men who cannot be frightened, who will not be deceived, who will do right though the heavens should fall; and who will be content to spend their days and nights in thankless labor, without hope of earthly recompense or reward. Such men make their mark upon the ages, and when those who have prospered in ungodliness and thriven by corruption are forgotten, when the memory of the wicked shall rot, the righteous shall be in everlasting remembrance, and men shall revere those who have been valiant for the truth and have wrought nobly in the Master's service.—The Safeguard.

WATCH THE TURNING POINTS.

There are certain hours and certain moments in life that are pivotal, upon which important matters depend, and at which the most momentous interests are decided. For most of the great questions of life are decided in advance. Whether a drop of water shall flow into the Pacific Ocean or the Gulf of Mexico, does not depend upon any action which is taken near the shores of those waters; but it depends upon the turning of a tiny stream away among the Rocky Mountains. Whether a man shall be an ignorant and unnoticed drudge, or an influential and valuable man, may depend not on any struggles or efforts in mature years and active life, but on a little white-headed boy studying his lesson in school, or spending his time in idleness and play. Whether a man shall be a sober, temperate, useful man, or a poor, drunken outcast, may not depend upon the will, the acts, or the determination of the full-grown man; but it may depend upon whether he has been brought up to take a sip of cider in his boyhood, or to make use of stimulants and condiments, which vitiate his taste, and make him an easy prey of the men who fatten on the sins and vices of their fellow-men. Whether a woman shall be a strong, healthy, ruddy, vigorous, active, useful and beautiful wife, and mother, and grandmother, and an influential member of society, or whether she shall on the contrary be a weak, feeble, delicate, dyspeptic, consumptive invalid, a burden to herself and her friends, until she speedily sinks into an early grave, depends, perhaps, not on any decision of hers with direct reference to those matters, nor upon the skill of doctors or the desires of friends; but the decision may depend upon whether in early life she seeks to improve upon the form which God has designed for her, and so cramps and confines her vital organs that before she is aware of it her strength is gone, her health is ruined, and she becomes a helpless wreck, wretched, useless, and burdensome to those to whom she might have been a helper and a blessing.

It is not to Jerusalem alone that the Saviour says, "Oh, that thou hadst known, even thou in this thy day, the things that belong to thy peace." There are thousands who do not know, who will not know, those things until it is too late for them to be benefited by the knowledge.

Let those who fear the Lord, who hope in his mercy, and who wait for his salvation, remember that every present hour is an opportunity to be improved or neglected, and that most solemn consequences may hang upon each neglected moment or misimproved opportunity. To-day may be the day for making the decision which shall fix our destiny beyond recall. Let us pray that he who gives us privileges may give us a heart to improve them; lest we mourn at the last when our neglected opportunities shall rise up against us, and when it shall be too late to repair the mischief that our neglect has wrought.—The Common People.

ROB CRAIG'S STRANGE EXPERIENCE.

The house seemed very still that morning. Father Craig had gone to Boston on the early train; and Mother Craig had been called from her breakfast to go to Aunt Phebe Perry, who was surely going to die this time. But Rob did not mind being left. As soon as his breakfast was well swallowed he took his rifle out on the south porch to give it a cleaning; for he had laid out a famous day's sport.

His mother always looked very sober when the rifle was brought out, for her tender heart was sorely hurt when any little wild thing came to harm through it; but Rob's favorite uncle had sent it to him the Christmas before, and his father approved of it as one of the ways to make a boy manly. So his mother said very little, except now and then to plead gently the cause of those who could not plead for themselves.

So Rob sat there, rubbing and cleaning, whistling merrily, and thinking of the squirrel's nest he knew of, and the rabbit tracks of which Johnny Bullard had told him. He whistled so shrilly that presently a broad-brimmed hat appeared around the corner of the house. There was a little girl under the hat, but you didn't see her at first.

"Sh! Robbie," she said, holding up a small forefinger. "Amy Louise is dreadful bad with her head, and I'm trying to get her to sleep."

"Why don't you put a plantain leaf on her head? Plantain's prime for headaches," said Rob.

"Would you please get me one, Robbie?" pleaded the trusting little body. "Mamma said for me not to go away from the house, and Norah is cross this morning."

Time was precious just then; but this one sister was very dear. So, laying down his rifle, Rob ran over to the meadow across the road, and brought back a huge plantain leaf, which he bound carefully upon the head of Amy Louise, quite extinguishing that suffering doll, but to the infinite content of the little girl. Then he went back to the porch, and took up his rifle again, looking admiringly at the shining barrel and polished stock.

"Now, Mr. Squirrel," he said, "look out for yourself, for I'll have a crack at you presently."

And he leaned back against the side of the porch to plan his route; for the day was too hot for any unnecessary steps. Just then he heard a click, and looked around straight into the barrel of another rifle.

"My!" said Rob, "that's a pretty careless thing to do."

But the big man holding the rifle did not move and kept his finger on the trigger. He was a stranger to Rob, and under the circumstances the most unpleasant one he had ever met.

"Will you please lower your gun? You might shoot me," said Rob, trying to speak bravely, but with a queer feeling under his jacket.

"That's what I came for," said the man.

"Come to shoot me?" cried Rob. "What have I done?"

"Nothing, that I know of," answered the man indifferently; "but boys do a great deal of mischief. They steal fruit and break windows, and make horrid noises. Besides, there are a great many of them, and they might overrun us if we didn't thin them out now and then."

Rob was horrified. Without doubt, the man was an escaped lunatic; and right around the corner of the house was Ethel, likely to appear at any minute. Just then the man spoke again.

"Besides, it's necessary to kill, to get food."

If Rob had not been so frightened he would have laughed as he thought of his wiry little frame, with scarcely a spare ounce of flesh on it; but he answered very meekly, "But I'm not good to eat."

"No," said the man. "You'd be tough eating."

"And my clothes wouldn't be worth anything to you," said Rob, glancing quickly over his worn suit.

"No," with indifference. "But I came out for a day's sport, and you're the first game I've seen, so I may as well finish you and look farther. I saw some small tracks 'round here;" and again that horrible click.

"Oh," cried poor Rob, "don't shoot me! I'm the only boy my father and mother have and they'd miss me dreadfully."

"Pshaw!" said the other. "They wouldn't mind it much; and, besides, I'm coming around in a day or two to shoot them."

"Shoot my father and mother?" gasped Rob. "You wouldn't do such a wicked thing!"

"Why, yes, I would," laughed the dreadful man. "They are bigger and better-looking than you, and their clothes are worth more. I've had my eyes on this family for some time, and I may as well begin now."

It seemed to Rob as if his heart stopped beating. Then he cried out, "Please, please don't kill me. I'm so young, and I want to live so much."

The big man laughed derisively.

"Do you think I shall find any game that does not want to live? What do you suppose I own a gun for, if I'm not to use it?"

Somehow, even in his terror, this argument had a familiar sound. Just then the big man took deliberate aim. Rob gave one look at the landscape spread out before him. It was so pleasant and life was so sweet! Then he shut his eyes. Bang!

When he opened his eyes, he saw only the old south porch, with the hop tassels dancing and swinging, and his rifle fallen flat on the floor. It was all a horrid dream, from which his fallen rifle had wakened him. But the first thing he did was to peep around the corner of the house to assure himself of Ethel's safety. Yes, there was the broad-brimmed hat flapping down the garden walk, attended by the cat and her two little kittens, and lame old Beppo, the dog.

Rob did not take up his beloved rifle. Resting his elbows on his knees and his chin in his hands, he sat looking off over the fields, while a serious thinking went on under his curly thatch, and his thoughts ran something like this:

"I wonder if the birds and squirrels feel as frightened as I did. I guess they do; for sometimes, when I only hurt and catch them, their hearts are just thumping. And how cowardly that big man seemed coming out to shoot me—so much smaller! but I'm a great deal bigger than the things I shoot, and we don't use them in any way. Mother won't wear birds' wings, nor let Ethel; and we don't eat them. I guess I've had a vision, a sort of warning. Oh, what if that dreadful man had found Ethel!" and Rob went around the corner of the house.

The procession had just turned, and was coming toward him.

"How is she?" he asked, nodding toward the afflicted Amy Louise, hanging limply over her little mistress's shoulder.

"She's ever so much better. I think she would be able to swing a little, if I held her," with a very insinuating smile.

"Come along, then, little fraud," laughed Rob, turning toward the swing."

"But aren't you going shooting, Robbie?"

"No!" said Rob, with tremendous emphasis.

When Mrs. Craig came home, tired and sad, in the middle of the afternoon, instead of the forlorn little girl she expected to find wandering about, there was a pleasant murmur of voices on the south porch, where Rob sat mending his kite; while Ethel rocked gently to and fro, with Amy Louise and both kittens in her lap.

"You didn't go hunting, then, Robert?" said his mother.

Rob shook his head, without giving any reason; but that evening as Mrs. Craig sat at twilight in her low "thinking chair" by the west window, there was a soft step behind her, a quick kiss on the top of her head, and a note dropped into her lap, and the note said:

"I will never again kill any creature for sport."

"ROBERT ANDERSON CRAIG."

And Robert Anderson Craig is a boy who will keep his word.—Congregationalist.

TEMPERANCE.

RESUBMISSION IN MAINE.

The country has been hearing for years past that no political party in Maine would even think of such a flying in the face of public sentiment and courting of practical annihilation at the polls as would be involved in a proposal to unload prohibition. Yet this week the Maine Democrats have done that very thing—not merely thought of it and talked about it, but done it. At their State convention in Augusta on Wednesday they adopted, 145 to 99, the following resolutions:

"Resolved, That we favor the election of a governor and legislature who will resubmit the prohibition amendment of the constitution to the people of this State.

"Resolved, That if the people declare against prohibition we favor a high license local option law."

Then, upon this platform, they nominated for governor William P. Thompson, a Belfast lawyer, well known as an anti-prohibitionist and advocate of the license system. It wasn't done without vigorous protest on the part of the minority. Delegate Goldthwaite, of Biddeford, said it would be "suicidal." Delegate Hudson, of Guilford, said it was virtually a declaration for "free rum," and that the Maine women wouldn't like it. Delegate King, of Portland, said it amounted to giving the Republicans "a cudgel with which to beat out the brains of the Democratic party." The debate, we are told, was long and stormy. But it ended in the adoption of the resolutions. Various explanations are put forward. This was the second Democratic State convention of the year—made necessary by the death of the gentleman nominated for governor in June. At the June convention the license men had been in the minority and a platform satisfactory to the prohibition Democrats had been adopted. It was the general understanding that nothing was to be done at this week's convention beyond filling the vacancy on the ticket. A good many of the rural delegates were busy with their farm work, didn't feel like incurring the expense of a second journey to Augusta, and stayed away. On the other hand the cities and large towns sent full delegations. Then, too, it is asserted that wholesale liquor-dealers outside the State took an active interest in the proceedings. "It was their emissaries and largely their money that brought out the license delegates," says the Kennebec Journal. "Some of their paid agents and traveling salesmen were upon the floor of the convention as delegates, while others did equally as effective work in looking after undecided delegates. It is an open secret that enormous sums of money were pledged the party for campaign purposes upon the condition that it should take a position for license." However brought about, this sudden new departure of the Maine Democrats, after all these years of acquiescence in prohibition, is one of the most interesting minor events of the political season.—Hartford Courant.

KANSAS KICKS THE ORIGINAL PACKAGE.

A great delegate convention has been called to be held in Topeka on the 16th, at which 5,000 or 6,000 delegates are expected to be present, and which will adopt resolutions urging the Kansas Senators and Representatives at Washington to drop all other business and devote their energies to securing the passage by Congress of the House substitute for the Wilson bill, giving the States power to regulate the liquor traffic even when it comes from another State, and in the guise of an original package. Governor Humphreys, too, is lending all the weight of his official position to the warfare against the effects of the Supreme Court decision, and has ordered Attorney-General Kellogg to fight the liquor men to the bitter end in the cases before the State courts. In his instructions to the attorney-general he says:

"All judicial methods and remedies should be exhausted before we surrender the contest. The assertion of the Federal courts of the possession of such a power and of their right to exercise such jurisdiction is fraught with so many serious consequences, and involves such vast interests, that it is our bounden duty to fight for home rule in every form. If this extraordinary power can be exercised in behalf of whisky it will be invoked on other occasions to fasten upon the people of the State many things at which the public conscience will revolt. The force and vigor of this judicial decision have, according to its advocates, made whisky at once the most precious and most sacredly guarded of all the articles of commerce the world ever knew. They now propose to go one step further—indeed, but one more step is needed—and say that no law officer of any State in this Union shall investigate whether or not it is being sold in violation of local laws; that it is an article of commerce whose manufacture and sale are above and beyond the control of the law-making powers of the State. If this is sound as to whisky, which for ages has been subject to local laws, it ought to be stronger when applied to all other articles of commerce whose manufacture, production and use have never been subject to State regulations, and hence the State can be flooded with impure commercial articles which would affect the health, pollute the morals, and offend the nostrils of a helpless people. I have an abiding conviction that the Federal courts do not possess the power to restrain the law officers of the State from investigating in the usual manner whether or not the laws of the State have been violated. I never will believe it until compelled to do so by the solemn judgment of that court of last resort which has the power to adjudge."—Baltimore Sun.

NORTH DAKOTA'S SALOONS.

Every saloon and liquor house in North Dakota is closed, in accordance with the new law which has just gone into effect. Notwithstanding the apparently iron-clad prohibition law passed by the legislature last winter, beer, whisky and all other intoxicants will be as freely dispensed as ever, though selling over the bar is necessarily done away with. "Original package" depots are already in active operation throughout the State. Fargo has thirteen such places, Grand Forks a similar number, and Bismarck, Jamestown and Mandan about half a dozen each. About half of all the saloon-keepers in North Dakota have signified their intention of selling "original packages," and the other half will go out of the business entirely. As a general rule, the big saloons with substantial backing are the ones that will defy the law, while the smaller resorts will succumb.

The city councils of several cities have fixed the rate of licenses for selling "original packages." For a few days parts of North Dakota will be without liquor, as the agencies have not yet been thoroughly established. Not a drink of liquor can be obtained for love or money in Bismarck now, but next week several carloads of beer in bottles and kegs will arrive direct from enterprising Eastern firms who make a specialty of the "original package" business.—Dispatch from Bismarck, N. D., July 6.

CONDEMNED BY HIS FRIENDS.

The Lincoln Red Ribbon club, the largest moral suasion club in the United States, having a membership of 13,000, at its large afternoon meeting June 22, unanimously adopted the following preamble and resolution by rising vote:

WHEREAS, The anti-Prohibitionists of this State are parading Francis Murphy as the representative of true temperance, because he is in favor of high license, and

WHEREAS, The said Francis Murphy is being advertised as the friend of temperance and morality, though endorsed by Peter E. Her and Edward Rosewater, therefore

Resolved, That in the midst of such a crisis as the present battle between the homes of Nebraska, and the high license drunkard-makers of the nation, this organization, known as the Red Ribbon club of Lincoln, Nebraska, repudiates any so-called temperance worker or Gospel revivalist who refuses to lift his voice for Prohibition of the infamous liquor traffic: we believe our people should refuse to encourage or support any man or class of men who seek to do the devil's work under the cloak of religion.—Lever.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER (Continued from 9th page).

ers and the leisure class, all meet upon the level and part upon the square."

Those who know that the Republican party has long been ridden by the lodge; who know how the secret temperance orders are manipulated by Masons and their offices generally filled by them, will not be surprised, as was this honest and confiding Prohibitionist, that the Hon. Mr. Tirrell "depreciated making any separate political party effort against the liquor traffic," and asserted that "those who believe it can only be destroyed by the ballot do nothing but vote, leaving the work of rescue to secret societies like the Temple of Honor." Nor that he capped the slanderous and utterly untrue statement that "the silver question and the tariff question now before Congress interests everybody because they touch every one's interests, while the temperance question did not interest everybody inasmuch as only a limited number in any one place were directly cursed by intemperate habits." As a sequence from this he argued with charming logic that it was great folly to take any separate party action to suppress the liquor traffic. This is a very good specimen of the way secret societies work for temperance by discouraging any action that will be at all effective in banishing the saloon.

It is not often that your New England correspondent has any word to say that would seem to even remotely favor a rumrunner, and yet if the newspapers have correctly stated the facts in the case, the saloon-keeper in Dracut, who paid the $8,000 license, and then, alarmed and disgusted by the scenes of rowdiness and drunkenness, offered after running two or three days to throw it up, has been treated with unparalleled meanness. The Dracut authorities refused to surrender the price of blood; the saloon was re-opened. Whereupon after coolly appropriating the money which he had paid over in good faith, they wickedly and meanly turn about and proceed to break their faith with him, by prosecuting him for keeping a liquor nuisance. The case has gone against him, his license declared void, and he has been fined $50 and cost. The moral law has no respect of persons. It is just as wrong to lie to the vilest sinner or steal from him, as it would be to deceive or defraud the greatest saint on earth. The town of Dracut has given the country another object lesson on high license. It has shown us that though there may be "honor among thieves," there is none where every principle of justice and right is deliberately sacrificed for a few paltry dollars. Poor John Lennon would not have fared so badly at the hands of his prohibition friends. They at least would not have taken his money and then cheated him out of his legal right so acquired to break hearts and ruin homes and debauch youth. Surely, wonderful is high license, as "the way of a serpent upon a rock."

Boston is very complacent over the fact that despite the large gains of our Western cities she still holds her own as the fifth city in the Union. Yet there seems in fact very little to rejoice over in the addition to her population as revealed by the census enumerator, as all the advantages seem to be that she is a trifle bigger, a trifle noisier, and can have ninety-five more bar-rooms.

The British American seems to be rather sore over some late strictures passed in recent letters on what seemed to the writer a tendency on the part of that paper and the organization which it represents to favor for motives of policy the secret orders. One statement she wishes to retract: that the British American is closed against anti-secret articles, as the editor declares he has published both articles sent by her. The statement that the Loyal Women are adopting secret methods so far as to exclude from their meetings all but bona fide members is unfortunately too true, and does not admit of denial even by the editor of the British American. Let this noble organization keep clear of the un-American methods of the lodge if it would be gratefully remembered in future years among the forces that have saved our common country. ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE NEW TESTAMENT.

LESSON V.—Third Quarter.—Aug. 3.

SUBJECT.—The Prodigal Son.—Luke 15: 11-24.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Father, I have sinned against heaven, and before thee.—Luke 15: 18.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

DAILY READINGS.—M.—Luke 15: 11-32. T.—Eccl. 2: 1-19. W.—Prov. 1: 10-33. T.—Prov. 23: 19-35. F.—Ps. 51: 1-19. S.—Eph. 2: 12-22. S.—Ps. 103: 1-22.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. Characteristics of a prodigal. Vs. 11-13. The first thing we notice about him is his impatience to have all his good things now. This is a trait very strong in unrenewed human nature, and apt to crop out even in the Christian until he has "the old man" thoroughly subdued. Only grace can make us content with poverty, hardship and trial; only faith is willing to "bear the loss of all things that we may win Christ." Secondly: he placed a high and utterly false estimate on mere material good, and mistook entirely the true elements of happiness. A home, a father's love, all the sweet associations of his childhood and youth he spurns as of little or no value. This is exactly what the sinner does. God, Heaven and eternal bliss he deliberately turns his back upon, and chooses instead "the beggarly elements of this world." Third: impatience of restraint. He goes into a far country. So, in his own view, the farther the sinner can get away from God the better. There is no more unerring sign of alienation from him than the desire to put ourselves outside of all heavenly influences. This is the condition in which multitudes are to-day. Yearly the numbers increase of those who never go to church—who deliberately and willfully put themselves as far away from God as they can get. The lodge and the blindness of Christian ministers is largely responsible for this state of things. Satan knows that any scheme by which he can increase the distance between a soul and God is sure to succeed; and if he can get a young man to join a secret society from which Jesus, the only Mediator between God and man, is excluded, he has gained his point. Fourth: the name "prodigal" implies an extravagant, unnecessary and foolish waste of one's means; it may be money, talents, time or health. The vast army of drunkards in our land who have made a wreck of themselves, body and soul, are so many prodigal sons whom we must think the Father's heart yearns over. Or the prodigal son may typify our fallen humanity, and the angels who have never sinned the elder brother.

2. The resolve to return. Vs. 14-19. Spendthrift heirs have often run through a vast property in a few years; so if sensual delights are made the chief good we shall find that they "are but for a season." Even the higher pleasures of the mind apart from God will not satisfy. The time of famine is sure to come, when through age or sickness or sorrow all worldly delights will pall on the appetite, and the bankrupt soul be unable to buy a moment of pure and satisfying pleasure. God often reduces the sinner to that point of abject misery where he cannot help seeing his own folly. As a swineherd to a heathen master, envying even the husks eaten by these unclean animals, the prodigal must have reached, to a Jewish mind, the last limit of degradation. "No man gave unto him;" not even the boon companions who had been so willing to drink and carouse at his expense. "When he came to himself." All true repentance is a coming to one's true self. The first thing the prodigal does is to "arise"—from his groveling posture among the swine. So the first thing the sinner does is to arise—from the low and earthly pursuits that have bound him down. The next is to take the first step in the heavenward way, and this first step is to begin to obey God. It is by persevering acts of obedience that the soul returns at last to its heavenly Father, just as one step after another brought the prodigal home. But the noticeable thing after all is his touching humility—his willingness to take the place even of a hired servant. Humility is always the soil from which repentance springs.

3. The father's welcome. Vs. 20-24. "He saw him when he was yet a great way off." This shows that his father was watching for him—hoping against hope that he might yet return. No servant's portion was his, but the best that could be given a favored son. God does not want hired servants but loving children around the home board. What a picture is here of our heavenly Father's heart! And if he thus yearns after the lost, ought we not to share his anxiety for these prodigal sons and be ever ready to seek and welcome them back to him?

HELPFUL THOUGHTS FROM PELOUBET.

I. To attempt to satisfy the soul with worldly things is like pointing a starving man to the beauties of nature. "It is all very beautiful," he says; "but I am starving." "But look at this exquisite landscape!" "Yes, it is charming; but I am dying of hunger. Feed me first, then I will look at your pictures."

II. The sinner is like Jonah, sleeping in the storm, dreaming beautiful dreams, but unreal and evanescent. He is like one out of his reason. Sin is a madness. Repenting is coming to himself—to the realities of life, to reasonable living, to his right mind. He who finds God, finds himself.

III. "Whatever sense of sin suffices to lead to this return is sufficient; no need to wait for deeper convictions. Note two suggestive facts in the prodigal's experience: (1) The joy and peace, the father's kiss, ring, robe, etc., are not instantly conferred; there is a way to be traveled first; often in actual experience it is a long and weary one. (2) Though the prodigal brings nothing good with him, neither does he bring anything evil. He forsakes all in turning his back on the far country."

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—At a meeting of the Illinois Sabbath Association's executive committee, held the other day at the Sherman House, Chicago, President W. W. Everts, in a strong address, urged that the Association ask the World's Fair directors to close all parts of the exposition upon the Sabbath. He stated that at Paris Secretary Blaine had ordered that this be done with regard to the American exhibit. The committee are united on the necessity for such closing, but many thought that it would be impossible to obtain the consent of the directors to a closing of the entire exposition, and suggested that their petition refer only to the agricultural and allied exhibits, allowing such as the educational to remain open. There was an extended discussion over the form of the petition to be sent the directors, but its preparation was deferred to another meeting.

—Mr. B. F. Jacobs, the well known Sabbath-school worker of this city, expects to sail for France this week. He became deeply interested in the French Protestant Sabbath-schools last year, and has been the means of sending several thousand dollars' worth of supplies to the McAll missions. He intends to spend not a little time in looking after the Sabbath-school work of France during this present trip.

—Rev. J. F. Avery, our contributor and editor of the excellent children's paper, Buds and Blossoms, is pushing the work vigorously at the Mariners' Temple, New York. He has to grapple with some of the most difficult problems in mission work.

—Four of the Soudan missionaries from Kansas, young men from the Y. M. C. A., Mr. Kingman, F. M. Gates, Warren Harris and Chas. Helmick, have sailed for Africa. Others are nearly ready to follow. They go as independent missionaries, under no society, trusting in the Lord for their support.

—Mr. Mowle, who was distinguished as an athlete while at Cambridge and is now one of the most popular preachers among the young men of the Church of England, has come to this country at the earnest solicitation of Mr. Moody to address the students at Northfield, in place of the Rev. John McNeil, who was unable to come. His work at Northfield has been greatly appreciated, and he is now in Chicago, having been secured by the Chicago Evangelization Society to address the Bible Institute each morning at 9 o'clock during the ensuing week. Mr. Marsh, of Sunderland, is also expected to arrive at the Institute Friday. Major Whittle speaks at 11 o'clock each morning.

—The building in which Elder Alexander Campbell, the founder of the Christian or Disciple denomination, first preached in, is still standing at Bethany, W. Va. His followers of Martinsville, Ind., have decided to remove the edifice intact, and place it on their assembly grounds at Bethany Park, where it can be preserved.

—Forty-three young ladies of New Orleans, members of different churches, are carrying on Christian work among the Chinese in that city.

—The Chicago Evangelization Society, formed last winter through the labors of Mr. Moody, is conducting a series of midsummer Gospel meetings in the city now, which the leaders say is accomplishing wonderful results. They have large tabernacle tents pitched, one on the South Side, at the corner of Wentworth avenue and 26th street; one on the North Side, at 102 Fremont near Clay street, and one on the West Side, situated on North avenue near the corner of Humboldt Park. Gospel services are held at all of these places every evening except Saturday, and children's song services at 4 o'clock each afternoon except Sunday. These latter are conducted by ladies connected with the Bible Institute of the Society. C. W. Merrill, the Minnesota evangelist, is conducting the South Side meetings. He is assisted from time to time by various prominent revivalists. At the North Side tent Rev. H. G. Smead is in charge of the work. The meetings at the West Side headquarters are under Evangelist Ferdinand Schiverea, who frequently has an audience of 600 or 700. The services at all three of the tents have been in progress several weeks and will not be concluded till near the end of July.

BUSINESS.

TO THE READER.

It has been suggested that many thousands would be interested and benefited by the circulation of Joseph Cook's address on the Disloyal Secret Oaths of MORMONISM, the CLAN-NA-GAEL, JESUITISM, and FREEMASONRY. The Association has not the funds needful for notifying the public through the newspapers, that so valuable a document is in print, and hence this appeal. We wish to send out Joseph Cook's address to one thousand newspapers for review and comment. This should be done during the next two weeks. TWENTY DOLLARS ARE NEEDED. Who will send it? It will be worth several times that amount to the cause. Dr. I. N. Brown sends the first dollar toward the above object. Nineteen dollars more are needed.

"PAID IN ADVANCE."

Some papers discontinue on expiration of subscriptions and some continue until orders are received to discontinue. If a classification is made it will be found that those papers which appeal mainly to the lower tastes of their readers, to their love of news (daily papers), their love of excitement (story papers), or their love of beauty (literary and art journals) generally do not trust their readers; while those who appeal mainly to their higher instincts, to their love of home (country weeklies), or their love for God (religious papers), do trust their subscribers. There is no inflexible rule, but the general custom is as stated.—Christian Patriot.

TRACT MISSIONARIES.

"I am delighted with the Anti-masonic tracts. I have read, prayed over, and circulated them."

A dollar was enclosed for another supply.

One father has supplied his children with envelopes into which they put a tract on Salvation through Christ, another on Temperance and a third on Anti-secrecy.

Let us hear from more vacation workers.

BOOKS AND TRACTS.

There is missionary work for summer as well as for winter months. One form is the never-ending and often blessed work of giving a tract or selling a pamphlet to the uninformed. Among the many who have greatly aided this reform and benefited their neighbors is Burgess Smith of Pennsylvania. In sending for a new supply he writes cheerfully of the interest shown in the "Proceedings of the Chicago Conference." Sow your neighborhoods two or three times a year with fresh, readable tracts, and God will give you a harvest that rust and blight cannot touch.

Copies of the following valuable books have been left in this office for sale at second hand and favorable rates:

Mackey's Masonic Jurisprudence.
Chase's Digest of Masonic Law.
Mackey's Lexicon of Freemasonry.
Bernard's Light on Masonry.
Horton's Image of the Beast.

Prices will be given to proposing purchasers

WANTED.

The Cynosure of January 23, 1890. Several more copies have been called for than could be supplied. If any one having a copy to spare will send it to this office, we shall be very thankful.

Quite a number have been interested in "Pagan Counterfeits in the Christian Church," by C. S. A. Temple. We can again supply friends with this 52-page pamphlet and at a special price of only 10 cents postpaid, Mr. N. O. Moore, publisher, Chicago, having donated 100 to the Association.

Have you read the advertisement headed SPECIAL BOOK SALE? Only a few of some kinds are in stock. It is not our intention to replenish after these are sold. If not satisfactory after examination, books from this list may be returned and money will be refunded.

We have over $1,500 worth of literature on the shelves which your friends would be benefited in seeing. Will you help us send it to them?

There is a steady demand for the Proceedings of the Chicago Conference. Some prefer to distribute them instead of tracts. Our friend Mr. J. S. Yaukey sends for twenty copies.

IN BRIEF.

When, recently, the law was passed in Italy requiring all teachers, both of public and private schools, to pass a government examination, not a priest in the city of Venice was able to pass.

Miss Elaine Goodale, the poetess, has been appointed government superintendent of Indian schools in Dakota, and will live in a covered wagon this summer, travelling from school to school.

Over a thousand Africans are now at work on the Congo railroad. April 12 two miles of it had been completed. This portion begins at Natadi, which is at the western end of the road, ninety miles from the sea. The principal difficulties lie in the building of the first ten miles, before the level plateau of the Congo hills is reached. Twenty-five Europeans superintend the work.

For practical purposes clouds are divided into four classes—cumulus, stratus, cirrus and nimbus. Meteorologists, however, recognize many differences of form in each class. Abercrombie gives these ten principal varieties, with their mean height in summer at Upsala, Sweden: Cirrus (pure wispy cloud), 27,000 feet; cirrostratus (thin, high, wispy, or striated, but at a low level), 15,000 feet; cumulo-cirrus (fleecy cloud at low level, 12,000 feet; strato-cumulus (extended lumpy cloud), 4,000 feet at base; cumulo-nimbus (low rain cloud), 4,500 feet; stratus (pure sheet cloud), 1,900.

Stanley tells of nothing, embraced in his latest adventures, of greater interest than that of the immense forest through which he passed, in equatorial Africa, on his last expedition. He estimates the length of the forest at 621 miles and its breadth at 517 miles. He pursued a serpentine course through the forest, and thus feels that he can speak definitely of its area. The sun's rays scarcely penetrate the interlocking foliage, while in a cloudy day the print of a book cannot be read. The trees stand very thickly together, ranging from 20 to 200 feet in height, while the undergrowth is almost impenetrable. He considers that the forest consists of 224,000,000 of acres. The immensity of this area can be imagined when we call to mind that Kansas has but 52,000,000 acres of land, or an area of only two-ninths of this African forest. Allowing an area of thirty feet to a tree and forty-eight trees to the acre, he estimates that the forest contains 10,752,000,000 trees. Speaking of iron-wood trees four feet in diameter, he claims for them an age of 4,000 to 5,000 years. Nearly all kinds of animals abound within this forest, while it is also the home of the pigmy race of men. Commerce can well afford to spread its sails toward this rich region, and soon it will be known to its deepest interiors.

Vinalhaven, Me., claims to have produced the largest stone ever brought to light. The Bodwell Granite Company recently quarried a shaft of granite which is the largest piece of stone ever quarried anywhere, and if erected, will be the highest, largest and heaviest single piece of solid stone standing, or that ever stood, so far as any record can be found. In height, it considerably exceeds any of the Egyptian obelisks. The tallest of these, which was brought from Heliopolis to Alexandria by Emperor Constantine, and afterward taken to Rome, where it is still standing, is 105 feet 7 inches high, while the Vinalhaven shaft is 115 feet long, 10 feet square at the base, and weighs 850 tons. It is understood that the company quarried this immense monolith of their own account, not having an order for anything of the kind, and they suggest that it would be a fitting contribution from Maine for the monument to be erected in honor of General Grant.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—No. 2.....	88 @	89
No. 3.....	78 @	80
Winter No. 2.....	88½ @	89
Corn—No. 2.....	38½ @	39¼
Oats—No. 2.....	37½ @	38
Rye—No. 2.....		47¼
Bran per ton.....		10 25
Hay—Timothy.....	6 50 @	10 00
Butter, medium to best....	10 @	15½
Cheese.....	06 @	10½
Beans.....	75 @	1 70
Eggs.....		10½
Seeds—Timothy.....	1 25 @	1 35
Flax.....	1 22 @	1 40
Broom corn.....	02½ @	06¼
Potatoes, new, per bu.....	1 10 @	1 25
Hides—Green to dry flint....	03 @	07
Lumber—Common.....	10 00 @	13 00
Wool.....	15 @	34
Cattle—Choice to extra.....	4 55 @	4 85
Common to good.....	1 60 @	4 30
Hogs.....	3 60 @	3 90
Sheep.....	4 15 @	4 40

NEW YORK.

Wheat.....	96 @	1 01½
Corn.....	44 @	46½
Oats.....	39½ @	47
Eggs.....		14½
Butter.....	6 @	17½
Wool.....	14 @	89

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle.....	1 50 @	4 50
Hogs.....	3 40 @	3 60
Sheep.....	2 75 @	4 40

THE MERRITT
$15
TYPEWRITER
USES METAL TYPE
Caps & Small Letters
No $100 MACHINE CAN DO BETTER WORK
AGENTS WANTED
CHAS. F. STOKES MFG. CO.
293 & 295
WABASH AVE. CHICAGO

We have special Machines with large, plain type, designed for the use of Ministers and Lecturers.

If interested in BICYCLES, send for Catalogue. We have the largest assortment in America.

Puget Sound catechism and its chief city SEATTLE, WASHINGTON
Send stamp to Kehlman, Lovell & Co., Seattle, Wash.

BABY CARRIAGES!
I make a specialty of manufacturing Baby Carriages to sell direct to private parties. You can therefore, do better with me than with a dealer. Carriages
Delivered Free of Charge to all points in the United States.
Send for Illustrated Catalogue.
CHAS. RAISER, Mfr.
62-64 Clybourn Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable, causing distress after eating, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn, loss of appetite, a faint, "all gone" feeling, bad taste, coated tongue, and irregularity of the bowels. Dyspepsia does not get well of itself. It requires careful attention, and a remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acts gently, yet efficiently. It tones the stomach, regulates the digestion, creates a good appetite, banishes headache, and refreshes the mind.

Distress

After

Eating

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. After eating I would have a faint or tired all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My trouble was aggravated by my business, painting. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, which did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced." GEORGE A. PAGE, Watertown, Mass.

Heart-

burn

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. After eating I would have a faint or tired all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My trouble was aggravated by my business, painting. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, which did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced." GEORGE A. PAGE, Watertown, Mass.

Sour

Stomach

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. After eating I would have a faint or tired all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My trouble was aggravated by my business, painting. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, which did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced." GEORGE A. PAGE, Watertown, Mass.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

Disloyal
SECRET OATHS.

ADDRESS OF

JOSEPH COOK,

OF BOSTON,

AT THE

Conference of Christians,
CHICAGO, 1890.

No better document of its size for general distribution has been printed. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Single Copies 5 cents, or 12 copies for 50 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

SEE THIS!

The latest, most complete edition.

Over 235 choice

Reform Songs for
the Times.

Only 30c a copy, or 20c by the 100.

—AND—

"THE TOBACCO MANIA."

$1 per 100.

For sale here and by the author,
GEO. W. CLARK,
76 W. Montcalm St., Detroit, Mich.

FOR MINISTERS

THE

"STORIES OF THE GODS"

Is especially adapted. They will at once understand the references to the idolatrous systems of the nations. And the idolatrous worship of the Masonic lodge is thus more clearly seen and easily understood. Will you furnish each pastor in your place with one of these pamphlets?

PRICE, ONLY 10 CENTS.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO.

HAVE YOU EXAMINED

The list of Books and Tracts for sale by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. Look it over carefully and see if there is not something you want for yourself or for your friend. Send for full catalogue to 221 W. MADISON STREET, CHICAGO.

HOME AND HEALTH.

A WOMAN'S REMEDY FOR DOG BITES.

I should like to say a few words on the subject of dogs and dog bites. I am a lover of animals, especially of dogs. There are six dogs lying around my feet while I write. Three belong to a neighbor, three are mine. Two of them I took off the street, "old and sick," six years ago. In their day, they had been valuable setters.

I have been bitten by dogs repeatedly, once severely. A pet dog of a neighbor's was very sick, and I was attempting to relieve it. It bit me in the left thumb, just below the nail. That member became black as far down as the wrist. It remained so until the nail came off. The owner talked of hydrophobia, and said that the dog had not tasted water for two weeks. Had I been afraid, I should, no doubt, have taken nervous fits and died. The verdict would have been "hydrophobia." But I simply applied a solution of "salt and vinegar," a little more vinegar than salt, washed the wound with it, then tied a clean rag around the thumb, keeping it saturated well with the solution, and moved the rag so that a fresh part covered the wound, at intervals. This remedy was once applied to my wrist by a colored woman, in the South, for a snake bite. My arm was then black, hard and painful. The remedy acted like a charm. In two hours the discoloration had disappeared, and with it the pain, and only the needle mark where the fang had entered was visible.

Again, I was bitten by a weasel in the Grand Central Depot. A girl had it in a bag and had placed it on a seat next to mine, remarking that it was a kitten. I placed my hand on it. Quicker than thought, a couple of teeth punctured the joint of my left forefinger to the bone. I compelled the girl to tell me what was in the bag. My finger was badly swollen and painful before I reached home, some hours after. I used the same simple remedy, with the same speedy result. I have also applied it successfully in other cases.—A Woman in New York Tribune.

EAT BEFORE GOING TO BED.

Most students and women who are troubled with insomnia are dyspeptic, and they should therefore eat before going to bed, having put aside work entirely at least an hour before. If they are not hungry, they should simply be instructed to eat; and if they are hungry, they should eat whatever they want, says the Journal of the American Medical Association. A glass of milk and a biscuit is sometimes all that can be taken at first, or a mashed potato buttered. If possible, the night meal should be taken in another room than the sleeping apartment, and for men in the city it will be found advantageous to go out to a restaurant. Before eating, however, a bath should be taken, preferably cold or cool, which should be given with a sponge or stiff brush, and the body thoroughly rubbed off with a coarse towel afterward. The bath need not be more than five minutes in duration. Further than this, the patient should go to bed at the same hour every night, and arise at the same hour every morning. There is a popular superstition that grown people should not eat immediately before going to sleep; that it will give them indigestion or nightmare, or both. The writer cannot see why adults should be so very different in this respect from babies. The average person should be in bed seven or eight hours, which is time enough for the digestion of almost anything edible. In our American life, he thinks, the digestion carried on through sleep probably has the better chance for thoroughness.—Sel.

BIRNEY.

The sketch of JAMES G. BIRNEY candidate of the Liberty Party for President, in pamphlet for 25 cents. A limited number of copies of this handsome pamphlet for sale at the N. C. A. office

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
321 W. Madison St., Chicago

To clean tombstones. To renew oil-cloth. To renovate paint. To brighten metals.
To polish knives. To scrub floors. To wash out sinks. To scour bath-tubs.
To clean dishes. To whiten marble. To remove rust. To scour kettles.

EVERYBODY USES IT.

Dentists to clean false teeth. Engineers to clean parts of machines. Housemaids to scrub marble floors.
Surgeons to polish their instruments. Ministers to renovate old chapels. Chemists to remove some stains.
Confectioners to scour their pans. Sextons to clean the tombstones. Carvers to sharpen their knives.
Mechanics to brighten their tools. Hostlers on brasses and white horses. Shrewd ones to scour old straw hats.
Cooks to clean the kitchen sink. Artists to clean their palettes. Soldiers to brighten their arms.
Painters to clean off surfaces. Wheelmen to clean bicycles. Renovators to clean carpets.

EVERY ONE FINDS A NEW USE.

CHICAGO CONFERENCE.

130 PAGES. A HANDSOME PAMPHLET
SENT POSTPAID FOR ONLY FIFTEEN CENTS.

CONTENTS:

Proceedings, Resolutions, Plan of Work, Letters and Addresses.

Letters from Rev. P. S. Henson, D.D., First Baptist Church, Chicago.
Rev. John Lee, M. E. Church, Lockport, Ill.
Pres. Benj. Trueblood, Friends' College, Oskaloosa, Iowa.
Pres. L. Larsen, Lutheran College, Decorah, Iowa.
Prof. W. G. Moorehead, D.D., U. P. Theological Seminary, Xenia, Ohio.
Pres. James W. Strong, Cong'l. College, Northfield, Minn.

Addresses by Col. George R. Clarke, Chicago.
Rev. Halleck Floyd, United Brethren Church.
Rev. J. S. T. Milligan, Reformed Presbyterian Church.
Prof. Henry C. King, Oberlin College.
Rev. H. A. Day, Wesleyan Methodist Church.
Rev. Thomas D. Wallace, D. D., Presby. Church, Chicago.
Rev. W. P. McNary, United Presbyterian Church.
Pres. C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton College.
Prof. David McDill, D. D., U. P. Theological Seminary.
Ex-Pres. A. A. Smith, Evangelical Association Church.
Rev. David Metheny, Reformed Presby. Missionary, Syria.
Rev. B. T. Roberts, Free Methodist Church.
Prof. Joseph Moore, Friends' College, Richmond, Ind.
Rev. E. P. Goodwin, D. D., Cong'l. Church, Chicago.
Rev. J. E. Ambrose, Baptist Church, Chicago.
Laura S. Haviland, Quaker Church, Chicago.
Joseph Cook, Boston.

The supply is limited; the selling price is less than the pamphlet cost. It is so low that every one can send for one. Its representative character and ability are indicated above.

SENT POSTPAID FOR 15 CENTS.

The National Christian Association.

W. I. PHILLIPS, TREASURER.

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.

SAVE YOUR MONEY

BY SUBSCRIBING FOR ANY OF THE FOLLOWING PERIODICALS IN COMBINATION WITH THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

	Regular yearly subscription price.	and Cynosure	Regular yearly subscription price.	Our price for both.
Forum,	$5.00		$1.50	$5.50
North American Review,	5.00	" "	1.50	5.50
Popular Science Monthly,	5.00	" "	1.50	5.50
Century Magazine,	4.00	" "	1.50	5.00
Harper's "	4.00	" "	1.50	4.50
" Weekly,	4.00	" "	1.50	4.75
Scribner's Magazine,	3.00	" "	1.50	4.00
Independent,	3.00	" "	1.50	4.00

If any periodical not in the above list is wanted, in combination with the Cynosure, send for terms and enclose stamp for reply.

W. I. PHILLIPS,

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.

KNIGHT TEMPLARISM ILLUSTRATED.

A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $0.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50c; $4.00 per dozen. Furnished in any quantities at

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS ILLUSTRATED.

By a Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00. Address the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 321 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REMARKABLE OFFER!

Nearly everyone is familiar with the name, but it has been estimated that only one in every two hundred and eighty persons in the United States is fortunate enough to have access to the valuable information contained within the covers of the grandest work ever written by mortal man,

Webster's

UNABRIDGED DICTIONARY.

That this is an unfortunate state of affairs will be admitted by all, and it is due to the fact that no one save the rich could afford them.

The Dictionary is a necessity in every home, school and business house. It fills a vacancy and furnishes knowledge which no one hundred volumes of the choicest books could supply, and all young or old, educated or ignorant, rich or poor should have it within reach and refer to its contents every day in the year.

The Loomis reprint contains all the matter as compiled and arranged by our esteemed and honored author and statesman

NOAH WEBSTER.

About forty years of his life was devoted to this great work, and when we consider the fact that this book contains about 100,000 words, we will appreciate that these years must have been well spent.

Some idea of the magnitude of this book may be gained from the fact that it contains over 440 cubic inches of paper and has about 300,000 square inches of printed surface.

In addition to the 100,000 words it contains a portrait of the author, together with his biography and a valuable table of 12,000 synonymous words.

By special arrangement with the publishers, we are permitted to furnish this valuable volume: 1st. To any subscriber to our paper; 2nd. To any renewal subscription; and 3rd. To any person who has paid a full year's subscription within the past six months, on receipt of $1.50 for the paper one year, and two dollars and seventy-five cents to cover express charges, packing, etc., of the Dictionary.

Address

CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill

PATENTS

Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees.

Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington.

Send model, drawing or photo., with description. We advise, if patentable or not, free of charge. Our fee not due till patent is secured.

A Pamphlet, "How to Obtain Patents," with names of actual clients in your State, county, or town, sent free. Address,

C. A. SNOW & CO.

Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

An Unequaled Triumph. An agency business where talking is unnecessary. Here are portraits of Miss Anna Page of Austin, Texas, and Mr. Jno. Bonn of Toledo, Ohio. The lady writes: "I do business at almost every house I visit. Every one wants your grand photograph album, and were I deaf and dumb I could secure orders rapidly." The man writes: "Your magnificent album is the greatest of all bargains; the people generally are wonderful struck and order at sight. The orders taken last week pay me a profit over $100. This is the chance you have been looking for. You can make from $5 to $25 and upwards every day of your life. Talk not necessary. You can make big money even though you don't say a word. Our new style album is the grandest success ever known, and the greatest bargain in the world. Double size—the largest made. Bound in richest, most elegant and artistic manner, in finest silk velvet plush. Bindings splendidly ornamented. Inside charmingly decorated with most beautiful flowers. It is a regular $10 album, but it is sold to the people for only $5. How can we do it? It is the greatest hit of the times; we are manufacturing 500,000, and are satisfied with a profit of a few cents on each. Agents wanted! Any one can become a successful agent. Extra liberal terms to agents. We publish a great variety of Bibles and testaments; also subscription books and periodicals. Agents wanted for all. Our agents are always successful. We do the largest business with agents in America, and can give larger value for the money and better terms than any other firm. Particulars and terms for all of above mailed free. Write at once and see for yourself. Address H. HALLETT & Co., Box 999, PORTLAND, MAINE.

struck and order at sight. The orders taken last week pay me a profit over $100. This is the chance you have been looking for. You can make from $5 to $25 and upwards every day of your life. Talk not necessary. You can make big money even though you don't say a word. Our new style album is the grandest success ever known, and the greatest bargain in the world. Double size—the largest made. Bound in richest, most elegant and artistic manner, in finest silk velvet plush. Bindings splendidly ornamented. Inside charmingly decorated with most beautiful flowers. It is a regular $10 album, but it is sold to the people for only $5. How can we do it? It is the greatest hit of the times; we are manufacturing 500,000, and are satisfied with a profit of a few cents on each. Agents wanted! Any one can become a successful agent. Extra liberal terms to agents. We publish a great variety of Bibles and testaments; also subscription books and periodicals. Agents wanted for all. Our agents are always successful. We do the largest business with agents in America, and can give larger value for the money and better terms than any other firm. Particulars and terms for all of above mailed free. Write at once and see for yourself. Address H. HALLETT & Co., Box 999, PORTLAND, MAINE.

"THE WHOLE IS BETTER THAN A PART,"
AND YOU HAVE IT HERE IN A
"NUT-SHELL."

SECRET SOCIETIES ILLUSTRATED.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen. For sale by the National Christian Association, at Headquarters for Anti-Slavery Literature, 321 W. Madison St., Chicago.

FARM NOTES.

ADVANTAGES OF MULCHING.

Mulching ought not to be done, or rather renewed, in the season, until the heat of the sun or drought requires it; nor should it be done until after the suckers show themselves and are of sufficient height not to be injured by the application of the mulch, which, if too thick and applied too soon, will in a great measure prevent the sprouting, and where it does not will cause the sprouts to be weak and spindling. Currant bushes also delight in moist, cool soil, and mulching provides this if applied in sufficient quantity. Anything in the way of weeds, small branches of trees, grass from lawn cuttings, etc., will answer. The mulching of tomato plants, egg plants, etc., will prove very beneficial. We know that some persons have not our faith in mulching, and prefer beds of plants, young trees, etc., to have the soil stirred up about them frequently. This, we are aware, is excellent, but it does not hinder the mulching also. Let the old mulch be removed, the soil well loosened, and then apply fresh mulch.

—Ex.

VARIETY OF FEED.

Variety of feed is important to the highest success with any kind of animals, and bran lengthens the available feeding stuffs by just so much. Chemically, bran is very rich in just what horses need to build and maintain the highest form of bone and muscle, since it is rich in both muscle and bone producing elements. A hundred pounds of oats contain about 9.5 pounds of digestible muscle-making food, while 100 pounds of bran contain 12.5 pounds. Again, if we burn 100 pounds of shelled corn there would remain one and one-half pounds of ashes; from 100 pounds of oats there would remain three pounds of ashes, while the same weight of wheat bran would give over five and one-half pounds of ashes. It is the ashes of our foods that build the bony framework.—Professor Henry.

CROWDING ON SUMMER NIGHTS.

During the summer, and especially on very warm nights, the hens sometimes suffer severely, if crowded, and secure no rest, to say nothing of the better advantages in favor of lice. Each hen should have one foot of room on the roost, and ten square feet of space in the poultry-house, or ten hens in a house ten feet square. In winter as many as twenty hens may be kept in such a house, but in summer the hens require more breathing space, and if crowded too much, will not lay as many eggs as a smaller flock.—Farm and Fireside.

TO STOP A RUNAWAY HORSE.

Professor Gleason, noted as a tamer and trainer of vicious horses, thus explains the manner of stopping a runaway horse by using nothing but a straight bar bit and lines: For instance, your horse attempts to run away. Let him go for a distance of fifty yards; then haul in your lines perfectly tight. When you get ready to give the command to stop, say "Whoa!" at the same time you pull the right hand rein, giving a powerful jerk, and repeat the word whoa. Don't move the left hand, but do all the work with the right. When you give the terrible jerk, twist the horse's jaw to the right, and if you have the presence of mind to repeat the word whoa at the second jerk of the lines, you will be surprised to find your horse standing still.

A CURE FOR NERVOUS HORSES.

An exchange talks good horse sense as follows: Finely-bred, intelligent horses are often nervous. They are quick to notice, quick to take alarm, quick to do what seems to them, in moments of sudden terror, necessary to escape from possible harm, from something they do not understand. That is what makes them shy, bolt and run away. We cannot tell what awful suggestions strange things offer to their minds. It may be that a sheet of white paper in the roadway seems to the nervous horse a yawning chasm; the open front of a baby carriage, the

"Oh, So Tired!"

is the cry of thousands every Spring.

For that Tired Feeling take

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

and recover
Health and Vigor.

It Makes
the Weak Strong.

Prepared by

Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co.,
Lowell, Mass.

The Liver

When out of order, involves every organ of the body. Remedies for some other derangement are frequently taken without the least effect, because it is the liver which is the real source of the trouble, and until that is set right there can be no health, strength, or comfort in any part of the system. Mercury, in some form, is a common specific for a sluggish liver; but a far safer and more effective medicine is

Ayer's Pills.

For loss of appetite, bilious troubles, constipation, indigestion, and sick headache, these Pills are unsurpassed.

"For a long time I was a sufferer from stomach, liver, and kidney troubles, experiencing much difficulty in digestion, with severe pains in the lumbar region and other parts of the body. Having tried a variety of remedies, including warm baths, with only temporary relief, about three months ago I began the use of Ayer's Pills, and my health is so much improved that I gladly testify to the superior merits of this medicine."—Manoel Jorge Pereira, Porto, Portugal.

"For the cure of headache, Ayer's Cathartic Pills are the most effective medicine I ever used."—R. K. James, Dorchester, Mass.

"When I feel the need of a cathartic, I take Ayer's Pills, and find them to be more effective than any other pill I ever took."—Mrs. B. C. Grubb, Burwellville, Va.

"I have found in Ayer's Pills, an invaluable remedy for constipation, biliousness, and kindred disorders, peculiar to miasmatic localities. Taken in small and frequent doses, these Pills on the liver, restoring its natural powers, and aiding it in throwing off malarial poisons."—C. F. Alston, Quitman, Texas.

Act Well

"Whenever I am troubled with constipation, or suffer from loss of appetite, Ayer's Pills set me right again."—A. J. Kiser, Jr., Rock House, Va.

"In 1858, by the advice of a friend, I began the use of Ayer's Pills as a remedy for biliousness, constipation, high fevers, and colds. They served me better than anything I had previously tried, and I have used them in attacks of that sort ever since."—H. W. Hersh, Judsonia, Ark.

Ayer's Pills,

PREPARED BY

DR. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass.

Sold by all Druggists and Dealers in Medicine.

jaws of a dragon ready to devour him, and a man on a bicycle some terrifying sort of a flying devil without wings. Directly, however, he becomes familiar with these objects, and he is entirely indifferent to them. Therefore, when your horse shies at anything, make him acquainted with it, let him smell it, touch it with his sensitive upper lip, and look closely at it. He may not learn all in one lesson, but continue the lesson and you will cure your horse of nervousness.

Do not put off taking a medicine. Numerous little ailments, if neglected, will soon break up the system. Take Hood's Sarsaparilla now, to expel disease and give you strength and appetite.

A fact that all men with gray and many shaded whiskers should know, that Buckingham's Dye always colors an even brown or black at will.

STANDARD WORKS

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES.

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Association.

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. A liberal discount to dealers.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 75 cents. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive. Vol. II. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprised the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished. 25 cents each.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe. 20 cents each.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. In cloth, $1.50 each. Paper, 75 cents each.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pages, 75 cents.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance. Bound in one volume. In cloth, 589 pages, $1.00.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. 25 cents each.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' LETTERS on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper, 35 cents.

Hon. Thurlow Weed on the Morgan Abduction. This is the legally attested statement of this eminent Christian journalist and statesman concerning the unlawful seizure and confinement of Capt. Morgan in Canandaigua jail, his removal to Fort Niagara and subsequent drowning in Lake Ontario. 5 cents each.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a League with the Devil. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason. 15 cents each.

Freemasonry Self-Condemed. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church. Paper covers, price, 20 cents each.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each.

Anti-masonic Sermons and Addresses. Composed of "Masonry a Work of Darkness;" the Sermons of Messrs. Cross, William M'Nary, Dow and Sarver, the two addresses of President Blanchard, and the addresses of President H. H. George, Prof. J. G. Carson and Rev. M. S. Drury; "Thirteen Reasons Why a Christian cannot be a Freemason," "Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion," and "Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate?" 287 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate. By Rev. L. A. Post. 5 cents each.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper cover, 35 cents.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin trials. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each.

Stearns's Inquiry into the Nature and Tendency of Freemasonry. 338 pages. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor United Presbyterian church. 5 cents each.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. 10 cents each.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void; or FREEMASONRY SELF-CONVICTED. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. 207 pages. Postpaid, 40 cents each.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian), seceding Mason of 21 degrees. 15 cents each.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. H. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each.

Masonic Salvation, as taught by its standard authors. This pamphlet is a compilation from standard Masonic works, in proof of the following proposition: Freemasonry claims to be a religion that saves men from all sin, and purifies them for heaven. 111 pages, price, postpaid, 20 cents.

Freemasonry at a Glance illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the first three degrees. Paper cover, 32 pages. Single copy, six cents.

Masonic Outrages. Compiled by Rev. H. H. Hinman. Showing Masonic assault on lives of seceders, on reputation, and on free speech; its interference with justice in courts, etc. Postpaid, 20 cents.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret Societies. A most convincing argument against fellowshipping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—U. S. Government Report, Aug. 17, 1889.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

The President on Thursday afternoon, July 10, signed the act for the admission of Wyoming as a State.

The Secretary of State is informed that the Mexican Government will issue no further permits to aliens to acquire real estate within twenty leagues of the frontier until the boundary between the two republics shall have been finally adjusted.

The members of the Senate are receiving a great many letters of remonstrance, particularly from the commercial and legal associations of the country, against giving so much attention to political measures like the election bill when there are other matters pending before Congress which to them appear of greater importance to the people.

CHICAGO.

The coroner's investigation of the fatal explosion on the steamer Tioga indicates that the cause was a large quantity of naphtha, shipped by an oil company from Buffalo as kerosene. The loss of life was twenty-six, most of them colored men.

COUNTRY.

Thursday the grand jury at Indianapolis returned a large number of indictments against suburban saloon-keepers and beer-garden keepers for violating the Sunday law, these indictments being found at the instance of the Law and Order league.

Residents of the village of Naples, N. Y., are said to be greatly excited, and well they may be if reports from there are true. During a recent thunderstorm, it is said, a heavy clap of thunder was followed by a shower of live coals. Local scientists think a meteor burst over the village and that the coals were the fragments.

Several Chinese lepers are reported to be living in Mott street, the Chinese quarter of New York.

Judge Howland decided Thursday at Indianapolis that German must be taught in the public schools.

At the school election in Salt Lake, Utah, Monday the liberals carried three and possibly four precincts, thus giving them control of the Board of Education.

Ex-Gov. Crittenden of Missouri says that none of the Southern States will represent themselves at the world's fair if the Lodge federal election bill is passed.

The powder explosion Tuesday at King's Mills, Ohio, killed twelve persons and wounded fourteen others, of whom one or two may not recover.

It is thought that on account of the burning of 525 tons of binding twine in the Minneapolis fire Tuesday the price of twine will advance from 1/2 cent to over 5 cents a pound.

The crop report from Michigan, made up from 820 correspondents, gives acreage of wheat 36,205 acres less than a year ago. There were marketed in June 926,539 bushels of wheat, while the total for the eleven months preceding were 14,011,430 bushels. The condition of corn is placed at 91 in southern, 92 in central and 103 per cent in northern counties; oats, 96 1/2; potatoes, 96. The apple crop will be about half a yield.

Tuesday Judge Linehan, of Dubuque, Iowa, granted injunctions against fifty-five saloons, and the prosecuting attorney was allowed $1,125 in fees.

Prairie fires were raging Tuesday along the line of the Southern Pacific Railway in Texas. No rain had fallen for five weeks, and the grass and vegetation were dry as tinder. Cattle that were grazing in the hills were saved, but deer and smaller animals were destroyed in large areas.

The Inter-state Commerce Commission has decided that it will issue an order making a reduction in grain rates from Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, and Missouri to St. Louis and the Mississippi River and to Chicago. Food product rates east of the Mississippi and not involved in other suits before the commission are not found to be excessive.

Hon. John P. Buchanan, a farmer and president of the State Farmers' Alliance, was nominated for governor by acclamation by the Tennessee State Democratic convention at Nashville Friday. Mr. Buchanan has served three terms in the Legislature.

At Paris, Texas, Friday Judge Bryant of the Federal court, sentenced nine men to death—one a Negro, for assaulting his step daughter, and eight others for various murders.

Friday at Kingfisher, Ind. Territory, the Commissioners reached an agreement with the Cheyenne and Arapahoe Indians by which over 4,000,000 acres of land will be thrown open to settlement under the homestead law. The Indians are to receive $1,500,000, and are to hold in severalty 160 acres each.

FOREIGN.

The Italian Parliament was closed Friday. Before the adjournment Premier Crispi, in a speech, said it was necessary to maintain European peace. He favored international arbitration.

In the nitrate district of Chili, South America, 7,000 men are on a strike. In a conflict between troops sent to quell a riotous body of strikers forty of the latter were killed.

Intense heat prevails in central Austria and in the Alps from Graubunden to lower Austria. The melting of the snow on the mountains has caused the affluents of the Danube to rise. The inhabitants are greatly alarmed. Much damage has already been done.

The coming encyclical of the Pope urges nations to resort to papal arbitration for the settlement of social questions and national wars.

The Pope, in a carriage escorted by two soldiers of the Guard Mobile, left the vatican grounds by way of the Foudamenta gate Tuesday and drove as far as the Musei gate, where he re-entered the grounds. The sentries at the mint presented arms as he passed and the workmen along the road knelt down reverently. The object of the Pope's drive was to visit the sculptor Aurelia and inspect his statue of St. Thomas Aquinas.

Emperor William will make arrangements for the ceremony of the cession of Heligoland during his visit to Queen Victoria. A German council will be appointed for the island before the next session of the Reichstag. The government desires to be guided by the council's views.

The leading detective agencies of London and Paris have been retained by the Russian government to watch the chiefs of the nihilists in those cities.

An average of 400 deaths a month from small-pox are reported at Saltillo, Mexico.

The delegates to the universal peace congress assembled Wednesday in London, England, at 9 o'clock and after the transaction of some routine business marched in procession to Westminster Chapel. Here divine exercises were conducted, the prayers and passages of Scripture having especial reference to peace among nations. An eloquent discourse was delivered by Rev. Dr. Thomas, of Brookline, Mass., the United States being specially honored in the selection of the preacher of the day.

Its superior excellence proven in millions of homes for more than a quarter of a century. It is used by the United States Government. Endorsed by the heads of the Great Universities as the Strongest, Purest and most Healthful. Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder does not contain Ammonia, Lime, or Alum. Sold only in Cans. PRICE BAKING POWDER CO. NEW YORK. CHICAGO. ST. LOUIS.

A dispatch from Constantinople, July 21, says: "Failing joint intervention by England and Russia, the Armenians on both sides of the frontier will combine and ask the Czar's aid." Premier Stambuloff, of Bulgaria, has thanked the Sultan for appointing Bulgarian bishops in Macedonia, and has assured the Porte of the support of the Bulgarians should necessity arise.

The Chinese Government stopped a party of Russian explorers in Thibet, led by Captain Grombchevski, on the border of the Thibetan desert, and ordered them to return to Kashbar. The Russians refused, and the whole party left in the night time and disappeared in the desert.

An account of a battle between the Guatemalans and San Salvadoreans in San Salvador is published in the City of Mexico in which the former were defeated with heavy loss. The Guatemalan force number 9,000. General Barundia, the Guatemalan refugee, has left Oaxaca to take part in the war. He will probably raise the standard of revolt in Guatemala.

Will be found invaluable for Cholera Infantum and all Summer Complaints, children or adults. It is not a medicine but will be retained & sustain life when everything else fails. 4 sizes 35 cts. up.

THE FORSYTH COMBINATION
RUG AND EMBROIDERY MACHINE
is far superior to anything of the kind now in use. Beautiful new designs for Rug and embroidery patterns. Big inducements to agents. Catalogue and price list sent free. THE FORSYTH MFG. CO., 204 Dearborn st., Chicago.

Our High Grade List and Bargain Book sent to any address on receipt of a 2-c stamp.

LORD & THOMAS,
NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING
45 RANDOLPH STREET,
CHICAGO.

WHEATON COLLEGE,

WHEATON, ILL.

FALL TERM BEGINS TUESDAY,
SEPTEMBER 16TH.

A College for Men and Women.

For Catalogue address with stamp,
C. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

To cure Biliousness, Sick Headache, Constipation, Malaria, Liver Complaints, take the safe and certain remedy, SMITH'S

BILE BEANS

Use the SMALL SIZE (40 little beans to the bottle). They are the most convenient: suit all ages. Price of either size, 25 cents per bottle.

KISSING at 7, 17, 70: Photo-gravure, panel size of this picture for 4 cents (coppers or stamps).

J. F. SMITH & CO.,
Makers of "Bile Beans," St. Louis, Mo.

SPECIAL BOOK SALE!

- | Regular Price. | | Selling Price. |
|----------------|--|----------------|
| $.10 | "REPORT OF THE TRIAL of Rev. J. T. Michael," an Elder in the M. E. Church, for arrainging the Bishops, Elders and Preachers in charge for being Freemasons contrary to the Discipline of the M. E. Church. Paper, 28 pages. | $.05 |
| $.75 | "BEREA COLLEGE," Kentucky. An interesting history of the founding of that College for white and black in a slave State. Cloth, 87 pages. | $.25 |
| $.30 | "SONGS FOR THE TIMES," by Geo. W. Clark. Words and Music. Intended for Prohibition and W. C. T. U. meetings. Boards, 152 pages. | $.20 |
| $.25 | "MASONIC DEGREES ILLUSTRATED." Containing all the pass and real words, all the pass and real grips and signs of the first three degrees of Freemasonry, from the time of King Solomon, King Hiram of Tyre, and Hiram Abiff, the Widow's Son, to the present time. Compiled by E. M. Trowbridge. Paper, 39 pages. With certificate and demit showing that the author was a Freemason. | $.05 |
| $.20 | "THE INTERIOR OF SIERRA LEONE, West Africa." A lecture delivered at the Government Practicing School-Room, Freetown, Sierra Leone, together with remarks and addresses of gentlemen present, and the lecturer's replies. By J. Augustus Cole, of Shingay, W. Africa. Paper, 54 pages. | $.10 |
| $.25 | "RELIGIOUS PERSECUTION." An examination of Cardinal Manning's letter in the New York Tribune, on Irish affairs and bearing on Home Rule. By Rev. John Lee. Paper, 83 pages. | $.15 |
| $.25 | "SKETCH OF THE LIFE OF JAMES G. BIRNEY." His relation to the Anti-slavery movement and place in history. By General William Birney. Paper, 32 pages. | $.10 |
| $.75 | "LUCILE VERNON, or the Church at Lansington. The experience of a young pastor. A novel. By Rev. W. T. Meloy, D. D. Cloth, 208 pages. | $.35 |
| $1.00 | "NATIONAL SUICIDE AND ITS PREVENTION." The following will show the drift of the book: Measure or Standard of Value; What is Honest Money; Our National Banks; Paper Money; Land Tenure, etc. By O. F. Lumry. Cloth, 224 pp. | $.50 |
| $.15 | "A WOMAN'S VICTORY, or the Query of the Lodgeville Church." By Jennie L. Hardie. Paper, 21 pp. | $.05 |
| $.15 | "MY EXPERIENCE WITH SECRET SOCIETIES." By a Traveler. Paper, 51 pp. | $.10 |
| $.10 | "WASHINGTON SOUVENIR." Portraits of Geo. Washington and his Co-patriots, with their testimony on Freemasonry. Size 18x24 inches. Framed it is an ornament to any home. | $.05 |
| $.10 | "SECRET SOCIETIES." A Lecture delivered at Oberlin College, Jan. 9, 1890. By Prof. Henry C. King. Paper, 36 pp. | $.06 |
| $1.50 | "HISTORY OF SECRET SOCIETIES IN FRANCE," or "THE CRADLE OF REBELLIONS." By Lucien De La Hodde. Translated from the French by Gen'l. J. W. Phelps. Cloth, 479 pp. | $.50 |
| $.25 | "THE PURITY CRUSADE," With portraits of some of its leaders. Paper, 114 pp. | $.15 |

Sent postpaid to any address on receipt of the selling price.

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
WM. I. PHILLIPS, Treasurer,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REVISED ODD-FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED.

The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. The ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $6.00. Paper cover 70 cents; per dozen $4.00.

All orders promptly filled by the
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XXII., No. 46

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JULY 31, 1890.

WHOLE No. 1,057.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.

Address all letters for publication to EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, CHICAGO. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Address all business letters to the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION as above. Make all drafts and money orders payable to the Treasurer, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address on Cynosure list always give the former address.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill., as Second Class Matter.]

CONTENTS.

An Advance all Along the Line..... 1	CORRESPONDENCE:
EDITORIAL:	A Grand Lesson for Christians; "From Earth to Heaven;" Flying Like a Cloud; Pith and Point..... 5,6
Editorial Correspondence 8	N. C. A. Board Meeting... 5
Dr. Johnston..... 8	Iowa Starts for the First Rank..... 9
Odd-fellows in the Saddle 9	LITERATURE..... 6
The Fair for Christ..... 9	Testimony of Evangelists. 7
Sons of the Revolution... 9	THE N. C. A..... 7
Personal Mention..... 9	LECTURE LIST..... 7
CONTRIBUTIONS:	THE HOME..... 10
The Mississippi (Poetry) 2	TEMPERANCE..... 11
A Doomed City..... 2	BIBLE LESSON..... 12
Rev. William Johnston, D. D..... 2	RELIGIOUS NEWS..... 12
Neither Patriotism or Religion..... 3	NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 13
SELECTED:	DONATIONS..... 13
The Good Men in Secret Societies..... 3	MARKETS..... 13
The Bears are in the Woods..... 3	HOME AND HEALTH..... 14
WASHINGTON LETTER..... 4	FARM NOTES..... 15
NEW ENGLAND LETTER..... 4	BUSINESS..... 16

AN ADVANCE ALL ALONG THE LINE.

At the last meeting of the Board of Directors of the National Christian Association the undersigned was requested to act as Financial Secretary. This appointment was accepted with three conditions: 1st, That there should be no salary attached to the office; 2d, That no personal canvass should be expected; and 3d, That the organ of the Association should be at my disposal in such efforts as I might make for the treasury. I desire at this time to submit to our readers and friends a plan for carrying forward and extending our work, but before doing so a glance backward may be helpful.

TWENTY YEARS OF WORK.

It is now a little more than twenty years since the National Christian Association was organized to expose, oppose and withstand secret societies. At that time Freemasonry and Odd-fellowship had a popularity that was almost unclouded. Tens of thousands of initiates had crowded the lodges and, excepting on the part of a few faithful witnesses among a few religious bodies, there prevailed among the multitudes who were not in sympathy with secretism a dreadful silence. The most numerous and powerful religious organizations said nothing against lodges and permitted their meeting houses to be used for lodge occasions. This Association, relying upon the truth and the God of truth, undertook to save the church and the state from the corrupting influences of secret associations.

The result has been that those denominations which bore testimony against the lodge have been stimulated to renewed activity in reference to this great evil. The Reformed Presbyterian, the United Presbyterian, the United Brethren in Christ, the Free Methodist, the Wesleyan Methodist, the Friends, the Lutherans and others have through their ministers and their church papers done much to open the eyes of the young and the unprejudiced to the evils of secret associations.

The result of this activity by God's blessing has been that many members of these orders have abandoned them. Just how many we cannot know, but our list of seceders now numbers more than three hundred. An extensive literature has been created comprising both tracts and books. And what is perhaps best of all, tens of thousands of young men, who would naturally have drifted into these secret lodges, have been saved from them. This is indicated very clearly in the fact that Freemasonry gained more members between 1860 and 1865 than in all the years since the last mentioned date. Neither of the two great orders have gained much in membership during the last twenty years. These objects have been attained; our publishing house in Chicago and our Washington headquarters have been secured; and now the question is, what remains to be accomplished.

DR. WILLIAM JOHNSTON.

THE PRESENT SITUATION.

Even a careless observer can see two strong movements going forward in the secret society world. There is a steady movement of the lower degree men toward the higher degrees. Men who adhere to the lodges, notwithstanding their unpatriotic and atheistic character, multiply oaths and descend into the depths of their anti-Christian mysteries. There is also a multiplication of those orders which profess some particular benevolent, patriotic or insurance labor as an excuse for their existence. There is but little attempted in the way of reply to the arguments of Finney, Moody, Munhall, Beecher, Pentecost,

Miss Flagg and others. But the alleged danger from Romanism, the extension of the liquor trade, and the duty of making provision for one's wife and children, are made excuses for organizing lodges which shall be officered by Masons and aid in breaking down the prejudice against them.

On the other hand the conviction seems deepening among Christians and patriots that secrecy is not essential to the prosecution of any good cause. The murder of Dr. Cronin and the protection which the Clan-na-Gael have been able to extend to his murderers; the shameless interference of lodges in church trials in Boston, Aurora and elsewhere; the continued inability of prisons to hold Masonic convicts, as in the case of McGarigle; the singular decisions of Masonic Supreme Courts—these and related facts have aroused among thoughtful men a wide-spread conviction that the doctrines which the National Christian Association has been proclaiming for twenty years are true. These doctrines are, for substance, that secret societies are hostile to the Christian faith, to civil liberty, to the security of the home and to the highest personal excellence of individual members.

Along with this conviction, however, there is a sort of paralysis of faith which lessens the power of the church to combat this evil. It is not at all peculiar to our own cause; the ministry and the church feel it in respect to all great evils. The mammonism which rushes into the church, the love of pleasure, the indifference to admitted truths, the decay of the evening service, the dearth of the prayer-meetings, how can these evils be changed? Can they be changed at all? These are questions in presence of which thousands of ministers are hesitating and perplexed to-day, so that we have no right to be surprised that many of them admit the evil character of lodgism and yet do not see just how to meet and overcome it.

THE PRESENT NEED.

We have no right, however, in view of what it has pleased God to accomplish through us in the past, to doubt that he is willing to work with us for yet greater things in the time to come. Our anxiety should be to be entirely obedient, entirely trustful, and constantly busy with his appointed service. It is my purpose to indicate a few of the lines along which I think that he calls us to labor.

1. We need to remember that no cause which requires patient effort continued through many years can be advanced without the regular offerings of many interested hearts. No great enterprise was ever yet begun and carried forward by the gifts of a few wealthy men. They have their place, and if they fill it well are worthy of all honor, but God has always required the gifts and prayers of his humble ones for any work which was to be a permanent blessing to men. If we who have been seeking to exalt Jesus Christ and to oppose the lodges which insult or ignore him cannot regularly, cheerfully and persistently give some small sum annually to carry forward this work, then God will lay us aside and choose some other instrument for his service.

2. No great popular movement has yet done its work among men without an organ devoted to its specialty. Political parties, religious denominations, and industrial agitations all have some exponent of the interest at stake. The newspaper necessarily antagonizes neither the pulpit nor the platform, but it supplements and re-enforces both. Take away these bonds of union among men and the world would fall to pieces except where it was kept in place by the iron bands of despotism.

It follows that if we wish our work to go forward we must use as never before the power of the press. The Cynosure free list for circulation as a missionary agency, and the paid list as a testimony to our interest in the cause of openness and fair dealing, the cause of the Christian faith, both these should be energetically pushed. The men and women throughout this great nation, who wish that church and state should not be ruled by secret lodges, must rally to the support of the effort to increase greatly the number of readers for our national paper.

3. There is need also for the assembly of those who are interested in a cause if it is to progress. The working of degrees was doubtless used of God to accomplish certain results. It is probable, however, that there were incidental evils connected with it. The repetition of the Masonic oaths, prayers, and lectures, together with the presence of a half-clad candidate, produced, perhaps, on some minds the impression that the absurdities of Freemasonry were the chief argument against the institution. If we attain the end for which we strive, there must be the frequent discussion of the principles involved, in sober and thoughtful fashion, by candid men without anger or indifference to the feelings and rights of others. The pulpit and the platform are here to stay as long as men are rational and truth-loving. Instead of surrendering our place we should, during the next year, conduct more meetings than ever before. The agents of the Association or of local Associations should be employed and welcomed so far as may be, and in addition tens of thousands of meetings should be held in parlors, churches and halls where the lodge question may be temperately discussed; and no such meeting should fail to plan some practical aid to the cause.

HOW CAN THIS BE DONE?

Let every reader of the Cynosure, rich or poor, read carefully this article once more. Then let him ask whether he believes that the lodges are rivaling and, so far as they can, destroying the churches of Christ. If he does believe this, let him ask what portion of his benevolences should be expended in aiding this Association which has, under God, already accomplished so great a task and which has so great a task yet to perform. This question being determined, let him send a pledge to Mr. W. I. Phillips, our Treasurer, promising, if God permit, to pay what he believes he should pay annually to carry forward this work. Any form of pledge will do, but for uniformity's sake I suggest one. It can be filled out, cut from the paper and forwarded, unless the giver prefer to write his own. The following would do:

I hereby promise, God willing, to pay the sum of _____ dollars to the Treasurer of the National Christian Association, annually, until further notice, said sum to be used for the various uses of the Association.

And finally, let each reader of our paper call meetings in his own home or elsewhere to speak and pray for the overthrow of these orders where men are taught to swear and drink and dance and trifle in a world that each moment hastens on to judgment.

Our cause is not our own. It is dear to the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ. Let there be such an awaking and on-going among those to whom our Lord is precious as shall save souls, build up the churches of Christ, and render heaven itself vocal with praise.

Sincerely yours, CHAS. A. BLANCHARD.

THE MISSISSIPPI.

BY VICTORIA ALEXANDRA BUCK.

Down the rushing Mississippi, with his heart and soul
afire,
From the Old World bringing treasures, brave Marquette,
the hero came;
Through the wild and trackless forest, braving cold and pain and death,
Through the drear, malarial lowlands, with their poison-
freighted breath,
Over mount and moor and highland, where the laurel and the vine,
Emblems of the fame he longed for, 'neath the cypress trees
entwine;
Offering to the Virgin Mary, morning, noon and evening prayer,
That his weary eyes might view the glancing river flowing fair.
Ah! at last his eyes behold it! See, it floweth fast and free!
Look! the mighty Mississippi flows a conqueror to the sea.
Ah! La Salle, Marquette, De Soto, heroes famed in tale and song,
Though ye rest in death's deep slumber, bright the river flows along:
Flows along in conquering glory, where the cities tower in might,
Bearing on its restless billows raft and steamboat freighted bright.
Rear thy head with frosts all whitened, in the highlands far away;
Toss thy long arms o'er the prairies, bathe thy feet in ocean spray,
Murmur softly, O ye waters, where with high Castilian pride,
Sleeps a king, the brave De Soto, 'neath thy dark and restless tide.
Oh, thou mighty Mississippi! couldst thou speak to us today,
Ah, what stories thou couldst tell us of the past so far away!
Thou hast heard the cannons thunder; thou hast heard the bugles blow;
And thy glancing waves have danced to martial music in their flow.
Thou hast seen the banners flaunt their folds and streamers in the air,
And adown thy rushing waters sailed the gun-boat strong and fair:
Through the great heart of the nation thou hast sped and danced along;
Ah, thou mighty Mississippi, well thou meritest our song!
In those ages past away, there sailed the Indian's light canoe
O'er thy restless, rushing waters, all resistless in their flow.
All resistless they were flowing, through the forest dark and wide,
While the light canoe sailed onward with the red man and his bride.
Vanished the primeval forest, and the camp-fire's passed
away;
From the mystic age behind us opens up a purer day;
While the red man and the soldier sing, their songs from clime to clime,
With the Sire of Waters gliding, hallowed, down the stream of Time.

East Randolph, N. Y.

A DOOMED CITY.

BY REV. H. H. HINMAN.

The city of New Orleans is, and doubtless for a long period to come will be, the great commercial metropolis of the Southwest. It is in the center of a vast district adapted to the growth of cotton, sugar cane, and rice, and has the great valleys of the Mississippi and its tributaries to feed its immense commerce. Since the building of the jetties there are great iron steamers from all parts of the world lying constantly at its wharves. In spite of its many disabilities it has constantly grown and is becoming more and more the winter resort of the people of the Northwest. It is not a pleasant thought, that a great city with its vast wealth and the home of 300,000 people is to be destroyed, and yet there are causes at work which, without miraculous intervention, will in course of time cause its submergence by the waters that now nearly surround it.

The immense deposit of sediment brought down by the great river causes the bed of the Mississippi to rise higher and higher. Below Baton Rouge the river at its normal stage is higher than the adjacent country. The land descends back from the river until a region of swamps is reached, whose waters slowly pass off into the Gulf by bayous. Every year the area of the floods and their destructive power increases. It is questionable whether the dykes on the banks do not increase the ultimate danger. They keep the deposit in the bed of the river and hence cause it to rise faster than it otherwise would.

Water is the great enemy of the sugar planter, and the enemy grows stronger. Twenty-five years ago there were sugar plantations with excellent buildings which are now in the midst of the swamps, and only the tall chimneys indicate the location. No one imagines they can ever be reclaimed. Slowly the great flood encroaches on the habitations of men. The area of sugar culture increases in some directions, but diminishes in others. Besides this there is another cause in constant operation.

A writer, in a late number of the Forum, shows that the entire Atlantic and Gulf coast from New York to Galveston is gradually sinking and that the ocean encroaches on the land at the rate of one rod a year. Nearly all the Gulf coasts are but slightly above the sea and the vast marshes must inevitably increase. New Orleans lies between the river and Lake Ponchartrain seven miles distant. The Lake is but a part of the Gulf and no higher. Natural drainage is impossible. Only at immense expense and by the aid of vast machinery can the water be kept out. Much of the city is marsh, and many important thoroughfares are simply a continuous wooden bridge over water and mire. Now with the constant rising of the surface of the river and the constant depression of the city itself, it is only a question of time when the waters of the Lake and those of the river will come together and the mighty river take the shorter route through the Lake to the Gulf. Evidently it once went that way. It seems inevitable that it should do so again. Like Babylon, it may become "a possession for the bittern and pools of water." Isaiah 14: 23.

Berea, Ky.

REV. WILLIAM JOHNSTON, D. D.

BY REV. HENRY AVERY.

I may be allowed a few words of loving remembrance of Rev. William Johnston, of College Springs, Iowa, who died a few weeks since.

I had the privilege of being a brother pastor in the same town for nearly ten years. We were in different companies, but in the same great army. There were times when we seemed to be separated for a little time in outward form, though not in heart, by denominational fealty; yet the stronger fealty to the kingdom asserted itself, and we loved each other as brethren.

For a part of the ten years Bro. Johnston, Bro. Hall of the Wesleyan church, and myself sustained a Monday ministers' meeting, in which subjects both weighty and light were discussed. The memory of the freedom and brotherly love and cheerfulness of those meetings will help one at least of those who participated through the rest of his pilgrimage.

The United Presbyterian denomination loses in this death one of its strong men. Much work was laid upon him, and with his accustomed industry the work was well done. He wrote strong articles in favor of freedom of opinion and action when his denomination was agitated by questions which many considered vital, but not one bitter word. He could state his opponent's argument with clearness, and then overthrow that argument with a stronger one on the other side.

The causes of reform lose a champion. He was brought up under anti-slavery influences, and early enlisted in the ranks of the minority who were struggling for freedom and right. Then when prohibition and anti-secrecy needed help, it was a matter of course that his sympathies would be with the few who stood for the truth. It cost him much in different ways to stand firm when members of his church disapproved and deserted, but he was not one to flinch a hair's breadth. He answered arguments honestly, and carried conviction by the fairness and cogency of his reasoning. With few of the graces of oratory, he had a wonderful flow of language, and could always express his thought better than most of his brethren.

The kingdom of Christ on earth will miss one who was in earnest in his work and who gave himself to it. His great heart of love could take in all the human family, but especially the redeemed ones in the kingdom. I understand that his last discourse was of the "Many Mansions," and the love which had "prepared a place." No wonder that hundreds gathered to drop tears at his grave; that all the churches in the neighborhood felt the blow; that the cause of reform trembled, and that the kingdom of Christ anxiously inquires, Who shall rise to take his place? "Know ye not that a prince and a great man is fallen in Israel?"

Montour, Iowa.

NEITHER PATRIOTISM OR RELIGION.

BY REV. W. J. A. WENN.

Whether the G. A. R. is political or not, it is in politics and with a vengeance. I fail to see that a soldier life of four years qualifies any man for all sorts of public positions. And when one sat as I did and heard a minister of the Gospel addressing a post of veterans begin every third or fourth sentence with "Noble conquerors," "Illustrious heroes," (remembering that he was counted as one of them) I felt more than drearily; I became disgusted. Let honor be given to whom honor is due, and it is due the Union soldier, but let it not leap with a wild self-laudation, nor let it derogate to fulsome flattery nor indiscriminate praise.

Lodges are the greatest teachers and upholders of man-righteousness that I know of. They exalt the homo and belittle the Deus and Dominus. The G. A. R. is fast following after Masonry, Odd-fellowship, etc. The "Grand Army" in the war days was not very distinctively religious, nor was it eminently pious. Iniquity abounded. The morale of the Union forces was not high. This is one of the curses of war. Take men from daily employments; from church and school privileges; from the humanizing and tender influences of home, mother and children and wife—in other words, mass men, and it is inevitable that they become hardened. The army of the North could not escape the consequences of this inexorable law. But what is it you find uttered and sung and spoken in churches and meeting-houses on Decoration Day? These are specimen lines of what I have heard sung in a church on this occasion:

"Just God, how long that battle raged,
How glorious that strife;
Man gave for fellow-man his all,
And gained immortal life."

Another:

"They fell, and from that battle plain,
Up from the blood-wet sod,
A soldier's spirit passed to gain
The battlements of God."

And again:

"They fought and won the battle,
Those hero boys of ours;
And we are left to weep them,
And strew their graves with flowers.
"They've worn the palms of glory,
They wear the rose of grace;
Beneath His crown of sunlight
Their souls shall see His face."

One evangelical minister used these words in concluding his address: "Where are the heroes of 1812? Where the hero-host of 1860-5? They are in the presence of God. Robed in white they rest from their labors." One can only ask, How can men do these things? How will this minister greet his God! The inevitable inference is that these even obtained life and immortality without the Gospel. This we know is a lie. There is no salvation for the Confederate soldier if these lines be true. Thus men are led to do without a Saviour, and see no need of the atonement. Here is a salvation by works. Here is a rejection of Jesus; and here is one of the devil's choicest delusions.

How grievous is all this!—to see ministers and members of churches engaging in all this—I hope thoughtlessly. O long-suffering Saviour, O merciful God, how long shall men set aside the glory of thy righteousness and the beauty of thy goodness!

THE GOOD MEN IN SECRET SOCIETIES.

To a correspondent who doubts the propriety of opposing secret societies because so many good men are connected with some one or other of them, the editor of the New York Witness replies in his July 16th number:

Good men differ about the propriety of joining secret societies just as they do on other subjects. Some look at the aims of the society, and conclude that it must be good because it is seeking to do good; others look at the principle involved, and say that no fellowship whose bond of union is a secret can be a fellowship in Christ, and it cannot be desirable for a Christian man to enter into such a fellowship. This argument does not imply that such societies are wholly bad, but only that there is a wrong principle imbedded in their system which, so far as its influence goes, must produce evil fruit.

The fact that good men, and even ministers, follow some particular course of action does not prove that it is a right course. Ministers are not infallible any more than editors, or any other class of men. We all make lots of mistakes. As the Rev. Mr. Spurgeon says, the only man who never makes mistakes is the man who never does anything, "which, truth to tell, is the greatest blunder of all." The endorsement of all the ministers combined could not make a wrong thing right any more than the condemnation of all the editors combined could make a right thing wrong. Never pin your faith or your conscience to anybody's coat-tails, but study the Word of God for yourself, seeking the guidance of the Holy Spirit that you may understand it aright. Do not expect to find positive commands there with regard to such questions as this. The good Book does not say, "Thou shalt join secret societies;" neither does it say, "Thou shalt not join secret societies." But it offers as the standard of Christian living the life of our Lord Jesus Christ as described in the Gospels, and the principles which guided his life as explained in the Epistles. It is scarcely possible to imagine Jesus becoming a member of any of these modern secret societies if he were on earth to-day, and if he would not do so it is clear that we should not.

But in many cases mere secrecy is not the worst feature in these societies. A much worse characteristic about them is that they attempt to create a brotherhood which is not in Christ. Christians are, indeed, required to mix with the world's people and to work with them, shoulder to shoulder for the accomplishment of any good object, but they are definitely forbidden to be unequally yoked together with unbelievers. A marriage with an unbeliever, or a business partnership with one, or a common membership in one of these brotherhoods, such, for instance, as the Masonic order, seems to us to be clearly contrary to the spirit of this command.

The Christian who, by becoming a Mason, binds himself to the members of that fraternity, many of whom make no profession of love to Christ, in a fellowship closer than that which he feels for believers in Christ as such, is, so far as we can see, deliberately proclaiming to the world that the religion of Christ is a failure and that he has found something better; yet every good thing that is to be found in Masonry or in any other society is borrowed from Christ. He is the source of all truth, of all benevolence, of all purity and of all genuine reform, and there is no brotherhood worthy the name which does not receive its inspiration from him. The church of Christ is the only true brotherhood, and its members ought to make it the pattern of all benevolence and of all noble citizenship.

The grace of God is a gift which he is always ready to bestow, but God does not give us any gift for selfish uses. We must do his work and his will, and we must constantly, from day to day, ask God's help—not sit down in idleness and contentment, feeling that we have worked out our salvation.—Moody.

ARE YOU, kind reader, making those 50,000 subscribers a matter of prayer? If you pray well, you will think well, plan well, and work well for such a list.

"THE BEARS ARE IN THE WOODS."

[From the New York Sun.]

The ridiculous performances of the secret lodges are objects of lawful attack, and the following letter, from Norwich, Connecticut, to the New York Sun will amuse while it disgusts the reader with organizations which promote such scenes of folly among grown-up men:

At dusk the other night a delegation of local Red Men went to the west side railroad station to receive the biggest red chiefs in Connecticut, who had come to Norwich to inspect the Red Men's lodge here. In the party were a commander or two, a great Sannap, and somebody else, but in some way the Sannap missed the delegation. May be he got off on the wrong side of the train. At any rate, he came into the heart of the city alone, and, supposing that the Red Men still worshiped in their old temple, he made a break for Uncas Hall. It was 8 o'clock by the time-piece in the American Mechanics' hall, and 100 knights in robes of the order were solemnly ranged along the sides of the lodge room. In the center of the open floor space, environed by the glittering array of men, rose the altar, stiff, impressive. On one side of it sat the commander in formal and funeral dignity; on the other side the vice-commander, no less somber of bearing. Evidently work imposingly momentous and serious was going on. If there is a society in the land that is breathlessly secret it is that of the American Mechanics, for they are accredited with anti-Catholic sentiments, and everybody says that entrance to their lodge room is guarded against aliens by word and by spell, like the bower of the Ladye of Branksome.

The great Sannap of Connecticut, his gripsack under his arm, strode up the dimly lighted staircase to Uncas Hall, and, halting at a familiar blind door, rapped thrice with his knuckles and thumped once with his toe on the pannels, signaling to the screened guard within that the great Sannap of the Nutmeg State was present. Thereupon a slide in an upper door-panel was shot smoothly aside, and first an eye and then an ear came into the opening. The Sannap, with the free-and-easy air and tone that accompany self-confidence, whispered a joss word thickly into the ear in the opening, and at once the guard, suspicious of no mischance, threw open the door and admitted the great Red Man into the Mechanics' ante-room. With ease and freedom the Sannap stepped briskly to the center of the room, threw down his satchel, unlocked and opened it, took out and donned the glittering and gory regalia that goes with the rank of high and mighty Sannap of Connecticut. The Sannap was a handsome chap and his robe was a glorious one, but the Mechanics' guardsman innocently wondered why he had never seen a similar one on an American Mechanic before. All the time the Sannap cracked jokes and prattled on, and once he asked carelessly, "What degree are the boys working to-night? Hunting degree, I suppose," but the guardsman stared and said: "Hey! I dun-no."

Clad in his regal red garb, which flowed to his feet, the great chief stalked proudly to the inner door of the ante-room that opens into the Mechanics' hall, and rapped on the pannels. A slide flew back, the Sannap whispered a second joss word into the ear that filled the opening, the door opened, and the Red Man marched into the hall.

Then followed the oddest episode in the history of American secret societies. Absolute silence reigned, while 100 astounded American Mechanics beheld a tall and majestic stranger, robed in a scarlet night-gown that was studded with gilt moons and tomahawks and stars, rush silently down the clear space of the hall until he halted directly before the grand commander of the lodge. There, without a word, he paused for ten seconds, then suddenly he leaped back on his haunches with a characteristically Indian gesture, threw his right hand behind his ear, as if it held a tomahawk with which he was about to cleave the commander's skull, and, bowing his body backward, the while his stiffened left hand stuck out in front of him, he yelled in the rolling voice of a fox-hunter calling in his pack from a mile away:

"The-bears-are-in-the-woods!"

Aghast, the 100 Mechanics watched and heard the glittering stranger. There was one thought uppermost in every one's mind, that a gorgeous lunatic confronted them, and that notion inspired the surmise that very probably the intruder had slain both the guards and now was prepared to wipe out all the officers of the anti-Catholic society. Still the knights stood spell-bound; no one made a move to arrest the wild man.

The great Sannap, not having noticed the consternation his appearance had caused, after gazing at the grand commander with piercing glance for a moment, straightened himself with a jerk, whirled, and faced the line of startled Mechanics' and shouted: "The grand sachem has come to make you a friendly call; prepare to receive him. The great sachem is on the trail!" Then he whirled again, and, stalking down the arena toward the vice-commander of the Mechanics, halted a few feet from that officer, drew himself up, glared, and shouted:

"The great Sannap has entered your wigwam! I am here!"

At this juncture it suddenly occurred to the commander of the Mechanics what was the matter with the gyrating intruder; he was a Red Man, who, mistakenly, was trying to work off some red Indian degrees on the free and independent American Mechanics. As the Sannap paused once to get breath the commander arose and solemnly remarked: "I think there is some mistake. I guess you've got into the wrong berth."

"What!" yelled the Sannap.

"Well," replied the other, "you seem to be a great Red Man, or something of the sort, while we are American Mechanics, and have nothing to do with 'bears in the woods,' or that kind of hunting."

The Sannap seemed to be petrified for a moment, then he let out a war whoop, took three somersaults across the hall, and skipped out of the room, the guardsmen holding open the doors to let him go with dispatch.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 23, 1890.

Postmaster General Wanamaker is being sharply criticized for having entered into an agreement with the agent of a St. Louis brewing company, promising to lease, for the use of the post-office department, a six story building which the brewing company is to erect opposite the department building, at an annual rental of $9,000. Of course everybody knows that the department is badly cramped for room, but many people think that some one else might have been induced to put up a building for the purpose, in view of the handsome rental to be paid; at any rate, they do not like the idea of the Government renting from a beer-brewing company. There is something in it that jars upon one's sense of the fitness of things, and it will not be strange if Mr. Wanamaker's fellow Christians persuade him not to carry it out. Some of the temperance folks are talking of testing the legality of his action in the matter.

The House of Representatives yesterday passed its substitute for the "Original Package" bill, which had already passed the Senate, although for a few minutes the matter seemed to be in doubt, and when the preliminary vote was first announced, there was only a majority of one for the House substitute, but owing to a number of changes, when officially announced it was 112 to 97; and upon the final vote upon the passage of the bill as amended, the vote was 176 yeas to 38 nays. Seeing that the bill was going to pass, a number of members who have opposed it all the time, voted for it. [The exact language of the bill as it passed the House, and as it will go to a conference committee from the House and Senate, may be read in the Temperance department.—Ed.]

The only difference between this bill and the original Senate measure, is that this includes all articles of commerce, while the original was confined to intoxicating liquors. It is well nigh certain that the Senate will accept the amendment.

If the good people of the country are not on the alert, the Mormons will succeed in their efforts to defeat the bill, which the Senate has passed, and which is now being considered by the House Judiciary committee, providing for the application of the forfeited Mormon church funds to the support of the common schools of Utah. The Mormons are represented here by the best legal talent that money will employ, and these lawyers are working hard to convince members of the House that to pass the bill would be a violation of existing law. Public sentiment, both in and out of Congress, favors this measure, as it has every one introduced which promises to aid in crippling the power of the Mormons. Still it will not do to sit down and fold your hands if you expect to see this bill become a law, as it should.

Did you know that sailors and marines in the United States Navy are not allowed to wear temperance badges? It is even so; and the military branch of the W. C. T. U. want to know the reason why. Their representative has called upon Secretary Tracy, and he has promised to look into the matter and see if there is not some way of amending the regulation so as to allow sailors and marines who are members, and there are quite a large number of them, to wear the button badge which the military branch of the W. C. T. U. has adopted.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

Vacation notes—The next Catholic congress—Wanted: A man for the hour—The text of an I. O. O. F. discourse by Rev. H. B. Carpenter—A case of "discipline" in the Methodist church.

The drouth in Boston and vicinity is the severest that has been known for many years. Even the dust-covered leaves of the burdock by the roadside seem sending up to heaven a mute appeal for rain, and the scorched and seared grass makes one think involuntarily of the Scripture expression, "which to-day is and to-morrow is cast into the oven." A few weeks ago it was bright as emerald, smooth as velvet; and now it looks as if an eastern simoon had passed over it. What a lesson here for murmuring human nature—if one has the mind to read it—on the wisdom of divine Providence in so often clouding our skies, and making us pass through the shady places of affliction and trial. For surely, nothing is more to be deprecated than continual sunshine. Who has not seen lives from which all the tender human graces have been fairly scorched and killed by constant prosperity, till they lie, so far as regards any beneficent influences flowing out to others, a mere barren desert?

The vacation craze is full upon us and everybody that can goes off to the seashore or the mountains to make themselves as comfortable or uncomfortable as the accommodations usually provided at such places will admit. But the few who, like the writer, are kept at home by duty or circumstances have some decided advantages, for if it be rest one needs, there is no place like home; and if it be change there are a thousand ways of altering the regular routine of one's daily life. Thoreau in a walk of half a mile would really travel farther than half the tourists who "do" Switzerland and Italy after the most approved guide-book fashion. I am tempted here to quote a sentence from his "Six Weeks on the Concord and Merrimac:"

"Many waves are there agitated by the wind, keeping nature fresh; the spray blowing in your face; reeds and rushes waving; ducks by the hundred, all uneasy in the surf, in the raw wind just ready to rise, and now going off with a clatter and a whistling, the riggers straight for Labrador, flying against the stiff gale with reefed wings, or else circling round first with all their paddles moving briskly, just over the surf, to reconnoiter you before they leave these parts; gulls wheeling overhead; muskrats, swimming for dear life, wet and cold, with no fire to warm them that you know of, their labored homes rising here and there like hay-stacks; and countless mice and moles, and winged tit-mice along the sunny, windy shore; cranberries tossed on the waves and heaving up on the beach, their little red skiffs beating about among the alders. . . . You shall perhaps run aground on Cranberry Island (only some spires of last year's pipe-grass above the water to show where the danger is) and get as good a freezing as anywhere on the northwest coast. I never voyaged so far in my life."

This is certainly a delicious bit of reading for a hot day. And, by the way, if there can be an international copyright law which will put a check on the floods of cheap summer literature with which the land is periodically deluged, it would be "a consummation most devoutly to be wished." The amount of such trash put forth is a libel on the American public. We do not all pack away our brains and every faculty of intelligent thinking along with our winter dresses, though a foreigner looking over a publisher's midsummer list would almost think so. But the general relaxation in every branch of religious and reform effort is the worst evil attendant on the holiday season. Fancy the disgust of his Satanic majesty if some fine day his faithful emissaries of the saloon should follow the prevailing example and clamor to take a summer vacation!

There is some prospect that Boston may be selected as the place of meeting for the next Catholic congress. The committee selected to appoint time and place met in that city last Thursday, which seems to give some color to the report. As it is here that they have been most outrageous in their demands and have succeeded most thoroughly in arousing Protestant sentiment against them, this looks either like a piece of bravado, or else that they are very sure of ultimate victory. Of course Governor Brackett will be present, as this will be another opportunity to win him some more Irish votes. In truckling to Rome he has done even worse than Governor Ames. As a Mason who glories in his lodge relations, he has made himself obnoxious to anti-secretists. Every time that a question of reform has touched him he has given forth an uncertain sound. What the country needs is a new party which shall unite in itself opposition to every evil, the lodge included; but a new party which is honey-combed through and through with secret societies would have but a doubtful advantage over the old ones. It is to be hoped, however, that for the honor of Massachusetts there will be a general rally next fall, irrespective of party, to put different men in the Legislature. A correspondent of the Traveler states that one of our law-makers actually told him that his salary of $750 as a member of the Legislature would scarcely pay his rum bills, and that his expenses in Boston since the year came in had not been less than $2,000. No wonder that decent men are beginning to think it a rather dubious honor to be elected to such a body.

Rev. Henry Bernard Carpenter, the former pastor of the Hollis St. church, dropped dead at Bar Harbor, Me., while dressing himself a few days ago. He was a man of genius, a good writer and a fine lecturer, but scarcely a minister after the apostolic standard. Some weeks ago he was selected to deliver the address at a memorial service held by the I. O. O. F. lodge in Wellesley, and for his text he took the following, which he of course claimed as the words of Jesus: "When two or three meet together . . . then am I also with thee." It will be observed that the most important part of this mutilated text, "In my name," is carefully omitted, which proves that Mr. Carpenter thoroughly understood what was required of him as a lodge orator.

On Friday last was celebrated in Boston the 100th anniversary of the day when Jesse Lee, the apostle of Methodism, preached his first sermon under the old Liberty tree on the Common. The Methodists were then called the New Lights, and were held in about the same odor by the cultured and aristocratic portion of the community as the Salvation Army at the present time.

In this connection a curious case of discipline may be mentioned among the Methodists of Westfield, one of our hill country towns in the western part of the State. A certain Father Carter, who is 81 years old and has been for 58 years connected with this denomination, who has been a valued class leader and church steward, and well reported of by all who know him for his blameless and unselfish life, is to be tried before a church council this week under section 242 of the church discipline, "for disobedience to the orders of the church." The charges against him are of the most frivolous kind, such as shouting Amen too vigorously, and singing and praying in meetings when forbidden by the pastor. Father Carter will probably add one more to the long list of those who have been cast out from this lodge-ridden church because they followed too closely in the footsteps of their Master.

ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

—Bro. Wm. F. Davis, the faithful Boston Common preacher, has been led providentially to decide on the opening of a Christian Mission Training school at his home, Mt. Washington, Chelsea, Mass. It will begin Sept. 28th and continue until June 16, 1891.

N. C. A. BOARD MEETING.

The regular quarterly meeting of the Board was held last Thursday morning. There were present brethren Thomson, Whipple, Pinkney, Milton, Hitchcock, Arnold, Richards, Blanchard and Worrell. Prayer being offered by Prof. E. Whipple, and the records of last meeting being approved, the Corresponding Secretary and Treasurer reported the condition of the finances and other business. The report being received, various items were acted upon as follows: 1. The sale of a note held as part of the proceeds of the Leuty farm donation, was ordered. 2. The property donated to the N. C. A. by Mrs. Mary Cairns, located in St. Louis, Mich., not having been sold, and not being very remunerative, the Corresponding Secretary was authorized to arrange for its sale in connection with the finance committee. 3. W. I. Phillips and H. L. Kellogg were appointed a committee on revision of N. C. A. by-laws. 4. The division and titles of permanent funds was arranged so that the Minister's fund should be known as the Southern Ministers' fund; that the Extension fund be divided and a portion be known as Reading Room fund; that the Free Tract fund be permanent; that a Permanent fund be established, the interest of which only is to be used; and that the name Current Expense fund be used instead of General fund for donations for ordinary expenses.

The report of the Building Committee was accepted. H. L. Kellogg of the committee asking to be excused from serving, his request was granted and W. I. Phillips was appointed in his place.

The disposition of the Washington building came up under a request for a re-valuation of both the Washington and Carpenter buildings, recent estimates making them worth respectively $14,000 and $30,000 instead of $8,000 and $20,000 as now appears on the books of the Association. The question of sale was settled by a negative vote, as was that also of re-valuation.

The proposal of the managing editor respecting the payment of contributors was considered and adopted in a modified form in respect to Miss Flagg.

The finance committee, H. A. Fischer, E. Whipple and G. R. Milton, were requested to act as auditors. The committee on Publications were requested to consult and report on time of holding the annual meeting, which in the late revision of by-laws was voted to be changed without fixing date.

The recommendation of the April Conference that 100,000 copies of special numbers of the Cynosure was presented, but was put aside for a proposition by the publishing agent of the paper that he be authorized to put the advance price of the Cynosure at $1.00 if 12,000 subscribers could be secured. This was discussed at some length, and some objections appearing because of contracts with agents, it was referred to a committee.

Bro. John Gardner having sent a kind letter resigning his position on the Board, it was voted to accept, and an expression of the sincere thanks of the Board sent him for his co-operation and presence for years in its meetings.

Rev. S. F. Porter was requested to undertake the work among the Southern colleges. Also the following resolutions, expressing the regard of the Board in respect to Sabbath observance during the World's Fair, were unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS, The Columbian Exposition is soon to be held in this city, and

WHEREAS, The material advantages resulting from the holding of this Exposition will be largely offset by moral deterioration if it should be opened on the Sabbath day or should permit the sale of liquor; therefore Resolved, By the Board of Directors of the National Christian Association: 1. That we hereby earnestly request the National Commission and the Board of Directors of the Columbian Exposition to keep all places for the sale of intoxicating liquors out of the grounds of said Exposition and to close said grounds on the Sabbath days.

2. That we make this latter request in deference to the law of God and the rights of wage workers who will, in transportation, hotel, telegraph and other lines, have no rest day during the Exposition unless the Sabbath be respected.

After discussing still further the present financial condition of the N. C. A. the Board adjourned after prayer.

CORRESPONDENCE.

A GRAND LESSON FOR CHRISTIANS.

ROGERS PARK, Ill.

All honor to Gen'l. Lyon for his faithfulness and courage in defense of the banner of his country in the trying hour, so graphically given in our esteemed editor's letter from Saratoga. Hear the words of the hero when beset by professed friends who from their knowledge of the swarms of formidable foes quailed and therefore desired to have their State "stand neutral." Which way would Missouri go? Neutral? What! the rebel flag float as high in the same breeze with the Stars and Stripes! Nay! nay! "Before that shall be allowed," said the brave General, "I will see you, and you, and you," as he pointed at each of the deputation, "and every man, woman and child dead and buried."

American Christians, on you there are devolving important world-wide labors, and immediate duty demands implicit loyalty to the visible Gospel banners of the visible church. Shall we say The New United Testament Church of Christ in America? Let us all enlist into the one grand army of the United church, whose only sword is the sword of the Spirit, the Word of God, and fully armored, "fight the good fight of faith" in the world. Our marching orders are the commission of our risen Lord, "Go into all the world and preach the Gospel" to every one. And as the King of Truth paid taxes to Cæsar—in other words the Civil Government—so let his followers do, and repudiate all favors that the state might present which are not equally enjoyed by all her citizens. Then, cheer, boys, cheer and rejoice in no king but Christ. T. H.

"FROM EARTH TO HEAVEN."

REPLY BY A. M. PAULL.

In the Cynosure of July 17th under the heading of "From Earth to Heaven," a writer takes the view that saints at death go immediately to heaven. I agree with him so far as this; that Enoch and Elijah (and I will add one more, Moses) are in heaven, for the record in their cases is clear, their bodies went with their spirits; and though immediately after translation their bodies were searched for by some incredulous friends, they could not be found. Undoubtedly these three went direct to heaven and will need no resurrection, their bodies already being glorified. Two of them, in their glorified bodies, were present at the transfiguration of Christ, but in the case of no other Bible worthy have we such a record. Of David, one of the excellent of the earth, it is expressly declared, "For David did not ascend into heaven," Acts 2:34. Jesus did not go to heaven until after his resurrection, for he says himself just after coming from the tomb, "I have not yet ascended to my Father." John 20:17. Of these last two, it is stated that their bodies were placed in sepulchres. From the above facts we may conclude that when the body is placed anywhere subject to dissolution the spirit goes at first to some other place than heaven. What that place is Scripture leaves no room for honest doubt. To the repentant thief Jesus said, "To-day shalt thou be with me in Paradise." That settles the question for them. They both immediately after death were, not in heaven, but Hades, of which Paradise forms a part. Again, of Jesus it was of old prophesied that his body should lie in the grave while his soul remained in Hades, quoted and explained in Acts 2:27 and 31, "neither was his soul abandoned to the under-world, nor did his flesh see corruption." Still, again, Jesus, in his parable of the rich man and Lazarus, pictures Abraham and Lazarus in Paradise on one side of the great gulf which is in Hades, and which separates the righteous from the wicked, and the rich man on the other side; still communication of some sort was had between them over the gulf, just as Peter says the Lord Jesus carried on a conversation with those who were disobedient before the flood, for Hades brings all the generations of the ages together. How clear the account is! "Because Christ also suffered once for sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh, but made alive by the Spirit, in which also he went and preached to the spirits in prison [Hades] who were disobedient in times past when the long-suffering of God waited in the days of Noah while the ark was preparing, wherein a few, that is, eight souls, were saved through water; which, in an antitype, immersion now saves us also . . . by the resurrection of Jesus Christ, who is on the right hand of God, having gone into heaven." 1 Peter 3:18, etc.

There we have a panoramic view of Christ's existence from his death to his ascension.

1. His death.
2. Its object—to save us.
3. His body in the tomb.
4. His spirit in Hades.
5. Wicked, disobedient spirits beyond the gulf.

6. His spirit converses with them.
7. Having on his own side of the gulf, the company of Abraham, David, Lazarus, the repentant thief, and so far as the record shows, all the righteous dead, with the exception of Moses, Enoch and Elijah.

8. The resurrection.
9. Ascension into heaven where Moses Enoch and Elijah are.

Is it not presumptuous to claim a privilege for ourselves which was denied to our Lord, to Abraham, to David, to Lazarus and to the converted thief, according to the plain record. They remain in Hades till their resurrection, and why not we?

The article in question imagines Paul as saying on his dying day, "This is my crowning day;" but what Paul really said was this, "I have finished my course, I have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me the crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, will give me in that day, and not to me only, but to all those who love his appearing," 2 Tim. 4:7. To have a crown laid up till the resurrection day is quite different from taking it at death.

Again the article reads, "Our Lord himself told the disciples that they should be with him where he was in the Father's house where there are many mansions, John 14:1-3." Turning to that passage, we find that Jesus did not say he will receive them at their death, but at his second coming. He said this, "And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and will receive you to myself." That covers also the expression of Paul about departing and being with Christ.

The future rewards to the soul of the believer as set forth in the letters to the seven churches, to my mind reveal the progress of a Christian soul after death:

1. "To him . . . I will give to eat of the tree of life which is in the paradise of God," Rev. 2:7, i. e., when the soul leaves the body he lives on, not in heaven, but in Paradise, or Hades.

2. Jesus gives him the crown of life, and declares he shall not be hurt of the second death, Rev. 2:10, 11. Compare with 20:6. Refers to the first resurrection.

3. A new name, Rev. 2:17. Compare with 14:1 and 19:12.

4. Authority over the nations to rule them with a rod of iron, Rev. 2:27. Compare with 12:5 and 19:15.

5. Jesus clothes him in white garments and acknowledges him before his Father and the angels in heaven, Rev. 3:5. Compare with 7:13 and 19:8.

6. Further exaltation. A pillar in the temple of God, the name of God to be written upon him, also the name of the city of God, the New Jerusalem, and Jesus' new name, Rev. 3:12. Compare with 21:3, 10.

7. The crowning exaltation. "I will give to him to sit with me on my throne as I also overcame and sat down with my Father in his throne," Rev. 3:21. Compare with 22:3.

Another beautiful panoramic view, this time of the believer's soul's life step by step onward from death to the dwelling in the New Jerusalem. Let us review it.

1. The descent into Hades.
2. The resurrection.
3. The new name.
4. Authority over the nations in the millennium.
5. Complete sanctification and justification before the Father.

*NOTE—The quotations are from the Bible Union Version.

6. Exaltation.

7. Sharing Jesus' throne.

The first stage covering the intermediate state.

From the second to the fifth the millennium.

The sixth and seventh life in the New Jerusalem.

Revelation takes us no further, but we have reason to believe that at some time the soul will be permitted even to approach God's throne in the heaven of heavens, the heaven proper.

ALBERT M. PAULL.

REPLY BY BRO. HINMAN.

The article in the Cynosure of July 17th under the above title by our able and excellent Bro. Porter, seems to me in some respects out of harmony with the sacred Scriptures. Let us consider what is the real question at issue. It is not whether both the righteous and the wicked have a conscious existence, and are either happy or unhappy, from the time of death onward through eternity. I think the Bible teaches this plainly. Rev. 14:13. It is not whether there is any such thing as purgatory or a second probation. These are but the inventions of men. Nor is it whether there will be a recognition in the future world. This is left undecided, but the weight of Scripture evidence favors it.

But the question is simply this, Do the departed enter at once on the fulness of their reward, or is there an intermediate state between death and the resurrection? I think the Scriptures teach the latter doctrine.

1. This was the belief of the Jews in the time of our Saviour. (See Josephus' chapter on Hades.) This doctrine of Hades is sanctioned by our Saviour in the parable of the rich man and Lazarus. Luke 17:19-31. It will be noticed that the time here spoken of was before the general judgment, for men still had an opportunity to hear Moses and the prophets, and that at this time neither had entered on the fulness of his reward. Dives was in Hades, and Lazarus in Paradise, or, as it is called, "Abraham's bosom."

2. Everywhere in the Scriptures the reward, both of the righteous and the wicked, is spoken of as being given at the time when our Lord shall come to judge the living and the dead. See Luke 14:13, where the recompense is promised "at the resurrection of the just." See also 2 Thess. 1:7-10, where the wicked are said to be punished, not when they die, but "when the Lord shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God." Also 2 Tim. 4:7, 8, where Paul expected his crown at the "appearing" of the Lord.

3. Peter says expressly that David, who had been dead about one thousand years, was "not yet ascended into the heavens." See Acts 2:29-34.

And lastly, our Lord himself, though he had been dead, and, according to his promise to the penitent thief, been in Paradise, had not yet ascended to heaven. He said to Mary, "Touch me not, for I have not yet ascended to my Father. . . I ascend to my Father and to your Father, to my God and to your God." John 20:17. What is meant by the "preaching to the spirits in prison" we may not know, but we do know that He has "gone to prepare a place for us," and that he will "come again to receive us unto himself." When we die we shall rest in hope, but the crown of eternal blessedness will He bring with him.

H. H. HINMAN.

FLYING LIKE A CLOUD.

IRON HILLS, IOWA.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—The zealous efforts the Protestant denominations are putting forth in this generation to send out the missionaries of the Gospel over the inhabitable globe, either traveling on our fast railroad trains or ocean steamers, is beautifully illustrated by the prophet Isaiah 60:8: "Who are these that fly as a cloud, and as the doves to their windows?"

That this is not a false assumption or a mere opinion is proven by the Prophet's own words in connection with the verse I have given. Verses 3 to 5 in the same chapter read as follows: "And the Gentiles shall come to thy light, and kings to the brightness of thy rising. Lift up thine eyes round about and see: all they gather themselves together, they come to thee: thy sons shall come from far, and thy daughters shall be nursed at thy side. Thou shalt see, and flow together, and thy heart shall fear, and be enlarged; because the abundance of the sea shall be converted unto thee, the forces of the Gentiles shall come to thee."

The Church, or Zion in general, shall shine forth in brightness; she is obedient to her Christian duties in sending abroad her true and tried messengers, beings of innocence, to locate wherever the message is acceptable, like doves flying towards their attractive homes. Their labors shall not be in vain, for the forces of the Gentiles shall assemble under her banner and gather themselves round about. The Christian travelers are represented as a great caravan traveling over the deserts fully supplied with the necessities of life, temporal as well as spiritual, as we read in the next two verses, 6 and 7, to wit: "The multitude of camels shall cover thee, the dromedaries of Midian and Ephah; all they from Sheba shall come: they shall bring gold and incense, and they shall show forth the praises of the Lord. All the flocks of Kedar shall be gathered together unto thee, the rams of Nebaioth shall minister unto thee: they shall come up with acceptance on mine altar, and I will glorify the house of my glory."

Isaiah, living in Palestine, or the western part of Asia, showed in his prophecy that these strange events of time would proceed from the West in pointing to Tarshish, which was supposed to be a sea port in Solomon's time, somewhere in Spain. The western nations of Europe and North America began this noble work from the beginning of this century. Verses 9 and 10 read: "Surely the isles shall wait for me, and the ships of Tarshish first, to bring thy sons from far, their silver and their gold with them, and the name of the Lord thy God, and to the Holy One of Israel, because he hath glorified thee. And the sons of thy strangers shall build up thy walls, and their kings shall minister unto thee: for in my wrath I smote thee, but in my favor have I had mercy on thee."

Christ is portrayed here in these verses in figurative language as the Holy One of Israel. The walls of the Christian temple shall be strengthened through the additional numbers of the Gentiles.

The obstruction the heathen nations had placed against Christian missionaries were mostly removed within the last sixty or seventy years. Isaiah pointed to the opening of its sea ports in saying, verse 11: "Therefore thy gates shall be open continually; they shall not be shut day nor night; that men may bring unto thee the forces of the Gentiles, and that their kings may be brought."

People which would embrace and accept the glad tidings of the Bible are represented as evergreen trees of Lebanon; but nations and kingdoms turning their backs to the Gospel shall perish and be condemned, as we read in verses 12 and 13: "For the nation and kingdom that will not serve thee shall perish; yea, those nations shall be utterly wasted. The glory of Lebanon shall come unto thee, the fir tree, the pine tree, and the box together, to beautify the place of my sanctuary, and I will make the place of my feet glorious."

B. EISENTRAUT.

PITH AND POINT.

SHALL WE SAY "THIRD PARTY?"

Allow me to call attention to what seems to me very absurd and unjust in you to speak of the Prohibition party as "the third party Prohibitionists." If this is true, then where are "the second party Prohibitionists," and also "the first party Prohibitionists." The use of the term can be but to vitiate and stifle the truth as it exists in the political arena. Why not say "party Prohibitionists" at once—clear. To say "third party Prohibitionists" is to promote the delusion that the Democratic party or the Republican party, either one or both, may be working for Prohibition—something for which neither declares and against which their leaders both engage. Yours for American institutions,—I. N. BROWN, Ironton, O.

We do not recall the connection of the objectionable phrase, but do not think Dr. Brown saw it in an editorial. However that may be, there is a sense in which its use is defensible. The word "Methodist" was at first used in ridicule. Now it is adopted proudly. The term "third party" is so frequently used, and by our best Prohibitionists even, that we do not understand that any opprobrium attaches to it.—Ed.

ANOTHER COMPANION FOR OUR NEW ENGLAND CORRESPONDENT.

Like Miss Flagg, as recorded by my father's handwriting, I was born Feb. 3rd, but in the year 1821, so that I distinctly remember the agitation of the Morgan times, and also my father's great interest in the Anti-masonic cause. But, unlike Miss Flagg, I inherited two sisters and ten brothers, none of whom, to my knowledge, ever entered a secret lodge, and my fervent prayer is that they never may.—MRS. C. M. CANDEE, Whiteford, Mich.

GOOD WILLING.

If I were rich, your treasury would not lack. You have my prayers. May the Lord whom you serve bless you, all the way to victory.—(Rev.) L. W. FRINK, West Boylston, Mass.

THANKS TO A FRIEND.

Some dear friend of mine paid for a copy of your paper and sent it to me, for which I want to thank that friend. I am glad that your paper speaks so boldly about Masonry. I believe it to be the iron wheel for the devil. The other day a man said he was a Mason, and that he had been a member of the church since he was a boy. He claimed that there was fellowship and charity in the lodge more than in the church. I told him there had always been bad men in the church, but I did not believe there had always been good men in the Masonic lodge. I said, "If you have anything that is good, if you are not careful the bad will get into it; but you need not expect the good to try to get into the bad; and so you need not expect the devil to kick up a fuss in his own family or make trouble."—JOHN M. HARRIS, Lee's Summit, Mo.

LITERATURE.

ALDEN'S MANIFOLD CYCLOPEDIA of Knowledge and Language. Vol. 21. Pp. 628. Gartretson, Cox & Co., New York.

Of the general excellencies of this work we have spoken in connection with previous volumes. Among the great number of interesting subjects treated in this volume we notice: Jurisprudence, Jury, Jute, the States of Kansas and Kentucky, very full and brought close down to date, Knights of Labor, Latin Language and Literature; also biographical sketches of such noted and interesting characters as Josephus, Clara Louise Kellogg, George Kennan, Louise Kossuth, Lafayette, Gen. Robert E. Lee. The Manifold Cyclopaedia must be commended for the use of families and school, and especially for all young people who are attempting to educate themselves.

The Church Review (Episcopal) for the second quarter is devoted to the question of church union. The views of twenty divines of the different Protestant communions in the United States are given, showing how far they can accept the proposed union with the Episcopal church. The publication of these articles and letters was a generous thing on the part of the Church Review editor. Many articles are critical and adverse to the Episcopal polity. In drawing fire against themselves our Episcopalian brethren have shown a disposition to be convinced of their errors in doctrine, if perchance any man or number of men can do it. From the replies of these leading American preachers it is plain that an organic union among the churches is not desirable, but that a working union is. The suggestion of an exchange that there be a national conference of ministers of the various denominations, to exchange views and to devise means of a closer union in the one great work of saving men, is timely and important. Our readers will find the April number of the Review a valuable work for present reading and future reference.

In the Missionary Review of the World for August Dr. Bradford, of Montclair, opens with a graceful and graphic sketch of the first wife of the heroic Judson. Dr. Pierson reviews and sums up his missionary tour abroad. During seven months' absence he delivered 234 addresses, closing with a farewell address in the Assembly Hall of the Church of Scotland just before taking the train for Liverpool. He also has an article on the Lack of Consecration and Prayer. Prof. Schodde gives a translation of a paper by the late Dr. Franz Delitzsch on the Conversion of the Jews. Dr. Storow concludes his series of valuable historical papers on missions in the 17th and 18th centuries. "A Chinese Secret Society and its Workings," by the editor of the Chinese Evangelist, shows that the Chinese lodge like the Masonic and other American orders is a great opposer of Christianity. Dr. Ellinwood discusses Missions in Pagan Lands with his usual intelligence and force.

The August number of the Converted Catholic contains an argument by Rev. M. Gallagher of Brooklyn to show that the doctrine of the immaculate conception of the Virgin Mary was borrowed from the Koran. The same number contains a careful review of the case of the priest Burtzell, who got into difficulty with the hierarchy for his defense of Father McGlynn.

The American Law Register of Philadelphia for June is valuable for its exhaustive review of the legal decisions affecting the question of the right of the Federal Courts to punish offenders against the ballot-box. In connection with the current discussions in Congress on the Election bill this paper is of peculiar value.

TESTIMONY OF EVANGELISTS

Worth Repeating Again and Again.

DWIGHT L. MOODY.

"I do not see how any Christian, most of all a Christian minister, can go into these secret lodges with unbelievers. They say they can have more influence for good, but I say they can have more influence for good by staying out of them, and then reproving their evil deeds. Abraham had more influence for good in Sodom than Lot had. If twenty-five Christians go into a secret lodge with fifty who are not Christians, the fifty can vote anything they please, and the twenty-five will be partakers of their sins. They are unequally yoked with unbelievers. 'But, Mr. Moody,' some say, 'if you talk that way you will drive all the members of secret societies out of your meetings and out of your churches.' But what if I do? Better men will take their places. Give them the truth anyway, and if they would rather leave their churches than their lodges the sooner they get out of the churches the better. I would rather have ten members who were separated from the world than a thousand such members. Come out from the lodge. Better one with God than a thousand without him. We must walk with God, and if only one or two go with us it is all right."—Address in Farwell Hall, Chicago.

GEORGE F. PENTECOST.

"I would do almost anything in my power to help on the work of rescuing all Christian men from the 'grip' of Masonry and all other secret and un-Christian societies. I believe that Masonry is an incalculable evil and essentially anti-Christ in its principles and influence."—From Letter to Conference of Christians on Secret Societies, Chicago, 1887.

"God's Word prohibits the believer from forming alliances with the ungodly in society. Whenever the Christian surrenders himself to the society of the unbelieving world, his heart will be led away from God. This is especially true of thousands of Christian men who have deliberately yoked themselves up with unbelievers in all manner of secret societies. This course of false alliance is doing more mischief to individual Christian men by turning their hearts away from God and His service, and to the church by depleting and robbing her of her male membership, THAN ANY OTHER ONE ENEMY OF CHRIST. There never was a time when the cry, 'Come out from among them and be ye separate, saith the Lord,' was more needed than now."—Bible Studies, 1889, p. 389.

L. W. MUNHALL.

"I belonged to two secret societies, and have bumped against nearly all of them, and know what I am talking about. Their sociability and benevolence may be all well enough, but they belong to the world. In one to which I belonged it was voted to hold a banquet with champagne and a dance. I protested, but was overruled by the majority, and therefore came out from among them. Another got up a theatrical performance, and I left it. A man came to get me to go back. I told him why I left, and that I belonged to the church and would not have fellowship with such ungodly performances. He said, 'Don't you know bad people who do wicked things in the church?' I said, 'Yes, but when the church votes to approve their wickedness, I will get out of the church as quickly as I left the lodge.' When a man belongs to two or three lodges and attends their weekly meetings, he hasn't got any time to go to the prayer meeting, and generally very little money to give to the cause of Christ. I have known men who would give from $25 to $250 a year to their lodges, who would sign $12 a year to the church, and the collector would have to wear out his shoes to get even that paltry sum after it was pledged. Such men are hopeless cases, and I would not pray for them. I once went to a town that had 152 saloons and 33 secret lodges, that spent on an average $3,000 a year each for their lodges. If any man can raise money for Christian work, I can, but I couldn't get $600 in that town for a Y. M. C. A. I have about made up my mind that the whole thing is of the world, and the enemy of God and his church. Brethren, why don't you say Amen? You know I am telling the truth; and I pray that you may have grace to receive it in love, as I have spoken it. As Christ's disciples we can make no compromise with the world. The friendship of the world is enmity against God."—From Bible reading on Separation, given Feb. 25, 1890, at Somerville, Mass.

EX-PRESIDENT CHAS. G. FINNEY.

"We have, then, the implied testimony of Freemasons themselves, that the Christian church ought to have no fellowship with Freemasonry as thus revealed, and that those who adhere intelligently and determinedly to such an institution have no right to be in the Christian church. God demands, and the world has a right to expect, that the church will take due action and bear a truthful testimony in respect to this institution. She cannot now innocently hold her peace. The light has come. Fidelity to God and to the souls of men require that the church, which is the light of the world, should speak out, and should take such action as will plainly reveal her views of the compatibility or incompatibility of Freemasonry with the Christian religion."—From the Character, Claims and Practical Workings of Freemasonry, pp. 260, 263.

KNIGHT TEMPLARISM ILLUSTRATED.

A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $2.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50c; $4.00 per dozen. Furnished in any quantities at

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 20 cents per pound:

1. Historical Sketch—National Christian Association.

3. Address to American Pastors.
4. Freemasonry in the Family.
5. President C. G. Finney on the duty of Christians towards the Lodge.
7. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
8. Modern Heathenism.
9. Ministers at Rival Altars.
12. Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodge.
15. Secrecy and Sin.
16. Selling Dead Horses.
17. History of Masonry.
18. Despotism Character of Freemasonry.
19. Freemasonry, a Christ-excluding Religion.
22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.
28. Nathaniel Colver, D.D., on Masonry.
33. Hon. Wm. H. Seward on Secret Societies.
37. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).
39. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?
44. D. L. Moody on Secret Societies.
45. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?
49. John Quincy Adams on the duty of American Voters.

Chapters in American Politics.
Masonry vs. Prohibition.
Decline of the G. A. R.
Christianity and Odd-fellowship. Part 1, 4 pages; part 2, 4 pages.

The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—20 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

NEW ENGLAND DEPARTMENT.—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent, No. 309, Tremont St., Boston.

WASHINGTON DEPARTMENT.—W. B. Stoddard, Agent, No. 215, 4½ St., Washington, D. C.

COLLEGE AGENT, Rev. S. F. Porter, Cynosure office.

SPECIAL AGENT.—Rev. C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Du Page Co., Ill.

STATE AGENTS.

Minnesota, E. Hanson, Minneapolis.
New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimball, New Market.
Ohio, Rev. H. H. Hinman, Oberlin.
Pennsylvania, Rev. J. T. Michael, 2942 Westmont Street, Philadelphia.
Alabama, Rev. G. M. Elliott, Selma.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
Nathan Callender, Montdale, Pa.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa.
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.
Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
Rev. E. Mathews, Long Island City, N. Y.
E. Barnetson, Haskinville, N. Y.
Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
A. W. Parry, Annawan, Ill.

THE N. C. A. FUNDS.

The General Fund is that from which the running expenses of the Association are paid. From it the agents on the field are supported.

The Foreign Fund is that from which the foreign demand for literature against the lodge is supplied to missionaries.

The Free Tract Fund clearly states by its name the object for which contributions are solicited. Millions of pages have been distributed by means of this fund.

The Cynosure Ministers' Fund. The donations to this fund have enabled the Association to send many copies of the Cynosure to the ministers of the South, especially to pastors of colored churches. The result has been a blessing to them and their churches.

Contributions to any or all these funds are urgently solicited.

FORM OF BEQUEST.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of — dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be sufficient discharge.

THE N. C. A. BUILDING

(The gift of Philo Carpenter.)

—AND OFFICE OF—

The Christian Cynosure,
221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

The National Christian Association

PRESIDENT—Bishop Milton Wright, Dayton, O.

VICE PRESIDENT—Rev. Geo. R. Milton, Elgin, Ill.

COR. SEC'Y and TREASURER—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SECRETARY—Rev. E. R. Worrell, Washington Heights, Ill.

DIRECTORS—T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, John Gardner, J. M. Hitchcock, Jerome Howe, G. R. Milton, Wm. Pinkney, J. P. Richards, Alexander Thomson, E. Whipple, E. R. Worrell.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS.

NEW ENGLAND.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic Conn.; Sec'y, Miss E. E. Flagg, Wellesley, Mass.; Treas., Z. Graves, Harris, Mass.

ALABAMA.—Pres., Prof. Pickens; Sec., G. M. Elliott; Treas., Rev. C. B. Curtis; all of Selma.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., Rev. G. R. Milton, Elgin; Sec., A. H. Hiatt, Jr., Wheaton; Treas., Ezra A. Cook, Chicago.

INDIANA.—Pres., William H. Figg, Reno; Sec., S. L. Cook, Albion; Treas., Benjamin Ulsh, Silver Lake.

IOWA.—Cor. Sec., C. D. Trumbull, Morning Sun; Rec. Sec., W. L. Enlow, Birmingham; Treas., Wm. Crawford, Washington.

KANSAS.—Pres., J. S. T. Milligan, Denison; Sec., S. Hart, Leocompton; Treas., J. A. Torrence, Denison.

MAINE.—Pres., Isaac Jackson, Harrison; Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W. Goddard, West Sidney.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt, Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., S. B. Sjoblom,ergus Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul; Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., B. F. Miller, Eagleville; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec., A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

NEBRASKA.—Pres., S. Austin, Fairmount; Cor. Sec., W. Spooner, Kearney; Treas., J. C. Fye.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., A. A. Hoyt, Littleton; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., Isaac Hyatt, Gilford Village.

NEW YORK.—Pres., Prof. A. R. Dodd, Houghton; Sec., Rev. W. A. Hazlett, Belmont; Treas., P. D. Miller, Newfane.

OHIO.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Parry; Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Seneca; Cor. Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Seneca.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., Nathan Callender, Montdale; Cor. Sec., E. J. Chalfant, York; Treas., J. C. Young, Custer City.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. W. Wood, Baraboo; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie.

HAVE YOU EXAMINED

The list of Books and Tracts for sale by the National Christian Association. Look it over carefully and see if there is not something you want. If you self or your friend. Send for full catalogue to 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.

The Christian Cynosure.

J. BLANCHARD, EDITOR.

HENRY L. KELLOGG, ASSOCIATE EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JULY 31, 1890.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

A REPRESENTATIVE VERMONT. WILL THE STATE BE REPEOPLED?

WELLESLEY, Mass., July 17, 1890.

TO OUR READERS:—We have just come from the hills in Rockingham, Vt., where I was born and grew up to manhood. Fields where my father and his neighbor Leach raised from forty-five to fifty bushels of corn per acre, are now all covered with small fern brake and an endless variety of gorse, furze and green moss, with some spears of June grass struggling through and trying to make pasture for cattle and sheep. My father's farm and mountain pasture, originally consisting of three hundred acres, all stone-walled in, is now all pastured. There is not one acre of the whole in crop. The few old trees of the Pingo, Salem, Kendall and Greatfield orchards, which maintain a struggling existence, try to bear a few apples amid a forest of sprouts. And a rank wild growth of young woods trees, whose limbs already, in some places, meet and mingle across the road where we children went to school, overshadow the green solid turf which covers and obliterates the highway. Between Saxton's and Williams rivers, a distance of four miles, large farms which had six and seven buildings are now stripped clean. Not a shingle is left. And the school-house where I learned my "A" "B" "C's" and where thirty children used to meet is gone, and the underpinning shaded by a dense growth of alders. The U. S. Government has put a tariff on every thing a Vermont farmer eats or wears, calls it "protection," and the farmers believe it. It has given away Western lands till "government land" is becoming scarce. And "surplus revenue," raised by tariffs, has been voted in subsidies to railroad and other corporations, till New England farmers have fled West and left their farms to frown back into forests.

This process must soon cease. "Government land" will soon be used up; and there are no Californias and Alaskas beyond the Pacific Coast. Lands in the new States are selling for enormous prices, and emigrants are already coming back East to find cheap land. Some colonies from bleak and rocky Norway and Sweden have already settled in Vermont, and more are coming.

But will these old Vermont farms bear a dense population? I answer, Yes. The eighty acres joining our farm on the north had for many years been occupied by tenants who seldom paid rent. The soil was cold, inclined to the north, and bore next to nothing. The present occupant, Mr. Hubbard B. Davis, whose father took and reclaimed the place, married a discreet and sensible girl from a mountain town, and has continued the course of his wise and judicious father. That land now bears excellent crops. The corn will equal the average fields in Illinois. Mr. Davis has now twenty cows, and sells at Bellows Falls one hundred and twenty pounds of butter per week, at twenty-seven cents per pound. And the milk of these cows, after making the butter, feeds some fifty Chester White pigs. The place, too, makes from one to two thousand pounds of maple sugar. In place of the old cottage and poor small barn, there are now seven or eight buildings, including a fine white house with green blinds, elegantly kept. Mr. Davis pays two hired men, one $16 and the other $17 per month; and the citizens talk of sending him to the Legislature. This success has been attained by careful farming; not by traffic and speculation, but from the farm itself, which, when I knew it, was one of the most forlorn of tenements, the very poorest in the whole neighborhood. The public roads in Vermont are already made, and the farms fairly fenced with material which does not decay. And if the Legislature succeeds in turning the attention of the industrious Scandinavians towards those green hills, pure streams and pleasant valleys; and, above all, if they retain the piety of their ancestors, and their abhorrence of secret lodges, which are the curse and dry-rot of society wherever they exist, the rural wastes and desolations of New England will again be peopled, as they once were, by an intelligent and happy people, worthy to bear the American name.

HELP FOR HOME MISSIONARIES.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., July 22.—I yesterday saw and conversed with five secretaries of Home Missions in three societies in New York city. All professed decided opposition to secret societies as ruinous to churches of Christ. The old American Home Missionary society has 1,849 missionary ministers in its employ. I did not look at the others' lists, but the three societies, including Baptist and the American Missionary Association, must foot up, together, some four thousand home missionaries scattered all over the country from Florida to Alaska. I proposed that a tract, opposed to secret societies should be sent by these officers to every one of these missionaries. The effect of such a measure will be benign beyond all ordinary conception. True, the feeble mission churches will often have Masons and Odd-fellows in their congregations. But villagers want churches to build up the town by furnishing customers for their shops and stores, and the moment those small congregations learn that the great missionary societies are beginning to move, however gently, against secret societies, they will allow their minister to oppose them for fear of losing his stipend and crippling their church.

As things are, in the universal silence of secretaries and committees on the lodges, this great swarm of home missionaries fear to offend their employers; by exposing the idolatry and corruption of the secret lodge system. All that will be changed, if, with their quarter dues, they receive a judicious and carefully prepared tract, from the hands which send them their supplies.

The time was when the missionaries, sent out by the American Board, were advised to join the lodge to make friends with heathen who were Masons. The good father Gleason and others joined the Masons with that view. And some of them became slave-holders for a like purpose. Augustus Cole, of Sierra Leone, whom many of our readers have seen, assures us that many of the missionaries on the African coast have been hood-winked and cable-towed by the lodges.

It was this relation of missionaries to slavery and lodgery that kept back the American churches from aiding the anti-slavery cause till New England was filled with "come-outers." But in 1851, a convention of one hundred ministers met in Chicago, to divorce American missions from American slavery. The effect of that convention was magical, as those who lived at that time well recollect. And a similar or greater effect will be produced if our denominational mission boards can now stand shoulder to shoulder against the lodge.

It is a striking providence that, so far as we can learn, none of the officials of these societies are now lodgemen. And although a handful of brazen men like Dr. Quint here in New England cast off all shame and glory in the idolatry and blasphemy of the lodge, their number is small and growing less.

J. B.

DR. JOHNSTON.

A life of so great usefulness, activity piety and courage in its noblest sense, as that of Dr. Johnston, deserves more honorable mention than it may receive. Such lives need continually to be recalled, that their examples may not be lost upon men. We may add, therefore, to the brief but earnest tribute of Rev. Mr. Avery elsewhere, some particulars of the career of our late friend and co-worker. As pastor of the largest United Presbyterian congregation west of the Mississippi, Dr. Johnston early came to be known as a leader among the friends of our reform in Iowa, but it was not until the convention in Galesburg, in 1881, that he was present to take part in any of our national gatherings. He appeared then just as we see him in the portrait, tall, straight, of rather slender form, keen eye, grave and quiet in conversation, which always seemed to have a background of reserved wit which was too honest to be forever curbed. His beard of extraordinary length suggested a possible eccentricity of character. But the only marked trait seemed to be that of the patient, hopeful worker for Christ, strong in faith, ready to every good work, and never fearing to follow that Master though it might be to Pilate's judgment hall and the hill Calvary.

His address at the Galesburg meeting was one of great interest and power; and frequently, both before and after, his contributions to these columns were most welcome and helpful for their originality, suggestive force and firmness for the great principles to which we who withstand the lodge have pledged life and faith. In his own State he was a leader in this and other lines of Christian activity, though rather preferring the work than the title of office. For several years, up to the time of his death, April 23d, last, he was president of the Iowa State Association, auxiliary to the N. C. A. When the General Assembly of his church met in Topeka, Kansas, in 1885, he was chosen its moderator, and two years before he represented the United Presbyterian church in the Synod of the Associate Reformed church. His efforts in behalf of National Reform and Prohibition will also be long remembered; and in the latter cause the voters of Iowa, 10,000 strong declared him their choice for governor of the State. So large a Prohibition vote has never been cast in Iowa before or since.

Dr. Johnston was born in Ohio in 1831. He was twice married, and outlived both his companions. An only child, a daughter, was the constant companion of the last years of his life, and was like an angel minister during the last weeks of his illness. But she was not the only mourner, for they were a multitude from the whole country about and adjoining towns who came to honor the memory of a good man when his work here was done, and his worn body was laid in its final resting place.

ODD-FELLOWS IN THE SADDLE.

Next week Chicago is to be given up to the Odd-fellow secret society. State and city authorities have seemed to vie with each other in granting favors and valuable privileges to this order at this time. Its "Supreme Grand Lodge" and the military and dress-parade, fuss-and-feathers degree known as "Patriarchs Militant," meet at the same time.

They require large grounds for parades, drills and temporary buildings. The officials in charge have granted them the Lake Front park and two large armory buildings. They want the streets of the city to show themselves in, and crowds of people to admire their numbers and their millinery. The city aldermen have tumbled over one another in their haste to order business stopped wherever these grown boys wish to tramp with their fine clothes and their music. They have, also, in order to insure them a crowd, voted to declare a half holiday and shut up business all over the city; so that all employers,—stores, manufactories, business of all sorts, must suspend at the pleasure of this secret society.

It is a fair question to ask what public service these men from all parts of the country propose to render, in return for the privileges voted them. Circuses have to pay liberally for the use of public grounds; the Lake Front park has been turfed at great expense to the city; the use of the streets, and the closing of business for a half day—these items mean a cost of well toward a million dollars to the public. Do these lodges with grotesque names promise any reasonable return? They will spend their money in hotels and saloons. They will make a fine show in the streets, and their prize drills and fire-works will attract a certain class of idle people; but for admission to the grounds, freely granted them, they will ask a large fee. Is it a public benefit that this secret order takes a half million men away from their families at night to play with skeletons? Is it a public benefit that this order, which pretends to charity, collects three dollars for every one paid out for such pretended purpose? Is it a public benefit that a large body of our citizens are secretly trained in the use of arms and in military drill, and are organized in regiments and brigades and instructed in all the vocabulary of war, when our government is at peace with all the world and hopes to remain so? For what are these men, and the drilled companies in other secret orders, preparing? It is a question the people should ask, when such privileges are demanded of them. If they do not wish for war, why are they drilling for it? And is it not most certain that this very drill and preparation will beget a taste for war, which, having so many patrons, is becoming a source of danger already to the vast majority of our people?

There is not a single consideration, financial, social or political, why these men, tricked off with the names Odd-fellow and Patriarch Militant (!), should have any one of the costly privileges granted them by our authorities. The very fact that the present city council of Chicago have so voted is a suspicious circumstance. This council has for some time been a notorious assembly. Its members have never been charged with "boodlerism" in our courts, but they are not by any means above the suspicion in the popular estimation. Their action in the elevated railroad franchises and especially in respect to the World's Fair site shows them to be unsafe men. They seem to be in large part saloonists and boodlers, who only lack the opportunity to reveal their real character. It may be better not to receive gifts from such men. They do not distribute such favors to enemies as they have given the Odd-fellows. No one suspects the latter of paying them money; but have they not used lodge boodle?

These are legitimate questions for the press of Chicago. To them we look as the natural guardians of such public interests as are involved in such questions.

TO THE CHICAGO PASTORS

we present a no less important consideration. The Odd-fellows lodge is a religious organization. It has its men appointed to attend to its religious worship. It has forms of prayer and burial service which are part of that worship. It has a kind of lodge morality suited to its religious tenets. Its lodges adopt and publish resolutions declaring that their dead members, no matter what their relation to Christian morality, go to a "grand lodge above," "there to enjoy a seat with him who does all things well." Their highest authorities declare Christianity a sect and teach in Odd-fellowship an infidel morality—a religion in which "Jehovah, Jove or Baal" are on an equality. Read the following late official declaration from the Grand Lodge report of Massachusetts, 1889, page 336:

"Question. Is it lawful for a chaplain to commence and finish his prayer in the name of Christ?

"Answer. Our order only requires a belief in the existence of a Supreme Being as a qualification for membership, and has no affinity with any religious sect or system of faith. Hence, everything savoring of sectarianism is not to be tolerated. The words, system of faith, or sect, do not have reference merely to sects within the pale of Christianity, but have a far broader significance, and include all the religions of the world. In this sense Christianity is a sect: hence it is inexpedient, unwise, and I think unlawful to make prominent reference to it in lodge work."

Under these circumstances, every pastor of this city who has before God accepted the office of a watchman for the people has a plain duty to do. If our officials had given these privileges to the Catholic church, the Protestant pulpit would not hesitate to denounce it. It has done worse. It has honored a secret order whose influence and teaching is quietly and slowly but surely undermining the true faith of tens of thousands. It is the duty of the Christian watchman to give the warning cry. If the teaching of these lodges shall prevail, a sword will follow in the land.

"But if the watchman see the sword [or the evil] come, and blow not the trumpet, and the people be not warned; if the sword come and take any person from among them, he is taken away in his iniquity; but his blood will I require at the watchman's hand. So thou, O son of man, I have set thee a watchman unto the house of Israel; therefore thou shalt bear the word from my mouth and warn them from me." Eze. 33:6, 7.

THE SONS OF THE REVOLUTION.

In the 5th of June number of the Cynosure we printed an article from Bro. Hinman in which he referred to this patriotic organization of recent formation as a secret society. We printed the article relying on the known care of its author to state facts, but recent correspondence from friends in this State has led to careful inquiry. A letter from Leroy Church of the Standard of this city, and another from Judge Shepard of the Superior Court of Cook county, assure us that this organization has no lodge mark upon it. Judge Shepard was elected president of the society in Illinois after the death of General Crook. Judge Shepard says:

"I am pleased to say that the Society of the Sons of the American Revolution is in no sense a secret organization, nor political. No oath, and no obligation looking to secrecy, is imposed or allowed. Briefly stated, the only requisite to membership is lineal descent from an active participant in the Revolution, either in a military or civil capacity,—and I suppose, good character."

THE FAIR FOR CHRIST.

On Sabbath, July 20, at 4:30 P. M., a meeting of the Chicago Evangelizing Society was held in Farwell Hall to consider the question, What can be done for the cause of Christ during the World's Fair. Mr. T. W. Harvey presided at the meeting, and addresses were made by him, Major Whittle, Rev. Mr. Mowl and Rev. E. F. Marsh of London. The two gentlemen last named are in this country by request of Mr. Moody and have large influence in their own country as Christian workers.

The Chicago Evangelizing Society was organized by Mr. Moody and is planning large things for future work in this city. It is hoped that there will be at least thirty Gospel tents scattered throughout the city in 1893, besides several barges along the lake front to accommodate the throngs of people visiting the lake in hot nights. Comfortable seats will be provided on these barges and good music and hearty preaching of the glad news, as in the days of the Master, shall be free to all the waiting throngs. During the Fair there will be special attention given to distribution of the Word in all languages. Thus an impression will be made upon the visitors that will redeem the exhibition from a mere show of material advancement. It rests with the Christian people to see that Christ is honored as is his due. The exaltation of nations follows the exaltation of Christ as an effect follows its cause.

A resolution was adopted asking the State legislature, now sitting in extra session, to see that the Sabbath law is preserved inviolable during the Fair. Rev. Mr. Mowl and Major Whittle, who has recently returned from France and Italy, gave vivid descriptions of the so-called "Continental Sunday," and made eloquent pleas for a holy day of rest for America. The suggestion of Major Whittle that should the Fair be opened on the Sabbath-day the Christians of the country should covenant together not to attend on the Lord's day, was applauded, and Mr. Cragin, an enterprising Chicago business man, suggested that a Columbian Fair Sunday Association be formed.

This was an important meeting and the questions raised are timely. Eternal vigilance is not only the price of liberty but it will cost us that to preserve God's holy rest day in this era of mercantilism and pleasure-seeking. While a handful of people were consulting as to the honor of God's day, no less than one hundred thousand people were at the different parks, boating, feasting and gaming, and among them many who profess to be the Lord's own children.

Joseph Cook of Boston addressed the Monona Lake assembly near Madison, Wisconsin, last Friday. Wisconsin is the seat of war between compulsory education laws and parochial schools. Mr. Cook did not stop to learn whether the popular sentiment was for or against, but launched his own opinion boldly that the Bennett law was too mild in its provisions; that the times demanded an earnest support of patriotic measures. Individual Catholics he did not condemn, but the Vatican and its hostile policy. The decision of the Wisconsin Supreme Court condemning the Bible he judged with merited severity.

The papers are giving wide notice of the virtue of the Knights of Pythias at their late meeting in Milwaukee. This order is managed by "Generals," "Major Generals," etc., although the whole crowd down to the boot-blacks are "Knights." At Milwaukee one of the "Major Generals" issued an order forbidding the sale of intoxicating drinks on the ground occupied by the lodge meeting. That interfered with the good time some of these Knights and Generals and Major Generals were proposing for themselves. Especially the California delegation had loaded a car with their noted wines, which they rolled with jubilation into camp, unaware of the order. There was abundant wrath among all ranks and it was promised that no such arbitrary rulings based on bigotry should again interfere with the harmony of this lodge. But perhaps the temperance sentiment in the order will win. It ought to, by all means. That consideration is entirely aside from our objections to secretism. But it is very worthy of note that the great Pabst Brewing Co. of Milwaukee understood their business when they issued an elaborate and expensive illustrated souvenir "to the Knights of Pythias of the World," with their complements. They got their money back, of course, and knew they would. But no brewing company gets out a souvenir to present to a meeting of ministers, or Christian people, or temperance convention. Why should they not, if they are no more virtuous than these sham Knights and Generals?

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Pres. J. Blanchard and his little party returned safely from their Eastern journey last Friday morning.

—Rev. Lewis Johnston of Pine Bluff, Arkansas, who was secretary of our National Convention in Knoxville, Tenn., a few years ago, was secretary of the late Colored Teacher's Association for Arkansas.

—Bro. W. B. Stoddard of the Washington district secured $50 in Cynosure subscriptions during the first three weeks of this dry, hot month of July. What one man can do, another can. If Bro. Stoddard can get subscribers, there are scores of our good friends who can do something in the same line also.

—Rev. J. Day Brownlee, pastor of the United Presbyterian church of Indiana, Pa., is afflicted seriously in his eyes. His congregation have given him a long vacation that the troubled organs may have rest and treatment. If any of the Cynosure readers wish to become better acquainted with this esteemed pastor, let them read his powerful argument against the lodge in his reply to Dr. Mayer, a lodge champion of Wellsville, O. See the advertisement on page 15 of last week's paper.

—Prof. J. A. Edgren, D. D., formerly of the Swedish department of the Baptist Theological Seminary of Morgan Park, near this city, has just returned here from Oakland, California, whither he removed several years since on account of his health. It was largely through his agency, sustained by Captain William Wilson of Menomonie, Wis., and others, that the Swedish Baptists became from the first opposed to the secret orders, we hope ever to so continue. Prof. Edgren is here to superintend the publication of his new work upon Biblical Theology, together with new editions of his two former works, "Proofs of the Divine Origin of the Bible," and "Laws of Biblical Interpretation." These books will soon be issued from a Swedish press in this city.

IOWA STARTS FOR THE FIRST RANK.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Since my appointment as agent for the Western District of the N. C. A. work, I have secured subscriptions to the fund to send the Cynosure to the colored pastors of the South, to the amount of $74.50. Fifty dollars of this sum was subscribed by Rev. I. Bancroft of Clay county, Iowa, and twenty dollars of it by Mr. Wm. Morley of Fayette county, Iowa.

I have also taken subscriptions to the General fund of the N. C. A. to the amount of $76. Of this Mr. Wm. Morley subscribed $50. I have also collected in cash $32.50, of which amount Rev. James Parker of Cedar Rapids contributed $10.

I have spoken on the antagonism of the secret society system to the Christian religion in Fayette county and also in Jones county in the United Presbyterian church of Scotch Grove.

If the friends of reform contribute as cheerfully as the Covenanters of Hopkinton, the United Presbyterians of Scotch Grove, and those I conferred with at Cedar Rapids, we may hope to raise the amount needed by the N. C. A. to carry forward the work which God in his providence has committed to us. Let us pray without ceasing for the blessing of God upon this work.

It is only by the power of Christ that we can prevail in this conflict with the powers of darkness. Yours for Christ and the coming of his kingdom,

C. F. HAWLEY.

THE HOME.

THE MOTHER'S HYMN.

Lord, who ordainest for mankind
Benignant toils and tender cares,
We thank thee for the ties that bind
The mother to the child she bears.

We thank thee for the hopes that rise
Within her heart, as day by day
The dawning soul from those young eyes
Looks with a clearer, steadier ray.

And, grateful for the blessing given,
With that dear infant on her knee,
She trains the eye to look to Heaven,
The voice to lisp a prayer to thee.

Such thanks the blessed Mary gave,
When from her lap the Holy Child,
Sent from on high to seek and save
The lost of earth, looked up and smiled.

All-Gracious! grant to those who bear
A mother's charge, the strength and light
To guide the feet that own their care
In ways of love and truth and right.

—William Cullen Bryant.

KINDNESS THAT CAME TOO LATE.

At last the tired hands were at rest, folded peacefully over the heart that had ceased to throb with joy or pain. It seemed strange that Rachel Mathews should be a guest in the darkened parlor, where her weary feet had never been wont to linger. It was not like her to lie there so still and quiet, while the cows lowed uneasily at the barnyard gate, and the harvest hands waited for the sound of the breakfast-bell that for the first time failed to ring out its welcome summons to the minute. In the kitchen everything showed the touch of her magic fingers. The table was spread ready for the morning meal, while the fuel in the stove needed but the application of a match to send the flame roaring up the chimney. "Everything is now ready for the morning's work," she said, wearily, the night before, as she left the kitchen, where so much of her dreary life had been spent. Yes, everything was ready, but other hands than hers would take up the work where she had laid it down, for in the silent watches of the night the angel of death paused at her threshold, and with his icy finger stilled the beating of her heart. The morning sun arose as on other days, but in the old farm-house on the hill, its bright, effulgent rays seemed mockery, for they shone in upon a family, stricken, smitten of God and afflicted. Those were bitter tears that John Mathews let fall upon the face of his dead wife that summer morning. Ah! but it was too late to smooth out the tangles in the barren life that had opened into the full fruition of eternal day.

Twenty-five years before, when Rachel Wentworth left her father's house to make a home for John Mathews, she carried with her a warm, loving heart, in which he ruled king.

What an Eden she hoped to make for this man, who, before God, had promised to love, cherish and protect her, but even before the honeymoon began to wane, the scales fell from her eyes, and to her dismay she discovered the utter selfishness of the man by whose side she was to finish her earthly pilgrimage. When her soul cried out for the sweet ministries that had come naturally during their courtship, he coolly informed her that as a married woman she must give up all such nonsense and settle down into a thrifty housewife. So, one after another of the joys she had anticipated were put aside, until her life, that promised so much in the outstart, was stripped of all she held most dear. At times her whole being rebelled against this dwarfing of her soul, but she was too true a woman to herald her wrongs before the world, so she took up her heavy cross and, without a complaint, slipped hopelessly into the dreary, treadmill life, into which she had walked blind-folded.

When her children came she lavished upon them the love which her husband had cast from him. In her anxiety to shield them from hardships, she took upon herself the burdens their young shoulders should have borne, thus, in her mistaken devotion, laying the foundation for the selfishness that characterized their after lives. Though they dearly loved their patient, plodding mother, they did not hesitate to take from her tired hands the comforts and pleasures of life which they should have bestowed upon her, and unnatural as it may seem, there were times when they were actually ashamed of her faded dress and old-fashioned ways. They forgot that it was in their service that her hands had grown hard and her face wrinkled, neither did they call to remembrance that it was to her patient toiling and self-denial that they owed all the advantages they had gained. How many heart aches she might have been spared had they rewarded her according to the sacrifices she had made on their behalf, but she was at rest now, and it mattered not how weary and foot-sore she had been during the journey just completed, it was over and she was at home, safe in her Father's house. In mercy, her worn-out body had not been racked with torturing pain, and the dreaded agony of a bitter parting from loved ones had been spared her. Yes, she was at rest. The tired expression on her face had given place to one of peaceful quiet, while the poor, drawn features seemed rounded out into youthful freshness and beauty. After years of unrest and disquietude, she had fallen into a sleep which awaited no rude waking in the morning. The sun would rise on the morrow, as it had done thousands of times before, but the thought of the monotonous rounds that must be gone over before it should set, disturbed not the sleeper, for with her it was everlasting morning, and all her cares and trials were ended.

The remorseful tears of her husband, and the bitter self-upbraidings of her children, fell unheeded upon her closed ear. If she could only have heard the tender, appreciative words that dropped from their lips, or felt the warm tears that were showered so plentifully upon her cold face, how they would have warmed and cheered her frozen heart; but, alas! they came too late; she had gone out of life without receiving any of its sweet, tender, ministries from those who now wept bitterly over her shrouded form.

For the first time her heart did not respond to the cries of her children, nor her hand return their pressure. She was at rest, sleeping the unbroken sleep that knows no waking, but who could bring balm to the broken-hearted children who gathered so disconsolately around her bier? How all her love and sacrifice rose up before them now! How could they have given pain to one who lived and died in their service? And who will say that the tears shed by the husband, who had snatched all the flowers from the path over which her weary feet were forced to walk, were not genuine? In his own way he had loved her, but until this hour he had never realized how much of life's sweetness he had shut away from her, and all the flowers he could heap upon her coffin were utterly powerless to atone for the kindness he had refused, while she traveled beneath his shadows. He may extol her virtues in fitting eulogies, and chisel her good deeds in imperishable marble, but no after-love can bring back the shattered life whose best affections he has slighted, or redeem the vows so heartlessly broken.

God pity the husband and children who, in addition to their crushing sorrow, are compelled to bear about with them the consciousness of having planted thorns in the pathway of the stilled heart that never throbbed but in love for them.—Presbyterian Observer.

SHOULD "MOTHER" BE SPELLED WITH A CAPITAL?

We have received a dainty little note written in the small, somewhat cramped hand of a nine-year-old little woman, who writes us to know if a capital should not be used when writing the word "mother."

The dear little girl unconsciously expresses preference and her reverent love by writing the word "mother" with a capital in her own letter. The little philosopher tells us of her interview with her teacher and several others on this subject, but fails to see why "the dear, darling, precious mamma should not be spelled with a capital as well as the mayor or the governor."

We answer—yes, a hundred times yes, if that strengthens it. Your mother is more sacred to you than all the conventional rules of composition; more precious than any rule of rhetoric; more obligatory than all grammars. By all means spell mother's name with a capital. As she is now, may she ever be, higher than a mayor, more dignified than a governor, more commanding than a general, more honorable than a Senator, more exalted than a President, a king, an emperor, or any potentate.

Spell mother with a capital, for the use of capitals is to bring out more prominently, to show reverence, respect or honor, and a mother should receive all these.

Let your heart dictate, as it has, the use of capitals when writing names; and what applies to mother is equally applicable to father, for though his love may not be so expressive, it is just as deep.

"Honor thy father and thy mother, that thy days may be long in the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee;" and one way that our sweet little correspondent can honor father and mother is by writing their names with capitals.

There is no love like mother's love—none so quick to forgive and forget, none so patient with weakness and folly, none so ready with the cloak of charity.

Write mother with a capital "M." Friends may desert you; relatives may pass you by unnoticed; the world may look with scorn upon you, but mother never. Her love is unchangeable unless it is intensified by your exclusion.

Never let an opportunity pass to show your reverence, love, honor and obedience to your parents.

You ask if you should spell mother with a capital. We have given you our answer, and as you reflect the love of a loving mother, in the days to come when you have grown up and taken your place in the exalted ranks of motherhood, may you have as affectionate a daughter as your mother has.—American Citizen.

WHAT KIND OF A BOY DANIEL WEBSTER WAS.

Daniel and his brother Ezekiel were once given directions by their father to perform some kind of farm labor during his absence from home, but on his return at night he found the work unperformed, and frowningly said: "What have you been doing, Ezekiel?" "Nothing, sir," was the reply. "Well, Daniel, what have you been doing?" "Helping Zeke, sir."

When Webster was about seven years of age, his father kept a house of public entertainment, where the teamsters were in the habit of obtaining a dinner and feeding their horses, and the incipient orator and statesman frequently entertained his father's guests by reading aloud some of the Psalms of David, to the great delight of his rustic listeners, and it was a frequent remark when a teamster pulled up his horses at the Webster tavern, "Let's go in and hear a Psalm from Dan. Webster." Only a few months before his death Webster, bending under the weight of years and a painful illness, told these and other things at Marshfield to his private secretary.

Then came Webster's college days. His first attempt to speak in public on the stage was a failure. For the moment he became embarrassed, and burst into tears.

When fifteen years old he went to Boscawen, N. H., and his preceptor, Dr. Wood, thought proper to give Daniel a scolding for spending too much of his time upon the hills and along the streams, hunting and fishing—failings which he never got over, for he has often been heard to say he would rather fish than eat. On this particular occasion he was assigned one hundred lines of Virgil to commit to memory. He spent the entire night over his books. When the recitation hour arrived he recited his hundred lines with approbation. "But I have a few more lines that I can recite," said the boy Daniel. "Well, let us have them," said the tutor, and forthwith the boy reeled off another hundred. "Very remarkable. You are, indeed a smart boy." "But I have another hundred," said Daniel, "and five hundred of them, if you please."

Webster was only a few months preparing for college; during this period he mastered the study of Greek. Daniel was, as a boy, the sickliest and most delicate of his father's children, yet from his earliest boyhood he was a great devourer of the standard books of the day, such as Pope's translation of Homer, the Essay on Man, and Addison's Spectator, the second of which he committed to memory in Dartmouth College. Although he had not looked this through since his fifteenth year, he was, says Lanman, a short time before his death, in 1852, able to recite most of it from beginning to end. The Bible and Shakespeare were his great favorites.

After his graduation he kept school at Fryeburg, Me., at a salary of $350 per annum, a large price then, for it was a large school. It was there he went through his first reading of Blackstone and other works. He passed the evenings in copying deeds at 25 cents per deed; and when in 1851, he returned from the White Mountains with his son Fletcher, he came by way of Fryeburg, and after the lapse of half a century he went to the office of the county recorder and exhibited to his son two large bound volumes of deeds in his own handwriting.

As he sat out beneath the old Marshfield tree, Webster used to talk with Charles Lanman of the books of the Old Testament, and dwelt with uneffected pleasure upon Isaiah, the Psalms, and especially the book of Job. The latter, he said, taken as a mere work of literary genius, was one of the most wonderful productions of any age or of any language. As an epic poem he deemed it far superior to either the Iliad or Odyssey, being a purely intellectual narrative depending upon the power of the dialogue, and not upon the interest of the story, to produce the effect.—Sel.

A LIGHT BEARER.

A little girl of nine summers came to ask her pastor about joining the church. She had been living a Christian for nine months, had been properly taught, and answered the usual questions promptly and properly. At last the pastor said:

"Nellie, does your father think you are a Christian?"

"Yes, sir."

"Have you told him?"

"No, sir."

"How, then, does he know?"

"He sees."

"How does he see that?"

"Sees I am a better girl."

"What else does he see?"

"Sees I love to read my Bible and to pray."

"Then, you think he sees you are a Christian?"

"I know he does, he can't help it," and with a modest, happy boldness, she was sure her father knew she was a Christian because he could not help seeing it in her life. Is not such the privilege of all God's people, to be sure that others see they are following Christ?

We remember hearing of a poor, hard-working man whose fellow-laborers laughed at him, told him he was deceived, and pressed him with difficult questions. At last, in the desperation of his heart, he said: "I am a changed man. Go, ask my wife if I am not. She sees I am."

This is what Christ meant by being witnesses and lights in the world. Not only soundness of faith and boldness of confession, but a manner of life which, even without spoken words, testifies of a new life and love.

This is the best evidence of our religion. When those who worked with us in the mill or store, or on the farm, see that we are living a new life, then our words have power. This is the privilege of every one. We may not be rich or educated or eloquent, and hence not able to give much or teach much or speak much; but we can live much, and good living is the best giving, the best teaching, the best eloquence. The poorest, the most ignorant and the youngest can cause people to see they are changed. They can prove the reality of their conversion.

We cannot hide a good life. It shines. It may make no more noise than a candle, but, like a candle, it may be seen. Thus, even a little boy or girl may be a light-bearer.—Christian Witness.

"MAMMA, ARE YOU A CHRISTIAN?"

An influential lady, the wife of a prominent lawyer in C—, who had been under deep conviction for several days, gave the following account at our prayer-meeting of her conversion:

"Last evening my little girl came to me and said, 'Mamma, are you a Christian?'"

"No, Fanny, I am not."

"She turned and went away, and as she walked off, I heard her say, 'Well, if mamma isn't a Christian, I don't want to be one.' And I tell you, my dear friends, it went right to my heart, and then and there I gave myself up to Christ."

In the language of that little child, "Mamma, are you a Christian?"

TEMPERANCE.

THE ORIGINAL PACKAGE BILL.

The voting began in the House early on Tuesday on the Original Package bill. The first vote was on the Adams substitute defining original packages. It was lost—33 to 115.

The House then proceeded to vote on the House substitute for the Senate bill. As the vote progressed it was evident that the result was very doubtful, and great interest was manifested. At the end of the first call the affirmative had a majority of one, and at the end of the second call that majority was neither increased nor diminished. Then came changes of votes. Fully two dozen changes were made, and in the alterations the affirmative came out triumphant, the vote being announced as yeas, 109; nays, 94.

Owing to the many changes of votes made the vote as announced by the Speaker was not absolutely correct. Instead of being yeas, 109; nays, 94, it stood, yeas, 113; nays, 97.

Following is the bill as passed:

"That whenever any article of commerce is imported into any State from any other State, Territory or foreign nation and there held or offered for sale, the same shall be subject to the laws of such State. Provided, that no discrimination shall be made by any State in favor of its citizens against those of other States and Territories in respect to the sale of any article of commerce, nor in favor of its own products against those of like character produced in other States or Territories. Nor shall the transportation of commerce through any State be obstructed, except for the necessary enforcement of the health law of the State."

The difference between the Senate bill and the bill which has passed the House is very simple. The Senate bill applies to liquor only, and attaches to the original packages in a severe and a drastic manner at the border of the State. The House bill applies to all articles of commerce. Everything—liquor, oleomargarine, cotton-seed oil, all compounds—not at the border, but when they are offered for sale to enter into the mass of the merchandise of the State. No one may say what might not happen under the House bill. It is very clear that one State might, under cover of its protection, assail, in the name of purity, the business of a neighboring State, and that the measure, instead of being solely in the interests of health and good morals, might be made a weapon to destroy commerce, and to injure sections. The House bill in the form in which it passed will not become a law. Possibly the Senate bill will not. The best opinion is that out of the conference may come some measure which will be restricted to liquor alone, and that further attempts at legislation upon that subject will be postponed until next winter. The vote on the passing of the bill was a very close one, and for a long time its fate was undetermined.—Inter Ocean, July 23.

THE ADAMS ORIGINAL PACKAGE BILL.

The result of the visit to Washington of W. J. Campbell, the astute legal representative of some of the Chicago dressed beef packers and oleomargarine manufacturers, is seen in a substitute for the Wilson and Reed original package bills, which will be offered in the House by Mr. Adams. The substitute was agreed on by a conference of representatives of the liquor interest with members of Congress who are anxious to defeat the Reed bill in the interest of general commerce. It was drawn for the purpose of giving the States power to enforce prohibition legislation under the Supreme Court decision, without interfering with federal control of Inter-State commerce, and without placing dressed beef, cotton seed oil, acid vinegar, butterine and other interests at the mercy of granger legislatures. It is believed the desired compromise has been reached in a bill which prohibits the original package trade in single packages, but does not prohibit it by the wholesale. The Adams substitute is as follows:

"That it shall not be lawful to import into any State or Territory, from any other State or Territory or from the District of Columbia, any fermented, distilled or other intoxicating liquor, except in one or more original packages, as defined by this act.

"Sec. 2. That for the purposes of this act an original package of intoxicating liquor, in bottles, shall be a case containing not less than one dozen bottles; and an original package of liquor not in bottles shall contain not less than five gallons. Provided, however, that an original package of liquor, imported from any foreign nation, shall contain the quantity required by the laws relating to duties upon imports.

"Sec. 3. It shall not be lawful to sell within any State or Territory any intoxicating liquor imported into such State or Territory, except in the original package in which the same has been imported, and subject to the reasonable police regulations of such State or Territory regulating the sale of such liquor as a beverage."

A determined effort will be made by the representatives of the city districts to substitute this bill for the radical and revolutionary Reed bill when the matter comes up in the House, as it is expected to do in a few days. The dressed beef and butterine men have no lobby here, but the brewers and liquor men are represented by a formidable array of council.—Washington Correspondence Chicago News.

KANSAS AND NEBRASKA.

The census shows Nebraska's present population to be 1,200,000. This is an increase of 165 per cent in ten years. Our increase in insanity during the same time has been alarming. On the first day of July there were 310 patients in the Lincoln asylum, 175 in the Norfolk asylum and 159 in the hospital for the incurable insane, at Hastings. This gives a total of 644, an increase of 268 per cent, or 103 per cent faster than our remarkable increase in population. This sad exhibit is sufficient food for reflection for the advocates of legalized lunatic factories for many weeks if they would only change their fixed habits and just once stop and think.

Amid all the clamor that has been made about how prohibition has ruined Kansas, it is refreshing to note that the old John Brown State has increased her productive industries 429 per cent in seven years, from 1882 to 1889. In this period Kansas made the most wonderful strides in the history of this country. Woodworking industries increased 365 per cent; metal working 282 per cent; packing houses, creameries and kindred animal industries, 13,100 per cent; fruit and saccharine industries, 978 per cent; leather, 745 per cent; paper 86 per cent; stone and clay industries, 3,822 per cent; grain and flour 65 per cent; salt and water industries, 10,555 per cent. The number of men employed in productive industries in Kansas in 1885, prior to which no statistics are available on this particular point, were 15,387; in 1889 the number had increased to 23,325, an increase of 52 per cent in men employed in the short space of four years. The increase in Kansas population is 603,904, or over 60 per cent, notwithstanding the fact that something like 50,000 of her people joined in the mad rush for Oklahoma last year, when the whole country was excited over that deceptive Eldorado. Kansas and Iowa have driven their thugs, bums, cut-throats and dead-beats over into Nebraska. South Dakota is also scraping her vermin off on us and it is no wonder that our penitentiary and asylums are overflowing.—Midland.

Dr. Mendal, a noted nerve specialist of Berlin, in pursuit of the origin of a certain form of nervous disease, has hunted down a form of inebriety, not before recognized. He terms it "coffee inebriety," and says it is rapidly increasing in this country, especially among working women. He has found large numbers of them who consume more than a pound each every week. The effect is manifested in frequent headache; insomnia, great depression of spirits, trembling of the extremities, irregular action of the heart with all the accompanying distress. The symptoms constantly grow worse and are relieved by increasing quantities of coffee; sometimes the tincture is used. Dyspepsia in aggravated form is usually present, as well as blotches and pimples on the skin. A bruise or slight injury proves the starting point of inflammation, erysipelas in character. Melancholy and fear of death accompany this form of inebriety in all cases.

BE SURE to read the Business department, page 13, this week and every week.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE NEW TESTAMENT.

LESSON VI.—Third Quarter.—Aug. 10.

SUBJECT.—The Rich Man and Lazarus.—Luke 16: 19-31.

GOLDEN TEXT.—How hard is it for them that trust in riches to enter into the kingdom of God.—Mark 10:24.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

DAILY READINGS.—M.—Luke 16:1-18. T.—Luke 16:19-31. W. Matt. 25:31-46. T.—Mark 9:41:50. F.—Rev. 21:23 to 22:15. S.—Prov. 14:16-35. S.—Jas. 5:1-11.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. The rich man in hell, vs. 19-21. The two extremes of earthly prosperity and adversity are here contrasted. Yet we are not to infer that poverty is in itself a virtue or riches a crime. The rich man is not accused of any special sin. We are not told that he oppressed the poor or that he refused to give Lazarus at least a dog's portion—the crumbs which fell from his table. There are many such at the present day, who would on no account be instrumental in robbing a poor man of his means of life, and yet fail to see their Lord in the person of his suffering and afflicted ones. This man seems to have closely resembled in character the rich fool of a previous lesson. His guilt consisted in living for himself and remaining criminally indifferent, perhaps ignorant—but ignorance is criminality—of the destitution and suffering which he could so easily have relieved. There is certainly a lesson here against luxurious living. It is sometimes said, to excuse extravagant outlays on dress or housefurnishings, that "it keeps money in circulation" and so helps the poor. This is a mistake. Any outlay which tends to useful ends does help the poor by increasing the volume of trade; but to spend a fortune on laces and jewelry only locks up so much money where it is of no use except to serve occasions of display. The rich man, for all we know to the contrary, had led a moral life, unmarked by any flagrant sin,—one of mere selfish ease and enjoyment, but it landed him in hell as surely as if he had been a thief or a red-handed murderer. The things which we have not done, the neglected kindness, the opportunity to help, perhaps save a fellow being which we let slip, or a cowardly and ignoble silence when the cause of truth is periled, will be that which will weigh heaviest against us at the final account.

2. The great gulf, vs. 24-26. We gain from this parable several important lessons. No son of Abraham can presume on his parentage to win him the favor of God. His hereditary advantages will not avail the descendant of Pilgrim sires if he lack all the virtues of his fathers. Second: there is a great gulf even in this world between the righteous and the vile, the saint and the sinner. Nothing short of the renewing grace of God can bridge the chasm. Our life in this world being the mould into which our characters are run and given their permanent shape, it follows that the gulf becomes fixed when we pass into eternity. Third: if in this life we make material good our chief end; if we try to shirk all duty that comes in a disagreeable or painful guise, we must reap what we sow. If we "sow to the flesh we shall of the flesh reap corruption." The misery of a lost sinner consists in the fact that he has deliberately chosen the perishable and fleeting things of sense which endure but a few brief years, and left himself at death utterly stripped of ever resource by which to drown consciousness. Something like this befalls the sensualist when some stroke of misfortune deprives him of all means of gratifying his appetite. If we crucify the old man here there will be no ungratified desires of the flesh to torment us in the other world; but by cultivating the new man, the Christ nature, death will only transplant us into our native atmosphere—the atmosphere of truth, righteousness and purity—and that will be heaven.

3. The fruitless prayer, vs. 27-31. The rich man in hell seems to have had no clearer views of truth than he had on earth. There is nothing in death itself that will purify from sin, or quicken our spiritual understanding. They who will not accept the abundance of the revelation contained in Scripture would not be convinced if all the miracles and signs of holy writ were repeated before their eyes.

—During the past ten years 11,031 converts have been made in the missionary fields occupied by the Moravian church.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—Rev. Dr. H. C. Mabie has resigned the pastorate of the Central Baptist church in Minneapolis to accept the secretaryship of the Baptist Foreign Missionary society, to which he was elected at the recent anniversary held in Chicago. He will take charge of his new work Sept. 1, and will leave then for a five months' missionary tour of Asia. He is now at the head of a missionary training school in Minneapolis established after the model of the Guinness school in London. Dr. Mabie's headquarters will be in Chicago.

—Under the auspices of the Chicago Evangelization Society a new barge, now moored at foot of Van Buren street, was dedicated by Major Whipple Thursday evening to the Gospel work of the society. The barge will remain there all summer, and will serve as a reading room through the day.

—At Wabash, Ind., Sunday, over two hundred persons were received into full communion by the Methodist church as a result of a revival during the winter. Two hundred now on probation will be received into the church next month.

—The Fletcher prize of $500, offered by the trustees of Dartmouth College for the best essay on "Prayer," has been awarded to Rev. D. W. Faunce, D.D., of West Newton, Mass. The committee of award were Rev. Smith Baker, Rev. Alexander Blackburn and Rev. Charles H. Wilcox, all of Lowell.

—The Presbyterian Woman's Mission Society received for last year $337,842. The Society was able to support the following missions: Indians, 33 schools, 164 teachers, 2,264 pupils; Mormons, 37 schools, 99 teachers, 2,374 pupils; Mexicans, 32 schools, 67 teachers, 1,213 pupils; South, 16 schools, 48 teachers, 1,213 pupils; total 118 schools, 361 teachers, 7,478 pupils.

—Rev. J. P. McKee, United Presbyterian missionary in India, reached this country from India lately. He joined his family in New Wilmington, Pa., but will make a short stay as he expects to return to India early this fall.

—We have published the very able reports and resolutions of the Reformed Presbyterian Synod at its late meeting in New York. The United Presbyterian General Assembly at Buffalo also adopted a timely and able paper on reforms, including the Sabbath, divorce, Bible in schools, National reform, temperance and the lodge. The last reads as follows:

"Your committee are of the opinion that we should emphasize more than we are now doing the position which we hold as a church upon the question of secret societies. We are happy to report that the names of prominent and influential ministers of our church were identified with the anti-secret convention recently held in Chicago under the auspices of the American Christian Association. But in face of the many evils growing out of the lodge system, and in view of the fact that our country's future welfare would seem to depend upon the overthrow of this system of iniquity, we would recommend that all our pastors and sessions be enjoined to unfurl the banner of our church upon this question, so that the church may be recognized everywhere as not in name only, but also in reality, a factor in the reform that would seek to fild the world of the oath-bound secret society."

—A Hebrew convert to Christianity is laboring with success among the thirty thousand resident Jews of Jerusalem.

—Africa now has at work within her borders ten American, twelve British, and thirteen continental missionary societies. There are more than 700 ordained missionaries, and more than 7,000 native preachers. It is estimated that there are, both white and native, about 175,000 communicants and 800,000 adherents.

—Out of 900 foreign missionaries at present in India, representing various lands and peoples, the eldest is an American, Rev. John Newton of the Presbyterian church, the veteran missionary of Lahore, who at the age of seventy-eight is still a happy worker in his chosen field. Mr. Newton landed in Calcutta in February, 1835.

—In London a new branch of the Salvation Army has been organized, called the "Calvary Corps." The corps consists of seventy men provided with seven vans fitted with bunks for thirteen men and cooking apparatus. Each will be allotted a certain district and will take a tent capable of seating three hundred persons, to be put up in some village. They will be away from London for four months and will hold services only in villages.

—The sad news comes of the murder of Mrs. Wright, wife of Rev. J. N. Wright, missionary of the Presbyterian Board at Salenas, Western Persia, by a treacherous teacher in the mission school. Mrs. Wright was a native Nestorian and on a visit to this country last year impressed all who met her by her refinement and consecration in Christian work.

—The International Lesson System has been introduced into Samoa. On a recent review Sunday the answers of the scholars to questions covering the lessons of the quarter were such as would put many a home school to shame.

—Rev. Stanley K. Phraner, a son of Rev. Dr. Phraner, formerly of Tarrytown, and more recently president of Elmira Female College, has accepted an appointment as a missionary in Siam, and will sail for his chosen field of labor in a few weeks. Mr. Phraner is a recent graduate of Princeton Seminary, and a young man of more than ordinary promise.

—Rev. Mr. Stuart, Free Church missionary, speaking at Edinburgh recently, said the drink traffic had done immense harm in Kaffraria. It was sad, he said, that in some parts of South Africa, Scotland was better known for its beer than its Bible.

—Aside from the idolaters of Siberia there are thirty million subjects of Russia whose religion is foreign, namely: 1,500,000 Armenians, 5-6,000,000 Lutherans, 9-10,000,000 Catholics, 3-4,000,000 Jews, and about 10,000,000 Mohammedans. Buddhists abound in Siberia, and extend even to the borders of the Volga.

—An all-day Christian conference will be held at Mount Washington, Chelsea, Mass., on the 21st of August beginning at 9 o'clock A. M., and closing at 9 o'clock P. M., with basket collation at 12:30 and 5:30 P. M. The object of this conference, says Bro. Wm. F. Davis, under whose direction it is to be held, is the exaltation of the truth as the truth is in Jesus Christ, through the united praise, prayers and testimonies of his disciples. The two previous conventions were seasons of great refreshing, and prayer is made that God will use this meeting much more to his own glory.

JOHN MARSHALL: "I never did utter the words ascribed to me, nor any other words importing the sentiment they convey. I never did say, 'Freemasonry is a jewel of the utmost value, that the pure in heart and life can only appreciate it fully, and that in a free government it must, it will be sustained and protected.' The fact mentioned in the resolution, that I have been in a lodge but once, so far as I can recollect, for nearly forty years, is evidence that I have no disposition to volunteer in this controversy, as the zealous partisan which this language would indicate."—Letter to Hon. John Bailey, Oct. 18, 1833.

GEN. HENRY SEWELL, a Companion of Washington: "I was initiated an Entered Apprentice to the Masonic rites in October, 1777, at Albany, soon after the capture of Burgoyne, being then an officer in the American army. . . . I was led by the influence of this 'Perfect Rule of faith and practice,' during the year 1784, to view speculative Masonry in a shape still more deformed. Its character appeared to be selfishness, because restricted to its own members; its religion, deism, because entirely devoid of the Gospel. Its history appeared fabulous; its claims to antiquity, unsustainable; its titles, fulsome; its rites, barbarous and absurd; its oaths, extra-judicial, unlawfully imposed and blindly taken; and the penal sanctions annexed, horrid and impious."

HINTS TO CYNOSURE WORKERS.

Some of the reasons why the Cynosure should be circulated by tens of thousands have been given to our readers. No one who desires this proposal to be a grand success will fail to take note of some practical suggestions:

1. If this is the Lord's work, it must be done in his way. Prayer for a blessing on the paper and its circulation must therefore be first, midst and last.

2. Make a list of friends and acquaintances whom you would desire to read the Cynosure. Write down their names that they may be more certainly remembered when you see them.

3. Have enough sample papers to assist you in canvassing. They will be sent free from this office to every local agent or occasional canvasser. Copies can be sent direct to the person you wish to address if you prefer.

4. Have also at hand a few good tracts to aid in arousing an interest. Often they are a convenient introduction. In a shop, store or other place of resort the Washington Souvenir, nicely framed, is of great value.

5. Be confident in the goodness of the cause; and keep in mind for encouragement—

In the first place, that the paper is well worth subscription.

In the second place, that much depends for the success of the reform on a large list.

In the third place, that there is no easier way to raise a good fund to sustain other branches of the work than by subscriptions.

This is the plan of a good work, and God's blessing will go with you if in the name of his dear Son you endeavor to help accomplish it.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

CHICAGO.

Dr. A. Lagorio has opened an institute here where the Pasteur method of treating hydrophobia is employed. The doctor has been the pioneer of this branch of physical treatment at the Rush Medical College. The institution was opened July 2nd, with three patients in waiting.

1,101,263 is the number of inhabitants the census of 1890 gives to Chicago. Only about 400,000 short of the estimated population of New York, and 61,263 ahead of the estimated population of Philadelphia. Chicago has increased in ten years from 503,185 to 1,101,263—New York from 1,206,299 to 1,500,000.

W. J. Cartwright, of Grand Crossing, and Miss Dora Warner, of 2 Twelfth St., were killed by an Illinois Central train at Pullman about 10 o'clock Thursday night. Miss Warner was walking on the track and did not see a freight train that came suddenly upon her. Cartwright seeing the danger, rushed forward and made a heroic effort to carry her from the track, but before he could do so the engine was upon him and both were killed.

B. F. Jacobs, the noted Sunday-school man, is at the same time an active business man. His sales of real estate in this city for the first twenty-one days of July amounted to $850,000.

COUNTRY.

A water-spout, which is a thing often heard of than seen, formed off the coast of Michigan Thursday near Escanaba and traveled about three miles southeasterly. It was about 200 feet in diameter at its base and extended very high in the clouds. Its roar was heard for two miles.

An explosion occurred in a boarding-house at Savannah, Ga., Thursday morning, by which three persons were killed and six injured, and the building wrecked. The cause is unknown.

The recent washout on the Colorado Central Road is believed to have caused damage amounting to $250,000. A big iron bridge and twenty-five miles of track have been destroyed.

It is estimated that the corn crop of Kansas will be 50 per cent of last year's yield, which was the largest on record.

Sunday afternoon while picking huckleberries near Farwell, Mich., E. J. Ferguson was shot and instantly killed by J. DeLord, who mistook him for a bear. Ferguson leaves a wife and three children.

John Murphy, a saloon-keeper, and one Blume, a brewer, of Hitchcock, S. D., were on Monday served with civil processes to abate nuisances, and were afterward arrested on criminal charges for violating the prohibitory law. They were held to the next term of the Circuit Court in bonds of $700 each.

In a collision between two freight trains at Antigo, Wis., Tuesday, a fireman and brakeman were killed and one engineer was fatally and another dangerously hurt.

A cloud burst in Clear Creek Canyon, near Golden, Col., swept away all traces of the railroad through the canyon, cutting off several towns from communication with the outside world.

Petitions were circulated in all the churches of Mason City, Iowa, asking the sheriff to use his influence in stopping Sunday ball playing. The base-ball people will retaliate by closing restaurants and other business places on the Sabbath.

It was decided at Boston Friday that the next congress of the Catholic laity of America shall be held in Chicago in 1893.

At Pierre, S. Dak., Friday, Attorney General Dollard decided that maintaining a place where liquor is drunk is a violation of the State law.

Two hundred babies, including ten pairs of twins, were wheeled in their carriages at Asbury Park, N. J., Monday. Fifteen thousand persons witnessed the procession, which was headed by the band of United States steamer Trenton.

(Continued on 16th page.)

THE RIVER MISSION CHAPEL.

DONATIONS SINCE JUNE 2, 1890.

Jas. T. Brennan, $10.
Mrs. John B. Barnes, Wm. Croft, Henry Ribbins, Mrs. L. Martin, S. G. Frink, Jas. Brandt, A. J. Chittenden, Rev. Galloway, S. M. Neff, $5 each.
Lillie M. Reed, $4.20.
Peter C. Housel, Sarah Wright, A. Flow-er, Mrs. E. J. Swain, each $3.
Mrs. Ira Chamberlain, $2.75.
Sarah Bingham, Dewey Hopkins, R E Johnson, John Calderwood, L. A. B., C. C. McGilvra, each $2.
Mrs. E. J. Reeve, Hannah Chamberlain, $1.50 each.
S. H. Nutting, Electa Wheeler, Mrs. S. H. Cooper, Mrs. A. Holbrook, W. F. Ward, I. N. Brown, M. I. Lawrence, Mrs. L. Woodard, G. Fairchild, Mrs. P. L. Keegan, G. W. Camblin, Mrs. A. P. Nicholson, Mrs. Davis, Lucinda Markey, Dora L. Manley, Orpheus Jaquith, Mrs. C. W. Crabtree, J. L. Benton, Wm. Hackett, L. L. Weston, Mary A. Bond, J. H. Mason, each $1.
Mrs. N. Lowery, 75c. C. Powers, 72c. M. C. Grinnell, 50c. Abbie S. Bruce, 45c. J. R. Wylie, Sarah E. Noble, B. Nichols, M. E. DeHarpast, Joseph Cook, Eva Cook, Mrs. R. Richardson, each 25c. C. E. Pierce, 20c.

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from July 14 to 26 inclusive:

Dr J N Norris, Mrs L G Townshend, D W Henderson, W S Titus, J K Weber, E S Bunce, Mrs C H Gillett, Rev C Dreyer, R Wilson, Rev J P Hershisier, J Grove, Rev A Hardaway, G Swanson Jr, J M Frink, W Knight, A T Curtis, Mrs C F Hawley, Rev A F Dempsey, Rev F H Cowles, T Sussex, S Smith, Rev J W Raynor, Mrs S Haney, Miss S L West, J Wilson, J A Loggan, A Bliss, J Sutcliffe, J Bradford, M Fitch, W Ingliss, J Hogue, D Gulsor, A G McKeown, Will Tucker, Mrs E A Cook, S Baldrige, Rev C Bender, T Hodge, Mrs M J Avery, J Bancroft, A Burgess, Mrs N B Kellogg, W McCoy.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—No. 2.....	91 @	92 1/4
No. 3.....	78 @	87
Winter No. 2.....	91 @	93
Corn—No. 2.....	41 1/2 @	43 1/2
Oats—No. 2.....	34 1/2 @	36
Rye—No. 2.....		50 1/2
Bran per ton.....		11 00
Hay—Timothy.....	5 00 @	11 00
Butter, medium to best....	10 @	15 1/2
Cheese.....	06 @	10 1/2
Beans.....	75 @	1 70
Eggs.....		10 1/2
Seeds—Timothy.....	1 25 @	1 35
Flax.....	1 22 @	1 40
Broom corn.....	02 1/2 @	06 1/4
Potatoes, new, per bu.....	1 10 @	1 25
Hides—Green to dry flint....	03 @	07
Lumber—Common.....	10 00 @	13 00
Wool.....	15 @	34
Cattle—Choice to extra....	4 85 @	5 00
Common to good.....	1 60 @	4 80
Hogs.....	3 70 @	4 00
Sheep.....	3 60 @	4 50

NEW YORK.

Wheat.....	95 @	1 04
Corn.....	46 1/2 @	50
Oats.....	38 @	43
Eggs.....	16 @	18
Butter.....	6 @	17 1/2
Wool.....	14 @	39

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle.....	1 50 @	4 50
Hogs.....	3 40 @	3 60
Sheep.....	2 75 @	4 40

MASONIC OUTRAGES.

BY REV. H. H. HINMAN.

The character of this valuable pamphlet is seen from its chapter headings: I.—Masonic Attempts on the Lives of Seceders. II.—Masonic Slander. III.—Masonic Assault on Free Speech. IV.—Freemasonry Among the Colored People. V.—Masonic Interference with the Punishment of Criminals. VI.—The Fruits of the Masonic Institution as seen in the Conspiracy and Outrages of Other Secret Orders. VII.—The Suppression of the Secret Lodge System to the Foregoing and Similar Outrages.

PRICE, POSTPAID, 20 CENTS.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Be Sure

If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. A Boston lady, whose example is worthy imitation, tells her experience below: "In one store where I went to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla the clerk tried to induce me buy their own instead of Hood's; he told me their's would last longer; that I might take it on ten days' trial; that if I did not like it I need not pay anything, etc. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I had taken Hood's Sarsaparilla, knew what it was, was satisfied with it, and did not want any other. When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was feeling real miserable with dyspepsia, and so weak that at times I could hardly stand. I looked like a person in consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me so much good that I wonder at myself sometimes, and my friends frequently speak of it." MRS. ELLA A. GOFF, 61 Terrace Street, Boston.

To Get

Hood's

Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. L. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

SCOTCH RITE MASONRY ILLUSTRATED.

The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all Masonic rites, and are fully and accurately given in

"FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED,"

as advertised, but the signs, grips, passwords, etc., of these three degrees are given at the close of Vol 2 of

"Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated"

Vol. 1 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3d to 13th inclusive. Vol. 2 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 19th to 33d inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each; in cloth, $1 each. Each volume per dozen, paper covers, $4; per dozen, cloth bound, $9.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St. Chicago,

FIFTY YEARS and BEYOND;

OR,

Old Age and How to Enjoy It.

A most appropriate gift book for "The Old Folks at Home."

Compiled by REV. S. G. LATHROP.

Introduction by
REV. ARTHUR EDWARDS, D. D.,
(Editor N. W. Christian Advocate.)

The object of this volume is to give to that great army who are fast hastening toward the "great beyond" some practical hints and helps as to the best way to make the most of the remainder of that now is, and to give comfort and help life that is to come.

"It is a tribute to the Christianity that honors a gray head and refuses to consider the old man burden or an obstacle. The book will aid and comfort every reader."—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

"These selections are very precious. Springing from such numerous and pure fountains, they can but afford a refreshing and healthful draught for every aged traveller to the great beyond."—Witness.

Price, bound in rich cloth, 400 pages, $1

Address, W. I. PHILLIP,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago Ill

REVISED ODD-FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED.

The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. The ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper cover, 50 cents; per dozen $4.00.

All orders promptly filled by the
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS ILLUSTRATED.

By a Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, counter signs, grips etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00. Address the
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REMARKABLE OFFER!

Nearly everyone is familiar with the name, but it has been estimated that only one in every two hundred and eighty persons in the United States is fortunate enough to have access to the valuable information contained within the covers of the grandest work ever written by mortal man,

Webster's

UNABRIDGED DICTIONARY.

That this is an unfortunate state of affairs will be admitted by all, and it is due to the fact that no one save the rich could afford them.

The Dictionary is a necessity in every home, school and business house. It fills a vacancy and furnishes knowledge which no one hundred volumes of the choicest books could supply, and all young or old, educated or ignorant, rich or poor should have it within reach and refer to its contents every day in the year.

The Loomis reprint contains all the matter as compiled and arranged by our esteemed and honored author and statesman

NOAH WEBSTER.

About forty years of his life was devoted to this great work, and when we consider the fact that this book contains about 100,000 words, we will appreciate that these years must have been well spent.

Some idea of the magnitude of this book may be gained from the fact that it contains over 440 cubic inches of paper and has about 300,000 square inches of printed surface.

In addition to the 100,000 words it contains a portrait of the author, together with his biography and a valuable table of 12,000 synonymous words.

By special arrangement with the publishers, we are permitted to furnish this valuable volume: 1st. To any subscriber to our paper; 2nd. To any renewal subscription; and 3rd. To any person who has paid a full year's subscription within the past six months, on receipt of $1.50 for the paper one year, and two dollars and seventy-five cents to cover express charges, packing, etc., of the Dictionary.

Address

CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill

Disloyal

SECRET OATHS

ADDRESS OF

JOSEPH COOK,

OF BOSTON,

AT THE

Conference of Christians, CHICAGO, 1890.

No better document of its size for general distribution has been printed. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Single Copies 5 cents, or 12 copies for 50 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

HELPS

TO

BIBLE STUDY

With Practical Notes on the Books of Scripture.

Designed for Ministers, Local Preachers, Teachers, and all Christian Workers.

Chapter I.—Different Methods of Bible Study.
Chapter II.—Rules of Interpretation.
Chapter III.—Interpretations of Bible Types and Symbols.
Chapter IV.—Analysis of the books of the Bible.

Chapter V.—Miscellaneous Helps.

Cloth, 184 pages, price postpaid, 50 cents.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

HOME AND HEALTH.

HOUSEWIFELY BITS.

If a tablespoonful of kerosene is put in four quarts of tepid water, and this used in washing windows and mirrors, instead of pure water, there will remain upon the cleaned surface a polish no amount of mere friction can give.

If a flannel cloth dipped in kerosene, then wrung dry, be used in rubbing off dirty finger-marks from paint, the grateful housekeeper will repeat the experiment often.

To clean and brighten brasses and copper, wring out a piece of soft flannel in kerosene, and with this apply Putz Pomade to the tarnished surface. When well coated rub hard with old linen, and polish with dry flannel. The result leaves nothing to be desired. The shining brasses on locomotives and ferry boats are cleaned in this manner.

For grease and milk and acid spots upon furniture, rub the place well with cold water, then polish with soft linen. Save old napkins and pillow-cases for such work.

For white spots left upon polished furniture by scalding water, tea or coffee, rub hard with kerosene, then polish with dry, soft flannel.

For a burn or scald, have on hand a mixture of linseed oil and lime-water in equal parts, and keep the scald covered with linen steeped in this, changing as it heats. If you do not have the mixture by you, hastily knead together a tablespoonful of wood-soot (that from a coal fire will not do) with two tablespoonfuls of lard, until you have a smooth salve. Apply to the scald, and keep it on until the burning is allayed. The remedy is black but marvelously efficacious to the case of burns or scalds. A teaspoonful of soda stirred to a cream in four spoonfuls of molasses is another homely but good application; also a coating of flour and cream, or of dry flour alone. None of these, however, is equal to linseed oil and lime water, unless it be lime and soot.

For bites in children, rub the irritated skin or the pustules with castor oil, applied with the tip of the finger.

HOW CAMPHOR IS MADE.

Camphor, formerly and less correctly written camphire, is a concrete juice, chiefly obtained from two Asiatic trees. The Japanese make the camphor of commerce as follows: After a tree is felled to the earth it is cut up into chips, which are laid in a tub or a large iron pot partially filled with water, and placed over a slow fire. Through holes in the bottom of the tub steam slowly rises, and heating the chips generates oil and camphor. Of course the tub with the chips has a closely fitting cover. From this cover a bamboo pipe leads to a succession of other tubes with bamboo connections, and the last of these tubes is divided into two compartments, one above the other, the dividing floor being perforated with small holes to allow the water to pass to the lowest compartment. The upper compartment, supplied with a straw layer, catches the camphor in crystals in deposits as it passes through the cooling process. The camphor is then separated from the straw, packed in wooden tubs, and is ready for market. The oil is used by the natives for illuminating and other purposes.

The phenomenal success of Ayer's Sarsaparilla started into existence a host of competitors. This, of course, was to be expected; but the effect has been to demonstrate the superior merits of Dr. Ayer's preparation by a constantly increasing demand for it.

BIRNEY.

The sketch of JAMES G. BIRNEY candidate of the Liberty Party for President, in pamphlet for 25 cents. A limited number of copies of this handsome pamphlet for sale at the N. C. A. office

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

STANDARD WORKS

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES.

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Association,

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. A liberal discount to dealers.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 75 cents. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive. Vol. II. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprised the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished. 25 cents each.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe. 20 cents each.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. In cloth, $1.50 each. Paper, 75 cents each.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pages, 75 cents.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance. Bound in one volume. In cloth, 589 pages, $1.00.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. 25 cents each.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' LETTERS on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper, 35 cents.

Hon. Thurlow Weed on the Morgan ABDUCTION. This is the legally attested statement of this eminent Christian journalist and statesman concerning the unlawful seizure and confinement of Capt. Morgan in Canandaigua jail, his removal to Fort Niagara and subsequent drowning in Lake Ontario. 5 cents each.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a LEAGUE WITH THE DEVIL. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason. 15 cents each.

Freemasonry Self-Condemed. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church. Paper covers, price, 20 cents each.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each.

Anti-masonic Sermons and Addresses. Composed of "Masonry a Work of Darkness;" the Sermons of Messrs. Cross, William McNary, Dow and Sarver, the two addresses of President Blanchard, and the addresses of President H. H. George, Prof. J. G. Carson and Rev. M. S. Drury; "Thirteen Reasons Why a Christian cannot be a Freemason," "Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion," and "Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate?" 287 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the INITIATE. By Rev. L. A. Post. 5 cents each.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper cover, 35 cents.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin trials. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each.

Stearns's Inquiry into the Nature and Tendency of FREEMASONRY. 338 pages. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor United Presbyterian church. 5 cents each.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 DEGREES OF FREEMASONRY. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. 10 cents each.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void; OR FREEMASONRY SELF-CONVICTED. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. 207 pages. Postpaid, 40 cents each.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian), seceding Mason of 21 degrees. 15 cents each.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the GRAND LODGE OF ILLINOIS. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. H. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each.

Masonic Salvation, as taught by its standard authors. This pamphlet is a compilation from standard Masonic works, in proof of the following proposition: Freemasonry claims to be a religion that saves men from all sin, and purifies them for heaven. 111 pages, price, postpaid, 20 cents.

Freemasonry at a Glance illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the first three degrees. Paper cover, 32 pages. Single copy, six cents.

Masonic Outrages. Compiled by Rev. H. H. Hinman. Showing Masonic assault on lives of seceders, on reputation, and on free speech; its interference with justice in courts, etc. Postpaid, 20 cents.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret SOCIETIES. A most convincing argument against fellowshipping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each.

General Washington Opposed to SECRET SOCIETIES. This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10cts each.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims by Rev. David McDill, Pres. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. In cloth, 35cts each; paper covers, 15cts each.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinions of many prominent college presidents and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25cts each.

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of his sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5cts each.

Sermon on Secretism. By Rev. R. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational church, Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear array of the objections to all secret societies, and to Masonry especially, that are apparent to all. 5cts each.

Pres. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to dis-fellowship secret societies. 10cts each.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and Church. By Rev. M. S. Drury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church, is clearly shown. 10cts each.

Holden with Cords. OR THE POWER OF THE SECRET EMPIRE. By E. E. Flagg, author of "A Sunny Life," etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story, accurately true to life because mainly a narration of historical facts. In cloth, $1.00; in paper, 50 cents.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and law of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved. 15cts each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. J. Day, Brownlee. In reply to a Masonic Oration by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio. 5 cents each.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on Masonry. Paper covers, 25 cents each.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion. 5 cents each.

ON ODD-FELLOWSHIP.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by ex-President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; paper cover, 50cts.

Patriarchs Militant Illustrated. The complete ritual of the Patriarchs Militant degree. This is an accurate copy of the Charge Book furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge of the Independent Order of Odd-fellows, with the eighteen military diagrams and the unwritten (secret) work added. Paper cover, 25cts each.

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own utterances; its doctrine and practice examined in the light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth 50cts; paper covers, 25cts.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and other secret societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms, and the duty to dis-fellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers, is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10cts each.

Odd-fellowship: ITS HISTORY AND ITS WORK. By President J. Blanchard. A neat pamphlet with cover. Postpaid, 5 cts.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Anti-mason's Scrap-Book, consisting of 53 "Cynosure" tracts. In this book are the views of more than a score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of secret societies. Postpaid, 25 cts.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret tradesunion of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords, etc. 15cts each.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the REPUBLIC, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc., and the ritual of the Machinists' and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each.

FARM NOTES.

AGRICULTURAL.

Clover hay makes a capital feed to go along with corn silage in winter.

Thousands of farmers are yet unappreciative of the value of drainage to a cold and heavy soil.

Quantity and quality are both desirable characteristics of milk, and they are not incompatible.

Horses and mules thrive best on timothy or red top hay; while sheep and cows do better on clover or millet.

No food is better for work teams than oats during the spring and summer, and they should be well supplied with them.

Charcoal is about the best condition powder you can feed to hens. Where many fowls are kept, large quantities of broken charcoal will be consumed.

In shoeing colts especially, considerable care must be taken to do the work properly, or considerable injury may be done that afterwards may be difficult to overcome.

Grass allowed to ripen seed before cutting has lost from one-third to one-half its value as fodder, and the chances of getting a second crop are less sure than if cut early.

If during the season the grass becomes short and lacks nutrition, and you fail to supplement it with oats, bran, oil meal, or even a little corn meal, the wool will show it.

A diet of gruel made of pure potato starch will cure scours in calves when all other means fail. No milk is given. A Massachusetts farmer says he lost many calves annually until he found this out.

Don't plant beans with the idea that they require poor soil to make a good crop. To be sure, they may produce a paying crop, where wheat or corn would not, but poor soil is not necessary to make them do well. If you want to use any manure a dressing of wood ashes will do good service.

Talk over the farm management with the boys and get their opinions. As a rule, parents do a great deal of thinking and planning for the boys that it would be much better to let them do for themselves. Responsibility should be placed upon them just in proportion as they are able to bear it.

The drought in Illinois and Missouri has been broken, and crops have generally been benefited by rain. In Arkansas cotton is reported as doing well but corn is almost a failure, for want of rain. Crops are also suffering in Indiana and Michigan for want of rain. In Kentucky crops are reported as looking better; tobacco is fair, the hay crop is heavy, but potatoes are bad. In Tennessee cotton is in excellent condition; corn and tobacco are suffering. Favorable conditions are reported from Alabama, Mississippi, and Louisiana, but rain is needed in Louisiana, and cotton is seriously in need of rain in Texas. A large crop of hay has been secured in New England in excellent condition. The rains in Eastern Pennsylvania and New Jersey were of great benefit. Rain is badly needed in Northern Virginia, but in the southern part of the State and in North Carolina the drought was broken before serious damage was done. Cotton continues to improve in South Carolina.

Many of the failures in getting a "stand" of any kind of fruit are the result of careless digging and neglect while the roots are out of their native element. There is no class of planters who do their work so rapidly, and with such seeming carelessness as nurserymen, yet their losses are comparatively small, simply because they know that the proper place for roots is in the earth, and take every precaution to make their condition when out of the earth as similar to the natural one as possible.

In the earth the roots are moist and subject to slow variations of temperature and are also in darkness. As usually handled, these natural conditions attending the life of a root are all disregarded. The tree is rudely dug from the ground, where it has had a temperature of 40 or 50 degrees for weeks, loaded on a wagon,

Convincing Evidence

That Ayer's Sarsaparilla cures Rheumatism and kindred complaints is abundant. This medicine eradicates from the blood all trace of the disease, and so invigorates the system that a perfect restoration to health is inevitable.

"In Oakland, La., 22 years ago, I had been sick a year and a half with sciatic rheumatism. The extreme pains that I suffered wasted my flesh to the bone, and my strength and vitality were well nigh exhausted. My skin was yellow and rough, showing a bad state of the blood, and it is more than likely that blood poison existed, as I have taken large quantities of mercury. After the sciatica was in a measure under control, I was put under treatment to cleanse the blood and give me strength. This was continued several weeks, but to no purpose. My physician then suggested the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and it is to this medicine I owe my restoration to health. From actual experience in the use of various blood-purifiers, I am confident that Ayer's Sarsaparilla has no equal."—J. W. Pickle, Farmerville, La.

"I have known Mr. J. W. Pickle for many years, and consider him a truthful man."—R. B. Dawkins, Mayor of Farmerville, La.

Be sure, in making your purchase, that the druggist gives you

Ayer's Sarsaparilla
—FOR—Rheumatism.

"During the past year my joints, which had become stiff and sore, caused me great pain, especially at the close of a day's work. At times my fingers were so lame I was unable to hold a needle, while the pain at night prevented my sleeping. I suffered also from nervous chills and a want of appetite. I tried outward applications and took remedies prescribed by my doctor; but all to no purpose. A short time ago my son-in-law, Wm. Woods, of Hollis, N. H., was cured by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla of an inflammatory disease of the eyes, and seeing him so much benefited, I thought I would try this medicine for my own trouble. The result is a complete cure of the pains, stiffness, and swelling from which I suffered so much. The Sarsaparilla has had a good effect on my appetite and nerves, so that I have better strength and no more chills."—Eliza Halvorson, Nashua, N. H.

"After being many years afflicted with rheumatism, I have used Ayer's Sarsaparilla with great success."—J. B. Bridge, Boston, Mass.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

Prepared by DR. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass. Sold by all Druggists.

Price $1. Six bottles, $5. Worth $5 a bottle.

EVERY WATERPROOF COLLAR OR CUFF

THAT CAN BE RELIED ON

Not to Split!

Not to Discolor!

BEARS THIS MARK.

NEEDS NO LAUNDERING. CAN BE WIPED CLEAN IN A MOMENT.

THE ONLY LINEN-LINED WATERPROOF COLLAR IN THE MARKET.

SAVE YOUR MONEY

BY SUBSCRIBING FOR ANY OF THE FOLLOWING PERIODICALS IN COMBINATION WITH THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

	Regular yearly subscription price.		Regular yearly subscription price.	Our price for both.
Forum,	$5.00	and Cynosure	$1.50	$5.50
North American Review,	5.00	" "	1.50	5.50
Popular Science Monthly,	5.00	" "	1.50	5.50
Century Magazine,	4.00	" "	1.50	5.00
Harper's " "	4.00	" "	1.50	4.50
" Weekly,	4.00	" "	1.50	4.75
Scribner's Magazine,	3.00	" "	1.50	4.00
Independent,	3.00	" "	1.50	4.00

If any periodical not in the above list is wanted, in combination with the Cynosure, send for terms and enclose stamp for reply.

W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.

SEE THIS!

The latest, most complete edition.

Over 235 choice

Reform Songs for the Times.

Only 30c a copy, or 20c by the 100.

—AND—

"THE TOBACCO MANIA."
$1 per 100.

For sale here and by the author,

GEO. W. CLARK,

76 W. Montcalm St., Detroit, Mich.

SPECIAL BOOK SALE!

Regular Price.		Selling Price.
$.10	"REPORT OF THE TRIAL OF Rev. J. T. Michael," an Elder in the M. E. Church, for arraigning the Bishops, El- ders and Preachers in charge for being Freemasons contrary to the Discipline of the M. E. Church. Paper, 28 pages.	$.05
$.75	"BEREA COLLEGE," Ken- tucky. An interesting his- tory of the founding of that College for white and black in a slave State. Cloth, 87 pages.	$.25
$.30	"SONGS FOR THE TIMES," by Geo. W. Clark. Words and Music. Intended for Prohi- bition and W. C. T. U. meet- ings. Boards, 152 pages.	$.20
$.25	"MASONIC DEGREES ILLUS- TRATED." Containing all the pass and real words, all the pass and real grips and signs of the first three degrees of Freemasonry, from the time of King Solomon, King Hi- ram of Tyre, and Hiram Abiff, the Widow's Son, to the present time. Compiled by E. M. Trowbridge. Pa- per, 39 pages. With certifi- cate and demit showing that the author was a Freema- son.	$.05
$.20	"THE INTERIOR OF SIERRA LEONE, West Africa." A lecture delivered at the Gov- ernment Practicing School- Room, Freetown, Sierra Le- one, together with remarks and addresses of gentlemen present, and the lecturer's replies. By J. Augustus Cole, of Shaingay, W. Af- rica. Paper, 54 pages.	$.10
$.25	"RELIGIOUS PERSECUTION." An examination of Cardinal Manning's letter in the New York Tribune, on Irish af- fairs and bearing on Home Rule. By Rev. John Lee. Paper, 83 pages.	$.15
$.25	"SKETCH OF THE LIFE OF JAMES G. BIRNEY." His re- lation to the Anti-slavery movement and place in his- tory. By General William Birney. Paper, 32 pages.	$.10
$.75	"LUCILE VERNON, or the Church at Lansington. The experience of a young pas- tor. A novel. By Rev. W. T. Meloy, D. D. Cloth, 208 pages.	$.35
$1.00	"NATIONAL SUICIDE AND ITS PREVENTION." The follow- ing will show the drift of the book: Measure or Stand- ard of Value; What is Hon- est Money; Our National Banks; Paper Money; Land Tenure, etc. By O. F. Lum- ry. Cloth, 224 pp.	$.50
$.15	"A WOMAN'S VICTORY, or the Query of the Lodgeville Church." By Jennie L. Hardie. Paper, 21 pp.	$.05
$.15	"MY EXPERIENCE WITH SE- CRET SOCIETIES." By a Trav- eler. Paper, 51 pp.	$.10
$.10	"WASHINGTON SOUVENIR." Portraits of Geo. Washing- ton and his Co-patriots, with their testimony on Freema- sonry. Size 18x24 inches. Framed it is an ornament to any home.	$.05
$.10	"SECRET SOCIETIES." A Lec- ture delivered at Oberlin College, Jan. 9, 1890. By Prof. Henry C. King. Pa- per, 36 pp.	$.05
$1.50	"HISTORY OF SECRET SOCIE- TIES IN FRANCE," or "THE CRADLE OF REBELLIONS." By Lucien De La Hodde. Translated from the French by Gen'l. J. W. Phelps. Cloth, 479 pp.	$.50
$.25	"THE PURITY CRUSADE." With portraits of some of its leaders. Paper, 114 pp.	$.15

Sent postpaid to any address on receipt of the selling price.

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
WM. I. PHILLIPS, Treasurer,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

You can make a large sum of money at work for us in your own locality. During the past few years, those who have thus worked have received over Five Millions of dollars for their services—more than a barrel of money. We want a few more workers at once. The work is easy, pleasant, adapted to both young and old of either sex. You can work all the time or in spare time only. Any one can do the work after studying our directions for a day or two. This is the chance of a lifetime for those who apply at once. Any one anywhere can earn $100 per month doing our work, under the most favorable conditions, earn $200 a day and upwards. No class of people in the world are making so much money, without capital, as those at work for us. Whatever you have done, or whatever you may do, you should look into this royal chance. You will find that you can easily make all that we claim, and more. If you write to us before we secure all the workers we need, we will lay all before you FREE. Better write before you read, and then if you conclude not to go to work, or if we cannot employ you, no harm is done. Every one of our workers makes big money. True & Co., Box 399, Augusta, Maine.

BUSINESS.

TRACT MISSIONARIES.

"One of us," and, by the way, a W. C. T. U. Superintendent of Jail and Prison Work, visited Proctorville, Ohio, and distributed some of the N. C. A. tracts. She writes; "I do praise God for the privilege of scattering the pure seed of the Word."

There was quite a stir among the fraternity, and the local paper scored the Christian lady for not praying, or pointing sinners to Jesus, instead of assailing an order "founded on the Bible." But the tracts are there. They are good preachers. They preach without fear. They are not moved by scorn or contempt or insults. As soon as a man has got through raging, is cool and ready to listen, the tract is again ready to go on with its quiet preaching. Let us praise God for tracts and use them more.

Remember the FREE TRACT FUND and send to it some of your "benevolent money." Let us hear from other workers.

"PAID IN ADVANCE."

Some papers discontinue on expiration of subscriptions and some continue until orders are received to discontinue. If a classification is made it will be found that those papers which appeal mainly to the lower tastes of their readers, to their love of news (daily papers), their love of excitement (story papers), or their love of beauty (literary and art journals) generally do not trust their readers; while those who appeal mainly to their higher instincts, to their love of home (country weeklies), or their love for God (religious papers), do trust their subscribers. There is no inflexible rule, but the general custom is as stated.—Christian Patriot.

BOOKS AND TRACTS.

There is missionary work for summer as well as for winter months. One form is the never-ending and often blessed work of giving a tract or selling a pamphlet to the uninformed. Among the many who have greatly aided this reform and benefited their neighbors is Burgess Smith of Pennsylvania. In sending for a new supply he writes cheerfully of the interest shown in the "Proceedings of the Chicago Conference." Sow your neighborhoods two or three times a year with fresh, readable tracts, and God will give you a harvest that rust and blight cannot touch.

WANTED.

The Cynosure of January 23, 1890. Several more copies have been called for than could be supplied. If any one having a copy to spare will send it to this office, we shall be very thankful.

Quite a number have been interested in "Pagan Counterfeits in the Christian Church," by C. S. A. Temple. We can again supply friends with this 52-page pamphlet and at a special price of only 10 cents postpaid, Mr. N. O. Moore, publisher, Chicago, having donated 100 to the Association.

Have you read the advertisement headed SPECIAL BOOK SALE? Only a few of some kinds are in stock. It is not our intention to replenish after these are sold. If not satisfactory after examination, books from this list may be returned and money will be refunded.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—U. S. Government Report, Aug. 17, 1889.

We have over $1,500 worth of literature on the shelves which your friends would be benefited in seeing. Will you help us send it to them?

ONLY $2.75.

JULY 25, 1890.

Webster's Dictionary received all right. Am well pleased with it. Please accept our thanks. Yours truly,
MRS. R. SCHNELLBACHER.
Mankato, Kan.

One hundred and twenty of the TESTIMONY OF EVANGELISTS, as found on page 7 of this paper, for 30 cents. As issued by this Association it is a 4-page tract, and contains the portraits of Moody and Pentecost. 30 cents for one pound, 10 cents for one-third pound.

Seventy-five papers have received this week the Joseph Cook address on DISLOYAL OATHS. It is to be hoped that every paper in its review notices will quote his words: "Secret oaths are forbidden to church members by some Christian denominations, and ought to be by all." Thanks are due for aid in sending the Cook address to papers, to Dr. I. N. Brown and John Hogue.

NEWS, (Continued from 13th page.)

A peculiar disease prevails among cattle in the vicinity of LaHarpe, Ill. The animals become blind in one eye at a time and in most cases soon die.

Saturday morning, near Paris, Texas, Andy Young, a Negro, was called to his door by a party of white men, who filled him with bullets from rifles and revolvers, some of the missiles cutting his tongue in two. The cause of the tragedy was that the victim had had a quarrel with white lads.

By the explosion of a threshing engine near Princeton, Ind., Monday, two men were killed, two others were fatally and one seriously injured. Several horses were also killed.

Three locomotives have been shipped from this country to Palestine for the new railroad between Jaffa and Jerusalem. They are named Jaffa, Jerusalem, and Ramleh.

The population of the seven largest cities of Michigan, as ascertained by the late census, may now be said to be as follows, in round numbers: Detroit, 207,000; Grand Rapids, 61,000; Saginaw, 54,000; Bay City, 39,000; Muskegon, 24,000; Jackson, 22,000; Kalamazoo, 18,000.

Thursday the Poorman mine, of Caribou, the largest silver mine in Colorado, together with the Hubert gold mine at Central City, was transferred to an English syndicate for $1,500,000. A tin deposit embracing 2,200 acres at San Jacinto, Cal., was also sold to Englishmen, including Mr. Balfour, for $2,000,000.

An express train on the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific road went through a bridge at Simon, Col., Monday night at 10:40. The entire train except the sleeper went to the bottom, killing three men and wounding twelve. A washout was the cause.

In a fire in a Cincinnati tenement Tuesday night three persons were burned to death, and three others sustained serious injuries. The police and firemen rescued many from the flames.

FOREIGN.

It is reported that the bitter feeling of the colonists against the British government for abandoning the rights of the colony has caused Prince George to give up his proposed visit to Newfoundland.

The editors of three newspaper at Malta have been excommunicated for abusing the pope and bishop of that place.

Small pox is ravaging the villages between Mansowah and Zazazig, Egypt. The population is being almost decimated.

In a conference between General Miles and Governor Corral, of Sonora, Mexico, Monday, it was agreed that Mexico and the United States should co-operate in punishing the Indian outlaws believed to be lurking in the mountains of Mexico.

It is reported that heavy rains in England have reduced the wheat crop to the extent of 1,000,000 quarters.

Notwithstanding the denials of the semi-official newspapers that the plot against the Brazilian government had been discovered, several army officers have been arrested for complicity in a conspiracy to overthrow the present rulers of the republic. As a measure of precaution against the plotters guards have been stationed about all government buildings.

The Armenian bishop of Erzeroum was among those killed in the riot on June 20, and his death has roused the Armenians to the highest pitch of excitement. The whole country is in a state of anarchy. Business is at a standstill and traveling is impracticable. Half-starved Turkish soldiers and Kurds, under the pretense of maintaining order, patrol the country, plundering wherever they go. The Persian consul at Erzeroum offers the persecuted Armenians an asylum in Persia.

Advices from Erzeroum are that 575 Armenians, inhabitants of the village of Arzap, have petitioned the Russian metropolitan at Erivan for admission to the Greek church, to be accompanied by the protection of the Russian consulate. The Turkish authorities are vigilantly on the outlook to suppress all similar petitions from other districts.

Belgium is recruiting hundreds of Sudanese natives for the Congo State.

To cure Biliousness, Sick Headache, Constipation, Malaria, Liver Complaints, take the safe and certain remedy, SMITH'S

BILE BEANS

Use the SMALL SIZE (40 little beans to the bottle). They are the most convenient; suit all ages. Price of either size, 25 cents per bottle.

KISSING at 7, 17, 70; Photo-gravure, panel size of this picture for 4 cents (coppers or stamps).

J. F. SMITH & CO.,
Makers of "Bile Beans," St. Louis, Mo.

10,000

Another ten thousand edition of the tract,

KILLED, AND NO INQUEST.

This is a large 4-page tract at 30 cents per pound, 15 cents for half pound, and 10 cents for a third of a pound. It is an illustrated account of the death of Rev. J. W. Johnston, while being initiated by the officers of Huntington Lodge, W. Va., in January of this year. Sent postpaid at the above price. Address,

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
221 W. Madison St Chicago

Its superior excellence proven in millions of homes for more than a quarter of a century. It is used by the United States Government. Endorsed by the heads of the Great Universities as the Strongest, Purest and most Healthful. Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder does not contain Ammonia, Lime, or Alum. Sold only in Cans. PRICE BAKING POWDER CO.
NEW YORK. CHICAGO. ST. LOUIS.

$75.00 to $250.00 A MONTH can be made working for us. Persons preferred who can furnish a horse and give their whole time to the business. Spare moments may be profitably employed also. A few vacancies in towns and cities. B. F. JOHNSON & CO., 1009 Main Street, Richmond, Va.

Will be found invaluable for Cholera Infantum and all Summer Complaints, children or adults. Its non-medicine but will be retained & sustain life when everything else fails. 4 sizes 35 cts. up.

Our High Grade List and Bargain Book sent to any address on receipt of a 2-c stamp.

LORD & THOMAS,
NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING
45 RANDOLPH STREET,
CHICAGO.

WHEATON COLLEGE.

WHEATON, ILL.
FALL TERM BEGINS TUESDAY,
SEPTEMBER 16TH.

A College for Men and Women.

For Catalogue address with stamp,
C. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

HARTSVILLE COLLEGE,

HARTSVILLE, INDIANA.

E. G. PAINE, A. M., PRESIDENT.

Classical, Scientific and Normal courses. Preparatory school, Art, Music and Business departments. Actively Christian and reformatory influences. No saloons. Romantic and healthful region. Living as cheap as it can be made anywhere.

PATENTS

Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees.

Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington.

Send model, drawing or photo., with description. We advise, if patentable or not, free of charge. Our fee not due till patent is secured.

A Pamphlet, "How to Obtain Patents," with names of actual clients in your State, county, or town, sent free. Address,

C. A. SNOW & CO.

Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

THE CHRISTIAN CONFERENCE

—ON THE—

Secret Lodge System.

The Proceedings of the late Christian Conference, containing the addresses of Joseph Cook, Drs. Goodwin, Wallace, Mc Dill, Col. Clarke and others, is now ready in a handsome pamphlet of 130 pages. It is one of the very best documents ever issued on the lodge question. The price was advertised at 15 cents, but the actual cost of publication was 20 cents, and of mailing 5 cents, making total cost 25 cents.

It will, however, be sent postpaid for 15 cents.

Only those who are able and willing need send more.

THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
W. I. Phillips, Treas.,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XXII., No. 47.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, AUGUST 7, 1890.

WHOLE No. 1,058.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.

Address all letters for publication to EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, CHICAGO. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Address all business letters to the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN. Send all business letters relating to the paper to THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE. Make all drafts and money orders payable to the Treasurer, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address on Cynosure list always give the former address.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill., as Second Class Matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:	CORRESPONDENCE:
Notes and Comments..... 1	Notes of Summer Travel; School house Burning; The Sabbath and Lake Pepin Disaster; Masonic Foreigners; Pith and Point..... 5,6
The Church versus the Lodge..... 8	THE N. C. A..... 7
Dr. Goodwin's Speech..... 8	From the Corresponding Secretary..... 9
The Lodge Load on the Back of Labor..... 8	WASHINGTON LETTER..... 9
CONTRIBUTIONS:	NEW ENGLAND LETTER..... 9
Secret Societies and the Negro Question..... 1	THE HOME..... 10
True Obedience the Test of Fellowship..... 2	TEMPERANCE..... 11
SELECTED:	BIBLE LESSON..... 12
A Chinese Secret Society..... 3	RELIGIOUS NEWS..... 12
REFORM NEWS:	Educational Notes..... 12
The News from Boston; Good Work in Iowa; Sturdy Pennsylvanians..... 4	LODGE NOTES..... 13
LITERATURE..... 6	NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 13
Secret Societies Condemned..... 7	HOME AND HEALTH..... 14
Good Words..... 7	FARM NOTES..... 15
	BUSINESS..... 16
	DONATIONS..... 16

"Murder will out." The efforts of the liquor dealers to fasten the deadly saloon upon us forever are criminal and morally akin to murder. Their iniquitous dealing in the last general election is continually being exposed. The last note of this kind is that John M. Atherton, ex-President of the Liquor Dealer's Protective Association, stated at Louisville Friday that a coalition of the Republican managers and brewers of New York caused the defeat of Cleveland in the last Presidential election.

The Congregational press form two spans of an arch across the country. At Boston, Chicago and San Francisco are the piers, and they rest on the Congregationalist, the Advance and the Pacific. These three influential papers have begun a discussion of the lodge, by editorial or by the admission of articles to their columns, which God in his providence will not, we pray, allow them to close until righteousness and truth, in so far as they are concerned, shall be established against this great evil.

A writer in the August Century, once prisoner in Andersonville, tells the pitiful story of official murder by starvation in that death-pen. It would seem that men in their desperate condition would be secure from the temptations of secretism. But we are told that two hundred men bound themselves together by oaths, formed a banditti organization and began a work of violence and plunder that was not stopped until the confederate officers took part in breaking it up. A secret society is at its legitimate work when it is the shelter for brigands.

We have said what we cared to for the present about the Odd-fellow meetings in Chicago this week. Now other papers may speak. Says the Inter Ocean in its Sunday edition: "For a full week beginning with to-day, Chicago will be in possession of an army of Odd-fellows. To-day they will begin to arrive from all directions, and by Tuesday night, it is confidently believed by the heads of the order here, there will be not less than 200,000 Odd-fellows in the city." Says the News of Monday: "In August many of the churches close their doors, and Satan doubles his working force. . . . The saloons are not taking any vacation this year. There are 4,860 of them in Chicago. . . . Many of the down-town saloons are decorated in honor of the Odd-fellow's cantonment, and many of them have put on extra men. . . . This is the harvest time and the golden opportunity of the saloon-man." These remarks bear their own comment.

Unsuccessful revolution is murder. The inglorious failure of the uprising in the Argentine Republic after the slaughter of many lives, has a criminal look. After seizing the fleet, bombarding the city of Buenos Ayers and driving the government forces to an extremity, the rebellion suddenly collapsed. And the only reason given is that the powder gave out. Patriots inspired by principle get along without powder. The rising of the populace is said to be because of the extravagance of the government which is a confederation of provinces.

The Freemasonry of China is strikingly like that which produces moral wastes in America. The account of the Chinese order given in the last Missionary Review should not escape our readers. They may read it on another page. Let it be marked that the "Yee Hing" is considered Freemasonry in China; that the oath with a death penalty binds to secrecy and obedience; that the domestic relations formed by the Creator are supplanted; and that the initiation is called the "new birth." These fundamental characteristics of the two orders seal their kinship. The Chinese are less controlled by popular opinion and have a more literal interpretation of their oaths than Masons since Morgan's day. But aside from this, it is not easy to say why one should be preferred to the other.

The Chicago brewers have heard of the "Original Package" decision and are moving to take advantage of it, since Congress is so slow to prevent them. There are said to be eight leading Western breweries having agencies here. They have agreed to jointly test the validity of the city ordinance requiring a $500 license fee. They propose also to overturn the license business generally in every quarter where they have agencies. They will thus save hundreds of thousands of dollars if they win. We are willing they should get the better in such a fight. The license fee virtually buys them a partnership with the public to poison men and women, ruin homes and damn souls. The delays of Congress will make a long indictment against the nation at God's bar. The House has passed a bill which is not at all likely to get any further. In the endeavor to avoid the saloon they have gone too far and opened other serious questions. The first Senate bill, dealing with the liquor business alone in a manly way, will probably be at last adopted.

Rev. Samuel L. Griess was called to the Green Lawn Presbyterian church of Long Island about one year ago. Recently he preached a series of sermons against the indulgence in worldly pleasures by Christians. Many of the younger members of the church are in the habit of attending dancing parties and the theaters. Recently the ladies of the church gave a lawn party, and a number of the men and women engaged in a dance in a barn near by. Music was furnished by members of the church choir. The pastor was on the grounds with his wife, and when the dance began they went home. This offended many of the members and started a heated discussion. The next Sunday was the day for the sacrament, and as the pastor was about to administer it the elders of the church walked to the table and unceremoniously took away the broken bread and wine. Mr. Griess at once resigned his pastorate when he saw a majority were against him. It should be said that there are many in the church who stand by the principles of their faithful pastor.

The special message of President Harrison on the lottery system is highly appropriate. It is liable to a single criticism. It should have come six months sooner, when Congress had time to act. Its moral influence will not be lost. It is said that since public attention has been drawn to the iniquities of the lottery system, during the last six months, the sale of tickets has fallen off one-half. All but the most ignorant must see that no company could afford to pay $1,250,000 a year for the privilege of doing an honest business. But the message raises another question. If Congress can prohibit the mails and the express companies from carrying lottery advertisements and correspondence, it has an equal right to exclude the advertisements of liquor dealers from the mails, and to prohibit the transportation of liquors from one State to another. The right to do this is provided for under the power to regulate commerce between the several States. In 1850 Congress forbade the bringing of slaves into the District of Columbia for sale, and prohibited the coast-wise trade in slaves. But if lotteries are pernicious and their tickets ought not to be regarded as an article of legitimate commerce, much more ought the traffic in liquors to be suppressed. Cruel and inhuman as was the traffic in slaves, it was by no means so destructive to life and happiness as the traffic in strong drink. If we are to have an Inter-State Commerce law, let it exclude all illegitimate articles of commerce.

Bro. Davidson of New Orleans writes after a brief trip as far as Baton Rouge that he finds little interest in the N. C. A. work, which he attributes to the fact that no regular agency has been at work for our reform for a year or more past. That is undoubtedly the true reason. The lodge agents are perpetually active and there is no counteracting influence. Bro. Davidson is experiencing much trial because of lodge opposition in his own church, and desires the prayers and material aid of friends.

SECRET SOCIETIES AND THE NEGRO QUESTION.

BY REV. JOHN V. POTTS.

When men go into secret organizations to get the advantage of each other, then the case becomes desperate; reasoning is at an end; fraud and force and murder are the results. If the people of the United States will drop ALL secret societies, and publicly deliberate on the various questions that agitate society, we will the sooner come to a proper solution of every one of them.

Crime naturally seeks darkness. Truth is always to a disadvantage under cover. Truth wants the light. Truth courts investigation. An honest man is always put to a disadvantage in a secret organization. He compromises himself when he joins such a society. Unscrupulous men push to the front. The honest man becomes corrupted or is left behind.

These reflections have been induced by reading in the Mail and Express of New York an article on "The Negro Question," by William C. Hill, a New England man, a graduate of Princeton College, and for fifteen years a cotton merchant in New Orleans. He is now in New York city, and writes thus:

The methods of persecution employed to deter those who advocated the cause of the Negro, or who declared their allegiance to the Republican party, are without a parallel in modern history.

The system began to take form in the shape of secret organizations, the members of which were generally of the middle class, men whose passions were easily aroused and who were not scrupulous in following the directions of their chiefs.

The infamous Ku-Klux-Klan was the pioneer organization of this nature. The object of these societies was to accomplish by force what other methods had failed to effect. First, the social relations were assailed. Wives were advised to leave their husbands, and children their parents, if they tolerated Republican associations. Then followed total social ostracism, and business proscription. This ostracism extended even to the tradesmen who served the suspected people, and the physicians who attended their families. A case in point is that of a physician in Richmond, Va., whose practice was ruined, because he continued to attend the family of a Republican leader and one time Congressman. Social eminence was no protection to a man. He was marked, and so were his children, and no quality of mind or character could save him. When these means failed, whipping and maiming were resorted to, and finally murder.

An instance of attempted assassination will show with what care their plains were laid: A Republican of Georgia was assaulted by a political heeler while leaving the court-house in Augusta. His life was saved by a wire sewn around the rim of his hat. His assailant was liberated on the ground that under the laws of Georgia no charge of intent to kill could hold unless the assault was made with a weapon especially designed to take life. The would-be murderer had anticipated this plea by arming himself with a policeman's billy.

Who knows the extent of these Southern secret organizations? Mr. Hill, though his object is not to attack such organizations, yet incidentally shows to what dangerous uses they may be and are easily subverted, or applied. It is evidently the duty of every American citizen to persistently stand aloof from every form of secret society.

TRUE OBEDIENCE THE TEST OF DISCIPLESHIP.

BY REV. J. M. FOSTER.

The passage, "Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you" (John 15:14), presents the relation that exists between Christ and his people. "Ye are my friends;" and the evidence that this relation exists, "if ye do whatsoever I command you." This is beautifully illustrated in the beginning of this chapter by a parable in which Christ likens himself to a vine, believers to the branches, and their obedience to the fruits. Fruitfulness is an evidence of our being in Christ. "As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself except it abide in the vine, no more can ye except ye abide in me."

This language plainly implies that our interest in Christ is to be ascertained, not so much by our profession as by our works. "Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you." It is not enough to be able to repeat the commandments and the various formula of belief, but we must work. "Be ye doers of the word and not hearers only, deceiving your own selves." There are many who deceive themselves. They come to God's house, they sit as the people sit and hear as the people hear, but their hearts are far from God. They use religion as a coat, to be worn on Sabbath, and thrown off during the week. They are "dissemblers," with whom David said, "I will not go." Their conduct is peculiarly insulting to the Master who said, "By their fruits my friends are known. Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven." Obedience proves discipleship. "He that hath my commandments and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me." The believer is ever solicitous about his duty. His prayer is, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" And when that is ascertained he does it with his might. "Ye are my friends—ye prove yourselves my friends—if ye do whatsoever I command you."

True obedience is the test of discipleship.

1. Because it proceeds from a heart filled with the love of Christ. Miss Willard uses this illustration. Load a cannon, drive in the pointed shot and apply the lighted match, and the projectile will go 600 feet in three seconds. But the flash of light will go 600,000 miles in that time. The first is the symbol of force, the second is the symbol of love. Napoleon founded an empire on force and it fell. Christ founded his kingdom on love and it is sweeping the world. The Savior said: "If ye love me keep my commandments." "And this is love that we walk according to his commandments." There can be no such thing as true obedience without love. Wanting in this our works are like a body without a soul. Love is to the believer's works what the sap of the vine is to the grapes. "Love is the fulfilling of the law." There may be the form without the life. The young ruler who came running to Jesus and inquiring what good thing he might do to inherit eternal life, "had kept the whole law from his youth up." Christ looked into his heart and saw selfishness and covetousness, instead of love. "One thing thou lackest. Go sell all that thou hast and give to the poor and come, follow me." This discovered the true character—"He went away sorrowful, for he had great possession." Virtue may be wholly selfish and superficial. A man may do a great many things that are good in themselves, and which result in good to himself and others, and he may avoid other things that are sinful in their nature and pernicious in their results, and yet in his heart is not found the love that actuates the believer in the performance of the same duties. He may be temperate because his means, his circumstances or his health will not permit him to lead a life of rioting and drunkenness. He may be humane because he is naturally tender hearted. He may be charitable from ostentation, and just from the dread of detection and punishment. He may curb his passions, submit to certain fleshly mortifications and abstain from certain criminal gratifications not from the fear of God, but of man. He may attend regularly upon the ordinances from the force of habit or because his circumstances render it unpleasant to stay away. He may publicly profess religion to gratify his friends or to further his worldly interests. He may pray like the Pharisees to be seen of men or to gratify a certain peculiar vanity such as possessed Balaam when he uttered his beautiful prophecy concerning Israel, contrary to the will of Balak. He may bewail the decline of vital religion, proclaim loudly against the degeneracy of the times and be ready to forward any movement that will tend to its revival at home or its introduction abroad, from no other motive than to gratify his vain ambition for preferment.

Such obedience cannot be acceptable to God. Two apples may present the same appearance, and yet one be palatable while the other is a nauseous crab. The Pharisee and publican prayed. Both uttered the truth. But the first prayer came from a heart full of pride; the second from a penitent heart. The believer's obedience comes from a heart filled with the love of Christ. "The love of Christ constraineth him." The love of Christ is a flame in his soul burning higher and higher. Nothing can separate him from the love of Christ. His faith, by which he is united to Christ and by which he overcomes the world, "works by love." "He is rooted and grounded in love." Telegraph poles are grounded, but not rooted. Many professing Christians are solid in their convictions of truth, but have no life. Botanists know that certain plants throw their roots out in the air. They are rooted, but not grounded. Some professing Christians have life but no stability. The believer is "rooted and grounded in love." "My heart is fixed."

2. Because it has respect to the whole law of Christ.

David was a man after God's own heart, because with his whole heart he endeavored to keep all God's commandments. It is recorded of Jonah that "he turned to the Lord with all his heart according to all the law of Moses." Chamock said: "Our obedience is quite out of tune if we neglect any one command." If you remove a single cog from a watch you ruin it as a time-keeper. "Whosoever shall keep the whole law and yet offend in one point he is guilty of all." It is here as in nature's chain, whether you break the tenth or the ten-thousandth link, you break the chain alike. You would have all your sins forgiven, and will you not keep all God's commands? Christ obeyed all his Father's commandments for us, and shall we not obey all Christ's commands? If you have a journey of ten miles to, go can you accomplish it by going only nine? "Whatsoever I command you." This distinguishes true obedience from the false.

On every hand we meet those who keep some precepts and neglect others. Here is one who discovers great philanthropy. He invites the wanderer to his gates, distributes his bread to the widow and fatherless, and endows a benevolent institution. He makes his employes sharers in the profits of his business so that a strike is impossible. But God is not in all his thoughts. He regards the Sabbath as a burden. He avoids God's house and fellowship with his people. He has no relish for the Bible. It finds him and his inmost self in such a way that he cannot endure. That man is not a disciple of Christ. For while we are to love our neighbor as ourselves, we are to love God supremely, which is the first and great commandment.

How often we meet those who are scrupulously exact in performing some duties and neglect others equally important, who avoid certain sins while practicing others no less deserving of execration. One would not take the Sunday newspaper, but he can be president of and a stockholder in a Sabbath-breaking road. Another would scorn to use profane oaths. But he takes the soul-polluting oaths of the lodge. He would be shocked if asked to deny Christ, and yet is a member of the Christless lodge. I passed a group of men, so drunk that their thick tongues could scarcely articulate the words they uttered. And yet one was thanking the Lord he had never stolen; another that he had never sworn profanely; and a third that, like Washington, he had never told a lie.

Such obedience will not stand the test: "Cursed is everyone that continueth not in all things found written in the law to do them." Our obedience must be entire. "Oh, that my ways were directed to keep thy statutes, then shall I not be ashamed when I have respect unto all thy commandments." Allot to every duty its proper place and due share of attention. Never presume to compensate for the neglect of social and relative virtues by personal piety or vice versa. Strive to have consciences void of offense toward God and toward men. Not that you can be perfect, but you can strive after perfection. "And if there be first a willing mind, it is accepted according to that a man hath and not according to that he hath not." Strive to be blameless and harmless, the sons of God without rebuke in the midst of a crooked and perverse nation where you dwell, that you may rejoice in the day of the Lord Jesus that you have not run in vain, neither labored in vain.

3. Because its object is the glory of Christ.

Porsenna, the king of Clusium in Etruria, laid siege to Rome at the instigation of Tarquin the Proud, who had been expelled from the City of Seven Hills. This caused great suffering within the walls. Three hundred of the noblest Roman youths swore that they would slay him at the peril of their lives. The lot fell on C. Marcius. He entered the Etruscan camp in disguise. Not knowing Porsenna, he slew his secretary instead. He was at once seized. Approaching a red-hot altar he laid his arm upon it until it was consumed. Then turning to the king he said: "Rome is full of men ready for such sacrifice. This terrified the king and he made peace. The power of consecration. Archbishop Cranmer, when brought to the stake, resolved that the hand that had signed his recantation should perish first, and so he held it in the flames until it fell from his body. He did this for Christ's sake. The church is full of men ready for such a sacrifice. General Fisk, as a boy sixteen years old conducting the underground railroad, as a colonel leading his regiment, as a statesman leading the Prohibition army, as the first layman in the M. E. church, and as a husband and father presiding at his Seabright home, had for his watchword: "I believe more than I know."

"Thine are we, David," consecration to Christ's person, "and on thy side, thou son of Jesse," consecration to Christ's cause. "For me to live is Christ;" all that I am, all that I have and all that I can be, are Christ's. He keeps himself unspotted from the world. Denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, he lives soberly, righteously and godly, because "Christ is formed in his heart the hope of glory." As he knows no motive but the love of Christ, and no rule but the law of Christ, so he recognizes no object in life but the glory of Christ.

Cincinnati, O.

An incident told by Dr. Edward W. Hitchcock is suggestive to summer travelers. While he was minister of the American Chapel in Paris, General Grant was invited by the President of the Republic of France to occupy the grand stand at "La Grand Prix," the great day of the races, which comes on Sunday. Such an invitation from the chief magistrate of a great nation is an honor which is almost a command. But General Grant, replying in a note to the President, said in substance, "It is not in accordance with the custom of my countrymen, or with the spirit of my religion, to spend Sunday in this way. I therefore beg that you will permit me to decline the honor." Instead of accepting, he attended public worship at the American Chapel."

A CHINESE SECRET SOCIETY AND ITS INFLUENCE ON EVANGELISTIC WORK.

[J. Stewart Happer, New York, in the Missionary Review.]

Evangelistic work among the Chinese in America has justly been characterized by those acquainted with it as being one branch of Christian work which has more discouragements and fewer visible results than almost any other mission effort which the church is now engaged in. In a paper in the Review last year, the reasons for this statement were very fully considered, but for lack of space no mention was made of a force at work among the Chinese, which is, perhaps, the greatest obstacle to the Christianizing of the heathen in our midst; and this opposition is all the more dangerous because of the secrecy of its nature, the fear in which it is held, and the impossibility of obtaining definite proof as to its real character, scope and influence. The Yee Hing, a Chinese secret society which flourishes in this country, with lodges in almost all the large cities, has come to be regarded by those who know the Chinese, and especially by us who are able to understand their language, as a most potent force for evil, and a powerful antagonist to all that is good.

Our information in regard to this organized body is still limited; for though we see the results of its methods, and oftentimes meet with victims who have suffered at its hands, it is hard to get at the facts when superstition, fear, and the policy of self-preservation are combined to conceal the truth. It has been my lot to come in contact and in open conflict with this society at various times during the past five years, and what I have learned of its nature may be of use in enabling others to recognize this great enemy to the work which we are trying to do for the Chinese in the midst of us.

The original of the Yee Hing Society is known in China as the White Lily, or Triad Society. It was at first a band of native Chinese, united by the most sacred and binding ties in an effort to restore the native dynasty and overthrow the Manchu rule. Its existence was, prior to the rebellion, headed by Hung Siu Tsuen, the semi-Christian fanatic, and, though his object was the same as theirs, he was so opposed to their practices that they left him and sided with the imperialists. So stringent are the existing laws against the society in China, that it is sure death for a man to belong to it; hence we hear very little of it in China itself. Of this parent society, Dr. Williams, in his "Middle Kingdom," says, "The Triad Society is comparatively peaceful throughout China proper in overt acts . . . but in Siam, Singapore, Malacca and the Archipelago, it has become a powerful body, and great cruelties are committed on those who refuse to join." This statement of his is borne out by the fact that in these different places its evil character and practices are so well recognized that laws have been passed against membership in it similar to the laws in China, though the punishment is not so severe.

When the Chinese came to this country in great numbers the society was brought with them, and, owing to the degree of freedom found here, it has flourished and spread all over the land. Membership in the society is openly admitted, and its character is explained to the newspaper reporter or the Sabbath-school teacher by the statement, "It is just like the Freemasons." Whether there are Freemasons in China or not, is a question for sinologists to decide, but there is no more resemblance between the Freemasons and the Yee Hing Society in this country than there is between the Grand Army of the Republic and the anarchist agitators. This can be proved by its form of initiation and by its acts.

From the ritual, which for a time was in my possession, I gained the following account of what it requires of its members: The applicant for membership is sworn to secrecy, taking a solemn oath by which he imprecates death to himself if he ever divulges the secrets or refuses to obey the orders of the society. Before going through the binding rite of initiation he is required to run the gauntlet of the members present, who, if they have any old grudge against him, are supposed to take it out in striking or beating him as he passes between the two lines. After this no one is supposed to remember any past offenses. The initiate then takes an oath to lay aside all obligation to "father or mother, wife or children;" he will consider the demands of the society supreme, even if he be called upon to commit crime. A ceremony called being "born again" is then gone through with, and as a final seal upon the whole initiation each man pricks his finger until the blood flows, the different drops are collected in a basin of water, and each member takes a sip from the mixture, thus symbolizing their close union as a sworn band of brothers. The leader is called "A-ma" (mother.) It is on account of this giving up of the claims of filial duty that the society is so abhorred by the better class of Chinese. In one village in the Canton province, the elders passed a law that any member of their clan who should thus give up his allegiance to his parents should be buried alive if the facts were discovered. It is said that one man was thus buried, his own parents assisting and justifying their course by saying that he might as well be dead in fact as in effect. It is needless to add that few members of the society are gained from the emigrants from that village, so great was the deterrent effect of this punishment.

The society has long since lost sight of its original purpose—the overthrow of the Manchu dynasty—and now it uses the power it has for the personal advantage of its members. Skilled in the tricks of the law, unlimited in their ability to manufacture testimony and suborn perjury, they stop at nothing to effect their aims or to punish those who withstand their impositions. In the ranks of its members are to be found competent interpreters, whose knowledge of our language enables them to be perverters of testimony as well. From the ignorant laundrymen who do not belong to the society the society demands money for protection, and they find it cheaper to pay than to resist. There are, doubtless, many of its members who have joined under a misconception of its character, for they represent themselves to be a co-operative benevolent society, whose aim is to befriend and care for the Chinese; but when a man has once joined, fear of the consequences prevents his leaving. If superstitious he dreads the breaking of his oath, if not he fears the vengeance of the members, who stop not at murder.

Many instances might be given to prove the above assertions. The most signal exposure of the workings of the society was made in a celebrated case at St. Louis in 1885. The Chu clan, who are very powerful in this country, had dared to oppose the Yee Hing Society. A charge was made against six of their members which involved the life of the accused. For seven weeks the opposing factions fought daily in the courts. Testimony was adduced which proved that members of the society in New York had admitted in their meeting that the charge was false, but the men must be punished for daring to oppose the Yee Hing. The perfect manner in which witnesses were instructed, and their absolute disregard for truth, were well shown at this trial. A dramatic scene was enacted one day, when one of the coolest witnesses was suddenly shown the ritual of the society, which he supposed was safe in New York, and was asked its meaning. So great was his dread of the book, which private members are not allowed to see, that he shook and trembled, and refused to read it. Yet a week afterwards he calmly swore that he knew nothing about such a book, and had never seen it! By great exertions the accused men were finally saved from the unjust charge, and a most signal victory was obtained against this secret, powerful, Proteus-like enemy.

The influence of this society, while in many instances seemingly favorable to Christianity, is in reality both actively and passively opposed to anything that is good or Christian. In many of the schools for the Chinese we find a majority of the members are from the Yee Hing Society. Knowing the advantage that a knowledge of the language gives them, they are more anxious to learn than are their duller companions. Having cut adrift from the teachings of Confucius, in regard to filial duties at least, they are more progressive and anxious to become acquainted with our manners and laws. At the same time, they are usually the proprietors or managers of the opium joints and gambling dens, which are the greatest objections to the Chinese living among us, and from the very nature of their ties it is impossible for them to become Christians as long as they consider their oaths binding. Many of them have made a profession of Christianity, but it cannot be for the truth's sake, but because they appreciate the advantages of the moral support they receive from hood-winked teachers and zealous pastors.

Not only are the members of this society unpromising objects for Christian effort, but they prevent other Chinese from coming to the schools. If the object of their dislike is not sensitive and still insists upon coming, they will even force him to leave the city by a series of persecutions. At one time, in a school of which I was superintendent, such a persecution was commenced by means of a false charge in a court of law. One of their own members came to me and confessed that the charge was false but he would have to swear to the lie, as he dared not disobey his superior. By my intervention their designs were frustrated, though for a time the enmity of my scholars who were members of the Yee Hing took the form of violent maledictions against me and absence from school. It is said—and there seems to be good ground for the statement—that there is a sub-order of the society, composed of "hatchet men," who will commit murder at the command of the officers of the society. An attempt, at least, at personal violence was made in this city, at the very doors of the Tombs Police Court, when a Christian Chinaman was assaulted after a case was tried where he had successfully testified against some members of this society who were arrested for gambling. For months a reward was offered for the heads of two Christian Chinese, and I have reason to believe that my own life was in danger for a time, if wishes could have effected my death.

This society and its influence is not confined to this country alone. In a report of the work among the Chinese in the Hawaiian Islands for 1887, I find the following paragraph: "Another most injurious influence, and one of the most hostile to the spread of Christianity, is the prevalence of a strongly organized secret society which extends all over the group (of islands). While in China it is at the risk of life that a man joins it; here it exists and flourishes in the most unblushing manner. It is a prolific source of evil among the Chinese, and is calculated to harden them against any good influences which otherwise might be brought to bear upon them. Our Christian converts are often called upon to suffer its persecution, and fear of its power is calculated to deter others from joining our ranks."

Much more might be said in regard to this evil agency, but enough has been said, I think, to expose the enemy, and therein consists the remedy for the evil. An open foe is more easily defeated than a secret one, and when the secret society masquerades as a benevolent organization, when its members are equally prominent in the Sabbath-school, and, more secretly, in the gambling house and lodge room, then it is that the most harm is done. Let all who work among the Chinese look carefully into the motives of those who wish to profess Christianity, and find out all they can in regard to them. We do not wish to deery results, but better one genuine convert than hundreds who join from wrong motives. It is true of this field as of every other, that the wheat and the tares must grow together till the Judgment Day, lest violence be done to the wheat; but as far as human judgment can decide, it seems impossible for a Chinaman to serve God and the Yee Hing Society.

I impeach intemperance; and I accuse it of the murder of millions of souls.—Dr. Guthrie.

So do hundreds who go right off and vote for men who they know will use their influence to deepen and widen the streams of intemperance. What is the use of impeaching intemperance and accusing it of murder if you then go and sell it a license to make drunkards and commit murder? The rumseller and the man who votes to license him are in one boat, and "Murder" is written on the bows.—Christian Inquirer.

REFORM NEWS.

THE NEWS FROM BOSTON.

Lodge meeting and church meeting—Congregationalists awaking—Beautiful Hoyt's Grove will entertain another conference Aug. 23d—A blind man—The M. E. holiness leader on the lodge—A God-sent witness—Dr. Quint yet boasting of his shame.

BOSTON, Mass., July 30, 1890.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—The heat here is extremely oppressive to-day, and everybody seeks the shady side for protection. The city and parks are being put in perfect order to welcome the G. A. R. and their hundreds of thousands of hoped-for attendants, Aug. 12. A near neighbor of mine who was early instructed in the religious faith according to Methodism, has gone all the way to Chicago to attend the national encampment of Odd-fellows, but says he seldom finds time to attend church at home. "Where the treasure is there will the heart be also," and this man persistently exalts his lodge above the church of Christ, and so it is perfectly consistent to go a thousand miles to attend its meetings, when there is an orthodox church within a hundred feet of his own door.

The Congregationalist of the 24th inst. has a column editorial on "The Church versus the Lodge." It is a note of warning, and I hope a precursor of more to follow in even bolder utterances. The Vermont Congregationalist brethren have this question under discussion, and let us hope and pray that the old-time zeal for God and his church may return to the "Green Mountain" State before the lodge has effaced from its statutes and records the testimony of the fathers against the whole confederacy of secret orders. The omens are propitious and the day of warm and general discussion is rapidly approaching.

We had two profitable services at Hoyt's Grove on Sabbath last with a good attendance for that country region. The grove and lake have lost none of their native charms since the convention last year, nor have those in charge gone one step backward on their principles, though often warned and advised to "keep quiet" on the lodge evil. Mrs. Stoddard with Mrs. Rev. John M. Hood (U. P. pastor in this city) with their family have spent three weeks in this quiet retreat, and speak in highest terms in its praise. Others from the city are finding out and appreciating this place of seclusion and rest for the weary. A company of nine left the city yesterday and they will be followed by eight more soon, to be the guests of brother and sister Hoyt for a couple of weeks. Brother and sister Hoyt offer their grounds and needful accommodations for a reform camp-meeting and it is proposed to accept their generous terms, beginning Aug. 23d. Due notice will be given by authority with details soon; meantime let all who believe in discussing the living questions of to-day in a Christian spirit, specifying the sins and systems of iniquity and fraud arraigned by name, note the date, Aug. 23d, and plan to attend.

Saturday last a clerical-looking gentleman sat near me on the cars reading "Ecclesiastes." I handed him a copy of the Cynosure, remarking, "There is something treating upon the subject you seem interested in." He thanked me and began to scan the paper, with frequent glances across the aisle where I sat. Lighting upon the title of tract No. 45, "Ought a seceding Mason to keep his lodge oath?" he handed me the paper saying, "That's enough! any man that will break a solemn oath is a perjurer." I sought to show him his error, but my efforts were unavailing.

Finally I said, "Do you stigmatize the 'Father of his country' as a reprobate because he broke his oath to the British Government?"

His reply was, "I don't want to talk to you," and returning what tracts I had given him he utterly refused to converse further on that subject. Others, however, accepted tracts, which it is hoped may be read with profit.

At Douglas holiness camp-meeting I was not permitted to speak from the platform as I requested, but was treated with the utmost courtesy. I approached Bro. McDonald at the first opportunity, and asked for a hearing on the platform and permission to distribute tracts. "You may distribute as much literature as you like," was the prompt reply, "and I will bring the matter of an address on the subject before our committee."

At the next gathering he defined the limits of their work to be holiness of heart, to the exclusion of all side or minor questions. After speaking of prohibition, second and third party advocates, he said, "One brother wants to speak on secret societies. I am in full accord with his views and heartily sympathize with the efforts to suppress the secret orders; but we must not allow ourselves to be diverted from the one central work of heart purity," etc.

He afterwards said to me in private conversation, "I once joined some of these secret orders, but I have no sympathy or fellowship for them now and have not had for many years."

I found many friends and might relate many incidents of interest, but one must suffice. I was discussing the orders with a prominent W. C. T. U. worker, and a group of some forty or more gathered to listen. She was entirely fair and evidently seeking the truth. "I joined," said she, "some of the secret temperance orders, but finding they hampered me in my work I left them. My father was a godly man and a Mason. You say you have never been a Mason, and know only from what others tell you. How can you expect me to discredit my father's testimony on that of a stranger who has no personal knowledge?"

I referred to Finney and others, but was met again with, "That is second-handed testimony," etc.; "perhaps if I had met those men I might have been convinced."

I asked, "If a person whom you knew and whom you trusted should say, I have been there and know by personal experience that these things are so, would you believe him?" She admitted that it would be hard to deny such a statement. Just at this juncture a gentleman stepped forward with his Bible and hymn-book in hand, and said, "Sister, I have been there and know that what this brother says is true; but God has saved me and I am free. Glory be to his holy name." God had his witness ready, and truth came out victorious.

I learned later that this timely witness was Rev. C. E. Sellew, of East Longmeadow, Conn., and that he would gladly attend the meeting at Hoyt's Grove if simply his expenses were paid.

An incident nearer home as reported to me must close this article. It was at the last meeting of the Congregationalist ministers in Boston before summer vacation. Bro. Wittemore of Lawrence asked the privilege of making a brief statement and request, which was granted. He briefly related how he had been betrayed by Masonic lawyers in efforts to secure justice to the city in a large amount, and how the city and himself had been robbed through Masonic scoundrelism, and that he intended to visit Governor Brackett and ask for the interposition of executive authority in a matter of a quarter of a million dollars or more. He asked the ministers to pray for him and that the city might be rescued from the grasp of secret conspirators. Dr. A. H. Quint was presiding, and stepping to the front of the platform said, "I belong to the Masons and other secret orders, and am proud of it!" Bro. —, will you pray." The brother responded in a fervent petition for pastors and people during vacation, but no word of supplication for the city or the brother who had made the reasonable request.

J. P. STODDARD.

GOOD WORK IN IOWA FOR THE BUSY SEASON.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Since my last writing I preached at Hoover's Church, between Quasqueton and Walker, Buchanan Co., Iowa. I applied the truth of the Gospel to the secret lodge system and showed the antagonism to that Gospel, —the one a plan of salvation by grace through faith in the ever-living Mediator and the blood of atonement that he hath made, and the other an organized system of pharisaical self-righteousness.

The church here was built by one man, Charles Hoover, Sr., who is a reader of the Cynosure and a member of the Wesleyan Methodist church. For some time the church was his individual property. But lately he has deeded it to the denomination with which he is connected.

In the evening I preached at Walker, in the Wesleyan Methodist church, of which the Rev. Geo. Fry is pastor. From Walker I returned to Cedar Rapids, and then went to Traer, in Tama county, and called upon Rev. Mr. Henderson. The circumstances not being favorable for a public meeting, I went on to Grundy Center, the county seat of Grundy county. I conferred with some of the friends there, and concluded to hold a public meeting. The Orchestra Hall, the largest audience room in the city, was rented and bills of the meeting printed, announcing that I would lecture Sabbath at 3 P. M., July 27, on the moral and religious character of Freemasonry and kindred orders.

After I had spoken here a year ago a clergyman from Marshalltown, a 33-degree Mason, came and confirmed his Masonic brethren in their faith. The large hall was not filled but a lawyer who was present thought the congregation would fill any of the churches of the city. As the day was very hot, and our meeting came in between the morning services and a 5 P. M. union service of the churches in the park, we could not but consider it a decided success.

Last year one of the city pastors followed my lecture with remarks decidedly antagonizing my work, and severely censuring me for being engaged in it. This year all was quiet and lovely. One Mason was said to turn pale and look troubled when one of the audience, who is now a member of the M. E. church, remarked after the meeting that he was well pleased with the lecture, and he believed every word said was true.

The reverend gentlemen from Marshalltown, who followed me last year, is reported to have said that Masonry is not a religious institution, but a good moral institution. It is so awkward for a man to assume to be a Christian, while he is still a votary of some false religion, that the temptation to deny the religious character of Freemasonry is very strong on the minds of Masonic ministers and members of the churches. No one thinks of being a pagan idolater or Mohammedan, and a Christian at the same time. Is a Christless system of false worship called Freemasonry less offensive to God than are other systems of false religion?

I visited each of the pastors and had a friendly conference with them. The pastor of the Methodist church is not a lodge man. He has not studied the subject very thoroughly, but he is satisfied that he can do more good out of the lodge than he could in.

While at Grundy Center I met a young German Baptist or Dunker minister. He is connected as a student and tutor with Mount Morris College, Ogle Co., Ill. He heard me speak and was deeply interested in my lecture. He offered to arrange lectures for me in the College Chapel of Mount Morris and in German Baptist churches in that vicinity. My soul was greatly refreshed with the fellowship I enjoyed with this dear brother.

I took seven subscriptions for the Cynosure while at Grundy Center, and secured some subscriptions to the General Fund of the N. C. A., one of ten dollars and another of five. One young lady gave a freewill offering of two dollars without being asked to contribute—money that she had earned by her own labor. Such evidences that God is touching and opening the hearts of his people to co-operate in carrying forward this much needed reform is cheering to those who have stood in the front of the battle.

Let us be more fervent in prayer and earnest in effort, and God will hear and bless, and the churches will be rescued from the corrupting power of the lodge, and our young men saved from this terrible snare of the wicked one. Your brother and fellow worker, C. F. HAWLEY.

STURDY PENNSYLVANIANS.

NEWVILLE, Pa., July 29th, 1890.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—While waiting a train to Chambersburg I improve the opportunity to recount some events of the recent past. Since my last my work has been largely in Lancaster, Dauphin, and York counties. Lancaster county is the home of the typical "Pennsylvania Dutchman." The Mennese, Omish and Dunker churches have many adherents. The farms are rich and neatly kept. The towns are full of lodges and saloons.

At first I could not reconcile the neat appearance of the farms and crowded saloons. A little canvassing made it evident. The neat farmers do not frequent the saloons, but they put forth no effort to restrain others.

Their peculiar dress, long hair, and general peculiarities encourage their isolation. They are a community among themselves. They care little what others say or do. They are homogen-ious, but in scarcely any way public spirited. They read but few papers, and look upon an agent as an intruder to be shunned. While professing great aversion to the lodge, they refused to take our paper or in any way encourage a work against it. I fear that nothing short of a devastating war will awaken some of them to the crying need. As far as their personal influence goes in their homes, it is for the right.

While viewing this situation of things made me sad, I was also made to rejoice by the assistance and words of encouragement of the few friends found. Bro. Geo. N. LeFevre showed me no small kindness while in his section. At Clay I was the guest of Bro. H. L. Erb, a United Brethren of the old stamp. His son-in-law, Rev. Shannon, has written for the Cynosure. He keeps his light trimmed and burning. Some have renounced their deeds of darkness through his effort.

My next stop was Steelton, Dauphin Co. Bro. John White, at whose home I have always found a welcome, received me with an expression of joy on his face which comes alone from a conscious peace with God. Though a hard-working man, he had four dollars of the Lord's money in store which he gladly appropriated to further our cause. The giving out of his Cynosure induced some of his neighbors to become subscribers.

I was much strengthened by meeting with some twenty-five friends in a prayer service Saturday evening. Sabbath morning I attended and took part in a mission Sabbath-school, after which I listened to a sermon preached by Rev. Hughes, pastor of the U. B. church. His theme was the courage of the three Hebrew children, as manifest in their refusal to worship the Golden Image. He said many excellent things; one of them was: "He who acts without principle is like a wave of the sea." He did not say that churches and church members in our time sometimes bow down to the golden calf. Such a statement would hardly do for a "liberal" U. B. preacher. He treated the subject as a picture. He admired the courage of the three Hebrews very much. On being introduced to Mr. Hughes at the close of service, I remarked that he gave us some good thoughts, but I wished he had mentioned some of the images being set up for worship in our time. He expressed surprise and anger on learning of my mission; said he belonged to a number of the beneficiary secret societies. Christ was not rejected from them. I went away praying God to open his eyes before he entered the grave to which the excessive use of tobacco is hastening him.

Sabbath evening I addressed fully four hundred people in the Lutheran church, where I was kindly invited to preach. I did not speak on our special theme, but prepared the way for future work. Rev. Hocker is in sympathy with our work, having read the Cynosure for one year. I secured subscriptions to our paper here, as also at Dillsburgh and Franklinton, York Co. The way will be open for lectures all through this section in the fall or winter. I find I have taken over fifty subscriptions to the Cynosure this month. God speed the right!

W. B. STODDARD.

—The Augustana Conference has invited Rev. C. G. Olson, pastor of the Swedish Lutheran church of Elgin, to take charge of the Salt Lake Mission. He has the appointment under consideration.

—The First Free Methodist church of this city, who have long worshiped in their small frame building on Morgan Street near Lake, have purchased a lot further to the west and have erected a substantial but plain brick building which is nearly ready for the roof. The General Conference is expected in the fall to meet in the new church.

—Dr. Arthur Mitchell, secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions, who has been visiting its stations in Asia, is impressed with the vast unoccupied fields in Central China. Cities of from 75,000 to 300,000 population have not one missionary of any denomination, or even one native helper. In traveling by canals from Hang Chow to Shanghai, a day's journey, he passed scores of great cities, with teeming populations, totally destitute of Gospel influences. What causes especial grief to him is the fact that these places are so accessible, both geographically and as respects treaty relations. He writes, "There is no little excuse for leaving a city of 100,000 souls on the New York Central railroad without one single preacher of the Gospel, as for leaving cities of that size, and of double that size, utterly neglected within twenty-four hours of Shanghai." Surely, China's neglected millions appeal pathetically to Christendom.

CORRESPONDENCE.

NOTES OF SUMMER TRAVEL.

GLIMPSES OF METROPOLITAN CITIES AND THEIR SUBURBAN HOMES.

My last letter closed rather abruptly, but my thoughts recur to the silent, grass-grown road, past the "school-house brook," where now raspberries hang ripe and luscious on either side; but there are no little hands to gather them: and to the forsaken house we entered, where the cradle, so suggestive to a mother of smiles and tears and dimpled hands, was left in the shed, while wild wood linnets sheltered and fed their young in the very room where once, perchance, the little, lisping child was taught to pray.

Passing through the southern part of New Hampshire, too, it was noticeable that once fertile fields are fast turning to forests dense and dark. Now, however, that the tide of population has reached our Western shore, may we not hope that it will return and these Eastern hills shall yet teem with life and echo and re-echo the happy voices of industry and childhood.

Everywhere and always, in New England, a part of the natural scenery is made up of rock, and where our course lay through cuts in the mountains it seemed as if we could look in upon the mighty ribs that bind our continent together.

While at Wellesley we took a carriage and went out three miles to see Deacon Leadbetter and his wife. He left his hayting to come and see the editor of the Cynosure, whose principles he loves and labors to sustain, and which he does not fail to read.

After a long pleasant ride over hill and vale and wooded stream, wild beyond description, all at once we entered the immense Honeywell Estate, which formed a perfect contrast to these scenes already passed, for everything the eye rested upon bore the stamp of art and uncounted wealth combined. The Italian gardens, as they are called, which we passed slowly by, presented an ever-changing yet ever rich and beautiful profusion of flowers which I have never seen surpassed.

The fine buildings of Wellesley College have now a quiet vacation air, as such buildings are apt to have during the summer months.

One brief hour on the train in the early morning and now we are in Boston, the hub of the universe some say,—and some say not. We will not stop to settle the question. Here we were met by Rev. J. P. Stoddard, the New England Secretary, who takes a cheerful view of the state of anti-secret reform here. After a brief rest in his book and tract rooms, Mr. Stoddard took us out across the Boston Common. Here we saw a monument to the memory of the men who fell in the "Boston Massacre." On one side was a large bronze plate representing the affray in relief, the British soldiers firing upon the Americans who were defending themselves as best they could with clubs. Above this picture was a statue, also bronze, of Liberty holding up a broken chain, while one foot rested on the manacles, and the American eagle with outspread wings stood by. Above these on a plain granite column are chiseled the names of the five Americans who were killed. The first one, Crispus Attucks, was a black man.

Approaching the new State House our attention is arrested by two fine statues, one of Daniel Webster, the other of Horace Mann. Within are fine marble busts, life-size, of Charles Sumner, Samuel Adams, Abraham Lincoln and others.

One thing of especial interest here (where are so many we cannot speak of all) is a large collection of Massachusetts battle-flags, many of them so torn and stained as to bring vividly to our imagination the roar and smoke and groans, of the fields where some of them have lain in the grasp of dead or dying heroes.

To climb to the dome of the State House is no easy task, but is one well worth undertaking. From it we obtain a fine view of the Bunker Hill monument, the old State House, of the harbor, and a glimpse of the broad sea beyond.

At Fall river we take the steamer Puritan, and watch the receding shore, and the white foam in the wake of the vessel and the dark water before, till the twinkling stars and the deep blue of a moonless sky tell us that day is done and urge to rest.

"And the slow, deep, slumberous motion
Of the ever-heaving ocean,
Rocks us to and fro."

In the early morning we passed under the famous Brooklyn bridge and by the statue of Liberty Enlightening the World.

At Brooklyn we were kindly received and entertained in the elegant home of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. White. These excellent people have given many a "cup of cold water" to Christ's disciples, and we are glad to believe they "shall in no wise lose their reward."

Brooklyn Park consists of one hundred acres of land, remarkably adapted naturally for the use to which it has been devoted. Hills and valleys, rock and lake, lawn and wood and stream are made readily accessible by finely paved drives and walks. Nor will we soon forget the real pleasure experienced by seeing hundreds of city children and young folks, not carefully walking on gravelled walks, with a policeman at convenient distance to enforce the law, "keep off the grass," but running and rolling and playing ball, tennis, or croquet, apparently in blissful ignorance of the idea that they would hurt the grass or it them.

Central Park is one of the indescribable places that people frequently describe. We looked with interest at the Egyptian monolith brought to this country at the expense of William H. Vanderbilt, which in our moist and freezing climate is fast losing the hieroglyphic characters with which it was formerly covered.

Majestic, is the word which seems most apposite, if one word can describe the Hudson river. Broad, deep, silent, mighty, it seemed to us as we sped along close by the water's edge, forty miles north from New York city to Tarrytown. We hardly knew which to admire most, the river, or the Palisades and Highlands which rise abruptly on the opposite shore. Looking back, it now seems as if it were a magnificent picture in a fitting frame. A few pleasant hours in Tarrytown with relatives, and we turn our steps to that "dearest spot on earth," "Home, sweet home."

MRS. N. B. KELLOGG.

SCHOOL-HOUSE BURNING IN KENTUCKY.

BEREA, Ky. July 29, 1890.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—The recent burning of a court-house in one of the mountain counties to prevent the holding of a court, and the sending of the Buckner Rifles to aid Judge Lilly in Perry county, shows the state of lawlessness that still prevails in the mountain counties. I am pained to add that the news just comes of the burning of the school-house last night, at Pine Grove, in Jackson county. It was one of the largest and best school buildings in the county, and had been built largely by Northern aid. I had preached there twice on the 27th. A school was in progress, but as there had been no fire in the building, it is believed to be the work of an incendiary, and probably grew out of the excitement of the impending election. The loss will fall heavily on a poor people. Should any be disposed to aid them in rebuilding it will be an act of real benevolence. A church of seventy-five members are left without a house of worship and there is no prospect of resuming the school until another house can be built.

H. H. HINMAN.

THE SABBATH AND THE LAKE PEPIN DISASTER.

[The following letter from Bro. Zaraphonithes was delayed in the mails until the middle of last week. It graphically describes the deplorable condition of some parts of our country respecting the Sabbath.—ED. CYNOSURE.]

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., July 15, 1890.

Editor Christian Cynosure,

DEAR BRO.:—I take the opportunity to write you a few lines in regard to the great disaster which took place last Sunday on the Lake Pepin. I had the opportunity to preach to the captain of the wrecked steamboat the Sabbath before. The Methodist minister met me at Ellsworth and asked me to go and fill his place at Diamond Bluffs, a small town on the banks of the Mississippi on the Wisconsin side. It is about forty miles from Minneapolis. The captain and the engineer of that steamer both live in the place, and they two were on this boat ever since it was first built. They were Sabbath breakers, and the first time that they put a little fire to steam up and make a short trip was on Sunday.

It seems that the time of the calamity came at last, and I do not know whether there ever happened such a calamity on the Mississippi before as this one of last Sabbath. I will send you a newspaper which contains all the accounts. There were one hundred and fifty persons drowned. It is something terrible. One family of seven persons were all drowned,—father, mother and five children.

As I said before, I spoke to this people in Diamond Bluffs the Sabbath before and I preached to them about the Sabbath day. I began from the beginning when God punished the Jews for not keeping the Sabbath and how God destroyed the Greeks for leaving his word and that God will punish every nation and every person who disobeys his law. This captain was there in the church and heard all the story; but instead of doing him good, I made him mad. He looked at me, while I was speaking, with wrath, and thus we come to the old story that "whom the gods want to destroy, they first make mad." This was his last chance.

I spent two or three weeks around in Wisconsin, and I thought that I was in China and not in the Christian America. Sunday balls and dancing and playing all the games for money,—and all the ungodly things take place in this nation, and most of the laws of America are only for the name, but not to be observed. The question with me is, How long will it take for this nation to become a heathen nation? I often think as to whether my duty is to go to Greece and preach the Gospel to those heathen there or to these here.

I thought to write you a short note as you are one of those who loves this day, the Sabbath of our Lord, and also it might do some good to our friends in the Cynosure. Last Thursday I was in the prayer meeting there at Diamond Bluffs and the minister was there and the sexton and myself. And on that Sunday while I was preaching, one man was cultivating his corn, and he was a member of the M. E. church some time ago. This is the condition of the West. Your brother in Christ,

A. D. ZARAPHONITHES.

MASONIC FOREIGNERS.

A DEADLY DOSE FOR MASONRY.

AVALON, MO.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—Just a word as to an excerpt from the Missouri Grand Lodge for 1867. We Americans are indebted to Elder A. B. Lipp, of Martinstown, Mo., for it. The book was formerly on file in Hartford Lodge. The language quoted by Rev. Joseph Cook in his Chicago address, by Pres. C. A. Blanchard in his able Inter Ocean article, and in the New England tract No. 2, is taken from the report of a sister Grand Lodge and adopted as its own by the Missouri Grand Lodge.

Here is the extract in full as I copied it from the book itself and proof read by copy five times. It and much more damaging evidence may be found in my tract, "Masonic Government," published in 1881, and still mailed by me to any address for three cents. Let every American clip this out of the Cynosure and preserve it.

"The conclusion of the report breathes such a pure air of Masonic truths that we incorporate it herewith. It says: 'Once a Mason, always a Mason—once a Mason, everywhere a Mason. However independent either as individuals or as lodges, whether Grand or subordinate—and we are each and all truly free and uncontrolled by anything save our ancient laws and constitution—yet no Mason can be a foreigner to another Mason. We are all equal citizens of one common government, having equal rights, equal privileges, and equal duties; and in which government, thank God, the majority does not govern. For our order in its very constitution, strikes at the root of that which is the very basis of popular government. It proclaims and practices, not that the will of the masses is wise and good, and as such to be obeyed—not that the majority shall govern . . . but that the law [i. e., above mentioned "ancient law"] shall govern. Our tenet is not only that no single man, but that no body of men (however wise or numerous) can change in any degree one single landmark of our ancient institution. Our law is strictly organic; it cannot be changed without being destroyed. You may take a man to pieces, and you may take a watch to pieces, but you can not alter his organs and put him together again as you do the timekeeper. Masonry is the living man, and all other forms of government mere convenient machines, made by clever mechanics, for regulating the affairs of state. Not only do we know no North, no South, no East and no West, but we know no government save our own. To every government save that of Masonry, and to each and all alike, we are foreigners; and this form of government is neither pontifical, autocratic, monarchical, republican, democratic nor despotic; it is a government per se, and that government is Masonic. We have nothing to do with forms of government, forms of religion or forms of social life. We are a nation of men only, bound to each other by Masonic ties as citizens of the world, and that world the world of Masonry—brethren to each other all the world over, foreigners to all the world beside."

"The above is a Masonic address in a nutshell—it is the compressed essence of Masonic life."

Now the Missouri Grand Lodge declares that this is the "pure air of Masonic truth;" that "it is the compressed essence of Masonic life." I carried that lodge report in my lectures, and as the name of every adhering Mason in Missouri at that time is appended in full, it was a "deadener." It effectively clinches our lecture, "Government of Freemasonry," and makes the Masons ashen pale when we read and nail it home. But more anon.

M. N. BUTLER.

PITH AND POINT.

A SOUND OPINION.

And I must say that I consider secret associations Satan's right hand and the church's worst foe.—WILL TUCKER, Augustaville, Pa.

READY FOR WORK.

Send me some sample copies of the Cynosure. I want to use them to get subscribers for the paper. Masons are alluring our young men into the lodge; I want something to show them the evils of the institution.—J. P. BARTLETT, Elburn, Ill.

INFORM THE COLLEGES.

Here at Le Grand are located two schools, one belongs to the Quakers and the other to the Christian church; and the Masons in order to catch the young men have moved their lodge from Montour, Tama county, to Le Grand in Marshall county, and are having their Bacchanalian feasts and inviting the boys in order to entice them in to the lodge. I think there should be something done. Please find enclosed five dollars for your Anti-masonic library for the Le Grand College. There are a great many here that are opposed to Masonry but they are afraid to do anything. None of the college officials are Masons, and some of them are anxious to get the books.—C. D. COPPOCK, Quarry, Iowa.

BURYING THE TWICE DEAD.

I feel sad to see the indifference manifested every where among Christians in regard to the question of secretism, the great damage inflicted on the church of the living God. To-day an irreligious old man is to be buried by the Knights Templar. They will no doubt turn out with fuss and feathers, with drums and swords and implements of war, and send him to the "grand lodge above," without any atoning blood, only saved by works; and all this sanctioned by the officiating clergyman who has taken the vows of his God to warn sinners to flee the wrath to come by an acceptance of Christ's atoning blood. My very soul is sick at the contemplation! Oh, my Lord, how long!—J. W. MARGRAVE, Hawatha, Kan.

PAPERS THAT SHOULD BE DOUBLY READ.

I send all my best papers South after I get through reading them, and hope they may be a help to some one. The cost is trifling. I think a person can be a genuine missionary in this way, and do a great deal of good by sending such papers as the Cynosure and Christian Statesman. I mention those two because they advocate principles different from all others, and principles that are more needed just at this time than any others that I can think of. The colored people in this place laid the corner-stone of their new church yesterday (Sabbath) with I. O. O. F. ceremonies, I am told. I hope for the prosperity of the Cynosure, and the ultimate triumph of the cause it represents.—WM. MCCOY, Bellaire, Ohio.

LITERATURE.

PRACTICAL SANITARY AND ECONOMIC COOKING, adapted to persons of moderate and small means. By Mrs. M. H. Abel. Pp. 184. Price, 40c. American Public Health Association, Rochester, N. Y.

The American Public Health Association is enabled through the philanthropy of Mr. Henry Lomb of Rochester to offer valuable prizes for essays on economic and sanitary topics of a popular nature, which are published at about cost price for the widest circulation.

In the Lomb Prize Essay on Practical Sanitary and Economic Cooking we have a new departure in cook books—a book which stimulates thought and encourages study of cookery problems, and does not leave the reader with the usual bewildered mind. We are encouraged by its aid to use intelligently the great abundance of good material with which our markets abound. Because the title page says "for persons of moderate or small means" let no one lay the book aside as unsuited to a rich man's needs. The same nutritive principles must be found on both tables, and health is as essential for the rich as for the poor. Mrs. Abel has succeeded in the difficult task of making clear to the unscientific mind some of the fundamental scientific principles on which the preparation of food depends, and she has not hesitated to expose many of the fallacies which have hitherto ruled our kitchens, because she was in a position to be sure of her ground.

To this essay was awarded the first prize among seventy competitors, and the unanimous opinion of the able judges of award, and testimonials from members of the American Public Health Association prove that it is a work of great practical value, and that it would in many cases assist in securing to families health, comfort and happiness in life, if it could be placed in their hands. It would be of immediate and permanent benefit, and especially assist in bettering the condition of those for whom it is principally intended.

While the economic character of the book makes it especially adapted to persons of moderate and small means, it will prove useful in every household, and while it would be helpful to experienced housekeepers, it will prove also especially so to those who sometimes without much knowledge or experience in domestic life and duties enter married life.

A very instructive table on the saving of earnings accompanies this book which we would be glad to see in the hand of every wage worker in the country.

REFORMATION PRINCIPLES STATED AND APPLIED.—A volume of 450 pages. Price, $1.50. The subjects discussed are: Civil Government God's Moral Ordinance; The Responsibility of Nations; Sabbath Reform; Divorce Reform; Temperance Reform; The Labor Question; The Race Problem; The Mediatorial Dominion of Christ; The Kingship of Christ over the Nations; The Headship of Christ over his Church; The Unity of the Church; The Church's Glory; The Relation of Church and State; The Resurrection of Christ the Ultimate Proof of his Messiahship; Chiliasm Unscriptural; The Millennium; The Bible, its Study and Use; God's Rule for Christian Giving. It is published by Fleming H. Revell & Co., Chicago. Apply to the author, J. M. Foster, 620 Freeman Avenue, Cincinnati, O.

ALDEN'S MANIFOLD CYCLOPEDIA, Vol. 22, embraces the titles from "Legal" to "McClure." Among a great number of interesting topics treated in this volume, we notice Letters and Articulate Sounds; Libraries; Light; Lithography; among the important places are Leipzig, Leyden, Liberia, London, Long Island; among States Louisiana; in the line of biography we find Leibnitz; Lessing; Pres. Lincoln; Liszt; Livingstone, the explorer; Lockie, and Longfellow. As an educator in the family or school, or assistant in the office or library, this work is of great value, and its cost is so extremely low as to place it easily within the reach of all.

Scribner's Magazine for August is largely devoted to fiction. The leading article, "The Paris of the Three Musketeers," is a spirited description of Parisian life during the time of Louis XIII., from 1627-1660. The authors, E. H. and E. W. Blashfield, have illustrated the text with great care and fullness, reproducing costumes, architecture and furniture of that remote day. Nothing that is said of Stanley wants for a listener. Mr. Marston's "How Stanley Wrote His Book," is a near view of the great explorer at work at Cairo, giving an intimate idea of his personality as it appears to one of his oldest friends. Joseph Bell, the English artist, who prepared many of the sketches for Stanley's book at Cairo under his personal direction, illustrates the article with a number of pictures of Stanley at work. Several pages of the explorer's note-books are reproduced in facsimile.

Mrs. Lyman Abbott, wife of the successor to Henry Ward Beecher as pastor of Plymouth church, is to become one of the editors of The Ladies' Home Journal, on Sept. 1 next.

GOOD WORDS

FOR OUR PAPER.

LET THEM FIND AN ECHO IN EVERY HOME IN AMERICA.

Cannot keep house without the Cynosure.—J. K. Weber, Titusville, Pa.

I want the paper in my family as long as I live.—Mrs. S. McNOWN, Norborne, Mo.

May God enlarge the circulation of the Cynosure in the South.—PROF. G. M. ELLIOTT, Selma, Ala.

I love the Cynosure, it has caused me to leave all secret societies.—REV. JAMES H. HOKE, Searcy, Ark.

Your paper has induced me to wash my hands of the lodge.—REV. GEO. BAKER, Hillsdale, Washington.

I take several religious papers, but I would give up all for the Cynosure.—REV. J. P. RICHARDS, Chicago.

I cannot well get along without it. It grows better and better as the years go by.—M. N. BUTLER, Avalon, Mo.

I have taken the Cynosure from the first number, and do not know how to do without it.—REV. S. SMITH, Oberlin, La.

In my short acquaintance with the Cynosure, I have learned to appreciate it very highly.—C. E. GIBSON, Pastor M. E. Church, Pullman, Washington.

A most excellent paper, advocating a noble cause. My prayer is for its success. Yours against secrecy and the saloon.—PROF. C. G. F. MILLER, Olay, Pa.

The paper is a great help to me. If I had not the Cynosure to-day, I would be a Mason. I thank God it came in time to save me.—REV. H. C. CADE, Camden, Ark.

The Cynosure is a welcome visitor to our home and hearts. It has fully converted my wife and myself to the principles of the N. C. A.—P. J. ROBIDOUX, New Orleans, La.

I am much pleased with the paper, and would not be without it. Every family in America ought to have this valuable journal.—REV. FRANK H. COWLES, Watts, Ala.

We are trying to prepare young men and women for the many duties of life. We request that you send us the Christian Cynosure.—PROF. E. W. BAILEY, Lane Institute, Tenn.

I have received and read the Christian Cynosure, and can say I never read any paper that so nearly takes a place by the Bible in my estimation.—J. W. MURRAY, M. D., Camden, Ark.

We enjoy your paper very much, and may God grant that the truths you disseminate may take root in this grand old mountain region.—REV. A. A. MYERS, Cumberland Gap, Tenn.

I am glad there is such a paper as the Christian Cynosure. I've had membership in Patriotic Sons of America, Phi Kappa Psi, and Knights and Ladies of Honor; but renounce them all.—WM. J. COULSTON, Hollidaysburg, Pa.

We commend the Christian Cynosure to our members and ministers as the exponent of anti-secret reform, as well as a fearless and faithful advocate of all Christian reforms.—Vote of the Synod of the Reformed Presbyterian Church, 1890.

I have placed the Cynosure on file in the Congregational College associated with McGill. The result surpasses my anticipations. Your publications are eye-openers to the careless and unwary.—S. WINFRED MACK, McGill University, Montreal.

"Oh, if I had only taken this medicine earlier in life, what years of suffering it would have saved me!" was the touching exclamation of one who had been cured of rheumatism by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Scores of such cases are on record.

SECRET SOCIETIES
Condemned

BY THE PRESS.

United Presbyterian, Pittsburg:—Secret societies are not suited to American society, nor indeed to any society.

The Armory:—Surely the presence of a multitude of secret combinations bodes little good to the church of Christ.

Wesleyan Methodist:—Never say again that Freemasonry has no secrets. It has secrets, dark as ever revealed in the midnight caves of professional banditti, or stalked the deck of a pirate craft.

The Watchman, Boston:—Garrison fought the battle of free speech in behalf of Abolition; Pierpont waged it on the question of temperance; Colver fought it against secret societies.

Christian Standard, Cincinnati:—We know of no good work for God or humanity to the success of which secrecy is essential; and we see dangers in secret associations which every Christian should avoid.

Catholic Review, New York:—It is becoming apparent that secret, oath-bound societies are, in principle, un-American; are contrary to the whole spirit and meaning of our institutions, and are therefore dangerous to the Republic.

Baptist Weekly, New York:—There is no union which men can form, making an inner circle of self-interest and tyrannically dictating to those without it, which is not the grossest violation of every true principle of human brotherhood.

Evangelical Repository:—We charge against these organizations: first, that they contain a system of religion; and, secondly, they are devised and built up after the traditions of men, after the rudiments of this world, and not after Christ.

The New York Witness:—Any society which demands from its members a loyalty superior to their loyalty to the general interests and well-being of the community in which they live, such as the church of Rome, the Nihilists, the Mormons and the Freemasons, is dangerous to the well being of the state and should be shunned by all good men.

Journal, Indianapolis, 1880:—The Democrats are attempting to carry this State by secret societies. They hope to overcome a popular uprising by midnight meetings and by grips and passwords. . . . The loyal men of Indiana will spurn their midnight methods. A State which numbers two millions of people cannot be governed by grips and passwords.

Times, Chicago, Aug. 22, 1880:—Secret societies are dangerous because young men, and others who are not for the moment fully mindful of their public duties, may be led by persuasion, under the peculiar solemnity and impressiveness of an initiation which unseats their judgment, to take oaths which are inconsistent with their duties toward the state and society, and which they may regret, in moments of reflection, that they have taken.

Public Ledger, Philadelphia:—Notwithstanding the presence of thousands of otherwise innocent men in the Masonic lodge, it is well understood that a ring within a ring runs the order, and the order in turn runs such innocent societies as the Good Templars, Red Men and nearly or quite all the so-called secret beneficiary societies. . . . The danger arising from such conspiracies is not imaginary but real. If the truth were known we are suffering from nothing so much as from this evil. And the worst of all is that good men who have gone into the various secret lodges are being used for ends of which they little dream.

The Advance, Chicago:—A Masonic writer in the New York Herald is quoted as saying that Masonry is "an effort to bring all mankind to a common religion; to harmonize the mysteries of Christianity, Judaism and paganism; for the most scholarly Masons hold that there is only one religion, and that religion is the worship of deity under the image of the sun." If the above is a correct enunciation of Masonic doctrine, the less Christians have to do with it the better. Indeed, it would seem to be equally inconsistent for the honest Jew to be identified with these sun-worshippers. . . . The inference is fair that Masonry and Christianity do not harmonize.

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 20 cents per pound:

1. Historical Sketch—National Christian Association.
3. Address to American Pastors.
4. Freemasonry in the Family.
5. President C. G. Finney on the duty of Christians towards the Lodge.
7. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
8. Modern Heathenism.
9. Ministers at Rival Altars.
12. Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodge.
15. Secrecy and Sin.
16. Selling Dead Horses.
17. History of Masonry.
18. Despotism Character of Freemasonry.
19. Freemasonry, a Christ-excluding Religion.

22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.

28. Nathaniel Colver, D.D., on Masonry.

33. Hon. Wm. H. Seward on Secret Societies.

37. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).

39. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?

44. D. L. Moody on Secret Societies.

45. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?

49. John Quincy Adams on the duty of American Voters.

Chapters in American Politics.

Masonry vs. Prohibition.

Decline of the G. A. R.

Christianity and Odd-fellowship. Part 1, 4 pages; part 2, 4 pages.

The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—20 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

NEW ENGLAND DEPARTMENT.—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent, No. 309, Tremont St., Boston.

WASHINGTON DEPARTMENT.—W. B. Stoddard, Agent, No. 215, 4½ St., Washington, D. C.

COLLEGE AGENT, Rev. S. F. Porter, Cynosure office.

SPECIAL AGENT.—Rev. C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Du Page Co., Ill.

STATE AGENTS.

Minnesota, E. Hanson, Minneapolis.

New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimball, New Market.

Ohio, Rev. H. H. Hinman, Oberlin.

Pennsylvania, Rev. J. T. Michael, 2942 Westmont Street, Philadelphia.

Alabama, Rev. G. M. Elliott, Selma.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.

Nathan Callender, Montdale, Pa.

J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa.

T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.

E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.

H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.

J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.

A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.

J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.

W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.

J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.

Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.

J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.

Rev. E. Mathews, Long Island City, N. Y.

E. Barnetson, Haskinville, N. Y.

Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.

D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.

A. W. Parry, Annawan, Ill.

REVISED ODD-FELLOWSH,
ILLUSTRATED.

The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. The ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover, 50 cents; per dozen $4.00.

All orders promptly filled by the
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

THE N. C. A. BUILDING
(The gift of Philo Carpenter.)
—AND OFFICE OF—

The Christian Cynosure,

221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

The National Christian Association

PRESIDENT—Bishop Milton Wright, Dayton, O.

VICE PRESIDENT—Rev. Geo. R. Milton, Elgin, Ill.

COR. SEC'Y and TREASURER—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SECRETARY—Rev. E. R. Worrell, Washington Heights, Ill.

DIRECTORS—T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, John Gardner, J. M. Hitchcock, Jerome Howe, G. R. Milton, Wm. Pinkney, J. P. Richards, Alexander Thomson, E. Whipple, E. R. Worrell.

The object of this Association is: "To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS.

NEW ENGLAND.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic Conn.; Sec'y, Miss E. E. Flagg, Wellesley, Mass.; Treas., Z. Graves, Harris, Mass.

ALABAMA.—Pres., Prof. Pickens; Sec., G. M. Elliott; Treas., Rev. C. B. Curtis; all of Selma.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., Rev. G. R. Milton, Elgin; Sec., A. H. Hiatt, Jr., Wheaton; Treas., Ezra A. Cook, Chicago.

INDIANA.—Pres., William H. Figg, Reno; Sec., S. L. Cook, Albion; Treas., Benjamin Ulsh, Silver Lake.

IOWA.—Cor. Sec., C. D. Trumbull, Morning Sun; Rec. Sec., W. L. Enlow, Birmingham; Treas., Wm. Crawford, Washington.

KANSAS.—Pres., J. S. T. Milligan, Denison; Sec., S. Hart, Leocompton; Treas., J. A. Torrence, Denison.

MAINE.—Pres., Isaac Jackson, Harrison; Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W. Goddard, West Sidney.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt, Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., S. B. Sjoblom, Ferguson Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul; Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., B. F. Miller, Eagleville; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec., A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

NEBRASKA.—Pres., S. Austin, Fairmount; Cor. Sec., W. Spooner, Kearney; Treas., J. C. Fye.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., A. A. Hoyt, Littleton; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., Isaac Hyatt, Gilford Village.

NEW YORK.—Pres., Prof. A. R. Dodd Houghton; Sec., Rev. W. A. Hazlett, Belmont; Treas., P. D. Miller, Newfane.

OHIO.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Parry; Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Seneca; Cor. Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Seneca.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., Nathan Callender, Montdale; Cor. Sec., E. J. Chalfant, York; Treas., J. C. Young, Custer City.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. W. Wood, Barnaboo; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie.

HAVE YOU EXAMINED

The list of Books and Tracts for sale by the National Christian Association. Look it over carefully and see if there is not something you want for yourself or for your friend. Send for full catalogue to 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.

The Christian Cynosure.

J. BLANCHARD, EDITOR.

HENRY L. KELLOGG, ASSOCIATE EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, AUGUST 7, 1890.

"THE CHURCH VERSUS THE LODGE."

The Boston Congregationalist under the above head, in an article of a solid column, says of the secret societies:

"It (the church) cannot ignore them, for they are a potent factor in every community."

"At the Rutland meeting of the Vermont Congregationalists the subject aroused the liveliest discussion of the whole session."

And "Not a man who spoke failed to admit that Christian concerns in his own community were suffering on account of them."

The Chicago Evening Post (July 28th ult.) says of the Congregationalist article:

"It is difficult to escape its conclusion that the men of America are rapidly leaving the preacher and the pews to their wives and daughters."

It would perhaps be ungracious to ask the Boston Puritan organ what it has been doing while the lodges of that city have been increasing till they outnumber the churches of that city more than two to one. The Puritans whose views the Congregationalist is set to maintain, held that

"To institute and ordain any mystical rites or ceremonies... is gross superstition."—Neal's History of the Puritans, Vol. 1, p. 248.

And, but a little way back, Hon. Samuel Dexter, Dr. Hopkins, and the leading clergy of New England held Masonic lodges to be instituted by the devil; and if the Congregationalist had kept its readers informed of the sentiments of those great and good men, the present disastrous state of things would not have existed. Even now, if that able print will faithfully lay the facts of history, and the nature of the lodge before its readers, "the old Pilgrim spirit" will awake as when the facts of slavery were laid before them, and the lodge will fall in the fires of discussion as the viper from the hand of the Apostle.

But we respectfully suggest that the remedy of this distress proposed by the Congregationalist will but aggravate the disease. It advises:

1. "To set the claims of the church far above those of any other order." Lodge worship is spiritual adultery; and to "set the claims of the church above the lodge" would be like arguing the superiority of the family to the brothel. The suggestion degrades the church. True,—we must show the false and hollow claims of the lodge to charity and benevolence, which can easily be done from their own records. The present mayor of Chicago, D. C. Cregier, after the great fire, reported $90,000 received by the Masonic relief committee, and but $30,000 paid for relief, leaving sixty thousand dollars consumed in lodgery. And the best showing the Odd-fellows have ever made is three dollars received to one paid for relief.

And the Congregationalist betrays lamentable ignorance when it supposes the lodge superior to Christianity in social attractions. But about one in five lodge members regularly attend their lodges. Men join lodges for gain, for votes, for curiosity, for self-defence; to keep Masons from getting their customers, patients and clients; and the four in five absentees pay their dues while disgusted with their meetings, to protect themselves from lodge vengeance.

But the strength of the lodge, like that of all false religions, is supernatural. In short, it is idolatry or Gentile worship. 1 Cor. 10:20. Idolatry can be practiced in Christian countries as well as heathen; and what Paul meant by "Gentiles" was peoples not worshipping Christ, and the lodge is Gentile, as any one can see. Paul says such worship is paid to "devils (daimonia) and not to God." And devils mesmerize their worshipers. If this is error, will the Congregationalist please tell us what Paul meant?

A little before the last Congregational Council in Worcester, Mass., the "Old South" church of that city dedicated its new church building. Dr. A. H. Quint, who has sworn thirty-two degrees of Masonic blasphemy, preached the sermon, and Mr. Lovering, the pastor, who had joined seven secret societies, in what was called the prayer of dedication, reminded the Lord that they had poured the Masonic libation, "corn, oil and wine," on the corner-stone; and we were informed by persons present that a stuffed white pigeon overhead was made to represent the Holy Ghost descending to sanctify the house. That is simple bald idolatry and superstition. And if Dr. Goodwin, after MacKnight, Warburton and others is correct in showing Masonry to be pagan in its origin, these and hosts of like facts show that it is heathenism in Massachusetts.

Let us hope this opening of the Congregationalist to this discussion is the dawning of a brighter day. For just so truly as Christ's kingdom is to come,—and come it will—so truly the false altars, Satan's substitutes for Christianity, must fall. And if Mr. Joseph Cook's argument can be laid before the New England mind it will answer it as powder answers the touch of fire.

DR. GOODWIN'S SPEECH.

The Advance gives two columns and a half of Dr. Goodwin's speech in the Christian Conference, Chicago, last April, of which the sum is this:

"The whole movement of things along the line of secrecy is thoroughly antagonistic to the movement along the line of Scripture and Christianity."

That is to say, the secret lodge is anti-Christ. And he gives a humorous account of a fellow-traveler in Syria, who crept into an old sarcophagus to which some one had given the name of King Hiram of Tyre, who was a Phœnician heathen of the religion of Ahab and Jezebel; whose priests of Baal Elijah executed when God had testified against them by fire from heaven; and whose religion dissolved and destroyed the Union of the Commonwealth of Judea. Dr. Goodwin properly infers that Freemasonry, by its own account of its origin, is heathenism of the same sort.

Let us rejoice that the Advance has fairly opened its columns to this discussion. The Pacific and the Boston Congregationalist have recently done the same; and if other denominational papers shall follow their example, our national leprosy will be healed.

Joseph Cook in the same April Conference, in his masterly address, says that the oaths of secret societies "are forbidden in some portions of our Republic by the civil law;" and "by some Christian denominations, and ought to be by all." Shall not the next National Conference set itself squarely to achieve this great work?

THE LODGE LOAD ON THE BACK OF LABOR.

The Daily News of this city scores President Yerkes of the North Chicago street-car system because he has given preference to non-union men, and does not hesitate to discharge an incompetent employe whether he be union or non-union. The News regards the secret labor unions as an accepted condition of the industrial world and seems to think they are not susceptible of improvement, either in spirit or practice. It seems that a majority of the men employed on the North Side cars are non-unionists and are proud of their independence of any self-appointed keeper of other men's judgments and consciences. The Evening Post of July 28th says:

"The great majority of the employes of the North Side system are non-union men, who could not be dragged into a protective union by a steam engine. They are satisfied with their present condition."

Facts do not justify the conclusion that secret unions are an accepted and permanent condition of society. There are evidences on every hand for those looking for them, showing that larger numbers of union men are becoming disgusted with repeated orders to "go out," they know not why nor where. A fraternal alliance of laborers is well and in keeping with the open and above-board principles of the Republic; but an oath-bound, irresponsible, secret union, ruled by cunning men who have no other business than to stir up strife and thus perpetuate their own fat allowance, is, and will be as long as they stand by it, the despoiler of the working masses, equaled only by the grinding of the heartless employers.

In two respects, at least, the unions must be improved in order to retain the support of the better class of workmen:

1. The offices must be filled with the best and most reliable men, who will think twice before turning the industrial world, or any portion of it, into an aimless struggle, for which not one in ten of the participants can give an intelligent reason other than "some one told us to do so."

2. The perpetual screen of secrecy, which serves as an ambush to the irresponsible, nameless disturber, should be torn aside. And when the public at large can know what and whom they are championing, there will be a new and universal confidence and co-operation which is impossible under the present uncertain and oftentimes threatening conditions.

May heaven forbid that we should ever place anything in the way of the betterment of the condition of honest laborers. We are of that great body of men who work for a living and expect to do so. We are aware that there are snares studiously set on every hand for the enthrallment of honest, unsuspecting men. And in many instances the victims flutter, faint and are almost hopeless in the meshes of some shyness. Our belief is that he who takes advantage of his wealth, or knowledge, or physical power, to degrade and to grind the face of the poor, should be thrice accursed in the day of final reckoning. The Old and New Testaments are one in the defence of the weak who are right, and against the strong who are wrong.

Notwithstanding the cruel and wicked characterization of Christ, at a recent meeting of laborers in this city, as "The boss loafer," he was and is, and in the nature of things must forever be, the only true friend and defender of bread-winners. He who is unmindful of and bitter toward the poor, lacks a chief condition on which God will be mindful of and merciful toward him. Three things sent Israel into bondage: idolatry, Sabbath-breaking and oppression of the poor. Our own favored land will do well to profit by Israel's calamity.

THE RIVER MISSION.—Bro. I. R. B. Arnold reported last week a good list of donors for his floating chapel. One more good lift will launch his mission on the bosom of the Ohio, and the great river will accept kindly the burden and bear it freely on its mission of love and light. To complete it $250 are needed, providing seats, and all needed fixtures. The chapel must have good size for a half ton of paint was needed for it. Bro. Arnold and his musical family make anti-secrecy and prohibition prominent in all their work, and they gladly give the use of the chapel to any of our lecturers or N. C. A. friends who may wish to speak from its platform. Remember, that he promises that for every dollar contributed on account of the Cynosure he will give as much for the Southern minister's fund. A better opportunity for killing two birds with one stone is seldom offered our readers. Address I. R. B. Arnold, Marietta, Ohio.

—Friends at Berea, Ky., as we learn by an anonymous circular, have projected a monthly magazine at that place, entitled The Reunion, whose object shall be to promote the visible union of believers in Jesus Christ.

—Rev. Wilbur F. Crafts, author of "The Sabbath for Man," having crossed the continent four times during the last year and a half in his work for Sabbath reform, will make another trans-continental trip, going out in the latter part of August and returning in the autumn. Those desiring his services for meetings or conventions, may address him at his summer rest, Westerly, Rhode Island.

—Bro. J. P. Stoddard has issued from the New England headquarters, 309 Tremont St., Boston, two valuable tracts. No. 1 trenchantly discusses Odd-fellowship as revealed in the Grand Lodge report of 1889, extracts from which have lately appeared in the Cynosure. No. 2 is Freemasonry heard in its own defense, to wit, the Missouri Grand Lodge report referred to in Bro. Butler's letter on another page, with pointed foot-notes elucidating the text.

—The religious papers of Ohio, Nebraska, Indiana and Illinois were furnished last week with a copy of the revised speech of Joseph Cook on "Disloyal Secret Oaths." Miss A. E. Hinsdale sends the money to furnish fifty more papers with this address, which will be sent this week. In a note sent to each paper, its attention is called to the eight propositions in which Mr. Cook sums up his opinion of Mormonism, Clan-na-Gael, Jesuitism and Freemasonry. These opinions are found in this paper, and ought to be taught to the children of every Christian home. This address can be sent to one thousand papers for only $20.00.

—We are glad to note the addition to our working force in California as reported by the Corresponding Secretary. Mr. Nichols is an old acquaintance of Bro. Gladwin, who recommended him to the work, and he has other and ample endorsement. The California brethren have long been looking for such a leader and co-worker. Let them take heart and together join in prayer and labor for the redemption of churches, courts and legislatures from the lodge thralldom. Let every wide-awake reformer on the Pacific coast write a letter to Bro. Nichols respecting the state of affairs in his own neighborhood. Address him at 326 Pacific St., San Francisco, Cal.

FROM THE CORRESPONDING SECRETARY.

For the first time I greet the Cynosure readers as Corresponding Secretary of the Association.

This greeting would never have been written had not three things taken place after my election at the annual meeting: First, the action of the annual meeting was found to be in perfect harmony with the wishes of Bro. J. P. Stoddard, who had for so many years filled this office; second, I was relieved from the duties of publisher; and third, that in the matter of soliciting and collecting money for the Association I should have the assistance of Pres. C. A. Blanchard.

The month of July has been a trial month, and I praise God for the encouragements. Though but very little time could be spared for soliciting, the amount secured in cash and pledges was one hundred and eighty-two dollars. But the most encouraging feature was the cordial reception and aid given by our Swedish Lutheran friends. If the interest manifested by pastors Evald and Ranseen are an earnest of what that people will do, the work in this city, and indeed in the whole West, will be vastly quickened.

An influential member of another denomination suggested a plan by which their churches in this city would take collections for this reform. The above suggestion was accompanied by $5.00, so that faith and works went hand in hand.

I am also glad to introduce to our readers, especially those of the Pacific slope, Rev. M. H. Nichols, who will be the Pacific agent for the Association. The only aid that the Board of Directors could offer him at present was their endorsement, and the privilege of raising his salary and expenses himself. Bro. Nichols writes: "I will accept the appointment on the terms indicated in your letter." This shows the self-denying spirit of the Pacific agent, and should be met with a hearty response on the part of reformers in that field.

W. I. PHILLIPS.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 30, 1890.

Mr. Harrison has given his aid in a good cause by sending a special message to Congress urging the passage of the anti-lottery law, proposed in the bill which the House committee on postoffices has prepared at the request of Postmaster General Wanamaker, who says the present law is utterly inadequate to stop the growing lottery evil. This bill provides a penalty of not more than $500 fine and not more than one year's imprisonment for sending through the mail letters containing money for lottery tickets, drawings of lotteries, circulars or newspapers containing lottery advertisements, and gives the Postmaster General authority to detain any suspicious mail matter whether addressed directly to the lottery company, its known agents or to third parties whom he has reason to suspect of acting as agents for lotteries. The committee in reporting this bill says: "In Washington alone it is estimated that not less than 50,000 letters are mailed each month addressed to the Louisiana Lottery company, and in New Orleans it is five or ten times as much. All of this matter is unmailable under our present laws, but it goes without let or hindrance, because under existing statutes it seems to be impossible to obtain proof of its character." And in concluding its report the committee further says, "That Congress is willing to provide any remedy for the correction of this evil within the letter and spirit of the Constitution will be treated herein as an accepted fact; and the committee has therefore proceeded in its work with the view of providing a law which it is believed will place within the reach of executive officers and within the jurisdiction of the courts every means that can be adopted to crush out the baneful influences of these concerns, whether chartered by States or organized and protected outside the laws."

Few people are aware of the extent of this lottery evil; right here in Washington it is estimated that more than $1,250,000 is spent annually with this one company; and the fact has just been established in the trial of a police lieutenant that this company has for years regularly bribed the police in order that its agents might be allowed to sell tickets without being molested. Every newspaper of prominence in the city prints glaring advertisements of this gambling concern, and nothing short of a law can keep this polluting matter out of our households.

Mr. Wanamaker is very much in earnest about this matter, and says that he will do everything in his power to have Congress pass this bill before adjourning, and it behooves every Christian man and woman in this broad land to lend his or her influence toward the same end. Get up petitions, have your neighbors sign them and send them to your Congressman, and the good work will be half accomplished.

The first public hearing on the proposed "High License" liquor law for the District of Columbia took place yesterday before the House committee on the District of Columbia. The liquor dealers, through their attorneys, bitterly opposed the bill. Mr. H. B. Moulton, a prominent local temperance worker, also opposed the bill, but he said it was better than the present law, because it placed more restrictions around the sale of liquor. He said he was opposed on principle to "High License," and that he would rather see free whisky, for then the end would come sooner. He believed that the bill if enacted into a law would increase drunkenness. Ex-Representative Price of Iowa, who is a Prohibitionist, spoke in favor of the bill as an improvement upon the present law, and besides that, he said that the united opposition of the liquor men to it was sufficient of itself to cause him to favor it. This last argument is heard very frequently among temperance people.

Miss Clara Barton, whose name is known whenever good deeds are cherished, is anxious to have the American National Association of the Red Cross chartered by Congress, and Senator Sherman has, at her request, introduced a bill for that purpose. Should this bill become a law, and it probably will, it will be unlawful for any other association than the one by it incorporated to display the symbol of the red cross in any part of the country. The only object in having the association incorporated by Congress is to give it a legal status which it has not hitherto possessed, and the experience of its members has shown that it would increase its opportunities for doing good. The incorporators named in the bill are Clara Barton, George Kennan, whose philanthropic lectures and literary work in behalf of Siberian prisoners have made him celebrated throughout the civilized world, and J. B. Hubbell, M. D., a gentleman who has for years been associated with Miss Barton in Red Cross work.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

The cyclone at Lawrence.—A disappointed upper tendon.—James R. Lowell's tribute to Clinton B. Fisk.—Worcester Club rooms.—Our coming summer convention.

The inhabitants of New England have always congratulated themselves on their supposed immunity from earthquakes, cyclones, and all those disturbed conditions of earth and air which seem to be a necessary adjunct to more favored climes. We have been quite willing to let the great West enjoy her monopoly of giant corn and mammoth potatoes along with her blizzards and tornadoes, but every year the cyclone belt has seemed to be drawing nearer, and last Saturday night a thrill of startled fear went through New England to find the dreaded foe already at our doors. The Lawrence tornado was characterized by all the suddenness and the freakishness of a true western cyclone bred in "the secret places of thunder." A dazzling white light in the sky, followed by an ominous darkness were the only portents that preceded its work of death. The tornado and the pestilence have some points of similarity—notably in the seeming caprice with which both select their victims. Some houses in the path of the whirlwind were ground to atoms, and others closs by were passed over by the destroyer. Nature as a rule gives little or no warning before her forces of wrath and doom swoop down on us poor mortals, and will it not be even so when the final cataclysm overwhelms the universe. Seldom has New England heard such a sermon from the text, "Be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of Man cometh," as was preached by the Lawrence tornado.

The heat of the last few days has been almost unexampled, but the world of pleasure and fashion is still a very gay and lively world, and just as ready to run after a prince when old Sol is rioting way down in the nineties, as when he is in a more temperate mood. The papers have recently been publishing the picture of a particularly dull and stupid looking young man, Prince George of Wales; and all Newport has been agog with the news that this scion of Hanoverian royalty is about to make them a visit. Of course there is proportionate mourning at the announcement that he has no notion of doing any such thing. But perhaps the Newport upper-tendon, before they arrange entertainments for a prince again, will wait until they receive due official report that he is coming, and thus avoid making themselves a second time the laughing stock of the country.

In politics there is very little doing, but a great deal more probably than political managers allow to appear on the surface. The Prohibitionists have lost their bravest leader in Clinton B. Fisk, but the very greatness of their loss must furnish only an additional motive to fight on. No higher honor can be done to such men than to make their graves the rallying center of battle. It is well that a New England poet and the one who wrote "The Crisis," the noblest poem produced by the anti-slavery era, should have penned the following elegy on the dead hero:

"He stood upon the world's broad threshold; wide
The din of battle and of slaughter rose;
He saw God stand upon the weaker side
That sank in seeming loss before its foes.
Many there were who made great haste and sold
Unto the common enemy their swords;
He scorned their gifts of fame and power and gold,
And, underneath their soft and flowery words,
Heard the cold serpent hiss; therefore he went
And humbly joined him to the weaker part,
Fanatic named, and fool, yet well content
So he could be the nearer to God's heart,
And feel its solemn pulses sending blood
Through all the widespread veins of endless good."

While prohibition prohibits even in the drug-stores of Worcester, that city has no less than five different clubs where it requires only the payment of an initiation fee to get a glass of whisky any time of the day or night. It is further stated that the courts fail to meet the requirements of the situation, as every case that has been tried has resulted in the discharge of the defendants. But if said defendants did not in most cases belong to a secret lodge there might be a different story to tell. Masonry rules the courts of Worcester as well as other cities, and the Home Guard has not begun its mission any too soon in enlightening the W. C. T. U. as to some of the reasons why justice is so singularly derelict.

Preparations are going forward as rapidly as possible for our Summer Convention at Hoyt's Grove the latter part of this month. Our able agent, Rev. J. P. Stoddard, is working indefatigably to make it a success. Over this part of Massachusetts darkness that can be felt prevails on the lodge question. Bro. and sister Hoyt have stood unflinchingly for the truth, and have demonstrated how for such testimony can be made to send its beams "in a naughty world"; but all through this as other districts of New England there are hundreds of anti-secretists who are hiding their light under a bushel, afraid or discouraged, thinking they are the only ones who are even at heart opposed to Baal. A grand rally in August at Hoyt's Grove will be likely to bring many such to the front. Pray over it, brothers and sisters. Attend if you can. If you have the money but are otherwise unable to go, contribute what your expenses would be to the Convention. If you have neither the time nor the money, pray; pray mightily, and your prayers may prove the hidden lever that moved our cause on to a glorious victory.

ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

ANTI-MASONS write for your paper.

Do not overlook the Business talk on the 16th page.

THE HOME.

COMPLETE.

"Complete!" O sweet and heavenly word,
That sinless angels never heard!
Our stammering lips can scarcely spell it,
It needs a seraph voice to tell it;
Complete, not in myself, but Thee!
"Yes, trusting soul, complete in Me!"

But I am weak and full of sin,
All bruised without and stained within;
How can it be that I be holy?

"Ah, learn of Me, the meek and lowly:
My grace it is that sets you free;
Rejoice, thou art complete in Me."

But see the past with all its falls,
The past with its unheeded calls;
The past, with all its wrong words spoken,
Its promises so swiftly broken:
I bore that past upon the Tree,
Look up, thou art complete in Me!"

But I am frail, a thousand slips—
A thousand words from hasty lips
Will fill my soul with grief and sorrow—
"Ah, foolish soul, thou shouldst not borrow:
Just as thy days thy strength shall be,
'Tis thine to rest complete in Me!"

But I am blind, I shall but stray,
Or grope and stumble in the way:
"My hand shall hold, Mine eyes shall guide thee,
And my bright angels stand beside thee:
Fear not, I gave Myself for thee,
And where I am, night cannot be!"

"Complete in Him!" and what is this
But gate of pearl that leads to bliss?
Life has no need, but Jesus fills it;
Life has no storm, but Jesus stills it;
Peace widens, deepens to a sea,
When I can say, "Complete in Thee!"

And when before the great white Throne
I reap the joys my tears have sown,
In loftier song I will adore Him,
And cast my crown of gold before Him;
And this my highest note shall be,
"Redeemed and saved—complete in Thee!"
—Henry Burton, M. A.

LINCOLN'S RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

A man by the name of David Ross, of Broadway, Warren Co., N. J., a Methodist of the old and best stamp, who enjoyed the blessing of perfect love sixty years before his death, and was noted for his piety and religious zeal—known to quite a number of Free Methodists—a poor man, a carpet-weaver, strong Republican, and a devoted friend of the President—sold his best carpet, when his wife was absent, for ten dollars, and went to Washington, to see and talk with President Lincoln. The presiding elder of that district gave him a letter of introduction to the President.

He came to Washington, ascended the steps of the White House, and was informed that he was at Arlington Heights, and would soon return under a mounted guard. He remained there waiting his return. When he came he showed him his letter, and the President in a very gentlemanly manner, said, "Well, Mr. Ross, I can give you an audience of half an hour."

They entered a room, and Mr. Lincoln locked the door, and then in a very serious manner asked, "Now, Mr. Ross, tell me, if you please, what you have to say."

Mr. Ross—who though poor, was not an ignorant man, being as well as the President descended from the Scotch, and a good historian, six feet three inches and a quarter in height, just one-fourth inch less than the President—said, after remarking how he admired him and his statesmanship, that he had not come to ask for an office for himself or his friends; but he "very much desired to know whether the President was a Christian, that is, truly converted to God, and enjoyed the witness of it," etc.

To this Abraham Lincoln replied, in the most solemn and serious manner, in the negative, saying, "Mr. Ross, I am glad that you have come here to ask me that important question; and I must confess to you that I have not experienced what you term the new birth, but I believe in it."

Mr. Ross said that during their conversation the President manifested great concern of mind. He said he urged the President to an immediate acceptance of Christ.

He asked him if he could not close the theatres in the place, to which the President replied that he could not. Then Mr. Ross replied, "I am apprehensive of a great calamity."

The President gave Mr. Ross a free pass to his home, walked with the poor, honest and godly carpet weaver down Pennsylvania avenue side by side, thanked him very much, and wished his prayers in his behalf.

Mr. Ross said that during their entire interview there was not a smile on his honest and care-worn face.

Mr. Ross was very deeply impressed with the awful solemnity and seriousness of the President. Three months after this interview the nation was called upon to mourn the loss of the greatest, best and most patriotic President she ever had. She mourns to-day and always will.

The foregoing statements I received from Mr. Ross' own lips, and many beside myself can testify to it.—Levi Kelly in Free Methodist.

WEBSTER ON RELIGION.

On the 14th of November, 1848, Daniel Webster delivered an address in the Supreme Court of Massachusetts on the death of Chief Justice Mason. The following beautiful and impressive passages are among his closing remarks:

"Nothing of character is really permanent but virtue and personal worth. These remain. Whatever of excellence is wrought in the soul itself belongs to both worlds. Real goodness does not attach itself merely to this life; it points to another world. Political or professional reputation cannot last forever; but a conscience void of offense before God and man is an inheritance for eternity. Religion, therefore, is a necessary and indispensable element in any great human character. There is no living without it. Religion is the tie that connects man with his Creator, and holds him to his throne. If that tie be all sundered, all broken, he floats away, a worthless atom in the universe; its proper attractions all gone, its destiny thwarted, and its whole future nothing but darkness, desolation and death. A man with no sense of religious duty is he whom the Scriptures describes in terse and terrific language, as living 'without a God in the world.' Such a man is out of his proper being, out of the circle of all his duties, out of the circle of all his happiness, and away, far, far away, from the purpose of his creation."

COLBY AND WEBSTER.

The year before Mr. Webster died, in the autumn of 1851, I was spending a few weeks with him at his place in Franklin, Massachusetts. One pleasant day he said to me: "I am going to take a drive up to Andover, and I want you to go with me."

Andover was about ten miles from his place in Franklin.

"When we get into the wagon I will tell you who I am going to see."

The horse was harnessed, and we started. After recounting many reminiscences as we passed, he said:

"I am going to see Johnny Colby, a brother-in-law of mine. He married my oldest half-sister. I have not seen him for forty-five years; his wife died many years since. When I was a lad Colby was a smart, driving, trading, swearing yeoman, money-loving and money-getting. He was a reckless, wild, harum-scarum, dare devil sort of fellow—the wickedest man in the neighborhood, as far as swearing and impiety went. He would pick me up when I was a little fellow, throw me astride of a horse bareback without bridle; and send the horse to the brook, and I had to hold on to his mane."

"After a time his wife, who was a religious, good woman, died, and my interest in John Colby pretty much ceased."

"The reason why I am going to see him to-day is, I have been told he has become a convert to the Christian religion, and has met with that mysterious change which we call a change of heart; in other words, he has become a constant, praying Christian."

We drove on and reached the village—a little, quiet place, with one street running through it, with a few houses, store, tavern, and postoffice. By inquiry we found the place, a very comfortable two-story house, with a green lawn in front. The door was open; there was no occasion to knock.

Sitting in the middle of the room was a striking figure, who proved to be Johnny Colby. Upon a little table in front of him was a large, old-fashioned "Scott's Family Bible." It lay open, and he had evidently been reading it. He was over six feet high; his head was covered with heavy, thick, bushy hair, white as wool. He straightened himself up and greeted us. "Walk in, gentlemen." The meeting was a little awkward.

Mr. Webster said: "This is Mr. Colby, Mr. John Colby, is it not?"

"That is my name, sir," he replied.

"I suppose you don't know me?" said Mr. Webster.

"No, I don't know you; and I should like to know how you know me," was the reply.

"Have you no recollection of me?" said Mr. Webster.

"Not the slightest."

"You married my oldest sister," said Mr. Webster, "and I am little Dan."

"You Daniel Webster! Is it possible that this is the little black lad that used to ride the horse to water?" Mr. Webster approached him, they embraced each other, and both wept.

"Why, sit down," said Mr. Colby. "I cannot believe my senses. I never expected to see you again. I don't know what to say. They say that you are a great man; that you are a famous man, and you cannot tell how delighted I am to hear such things. But, Daniel, the time is short—you won't stay here long. I want to ask you one important question. You may be a great man; are you a good man? Are you a Christian man? Do you love the Lord Jesus Christ? This is the only question worth answering—are you a Christian? You know, Daniel, what I have been—one of the wickedest of men. Your poor sister, who is now in heaven, knows that. But the Spirit of the Almighty has come down and plucked me as a brand from the everlasting burning. O Daniel, I would not give what is contained within the covers of this book for all the honors that have been conferred on men from the creation of the world until now. Are you a Christian? Do you love Christ? You have not answered me."

"John Colby," replied Webster, "you have asked me a very important question, and one which should not be lightly answered. I intend to give you an answer, and one that is truthful, or I won't give you any. I hope I am a Christian; I profess to be a Christian. But while I say that, I wish to add, and I say it with shame and confusion of face, that I am not such a Christian as I wish I were. I have lived in this world, surrounded by its honors and temptations, and I am afraid, John Colby, that I am not as good a Christian as I ought to be. I am afraid I have not your faith and hope; but still I hope and trust that the grace which has converted you, and made you an heir of salvation, will do the same for me. I trust it, and I also trust, John Colby—and it won't be long before our summons will come—that we shall meet in a better world, and meet those who have gone before us, whom we knew, and who trusted in the same divine free grace. It won't be long. You cannot tell, John Colby, how much delight it gave me to hear of your conversion. The hearing of that has led me here to-day. I came to see with my own eyes, and hear with my own ears, the story from a man that I know and remember well. What a wicked man you used to be!"

"O Daniel!" exclaimed John Colby, "you don't remember how wicked I was. I never thought of God. I never cared for him. I was worse than a heathen. Now I am only waiting to go home to him and to meet your sainted sister, my poor wife. I wish, Daniel, that you might be a prayerful Christian, as I trust you are. Daniel," he earnestly added, "will you pray with me?"

We knelt down, and Mr. Webster offered a most touching and fervent prayer. As soon as he had pronounced the "Amen," Mr. Colby followed in a most pathetic, stirring appeal to God for the family, for me, and for every one. The brothers-in-law took an affectionate leave of each other, and we left. Mr. Webster could hardly refrain from tears.

"I should like to know," said he, "what the enemies of religion would say to John Colby's conversion—humanly speaking, as unlikely to become a Christian as any man I ever saw."

"Whatever people may say," said Mr. Webster, "nothing can convince me that anything short of the grace of Almighty God could make such a change as I with my own eyes have witnessed in the life of John Colby."—Sel.

FOR THE GIRLS.

BY AUNT ALICE.

Dear little girls, I am going to tell you of a little girl whom I always loved. Now I never saw her, so I cannot describe her to you. I read about her in my primer at school; but I will tell you how I used to imagine she would look. A small girl, with large brown eyes, and masses of golden-brown ringlets.

This little girl—we will call her Bessie—had a little brother whom she loved very dearly. Sickness came upon this much-loved brother, and Bessie was sad at heart. She had prayed to the dear God to spare her dear little brother to her, and she felt that the One who bade little children come unto him, when he was here upon earth, would answer her prayer.

One evening shortly before her brother's illness, as Bessie was in the grove near the house she saw a nest in the bushes, and in the nest, glinting in the twilight, three little white eggs. She stretched out her hand to take them, thinking how much her brother would be pleased with the pretty little eggs, when she heard a flutter of wings, and looking up she saw the mother-bird watching her with an imploring look in her bright round eyes. Bessie dropped her hand and said to the parent-bird, "No, little birdie, I will not take your eggs, for you must love them dearly."

Just at dusk one evening Bessie was sitting in the room where her little brother was lying on his bed sick, it seemed, unto death. Bessie leaned out of the window, watched the bright stars come out one by one, and again breathed a prayer for her brother to be recovered from his illness. As she leaned her elbow on the sill, she heard a cooing beside her, and turning saw the pigeon whose eggs she had spared.

"Little girl, little girl," cooed the pigeon, "there is something I must tell you. Last night I heard the angels whisper in the grove, and they said that you were so good and so kind to leave me my eggs that God would spare your brother to you;" and then the pigeon spread her wings and flew away.

Do you not think, girls, that was a great reward for a little act of kindness? God who sees us, takes notice of the smallest acts of kindness we do. He has said that even the giving of a cup of cold water to one of his children will not be unrewarded. How earnestly we should try, then, to perform as many kindnesses as possible; to be gentle, loving, and forgiving. For it is the small, every-day acts that make or mar our life.

Brooklyn, N. Y.

TEMPERANCE.

THE BRITISH WORKMEN AND DRINK.

In a recent letter John Burns, the leader of the London workmen in their efforts for a better living, writes:

No. 108 LAVENDER HILL, BATTERSEA, LONDON, June 28, 1890.—Dear Sir: The Chancellor of the Exchequer did not say that the increase in wages and reduction of hours of labor of the dock laborers of London had merely tended to increase their drunkenness and largely contributed to an increase in the Treasury from the liquor traffic. His statement that the increase of £2,000,000 was due to the fact that the people had been toasting the prosperity of trade in the country. He had no reference to any class, but did say that there had been a great increase in the duty from rum.

I attended a meeting last night of 6,000 dock laborers, and asked those who ought to know what was the effect of higher wages and better conditions, and the universal opinion was that the workers of London who have received better wages are more sober than ever they were.

AS AN ABSTAINER MYSELF,

I am delighted at the conduct of the dockers, and more than pleased at the diminution not only of drinking, but of betting among them, due in no small measure to the fact that their leaders, Messrs. Mann, Tillett and others, are temperance men.

THE TEMPERANCE TEMPLE.

The greatest enemies I have in London are the betting men and publicans. Their enmity is a testimony to this fact, that as we ask for reduction of hours for more leisure and education we urge the men to spend their higher wages in home comforts. In twenty years the amount spent on liquor per head of population has decreased 20 per cent, while the aggregate has increased through growth of population.

In England, as elsewhere, the short hours' movement has always tended to sobriety and increased the intelligence of the workers. In my own trade, twelve or fourteen years ago, secretaries of unions were bribed to transfer the meeting place from the "Pig and Whistle" to the "Brown Bear," so that the publican might have the profit from drink consumed. So great has been the change that the proprietor of the "Brown Bear" will almost give you £20 to take the meeting away, as the drink consumed does not pay him to have the meeting there.

At boat races, bean feasts, holiday gatherings, etc., the change in the drinking habits is most marked. Side by side with the demand for shorter hours is also the demand for free libraries, parks and open spaces, gymnasia, cricket and foot-ball grounds. Leisure to-day does not mean drinking, but the opportunities for thought, education and true thrift, which is impossible to men whose long hours make them animals and content with a brutal existence.

The rich man who drinks does so because he has nothing better to do. This means that the poor man who provides him with the means for drinking has to work longer hours than he should, and, as a consequence, often heals the monotony of his toil by bouts of drinking, the cause of which the eight hour advocates are going to remove by equalizing the labor of both. Thus the lazy man will have something to take an interest in, while the previously overworked slave will have leisure, without which manhood and its best characteristics are impossible. Yours truly,

JOHN BURNS.

Germany's own papers and statistics refute the claim that little drunkenness exists in their beer-loving country. The following is a current item from the German press: 430,000,000 marks for its army, but not much less for alcoholic drinks, which cost 406,000,000 marks. Statistics show that the intemperate class furnish thirty per cent of all the poor, and seventy-five per cent of all the criminals.

The Horse and Trumpeters, a public house in Crutched Friars in London, England, which has been permitted to sell ardent spirits for about three hundred and fifty years past, has had the renewal of its license refused on account of there being no longer a demand for a public house in the neighborhood.

THE TEMPERANCE TEMPLE.

Through the kindness of Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, president of the Woman's Temperance Building Association, we have the pleasure of showing our readers a picture of the building whose corner-stone is to be laid in September, and which when completed in 1892 will be one of the best known and best loved buildings in the country, for the treasure of a hundred thousand women and children will be laid in its walls.

All who love the truth and hate unrighteousness and lies are interested in this grand structure. Mrs. Carse, after reading our editorial two weeks ago, in which the Temperance Temple was contrasted with the huge building proposed by the Freemasons, wrote that the statement of the Cynosure was "accurate and good."

The foundations are being prepared on one of the best lots in the city, extending 190 feet on La Salle street and 96 on Monroe. The building will be fireproof, and the entire cost, including interest, insurance, etc., will be $1,100,000.

Mrs. Carse in her report last fall to the National W. C. T. U. said of this magnificent enterprise:

"Seven years has the Temperance Temple been my thought by day, my dream by night. No matter what other work absorbed me, it was but for a time: true as the needle to the pole, my mind would revert back to that which I felt was one of the crying needs of the W. C. T. U. A great National building, in which would be located the National headquarters, and a hall that would commemorate to all time the struggle which the Christian womanhood of the land had made to save their homes and loved ones from this widespread evil of intemperance, a hall in which the incense of prayer shall daily ascend for the extermination of the liquor traffic. Above, and beyond all this, was the desire that a large income might be at the disposal of the National and State officers, with which they could push on to success the numerous lines of work adopted by our society, which in many departments are now languishing and almost entirely inoperative, because there is no money either in the State or National treasury with which to prosecute them.

"In the vision which God has given me of this great enterprise, the beneficent uses to which the income from the building may be applied has been one of its most important features. Then, to have such a commanding building erected in the central metropolis of this great country as a mighty object lesson to the multitudes from north and south, east and west, which are constantly passing through it, showing that the Woman's Christian Temperance Union has come to stay until the viper which is poisoning the life blood of the nation shall be exterminated. It will also be a continual protest ever before the eyes of the people expressing the fact that the Christian womanhood of the land is bitterly and unalterably opposed to the licensing of a traffic which brings only want and woe, crime and death, in its path."

THE FRIENDS SAY PROHIBITION.

Here is a copy of the resolutions reported to the Kansas Yearly Meeting of Friends, and enthusiastically adopted. I do not wish to abbreviate them, even at the risk of infringing on your space, because some other denominations, who claim to be more progressive than "the slow old Quakers," sometimes vote to "strike out," "amend," or "lay on the table" that which a real whole-souled prohibitionist knows to be the very soul of a prohibition resolution. J. H. G.

WHEREAS, It is now an admitted fact that the liquor traffic is an unmitigated curse, producing evil and only evil, continually; and,

WHEREAS, By the legislation of our State we have declared it to be a crime to engage in it, punishing with severe penalties those who engage in the manufacture or sale as a beverage of intoxicating liquors; and,

WHEREAS, The results of prohibition have been entirely satisfactory to the people wherever the officers of the law have faithfully performed their duty in the enforcement of the law; therefore,

Resolved, 1. That we urge our people to use all the honest means given to the American citizen to secure the election to office of persons who are known to be fully committed to the enforcement of the prohibitory law.

2. That we rejoice at the rapid growth of prohibition sentiment all over the country, as well as in our own State; and that we desire here to enter our most solemn protest against the re-submission of this question to the people. Send the word back to the whisky ring, the ones moving in this despicable scheme, and let it roll over our prairies, echo over the mountains and reverberate through the valleys: Kansas takes no backward steps!

3. That we rejoice in the victories gained in North and South Dakota and pray God's richest blessing to rest upon those young and vigorous States.

4. That, while we deeply deplore the failures in so many of our eastern States to secure constitutional prohibition, we see no reason for discouragement. They were not defeats, but only slight repulses for the time, like the falling back of a skirmish line of a great army that will only hasten forward its reserve forces and prepare for a triumphant advance, to the complete extermination of our foe.

5. That the clerks (of the yearly meeting) be requested to prepare and sign, in behalf of this body, a memorial to the next Congress asking them to so amend the interstate commerce laws as to prevent the shipping of intoxicating liquors in any form into those States having laws restricting the sale thereof except to persons authorized so to sell according to law. Also a memorial earnestly protesting against the sending of alcoholic liquors from this country to Africa and other heathen lands.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE NEW TESTAMENT.

LESSON VII.—Third Quarter.—Aug. 17.

SUBJECT.—The Ten Lepers.—Luke 17:11-19.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Were there not ten cleansed? but where are the nine?—Luke 17:17.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

DAILY READINGS.—M.—Luke 17:1-10. T.—Luke 17:11-19. W.—2 Kings 5:1-14. T.—Lev. 14:1-29. F.—Ps. 51:1-19. S.—Ps. 40:1-17. S.—Ps. 116:1-19.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. The ten lepers.—Some of Christ's most remarkable miracles were wrought on lepers. These ten miserable outcasts believed that he could heal them, and they added works to faith by lifting up their voices and saying, "Jesus, Master, have mercy on us." This is a good illustration of that saving belief which urges to intelligent persevering action. They seized the offered opportunity. They did not wait for another which might not and very likely never would come. The accepted time is always now; and no Christian worker can be a successful winner of souls who does not feel pressing upon him the solemn responsibility of urging men to immediate, instant repentance. We notice also that their prayer was in the name of Jesus only. Had they offered it in any other they could not have had the smallest hope of being saved from their dread malady. Neither can we hope to be saved from sin or its consequences unless we apply for it in the proper way. One of these men was a Samaritan, the others were followers of Judaism in its most corrupt and formal estate, yet their religion had room enough in it for Christ. But no lodge religion has; and for this reason it is worse than Romanism, or any form of worship that gives Christ a place, however small. In the one salvation is possible, but utterly impossible in the other.

2. The lepers healed.—vs. 14-18. These men had faith. They did not wait until they felt in themselves they were healed before they obeyed his command to "go and show themselves to the priest." We are not obliged to be conscious that God is doing a good work in us before we can be sure of the fact; for obedience and not our feelings or our emotions is the true test of faith. "As they went they were cleansed." It is only as we do Christ's will that his healing, cleansing, saving power comes upon us. Knowledge, faith, every Christian virtue, comes through the intelligent exercise of our spiritual faculties. Every step that bears us away from our besetting sins and fleshly appetites; from all that is merely earthly and sensual is a step on towards the complete and perfect life which is "hid with Christ in God," in which there can be no malady, no weakness of body or soul. Only one, and he a Samaritan, showed sufficient gratitude for his cleansing to turn back and thank the Lord for what he had done for him. Thanksgiving is as much our duty as petition. "He glorified God with a loud voice." There is a tendency to refine and cultivate our worship down to a point which forbids obedience to the appeal of the psalmist, to "make a joyful noise unto the Lord." Why the others did not turn back too we cannot tell, but it well illustrates the ingratitude of human nature. How many vow to serve the Lord in times of sickness and trouble, and then with returning prosperity forget to pay their vows. How many even among professing Christians so forget what they owe to the Lord that not even a hearty "hallelujah" ever escapes from their lips. Could every saved sinner realize what it is to be saved—what they are saved from and what they are saved to, there would be no lifeless prayer meetings. Praise would fill up every gap. "He fell on his face at Jesus' feet." The most thankful souls are always the most humble. Perhaps there is no grace in which we show such a lamentable deficiency as the grace of thankfulness. Our religion should be a constant wellspring of joy, refreshing our own souls and the souls of others, yet how often a professing Christian will fret over some petty disappointment or trial like the most worldly sinner.

3. The perfect cure.—v. 19. This Samaritan received a blessing the others missed. He was made whole—whole in body and soul, thus precluding any return of his dreadful malady. Christ is a perfect Saviour, and "faith which works by love" is lacking when we fail to obtain from him a perfect cure.

HELPFUL THOUGHTS FROM PELOUBET.

TWO OBJECT LESSONS.—Leprosy is a remarkable type of sin in some of its aspects. Drunkness is another visible and widely known illustration in the body and mind, and its effects on happiness and usefulness, of the effects of sin in the soul. Both of these are God's object lessons, ever warning men against sin.

It is not necessary to wait for a knowledge of all truth, or even of much truth, in order to be able to believe and be saved. When one has really believed what the Lord has said to him, and acted accordingly, as real belief will lead him to do, then the spiritual healing promised to faith will be given by the Saviour.—Professor Riddle.

The best of us are far too like the nine lepers. We are more ready to pray than to praise, and more disposed to ask God for what we have not than to thank him for what we have. Murmuring, complaints, and discontent abound on every side. Few indeed are to be found who are not continually hiding their mercies under a bushel and setting their wants and trials on a hill. Let us pray for a daily thankful heart. It is a spirit which God loves and delights to honor (Phil. 4:6).

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—Professor C. M. Esbjorn of Augustana College, who was disappointed in his purpose to address the April conference in this city, has been called to the pastorate of the Swedish Lutheran Church, San Francisco.

—Dr. William Henry Roberts, Stated Clerk of the Presbyterian General Assembly, reports the total membership of the Presbyterian Church (Northern) at 771,233. This indicates a net increase of 17,484.

—According to published minutes of the Reformed Presbyterian Synod, the present membership of that church is 11,289. The contributions last year averaged $21.00 per member. Total contributions and subscriptions secured by members for church purposes $238,615. National Reform collections are reported at $6,008.

—The eighth general conference for Bible study and equipment for service under the direction of D. L. Moody, opened Thursday evening at Northfield with a pictorial Bible lecture by George W. Mackay, of New York City. The attendance was 400. The conference will close on Aug. 10.

—The Methodist bishops are thus scattered: Bishop Taylor is on the Pacific coast. Bishop Newman is in Japan officially. Bishop Ninde is in Salt Lake regions. Bishop Foss is recruiting health among the Alps. Bishop Warren is in Denmark holding conference. Bishop Thoburn arrived in New York June 30th. Bishop Fowler is in San Francisco. Bishop Hurst is in Europe.

—The Lutheran Synod of Missouri, Ohio, and other States, in session recently in Milwaukee, Wis., adopted resolutions stating that while Lutherans are constrained by conscience not to send their children to the public schools, they disapprove of any attempt to distribute the public school funds among parochial schools. The resolutions take ground against the present compulsory school laws of Wisconsin and Illinois.

—Dr. L. W. Munhall will lead the third annual meeting for Bible study, at Ocean Grove, N. J., August 6-10. The following distinguished preachers and teachers will be present, and conduct the study: James H. Brookes, D. D., St. Louis; A. J. Gordon, D. D., William Nast Brodbeck and Mr. and Mrs. George C. Needham, Boston; Nathaniel West, D. D., St. Paul; William J. Erdman, D. D., Asheville, and Prof. W. G. Moorehead, D. D., Xenia. Other teachers will take part in the conference. The subjects considered will be fundamental, and therefore of great interest. The singing will be conducted by Prof. and Mrs. John J. Lowe. Any further information desired on this subject can be had by addressing Association Office, Ocean Grove, N. J.

—The Rev. A. B. Mackay, of Montreal, in a letter to the New York Observer, referring to those who maintain that it is monstrous and uncharitable to class papists with idolaters, says: "I wish all these objectors had been in Montreal on a recent Sabbath when the Corpus Christi procession took place. Our Roman Catholic fellow-citizens were publicly urged by their priests to fall into the procession, to adorn the line of march, and to do all in their power to convince unbelievers of their faith in the greatest of all Christian mysteries. The great rallying-cry was, 'God is to be carried through our streets to-morrow.' These were the very words used to urge the people to turn out and show Him all reverence and honor; and their God, in the shape of a baked bit of dough, was carried through the streets with great pomp, and worshiped by kneeling thousands with a zeal that could tolerate no neutrality."

—The drink traffic with the native races of Africa received a large share of attention at the annual meeting of the English Congregational Union in London, and the question was ably presented by the Rev. John McKenzie, who moved a resolution strongly condemning the traffic, and expressing the hope that measures might be devised for exterminating it. He suggested that a geographical belt be fixed in Africa by international agreement, north or south of which it should be illegal to introduce strong drink.

—All missions at work among the Santals in India, report numerous accessions and rapid development. At the present rate of progress, in a few years Santalistan will be as thoroughly Christianized as Tinnevely now is. The Norwegian Lutheran Mission has a membership of 5,272 at 14 stations. More than 400 were baptized last year. Mr. Campbell, of the Scotch Free Church, reports very hopefully of his section of the field; he cannot provide teachers fast enough to instruct the people who are anxious to embrace the new faith. From other sections of the field similar reports are received. The set time to visit India's aborigines seems to have come. The missions which have been properly equipped and efficiently maintained are able to take full advantage of this movement toward Christianity.—Indian Methodist Times.

—During the year ending April 30, 2,129 converts were received into the churches of the A. B. C. F. M. in Japan, an average of over 43 to each church; 43 of the 49 churches are self-supporting. Christianity is advancing rapidly, yet there are still 250,000 Buddhist priests in the empire, or more than eight times the total number of Christians.

—The Congregationalist Church at Okayama, Japan, has 542 members and a Sunday-school of more than a thousand scholars. It supports, besides its own pastor, four paid evangelists, thirteen out-stations, a Young Men's Christian Association, a woman's temperance society, a monthly magazine and a small dispensary.

—The Jesuit, Father Raphael de Zufa Menendez, of Spain, has been received into the Protestant Church by Pastor Lopez Rodriguez. He was well known as professor in Bordeaux, as apostolic missionary in Africa, and as missionary preacher in Madrid and Barcelona. Pastor Rodriguez sends us his photograph and an interesting sketch of his life. Much may be expected from him.

—The Swedish Mission Society will soon send seven missionaries to the Congo.

EDUCATIONAL NOTES.

—It is proposed in Chicago to engage a matron for every school building in the city, whose duty it shall be to look after the physical well-being of the pupils.

—President Seelye retires from the presidency of Amherst College, and his successor is to take hold in the fall. But who that man is the board of trustees declined until this week to announce.

—Miss Sallie Hollie, a Virginian girl, has undertaken the education of the colored girls of her State. She proposes to establish small schools throughout Virginia where the colored girl can learn enough in two years to start squarely with the world.

—The German universities have been unusually well attended during this summer semester. Berlin has 4,713 regular students and 1,822 visiting students; Leipzig, 3,177; Halle, 1,626; Erlangen, 1,000. Heidelberg, Kiel, Munich, and Goettingen also have extraordinary full rolls.

—A general strike was ordered of workmen engaged on the public school buildings of New York, the object being to get rid of three contractors objectionable to the walking delegates of the secret unions. About 1,200 men are out of work, and there are doubts that the schools will be able to open on Sept. 9.

—President M. E. Gates, of Rutgers' College, who was on Wednesday elected to the presidency of Amherst College, to succeed Dr. Seelye, says that he is in no way committed to leave Rutgers. Within the next fortnight he will probably announce whether he will remain at Rutgers, accept the call to Amherst, or go to Oberlin College, whose presidency was also tendered him last month.

—The military draft in Italy in 1888 consisted of 162,326. Of this number 89,602 could read and write, 2,954 could only read, and 69,770 could neither read nor write. Comparing this proportion of educated men with that of the draft of 1885, the general state of education in Italy has advanced by 3.39 per cent. within the last three years. If this progress is continued for the next forty years, there will not be a man in that country unable to read and to write.

LODGE NOTES.

The North Atlantic squadron has been ordered to Boston for the National Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic.

The committee to locate the new orphan asylum for the Odd-fellows of Illinois visited Lincoln and Shelbyville, both cities having offered large bonuses.

The Supreme Lodge Knights of Pythias has decided to recognize hereafter only the endowment rank for Pythian insurance and all other institutions are denounced as imitators.

The New York cloak-makers' strike was ended last week by the manufacturers agreeing to discharge all non-union men, with the understanding that they would be taken back as soon as they joined the union.

The convention of Modern Woodmen of Kansas was held in Kansas City, Mo., Wednesday, and 200 delegates were in attendance. Resolutions favoring State jurisdiction, but retaining connection with head camps and the charter of Illinois, were adopted.

In regard to White Cap outrages the Attorney General of Indiana says that the governor could do nothing; that prosecutions must rest entirely with the local courts; that the governor could not engage local prosecutors because there was no fund for that purpose, and that nothing can be done except through the Legislature.

A crowd of Freemasons from the East, calling themselves "Nobles of the Mystic Shrine," passed through this city on an excursion the other day. The daily papers say the party was bountifully supplied with beautiful and emblematic floral pieces, an abundance of fine wines, and with all the good things necessary to making it pleasant for the nobles.

The demonstration by the Odd-fellows in this city during this week they promise be the largest affair of the kind ever held in America. They say that at least 50,000 Odd-fellows accompanied by nearly as many more of their friends will come to the city. The grand parade, on Thursday, August 7, will be participated in by 10,000 members of the Military Order of Patriarchs Militant, about 30,000 Odd-fellows, General Underwood's staff of 150 mounted men, one band of 100 musicians and many other bands. The Lake Front will be given over for the use of this secret society.

The grand jury has indicted William and Henry Clegg, Lafayette Baldwin and Samuel Deem, all well-known merchants and farmers, charged with white-capping four months ago. It is alleged that Lafayette Baldwin visited the house of James Anderson, a neighbor, in his absence, and made a desperate criminal assault on his wife. Mrs. Anderson was seriously hurt. When Anderson returned he swore vengeance. That night before he could take action a dozen masked men visited his house, took him and his wife out and beat them senseless. The house was fired and a notice left warning Anderson to leave the State and never accuse Baldwin under pain of death. The men indicted were those recognized by Anderson. Mrs. Anderson is said to have been driven insane by her sufferings.

A GIRL WORTH HAVING.

A few weeks ago I read in your paper Mr. Moorehead's experience in the Plating Business, in which he cleared $167.85 in a month; but I beat that if I am a girl. I sent as he directed and got a Plater, and cleared $208.17 in one month. Can any of your readers beat this? You can get spoons, forks or jewelry to plate at every house. Send $3 to W. H. Griffith & Co., Zanesville, Ohio, and they will send you a plater, and you can make money enough in three hours to pay for it, or address them for circulars. There is plenty of work to do in both city and country, then why should any person be poor or out of employment with such an opportunity at hand. I hope my experience will help others as much as Mr. Moorehead's did me. LAURA B. —.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

A favorable report has been ordered on the bill introduced by Senator Sherman to incorporate the Society of the Red Cross, with Clara Barton, George Kennan and other prominent people as incorporators.

One hundred years ago July 31st, the first mechanical patent was issued by the government. It was granted to Samuel Hopkins for making pot and pearl ashes. The total number of patents issued during the century was 433,432.

CHICAGO.

More than forty arrests were made Tuesday at the gambling dens of this city, and there is more to follow.

The Inter Ocean says that certain employees of the city have been trying to stir up a strike among the north side street car men.

COUNTRY.

New York's new aqueduct is thirty miles long. It cost $22,000,000 and eighty lives were lost in its construction. It brings 318,000,000 gallons of water to New York daily.

The postmaster at Warren, W. T., has been requested to resign. He is charged with selling 2-cent stamps for 5 cents, telling his patrons that high rates of freight made it impossible to sell them for less.

Cardinal Gibbons is said to have offered a parish to Rev. Dr. Burtell, the suspended New York priest, so as to take him from under Archbishop Corrigan's control. This would be an unprecedented act on the part of a Catholic bishop.

Mrs. Rebecca Cable, mother of George W. Cable, the defender of the black race, died at her home in Northampton, Mass., Thursday morning.

At Joliet Monday, the employees of the Illinois Steel Company received one per cent. on their salaries, the first installment under the profit sharing scheme. It is proposed to pay employees quarterly a portion of the profits amounting to 5 per cent. per annum of their salaries after they have served the company one year.

J. Milton Turner, the colored ex-Minister to Liberia, with others, has secured 23,000,000 acres of land in Mexico which he proposes to colonize with Negroes from the United States. It is said that leading colored men favor the plan.

The weather report of Prof. Snow, of the State University of Kansas, shows that but two Julys in the past twenty-three years have been warmer than the one just closed, and but two Julys show less rainfall. The rainfall for the month was only 1.66 inches or 2.67 inches below the average.

New Hampshire's population has increased 30,000 in ten years.

Tuesday the Montana Supreme Court decided that the Australian ballot law is mandatory and not directory in its character. The decision is considered of great importance.

Manuel Gerutia, son of a wealthy Mexican, attending school at New York, was discovered Monday to be afflicted with leprosy. His condition is not dangerous, and the disease is not considered dangerous.

It is reported that one white brakeman has been removed from each passenger train on the Rock Island route and their places have been filled with Negroes.

At Cale, Ind., incendiaries set fire to the residence of the Rev. David Plumb Tuesday. The building was destroyed. Mr. Plumb was fatally injured, and his wife and three children perished in the flames.

At New York Friday, Arbuckle Bros. ordered $500,000 in gold bars for shipment to Europe. The total engaged this week is $6,475,000.

Fourteen months after the Johnstown flood, the local paper prints what it claims to be a correct list of the dead. The total number is given at 2,187, which, if correct, leaves over 200 bodies

(Continued on 16th page.)

SCROFULA

Is that impurity of the blood which produces unsightly lumps or swellings in the neck; which causes running sores on the arms, legs, or feet; which develops ulcers in the eyes, ears, or nose, often causing blindness or deafness; which is the origin of pimples, cancerous growths, or "humors;" which, fastening upon the lungs, causes consumption and death. It is the most ancient of all diseases, and very few persons are entirely free from it.

How Can It Be CURED

By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by the remarkable cures it has accomplished, has proven itself to be a potent and peculiar medicine for this disease. If you suffer from scrofula, try Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"Every spring my wife and children have been troubled with scrofula, my little boy, three years old, being a terrible sufferer. Last spring he was one mass of sores from head to feet. We all took Hood's Sarsaparilla, and all have been cured of the scrofula. My little boy is entirely free from sores, and all four of my children look bright and healthy." W. B. ATHERTON, Passaic City, N. J.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

PATENTS

Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees.

Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington.

Send model, drawing or photo., with description. We advise, if patentable or not, free of charge. Our fee not due till patent is secured.

A Pamphlet, "How to Obtain Patents," with names of actual clients in your State, county, or town, sent free. Address,

C. A. SNOW & CO.

Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

SCOTCH RITE MASONRY ILLUSTRATED.

The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all Masonic rites, and are fully and accurately given in

"FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED,"

as advertised, but the signs, grips, passwords, etc., of these three degrees are given at the close of Vol 2 of

"Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated"

Vol. 1 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3d to 18th inclusive. Vol. 2 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 19th to 33d inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each; in cloth, $1 each. Each volume per dozen, paper covers, $4; per dozen, cloth bound, $9.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W Madison St Chicago,

MASONIC OUTRAGES.

BY REV. H. H. HINMAN.

The character of this valuable pamphlet is seen from its chapter headings: I.—Masonic Attempts on the Lives of Seceders. II.—Masonic Slander. III.—Masonic Assault on Free Speech. IV.—Freemasonry Among the Colored People. V.—Masonic Interference with the Punishment of Criminals. VI.—The Fructs of the Masonic institution as seen in the Conspiracies and Outrages of Other Secret Orders. VII.—The Location of the Secret Lodge System to the Foregoing and Similar Outrages.

PRICE, POSTPAID, 50 CENTS.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

"THE WHOLE IS BETTER THAN A PART," AND YOU HAVE IT HERE IN A "NUT-SHELL"

SECRET SOCIETIES ILLUSTRATED.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge) and to the fourteenth degree of the York Rite. Adaptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 90 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen. For sale by the National Christian Association, at Headquarters for Anti-Secrecy Literature, 221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

SPECIAL BOOK SALE!

Regular Price.		Selling Price.
$.10	"REPORT OF THE TRIAL of Rev. J. T. Michael," an Elder in the M. E. Church, for arraigning the Bishops, Elders and Preachers in charge for being Freemasons contrary to the Discipline of the M. E. Church." Paper, 28 pages.	$.05
$.75	"BEREA COLLEGE," Kentucky. An interesting history of the founding of that College for white and black in a slave State. Cloth, 87 pages.	$.25
$.30	"SONGS FOR THE TIMES," by Geo. W. Clark. Words and Music. Intended for Prohibitions and W. C. T. U. meetings. Boards, 152 pages.	$.20
$.25	"MASONIC DEGREES ILLUSTRATED." Containing all the pass and real words, all the pass and real grips and signs of the first three degrees of Freemasonry, from the time of King Solomon, King Hiram of Tyre, and Hiram Abiff, the Widow's Son, to the present time. Compiled by E. M. Trowbridge. Paper, 39 pages. With certificate and demit showing that the author was a Freemason.	$.05
$.20	"THE INTERIOR OF SIERRA LEONE, West Africa." A lecture delivered at the Government Practicing School-Room, Freetown, Sierra Leone, together with remarks and addresses of gentlemen present, and the lecturer's replies. By J. Augustus Cole, of Shaingay, W. Africa. Paper, 54 pages.	$.10
$.25	"RELIGIOUS PERSECUTION." An examination of Cardinal Manning's letter in the New York Tribune, on Irish affairs and bearing on Home Rule. By Rev. John Lee. Paper, 83 pages.	$.15
$.25	"SKETCH OF THE LIFE OF JAMES G. BIRNEY." His relation to the Anti-slavery movement and place in history. By General William Birney. Paper, 32 pages.	$.10
$.75	"LUCILE VERNON, or the Church at Lansington. The experience of a young pastor. A novel. By Rev. W. T. Meloy, D. D. Cloth, 208 pages.	$.35
$1.00	"NATIONAL SUICIDE AND ITS PREVENTION." The following will show the drift of the book: Measure or Standard of Value; What is Honest Money; Our National Banks; Paper Money; Land Tenure, etc. By O. F. Lumry. Cloth, 224 pp.	$.50
$.15	"A WOMAN'S VICTORY, or the Query of the Lodgeville Church." By Jennie L. Hardie. Paper, 21 pp.	$.05
$.15	"MY EXPERIENCE WITH SECRET SOCIETIES." By a Traveler. Paper, 51 pp.	$.10
$.10	"WASHINGTON SOUVENIR." Portraits of Geo. Washington and his Co-patriots, with their testimony on Freemasonry. Size 18x24 inches. Framed it is an ornament to any home.	$.05
$.10	"SECRET SOCIETIES." A Lecture delivered at Oberlin College, Jan. 9, 1890. By Prof. Henry C. King. Paper, 36 pp.	$.05
$1.50	"HISTORY OF SECRET SOCIETIES IN FRANCE," or "THE CRADLE OF REBELLIONS." By Lucien De La Hodde. Translated from the French by Gen'l. J. W. Phelps. Cloth, 479 pp.	$.50
$.25	"THE PURITY CRUSADE." With portraits of some of its leaders. Paper, 114 pp.	$.15
Sent postpaid to any address on receipt of the selling price.
NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, Wm. L. PHILLIPS, Treasurer, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.
REVISED ODD-FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED.
The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (Ladies) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. The ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge-Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover, 50 cents; per dozen $4.00.
All orders promptly filled by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

HOME AND HEALTH.

HOW TO DESTROY MOTHS.

Close all the windows and all doors leading from the room about to undergo treatment, open wide each drawer and closet, and hang the contents over chairs or upon a clothes-horse brought into the room for the occasion. Take a piece of gum camphor as large as a hazel-nut for an ordinary room (as large as a walnut for a room 16 by 20), put it in an iron pot, and place the latter within another iron pot or upon an iron stand. Set fire to the camphor. It burns very fiercely, so set at a safe distance from furniture or hangings; the middle of the room is the best place, unless this be directly under a chandelier, in which case it can be placed more toward the side, as the heat is apt to injure the gilding or bronze. The dense smoke soon permeates every nook and corner, and suffocates every insect that inhales it. Canary-birds or gold-fish are to be carried from the room before beginning operations, and as soon as the camphor begins to burn, the operator may leave the room, as, provided she has taken the above precautions, there will be no danger of the fire spreading.

The camphor will burn from a quarter to half an hour, but it can be extinguished at any moment by placing over it a stove lid or the cover of the pot. Let the smoke remain in the room about half an hour, then open the windows wide, leaving them so all day. After a few hours' airing, the traces of smoke will be scarcely noticeable. All the rooms can be treated thus in succession or all at once, care being taken to guard against fire.—Harper's Bazar.

SNOW IN PLACE OF ICE.

Last winter Luman Foote ascertained that it would cost him $15 to fill his ice-house with ice, therefore he filled it with damp snow, well trodden down, at a cost of $1.25. The snow has kept very well and half of it yet remains. Of course he cannot use the snow in his refrigerator and ice-pitcher; but he places meat, fish, milk, butter, etc., on the snow in the ice-house, and such articles keep as well as they would on ice. Thus you see Mr. Foote has partly solved the ice problem; at all events he saved $13.75 by filling the ice-house with snow instead of ice.—Connecticut Western News.

"Lemonade and buttermilk are as good as any drinkable that you can find for this weather," said a physician. "They both are great things to quench thirst. They both act as a pleasant tonic to the stomach and they have a stimulating quality. But they should not be drank ice cold—that is, bits of ice should not be in the goblet. Let them be as cold as the ice-chest or refrigerator can make them, but not more than that. When you pour down your throat a pint or so of fluid that is fresh from the ice temporary paralysis of the stomach follows. If a man happens to be very hot such a thing is not infrequently as fatal as a stroke of lightning."—Cincinnati Times-Star.

Twenty drops of carbolic acid evaporated from a shovel will banish the flies from a room quicker than all the sticky fly-paper in existence, says an exchange. A small piece of camphor gum held over a lamp till it is consumed will also do the work well.

Dr. Mendel, a noted nerve specialist of Berlin, in pursuit of the origin of a certain form of nervous disease, has hunted down a form of inebriety, not before recognized. He terms it "coffee inebriety," and says it is rapidly increasing in that country, especially among working women. He has found large numbers of them who consume more than a pound each every week. The effect is manifest in frequent headaches, insomnia, great depression of spirits, trembling of the extremities, irregular action of the heart with all the accompanying distress. These symptoms constantly grow worse and are relieved by increasing quantities of coffee; sometimes the tincture is used. Dyspepsia in an aggravated form is usually present, as well as blotches and pimples on the skin. A bruise or slight injury proves the starting point of in-

For Fifty Years

the Standard
Blood-purifier
and Tonic,

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

has no equal as a

Spring
Medicine.

Prepared by

Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co.,
Lowell, Mass.

By All Odds

The most generally useful medicine is Ayer's Pills. As a remedy for the various diseases of the stomach, liver, and bowels, these Pills have no equal. Their sugar-coating causes them not only to be easy and pleasant to take, but preserves their medicinal integrity in all climates and for any reasonable length of time. The best family medicine, Ayer's Pills are, also, unsurpassed for the use of travelers, soldiers, sailors, campers, and pioneers. In some of the most critical cases, when all other remedies have failed, prove effective.

Ayer's Pills

"In the summer of 1864 I was sent to the Annapolis hospital, suffering with chronic diarrhea. While there, I became so reduced in strength that I could not speak and was compelled to write everything I wanted to say. I was then having some 25 or 30 stools per day. The doctors ordered a medicine that I was satisfied would be of no benefit to me. I did not take it, but persuaded my nurse to get me some of Dr. Ayer's Pills. About two o'clock in the afternoon I took six of these pills, and by midnight began to feel better. In the morning the doctors came again, and after deciding that my symptoms were more favorable, gave me a different medicine, which I did not use, but took four more of the pills instead. The next day the doctors came to see me, and thought I was doing nicely, (and so did I). I then took one pill a day for a week. At the end of that time, I considered myself cured and that Ayer's Pills had saved my life. I was then weak, but had no return of the disease, and gained in strength as fast as could be expected."—F. C. Luce, Late Lieut. 56th Regt. Mass. Vol. Infantry.

"Ayer's Pills are

The Best

I have ever used for headaches, and they act like a charm in relieving any disagreeable sensation in the stomach after eating."—Mrs. M. J. Ferguson, Pullens, Va.

"I was a sufferer for years from dyspepsia and liver troubles, and found no permanent relief until I commenced taking Ayer's Pills. They have effected a complete cure."—George W. Mooney, Walla Walla, W. T.

Ayer's Pills,

PREPARED BY

DR. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass.

Sold by all Druggists and Dealers in Medicine.

inflammation, erysipelatous in character. Melancholy and fear of death accompany this form of inebriety in all cases.

10,000

Another ten thousand edition of the tract,

KILLED, AND NO INQUEST.

This is a large 4-page tract at 30 cents per pound, 15 cents for half pound, and 10 cents for a third of a pound. It is an illustrated account of the death of Rev. J. W. Johnston, while being initiated by the officers of Huntington Lodge, W. Va., in January of this year. Sent postpaid at the above price. Address,

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
221 W. Madison St Chicago

STANDARD WORKS

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES.

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Association.

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. A liberal discount to dealers.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 75 cents. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive. Vol. II. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprised the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished. 25 cents each.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe. 20 cents each.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. In cloth, $1.50 each. Paper, 75 cents each.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pages, 75 cents.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance. Bound in one volume. In cloth, 589 pages, $1.00.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. 25 cents each.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper, 35 cents.

Hon. Thurlow Weed on the Morgan Abduction. This is the legally attested statement of this eminent Christian journalist and statesman concerning the unlawful seizure and confinement of Capt. Morgan in Canandaigua jail, his removal to Fort Niagara and subsequent drowning in Lake Ontario. 5 cents each.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a League with the Devil. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason. 15 cents each.

Freemasonry Self-Condemed. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church. Paper covers, price, 20 cents each.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each.

Anti-masonic Sermons and Addresses. Composed of "Masonry a Work of Darkness;" the Sermons of Messrs. Cross, William M'Nary, Dow and Sarver, the two addresses of President Blanchard, and the addresses of President H. H. George, Prof. J. G. Carson and Rev. M. S. Drury; "Thirteen Reasons Why a Christian cannot be a Freemason," "Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion," and "Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate?" 287 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate. By Rev. L. A. Post. 5 cents each.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper cover, 35 cents.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin trials. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each.

Stearns's Inquiry into the Nature and Tendency of Freemasonry. 338 pages. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor United Presbyterian church. 5 cents each.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. 10 cents each.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void; or FREEMASONRY SELF-CONVICTED. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. 207 pages. Postpaid, 40 cents each.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian), seceding Mason of 21 degrees. 15 cents each.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. H. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each.

Masonic Salvation, as taught by its standard authors. This pamphlet is a compilation from standard Masonic works, in proof of the following proposition: Freemasonry claims to be a religion that saves men from all sin, and purifies them for heaven. 111 pages, price, postpaid, 20 cents.

Freemasonry at a Glance illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the first three degrees. Paper cover, 32 pages. Single copy, six cents.

Masonic Outrages. Compiled by Rev. H. H. Hinman. Showing Masonic assault on lives of seceders, on reputation, and on free speech; its interference with justice in courts, etc. Postpaid, 20 cents.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret Societies. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each.

FARM NOTES.

COUNTRY ROADS.

The average country road as at present maintained and repaired is a constant source of unnecessary expense to taxpayers and an almost constant vexation to travelers. At its best the dirt road is good for only a few months in the year, and those months the time when the farmer—the man most interested in good country roads—is using his horses on the farm. In the fall, winter, and early spring, when the great bulk of teaming is to be done, the roads are in bad shape, except when kind Providence sends a snow that makes "good sleddin'." Bad roads mean small loads, and small loads mean to the farmer proportionately small profits. I know many and many a farm where the saving in time from hauling larger loads, the saving in wear and tear of horseflesh, wagons, and harness, would over and over again pay for the increased initial cost of a good macadam road.

Made of the best dirt obtainable, applied under intelligent supervision, and kept in order with proper road-making tools, the dirt road never is entirely satisfactory. What, then, can be expected of the quality of roads made of the material most easily obtained, applied by men ignorant of the first principle of road-making, working without proper tools, and supervised either by men equally ignorant, or not at all?

The true remedy for poor dirt roads is good macadam; but with no greater expenditure of money than now, the present roads might be vastly improved. The road tax should be paid in cash: the system of loafing out the tax under pretense of "working the roads" should be abolished. This money should be expended under the immediate supervision of one man for each township, selected for a knowledge of road-making, and put under bonds for the faithful performance of his duties. This would introduce into the system the element of responsibility, which is sadly lacking at present, and to the lack of which are due many of the abuses of the present methods. One man hiring his labor where he pleased, and paying cash for a day's work, would get considerably more done for the money than a dozen or fifteen roadmasters working out the tax in conjunction with their neighbors and fellow-farmers.

Proper tools should be provided to work with. Road-scraper are almost unknown in many country districts, and plows and shovels are the tools most commonly used. Very good road-scraper can be bought to-day for only two or three times the cost of a good plow, and two men, two horses, and a road-scraper will do the work of an equal number of horses and ten men with plows and shovels, and do it better.

Only the best obtainable materials should be used in repairing the roads—gravel when possible, and when not, the dirt most nearly approaching it in quality. The use of "gutter-wash," sods, and stones larger than two inches in diameter should be forbidden. I have seen roads, "mended" with sods, that were for weeks impassable at any gait faster than a walk, and I have seen holes in the road-bed filled with large stones that were a nuisance for years.

The roads should be worked at proper times. The need of the dirt road is little repairs often made. The common practice is to do almost all the work just after "corn-planting." This is wrong, for two reasons: it is too late for the best results, and too much is done at one time. Six inches of earth or gravel will make a far better road if put on in layers of, say, two inches at intervals of a month or so, than will the entire amount applied at once. Just as soon as the roads are settled in the spring, and before they have become dry and hard, the scraper should be put to work leveling and filling the ruts worn during the winter, and slightly rounding the road-bed towards the center. The ground being still moist, and not compact as at the usual time of doing this, the work can be done more easily and rapidly and the road will pack better. Later, a light coat of earth or gravel, to be followed by another when the first becomes packed hard, and this

THERE ARE MANY USES FOR SAPOLIO.

To clean tombstones. To renew oil-cloth. To renovate paint. To brighten metals.
To polish knives. To scrub floors. To wash out sinks. To scour bath-tubs.
To clean dishes. To whiten marble. To remove rust. To scour kettles.

EVERYBODY USES IT.

Dentists to clean false teeth. Engineers to clean parts of machines. Housemaids to scrub marble floors.
Surgeons to polish their instruments. Ministers to renovate old chapels. Chemists to remove some stains.
Confectioners to scour their pans. Sextons to clean the tombstones. Carvers to sharpen their knives.
Mechanics to brighten their tools. Hostlers on brasses and white horses. Shrewd ones to scour old straw hats.
Cooks to clean the kitchen sink. Artists to clean their palattes. Soldiers to brighten their arms.
Painters to clean off surfaces. Wheelman to clean bicycles. Renovators to clean carpets.

EVERY ONE FINDS A NEW USE.

SAVE YOUR MONEY

BY SUBSCRIBING FOR ANY OF THE FOLLOWING PERIODICALS IN COMBINATION WITH THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

	Regular yearly subscript'n price.		Regular yearly subscript'n price.	Our price for both.
Forum,	$5.00	and Cynosure	$1.50	$5.50
North American Review,	5.00	" "	1.50	5.50
Popular Science Monthly,	5.00	" "	1.50	5.50
Century Magazine,	4.00	" "	1.50	5.00
Harper's "	4.00	" "	1.50	4.50
" Weekly,	4.00	" "	1.50	4.75
Scribner's Magazine,	3.00	" "	1.50	4.00
Independent,	3.00	" "	1.50	4.00

If any periodical not in the above list is wanted, in combination with the Cynosure, send for terms and enclose stamp for reply.

W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.

To cure Biliousness, Sick Headache, Constipation, Malaria, Liver Complaints, take the safe and certain remedy, SMITH'S

BILE BEANS

Use the SMALL SIZE (40 little beans to the bottle). They are the most convenient; suit all ages. Price of either size, 25 cents per bottle.

KISSING at 7, 17, 70; Photo-gravure, panel size of this picture for 4 cents (coppers or stamps).

J. F. SMITH & CO.,
Makers of "Bile Beans," St. Louis, Mo.

in turn by a third if possible. Lastly, in the fall the entire road should be gone over to see that all gutters and bridges are free, that the road may not be washed out by winter storms and spring rains. All mudholes of course should be filled promptly at all times so that no water may stand in the road, and loose stones should be removed at least once a month.

The usual time for cutting brush—August—seems right, but some reform is needed in the way of doing it. The brush should be cut close down to the ground, and not, as often is the case, cut a foot or more above it, leaving long unsightly stubs to sprout the ensuing spring. It should be piled at once, and burned when sufficiently dry. Under the present system I have seen brush cut, left as cut, the next year's growth cut over the top of that, and the resulting tangle abandoned the third year.

With some such system as this I have sketched, the application to the road work of the business rules which govern every progressive farmer in the conduct of his farm, with the work done under the supervision of a responsible man, done at the proper times instead of whenever convenient, with the proper tools and with a proper quality of earth, by men who were compelled to give a day's work for a day's pay, the dirt road could be made, not good, but vastly better than it is.—R. A. Learned in the Century.

Cause—Hood's Sarsaparilla. Effects—pure blood, all humors cured, a good appetite, healthy digestion, no dyspepsia, brain refreshed, whole system built up and strengthened. Try it.

REMARKABLE OFFER!

Nearly everyone is familiar with the name, but it has been estimated that only one in every two hundred and eighty persons in the United States is fortunate enough to have access to the valuable information contained within the covers of the grandest work ever written by mortal man,

Webster's

UNABRIDGED DICTIONARY.

That this is an unfortunate state of affairs will be admitted by all, and it is due to the fact that no one save the rich could afford them.

The Dictionary is a necessity in every home, school and business house. It fills a vacancy and furnishes knowledge which no one hundred volumes of the choicest books could supply, and all young or old, educated or ignorant, rich or poor should have it within reach and refer to its contents every day in the year.

The Loomis reprint contains all the matter as compiled and arranged by our esteemed and honored author and statesman

NOAH WEBSTER.

About forty years of his life was devoted to this great work, and when we consider the fact that this book contains about 100,000 words, we will appreciate that these years must have been well spent.

Some idea of the magnitude of this book may be gained from the fact that it contains over 440 cubic inches of paper and has about 300,000 square inches of printed surface.

In addition to the 100,000 words it contains a portrait of the author, together with his biography and a valuable table of 12,000 synonymous words.

By special arrangement with the publishers, we are permitted to furnish this valuable volume: 1st. To any subscriber to our paper; 2nd. To any renewal subscription; and 3rd. To any person who has paid a full year's subscription within the past six months, on receipt of $1.50 for the paper one year, and two dollars and seventy-five cents to cover express charges, packing, etc., of the Dictionary.

Address

CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill

Disloyal

SECRET OATHS.

ADDRESS OF

JOSEPH COOK,

OF BOSTON,

AT THE

Conference of Christians,
CHICAGO, 1890.

No better document of its size for general distribution has been printed. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Single Copies 5 cents, or 12 copies for 50 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

HELPS

TO

BIBLE STUDY

With Practical Notes on the Books of Scripture.

Designed for Ministers, Local Preachers, S. Teachers, and all Christian Workers.

Chapter I.—Different Methods of Bible Study.

Chapter II.—Rules of Interpretation.

Chapter III.—Interpretations of Bible Types and Symbols.

Chapter IV.—Analysis of the books of the Bible.

Chapter V.—Miscellaneous Helps.

Cloth, 184 pages, price postpaid, 50 cents.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

SEE THIS!

The latest, most complete edition.

Over 235 choice

Reform Songs for the Times.

Only 30c a copy, or 20c by the 100.

—AND—

"THE TOBACCO MANIA."

$1 per 100.

For sale here and by the author,

GEO. W. CLARK,

76 W. Montcalm St., Detroit, Mich.

THE MERRITT TYPEWRITER

Uses METAL TYPE. Caps & Small Letters. No $100 MACHINE CAN DO BETTER WORK.

AGENTS WANTED. CIRCULAR.

CHAS. F. STOKES MFG. CO.

293 & 295 WABASH AVE. CHICAGO.

We have special Machines with large, plain type, designed for the use of Ministers and Lecturers.

If interested in BICYCLES, send for Catalogue. We have the largest assortment in America.

FOR MINISTERS

THE

"STORIES OF THE GODS"

is especially adapted. They will at once derstand the references to the idolatrous systems of the nations. And the idolatrous worship of the Masonic lodge is thus more clearly seen and easily understood. Will you furnish each pastor in your place with one of these pamphlets?

PRICE, ONLY 10 CENTS.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

BUSINESS.

ABOUT DISCONTINUANCE.

One subscriber writes:

"I have but little sympathy with that paper that will crowd itself upon its reader, after his time has expired."

Another good brother tells one of our agents:

"I don't know why they stopped my paper. I suppose the money had run out and they did not want to trust me."

If an account was kept, probably letters of the second class would outnumber the others five to one.

The present rule, to continue the paper unless we have notice to stop, best suits our readers, and is most convenient for the office. The Cynosure expects to keep every reader permanently on the list, and better satisfied as every year goes by.

How more easily can the reform be promoted, than by securing 50,000 subscribers?

SWEEP BEFORE YOUR OWN DOORS.

In this way the streets of Jerusalem were kept clean.

Sweep away misconceptions and ignorance upon the anti-secrecy reform, by using tracts and books,—by giving away one and lending the other.

We have received this week information of a Congregational church which has begun to "sweep" along this line. Committees of the church on tract and anti-secrecy work, will be doubtless a great help to the pastor.

But if the church does not appoint, there is no law against appointing one's self.

Report is received of another village canvassed, and each home supplied with anti-secret and temperance tracts.

The amount of cash for the Tract Fund or for tracts during July was only six dollars and ninety-one cents. Let us make the amount larger for this month.

The July income from book sales was unusually good. The total amount received being $158.23 as against $52.91 for the same month last year. The book sales help the general cause, and hence we call upon every one to help in this line, so far as they can.

Seventy dollars of the July income was from Rev. Sam'l F. Porter, for books donated by him to colleges.

Many are taking advantage of our special sale of books. Several copies of the HISTORY OF SECRET SOCIETIES IN FRANCE have been sent for by those interested in the working of these orders in foreign lands.

50,000.

We have learned of one excellent woman, full of enthusiasm for Christ, resolved to be one to make up the list to this grand number. Her opportunities have been restricted, but she put prayer and work together, and has in one month secured subscriptions to make up her quota. Why may there not be a thousand like her?

Have you made up a list of friends who ought to subscribe for the Cynosure? Write them down to-day in two lists. Send one to this office and have a sample copy of the paper sent to each.

BEECHAM'S PILLS act like magic on a Weak Stomach.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—U. S. Government Report, Aug. 17, 1889.

DONATIONS.

Fund for Current Expenses:

I. N. Brown.....	$ 1 00
Jno. Hogue.....	50
A. E. Hinsdale.....	1 00
Josiah Shaw.....	50
John Dorcas.....	5 00
A. E. H. Doyan.....	10 00
L. M. Sampson.....	10 00
A. F. Rider.....	10 00
Peter C. Housel.....	2 00
O. Techenor.....	5 00
W. W. Jones.....	3 50
W. McClelland.....	5 00

Southern Minister's Fund:

F. A. Armstrong.....	50
S. Rhinehart.....	50
E. Wylie.....	1 00
Jno. Forbes.....	1 00

Reading Room Library Fund:

Mrs. M. B. Nichols.....	23 50
-------------------------	-------

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from July 28 to Aug. 2 inclusive:

J Shaw, Mrs C E Eno, Dr Q A Brown, J M Crawford J W Margrave, M W Holt, CF Hawley, C Hillegands, Rev J Harper, P Bacon, H L Kellogg, D B Sherk, Rev W Clark, V Geib, Mrs M B Nichols, W Schmitt, I Sanders, Mrs H E Matteson, J Forbes, Sr, W W Jones, C R Prine, A Vander Haar.

NEWS OF THE WEEK (Continued from 13th page).

not yet recovered. The list varies considerably from Secretary Kremer's report, and the names are given of thirty-four persons that were lost from the day express.

A manufacturer of one of the standard typewriters on the market says that there are 75,000 women and 25,000 men making a living in this country by thrumming the keys of writing machines.

It is reported that an English syndicate has purchased for $3,300,000 thirty-three table-ware glass factories in this country; that they will assume control Dec. 10, and that soon thereafter prices will be materially advanced.

Hon Thomas L. James, ex-Postmaster General of the United States, and now president of the Lincoln National Bank, of New York City, has accepted the presidency of the East Tennessee Land Company, made vacant by the death of General Clinton B. Fisk.

Reports from western Kansas say that the hot winds of the past few days have so burned up the corn that many fields will not yield a single ear. East of Concordia for a hundred miles the crop may be equal to 5 or 10 per cent, and east to Atchison 50 per cent, of last year's. The hay crop will also be very light.

FOREIGN.

In the House of Commons Thursday, the Rt. Hon. W. H. Smith, the government leader, refused to express an opinion on the question whether Cardinal Manning or any other priest ought to take precedence after the members of the royal families. The question of precedence, he said, could be settled by an act of Parliament, but he did not intend to introduce a bill on that subject.

All correspondents unite in the opinion that the acceptance of the Anglo-German treaty has strengthened Lord Salisbury and greatly encouraged the conservatives. So far as old-world affairs outside of Great Britain are concerned, the premier has met with extraordinary success.

The czar of Russia, Alexander III., is the owner of 50,000,000 acres of land in Russia in his own right. This is an area equal to the whole of France.

The socialist Kruger, at Guben, has been sentenced to six months imprisonment for defaming the institution of marriage.

An official report states that the wheat harvest in the southwest provinces of Russia shows deterioration in quality. The prospects for summer and winter cereals in other districts are very good.

An explosion of fire damp occurred in the Palissie pit at St. Etienne, Paris Tuesday. It is reported that 120 men were killed and thirty-five injured.

Prince Bismarck's proposed visit to England has been postponed. He will go to Kissengen in the middle of August.

Advices from Japan state that on the 11th inst. the total number of cholera cases was 239, with 114 deaths. On the 12th thirty new cases and twenty-seven deaths were reported at Nagasa.

By order of the German Emperor William all government factory workmen's children who are weak or ailing will have a holiday at the seaside at the government's expense.

The French government has issued a decree granting partial or total amnesty to all persons convicted of offenses in connection with labor strikes. Under the provisions of the decree fourteen prisoners have been released from confinement and the sentences of twenty-two others have been reduced.

The Siecle and Figaro of Paris print reports that a fresh Nihilist plot against the Czar has been discovered in St. Petersburg. According to these reports, Prof. Corlowaski, of the University of St. Petersburg, and a number of the students at that institution, who, it is alleged, were concerned in the plot, have been arrested, and many persons have been taken into custody in Moscow on the same charge. Two officers of high rank in the Russian army have committed suicide. It is supposed that they were found to have been implicated in the conspiracy against the Czar, and took their lives rather than undergo arrest and the punishment which was sure to follow.

Unless more care is given to the hair, the coming man is liable to be a hairless animal; hence, to prevent the hair from falling use Hall's Hair Renewer.

20%

U. S. Title a sure 20 per cent profit. Invest your small savings. TACOMA $100 LOTS $5 CASH $5 MONTHLY. Tacoma Investment Co., (capital $100,000) Tacoma, Wash.

Puget Sound catechism and its chief city SEATTLE, WASHINGTON. Send stamp to Eschelman, Llewellyn & Co., Seattle, Wash.

RIDGE'S FOOD

Will be found invaluable for Cholera Infantum and all Summer Complaints, children or adults. Its potent medicine but will be retained & sustain life when everything else fails. 4 sizes 35 cts. up.

Our High Grade List and Bargain Book sent to any address on receipt of a 2-c stamp.

LORD & THOMAS, NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING
45 RANDOLPH STREET, CHICAGO.

HARTSVILLE COLLEGE,

HARTSVILLE, INDIANA.

E. G. PAINE, A. M., PRESIDENT,

Classical, Scientific and Normal courses. Preparatory school, Art, Music and Business departments. Actively Christian and reformatory influences. No saloons. Romantic and healthful region. Living as cheap as it can be made anywhere.

Its superior excellence proven in millions of homes for more than a quarter of a century. It is used by the United States Government. Endorsed by the heads of the Great Universities as the Strongest, Purest and most Healthful. Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder does not contain Ammonia, Lime, or Alum. Sold only in Cans. PRICE BAKING POWDER CO. NEW YORK. CHICAGO. ST. LOUIS.

THE FORSYTH COMBINATION RUG AND EMBROIDERY MACHINE

Is far superior to anything of the kind now in use. Beautiful new designs for Rug and embroidery patterns. Big inducements to agents. Catalogue and price list sent free. THE FORSYTH MFG. CO., 204 Dearborn st., Chicago.

WHEATON COLLEGE,

WHEATON, ILL.

FALL TERM BEGINS TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 16TH.

A College for Men and Women.

For Catalogue address with stamp.

O. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

BEECHAM'S PILLS
ACT LIKE MAGIC ON A WEAK STOMACH.
25cts. a Box
OF ALL DRUGGISTS.

THE ELKHART CARRIAGE & HARNESS MFG. CO.
For 16 Years have sold carriages at wholesale prices, saving them the dealers profit. Ship anywhere for examination before buying. Pay freight charge if not satisfactory. Warranted for 2 years. 64-page Catalog Free. Address W. B. PRATT, Sec'y., Elkhart, Ind.

BABY CARRIAGES!

I make a specialty of manufacturing Baby Carriages to sell direct to private parties. You can therefore, do better with me than with a dealer. Carriages Delivered Free of Charge to all points in the United States. Send for Illustrated Catalogue. CHAS. RAISER, Mfr., 62-64 Clybourn Ave., Chicago, Ill.

A NATURAL REMEDY FOR Epileptic Fits, Failing Sickness, Hysterics, St. Vitus Dance, Nervousness, Hypochondria, Melancholia, Inebriety, Sleeplessness, Dizziness, Brain and Spinal Weakness.

This medicine has direct action upon the nerve centers, allaying all irritabilities and increasing the flow and power of nerve fluid. It is perfectly harmless and leaves no unpleasant effects.

Our Pamphlet for sufferers of nervous diseases will be sent free to any address, and poor patients can also obtain this medicine free of charge from us.

This remedy has been prepared by the Reverend Pastor Koenig, of Fort Wayne, Ind., for the past ten years, and is now prepared under his direction by the

KOENIG MEDICINE CO.,
50 Wab Madison, cor. Clinton St., CHICAGO, ILL.
SOLD BY DRUGGISTS.
Price $1 per Bottle. 6 Bottles for $5.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XXII., No. 48.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, AUGUST 14, 1890.

WHOLE No. 1,059.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.

Address all letters for publication to EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, CHICAGO. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Send all business letters relating to the paper to THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE. Make all drafts and money orders payable to the Treasurer, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address on Cynosure list always give the former address.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill., as Second Class Matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:	CORRESPONDENCE:
Notes and Comments..... 1	The Nebraska Campaign; The Enemy Coming in Like a Flood; From a Southern Point of View; Pith and Point..... 5,6
Gov. Thomas..... 8	THE N. C. A..... 7
Odd-fellows in Chicago..... 8	LECTURE LIST..... 7
No Sabbath for the Lodge..... 8	Why Not?..... 9
Personal Notes..... 9	THE HOME..... 10
CONTRIBUTIONS:	TEMPERANCE..... 11
Lodge and Church..... 1	Educational Notes..... 12
Humbugging Masons..... 2	BIBLE LESSON..... 12
That Army of Reserve..... 4	RELIGIOUS NEWS..... 12
SELECTED:	LODGE NOTES..... 13
Lodge against Church..... 2	DONATIONS..... 13
Knights of Pythias..... 2	NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 13
The Congregationalist..... 3	HOME AND HEALTH..... 14
Editorial..... 3	FARM NOTES..... 15
NEW ENGLAND LETTER..... 4	BUSINESS..... 16
WASHINGTON LETTER..... 4	MARKETS..... 16
LITERATURE..... 6
Good Words..... 7
Secret Societies Condemned..... 7

A personal note on Mr. Gladstone says it is his rule never to travel on the Sabbath day. It might be expected that a man so eminent in public affairs would find his convictions put to the test. It is told of him that he was occasionally invited by the Queen to dine at Windsor Castle on Saturday and remain over night, without extending the invitation over the next day. Mr. Gladstone held to his rule and arranged to remain with Dean Wellesley until Monday. The Queen learning of the arrangement made a more considerate invitation and relieved her great subject from embarrassment.

The late colored Catholic Congress held in Cincinnati proves that the Negro is not yet ready for the priest. The meeting was extensively advertised, but the bishops and archbishop who were present met only about thirty delegates. If these were few, they were also outspoken, and it was not agreeable to hear the boasts of the white priests respecting the banishment of caste from the Catholic church refuted by these Negro Catholics themselves. There is yet, it is said, but one colored priest in America, and he is lost somewhere in this great city of Chicago. He may be a very much mistaken man respecting religion, but he will not probably compare in stupid self-conceit and mendacity with a certain Negro Masonic Methodist "bishop" we have seen here.

In large portions of our own country, especially where peopled by some foreign nationalities, the fact of a Sabbath rest and Sabbath laws are quite ignored, and men give themselves to pleasure. On the other hand it is gratifying to note a strong tendency on the part of the governments of several leading European countries to secure by legislation the better observance of the Lord's day. If the present movement in Europe should continue, the proverbial "Continental Sabbath" will soon become a thing of the past. The German action in the matter has been remarkable, and when the state measure now proposed passes the Reichstag, the right of the working classes to their Sabbath rest will be confirmed by law. So in Austria, where ordinances have lately prohibited many kinds of occupation on the Sabbath, including even the printing of newspapers.

Our Masonic Mayor Cregier has come to an experience where his lodge does him little good. He has deceived the citizens of Chicago and juggled with the gamblers. But private enterprise has begun to prosecute these law-breakers who are the Mayor's good friends; and a quarrel among the gamblers themselves has brought the case to a serious issue. One party threatens to bring the mayor before the courts. The other day he called together a number of public-spirited citizens from whom he hoped to get sympathy and advice. Instead he was struck dumb when they turned on him and asked for an explanation of his delinquencies. These eminent citizens helped elect Mr. Cregier. They will remember next time when the lodge presents them a candidate.

Although General Clinton B. Fisk wrote in 1888 that he was not connected with any secret society, some lodge seems to have snaked its way into the funeral services held in his memory. Rev. Dr. Charles S. Robinson of the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church of New York, and compiler of the most popular hymns and tune-books probably ever published, sends a sharp criticism to Every Thursday, in which he says: "It was a pity that his funeral was held in so small a building, and that a secret society was permitted to thrust the advertisement of its existence into a Christian pulpit. Many of us stood sweltering in the dense pack for a worthier errand than to be told about degrees as old as Hiram, King of Tyre."

The resolutions addressed to the managers of the World's Fair by the N. C. A. Board at its last meeting, have provoked the Inter Ocean to reply. The Inter Ocean is a Sabbath-breaker, publishing a 24-page paper on that day; it is very careful, therefore, not to incriminate itself by an argument in favor of Sabbath-keeping. So the resolutions of our directors are first taken to a Catholic priest, probably a Jesuit, who ridicules them. Next they go to a high church Episcopalian, who draws out a copy of his church paper and reads a long editorial on the "fanatical Sabbath-keepers." The Inter Ocean being thus careful in the selection of the fittest men for its own purposes, prints their views at length, demanding from Jesuits and high churchmen that the Fair be opened on the Sabbath so they can turn their congregations loose in it after they have been manipulated in their special services. There is implied in this demand a confession that such religious services as need to be finished off in this manner, are not worth much for the purposes of religion.

President Merrill E. Gates, of Rutgers College, New Jersey, is a much wanted man. The trustees of Oberlin invited him to preside in their institution, and he visited them at their commencement to look over the field. He was ready to decline the offer, but postponed the answer in response to a very urgent request. While in this unsettled state the trustees of Amherst also voted him their president in place of Dr. Julius Seelye, resigned. The Rutgers authorities, however, are unwilling their popular young president should be taken from them, and the triangular contest is interesting the public. President Gates is but forty-two years old. He is a direct descendant of Jonathan Edwards, and his father, Seth M. Gates, was a well-known Abolitionist and Anti-mason, having renounced the lodge in 1826, co-operating with Thurlow Weed, S. D. Greene, Victory Birdseye, and others in efforts for its overthrow. Mr. Gates addressed a letter of profound interest to the National Convention at Monmouth in 1873, which forms one of the N. C. A. tracts; and we are persuaded to hope that the fervent Christian spirit which made Seth M. Gates one of the best esteemed members of the Congregational denomination and earnest foe of the lodge abides also in the illustrious son.

"Webster's Dictionary" was the queer word passed along by the Knights of Labor on the New York Central railroad last Friday evening soon after 7 o'clock. Every member of the order obeyed the secret summons, left his brake, his switch, his engine, or other work, and the great clock of the Vanderbilt lines, whose pendulum has been swinging without a break for thirteen years at least, came suddenly to a dead stop. The officers were astonished, but not disconcerted. They began to get out passenger trains next day, and on Monday it was said the strike was broken. It is not clear what was the occasion of it. Partly rivalry and jealousy between the Powderly order and the engineer's brotherhood; and partly because of the discharge of lodge men. It was ill-advised and groundless from the view of the public, and deserved defeat. There were loud threats as usual by the conceited officers of the lodge, that they would stop all business over several lines, but they are not likely to materialize.

LODGE AND CHURCH.

BY REV. B. A. IMES, PASTOR SECOND CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH, MEMPHIS.

The Congregationalist of July 24th closes an editorial on the secret lodge by recommending that we endeavor to supply in the church the peculiar attractions which entice men to the lodge. As one who has long and earnestly studied this question, I beg to submit that if we understand the wide difference between the lodge and the church, in essential character, we will not undertake to make the church a substitute for the secret conclave.

First of all, as I understand, the motive which controls the average young man in enduring the heathenish and unseemly rites of initiation, and putting himself under the control of men, he knows not whom, is purely and wholly selfish. I think this cannot be refuted.

It is the personal advantage expected, in business or in politics, or in whatsoever way men thus sworn to aid one another may be able to do it. A young physician, for example, comes to the city and learns very soon that the way to success is through the lodge. The more "orders" and "degrees" he can carry the better for him. Not a few of the ministers who are in sworn brotherhood with ungodly men in the lodges are there scarcely from honest choice, but because the "lodge rules," and the minister is frankly told that he is expected in certain places, at least, to do as others have done, viz., patronize the lodge; then it will return the favor and make things all right for him, otherwise he may get on the best he can. I can give facts from personal testimony, from ministers on this point. Some ministers are deluded by the idea that to get inside these orders they can control them, or at least be at the advantage of having a hold on them from the inner side, regardless of their company.

Again, the church can not furnish men with a religion which has no place for repentance, atonement, regeneration. When will this be understood by those who in seeming charity seek to compromise with the lodge?

I have been personally confronted by men with assertions implying that they have all the religion they need. This is assumed by a vast number of the young men who do not attend church in the large towns and cities.

Furthermore, the church cannot supply for a large number of ungodly men a chance for prominence as leaders, and for a large number of all phases of character the opportunity for putting on grandiloquent titles and wearing showy regalia. A certain fondness for military parade and display is gratified by the dress and processions of these "orders." On this account they greatly attract our people in the South and everywhere. The church has no place nor principle wherein to gratify these demands. The church should lay stress upon the interests of home and family life; the lodge is a counter attraction.

The church ought to do much in a social way, but must of necessity be somewhat select as to general character of those who are made socially welcome.

In general, the lodge only asks for patronage and power. Character is ignored. Among our colored people, men known to be personally dissipated and unchaste, can hold high offices in secret orders, and when they die they are taken to burial from some church with all the pomp and parade which may be shown over a great moral hero who had won a place in fame. It is so now that men prominent in these orders privately tell me of their disgust and loathing of things done and sanctioned by the lodges, and only the want of personal courage keeps such men from openly denouncing them. They realize their isolation should they organize an open protest. They fear the result to their business interests and personal welfare.

No, the churches, though infested by members of secret lodges, cannot take the place of the lodge for the mass of the latter's adherents; nor, except in a social way and in more of true Christian sympathy, hold out the attractions of the secret order.

It is no secret that church discipline, processes in the civil courts, and political interests are largely affected and often entirely controlled by lodge influence. This is largely what they are for. Each clique and clan is pledged in the interests of its own members, and the rights and interests of the rest of the world come in as a secondary matter.

How can the church fill this remarkably benevolent (?) office? I am intensely serious about this matter since men in high places in the pulpit and the press, hesitating to come out with the full weight of conviction and Scripture testimony, admonish us to make the church supply the place of the lodge. They go far enough to show that their convictions are sound as to certain evil things in the secret conclave, but the finale of their argument reminds one of attacking Gibraltar with a fusillade of boiled peas.

Personal invective and denunciation are not the weapons of Christian warfare, but when it comes to dealing with the character and workings of these institutions, we can know what they are better than do a vast proportion of the deluded men who are under their despotic sway; and apart from this, I can get personal testimony any day from men in the lodges, sufficient to condemn them beyond any defense they can offer. But their aim is power; their policy, denial, or silence. We have the right, therefore, to exhaust the resources of Christian logic in criticism.

My church, though small in membership, has organized an aid association for those of its members and regular attendants (who contribute money to the church), who may desire to thus help one another. One dollar is the admission fee, and $1.00 assessment fifteen days after the death of a member; $40 death benefit; no "sick dues;" any case of sickness or of actual need, in the church or association, is to be taken by itself, and help given by all who will do so on principle of Christian duty. We wish to encourage self-help as against wastefulness and dependence, and at the same time provide for the emergency caused by death.

We like the system, and in this way we offer our members one advantage claimed for the lodge.

Memphis.

The following is from the Record (Rochester, N. H.):

"At a temperance meeting at Sanford Corner not long since, it was stated as a reason why the selectmen (two of them) changed their highly creditable resolve not to license pool-rooms, that 'the ministers recommend it,' whereupon a gentleman appealed to them in person to know if that was a fact. The Congregationalist said Yes, and the Baptist said Yes. By this time the house had become as still as the house of death. Mr. Butterworth, the Methodist, came on his feet, and with the voice of a lion roared out, 'No; I never compromise with the devil. When I do, I will resign my commission.' Thank God that there is one minister at Sanford opposed to the rum-shop and its appendages. 'He that is not for me is against me,' will apply as truly in this as in any other case. I understand that the Baptist minister has resigned, and the other one had better do so."

It has often been said that when crises in state and church management come, there is invariably a demand for a brave leader. There are the thousand who are ready to say, "I am with you," to the one brave leader who dares to define his position and to call "with the voice of a lion" unto them, "Are you with me?" "I never compromise with the devil" is always a good motto for the champions of right. Our day calls for more men of Mr. Butterworth's staunch devotion to God.

HUMBUGGING MASONS.

An editorial in the Masonic Review says:

"This is an age of humbugs, and we regret to see our brethren of the Masonic press encouraging them. The California Mirror notices a chromo of 'Washington Closing the Lodge,' and says, 'it is copied from a life-sized painting by our Bro. Leutz, who gains historic fame by painting 'Washington Crossing the Delaware.' He says 'the chromo presents the noble Washington, as master of the lodge, praying for the blessings of heaven to rest upon his brethren and all good Masons.' We don't believe that Leutz, the artist, was a Mason. We don't believe he ever painted 'Washington Closing the Lodge.' We don't believe 'Washington was master of a lodge. But we do believe there is a disposition on the part of pretenders, to make money out of the credulity and vanity of Masons.'"

But another editorial in the same paper is as follows:

"The Keystone says, 'The cornerstone of the National Capitol at Washington city was laid by our illustrious brother George Washington, with Masonic ceremonies, in his double capacity of President of the United States and master of his lodge.' This is about as near the truth as that Washington was the first master of a certain lodge, and the first Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of the United States; all of which we have seen gravely stated in papers purporting to be Masonic. That he captured Cornwallis with a lasso, and slew him with a 'setting maul'—would be equally near the truth. Washington was not master of a lodge during his Presidency, nor before, nor since! He never was Grand Master, and there never was a Grand Lodge of the United States."

The learned editor of the Review is rather hard on the rank and file who blindly swallow Masonic lies in heavy doses and whose sublime credulity is a standing amazement to all outsiders. Masonry is "a lie all over;" and the bigger the lie the better it seems to be enjoyed by the average Mason. That stupendous lie about poor Hiram Abiff and Solomon's Temple is a stunner. And the brightest Masons dish it up with a grand flourish to the small fry for the cash. A man with beard on his face who will believe Masonic twaddle at all is certainly to be pitied, and should have a ten-year-old school boy appointed to look after him and keep him out of the hands of gamblers and confidence chaps. Out of all our sixty millions of people only a bare half a million are credulous enough to be caught by Masonic sharps.

RAY RAND.

But what about secret societies? Shall we let them in? What?—with their foresworn oaths, their dangerous promises, their sun-worship, their naked deism, their secret combination of heterogeneous elements of Christians and pagans, of deists and pantheists, accustomed to fall down together before the shrines of Baal and Ashteroth, and sit side by side with them knowingly and approvingly, at Christ's table? I for one have not got that far down the ladder yet, whose foot rests in the filthy mire of demon-worship. I know Satan with a lie in his mouth stands ready to offer all the kingdoms of the world to the United Presbyterian church if she will only bestow this homage on him. But he is as much a deceiver now as when Jesus was upon earth, and not any more of a landlord.—Rev. J. H. Leiper in Christian Instructor.

LODGE AGAINST CHURCH.

[Editorial in Chicago Evening Post, July 28, 1890.]

The esteemed Congregationalist is deeply, not to say mournfully, concerned with the increasing influence of the "lodge," or secret society, as a competitor with the church for the time, attention and money of men. This influence, our religious contemporaries find, extends not only to men who have professed no allegiance to the church, but also and with equal force to church members.

Sad though the confession is, says the Congregationalist, it must be acknowledged that some men whose names are on the church roll habitually give precedence to the secret society over the church. If the meetings conflict, the successful competitor for their presence is the former. They have no time to spare for the great religious gatherings, but they will go a long distance to be present at a conclave of their fraternity.

How far reaching this secular agency has become may be guessed from "recent figures, carefully compiled, which show that Boston has 243 churches to 599 lodges; Brooklyn, 355 churches to 695 lodges; Washington, 181 churches to 316 lodges; Chicago, 384 churches to 1,088 lodges, and the same proportion obtain in other cities."

It is not strange that the Congregationalist finds in these figures very little encouragement for the cause of the church. It will not even agree that a lodge or secret society which distracts the attention of a church member from the church is a religious, much less a Christian, institution. It insists that in so far as a church member sacrifices his religious observances to the exactions of his lodge he departs from his duties as a Christian. Accepting, then, these conclusions and accepting also the figures above given as correct, it is difficult to escape the conclusion that the men of America are rapidly leaving the church for the lodge, leaving the preacher and the pews to their wives and daughters. And indeed this result is observable in almost any church during almost any service. Even in the Roman Catholic church, whose faithful are prohibited from joining secular secret orders, the defection of the men and the preponderance of the women are noticable features of all church functions.

We can scarcely avoid accepting the lamentable conclusion of the Congregationalist, which amounts to this: that the male members of the human family are altogether inferior to the other sex in piety, morality and proper feeling.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS.

[J. P. Lytle, D. D., in the United Presbyterian.]

At a late meeting of the Presbytery of Muskingum, the question was asked by one of the sessions, if membership in the order of Knights of Pythias was a violation of our law in relation to secret societies. The Presbytery replied affirmatively. Some of the members did not seem to know very much about the order, and none of us was very well posted; but we knew its parentage and affiliations, and were at no loss to decide the question proposed.

For my own satisfaction, and also for the information of those who wish to know (perhaps I should write, willing to know) something of this order, I sent to the publishing house of Ezra A. Cook, Chicago, for "Knights of Pythias. Illustrated. . . . By a Past Chancellor," a pamphlet of 96 pages, price 25 cents. The work is written by one who had attained the highest position in the order, and being disgusted, has retired from it and exposed it. The United States Court, in accepting the testimony of seceding Mormons in relation to the oaths of the Endowment House, has decided that secret oaths can be revealed. The Word of God has rendered the same decision, Luke 12: 2, "There is nothing covered that shall not be revealed; neither hid that shall not be known."

A glance at the pamphlet shows that the order is an imitation of Freemasonry, adapted to those who have some conscience and a little self-respect left. There are three degrees, Page, Esquire, and Knight. There is also an "Amended, Perfected, and Amplified Ancient and Chivalric form" of conferring the third rank or degree, "wh ch is conferred in but a few wealthy lodges, because of the great expense attending the purchase of the apparatus for conferring it."

1. The order is oath-bound. The oaths are long; the three would fill a column. I give only so much as is necessary to prove the position.

Obligation of first rank:

"I (your name), in the presence of these true and tried brethren, do most solemnly promise, declare and swear that I will never reveal till the day of my death, and will keep secret all the mysteries of which I have been or may be hereafter instructed in . . . So help me God, and keep me steadfast in this my first and binding obligation in the order of Knights of Pythias."

The obligations of the second and third degrees, or ranks, as they are named, are of the same general nature, except that they omit the word "swear" at the beginning, but to each of them the concluding phrase is added, "So help me God, and keep me steadfast."

It is unnecessary to comment on the immorality of swearing to keep secrets before they are communicated. It may be regarded as some palliation that the oaths are without the cut-throat penalties belonging to Masonic oaths.

2. The gravest objection to this order, however, as it is to other secret societies, is the Christless nature of its ritual of worship. The candidate in the first rank is required to profess belief only in "the existence of a Supreme Being." Thus deism or theism is the religious foundation of the order. The prayers and hymns all accord with this, and are presented to God as worthy of acceptance for their own sake and the merits of the offerers. No Mediator is admitted. The Bible is used in the ceremonies of initiation, and is styled "our Book of Law." It is, however, used Masonically, i. e., with Christ understood as omitted, in accordance with the prayers and other religious rites.

3. The ceremonies of initiation are foolish, repulsive, degrading, and in the Amended and Perfected rank, profane in the highest degree. The members appear in "Masks and Black Robes." The candidate is divested of his coat and vest, puts on a white robe, and has his eyes blindfolded. In this condition he kneels beside an open coffin containing a human skeleton, over which two swords are crossed and the Bible placed above. In this posture he swears. When he comes to take the third rank he is made to pass through what is called the "ordeal." An oak plank, about twenty inches square, and two inches thick, and filled with spikes of iron or steel five or six inches long, is placed before him, upon which he is required to jump with both his feet naked. Some jugglery is practiced while the ceremonies are proceeding by which the bona fide plank with spikes of iron is exchanged for one with spikes of india rubber. If the candidate refuses to jump after the third order, the "executioners" proceed to put him on the spikes. Having passed this "ordeal" he is declared to be a Knight, and a "brave man," Indian like.

In the "Amended, Perfected, and Amplified third Rank," the profanity is shocking. This rank is intended for the wealthy, and the author states that but few take it. The lodge-room is darkened to represent a wilderness. To the right of the Chancellor Commander is an elevation in which is laid a complete skeleton (or its representation). On the right of the Vice-Chancellor is placed a mock cauldron containing combustible materials to represent hell-fire. A Past Chancellor, personating Pluto, or Satan, is seated in "the center of the room, dressed in a suit of silver mail, cavalier cloak of black, trimmed with silver lace." As the candidate enters, Pluto looks up and demands, "Who dares to break the stillness of eternal night by wandering past the limits of the earth to my most dread abode?" The Master-at-Arms answers, "Imperial Prince, behold a well-tried Squire, who craves the honor of his knightly spurs, and boasts himself a brave, courageous man." Pluto leads the candidate around among imitation snakes, points him to the red, lurid flame burning in the cauldron, the materials having been ignited, warns him of a terrible fate if he yields to fear, and proceeds to apply the final "test." After an intolerable mixture of profanity and nonsense, and just as the "test" is to be applied, the curtain at the chair of the Chancellor Commander is drawn aside, and that official is seen "dressed in a scarlet robe, with a cross on his breast, a gilt crown on his head, and a gilt cross as a scepter in his hand." Pluto, trembling and retiring, says: "Before that awful emblem of my defeat [the cross], I bow in mute despair." The "ordeal" of the bogus "spikes" is then applied; if the candidate jumps as bidden, he is "cordially greeted as a brave man"; if he does not, he is received, nevertheless, in consideration of the many trials he has undergone.

If Satan had been asked to invent something more profane than this, I think he would have modestly declined. The whole transaction takes place in a mock hell; the principal actor is a sham devil (the real one not being far off), who is respectfully addressed as "Imperial Prince." The sudden yielding of this sham devil at the "sign of the cross," while intended, no doubt, as a piece of tragedy with a high moral, must be regarded by Satan as an exquisite mingling of comedy and farce.

It is usual for the members of secret orders to deny the truth of the exposures of the secret rites. This is to be expected from the nature of those rites. But it is observable, and quite significant, that the orders themselves never make any denial. Knights of Pythias have sometimes denied the truth of the exposure made in this pamphlet, and there may be those who affect to believe them, but neither the one nor the other is sincere. An impartial judgment cannot admit that it is a fabrication.

THE CONGREGATIONALIST EDITORIAL.

[The article in the Eastern representative of the Congregational churches, entitled "The Church Versus the Lodge," which we reviewed last week, has so much attention given it by able and pious ministers of that denomination, that we reprint it. The arguments of Rev. Mr. Imes, of Memphis, and Rev. Mr. McLean of Macon, in the present issue will be better understood if the original is accessible to the reader.—ED. CYNOSURE.]

What shall be the attitude of the church toward the secret orders which have multiplied so rapidly throughout the country during the last few years? It cannot ignore them, for they are a potent factor in the life of every community. With many of our churches no problem is more serious, or beset with greater complications. The problem would be simplified somewhat if these organizations were made up entirely of men who have professed no allegiance to the church, but the place which the lodge holds in the affections of many a church member is what gives rise to great anxiety. Sad though the confession is, it must be acknowledged that some men whose names are on the church roll habitually give precedence to the secret society over the church. If the meetings conflict, the successful competitor for their presence is the former. They have no time to spare for the great religious gatherings, like those at Saratoga, but they will go a long distance to be present at a conclave of their fraternity.

So largely have these societies come to monopolize the time and the thought of church members, that ministers and leading laymen are saying, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" At the last meeting of the Vermont Congregationalists, at Rutland, the subject aroused the liveliest discussion of the whole session. Resolutions mildly deprecating the absorption of some Christians in such interests were set one side after a vigorous discussion, not because it was not universally felt that the situation called for remonstrance, but because a few thought that the formal protest would be considered a declaration of war, and would embarrass them in their efforts to counteract the baneful influences of these societies. Yet not a man who spoke failed to admit that Christian concerns in his own community were suffering on account of them. Several who live in towns of only a few thousand inhabitants reported from twenty to forty thriving orders.

We believe Vermont is not exceptional in this respect. The lodge—using the term to include the meetings of the various secret orders—will be found strongly intrenched all through the country; growing in numbers and power, and everywhere detaching the devotion of Christian men from the church, and too often, we fear, from the straightforward service of their Master. Recent figures, carefully compiled, show that Boston has 243 churches to 599 lodges; Brooklyn, 355 churches to 695 lodges; Washington, 181 churches to 316 lodges; Chicago, 384 churches to 1,088 lodges; and the same proportion obtains in other leading cities.

In the face of this state of affairs is the church helpless? Two things at least it can do. Through its preachers, its press, and through the lives of those who love it, it can set the claims of the church far above those of any order whatever. Give men to understand that, however interesting and helpful the lodge may be, it cannot take the place of that divine institution, the church. The notion that one is about as good as the other cannot be entertained for a moment. However far the church falls below the ideal of its Lord, it still stands as his visible representative on the earth, the minister of his sacraments, the defender of his truth, the dispenser of his gracious salvation to men. The fact that some of these orders employ a chaplain and have an ornate ritual, that they conduct religious services and preside over funerals, does not make them religious, least of all Christian, and he who finds his religion and his Christianity at a lodge room, and never feels the need of a church, is woefully defective in his idea of what religion and what Christianity are. Rarely does a pastor find a spiritually minded member of his flock preferring lodge meeting to church meeting.

Again, the church should study to find out what makes the lodges so attractive to the average man, and then, in so far as lies within its province, it should strive to give him that, or its equivalent. And here, we believe, the church has much to learn. Does the lodge furnish watchers for the man who is nigh unto death? Does it see that his bereaved family does not suffer? The church, of course, cannot be a life insurance company, but it can, and it ought to make it sure that none of its humblest members are ever destitute and forsaken. To be sure, we all profess to do this; but is this service for the weak lambs of the flock always performed cheerfully and tactfully and thoroughly? It is not an unheard-of thing for a secular order to boast that it cares more for its membership than the church does for those in its fold. Let us be able to assert a negative to that taunt whenever it is uttered.

One of the chief attractions of these resorts is the spirit of fraternity which prevails there. If our churches could be made the rallying ground for men who have the social instinct, they would not be turned so easily aside to secular resort. Man is gregarious by nature. He likes to be with his kind. The churches most alive to their responsibilities to-day are recognizing their obligation to minister to the social life of man. So pleasant reading rooms and parlors are being added to the equipment of the church. To many a lonely dispirited man the lodge represents all that he knows of human fellowship. Let us make more of the fellowship of Christ's body. It does not appear that the apostolic church, the warmth of whose Christian hospitality glows at the distance of eighteen centuries, was much troubled with its members running off to the Odd-fellows or the Knights of Pythias.

We have never counted ourselves among those who believe that secret societies are a great menace to our country. Intemperate attacks on them as nesting-places of vice and hot-beds of treason, only root them more tenaciously in our American soil. Good and true men are found, perhaps, in the membership of every one. At the same time, when they demand the service and affection which a man owes to Christ and to the church of which he is a member, and when, as now, they have come to take the place of the church in the minds and hearts of thousands of our fellowmen, we believe it to be the part of wisdom for the church to recognize the facts. It need not level its artillery at them, but it must stand for its own rights, and it must make it clear to the world that there is no brotherhood like that which the Nazarene founded, apart from which no man comes to his completest manhood.

New York spends about twelve times as much each year for intoxicating drinks as is spent during the same time for both home and foreign missions by the United States. This was the exact proportion in 1880, and there can be little doubt but that the contrast would be even greater now. The development of modern missionary enterprise has been something wonderful, but after all, is this century to go down into history best characterized by its missions or its drunkenness?—N. Y. Pioneer.

"THAT ARMY OF RESERVE."

BY REV. ALEXANDER THOMSON.

The Daily News of Chicago is a wonder. In spirit and energy, in its courageous defense of what is right, and in its whole-hearted hatred of what is wrong, it has no equal in the Chicago daily press. Even in the line of that most unpopular reform for which the Cynosure speaks, it has rendered valuable services. And for all that it has done may the Lord give it abundant reward. But before this mighty incoming tide of lodgism even the Daily News seems to be carried off its feet. Twice during the present week has it extended editorially the right hand of welcome to the Odd-fellows, introducing one of its editorials with the words that stand at the head of this article; and, speaking in a commendatory tone, brings forward about the following propositions:

The spirit of militarism is increasing in this country. This is manifest in the increase of the military orders among "benevolent" lodges. This great body of trained men, trained without expense to the Government, might be very useful to the country in case of war.

We grant the truth of the first proposition; but is this a cause for congratulation? This military spirit, as the Daily News truly says, may be largely for display, as undoubtedly this great parade in Chicago demonstrates; but are such displays healthful to the simplicity of republican life? Not without the expenditure of a vast sum will this display be possible; and with multitudes on our frontiers, suffering even now from the effects of drouth; with so many avenues open for true patriots to spend their spare money for their country's good, can all this useless expense for display be less than sinful?

It may be objected that they might spend their money in worse ways. Very true. One might knock out a man's eye. It would not be as bad as if he knocked out both eyes. But surely it would not be justifiable! But the writer believes that the military spirit the News says is on the increase notably among the lodges is not separable from the war spirit, which the News itself condemned for demanding a great navy. We have but to look at Europe to-day to see this. There the military spirit is supreme, while over it hangs a perpetual war cloud. Said one of the members of the London Peace Congress: "The best men in Europe are trying to avert war, but it will be in vain." There is not a close observer of European affairs who does not know this. The great Prussian general said Europe was a powder barrel; woe to the man who throws a fire-brand into it.

From that European war-cloud produced by this military spirit will yet leap such death-lightnings and such far-reverberating thunder, as this world has not seen or heard since the great Napoleonic wars. Do we want such a war-cloud to overshadow us? But would this "Army of the Reserve" be of use to us in any possible national emergency? A foreign war I think not possible unless we become the aggressors; but did such a calamity actually happen, who believes that the lodge organizations would volunteer to serve their country as such? But if they did not, and only went as individuals, where would be the substantial gain? They must then go with the untrained multitude and all be drilled alike.

There are three questions that might plunge our nation again into civil war: The race question, the labor question, and the question of our common schools. In a conflict arising from any of these, of what possible use would these lodge soldiers be, split up into so many different parties and having their sympathies so divided? But suppose that the anti-secret party, now so weak, should suddenly develop strength, and seek to enact a law that would prohibit lodge existence. Then, indeed, we might see some use for these lodge warriors!

In so far, then, as the military spirit is rising in this country, it is to be regretted. In so far as it is manifested by the lodge it can only be a source of danger to a peaceful people.

Bartlett, Ill., Aug. 8th, 1890.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

Some notes from Northfield.—Rome and sectarianism.—Amherst's new president.—A relic of antiquity.—The crops.

That "School of the Prophets," Northfield, is now alive with the crowds who have gathered at the Conference, some for a summer outing, but others—and let us hope they form the majority—for earnest Bible study, and a stimulated spiritual life. A proof that this latter conclusion is correct seems to be afforded by a correspondent of the Springfield Union who notices "the perfect freedom with which everybody speaks about religious subjects, and the absence of any generally continued secular conversation. Bibles and note-books are frequent, and discussions on theological and hard doctrinal points, though not allowed in the meetings are frequently indulged in without."

One of the expected guests at the Conference, Rev. A. J. Diaz, a native Cuban but a naturalized citizen of this country, was arrested in June for preaching the Gospel; and though now out of prison is still under bail and unable to leave. This may remind some of the friends who attended the Convention of the N. H. C. A. three years ago how an expected helper, Bro. Wm. F. Davis, was held a prisoner for the very same offence—not in Cuba, but in Boston.

This correspondent also notes that "there is an unusual prominence given to the doctrines of Jonathan Edwards," not only in the addresses of speakers, but in the regular college sessions. Worse things might happen than a revival of the Edwards theology. It would certainly be a higher intellectual resource, if that is all that is wanted, than studying the mysteries of Buddhism, as so many of Boston's cultured people are said to be doing; yet I doubt if New England in particular, or the world in general, stands in need either of fresh systems of theology or of old ones vamped over. It may seem a strange thing to say, but the Bible really contains very little theology, using the word in ordinary human fashion; but it does talk a great deal about man's evil nature, and the sins, both special and general, to which he is prone. The great need of the times is for men to stand in our pulpits and sound the old John the Baptist cry: "Repent ye for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." The great revival of 1858 left the terrible sin of human slavery unrebuked, untouched,—nay more, deliberately and wickedly excluded from public discussion; from the pulpit, from the prayer-meeting and the religious press. Had it been a true revival, a genuine turning to God on the part of the free Christian North, the Civil War with its holocausts of slain might have been averted. Who knows? To me there is something ominous in the fact that once more a burning question is at the front—one whose issues reach through the world instead of a small part of it; and which concerns, not the right of man to be free, but the right of God to reign—which is just as wickedly, deliberately, I was about to say stupidly ignored. When Dr. Munhall gave his address on the hindrances to revivals, why was the lodge, the greatest of all hindrances, never mentioned? Why has that brave young Christian, Bro. Weed, been left to give his testimony against it unsustained by any word of open sympathy from such teachers as Moody and Munhall—both of whom have left their convictions on record that the lodge is swamping the churches, killing the spirit of vital piety, and paving the way for a reign of universal materialism? The fact is that a popular evangelist soon grows to be as fearful of rebuking popular sins as any of his most famous and highly-salaried brethren. He too has his constituency who must not be offended, but who certainly would bear any display of crankism on the part of their favorite leader. I doubt if these men who stand as beacon lights to thousands get prayed for enough. I am afraid there is a general and very mistaken impression that they do not need praying for, when the fact is that there are none on the face of the earth, be they rulers temporal or spiritual, who need it more. What Northfield wants, and all New England beside, is more of Edward's spirit of uncompromising opposition to evil,—his theology can safely be left to take care of itself.

But while I make these strictures I firmly believe that the hope of our country in the perilous days now before us, rests with these non-commissioned preachers of the Word, who can break the bread of life to the masses untrammelled by ecclesiastical machinery. The American, commenting on the fact that none of the denominational churches have yet recognized Fulton's work against Rome, while his own sect, the Baptists, have invariably given him the cold shoulder, utters these striking words: "Romanism will never receive its death-blow from sectarianism in any form." Neither will the lodge. Another paragraph in the same issue speaks out thus decidedly against all dark-lantern methods of fighting Rome: "There is a growing conviction that the American reformation can make progress only by the greatest publicity. If secret methods are adopted Romish spies will penetrate all orders. The whole genius of Rome favors the spy system." Orangemen and Good Templars will always care more for their pet societies than for Protestantism or temperance. The lodge is not a bond of cohesion, and to make a consolidated reform party that will hold together the iron of reform principle needs to be welded together with the fire of the Holy Spirit, and not with miry clay.

Amherst has called to fill the place of Julius H. Seelye, Dr. Merrill Edwards Gates, a lineal descendant of Jonathan Edwards, and the son of Hon. Seth M. Gates, so well known for his anti-slavery and anti-secret record. Amherst is to be congratulated for securing a president with such antecedents. He is said to be an eloquent speaker, a clear and strong writer; and always ready to bring his scholarly attainments into practical bearing on the great economic and moral problems of to-day.

Boston is to have a statue of Farragut by H. H. Kitson, for which the sum of $22,500 is to be paid. If it should prove as worthy a target for criticism as some of those which now adorn (?) its public squares it may be worth that sum—to the newspaper wags.

Nobody can say that New England has no antiquities after reading that an important local issue now pending in New Bedford is whether "the 9 o'clock bell" shall continue to ring at night in accordance with the time-honored and sacred usage, once generally prevalent but which has long died out from most New England towns. I am inclined to think that this old custom of "the curfew bell" had something to do with the staid habits of those earlier times. How eloquently it preached from its brazen tongue, "Another day gone! Wisely or foolishly spent it is past redeeming. One day nearer to death! One day nearer to eternity!" The party of progress will probably carry their point however, and "curfew" cease to ring even in New Bedford.

The drouth mentioned in a former letter has been broken by copious showers, and the sere and yellow fields are once more clothed in "living green." The crops which seemed on the verge of destruction have started up, and almost everywhere are reported as looking well.

ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 6, 1890.

Parents who carefully scrutinize the books read by their children, and all parents should, are much pleased with the action of the Postoffice department in refusing to allow a book, which has recently been translated from the Russian, to pass through the mails, and the hope is expressed on all sides that the Postal authorities will not stop in their good work until many of the pernicious books that now pass unmolested through the mails are treated in the same manner. Surely this great Government should keep its mails clear of all polluting matter.

This particular book is an outrageous attack upon things which all good people hold sacred, including the marriage tie and religion; and its sale should not be tolerated anywhere. I was positively shocked yesterday to see a young girl, certainly not more than seventeen years old, walk into the book department of a dry goods store and ask to see this little book. It was handed her by a clerk—a girl about her own age—and after reading a paragraph here and there she purchased the book; this book that has been declared unfit to go through the mail sold to our daughters at dry goods stores! Isn't it horrible to think of?

This subject of what our children read is not one to be lightly thrown aside; it is worthy of the most serious consideration. The cheapness with which the public is furnished books ought to be a great blessing; but before saying positively that it is, suppose you pay a visit to the nearest book store and cast your eyes over the class of books exposed for sale. The evil done to young and unformed minds by bad ideas, sometimes even in good books, is very great and is constantly growing; it insidiously leaves its imprint upon the impressionable minds, and in many, alas, too many cases it is never completely eradicated. Some day the Christian people of the country will arise in their might and demand of the merchants that books of a certain class shall not be publicly exposed for sale, and God grant that it be soon.

—Thirty families, numbering 240 souls, have recently come over from Romanism to Protestantism in a single commune of Hungary.

An unexpected obstacle has planted itself in front of the proposed anti-lottery legislation. When the Senate committee on Postoffice took up the bill prohibiting the sending of anything intended for, or pertaining to a lottery through the United States mails, which has already been reported to the House, several Senators expressed doubt as to the Constitutional right of Congress to interfere with matter intrusted to the mails, and a sub-committee was appointed to examine into the matter and report to the committee. The lottery men and their lawyers are making the most of this doubt and trying thereby to induce men who are conscientiously opposed to their depraving and degrading business to do nothing towards placing the necessary authority in the hands of the Postoffice department to break it up. If this authority cannot be conferred without violating the provisions of the Constitution, then it is high time that the Constitution was amended.

In no one thing has the National capital made

(Continued on 12th page.)

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE NEBRASKA CAMPAIGN.

SALOON RIOTERS MAKE A TERRIBLE LIST.

OSCEOLA, Neb., Aug. 8, 1890.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I am on my second lecture tour in the Nebraska campaign. The weather is exceedingly hot and dry. Not in the memory of the oldest inhabitant has the State suffered anything like the disasters it has this year. Earlier in the season the dreadful cyclone leveled whole villages to the ground. There were terrific storms shooting bolts of lightning into the midst of homes and killing men, women and children. Later the hot dry winds from the southwest have swept the State, wilting and crisping the corn as in a November frost. Meadows are as white as a field of ripened wheat. The earless corn stalks are being cut for cattle feed. Vegetables are almost an entire failure. Most of the farmers are in debt, with their farms mortgaged and no prospect of relief. They are paying heavy interest to bankers and mortgage companies, who are rapidly taking possession of their farms. There is a growing alienation between capitalists and wage-earners, which threatens speedy revolution.

But the absorbing issue is the pending prohibitory amendment. The most encouraging indication is that the organization of bankers and business men under the leadership of Rosewater of the Omaha Bee, for the purpose of carrying license, has thrown the farmers and wage-earners into line on the other side. They say if license is what these capitalists want, then it is what we don't want.

The liquor men were never as defiant and intolerant as here in Nebraska. It is seldom we hold street meetings without their disturbance. I wanted to lecture on the streets of Silver Creek last evening, but at the advice of friends in town I spoke in a church for fear of a riot. J. R. Dill, who is one of the most successful lecturers in the campaign, spoke on the street here a few weeks ago but was interrupted by a shower of eggs. He finished his address, but the opposition came near turning the meeting into a riot. Two weeks ago Hon. Geo. Scott's meeting on the street at Schuyler was nearly broken up by rummies. A dastardly assault was made on the persons of editors Thomas of the Elwood Record, and J. I. Frederick of the Kearney County Gazette at Minden, in June. Bro. Frederick was once assistant editor of the College Springs Crank. The assault on Rev. John Power in Dodge county soon followed. Rev. L. G. Jordan, the eloquent colored orator from Texas, was viciously assaulted by a saloon-keeper in Nebraska City. Bro. Jordan and Bro. J. R. Dill are strong friends of the Cynosure. Rev. C. A. Huyck was waylaid and assaulted by a saloon-keeper at Ashland, because he had defeated him in obtaining a license. The saloon outlaws at Roca hurled an empty beer keg through the church windows into an audience where the W. C. T. U. were holding a Demorest Medal Contest, injuring several persons and frightening many ladies. A. C. Rankin's tent was cut by saloon outlaws at Crete, and several shots were fired through the canvas. Henry L. Chaffee was ambushed and assaulted on his way home from a West Point meeting, by the infuriated representatives of "personal liberty." A midnight mob of saloon toughs at Brownville tried to induce Rev. L. G. Jordan to come out of his lodging-house that they might do him violence.

These acts of lawlessness were all by the anarchistic saloon element and perpetrated during the last few months. Attempts to break up some of my own meetings have been made by liquor men. The schools of anarchy in this nation are the saloons. They educate men to trample upon law. Like the slave power, their tyranny and intolerance will likely again bathe the land in blood.

My first tour was in Saunders, Thayer and Fillmore counties. This time I am lecturing at points between Fremont and Kearney. I spent a few days at the Beatrice Chautauqua and heard the great debate between Rosewater and Webster for the saloon and Dickey and Small for prohibition. Rosewater claimed that Christ made wine at Cana, and also referred to that divine institution of Freemasonry laying corner stones, and using wine in the ceremony. In replying to him Sam Small elicited the loudest applause by holding up Masonry as of equal sacredness and divine authority with the church! The debate was a great victory for the amendment, for at the close the entire audience seemed to arise when the vote was called for the affirmative, and none voted against it.

M. A. GAULT.

THE ENEMY COMING LIKE A FLOOD.

COAKSBURY, S. C., Aug. 1, 1890.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—I lay aside the Cynosure of July 31st to write you a few lines. I am sure that a few copies of the Cynosure would have done good distributed in the county of Laurens a few weeks ago. One week ago I was in that county and about the first thing I learned was the fact that a Masonic lodge had been "set up" and was being "set up;" that the Friday night previous two presiding elders, four pastors, one Baptist, one Presbyterian, two Methodists, and other Masons, had spent a whole night "making sixteen men Masons," and that the following Friday was to be passed the same way, and I was urged to "go in," too.

Friday night came and with it more candidates than could be made in one night, so the following Tuesday night was set apart to finish up. I learn that a "dispensation" has been granted and a fellow can get three degrees for five dollars, and the fellows are getting them.

It has leaked out that one poor fellow told them (the Masons) before they began that he had been out in the rain all day and was sick, therefore he could not stand any foolishness. He was assured that he could stand it; but he did not, if he could. It was not so pleasant for a sick man, partially dressed, with head through the noose and cap over his eyes, for several hours in a chilly room. So I hear that he left them, though it was said to him he must die then and there. I have not heard of his death, and I suppose he is still alive. He may be made a Mason yet.

I wonder and wonder how can a man who is Christ's be a Mason? One thing shocked me more than any other, and it was the fact that a minister who claims to be sanctified and who advocates the doctrine, was made a Mason along with some who claim to be as bad as men often are. I am shocked at it yet.

There is a revival of Masonry here just now, and something ought to be done to counteract its influence. I know of nothing more effective than the distribution of Anti-masonic tracts and literature. Were I able I should buy such as I see advertised in the Cynosure and sow it in this Southland, for these secret societies are dealing out death and destruction among my people. I heard two preachers, both Masons, conversing. One said, "I enjoy a meeting almost as much as I do a warm church meeting." "Yes," replied the other, "it was the ancient church, and you keep your obligations better than the church members do." So on ran the conversation.

Could not such works as, "Freemasonry Illustrated," "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated," "Hand-book of Freemasonry," "Freemasonry Exposed," "Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated" and such literature as will enlighten the people, be distributed by those who are blessed with the means? Send me anything against secret societies; I'll distribute it. (Rev.) D. H. JOHNSON.

FROM A SOUTHERN POINT OF VIEW.

MACON, Ga., July 29, 1890.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—You have heard nothing from me since I came to this State more than a year ago. It has not been because I have lost interest in the godly cause you represent; neither is it due to the fact that there is not great need of your work being pushed in this city, that I have not written; but it is because I have had more than I could do, and therefore, have had to leave undone many things that I should have been glad to do.

I am glad to see the Boston Congregationalist of July 24th speak out on the "lodge question." It shows the way the wind is beginning to blow, even though the subject is touched lightly. I have wished and prayed that this, the leading paper of our denomination, might see that for the good of the cause it represents, it ought to speak out on this the greatest and growing evil in the church of Christ.

I do not profess to be wise, but on the other hand I am sure that I know but little when compared with others; but I do not see how Christian ministers can be members of oath-bound lodges. If we would understand secretism we must study it at least in three respects: (1) As to its internal and moral nature, —as a religion, for such it is. The lodges have the Bible,—a confession of faith. Each member must believe that there is a God, the supreme ruler. They have their prayers, songs and altars. (2) As to personal influence over men, for which every minister is responsible to Christ, his Lord and only Master.

I know that no man of God can become a member of a secret order as they exist to-day in the South, without vitiating that moral distinction that should exist between him and the world according to the Word of God, viz., "Come ye out from among them;" "Be ye separate;" "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers;" "Ye are the light of the world;" "Let your light so shine;" "Men love darkness rather than light, because their deeds are evil." (3) As to their professed benevolence. The Congregationalist asks if the weak lambs of the church are all looked after cheerfully? I answer they are not; but is this always done by the lodge? There are widows in other towns than Macon, Ga., who can answer this question much better than I can. While there is something done in the name of benevolence, it is small when compared with the amount of money collected from the people. Millions of dollars are paid to the lodges of the country every year. I have asked them what they do with all this money? I have seen no colleges built and endowed. I know of no young men who have been educated. I have heard of no homes that have been bought for the poor and needy. What is done with all this money?—I know some men who have made fortunes out of the lodge. I know a minister who lives in the largest State in the Union, that has four or five city lots. His wife and daughters never know what it is to do any housework. He says he got his start through the lodge. He tells the truth when he says he got it through the lodge, for some of it was gotten from our town, as he was the "Worthy Master" of the lodge. It seems that much of the money collected by the orders goes to the officers and leading members.

The lodge is a temptation to be untruthful. A minister whom I know well, in answer to the question, "What is the influence you think secret societies have on the church?" said, "There is nothing that is doing more harm to the church to-day than the lodge." He was a member in good standing with five different orders when he made this statement, and had just one week before preached the annual sermon for the Odd-fellows!

I said, "Bro. —, if you believe what you have just said, how can you be in so many orders, and preach in their favor as you did last Sabbath?"

"I know I did, but I preached lies to the people when I did it; I have preached more lies since I have been connected with secret orders than ever God will forgive me for."

"There are," he continued, "parts of the Bible that I dare not preach from." He mentioned a few texts, as "Come out from among them, and be ye separate;" "Let your light shine," etc. "If I should preach from these texts they would condemn me."

I have said, and now say it again, that we, the ministers, are responsible for the moral condition of our people. Education and property will not better our condition. It will take "pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father." That is what it will take to save any race. How can this best be done, through the church or through the lodge? The two can not work together; for the success of the one is through Christ, while the success of the other is by leaving Christ out.

The Congregationalist asks, "What shall be the attitude of the church toward secret orders?" The church must, in the end, oppose them; for they are opposed to Jesus Christ, the only foundation of the church. Christ is not recognized in the prayers of their rituals with which they profess to honor God the Father. We are told in John 5: 23: "He that honoreth not the Son, honoreth not the Father which hath sent him." But the secretists say they have the right to say how much religion they will have in the lodge, and how much they will leave out. I should like to ask, from whence did the lodge get this authority? Who gave them the right to leave Christ out of the prayers and Scriptures of their rituals, thus changing the teachings of the Bible, and the office of Christ? John 15: 16, "Whatsoever ye ask the Father in my name, he will give it you." I am sure that God has given no such permission; for knowing that this attempt would be made, and this authority claimed, he has told us at the close of his heavenly message to us, that "If any man shall add unto these things, God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in this book; and if any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city, and from the things which are written in this book." I suppose this positive and negative prohibition applies to lodgites as well as to other people.

How can ministers be in organizations that leave Christ out of their prayers and out of the Scriptures they use. These are both acknowledged facts by the most enlightened members and friends of the lodge. So long as Christ is not needed in the lodge his people do not need the lodge.

But they say there are some of our best men who belong to secret societies. (a) That does not make the lodge right. (b) Many men have gone into the lodge with no knowledge of its nature. (c) Others joined for the sake of influence. (d) Still others have gone into the lodge for the sake of money, and this class is growing every day. I am personally acquainted with young men who are traveling in the interest of one or more of the many orders at $2 per day, with all other expenses met, who care no more for secret orders than I do. They say the lodge is doing the people more harm than good. Many of these young men were educated in our A. M. A. schools, and have been faithful teachers and preachers of the race, but have given it up and are gone into secret orders where they are getting larger salaries and doing less work, keeping the people down by fooling them.

Is the church asked by the Congregationalist what should be its attitude toward the lodge? She should put on the whole armor of God. Her feet should be shod with the preparation of the Gospel. Let her take the shield of faith, and the sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God!

Let the church of the living God come back to the old landmarks, and there contend for the faith once delivered unto the saints. Let the church cry aloud and spare not. Let her voice be heard north, south, east and west, saying, "For Zion's sake will I not hold my peace, and for Jerusalem's sake I will not rest until the righteousness thereof go forth as brightness and the salvation thereof as a lamp that burneth."

Yours for Christ and humanity,

J. R. McLEAN,

Pastor 1st. Cong'l Church, Macon, Ga.

PITH AND POINT.

OUR HEAVENLY BODIES.

In your paper for July 31 is a communication by Rev. S. F. Porter, on the resurrection. I do not think his theory right. I always understood, and do now, that the human body shall be raised, not the soul, for that is never buried, but returns to God who gave it. God is able to raise even the body of the martyr who suffered at the stake and whose ashes was strewn on the waters. Now at the last trump, where the dead are raised and the living changed, there will be no difference in their immortal bodies. Death has no more dominion over them or us. 1 John 3:2 says, "It doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that when He shall appear we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is," and his body, flesh and bones, after his resurrection as before. I think the teachings of Scripture are in harmony with Job's glorious faith. That these bodies will be raised again there can be no doubt, for as man was made from the dust of the ground and at death returns to dust, surely God the Father and God the Son and God the Holy Ghost, the Almighty, is able to raise the dust and reunite soul and body.—JAMES RAMSEY, Green, N. Y.

Bro. Canning of Galva also writes in objection to father Porter's first article, but as two letters on the same subject have been printed already we do not need to continue an argument on this issue.

THE DIFFERENCE.

In the Cynosure of July 31st under "Pith and Point," the point I wished to make was,—not against "Third party," but against "Third party Prohibitionists." The term "Third party" may be well enough, but "Third party Prohibitionists" never. The two expressions are indiscriminately used in what I took to be "editorial," though in the temperance columns, Cynosure, July 17. I am unable just now to refer to date and page for several instances of like use. If I have been mistaken in its being the editor that was guilty, then I bespeak his considerate forbearance, but wish it all to hold good against the other fellow.—I. N. BROWN, Ironton, O.

All right, Dr., both the editor and the other fellow have promised to do so no more. They have too much regard for parties that have principles worth fighting for to speak of them slightly.

ANOTHER DELIVERANCE.

Through the light given in the Christian Cynosure I was enabled to see "the other side of secretism," and the most satisfactory result to myself is—to-day I stand a discharged G. A. R. May the good work make rapid progress.—REV. JOHN D. OWENS, Spratt, O.

FREEMASONRY THE SAME THE WORLD OVER.

The extract from C. G. Finney expresses a truth which I wish was impressed on every Christian mind, in America, at least, where more men have been deluded into Freemasonry than in all the rest of the world put together. If we could only make Americans understand that Freemasonry is Freemasonry, the same everywhere!—H. F. BROWNSON, Detroit.

A NEW FRIEND IN TEXAS.

I shall be very glad to accept of the Christian Cynosure for one year; and I hope it will prove such an interesting paper that I can get others to take it. I shall do all I can to circulate it among our people.—REV. A. C. POLK, Galveston, Texas.

A GOOD CANDIDATE.

I lately listened to Mrs. Josephine Henry, the Prohibition candidate for the clerk of the Court of Appeals for Kentucky. This is the most important State office to be elected this year, and she is the first woman who has ever been nominated for a State office south of the Ohio river. She is a native Kentuckian and a lady of fine culture. The college chapel was well filled and her speech of nearly two hours was listened to attentively. It contained some admirable points. She seems an earnest Christian, and will, I hope, receive a full Prohibition vote. I was reminded of Mrs. H. Gougar; for if she is not quite so logical as the Indiana lady, she is quite as persuasive and has a vein of satire that is devoid of all bitterness. Bro. John G. Fee made appropriate opening remarks, and it was the only political demonstration of the campaign.—H. H. HINMAN, Berea, Ky.

LITERATURE.

THE RELIGION OF ANCIENT CRAFT MASONRY is a pamphlet, now in its second edition, by Henry T. Brownson, a relative, we judge, of the late celebrated Dr. Orestes A. Brownson, the champion of Catholicism. The author evidently writes from the standpoint of the Catholic church, but does not seriously obtrude its peculiar doctrines that might offend many who ought to read this document. The encyclical letter of the Pope in 1884 to which Albert Pike replied in the Voice of Masonry for October of the same year is defended in a peculiar manner. Instead of undertaking a specific argument the author refutes Pike from his own writings, especially his book on Masonic theology, "Morals and Dogma." Extracts from this volume show most conclusively that Masonry in America as promulgated by Pike is the same heathenism as that practiced by Ramsey, Weisshaupt, Desaguliers and Cagliostro. The denunciation of the Pope is therefore vindicated from the writings of his chief adversary. This is a document which every intelligent Anti-mason may use with great force, but it is to be especially commended to all who labor to promote Gospel Purity, the White Cross Leagues and the W. C. T. U. The appendix is an extract from a work by a French Masonic writer, "Key to Masonic Symbols." The doctrine is so atrocious that the extract is printed in Latin, if thereby its villainy may be somewhat veiled.

HONEY FROM THE ROCK OF AGES is a new book by Rev. A. Sims, author of "Bible Salvation and Popular Religion Contrasted," "Helps to Bible Study," "Shining Lights," and "How every Christian may win Souls." This volume is a selection of some of the choicest things in evangelical literature. Such titles as "The House-top Saint," "Jacob Schoonerhaven on Sanctification," "Shall we Meet Beyond the River" have long been popular. H. L. Hastings of the Boston Christian has a place with "Selling Dead Horses." The book will also contain the replies of Pres. J. Blanchard and Rev. B. T. Roberts to Dr. T. D. Talmage on Freemasonry. As soon as 500 subscribers are secured the book will issue. Price 25 cts. paper; 50 cts. cloth.

The August Century is a most attractive and interesting number. The frontispiece is an exquisite piece of wood engraving by Cole, a copy of the virgin and child Jesus by Sandrocelli. John Muir, the California naturalist, who writes too seldom in these days, contributes an important paper on "The Treasures of the Yosemite." The article is richly illustrated and there are maps to indicate the boundaries of the proposed enlargement of the Yosemite Park by the creation of a new national park to preserve the sources of the waters that are such an indispensable feature of the old park. Mr. Muir, who is recognized as qualified to give a weighty opinion in the matter, urges the attention of the public to the preservation of the Yosemite. "The Perils and Romance of Whaling" is illustrated in a spirited manner and brings together a number of old stories of adventure and misadventure. Few readers will reach the end of the second paper by Dr. T. H. Mann on his experiences as "A Yankee in Andersonville" without being profoundly touched by the pathos of his helpless journey to his home in Boston. President Eliot of Harvard contributes "The Forgotten Millions," a study of the common American mode of life, as typified by the permanent native population of Mt. Desert. In "Topics of the Time" there is a discussion of the "Distaste for Solitude," of "The New School of Explorers," as exemplified by Stanley; and a brief comment on Mistral and his poetic country of "Provence." In "Open Letters" the Rev. Alfred J. P. McClure describes the work of the "Siberian Exile Petition Movement of Philadelphia."

The Arena, in its August number, instead of giving a large space to attacks on Christianity as usual, has very able discussions on "The Economic Future of the New South," by Prof. N. S. Shaler, of Harvard; "Our Foreign Immigration, its Social Aspects," "Hypnotism, its Relation to Jurisprudence," by Dr. Emily Kempin, L. L. D., Secretary of the New York Medico-Legal Society; "The Coming Cataclysm of America and Europe," by Prof. J. R. Buchanan; and "The Domestic Infelicity of Literary Women," by Marion Harland.

Vick's Magazine for August gives useful hints for the berry patch of next year, and for the summer garden of this also. The editor has his eye on Chicago and the World's Fair of 1893. The enterprise of the Vick company at our approaching Illinois State Fair will provide a notable competition for our farmers.

In St. Nicholas for August Mr. Glave continues his attractive sketches of African colonization. There is also an account of Miss Olof Krarér, the first native of East Greenland who has visited civilization. The sketch is illustrated by two photographs, showing Miss Krarér in native and in civilized costume.

Current Comment and Legal Miscellany of Philadelphia prints in its July 15th issue a valuable sketch of Judge Joseph Story of the Supreme Court; also instructive comments on the Lodge Election bill and Taxation of Church Property.

The keeper of the morgue in New York states that four-fifths of the 5,000 bodies that reach that place of the dead every year are sent there by drunkenness.

Johannesburg, Transvaal, with a population of 25,000, spends £130,000 on liquor. Omitting the children, this means an average expenditure per adult of £61 per annum.

MORE GOOD WORDS

FOR OUR PAPER.

LET THEM FIND AN ECHO IN EVERY HOME IN AMERICA.

The Cynosure is doing good. God's blessing attends its circulation.—R. S. MORTON, Milville, Nova Scotia.

I have had the bright pages of the Cynosure from its first number, and it has testified to the truth.—JOSIAH SHAW, Durand, Wis.

I have taken the Cynosure since its second year of publication and am free to say it improves with age.—I. N. BROWN, M. D., Ironton, Ohio.

I believe it does more to build up Christ's kingdom than any other newspaper that I have any knowledge of.—HERMAN L. GLOEGE, Monroe, Wis.

The paper with the Washington portrait in it has been in the hands of many to good purpose, till it is almost worn out.—HORACE W. FOWLER, Rogers, Ark.

I take great pleasure in writing to inform you of the wonderful work the Cynosure is doing in this part of the land.—REV. J. J. SMITH, Swift Water, Miss.

I know the Cynosure is of the Lord and I love it, and hand it to my neighbors to read. I expect to do all I can for its advancement and circulation.—M. R. BECHTEL, Macksville, Kan.

I have for several years read the Cynosure, and loved its noble work. It has been a school where I have learned many things I would not have known otherwise.—REV. W. A. HOLMES, Helena, Ark.

I very much appreciate the work you are doing; and I am constantly realizing, more and more, the great need of such reading matter widespread among the people.—REV. A. A. HOYT, Publisher N. H. Independent Christian.

I regard the Cynosure as the best Christian publication in this country. It fearlessly advocates righteous reform, religiously, socially, politically, and the extermination of the secret empire.—S. S. GRANNIS, Red Wing, Minn.

I am pleased with the bold and fearless front which the Cynosure has presented to the foe. May you keep your colors ever waving in the thickest of the fight, "the oriflamme of God."—MRS. V. A. BUCK, East Randolph, N. Y.

I am in love with it, although I am a Master Mason. I have not been inside of the lodge since I have been taking the paper, the last two years, and if the Lord will help me I don't think I ever will go again.—ELDER J. ANTHONY, Madison, Ark.

Having seen a copy or two of the Christian Cynosure, and read its contents, I am surprised at the exposure it gives of the secret orders. I was not so aware of their evil tendencies. I have been asked to join some of them, but shall refrain from doing so.—T. E. KERLINGER, Stewartstown, Pa.

If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be persuaded to take any other. Be sure to get Hood's Sarsaparilla, which possesses peculiar strength and curative power.

10,000

Another ten thousand edition of the tract, KILLED, AND NO INQUEST.

This is a large 4-page tract at 30 cents per pound, 15 cents for half pound, and 10 cents for a third of a pound. It is an illustrated account of the death of Rev. J. W. Johnston, while being initiated by the officers of Huntington Lodge, W. Va., in January of this year. Sent postpaid at the above price. Address,

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St Chicago

SECRET SOCIETIES CON-DEMNE

BY EMINENT EDUCATORS.

PRESIDENT F. H. M. HENDERSON, Bowdon College, Ga.:—I regard all secret societies as extremely liable to be perverted.

PRESIDENT NOAH PORTER, Yale College:—That there are serious evils connected with them cannot be questioned; that they accomplish some good is equally clear.

PRESIDENT HITCHCOCK, Amherst College:—These, at different periods, have been fruitful sources of excitement, jealousy, and heart burning among the students.

JOSEPH MOORE, President Earlham College:—The fact that Freemasonry often thwarts every effort to enforce the law against an offender who is of the fraternality, shows it to be an obstacle to moral and civil progress.

HOWARD CROSBY, D. D., Chancellor University, New York:—Thirty years ago I was a member of a college secret society, and while I had upright fellow-members, and we encouraged literary culture, I found the association was chiefly a temptation to vice.

PROF. J. R. JACQUES, Illinois Wesleyan University:—Among college students, at an age when most susceptible, secret societies tend to breed that secretive disposition which is the very opposite of the truly candid, generous, and magnanimous character.

DR BEYS HLAG, Professor in the University of Halle:—Never entertain the idea to join the lodge for popularity's sake. It is utterly degrading to imagine pastors, men who have to deal with Christianity, the most universal and open thing in the world, wrapped up in the mummies of Freemasonry.

PRES. J. BLANCHARD:—There have been civil and ecclesiastical pests ever since there was a government and religion; and Freemasonry is one of those pests. The Gains of humanity have rejected Christ and worshiped nature, and Nimrods have denied justice and practiced oppression. But both are combined in the lodge.

PROF. J. R. W. SLOANE, D. D., Reformed Presbyterian Theological Seminary:—But my strongest opposition to Masonry is because of its rivalry with religion. It steps in before the church, and is a false, an idolatrous religion, a religion without a Saviour and, therefore, a delusion and a snare to all who engage in it, or rest their hope upon it.

PROF. BURT G. WILDER, Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y.:—I am willing to hazard my position . . . upon the truth of the proposition that secret societies are unknown in heaven, but that they form a prominent and essential feature of life in the other locality. Light versus darkness; openness versus mystery; mutual confidence versus suspicion and distrust.

PROF. S. C. BARTLETT, D. D., Chicago Theological Seminary:—There are certain other wide spread organizations, such as Freemasonry, which, we suppose, are in their nature hostile to good citizenship and true religion, because they exact initiatory oaths of blind compliance and concealment, incompatible with the claims of equal justice toward man and a good conscience toward God.

PROF. J. G. CARSON, D. D., Xenia, Ohio:—These associations are inconsistent with the genius of Christianity, because the secrecy which they affect, and to which they bind their members by promise or oath, is unnecessary and so unwarrantable, dangerous, and ensnaring to the conscience, and, therefore, utterly opposed to that openness and publicity which Christ enjoins on his disciples both by example and precept.

PRESIDENT C. G. FINNEY, of Oberlin, 1868:—We have, then, the implied testimony of Freemasons themselves, that the Christian church ought to have no fellowship with Freemasonry as thus revealed, and that those who adhere intelligently and determinedly to such an institution have no right to be in the Christian church. In our judgment we are forced to the same conclusion, we cannot escape from it, we wish it were otherwise, we therefore sorrowfully but solemnly pronounce this judgment.

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 20 cents per pound:

1. Historical Sketch—National Christian Association.
 3. Address to American Pastors.
 4. Freemasonry in the Family.
 5. President C. G. Finney on the duty of Christians towards the Lodge.
 7. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
 8. Modern Heathenism.
 9. Ministers at Rival Altars.
 12. Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodge.
 15. Secrecy and Sin.
 16. Selling Dead Horses.
 17. History of Masonry.
 18. Despotism Character of Freemasonry.
 19. Freemasonry, a Christ-excluding Religion.
 22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.
 28. Nathaniel Colver, D.D., on Masonry.
 33. Hon. Wm. H. Seward on Secret Societies.
 37. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).
 39. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?
 44. D. L. Moody on Secret Societies.
 45. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?
 49. John Quincy Adams on the duty of American Voters.
 - Chapters in American Politics.
 - Masonry vs. Prohibition.
 - Decline of the G. A. R.
 - Christianity and Odd-fellowship. Part 1, 4 pages; part 2, 4 pages.
- The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—20 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

NEW ENGLAND DEPARTMENT.—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent, No. 309, Tremont St., Boston.

WASHINGTON DEPARTMENT.—W. B. Stoddard, Agent, No. 215, 4th St., Washington, D. C.

COLLEGE AGENT, Rev. S. F. Porter, Cynosure office.

SPECIAL AGENT.—Rev. C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Du Page Co., Ill.

STATE AGENTS.

Minnesota, E. Hanson, Minneapolis.
New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimball, New Market.

Ohio, Rev. H. H. Hinman, Oberlin.
Pennsylvania, Rev. J. T. Michael, 2942 Westmont Street, Philadelphia.

Alabama, Rev. G. M. Elliott, Selma.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
Nathan Callender, Montdale, Pa.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa.
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.
Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
Rev. E. Mathews, Long Island City, N. Y.
E. Barnettson, Haskinsville, N. Y.
Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
A. W. Parry, Annawan, Ill.

THE BROKEN SEAL;

Or Personal Reminiscences of the Abductions and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan.
By Samuel D. Greene.

One of the most interesting books ever published. 16 cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $4.50.
This deeply interesting narrative shows what Masonry has done and is capable of doing in the Courts, and how hard men control the good men in the lodge and protect their own members when guilty of great crimes. For sale at 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

THE N. C. A. BUILDING

(The gift of Philo Carpenter.)

—AND OFFICE OF—

The Christian Cynosure,
221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

The National Christian Association

PRESIDENT—Bishop Milton Wright, Dayton, O.

VICE PRESIDENT—Rev. Geo. R. Milton, Elgin, Ill.

COR. SEC'Y and TREASURER—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SECRETARY—Rev. E. R. Worrell, Washington Heights, Ill.

DIRECTORS—T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, John Gardner, J. M. Hitchcock, Jerome Howe, G. R. Milton, Wm. Pinkney, J. P. Richards, Alexander Thomson, E. Whipple, E. R. Worrell.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS.

NEW ENGLAND.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic, Conn.; Sec'y, Miss E. E. Flagg, Wellesley, Mass.; Treas., Z. Graves, Harris, Mass.

ALABAMA.—Pres., Prof. Pickens; Sec., G. M. Elliott; Treas., Rev. C. B. Curtis; all of Selma.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., Rev. G. R. Milton, Elgin; Sec., A. H. Hiatt, Jr., Wheaton; Treas., Ezra A. Cook, Chicago.

INDIANA.—Pres., William H. Figg, Reno; Sec., S. L. Cook, Albion; Treas., Benjamin Ulsh, Silver Lake.

IOWA.—Cor. Sec., C. D. Trumbull, Morning Sun; Rec. Sec., W. L. Enlow, Birmingham; Treas., Wm. Crawford, Washington.

KANSAS.—Pres., J. S. T. Milligan, Denison; Sec., S. Hart, Leocompton; Treas., J. A. Torrence, Denison.

MAINE.—Pres., Isaac Jackson, Harrison; Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W. Goddard, West Sidney.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., S. B. Sjoblom, Fergus Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul; Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., B. F. Miller, Eagleville; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec., A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

NEBRASKA.—Pres., S. Austin, Fairmount; Cor. Sec., W. Spooner, Kearney; Treas., J. C. Fye.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., A. A. Hoyt, Littleton; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., Isaac Hyatt, Gilford Village.

NEW YORK.—Pres., Prof. A. R. Dodd, Houghton; Sec., Rev. W. A. Hazlett, Belmont; Treas., P. D. Miller, Newfane.

OHIO.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Parry; Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Seneca; Cor. Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Seneca.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., Nathan Callender, Montdale; Cor. Sec., E. J. Chalfant, York; Treas., J. C. Young, Custer City.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. W. Wood, Baraboo; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie.

HAVE YOU EXAMINED

The list of Books and Tracts for sale by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. Look it over carefully and see if there is nothing you want. If you are a friend of the cause, send for full catalogue to 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.

The Christian Cynosure.

J. BLANCHARD, EDITOR.

HENRY L. KELLOGG, ASSOCIATE EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, AUGUST 14, 1890.

WORTH TRYING.

A list of 50,000 for any paper is worth trying for. For most it means simply business success—dollars and cents in the publisher's pocket. Such a list for the Cynosure

MEANS WHAT?

VICTORY. It is worth trying to get, if it takes a year or two years. If we could depend upon one in three of our present subscribers to take hold of the work with enthusiasm it could be done in that time. They are beginning to work nobly. See the note on August work on the last page. We want a long and strong list of local workers. Send in your names for such a list. We will help at this end, you at that, and working together we will reach the end.

SPECIAL FUNDS.

Remember the special funds: 1. The Reading Room fund for sending the paper to College and Y.M.C.A. reading rooms. 2. The Southern Ministers' fund to put the paper in the hand of every colored pastor.

GOV. THOMAS OF UTAH.

This able and interesting young statesman is a native of Pittsburg, Pa., the home of Edwin M. Stanton, whom he resembles in vigor and general capacity.

His report to the Secretary of the Interior last October gives a vast amount of interesting and important information concerning the Mormons and the territory of Utah. The present estimated population of Utah is 230,000. The census of 1880 gave 80,841 born in Utah. The whole number born in the United States 99,969. Since 1880 the foreign-born Mormons have increased by immigration 16,694. The grazing and mountain lands which can never be used for agriculture constitute near seven-eighths of the entire Territory.

Gov. Thomas recommends that the U. S. state prisoners be put to work and the avails of their labor applied to support their polygamous wives and children.

The Mormon people are generally moving like the papists for denominational schools in which the teachings and pretended revelations to Smith and their other prophets will be taught; polygamy, of course, included, unless suppressed. They will, of course, make war on the free school system of the country. The various Christian denominations (non-Mormon) have in the Territory schools containing 7,442 pupils. Of the 2,490 scholars in Congregational schools, 1,396 were children of Mormon parents. Gov. Thomas says, "The unselfish work of the denominations has done much to emancipate the Mormons."

The last official statement of Mormons, May 2, 1885, was that, "Among the principles of our religion is, 'Immediate revelation from God: Celestial or plural marriage.' This is a vital part of our religion." They claim that the church does not interfere in political matters, but leaves the members free to act for themselves." But Gov. Thomas says, "The church is a political organization, with aims that are political, and it manifests a greater zeal in perpetuating its political power than in promoting its religious purposes." He says that Ogden elects non-Mormons, and that Salt Lake City has done it in a single instance, which awakens wild enthusiasm. But those who supposed the priest power was overthrown were mistaken.

Judge Anderson, who held that the endowment oaths of allegiance to another power than that of the U. S. make Mormons incapable of becoming American citizens, when asked if he knew the Masonic oaths, and whether they were not identical in principle with the oaths of the endowment, said he had regarded Masonic oaths as "humbuggery," had, in short, paid little attention to them. He said there was another legal principle more fatal to Mormonism than his late decision, viz., that children, by law, could not inherit and take the property of polygamous parents. "This," said he, "is more fatal than the other, as it strikes right at property."

But to set Masons to destroy Mormons is like setting foxes to destroy wolves. If Christ had denounced "the traditions" of the scribes and Pharisees, which were mere man-made religions, substitutes for the religion of God, and yet had allowed his disciples to practice those traditions, Christianity would have failed.

ODD-FELLOWS IN CHICAGO.

The Odd-fellows repeated last week in this city the wretched failure of the Freemasons ten years ago. In 1880 the "military and religious degrees" of Knight Templar Masonry retired from a disgusted and wearied city, which followed them home with serious charges of drunkenness, folly and broken promises. The Grand Cantonment of the Patriarchs Militant, the military degree of Odd-fellowship, withdrew from sight toward the end of last week amid complaints, law-suits and mutual recrimination. The head of this part of the order is a supreme grand "boss" who subscribes himself with a flourish,

"(LIEUTENANT GENERAL JOHN C. UNDERWOOD, GENERALISSIMO OF THE ARMY."

He is fully as big as our friend of ten years ago, Norman T. Gassette, "Commandant of the Lines." After this mighty chieftain gets through with his $5,000 lawsuit for deceiving the restaurant men who bought privileges of him, he will probably remember that he is only John Underwood after all. Thus it is ever with the frog that would be an ox. The railway companies don't go to law, but they complain of misrepresentation and fraud. The frequent complaints of these pugnacious but beardless "Patriarchs" themselves against the management of the affair, were heard day by day in the press. To many of them, who had not so many feathers about their eyes as to prevent their sight, the whole affair collapsed from a grand moral and military pageant into a sharp scheme for making money. A party of them called on Mayor Cregier, who was not displeased to see these lodge men of a near relation to his own. They wanted to know if the city was not taking half the proceeds of the Lake Front swindle. They were assured that Underwood & Co. were alone in that business. In fact the city council out of their good will toward the lodge were also badly taken in. They gave the park over to a private party who leveled off the walks and tore up the grounds at pleasure, charged every one of their brother Odd-fellows $1.00 to get in; and $1.00 more for a seat where anything could be seen. The uninitiated public also had to pay roundly for the same privileges. As only 40,000 of the 200,000 members of the order reached Chicago the receipts of the Generalissimo were much curtailed. He can probably pay for the lawsuit out of them, however, if it goes against him.

If it is objected that these failures should not be charged up to the Odd-fellow order, we answer then neither should the successes so vainly gloriously boasted be placed to its credit. But so long as every item that can be twisted to make for the order in popular favor is used to magnify it, so long must these marks of dishonor go to the same account.

For a more serious consideration of this affair our readers will please turn to the article by Rev. A. Thomson on another page, in which he forcibly discusses the immoral effect of promoting the military spirit by these lodges. It may be added to that presentation of the case, that in the event of war these "carpet knights," who may not be willing to undertake the perils of war for the sake of patriotism, may do so with the assurance that they will get all the offices. Being somewhat accustomed to drill, and much more to be called "Gen.," "Capt.," etc., a few grips will do the rest. If the United States should raise another army before these swindling Knights and Patriarchs, etc., are put down, it will be officered by them!

One Baptist preacher, H. H. Barbour, had the hardihood to speak in defense of the Odd-fellows in his pulpit last Sabbath. He may not fear to be called to account for his ill-advised language by his fellow-men, but he certainly should be by his God.

Mr. Barbour is reported as saying that the Odd-fellow order was a security against anarchy, an ally of the church, founded on the Bible, and an exponent of practical Christianity which the church would do well to follow. This order, which teaches us practical benevolence, he said "dispensed in charity" $2,500,000 a year; but he did not say that it raised some $7,500,000 in order to do this. He did not speak of the dance with which last week's affair began, or the wretched little ball with which it closed. Did these help the Belden Ave. Baptist Church to which Mr. Barbour preaches?

Did the titles, the tinsel and the flummery of these warrior Patriarchs enliven his prayer meeting last week? Did the military drill in the Lake Front park help his members "fight the good fight of faith?" Or the prize secret ritual work going on for days in Battery D help them to seek more earnestly for the "prize of the high calling of God?" If Odd-fellowship is the ally of the church, the Belden Ave. church should be in a state of revival after such a week with the lodge. This prize degree work, in which picked and drilled members from different lodges competed, is called by the Inter Ocean "the noble work of the order." Shall we believe the paper? If so, does the Belden Ave. Baptist church propose to enter the next competition.

Mr. Barbour defends the lodge from the charge of complicity with the saloons. He says the Odd-fellow who should enter one would be court-martialed. Where does this pastor find such a law; or does he intend to make one for the lodge? It was evidently an unpleasant sight in every quarter to see the saloons decorated with "Welcome to the I.O.O.F." and other symbols of joy at the presence of good patrons. Why did not these places welcome Mr. Barbour's Baptist brethren a few weeks since when their General Convention was held here? Why, if the lodge is an ally of the church?

These queries might be continued at such length that Mr. Barbour would be weary of them. We desist, therefore, asking him, and every one who holds the same views to read what may be said on Odd-fellowship and Christianity in our next.

NO SABBATH FOR THE LODGE.

If the Sabbath day is preserved to us it must be in opposition to the secret societies. The attention of our State and National Associations for the promotion of Sabbath observance is respectfully called to the press reports of the Odd-fellow gathering in this city and of the Grand Army in Boston. The Sabbath day is practically ignored by both societies in journeying to and fro to their place of national meeting. Long lists were printed in the Monday papers of Grand Army men and officials arriving in Boston or on their way during the Sabbath day by rail and boat. Hardly less was reported of the Odd-fellows and their Chicago meeting. Week after week the same facts are reported from some secret society or another. Some have picnics, and some have funerals which are made picnics. Some hold their meetings regularly on the Sabbath, and others are traveling to a conclave. There is scarce an exception in the whole lodge list.

This universal and uniform Sabbath desecration cannot be ignored by those who desire the preservation of the day either in its sacred character, or as a day of physical rest. The lodge is breaking down the Sabbath in spite of all efforts to save it.

If any good Christian brother thinks our views extreme let them read the following, copied literally from a handbill sent us from Pittsburgh:

SHOHOLA GLEN CAMP MEETING.

A union meeting of the Secret Societies of Western Pennsylvania will commence Friday, Aug. 8th, 1890, and will continue over THREE SUNDAYS.

SUNDAY, AUGUST 10TH.

The following roster of lodges and divisions of Knights of Pythias are invited and will conduct the services: Egyptian Lodge, No. 1, Pittsburgh, Pa., Unity Lodge, No. 2, Washington, Pa., Twin City Lodge, No. 3, Allegheny City, Pa., Queen of the West Lodge, No. 4, Pittsburgh, Pa., Coal City Lodge, No. 5, Pittsburgh, Pa., Morning Star Lodge, No. 2, Wheeling, W. Va., Uniformed Ranks K. of P., A. Lincoln Division, No. 1, Pa., Elite Division, No. 2, Pa., Hannibal Division, No. 3, Washington, Pa., Ladies Courts of the I. O. O. C., of K. of P., Damon Court, No. 1, Pittsburgh, Pa., Pythias Court, No. 2, Pittsburgh, Pa. The Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania will be present on the occasion. John W. Jenkins, G. C., Wm. Gatewood, G. K. of R. & S.

SUNDAY, AUGUST 17TH.

The Masonic fraternity will have charge of the services. Naomi Court, No. 8, of Pittsburgh, Pa., will be in attendance. The M. W. G. M., James H. Bond, of Pennsylvania, cordially requests all Masons of Pennsylvania to be present on this date, and take part in the union meeting. The Grand Chaplain will be present.

SUNDAY, AUGUST 24TH.

Will be devoted to the lodges of Odd Fellows and Households of Ruth. All lodges are cordially invited.

There follows a long list of ministers, who are invited to be present; the rates and time of Sunday trains on a number of railway and boat lines; and an urgent invitation in capitals to everybody to attend "the grandest and most interesting series of meetings ever held in the State!" A final and special notice is given to the G. A. R., Ladies' Relief Corps and Ladies' Loyal League to take part in the meeting, although a day is not assigned for their special religious services.

What, we ask of the Sabbath-keeping Presbyterians of Pittsburgh,—WHAT MEANS THIS?

Are the "secret societies of western Pennsylvania" converted to Christ and proposing three Sabbath days' worship in his honor? Hardly. If this bill is genuine, it advertises a grand lodge spree three weeks long, of which the devil will reap the sole benefit. It is an amazing proposition; and whether carried out by white or black lodges (and we suspect it is the latter), it nevertheless reveals the danger to our civil and religious institutions from the lodge system. Secret societies have no need for a Sabbath day. It is not necessary to their religion of naturalism, any more than a lamb was needed for the kind of religion Cain began to practice.

Will not our Sabbath associations note our warning, and inquire for themselves whether or not these things are so?

Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes, in the August Atlantic Monthly, scorches the feathers and tinsel of the puissant knights and grand lordlings of the lodge in a sharp criticism of the bombastic titles, borrowed from the effete, swaggering, old-world aristocracy by our lodge mimics. It is amazing how men and women who pretend to common sense, and sometimes to piety, can delight in displaying what there is left of barbarism in their natures.

—In the last number of the Living Way, Memphis, Rev. R. N. Countee announces that the Baptist Home Missionary Society will aid the Memphis school next year and pay $1,000 on the salary of the principal. Bro. Countee also writes that he starts for Europe directly.

—From the extreme southeast corner of Kentucky a friend sends for some copies of the paper with the remark: "Tell a man here that you do not believe in secret societies and he is more surprised than if you told him you did not believe in the church. The N. C. A. ought to have a man at work in Kentucky—a man who is not afraid of bullets."

—A suggestion comes from the secretary of the American Sabbath Union that secretaries of conventions, conferences, associations and other bodies that have adopted or that may adopt resolutions against the opening of the World's Fair of 1893 on the Sabbath day send certified copies of such action to the World's Columbian Commission, Grand Pacific Hotel, Chicago. The Commission meets again Oct. 7th. A free leaflet discussing this case can be had of the Western Tract Society, Cincinnati.

—It was reported to the Synod of the Associate Presbyterian church, meeting in Bloomfield, O., that the colored mission school at Dunlap, Kansas, had declined because of the removal of the colored people. Nearly one-half have removed during the past two years. The school numbered forty last spring. It was recommended that an orphanage take its place. It was at this Dunlap school building that Bro. S. E. Starry was nearly killed by a blow on the head from a stone thrown by the lodge mob.

—A brother who has been looking through the directories of this year reports a marvelous increase in the number of lodges. In the Chicago directory for 1890, 1642 lodges are counted to less than a thousand last year. Boston last year footed up 571; now 684 are reckoned. We must remember that Chicago greatly enlarged its bounddaries last year and so took in many lodges before organized. There is also some uncertainty respecting the count from a directory, although that is the best means of reckoning accessible to the public. These figures are woefully alarming and do not help us lose any interest in the discussion between the Congregationalist and its friendly critics. Read the editorial from the Chicago Post.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Rev. G. R. Milton remains temporarily with the Plymouth Church, Elgin, Ill., there being an almost unanimous solicitation for him to do so by the church.

—Elder R. N. Countee of the Tabernacle Baptist church, Memphis, was lately in Philadelphia. The Christian Banner of that city mentions his address in the Monumental Baptist church on 27th ult.

—Rev. Wilbur F. Crafts, author of the "Sabbath for Man," is to start on a third trans-continental tour in the interest of Sabbath reform in a few days. Those who desire to secure his services may address him at New York City, whence letters will be forwarded.

—Bro. J. P. Stoddard, of the New England field, spoke on the 6th inst. to a meeting in the Phillips Block, Boston. Two of the audience who had been Freemasons, bade him God-speed. He intends visiting Old Orchard and Sebago Lake in Maine, where Prohibition camp meetings are being held.

—Pres. J. Blanchard preached Sabbath morning in Wheaton, recounting his experiences in travel between the two oceans, and setting forth the needs East and West of a revival of Christianity to check the lodge flood. The evening congregation voted unanimously for the publication of the sermon in this paper.

—Rev. John Lee, Methodist Episcopal pastor at Joliet, Ill., a well-known writer on Romanism and esteemed contributor of the Cynosure, is now traveling in his native Ireland. His frequent letters to the Inter-Ocean are of great interest, revealing somewhat the difficulties and burdens imposed on that poor people by Romanism.

—Rev. J. M. Foster, of the National Reform Association, spoke three times during July at Lake Bluff on the work of that organization. His appointments for the first week in August were at the camp meeting at Washington Court-house, Ohio, and at Epworth Heights Assembly, Loveland, Ohio. The 9th and 10th of August he is to be at the Long Pine Chautauqua, Nebraska. On the 17th and 18th he returns to the camp meeting at Goshen, O., and on the 23d, he is to be at the Prohibition camp meeting at Vincennes, Ind.

—Rev. Dr. Flavel Bascom, one of the oldest Congregational ministers in Illinois, died at Princeton on Friday last, aged 88 years. He came to the State in 1833 from Connecticut as a home missionary. From 1840 to 1850 he was pastor of the First Presbyterian Church in this city. Subsequently he was the pastor of the First Church of Christ in Galesburg, and also preached in Dover and Hinsdale, remaining some years in each place. He was very widely esteemed, both within and without the denomination. Personally his testimony was always freely given against the lodge. He participated in the State Anti-masonic Convention held in 1876, in the First Methodist Church in this city, but he seldom took part in such public efforts.

How much one man can do for Christ unprofessionally, and without putting on any particular badge! We have in mind a well-to-do manufacturer in an average New England town. His business is large and engrossing, but he carries on his heart all through the week the interests of a Sunday-school class of young men. He plans how to keep them in sympathy with the church and the Sunday-school. He organizes them for various lines of Christian activity. He keeps them on the lookout for new members. He does all this quietly and without parade. But what satisfaction can exceed his, when on Sunday fifty or sixty of the brightest young men in the place surround him and hear from his lips the words that animate them to nobler living?—Congregationalist.

WHY NOT?

THE NEW ENGLAND GROVE MEETING FOR REFORM.

Is there any good reason why those in convenient localities, holding to the fundamental facts of Christianity and believing in the principles advocated by the Christian Cynosure, and so tersely given by Joseph Cook, in a summary of his recent speech in Chicago, should not meet in annual convocation to "wait upon the Lord and renew their strength?" The custom has already become common, with many, and certainly has a Bible basis in the Feast of Tabernacles, and is sustained by reason and the fitness of things as well.

Some of the reasons for such an annual gathering remain and will continue so long as the spiritual and physical nature of man is unchanged; and why not meet the need with the opportunity it craves? Jaded and weary workers with hand or brain need to break away from the environments of a crowded city, or the perplexing duties of home, of shop, or farm, and give freedom to limb and thought, and to reap a harvest of vigor and elasticity of mind and body, outside the gratings of rigid proprieties and exacting conventionalities in the green fields, or under the friendly shade of stately temples of God's own creation. Socially they need to see new faces, listen to new voices, study new characters under new conditions, and in contact with the pure and chaste to develop a broader, deeper, truer manhood and womanhood for life's earnest work.

Religiously God's children, of diverse ways of thought on minor points of faith, need to take each other by the hand, look each other in the face, and by personal contact and friendly comparison come to feel that Christ's body is one, and that schisms are from beneath, and oneness with the Father and Son is a possibility among all that the Father hath given to the Son. Theologically, Christians need to meet for the prayerful study of God's Word that they may know themselves, become better acquainted with each other and, above all, know more of God.

Christians need to meet, untrammelled by church or party restrictions, where they are free to speak and to act with Gospel liberty, and to discuss all questions of interest that affect social or political life, or concern the honor of Christ and his coming kingdom, without fear of wounding the feelings or giving offence to any. And most of all, Christians need to tarry together for the endowment of the Holy Spirit, that, like the early Christians, they may go out to preach the Word with power.

To meet these and other needs a stated time and suitable place are required, so that all who are led by the Spirit to join in such an assembly, may have ample time to set their houses in order and make such provisions as they may find necessary.

Such a place is provided, and within easy reach from any point in New England, at Hoyt's Grove, four miles from Ware, in western Massachusetts, and by the kindness of its owners, is tendered to God's people. Arrangements have been made, and a few have covenanted, God willing, to meet there on the 22nd inst., to wait upon God; and, if he shall so order by his servants, to inaugurate an annual convocation, on the east bank of Silver Lake amid a grove of stately pines covering twelve or more acres, furnishing camping ground and unbroken shade for 10,000 people. The ground is dry, free from grass or underbrush, and carpeted with pine leaves or needles. There are accommodations for twenty-four persons on the grounds, with board and lodging at $5.00 per week, and others can be provided for if notice is sent in time. There is a well of pure water furnishing an ample supply, and safe boats, with trusty oars-men where required, for rowing on the lake. Brother, or sister, won't you, if within reasonable distance, make this a subject of prayer; and if the Lord establishes your thoughts in that way, come and join in setting up this Feast of Tabernacles, to which the faithful may annually go up. Direct letters of inquiry for particulars to Miss E. E. Flagg, Wellesley, Mass.

J. P. STODDARD, N. E. Agent N. C. A.

ARE YOU, kind reader, making those 50,000 subscribers a matter of prayer? If you pray well, you will think well, plan well, and work well for such a list.

THE HOME.

INASMUCH.

"If I had dwelt"—so mused a tender woman—
All fine emotions stirred
Through pondering o'er that life divine, yet human,
Told in the sacred Word--

"If I had dwelt of old, a Jewish maiden,
In some Judean street,
Where Jesus walked, and heard his word so laden
With comfort strangely sweet,

"And seen the face where utmost pity blended
With each rebuke of wrong,
I would have left my lattice and descended,
And followed with the throng.

"If I had been the daughter, jewel-girded,
Of some rich rabbi there,
Seeing the sick, blind, halt, my blood had curdled
At sight of such despair.

"And I had wrenched the sapphires from my fillet,
Nor let one spark remain,
Snatched up my gold, amid the crowd to spill it,
For pity of their pain.

"I would have let the palsied fingers hold me;
I would have walked between
The Mary and Salome, while they told me
About the Magdalene.

"Foxes have holes." I think my heart had broken
To hear the words so said.
While Christ had not—were sadder ever spoken?—
'A place to lay his head!

"I would have flung abroad my doors before him,
And in my joy have been
First on the threshold, eager to adore him,
And crave his entrance in!"

Ah! would you so? Without a recognition
You passed him yesterday;
Jostled aside, upheld, his mute petition,
And calmly went your way.

You sit within, with warmth and comfort girdled,
While past your window-sill
Sweep heart-sick crowds, and, if your blood is curdled,
You wear your jewels still.

You catch aside your robes, lest want should clutch them
In its imploring wild;
Or lest some woful penitent might touch them,
And you be thus defiled.

O! dreamers, dreaming that your faith is keeping
All service free from blot,
Christ daily walks your street, sick, suffering, weeping,
And ye perceive him not!

—Margaret J. Preston in the Independent.

WHITEWASHING.

Instead of whitewashing houses as they did fifty years ago we whitewash men. A neighbor came to me the other day and said: "You know Jared Jones has failed? I am sorry for him. He wants to be postmaster, and so I have got up a petition for him which I want you to sign." I read the paper. It recommended Jared Jones as a man of excellent character, possessing business qualifications of a high order, etc. I said to my neighbor: "Now just between you and me, isn't that a little like whitewashing? You know that there were insinuations in regard to Jones' integrity when he failed. And you know, too, that if he had had the ability you here claim for him he might have been successful. The truth is he is shiftless and possibly dishonest; how then can we recommend him for a position so responsible?"

"Well, you know that he can get clerks to open and distribute the mails, and the poor fellow is hard up and we ought to do something for him."

I did not sign that application, but a great many people did. They signed because somebody asked them to, or from sympathy. Jared Jones was like a rough and blackened wall. He was a fit subject for whitewashing, and so they laid on the kalsomine thick, hoping it would not rub off on the way to Washington. This signing recommendations for any and everybody has gone so far that no one is deceived by them. The heads of departments at the Federal and State capitals have learned to detect the whitewash, and hence but little harm is done: yet the custom is demoralizing.

I am a school director. A man came to me the other day wanting a situation as teacher. He impressed me favorably until he opened his satchel and began to take out his testimonials. Then I became suspicious and I could not help saying to him: "My dear sir, if what these people write is true, you ought to be the president of one of the first colleges in the land instead of going about teaching district schools." This made him blush and stammer, so without pressing the matter, I said: "Leave your papers with me; I will see the other directors and give you an answer in a day or two." After he left I wrote to a friend in one of the places where he had taught, and from which he had glowing testimonials. The answer came, stating that the man had utterly failed there and had to be dismissed, but the directors gave him testimonials hoping that he might do better in another place. In other words, they whitewashed him, knowing that he was a failure, in order that he might impose upon somebody else.

I find in the papers now and then very neat specimens of ecclesiastical whitewashing. A congregation has grown weary of Brother A's platitudes. They must have a change. But they don't want to interfere with his ministerial prospects. So they say to him, you resign, assigning as the reason your need of a change of climate or something else, and we will give you a first-rate send off. Brother A consents. His resignation is presented at a meeting of the congregation. It appoints a whitewashing committee who kalsomine the retiring pastor with limey resolutions of appreciation and regret. The people present him with a gold-headed cane, and his wife with a silver tea-service. Away he goes, leaving, as the public is led to believe, his recent charge in inconsolable widowhood. But even this kind of whitewashing does not impose upon everybody, and a candidate who comes with a profusion of credentials is apt to be regarded with suspicion. I knew of a case not long ago where a shrewd bench of elders refused even to hear a man because he was too highly recommended. His whitewashers put on the lime-water too thick.

The motives that tempt people to go into this mean and miserable whitewashing business are three-fold. First, we are all by nature sympathetic. When we see anybody in trouble or want we cannot help feeling for him, and wanting to do something to help him. And how easy to relieve this sympathetic feeling by signing a recommendation! Secondly, we are all, or most of us, by nature cowardly. When a neighbor comes to us and asks us to sign a whitewashing paper, we have not grit enough to say no. And, thirdly, we are all by nature selfish. We are willing to whitewash others because we think that a time may come when we ourselves will need a little kindly kalsomining. And the old adage says that "Turn about is fair play."

But the more I think of this modern whitewashing the more it seems to me as bad or worse than that of the olden time.—Obadiah Oldschool, in Interior.

IN READINESS.

Harvest time had come; farmer Grant's beautiful field of red clover had been mown, and all one sunny afternoon two boys, with the strong arms and tireless feet that made labor a delight, had been raking the fragrant swath and tossing it into low hay-cocks here and there about the field. Now, at sunset, with the happy consciousness that their day's work was well done, they leaned their rakes against the fence, and then, in boyish fashion, seated themselves on the highest rail to rest a few moments before trudging home.

"Phil," said the youngest, a boy of fifteen, "do you ever dream about what you will be and do when you are a man?" Phil's Midas-like imagination was at that moment converting the sweet-scented hay before him into dollars and cents; but he paused in his pleasant task, and for a second looked thoughtfully at his brother.

"No," he said soon in a contented voice. "I don't waste time in dreaming about my future, Edwin; I neither want nor expect to change much. I love every foot of this old place, and I hope to live and to die here where I was born."

Edwin nodded approvingly. "I am glad you want to stay," he said, "for it would not be right for both of us to leave father, and I want to go away."

"For what, and where?" Phil asked in a low, business-like tone.

"That is just what I don't know," Edwin slowly confessed. "I want to go—somewhere, and I want to do—something. But the world is so wide that I don't know where to look for a place, and neither do I know what kind of work I want to do, or can do."

"Until you do know, I guess you had better stay here," Phil said in a matter-of-fact voice.

"On this fence, do you mean?" Edwin asked with a laugh, as he jumped down and shouldered his rake. "Well, you may stay, if you like, Phil, but I'm going home now, and some day," the boy added soberly, "I am going from home. I am sure of that, though I cannot tell where I'll go nor when."

"All right," Phil answered cheerfully. "Only, old fellow, before you go, be sure that you are ready."

"The question is how, and for what, I am to get ready," he said, as he led the way homeward.

That evening when he opened his little Bible Edwin's eyes—guided, perhaps, by Him who orders all our ways—fell on this question, "Wherefore wilt thou run, my son, seeing that thou hast no tidings ready?"

With the quickness of a bright young mind, the boy made his own application of that searching question. If it means anything for me, he thought, it means just this, that before I run, I must be sure that I am sent; before I seek a great work, I must be sure that I am fitted for it. When God's workers are ready for their tasks, their places are always ready for them.

But how am I to get ready? was the boy's next question; and then, like an inspiration, came the resolve—I will neglect no opportunity, however small, that is offered me for self-improvement; and I will seek to acquire all the information possible on all subjects, even the simplest and most insignificant. I will begin to-morrow to pick up "learning's crumbs," and then I will wait patiently to see what use God will bid me to make of them.

Edwin paused then, but soon another and a nobler thought stirred his soul. If I am a learner, I must at the same time be a doer, he said to himself. While I am trying to get ready for some great work in the future, I must not forget nor neglect the little duties of the present. Perhaps the little duties are the stairs by which we climb up to the heights where the great deeds are done. No, he firmly resolved, I will not slight or despise my little duties, and I will choose for my motto, "Faithful in that which is least."

Edwin Grant had a strong will, as well as a bright imagination, and obstacles were like spurs driving him onward. A district school education was all his father was able to give him, and if Edwin was to be a "picker up of learning's crumbs" he had but a meagre feast to glean from. But he had a dictionary and an atlas; his father owned Henry's Commentary on the Bible, and before the summer was ended, the boy, by dint of hard and unsparing labor, had earned money enough to purchase in cheap, plain bindings Chambers' Encyclopedia in fifteen volumes, and, possessed of these books, he felt—much as Columbus did about his three ships—that with them he could make wonderful discoveries, and acquire great treasures.

Two years went rapidly by, and left Edwin where they found him, still working on his father's farm. No door into the great world had opened yet for him, and no opportunity for more congenial labor had been offered to him. The wasting time tired his patience, but it did not weaken his determination. Quietly and firmly he adhered to his resolve, and sought, in every possible way, to make the most of his small advantages, and to get ready for the duties and responsibilities of manhood.

One October morning the old stage, that connected the little village of Lonewood with the nearest railroad station, broke down opposite Farmer Grant's. There were but three passengers, a gentleman and his wife and young daughter, and Edwin was asked to take his father's team and drive them to the station. Cheerfully, with little thought of the consequences that would result from that drive, the boy complied.

"Let me see," the gentleman said suddenly, as they were driving leisurely through the beautiful forest that gave Lonewood its name, "this is the fourteenth of October, Lily," and he turned to his daughter; "here is a puzzle in history for you: Seven hundred and eighty years ago to-day a battle was fought that changed the fate of a great nation, and wrought a lasting revolution in its language, manners and government. What was that battle?"

"Oh, I don't know," replied the young lady with much indifference; "perhaps it was Waterloo."

"Waterloo! seven hundred and eighty years ago?" her father said scornfully. Then, as his keen eyes detected the smile on Edwin's face, he asked:

"Do you know, my boy?"

"It was the battle of Hastings, was it not, sir?" Edwin answered modestly.

The gentleman nodded. "So you know something of English history, do you?" he said. "Well, now, let me see what you know of the world's history before the Normans were thought of. Answer this question if you can: When, by permission of Cyrus, after their long captivity in Babylon, the Jews returned to Palestine, what were the other great nations doing?"

A little laugh, more expressive of ignorance than amusement, escaped from Miss Lilly, but Edwin answered quietly:

"China was a great nation then, and in China Confucius was teaching the people to reverence their parents and worship their ancestors."

"Humph!" Mr. Maynard said, "some of Confucius's teachings might do good in America, I am thinking. Well, what were they doing in Greece?"

"Solon the Wise had died two years before. Pythagoras had recently invented the multiplication table, and the first public library at Athens had just been founded."

"Pretty well advanced in civilization, weren't they?" Mr. Maynard said, dryly. "Well, what was the mistress of the world doing?"

"Do you mean Rome, sir? She was hardly mistress of the world then, I think; Nebuchadnezzar had dreamed of the 'kingdom as strong as iron,' but at that time, I believe, the Romans were occupied chiefly with quarrels and wars among themselves."

Mr. Maynard smiled at the allusion to Daniel's prophecy, but, continuing his examination, he asked next:

"What were they doing in the land of the pyramids?"

"The glory of the Pharaohs was waning, I think," Edwin answered, "for soon after the return of the Jews to Palestine the Persians invaded and conquered Egypt."

"You have read history for some purpose, my boy," Mr. Maynard said, in a pleasant voice, while his daughter asked, eagerly, "How have you ever learned so much?"

"I haven't learned much," Edwin answered humbly: "I am only trying to learn."

"But how could you connect all those different events?" the young lady asked.

"Oh, that is easy," Edwin said; "I take a date and set it up like a flag staff for my center, and then around it, like so many tents, I group all the contemporary facts about nations and peoples that I can learn."

"That's a good way, isn't it, papa?" the young lady asked.

Mr. Maynard did not answer. He was watching Edwin, and seriously considering the wisdom of a thought that had suddenly occurred to him.

Yes, he thought, you are intelligent, my boy, and you have disciplined your mind well; but now what is your character? A cultivated intellect, unaccompanied by Christian principles, is like a house of many stories built on a poor foundation—it is always dangerous to trust it; and I will wait a while, and learn what stuff you are really made of, my bright boy, before I form any plans for you.

Just as Mr. Maynard made this wise resolve, a man on horseback galloped up to them.

"Hello, Edwin Grant," he called, "you are just the boy I want. My wagon's a little further on, and the wheels are locked for want of oil. Now, have you your oil-can with you?"

Edwin sprang up, raised the cushion of his seat, and revealed a small box containing rope and twine, a hammer and nails, and several other articles; from among them he produced a small oil-can and handed it to the man.

Mr. Maynard looked on with much interest. "Do you always carry a tool chest on your drives?" he asked.

"Yes, when I am going on a long drive," Edwin answered. "I always like to be ready."

"Ready for what?"

"I don't always know, sir; for whatever I am needed."

"Hum!" Mr. Maynard stroked his beard, and rode on, busy with thoughts that would have astonished Edwin had he known them.

They reached the station some minutes before the train was due, and as he waited on the platform, Mr. Maynard saw Edwin go to a small fruit stand that was near by. Curiosity, indeed, led him to follow, and as he stood near the boy, though unnoticed by him, he heard him say:

"The last time I was here, I bought four lemons of you. You said they were thirty-six cents a dozen, but for the four you only charged me nine cents. I didn't think about it then, but after I got home I discovered that you had made a mistake, and ought to have asked twelve cents, and now I want to make it right," and as he spoke Edwin laid the three cents in the fruit-seller's hand.

Mr. Maynard turned and walked away undiscovered by Edwin, but when a minute later the boy came to him to say good-bye, he asked:

"Do you intend to spend your days on your father's farm, my boy?"

Edwin's face flushed a little as he answered, "No, sir. My brother will stay with my father; I am only waiting —"

"For what?" Mr. Maynard asked as the boy paused.

"Until a door opens," Edwin answered in a quiet but decided tone.

"Hum!" Mr. Maynard soberly ejaculated; and then, as the approaching train warned him to hurry, he said, kindly:

"Good-bye, my boy; some day—perhaps—we will meet again."

A few days later a letter—that changed and influenced his entire life—came to Edwin Grant. It was from Mr. Maynard; he was engaged on an important historical work he wrote, and wanted a young man to read to him, write from his dictation, and aid him in collecting facts from the valuable works stored in public libraries. Great thoroughness and faithfulness would be required, but there would be many hours of leisure and a good salary. Would Edwin accept the situation?

Would he? Two years of patient and unceasing effort had made him ready for it, and prepared to appreciate its rare advantages; and with a glad heart the boy went forth to his new work.

Years passed. There came a time when all over the broad land, Edwin Grant's name was known and honored. A time when great duties claimed him, when great tasks were laid upon him, and safely reposed in him. And the foundation of all that greatness was laid the summer night when he resolved, before he aspired to great things, to get ready for them, and in the least things to be faithful.—Christian at Work.

WHAT MADE JOHN RUSKIN.

John Ruskin, in his autobiography, tells of the foundation on which the character of this remarkable man was reared. It was the work of his mother:

"After our chapters (from two to three a day, according to their length), the first thing after breakfast (and no interruptions from servants allowed, none from visitors, who either joined in the reading or had to stay upstairs, and none from any visiting or excursions, except real traveling), I had to learn a few verses by heart, or repeat to make sure I had not lost something of what was already known; and, with the chapters thus gradually possessed from the first to the last, I had to learn the whole body of the fine old Scotch paraphrases, which are good, melodious and forceful verses, and to which, together with the Bible itself, I owe the first cultivation of my ear in sound."

Mr. Ruskin prints his mother's list of the chapters, "with which, thus learned, she established my soul in life." It is as follows: Exodus, chapters 15 and 16; 2 Samuel 1, from the 17th verse to the end; 1 Kings 8; Psalms 23, 32, 90, 91, 103, 112, 119, 139; Proverbs, chapters 2, 3, 8, 12; Isaiah, chapter 58; Matthew, chapters 5, 6, 7; Acts, chapter 26; 1 Corinthians, chapters 13, 15; James, chapter 4; Revelation, chapters 5, 6. And truly (Mr. Ruskin says) "though I have picked up the elements of a little further knowledge—in mathematics, meteorology and the like, in after life—and owe not a little to the teaching of many people, this material installation of my mind in that property of chapters I count very confidently the most precious, and, on the whole, the one essential part of all my education."

TEMPERANCE.

THE PENNSYLVANIA CONSPIRACY.

During the Amendment Campaign a year ago, the newspapers of this State, and especially of Philadelphia, sold out to the liquor men not only their news columns, but in some instances their editorial space as well. They printed as news and editorials, without any advertising marks, articles prepared and paid for by the agents of the saloon keepers of this State. This is not now a matter of conjecture, but a well established fact. During the campaign the distillers and brewers worked in harmony. The Distillers' Association was to pay the bills for advertising, publishing, etc., the Brewers' Association agreeing to refund to the distillers 60 per cent. of all the expense thus incurred. On the basis of this agreement the distillers, in the last exciting weeks of the campaign, borrowed of Moore & Sinnott, liquor dealers, Philadelphia, $30,000, to be used as follows: $20,000 to pay newspapers; $13,000 to pay window-book men; $5,000 to Lewis C. Cassidy for legal services; $22,800 of this money has not been paid back to Moore & Sinnott, so they have sued for the money, and the statement filed in the Common Pleas Court No. 4, Philadelphia, April 3, contains the names of the newspapers that sold themselves out and the amount paid each one. Here is the list:

May 20, Delaware County Citizen.....	$ 500 00
May 25, Philadelphia Inquirer.....	1,504 52
June 7, Catholic Standard.....	175 00
June 15, Catholic Standard.....	150 00
June 15, Commercial List.....	187 25
June 17, Philadelphia Record.....	300 00
June 17, Evening Bulletin.....	500 00
June 17, Philadelphia Inquirer.....	776 00
June 17, Evening Star.....	225 60
June 20, Philadelphia Ledger (various bills).....	145 30
June 24, Evening Bulletin.....	250 00
June 27, North American.....	2,942 20
June 27, Philadelphia Inquirer.....	208 10
June 27, Philadelphia Times.....	3,516 30
July 2, Evening Telegraph.....	4,000 00
July 2, Evening Bulletin.....	500 00
July 8, Philadelphia Record.....	2,182 00
July 15, Detective Services.....	300 00
July 15, Extra for city papers.....	575 00
July 15, Schuylkill Navy.....	280 00
Total.....	$19,216 67

This law-suit and the facts thus far brought out, would make mighty interesting reading for the people of Pennsylvania, but so far as we have seen, all the Philadelphia dailies and, for that matter, all the secular dailies and weeklies of the State are as dumb as oysters concerning the matter. Of course we know why. We have here only some of the newspapers of our State that, for blood-money, agreed to defend the saloon as against the home; to not only leave weak women and innocent children unprotected, but, in fact, joined their mighty influence with that of the combined liquor organizations of this State to increase and intensify the wretchedness and misery occasioned by strong drink.

Such conduct on the part of the editors and proprietors of the newspapers of Pennsylvania is simply odious, and should elicit the condemnation of all honest and fair-minded people in the civilized world. What was done in this State was done in Massachusetts, Rhode Island, and is now being done in Nebraska, and will be done in every State where prohibition is presented to the people. May God hasten the day when a better state of things shall prevail. May we all by word and deed, by voice and vote dethrone such treachery in our fair land.—From the Home Guard, of York, Pa.

The crisis in the drink-traffic question is rapidly approaching in this country. The rum power is growing utterly reckless of all restraint and is ruling with a high hand. Government or State are of secondary or no consequence. The "first concern" has become the protection and perpetuation of the rum power. State and national politics are molded to that end. That time foreshadowed by Senator Platt's historic oration in 1870 is now near at hand, when "the republic must triumph over rum, or rum will triumph over the republic." Recent events fully justify these startling declarations. Especially significant are the concessions of even high-license advocates that that much-heralded method has utterly failed to check the saloon curse.—Golden Censer.

WASHINGTON LETTER (Continued from 5th page).

greater progress during the last decade than in temperance. It can be noticed nearly everywhere and among all classes of people. There was a time when drunken members of Congress were so common that they scarcely excited comment, and the liquor habit seemed in no way to injure the standing of the member with the general public; all that is now changed. A drinking member is the exception, and an intoxicated one a rarity; and disgrace in the eyes of all reputable folks is the penalty which any public man has to pay for making a beast of himself by getting intoxicated.

There was a time also when active temperance workers were looked upon with suspicion by the general public; and when it was first proposed to purchase a tent to be used to hold temperance meetings under during the warm weather in different sections of the city, the idea was hooted at as being "too much on the circus style"; but the tent was bought and for several years the meetings have been held under it, and they have been attended by large crowds, while its platform has been occupied by Cabinet officers, members of Congress, ministers of the Gospel and other prominent people; and now everybody admits that much good has been thereby accomplished, and many hundreds of signers of the pledge obtained.

What has brought about this change? The answer is easy. Organization, earnestness and hard and constant work on the part of the temperance people, are the levers which have brought about this transformation, and the same levers are always and everywhere in reach of those who search diligently for them.

EDUCATIONAL NOTES.

—At the election of school boards in Sweden at the close of 1889, the first occasion on which women were eligible for election, seven women were returned.

—Five institutions of learning controlled by the Roman Catholic church have been admitted to New York university system, and are receiving a part of the academic fund of the State.

—The fund of Harvard College has increased $1,000,000 the past year, and now exceeds $7,000,000, and the value of its lands, buildings, and collections may be roughly estimated at from $2,000,000 to $3,000,000 more.

—The walls of the new building at Wheaton College are rising above the trees on the hill so as to be visible from the Northwestern railway. The College authorities have offered at two-year's scholarship as a prize in every county in the State for the best oration by any young man or woman given at the county fair.

—Hartsville College, Indiana, is now supported by eight United Brethren conferences,—three in Indiana, two in Ohio, two in Michigan, and one in Canada. President Payne expects that nearly all the students of last year will be present at the opening of the fall term. Over $10,000 were donated to the institution during the year. The fall term opens Sept. 9th.

—Mr. Grandison Fairchild, the venerable father of three college presidents, died lately at his home in Brownhelm, Ohio, from a stroke of paralysis, aged ninety-eight years and about four months. He had been a resident of Brownhelm for about sixty years. President Jas. H. Fairchild, late of Oberlin, and E. H. Fairchild, long president of Berea, now deceased, were of his sons.

—The most richly endowed college in the United States, it is claimed, is Columbia of New York city. Its landed property in that city received from the Trinity corporation in 1754 and from the State in 1814, affords a yearly income of $342,000. The total capital of the corporation is placed at $9,000,000. Ninety-four of our colleges received in gifts during the past year the great sum of $3,624,579, and the total of their present endowments is $51,765,449.

—The United Presbyterian gives us a college number—a short account of the seven colleges and two theological seminaries maintained by the U. P. churches, with cuts of their buildings. These institutions are all doing good work, and are well patronized. They are the Xenia and Allegheny seminaries and Cooper Memorial College in Kansas, Knoxville in Tennessee, Monmouth in Illinois, Muskingum in Ohio, Norfolk in Virginia, Tarkio in Missouri and Westminster in Pennsylvania.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE NEW TESTAMENT.

LESSON VIII.—Third Quarter.—Aug. 24.

SUBJECT.—Prevailing Prayer.—Luke 18:1-14.

GOLDEN TEXT.—He that humbleth himself shall be exalted.—Luke 18:14.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

DAILY READINGS.—M.—Luke 17:20-37. T.—Luke 18:1-14. W.—Psa. 51:1-19. T.—Psa. 130:1-8. F.—Luke 11:1-13. S.—Phil. 3:1-11. S.—Luke 18:1-14.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. The object of the parable.—v. 1. The Bible teaches the duty of prayer more by implication and the example of the wisest and best whose lives it records than by direct command. Nor will this seem strange if we consider what a wonderful privilege and honor it is thus to have audience with the King of kings, and also that no true spiritual life can be sustained without it. Prayer ought to be so natural to the Christian that a command to pray would seem as absurd as a command to a living man to breathe, to eat, to sleep. But the tendency of human nature is to be discouraged when we cannot see any immediate answer to our prayers. Especially if the growth of grace is but feeble or in its first beginnings it is easy to give up the struggle. This is what the devil wants to tempt us to do, and what all Bible teaching about prayer aims to guard us against doing. Neither to faint nor to be discouraged is one of God's attributes, and which in their measure all who are his children should seek to possess.

2. The unjust judge.—vs. 2-8. Under Oriental misrule it must have been easy to have found cases that exactly fitted this parable; and even in Christian America what shall be said of the unjust judges who decide in favor of the wealthy rum oligarchy against the widow's prayer and the orphan's cry? Though he feared not God nor regarded man, yet he cared enough for his own ease to do this widow justice—simply that he might be rid of the importunities. How much more shall a God infinite in justice and mercy heed the cry of his own elect? The very fact that he bears so long with man's injustice to his fellow-creatures, makes his wrath more terrible. "Nevertheless when the Son of Man cometh shall he find faith on the earth?" In the universal apostasy yet to be and in whose shadow we already stand, how many will faint by the way. How few "continue instant in prayer" to God that he will stay the tide of evil rolling in upon the world. The faith of early times has waxed dim. Scoffers abound who walk in the way of their own hearts and ask, "Where is the promise of his coming?" The days are on us when every Christian needs to hold fast, not to a church or a creed, but to the Rock of Ages, lest he too be swept away in the general flood of ungodliness.

3. The Pharisee and Publican.—vs. 9-14. The most self-righteous man on earth and the vilest outcast have one point in common; they both need God, Christ, salvation; and the chief difference is that the one feels his need and the other does not. They both "went up into the temple to pray." Both believed in the external forms of religion, but with the Pharisee it was only a form. The being he really adored was himself, whom he mentions no less than five times,—God only once. The Pharisee takes the position of judge, thanking God that he was not as other men are whose hearts he could not read, and who might be like the despised publican, much nearer the door of the kingdom than he. It is especially easy for those who have been reared in religious surroundings and hedged in all their lives by moral restraints to be Pharisees, unconsciously to themselves. We notice first, that the publican was not thinking anything about the Pharisee; perhaps did not know he was there. All he thought of was his own sin and his need of pardon. Second, there was no Christ in the Pharisee's prayer, but the publican's plea for mercy embodied the idea of an atonement. This was the true ground of the publican's justification—that he put himself where God could justify him. A religion with no Christ in it creates Pharisees and thus puts men outside the pale of pardoning mercy. This is why we are more bound to combat a Christless religion than even infidelity itself.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—Rev. L. White, a former Wheaton student and Wesleyan pastor, has been preaching for the Congregational church at Plymouth, Ill., for two years. He desires to enter the evangelistic work, but the church unanimously asks him not to leave them. Some fifty have united with the church during Bro. White's ministry.

—Rev. Dr. George F. Pentecost goes, as we have before noticed, to Calcutta to engage in evangelistic work in September. A number of earnest British Christians propose to assist him. Lord Kinaird and his two sisters will be among the first party. All are to make their own arrangements and to pay their own expenses. The mission is to be first to the British residents, who, unconverted, are deemed the greatest obstacle to the progress of the Gospel; and in the second place, to the English speaking natives. Dr. Pentecost, it is said, "believes there is to be a great revival in India, and wants to be in it."

—A Gospel barge, of which Major Whittle is commander, has been located on the lake shore in front of the lake park, Chicago. Nightly meetings are held and it is thought that many who daily throng the park will be drawn in.

—Rev. John W. Smith, of Bruce, W. Va., says the Lutheran Standard, has accepted the appointment as the foreign missionary of the congregation of College Church, Salem, W. Va., who have undertaken his entire support. He is to go to Japan and labor in connection with the missionary to be appointed by the Board of Missions of the United Synod in the South. The noble example of the church at Salem should stimulate the whole church to more consecrated effort in the work of missions.

—A National Missionary Conference is to be held in Indianapolis, September 3-9, 1890. Its theme will be: "Shall the Gospel be given to all people during this generation?" To meet the needs of the great world lying in darkness, one hundred thousand missionaries should go forth this year. It is hoped that this gathering will result in greatly aroused interest in sending them. Among the prominent workers expected are: Bishop William Taylor of Africa, Dr. James H. Brookes, W. E. Blackstone, Rev. Geo. F. Pentecost, Dr. A. J. Gordon, C. H. Yatman, Dr. A. T. Pierson, James Johnston of Jamaica, Rev. H. L. Hastings, H. W. Frost, T. C. Horton, Orr Ewing of China, Robert E. Speer, A. Nash, Chas. E. Hurlburt, and many others. A large number of missionary volunteers are confidently expected to be present to bear testimony and add fuel to the missionary fire. Much time will be given to Bible study. One entire day will be set apart for prayer. The needs of some of the great fields, such as China and Africa, will be presented. The facts concerning foreign missionary work, both past, present and future, will be considered. Testimony meetings will be held, and opportunities for small gatherings for prayer and conference. For further information address George S. Fisher, Y. M. C. A. Building, Topeka, Kansas.—Union Signal.

—It is reported that there are 3,000 Japanese in this country, of whom 2,000 have been baptized by missionaries in their own land, or since they came to the United States.

—The great revival that has taken place in connection with the Turco-American Mission at Aintab, in Armenia, has resulted in the addition of five hundred and thirty-four new members to the church.

—John Henry Douglas, accompanied by his wife, says the Christian Worker, has just closed a glorious revival at Whittier, Cal., at which a number were converted and the church was wonderfully blessed. The Gospel was preached with understanding and great power, and accepted in all its fullness by the church.

—It is understood that Dr. Arthur T. Pierson has consented to undertake a brief tour among the churches in behalf of the work of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions. It is probable that he will enter upon this work in the early autumn—September or October.

—The corner-stone of the Judson Memorial Church in New York was recently laid. It is to have six memorial windows, costing $1,000 each. The church will cost $312,000. Rev. George Dana Boardman, of Philadelphia, was present at the interesting exercises.

—Plans for the establishment of a theological training school which shall meet the wants of the missions in Mexico have at last been completed. Preachers who can speak the Spanish language are needed in the southwestern sections of the United States as well as across the border, and hence it has been felt that the New West Education Commission and the American Home Missionary Society might well unite with the American Board in the maintenance of an institution for the training of theological students who shall speak the Spanish language. The result of several conferences has been the establishment of the "Rio Grande Congregational Training School," which is to be located at Ciudad Juarez, formerly known as Paso del Norte, which is just across the Mexican border from El Paso, Texas. Rev. A. C. Wright, of Coshihuriachic, has been detailed for this work on the part of the American Board, and has already moved to Ciudad Juarez. It is expected that the institution will be opened in the early autumn.—Missionary Herald.

LODGE NOTES.

General Alger's order prohibiting carriages in the Grand Army parade at Boston in August has been revoked.

Governor Hovey in a letter states that his duties to the State of Indiana will not allow him to be a candidate for the office of Commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic.

Eighty manufacturers of clothing in New York have pledged themselves to follow out the line of action decided upon by their association, in refusing to employ any member of a labor organization, the result of which will be that about 30,000 men and women will be deprived of work.

The colored Farmer's Alliance has made its appearance and State Alliance Inspector Powers says it numbers 35,000 members in South Carolina. While the chief purpose of the order is mutual benefit, Mr. Powers says it is intended to do whatever would be to its advantage. It would go into politics if necessary.

The Central Labor Union of New York has already decided to go into politics and nominate a ticket. They have appointed a conference committee to look after it. This conference committee and the socialists are trying to agree, but the socialists have withdrawn from the Central Labor Union and do not want to have any more to do with it.

The Inter Ocean.—One of the greatest secret society gatherings ever held in Chicago will occur Sept. 13. On that date 160 of Chicago's most prominent Masons will be initiated into the mysteries of the "Owls." Dr. D. F. Pensington, of Baltimore, Md., supreme sapient screecher of the world, will be present to superintend the tortures of the occasion. The order is but three years old, and has a membership in the United States of about 12,000. Frank M. Luce, Charles H. Harris, Gil Barnard, and Len W. Campbell are the only owls in Chicago, and they will institute the "Chicago Nest." The initiation will be witnessed by large delegations from every State in the Union, and will be followed by an elaborate banquet and a theatrical performance. L. W. Campbell will be the sapient screecher of the Chicago Nest.

The leader of the Knights of Labor is thus taken in hand for his political shortcomings by the Inter Ocean: "Mr Powderly has turned politician and is striving to lead the Pennsylvania branch of the order, over which he presides, into the Democratic camp. November will assure him of the failure of his project. The workmen of Pennsylvania are not Democrats, and cannot be converted to Democracy by the wiles of Mr. Powderly. But, upon consideration, some other word than wiles should be used, for Mr. Powderly's Plymouth speech was not wily; it was minatory. He availed himself of the occasion of a church festival to utter a political harangue whose bitterness could not have been exceeded by a Voorheesian oration. Hitherto Mr. Powderly had been addicted to the use of a form of sound words; he had spoken as a reasoning person to other reasoning persons, but in this speech he spoke of the Republican candidate for governor as a 'feudal king.' We can assure Mr. Powderly that he is too old to learn the trade of a demagogue."

A CHANCE TO MAKE MONEY.

Having read Mr. Moorehead's experience plating with gold, silver and nickel, I sent for a plater and have more work than I can do. It is surprising the spoons, castors and jewelry that people want plated. The first week I cleared $37.10, and in three weeks $119.85, and my wife has made about as I have. By addressing W. H. Griffith & Co., Zanesville, Ohio, you can get circulars. A plater only costs $3.00. You can learn to use it in an hour. Can plate large or small articles, and can make money anywhere.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

COUNTRY.

Children playing with matches set fire to a barn at Perry, Iowa, Tuesday, and two girls, aged two and four years, were burned to death.

At New York Monday $2,000,000 in gold bars was ordered for shipment to Europe.

A wind and hail storm swept over Lyons, Osceola, Dickinson, Emmet and Winnebago counties in Iowa, Sunday, destroying crops, killing many horses and cattle and seriously injuring several persons. Hailstones as large as hens' eggs fell to the depth of six inches.

Friday evening J. L. Green, the son of a clergyman, boarded a train near Anna, Ill., entered the mail car by means of skeleton keys, and threw off several mail bags. He then gave the signal to stop, and as the train slowed up jumped off, but fell under the wheels and was so crushed that he lived only long enough to tell what he was doing.

Near Erie, Pa., Friday, unknown persons placed dynamite bombs on the Lake Shore road, and information of their discovery, given by two tramps, saved the limited express from destruction. The tramps were rewarded by the train men.

The month in Kansas has been the driest and hottest July in twenty years. Chinch bugs are reported in many counties, but they have done no great damage.

Rev. John W. Dadmun, for twenty-five years chaplain and superintendent of the schools connected with the Boston municipal institutions on Deer Island, dropped dead of apoplexy Wednesday. He was formerly a well-known Methodist clergyman and composer of sacred music.

An attempt by Miss Carlisle Kent to pre-empt the land on which the Devil's Tower stands, in Cook county, Wyoming, has caused general indignation in the Black Hill's region, and the Land Department will be petitioned to reject Miss Kent's application. The Devil's Tower is a natural obelisk 1,200 feet high, 879 feet in diameter at the base and 35 feet at the top, and said to be the most remarkable specimen of basaltic crystallization in the world.

Drought has reduced the corn average in Kansas 33 per cent, a reduction of 57 per cent within a month. In some counties the crop will be a failure, and it is estimated that the yield of the State will not exceed 75,000,000 bushels. Wheat is producing better than was expected, the yield being now figured at 23,000,000 bushels.

Tucson, Ariz., was last week cut off from communication by washouts. No trains arrived or departed for five days. The loss to the Southern Pacific is estimated at $150,000.

Fifteen deaths from a disease resembling cholera have occurred at Preston, Iowa, within the last week.

Chief Justice Lane of the Utah Supreme Court, has decided that the children of polygamous wives have no interest in their father's estate.

The supervisor in charge of the recount at Minneapolis finds great difficulty in securing enumerators to do the work. New men look upon the job with disfavor, while the old ones who are still waiting for their pay, have no desire to again put themselves in a position to be abused.

George Jacob Schweinfurth, the Rockford impostor, admits that several children have been born at the Welden heaven to angels without wings, and with unblushing effrontery lays their parentage to the Holy Ghost.

An English syndicate with a capital stock of $1,250,000 has bought 46,000 acres of mineral land in Tennessee and proposes to erect an immense furnace plant to develop the property.

Five hundred convicts in the Massachusetts State prison indulged in a riot, but were held at bay by one determined guard with a Winchester rifle until over a hundred reserve policemen were summoned.

(Continued on 16th page.)

The importance of purifying the blood cannot be overestimated, for without pure blood you cannot enjoy good health.

At this season nearly every one needs a good medicine to purify, vitalize, and enrich the blood, and Hood's Sarsaparilla is worthy your confidence. It is peculiar in that it strengthens and builds up the system, creates an appetite, and tones the digestion, while it eradicates disease. Give it a trial.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is sold by all druggists. Prepared by C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

Disloyal
SECRET OATHS.

ADDRESS OF

JOSEPH COOK,

OF BOSTON,

AT THE

Conference of Christians,
CHICAGO, 1890.

No better document of its size for general distribution has been printed. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Single Copies 5 cents, or 12 copies for 50 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

FINNEY ON MASONRY.

The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth 75c; per dozen $7.50. Paper cover 35c; per dozen $3.50. No Christian's library is complete without it. Send for a copy in cloth and get a catalogue of books and tracts sold by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—No. 2.....	96 1/2	@	91
No. 3.....	80	@	91
Winter No. 2.....	91	@	96 1/2
Corn—No. 2.....	49 1/2	@	51
Oats—No. 2.....	38	@	40
Rye—No. 2.....		@	60
Barley per ton.....	15	@	25
Hay—Timothy.....	6 50	@	9 50
Butter, medium to best.....	10	@	20
Cheese.....	06	@	10 1/2
Beans.....	75	@	1 70
Eggs.....		@	14
Seeds—Timothy.....	1 25	@	1 36
Flax.....	1 34	@	1 39
Broom corn.....	02 1/2	@	06 1/2
Potatoes, new, per bu.....	1 10	@	1 25
Hides—Green to dry flint.....	03	@	07
Lumber—Common.....	10 00	@	13 00
Wool.....	15	@	34
Cattle—Choice to extra.....	4 30	@	4 85
Common to good.....	1 00	@	4 20
Hogs.....	3 15	@	3 95
Sheep.....	3 25	@	5 25

NEW YORK.

Wheat.....	90	@	1 11
Corn.....	56	@	57
Oats.....	44	@	52
Eggs.....	16	@	18
Butter.....	11	@	19 1/2
Wool.....	14	@	30

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle.....	1 50	@	4 45
Hogs.....	3 15	@	3 82
Sheep.....	2 75	@	5 35

Standard Works

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Association

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guarantee that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. A liberal discount to dealers.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. Table of Contents: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, The Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50cts each.

Knights of Pythias Illustrated. By a Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." 25cts each.

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the lodge, temple and council. 25cts each.

Knights of Labor Illustrated. ("ADELPHON KRUPPTOS.") The complete illustrated ritual of the order, including the "unwritten work." 25cts each.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor. By a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25cts each.

Five Rituals Bound Together. "Odd-fellowship Illustrated" (old work), "Knights of Pythias Illustrated," "Good Templars Illustrated," "Exposition of the Grange," and "Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic," are sold bound together in cloth for $1.00.

Rituals and Secrets Illustrated. Composed of "Temple of Honor Illustrated," "Adoptive Masonry Illustrated," "United Sons of Industry Illustrated," and "Secret Societies Illustrated." $1.00 each.

Secret Societies Illustrated. Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. 25cts each.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern, AND COLLEGE SECRET SOCIETIES. Composed of the two pamphlets combined in this title, bound together in cloth. $1.00 each.

Proceedings of Pittsburgh Convention. Containing official reports. Addresses by Rev. D. R. Kerr, D.D., Rev. B. T. Roberts, Rev. G. T. R. Meiser, Prof. J. R. W. Sloane, D.D., Pres. J. Blanchard, Rev. A. M. Milligan, D.D., Rev. Woodruff Post, Rev. Henry Cogswell, Prof. C. A. Blanchard and Rev. W. E. Coquette. 25 cents each.

Minutes of the Syracuse Convention. Containing addresses by Rev. B. T. Roberts, Chas. W. Green, Esq., Prof. C. A. Blanchard, Rev. D. P. Rathbun, Rev. D. S. Caldwell, Mrs. M. E. Gage, Elder J. R. Baird and others. 25cts each.

Eminent Men on Secret Societies. Composed of "Washington Opposed to Secret Societies," "Judge Whitney's Defence," "The Mystic Tie," "Narratives and Arguments," the "Anti-mason's Scrap-Book" and "Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry as Proved in the New Berlin Trials." 326 pages; cloth, $1.00.

History Nat'l Christian Association. Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought, the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association. 25cts each.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction AND MURDER, AND OATHS OF 33 DEGREES. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan; "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times;" and "Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees." 304 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Between Two Opinions: OR THE QUESTION OF THE HOUR. By Miss E. E. Flagg, author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," etc., etc. Everyone who loves to read a good story, chaste and elegant in expression, pure in thought, interesting in narrative, should read this book upon the power of secret societies in politics, and the remedy. 389 pages; cloth, postpaid, $1.00.

HOME AND HEALTH.

THINGS NOT TO BE DONE.

There are several things always absent in a true lady, which the Home Journal reminds girls that they will do well to remember:

A lady, for example, will never ignore little kindnesses.

Conclude in a crowd that she has a right to push her way through.

Fail in answering letters or returning visits, unless ill or in trouble.

Fret about the heat or the cold, the sun or the rain, the air or lack of it.

Make an engagement and then not be on time.

Complain of her family or discuss personal affairs with strangers.

Always believe the worst rather than the best side of a story.

A lady does not do any other than make the best of everything—the world, the weather and herself. She believes in the golden rule and endeavors as far as possible to live up to it, and that's what you and I ought to promise every morning we will try and do during the day.

REMOVING A CINDER FROM THE EYE.

The proper way to get a cinder out of the eye, is to draw the upper lid down over the lower, utilizing the lashes of the lower as a broom, that it may sweep the surface of the former and thus get rid of the intruder. Or, gently drawing the lid away from the globe, pass a clean camel's-hair brush—or fold of a soft silk handkerchief—two or three times between them. This procedure will, in nearly all cases, suffice; when it does not, the services of a physician are necessary. It is a remarkable fact that a very minute body will give rise to intense pain, and even after it has been extracted, the sensation remains for an hour or more. After the intruder is out, gently bathe the lids every fifteen minutes in iced-water till the feeling subsides.—Ladies Home Journal.

A COMFORT AND A REMEDY.—A rubber water bottle is a very useful article in any family. The water, heated to the boiling point, retains its heat a long time. The bottle, being flexible, adapts itself to the form of the body, and may be used in the application of moist or dry heat to any part of the body, keeping fermentations warm, and permitting constant change in place without any trouble. A two-quart bottle costs a dollar and a half, and is a good investment for the money.

A Swedish servant-maid, finding that her mistress was troubled with sleeplessness, told her of a practice of the people of her country who are similarly afflicted. It was to take a napkin, dip it in ice-cold water, wring it slightly and lay it across her eyes. The plan was followed, and it worked like a charm. The first night the lady slept four hours without awakening, something she had not done before for several months. At the end of that time the napkin had become dry. By wetting it again, she at once went to sleep, and it required considerable force to arouse her in the morning.

Improve the nutritive functions of the scalp by using Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer, and thus keep the hair from falling and becoming gray.

BIRNEY.

The sketch of JAMES G. BIRNEY candidate of the Liberty Party for President, in pamphlet for 25 cents. A limited number of copies of this handsome pamphlet for sale at the N. O. A. office

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

"THE WHOLE IS BETTER THAN A PART,
AND YOU HAVE IT HERE IN A
"NUT-SHELL."

SECRET SOCIETIES ILLUSTRATED.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc. of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York Rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd Fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 200 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; 620 per dozen. For sale by the National Christian Association, at Headquarters for Anti-Secrecy Literature, 221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

STANDARD WORKS

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES.

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Association,

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. A liberal discount to dealers.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 75 cents. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive. Vol. II. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprised the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished. 25 cents each.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe. 20 cents each.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. In cloth, $1.50 each. Paper, 75 cents each.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pages, 75 cents.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance. Bound in one volume. In cloth, 589 pages, $1.00.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. 25 cents each.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper, 35 cents.

Hon. Thurlow Weed on the Morgan Abduction. This is the legally attested statement of this eminent Christian journalist and statesman concerning the unlawful seizure and confinement of Capt. Morgan in Canandaigua jail, his removal to Fort Niagara and subsequent drowning in Lake Ontario. 5 cents each.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a League with the Devil. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason. 15 cents each.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church. Paper covers, price, 20 cents each.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each.

Anti-masonic Sermons and Addresses. Composed of "Masonry a Work of Darkness;" the Sermons of Messrs. Cross, William M'Nary, Dow and Sarver, the two addresses of President Blanchard, and the addresses of President H. H. George, Prof. J. G. Carson and Rev. M. S. Drury; "Thirteen Reasons Why a Christian cannot be a Freemason," "Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion," and "Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate?" 287 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate. By Rev. L. A. Post. 5 cents each.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper cover, 35 cents.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin trials. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each.

Stearns's Inquiry into the Nature and Tendency of Freemasonry. 338 pages. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor United Presbyterian church. 5 cents each.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. 10 cents each.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void; or FREEMASONRY SELF-CONVICTED. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. 207 pages. Postpaid, 40 cents each.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian, seceding Mason of 21 degrees. 15 cents each.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. H. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each.

Masonic Salvation, as taught by its standard authors. This pamphlet is a compilation from standard Masonic works, in proof of the following proposition: Freemasonry claims to be a religion that saves men from all sin, and purifies them for heaven. 111 pages, price, postpaid, 20 cents.

Freemasonry at a Glance illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the first three degrees. Paper cover, 32 pages. Single copy, six cents.

Masonic Outrages. Compiled by Rev. H. H. Hinman. Showing Masonic assault on lives of seceders, on reputation, and on free speech; its interference with justice in courts, etc. Postpaid, 20 cents.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret Societies. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10cts each.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims by Rev. David McDill, Pres. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. In cloth, 35cts each; paper covers, 15cts each.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinions of many prominent college presidents and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25cts each.

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of his sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5cts each.

Sermon on Secretism. By Rev. R. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational church, Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear array of the objections to all secret societies, and to Masonry especially, that are apparent to all. 5cts each.

Pres. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to disfellowship secret societies. 10cts each.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and Church. By Rev. M. S. Dury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church, is clearly shown. 10cts each.

Holden with Cords. OR THE POWER OF THE SECRET EMPIRE. By E. E. Flagg, author of "A Sunny Life," etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story, accurately true to life because mainly a narration of historical facts. In cloth, $1.00; in paper, 50 cents.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and law of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved. 15cts each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. J. Day Brownlee. In reply to a Masonic Oration by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio. 5 cents each.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on Masonry. Paper covers, 25 cents each.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion. 5 cents each.

ON ODD-FELLOWSHIP.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by ex-President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; paper cover, 50cts.

Patriarchs Militant Illustrated. The complete ritual of the Patriarchs Militant degree. This is an accurate copy of the Charge Book furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge of the Independent Order of Odd-fellows, with the eighteen military diagrams and the unwritten (secret) work added. Paper cover, 25cts each.

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own utterances; its doctrine and practice examined in the light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth 50cts; paper covers, 25cts.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and other secret societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms, and the duty to disfellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers, is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10cts each.

Odd-fellowship: ITS HISTORY AND ITS WORK. By President J. Blanchard. A neat pamphlet with cover. Postpaid, 5 cts.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Anti-mason's Scrap-Book, consisting of 53 "Cynosure" tracts. In this book are the views of more than a score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of secret societies. Postpaid, 25 cts.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret tradesunion of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords, etc. 15cts each.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc., and the ritual of the Machinists' and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each.

FARM NOTES.

WEATHER AND CROPS.

Dispatches to the Daily News say: "MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., July 31.—The best authorities estimate the wheat crop of the present season in the Dakotas and Minnesota at 100,000,000 bushels. President Greenleaf of the chamber of commerce places Minnesota at 40,000,000 bushels and the Dakotas at 60,000,000 bushels. All the prophets agree that the wheat crop will be one of the largest ever harvested and that there is nothing in the weather condition that should cause alarm or give rise to pessimistic reports. The hot weather has not done serious damage, taking the country as a whole, and the harvest is now in progress.

"The value of this crop to the northwest is estimated at $60,000,000 at the lowest. Reports from all over the three States agree with this general prophecy as to the results. The local grain-elevator men are entirely satisfied with the outlook. They are of the opinion that the hot weather has not done great damage during the last few days. It rained yesterday along the Northern Pacific, though very warm in this section of Minnesota.

"KANSAS CITY, Mo., July 31.—Special dispatches from various points in western Kansas say that the hot winds of the last three days have materially reduced the already low condition of crops in that part of the State. The winds have literally cooked corn until many fields will not yield a single ear. In the dry spots of the State the hot winds have also burned up the grass so that the yield of hay will be very low."

LIGHTNING RODS.

Prof. Bidwell says in Nature: "In all cases of steady strain in which a charged cloud descending from the upper regions of the air, or approaching from a distance, might inflict serious injury upon an unprotected building, a well-designed and properly earth-connected lightning rod is an absolute safeguard. In a case of 'impulsive rush,' the rod may often be of use in bearing the brunt of the discharge, though sometimes the lightning will take no notice whatever of it, striking the building and altogether neglecting the rod; and it is even possible that a high rod might attract a destructive discharge which otherwise would not have occurred at all. Although, therefore, a lightning rod is in many cases, probably in a very large majority, of the greatest service, it cannot be depended upon as affording perfect immunity from risk; and the assumption which has universally been made by the 'older electricians' that damage by lightning is in itself conclusive evidence of some imperfection in the conductor, is an unfounded one."

SUMMER TREATMENT OF THE STRAWBERRY BED.

In considering the source of our supply of strawberries for another year, we must not forget that the new plants of this season's growth will bear abundantly next year, if not checked too greatly by removal now; and that as a general thing it is much less trouble to set out a new bed in July than to clean out the old one. When we have a supply of plants on the place, running and rooting themselves in the soil, it is an easy matter to take them up and remove them to new quarters, with the soil adhering to the roots; but when no such supply exists at home, and it is necessary to send to the nursery for plants, potted plants must be obtained if we are to have the fruit next season.

In many cases, however, it will pay to clean out the bed that has just yielded out its luscious berries to us, provided it be not too old; that is to say, has not borne more than one or two crops. After the weeds have been taken out, the rows should receive a top-dressing of well-rotten cow-manure, and the soil between the rows loosened up. To obtain the best results in a final crop from such a bed, the runners should be kept lopped off as they appear, and the plants not allowed to thus waste their vigor.

One of the easiest methods of treating an old strawberry bed, and one which will give good results in fruiting-time, is to manure heavily the soil between the

Permanent Results,

And not a mere temporary exhilaration, are produced by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This medicine, being an alterative, and working constitutionally, through the blood, its effects may not be immediately apparent in all cases, but the gain in health and strength, through its persistent use, is real and lasting. It reaches every drop of blood in the body.

"I have none but good words to speak regarding Ayer's Sarsaparilla. All during the winter I was languid, tired, and without any appetite, until I commenced the use of this remedy. I took three bottles. Its effects have been revivifying, and I feel as if I had entered a new life. I did not think it was in the power of medicine to produce such a wonderful change, as has Ayer's Sarsaparilla in my case."—Mrs. C. Johnson, 310 Hicks st., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"I have used Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and also other preparations of a like nature, for the purposes of a blood-purifier, and, while receiving no good, but often positive harm, from others, I have always derived benefit from Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and have no hesitation in recommending it to any one in want of a reliable blood-purifier."—Mrs. M. C. Hopkinson, 110 Merrimack Corporation, Lowell, Mass.

"The safest and most reliable tonic, alterative, and diuretic is

"I was a great sufferer from a low condition of the blood and general debility, becoming, finally, so reduced that I was unfit for work. Nothing that I did for the complaint helped me so much as Ayer's Sarsaparilla, a few bottles of which restored me to health and strength. I take every opportunity to recommend this medicine in similar cases."—C. Evick, 14 E. Main st., Chillicothe, Ohio.

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla is one of the very few proprietary medicines that I can honestly recommend. I have seen it used in this place, in a number of cases, with very satisfactory results, and I have used it in my own family, for salt-rheum, with abundant success. I consider it to be the leading blood-purifier of the day."—Charles C. Davis, Nashua, N. H.

"I suffered from general debility for fifteen years. A few bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla completely cured me, and I now enjoy good health."—Mrs. J. F. McElhinney, Truro, N. S.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla
—FOR—
Debility.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

Prepared by DR. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass. Sold by all Druggists.

Price $1. Six bottles, $5. Worth $5 a bottle.

EVERY WATERPROOF COLLAR OR CUFF

THAT CAN BE RELIED ON

BE UP
TO THE MARK

Not to Split!

Not to Discolor!

BEARS THIS MARK.

NEEDS NO LAUNDERING. CAN BE WIPED CLEAN IN A MOMENT.

THE ONLY LINEN-LINED WATERPROOF COLLAR IN THE MARKET.

To cure Biliousness, Sick Headache, Constipation, Malaria, Liver Complaints, take the safe and certain remedy, SMITH'S

BILE BEANS

Use the SMALL SIZE (40 little beans to the bottle). They are the most convenient; suit all ages. Price of either size, 25 cents per bottle.

KISSING at 7, 17, 70; Photo-gravure, panel size of this picture for 4 cents (coppers or stamps).

J. F. SMITH & CO.,
Makers of "Bile Beans," St. Louis, Mo.

rows, and then turn it over with the spade. Comb out the runners that they may root in the loose soil between the rows, and when the space is well filled, and the young plants are firmly rooted and established, spade under the rows of old plants. You have thus with little trouble what is virtually an entirely new plantation.—Orchard and Garden.

"Have we any truly great men at the present day? Some doubt it, and ask to be shown the modern Washington, Franklin or Webster. However this may be, of one thing we are sure, there never was a greater blood-purifier than Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

FOR A DISORDERED LIVER try BEECHAM'S PILLS.

SEE THIS!

The latest, most complete edition.

Over 235 choice

Reform Songs for the Times.

Only 30c a copy, or 20c by the 100.

—AND—

"THE TOBACCO MANIA."

$1 per 100.

For sale here and by the author,
GEO. W. CLARK,
76 W. Montcalm St., Detroit, Mich.

HELPS
TO

BIBLE STUDY

With Practical Notes on the Books of Scripture.

Designed for Ministers, Local Preachers, S. Teachers, and all Christian Workers.

Chapter I.—Different Methods of Bible Study.

Chapter II.—Rules of Interpretation.

Chapter III.—Interpretations of Bible Types and Symbols.

Chapter IV.—Analysis of the books of the Bible.

Chapter V.—Miscellaneous Helps.

Cloth, 184 pages, price postpaid, 50 cents.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

SPECIAL BOOK SALE!

Regular Price. Selling Price.

$.10 "REPORT OF THE TRIAL of Rev. J. T. Michael," an Elder in the M. E. Church, for arraigning the Bishops, Elders and Preachers in charge for being Freemasons contrary to the Discipline of the M. E. Church. Paper, 28 pages. $.05

$.75 "BEREA COLLEGE," Kentucky. An interesting history of the founding of that College for white and black in a slave State. Cloth, 87 pages. $.25

$.30 "SONGS FOR THE TIMES," by Geo. W. Clark. Words and Music. Intended for Prohibition and W. C. T. U. meetings. Boards, 152 pages. $.20

$.25 "MASONIC DEGREES ILLUSTRATED." Containing all the pass and real words, all the pass and real grips and signs of the first three degrees of Freemasonry, from the time of King Solomon, King Hiram of Tyre, and Hiram Abiff, the Widow's Son, to the present time. Compiled by E. M. Trowbridge. Paper, 39 pages. With certificate and demit showing that the author was a Freemason. $.05

$.20 "THE INTERIOR OF SIERRA LEONE, West Africa." A lecture delivered at the Government Practicing School-Room, Freetown, Sierra Leone, together with remarks and addresses of gentlemen present, and the lecturer's replies. By J. Augustus Cole, of Shaingay, W. Africa. Paper, 54 pages. $.10

$.25 "RELIGIOUS PERSECUTION." An examination of Cardinal Manning's letter in the New York Tribune, on Irish affairs and bearing on Home Rule. By Rev. John Lee. Paper, 83 pages. $.15

$.25 "SKETCH OF THE LIFE OF JAMES G. BIRNEY." His relation to the Anti-slavery movement and place in history. By General William Birney. Paper, 32 pages. $.10

$.75 "LUCILE VERNON, or the Church at Lansington. The experience of a young pastor. A novel. By Rev. W. T. Meloy, D. D. Cloth, 208 pages. $.35

$1.00 "NATIONAL SUICIDE AND ITS PREVENTION." The following will show the drift of the book: Measure or Standard of Value; What is Honest Money; Our National Banks; Paper Money; Land Tenure, etc. By O. F. Lumry. Cloth, 224 pp. $.50

$.15 "A WOMAN'S VICTORY, or the Query of the Lodgeville Church." By Jennie L. Hardie. Paper, 21 pp. $.05

$.15 "MY EXPERIENCE WITH SECRET SOCIETIES." By a Traveler. Paper, 51 pp. $.10

$.10 "WASHINGTON SOUVENIR." Portraits of Geo. Washington and his Co-patriots, with their testimony on Freemasonry. Size 18x24 inches. Framed it is an ornament to any home. $.05

$.10 "SECRET SOCIETIES." A Lecture delivered at Oberlin College, Jan. 9, 1890. By Prof. Henry C. King. Paper, 36 pp. $.05

$1.50 "HISTORY OF SECRET SOCIETIES IN FRANCE," or "THE CRADLE OF REBELLIONS." By Lucien De La Hodde. Translated from the French by Gen'l J. W. Phelps. Cloth, 479 pp. $.50

$.25 "THE PURITY CRUSADE." With portraits of some of its leaders. Paper, 114 pp. $.15

Sent postpaid to any address on receipt of the selling price.

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
Wm. I. PHILLIPS, Treasurer,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REVISED ODD-FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED.

The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. The ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $6.00. Paper cover, 75 cents; per dozen $4.50.

All orders promptly filled by the
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

BUSINESS.

THERE'S NO TIME

Like TO-DAY for beginning the Cynosure canvass. It may not be best to ask this man or that until "after harvest," but it is well to be ready. Confidence in the goodness of the cause, faith in its triumph, and enthusiasm for the honor of Christ will gain sympathy and friends in any community, and there are thousands and thousands of men and women who want the Cynosure, but do not know of it, or have not fairly considered how greatly such a paper is needed. Let us have faith and perseverance.

The Cynosure receipts begin to show good work by the friends of the cause. Since the beginning of August the income is nearly four times as great as for the same time in July. This is good cheer. If we can do well then we can do BETTER.

A Chicago church has a tract committee which takes every house in the section assigned, and the reception given at each home to the colporteurs is noted. Sometimes they are driven away; at other times the inmates are found drinking and card-playing, while at other places religious conversation and prayer is permitted. The church officers receive the reports, and are thus enabled to send the right kind of an agent to make the second visit. The result has been the establishment of several Sunday-schools, and the development of two churches. God rewards the colporteur work. Shall we not have more of it in this reform?

Five dollars will buy an anti-secret library of cloth-bound books. Loan these to the young men and young women and you will save many five dollars to the Lord's cause, and what will be better, souls will be saved for his kingdom. "Therefore my people are gone into captivity because they have no knowledge." Shall we not have more book and tract committees? A young German minister has just answered yes by sending for a supply of literature for distribution in his parish. Friends, shall we not push the battle along this line? You have the money, the neighbors and the responsibility! The providence of God has raised up the N. C. A. as his servant to make it possible for you to do his work. The Association has hundreds of dollars worth of books and tracts for you to choose from. The early disciples went everywhere preaching the Word. Let us do the same and save our friends from Satan's church—the secret lodge.

Rev. Geo. M. Freese writes: "Many eyes are upon Joseph Cook. Scatter his lecture." Last week Disloyal Secret Oaths went to the religious press of the following States for review: Iowa, Michigan, Kansas, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Oregon. If money for this purpose is sent, this lecture shall be forwarded for review to every religious paper in the United States.

An editor who received for review one of the Joseph Cook pamphlets writes: "I am highly pleased with the revised and corrected copy of Joseph Cook's lecture. It is a God-send in a time like this, and I praise the enterprise you show in spreading it abroad to be read by all. We will review it. At what rate could you furnish it by the hundred to be distributed at our conferences?"

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—U. S. Government Report, Aug. 17, 1889.

DONATIONS.

Fund for the various uses of the Association, or the Current Expense Fund:

W. R. Morley	$10 00
H. M. Cole	10 00
C. E. Judd	10 00
J. L. Reber	5 00
W. H. Pearson	5 00
G. M. Freese	3 50
E. M. Harrison	2 80
R. Canning	50

Southern Ministers' Fund:

Jos. Morris	7 40
I. L. Buckwalter	75

W. I. PHILLIPS,
Treasurer

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from Aug. 4 to Aug. 9 inclusive:

J D Owens, A J McFarland, W Parkhill, J Hamilton, H H Myers, D McKee, W Vine, E M Harrison, E Trumbull, J L Buckwalter, H Elder, T B Wilson, R Canning, G Cutler, Rev A H Springstein, C H Mansfield, Dr E R Atwood, J R Sharp, J H Gray, C B Churchill, J Mc Lane, O C M Bates, G T Denman, J T Sneath, Rev G M Freese, Miss F Mitchell, S Mathew, H Johnson, I Meeker, Rev J H Jones, W Sperry, Rev J H Brockman, Rev W G Keil.

NEWS OF THE WEEK (Continued from 13th page).

moned from Boston, when the revolt was quelled and over seventy of the ringleaders locked up. The trouble arose from the adoption of the Bertillon system of measuring and recording descriptions of prisoners.

FOREIGN.

The Greek patriarch at Constantinople has resigned as a protest against the Porte's disregard of the Greek church.

The Ameer of Afghanistan sent an embassy to Russia with a treaty of concluding a commercial treaty between the two countries.

At a meeting of Jews at Edinburgh Wednesday it was resolved to raise a fund to assist Jews expelled from Russia through the Jewish society for the colonization of Palestine.

The medical congress now sitting at Berlin rejected a proposal to meet next in St. Petersburg on account of the repression of the Jews by Russia. The next congress will be held in Rome in 1893.

The walking delegate is one of the most expensive nuisances of the day. It is stated that 1,200 men who were working on the public school buildings of New York went into a general strike "in order to get rid of three contractors who were objectionable to the walking delegates."—Inter-Ocean.

The exodus of Jews from Russia has commenced. Thousands are leaving the government of Vilna with the intention of emigrating to Brazil, and others are flocking to Algeria. The Alliance Israélite of Paris is helping the emigrants.

Egypt is imitating France by taking stringent precautions against cholera. A large force of soldiers will be used to prevent the entry of pilgrims returning from Mecca until it shall be ascertained that they are free from the disease.

The chamber of deputies of the Argentine Republic has compelled President Celman to resign, under threats of impeachment. Senor Daro Rochas will attempt to form a new ministry.

It is privately given out in the lobbies of parliament that Lord Salisbury has sent a strong warning to Turkey that if the Moslem outrages on American Christians are not stopped England will withdraw the guarantee given in the Anglo-Turkish convention to aid in defending Armenia from invasion.

$75.00 to $250.00 A MONTH can be made working for us. Persons preferred who can furnish a horse and give their whole time to the business. Spare moments may be profitably employed also. A few vacancies in towns and cities. B. F. JOHNSON & CO., 1009 Main Street, Richmond, Va.

Will be found invaluable for Cholera Infantum, and all Summer Complaints, children or adults. It's not a medicine but will be retained & sustain life when everything else fails. 4 sizes 35 cts. up.

GREAT FALLS, MONTANA. City of wonderful resources, immense water power, gold, silver, copper, lead, lumber, coal, iron, cattle, horses, wool and agriculture. Phenomenal growth for full particulars address SECRETARY BOARD OF TRADE, Great Falls, Montana.

Our High Grade List and Bargain Book sent to any address on receipt of a 2-c stamp.

LORD & THOMAS, NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING 45 RANDOLPH STREET, CHICAGO.

MISSOULA Garden city of MONTANA. Railroad and manufacturing center, fine water power, rich agricultural lands, mines, lumber, etc. A prosperous city and rich country. Full particulars, including beautiful book, "MISSOULA ILLUSTRATED" SENT FREE upon application to FAIRCHILD, CORNISH & CO., MISSOULA, MONT.

WHEATON COLLEGE,

WHEATON, ILL.

FALL TERM BEGINS TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 16TH.

A College for Men and Women.

For Catalogue address with stamp.

C. A. BLANCHARD, Pres

HARTSVILLE COLLEGE,

HARTSVILLE, INDIANA.

E. G. PAINE, A. M., PRESIDENT.

Classical, Scientific and Normal courses. Preparatory school, Art, Music and Business departments. Actively Christian and reformatory influences. No saloons. Romantic and healthful region. Living as cheap as it can be made anywhere.

In Its Worst Form.

BENTON, LAF. Co., Wis., Dec., '88. Rev. J. C. Bergen vouches for the following: James Rooney who was suffering from Vitus Dance in its worst form for about 1 1/2 years was treated by several physicians without effect, two bottles of Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic cured him.

St. Francis Wis. Oct 24, 1888. A member of my congregation used Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic with good results. The patient was so nervous that he could not find sleep for weeks. He suffered from the most intense anxiety which bordered on insanity. I gave the person some of Koenig's Nerve Tonic and he continued to use it. The appetite returned gradually, the anxiety disappeared the headache left, and to day the sufferer, who had almost despaired, is enjoying excellent health.

Bern. Elskamp, Pastor.

Our Pamphlet for sufferers of nervous diseases will be sent free to any address, and poor patients can also obtain this medicine free of charge from us.

This remedy has been prepared by the Reverend Pastor Koenig, of Fort Wayne, Ind., for the past ten years, and is now prepared under his direction by the KOENIG MEDICINE CO., 60 W. Madison, cor. Clinton St., CHICAGO, ILL. SOLD BY DRUGGISTS. Price $1 per Bottle. 6 Bottles for $5.

Its superior excellence proven in millions of homes for more than a quarter of a century. It is used by the United States Government. Endorsed by the heads of the Great Universities as the Strongest, Purest and most Healthful. Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder does not contain Ammonia, Lime, or Alum. Sold only in Cans. PRICE BAKING POWDER CO. NEW YORK. CHICAGO. ST. LOUIS.

PATENTS

Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees.

Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington.

Send model, drawing or photo., with description. We advise, if patentable or not, free of charge. Our fee not due till patent is secured.

A Pamphlet, "How to Obtain Patents," with names of actual clients in your State, county, or town, sent free. Address,

C. A. SNOW & CO. Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

REMARKABLE OFFER!

Nearly everyone is familiar with the name, but it has been estimated that only one in every two hundred and eighty persons in the United States is fortunate enough to have access to the valuable information contained within the covers of the grandest work ever written by mortal man.

Webster's UNABRIDGED DICTIONARY.

That this is an unfortunate state of affairs will be admitted by all, and it is due to the fact that no one save the rich could afford them.

The Dictionary is a necessity in every home, school and business house. It fills a vacancy and furnishes knowledge which no one hundred volumes of the choicest books could supply, and all young or old, educated or ignorant, rich or poor should have it within reach and refer to its contents every day in the year.

The Loomis reprint contains all the matter as compiled and arranged by our esteemed and honored author and statesman

NOAH WEBSTER.

About forty years of his life was devoted to this great work, and when we consider the fact that this book contains about 100,000 words, we will appreciate that these years must have been well spent.

Some idea of the magnitude of this book may be gained from the fact that it contains over 440 cubic inches of paper and has about 300,000 square inches of printed surface.

In addition to the 100,000 words it contains a portrait of the author, together with his biography and a valuable table of 12,000 synonymous words.

By special arrangement with the publishers, we are permitted to furnish this valuable volume: 1st. To any subscriber to our paper; 2nd. To any renewal subscription; and 3rd. To any person who has paid a full year's subscription within the past six months, on receipt of $1.50 for the paper one year, and two dollars and seventy-five cents to cover express charges, packing, etc., of the Dictionary.

Address

CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill

HAVE YOU EXAMINED

The list of Books and Tracts for sale by the N. C. A. CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. Look it over carefully and see if there is not something you want for yourself or for your friend. Send for full catalogue to 221 W. MADISON STREET, CHICAGO.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XXII., No. 49.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, AUGUST 21, 1890.

WHOLE No. 1,060.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrears paid.

Address all letters for publication to EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, CHICAGO. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Send all business letters relating to the paper to THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE. Make all drafts and money orders payable to the Treasurer, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address on Cynosure list always give the former address.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill., as Second Class Matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:	REFORM NEWS:
Notes and Comments..... 1	Chicago in India; From
Waldenstrom and Ingersoll..... 8	Washington to New
Satan's Devices..... 8	England; Iowa Cheers
Africa and America..... 8	our Western Agent..... 4,5
Personal Notes..... 8	CORRESPONDENCE:
CONTRIBUTIONS:	The Nebraska Battle-
Secrecy as a Principle of	field; The Resurrection;
Organization..... 1	A Secret Society Sen-
The Northfield Confer-	sation; Pith and Point..... 5,6
ence..... 2	LITERATURE..... 6
SELECTED:	THE N. C. A..... 7
American Titles..... 3	Plans for Future Work..... 9
Odd-fellowship Excludes	THE HOME..... 10
Christ..... 3	TEMPERANCE..... 11
Waldenstrom's Travels	BIBLE LESSON..... 12
in America..... 4	RELIGIOUS NEWS..... 12
WASHINGTON LETTER..... 4	LODGE NOTES..... 13
NEW ENGLAND LETTER..... 9	NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 13
OBITUARY..... 7	IN BRIEF..... 14
Secret Societies Con-	FARM NOTES..... 15
demned..... 7	BUSINESS..... 16
	MARKETS..... 13

It is believed that 15,000 "original package" saloons were in operation in Iowa under the Supreme Court decision. But within five days after President Harrison signed the bill placing them under State or local control there were not 1,500 left which had not closed. Most of these will have to be fought out again by legal process. There are thousands more in other States that yet survive to bless the Supreme Court for the privilege of poisoning men and sending them to eternal ruin.

The intense interest of the good people of Nebraska in the amendment campaign may be gathered from Rev. M. A. Gault's letter in another column. Much as they realize the momentous issues at stake, yet neither they nor any of us are able to estimate the moral disaster that would follow the triumph of the saloon. The people are working nobly. Over two thousand bankers and business men have signed a prohibition list. One of the heaviest contractors in Lincoln, the State capital, says he pays to his men about $30,000 per month, and from 30 to 40 per cent of the checks come back with the evidence upon them that they have been paid to a saloon-keeper. Of course what goes to the saloon does not go to the grocery. Men who manage honest business should be first to drive the nail in the coffin of the liquor traffic.

The Catholic Review, which bears no friendly spirit toward the new government in Brazil, reports the following among other provisions of the new constitution which ought not to be very unpopular on the whole anywhere: "Among the persons excluded from the privilege of voting in Brazilian elections are beggars, those who cannot read and write, soldiers and clergymen. Hereafter the Brazilian State will recognize no marriages except those performed by the magistrates, and, where the contracting parties are Catholic enough to desire a religious ceremony, the civil marriage must come first. The Catholic cemetery is now to be a thing of the past. Catholics will have no control over their burying-places, and in consequence, atheists, sensualists, drunkards, and persecutors will have their resting-place along with the faithful dead. Religion is banished from the State schools, the Jesuits are banished forever from the country, and no new convents, monasteries or religious congregations are permitted to be founded. The effect of these measures on the Catholics of Brazil has been to wake them up severely; on the contrary, the effect on certain American editors has been to put them severely asleep as far as Brazil is concerned."

Bishops Wright, Barnaby, Floyd and Becker issue their annual address to the United Brethren church. They speak with the calmness of faith of their present work and of the future outlook. They have held thirty-one annual conferences during the past year and are cheered with the liberality of the people in maintaining the principles for with the United Brethren have long borne a testimony. The contributions of all kinds have reached the remarkable sum of $75,000. Two colleges, Hartsville and Philomath, remain to them; and the Christian Conservator, though not quite yet at the self-sustaining point, is an able paper and well represents the churches for which it stands. The bishops call special attention to the secret orders, which with plausible deception in manifold forms and devices attempt to draw away good men from the faith.

The president of the anti-lottery convention the other day in the capital of Louisiana, said that there were three times when the manhood of the State was fully aroused. Those times were 1861, 1874, and 1890. When we remember what the first two dates signify we may understand the feeling of the better class of citizens. The convention numbered 962 delegates, and the farmers were represented by a large proportion of these. Memorials to the President and to Congress were adopted, and a strong committee appointed to conduct the campaign. Providence defeated the lottery managers in the Legislature. The death of one member of the upper house prevented the two-thirds majority necessary to overcome the brave Gov. Nichols' veto; and the only alternative was to throw the case into court on the charge that being a constitutional enactment no veto could be allowed. The center of battle has meantime shifted to Washington, and Congress shows its usual indifference in the presence of a moral issue, with the right and wrong sides as plainly marked as if painted black and white.

Since writing the above the House on Saturday passed the anti-lottery bill almost unanimously, and the Senate will undoubtedly concur in wiping off this stain from our national honor.

George Kennan and the Century have pictured Russian barbarity to the American people until we are in doubt whether we ought to longer maintain friendly relations with the authors of such cruelties. Of late the reports of the determination of the Armenians to turn to Russia for protection from the abominable Turk have been also a surprise. But if the following from the London Daily News fairly represents the condition of Turkish prisons the soldiers of the Czar might be messengers of mercy in them. A special correspondent of the Daily News succeeded in obtaining admission to the Turkish prison at Uskub, Macedonia, a town of European Turkey. He found the building contained 149 cells, which were occupied by 1,811 prisoners, or over twelve to a cell. As a rule the unfortunate victims are sent there to be confined from one to ten years each; but so great are their sufferings, arising from the barbarity of their keepers and the total disregard by the latter of all sanitary laws, that one rarely outlives five years. In one cell two and a half yards square the correspondent discovered nearly a score of poor wretches panting for air and starving for food, having in the way of the latter nothing but bread and water. The greater number were stark naked and chained by the ankle and wrist. As if the jailers were unable to inflict tortures enough on their victims in the dens already described, the correspondent found a series of underground cells, said to be reserved for the worst prisoners, where, reeking in total darkness, were those whom Turkish tyranny had singled out for especial barbarity. In order to force confession where confessions would have proved useful to those in power the aid of the ant is called in. These insects are kept in small boxes for the purpose, and fifty of them are placed at one time on the naked body of the prisoner whom it is desired to torture. It is also customary to chain men all day in the scorching sun in such a way that they are unable to move.

SECRECY AS A PRINCIPLE OF ORGANIZATION.

BY ENOS W. SHAW.

This is an age of lodges rather than the age of lodges. The principle of secrecy has always been popular. And until the race shall be "born again," if we may judge of the future by the past, it will continue to be so.

We make no denial of the right to organize. We make no doubt of the wisdom of organization. But in this country, to concede the wisdom of organization is not to concede the wisdom of secret organization. In some countries the method of secrecy may be a matter of necessity and reason, but with us it is not. With us it is a matter of custom and will.

The reason of God and the will of God are at peace, but the faculties of man are at war. And secrecy, which has the sanction of custom and the consent of the will, has not the conviction of the reason. To show that reason is against the method of secrecy is one of the objects of our effort, and toward the accomplishment of that object this writing is contributed.

But upon considering secrecy as a principle of organization, it is important that we have a clear idea of what is meant by secrecy, and of its moral rank among terms. To that end, let me say that secrecy is neither privacy nor mystery. Only a morbid and irreverent curiosity would divest man of his privacy and God of his mystery.

Privacy has its origin in the nature of man. We respect it in others; it is accorded to ourselves. It is a right inalienable. The sentiment of mankind is against any assault upon this high prerogative. In England and America this sentiment has crystallized into the legal maxim that "every man's house is his castle." But privacy is no more secrecy than the home is a lodge.

As man is invested with privacy, so God is enveloped in mystery. What a consciousness of thwarted energy wrung from Tennyson the confession of his own and all men's inability to comprehend the plans of God, when he sang:

"So runs my dream: but what am I?
An infant crying in the night:
An infant crying for the light:
And with no language but a cry."

The intellectual powers of the strongest men are so limited that everything quickly passes beyond their reach into the mystery of the infinite. But this mystery should not be called secrecy. To finite beings even in a perfect world there would be both privacy and secrecy, but in such a world there would be no occasion for secrecy.

According to Bacon, there are three degrees of hiding and veiling of one's self: secrecy, dissimulation, and simulation. Secrecy, to paraphrase his thought, is that degree of hiding and veiling of man's self "in which he leaves himself without hold to be taken what he is." To an ingenuous mind the definition is itself the knell of secrecy. But since Bacon afterwards affirms that the habit of secrecy is both politic and moral, permit me to vary the statement of his definition. Secrecy is a hiding and veiling of one's self; and it is that degree of hiding and veiling of one's self in which he leaves himself without hold to be taken what he is. To be as good as Bacon we must be better; and since Bacon himself admitted that secrecy necessitates dissimulation, in our degenerate age he would probably agree that it necessitates simulation as well. For it must frequently happen that the safest way for one to leave himself without hold to be taken what he is, is not only for him to pretend not to be what he is, but to pretend to be what he is not. Therefore in this discussion I make no account of the degrees of hiding and veiling of one's self, but consider secrecy to include whatever is necessary to the leaving of one's self without hold to be taken what he is.

Secrecy has no place between God and man. The thoughts of man are all open to God, and "the secrets of the Lord are with them that fear him." Christ said, "I have called you friends; for all things I have heard of my Father I have made known unto you." God did not wish to leave himself without hold to be taken what he is, but precisely the opposite. The very condition of eternal life is to "know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou has sent." And when we remember that God designed that Christ should become the Son of man, that man, as Flavel said, might become the son of God, and that Jesus should dwell in us by faith uniting us to God, surely we would not say that secrecy exists between God and us, any more than between a loving father and an obedient child.

As secrecy has no place between God and man, it should have no place between man and man. At present it has a very large place in society. It is the chief occupation of thousands,—this trifling matter of leaving themselves without hold to be taken what they are. Everything has become a means to that great end. It is a proverb that language is to conceal thought. This prevailing immorality is a cause of distress to our prophets and deep-seeing men. Unless some remedy shall take effect, they tell us that it means the decay of noble art, death to liberty, and chaos to Christendom. We are not without a Physician who has power to heal all diseases, but men are not healed because they will not come to Him and be made whole. And why do men practice secrecy so faithfully? Do they hide what they are because they are what they ought to be? Do men lie because they are honest? Do they sell their virtue because they are incorruptible?

When Bacon says that the habit of secrecy is both politic and moral, he speaks as Polonius when he advises Laertes to "give every man his ear, but few his tongue." If man's sole mission on earth be to take advantage of his fellow, or to be simply agreeable to them, I make no doubt as to the morality of such advice. Tennyson exhibits a far higher spirit when he makes the Knights of Arthur swear to "speak no slander, no, nor listen to it." Men's ears were not made to be the dumping ground, any more than their tongues were made to be the dumping carts, of social garbage. What we need as individuals is more privacy, and to give no cause for secrecy. And the Times of recent date said: "To give no cause for gossip and possess no secret that ought to be concealed, is as good a maxim for the Senate as for the man who lives in a country village."

The scheme of secrecy is devil-born. Milton says of Satan:

"Soon as midnight brought on the dusky hour
Friendliest to sleep and silence, he resolved
With all his legions to dislodge, and leave
Unworshiped, unbowed the throne supreme,
Contemptuous; and his next subordinate
Awakening, thus to him in secret spake."

That rebellion was concocted in secret. Those legions were deceived with lies. Satan bade his subordinate—

"Tell them that by command, ere yet dim night
Her shadowy clouds withdraws, I am to haste,
And all who under me their banners wave,

Homeward, with flying march, where we possess
The quarters of the north; there to prepare
Fit entertainment to receive our king
Who speedily through all the hierarchies
Intends to pass triumphant, and give laws."

They were duped into that rebellion. They obeyed their potentate.

"For great indeed
His name, and high was his degree in heaven;
His countenance, as the morning star that guides
The starry flock, allured them, and with lies
Drew after him the third part of heaven's host."

In very much the same manner are men drawn from Christianity to-day. With lies Satan seduced the mother of mankind to foul revolt. From the council which "in close recess and secret conclave sat," he is represented to have passed on his earthly mission.

Begotten of Satan, secrecy is perpetuated by sin. It implies, selfishness, guilt, fear. Its spirit is loathsome to upright men. In the judgment of all it is associated with what is wrong. From the evening in which Adam heard the voice of God in the garden and was afraid and hid himself, men have loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds are evil. It was a remark of Kant that there is nothing we can think of anywhere in this world, nor, indeed, anywhere outside the same, which deserves to be esteemed as good without qualification, excepting only a good will. In the fracture of that benevolence secrecy had its origin, and it will cease only "when," as Burke said, in a different connection, "men have emptied themselves of all the lust of selfish will, which, without religion, it is utterly impossible they ever should."

The offspring of sin, secrecy, becomes the mother of sin. A thoughtful person is so conscious of his own utter weakness, of his liability to turn coward and betray the truth whose defense is entrusted to him, that he feels the necessity of publicly committing himself to what is right and no less against what is wrong. Not to do so is to apply to one's self for and to get a license to be a traitor, if a crisis arise, and many are certain to occur in every life. Therefore he finds it best not to hide, but avow what he is, and in this avowal to cut off as it were all retreat by burning all the bridges behind him. Not daring to implicitly trust himself, he is grateful for the reinforcement which comes to his motive power from his sense of responsibility to the public estimation. Secrecy is certain to destroy, in the one making it his policy, "that sensibility of principle, that chastity of honor that feels a stain like a wound," and to pave the way for his downfall.

[Concluded next week.]

THE NORTHFIELD CONFERENCE OF CHRISTIAN WORKERS.

BY REV. WILBUR F. CRAFTS.

A true Pentecost is always followed by a book of "Acts". Judged by this test "the Northfield spirit" is the Holy Spirit. For a decade, except two years when Mr. Moody was in Europe, Christian workers of many lands, in ever-increasing numbers, have gathered here for a new "baptism for service." They come not to gratify theological curiosity or to be "happified," but to be thoroughly furnished in head and heart, in method and matter, for Christian work.

In one of the meetings when many answered the question, "Why did you come to Northfield?" an Englishman who is soon to visit Palestine said that he had come here partly because he had been assured that Northfield was nearer the heavenly Jerusalem than the earthly one. A converted Catholic said he came because he had learned by a former visit that he could find here not the Protestantism of the theologians, not mere antagonism to Catholics, but the Gospel of Jesus. A business man gave the following reasons for coming: "I came here as a busy man, to get some new stimulus for God's work, to touch elbows with a thousand or fifteen hundred Christian workers, dynamos that each give me a throb when I touch them, starting me in a new direction; and I came because here I learn a great many ideas about how to preach the Gospel, not as these preachers do—I wouldn't do it that way if I could—but as a quiet layman does."

The unreportable "spirit" of the conference is more helpful to Christian work than anything that can be written, but the meetings are also very rich in Biblical exposition, in illustrations, and in suggestions of new methods of evangelization.

Occasionally we are unintentionally shown "how not to do it." A very eminent evangelist to-day gave, not an illustration but a "frustration" of the priceless value of the soul by telling of his visit, long ago, to an art gallery where Turner's "Slave Ship" was on exhibition, visited by throngs because of Ruskin's praise of it. The speaker said he could see at first nothing in it but paint, not even after reading Ruskin, but when he was told that the owner had paid $40,000 for it, he concluded that he ought to admire it. But inasmuch as Ruskin has taken back his compliments of this meaningless picture by the Browning of painters, and it is at least an open question whether the person who bought it did not pay more than it was worth, the illustration suggests the query whether the price paid for the soul was not too much also. An uncut diamond that seems of little worth to the unpracticed eye, but is known to be of great value by the expert, would have served the occasion better.

Several of the addresses have been pictorially illustrated, suggesting that the church should keep step with the times in speaking to eye as well as ear. Mr. Geo. W. Mackay of New York, gave a stereopticon lecture on the life of Christ, the pictures being copies of famous paintings, to show how great crowds can be gathered and impressed in city mission work. Rev. A. S. Gumbart, an evangelist, used paintings of seeds and flowers to illustrate the Bible figure that the Gospel is like a seed—recommending such illustrations for occasional sermons in regular church services. The music by Sankey, Stebbins, Town-er and others is as powerful as usual, and a constant lesson in methods.

Many of the meetings unconsciously illustrate how to conduct revivals, which had a vigorous defence by Evangelist L. W. Munhall, from which we extract the following: "Some people say they don't believe in excitement. The world blames the church for not waking up, and when it does wake the world says there is too much excitement. The noise and excitement in the produce exchange in New York over the rise of stocks a quarter of a cent is all right, but would not be countenanced in religious matters. The man who complains because his minister preaches thirty-one minutes, one minute over time, though he has a cushioned seat to hear him in, would take a coal oil lamp and carry it through the streets of a city, letting the oil run all over his clothes, and then sit on hard benches and listen for hours to political speeches, amid excitement greater than that of a Negro camp meeting on the shores of Maryland. At the winning game of base ball last season between Boston and New York when Rogers' home run brought in four men, I asked a police officer what he would do if the people made such a noise at one of my meetings? The officer replied: 'Well, I don't know, but I guess we'd have to run you in.' Excitement in other things is all right, but get a little excited over religion, and some old frost-bitten saint will say there is too much excitement, and the world outside will say that you are too excited. Every period of crisis in the world's history has been a period of excitement. Every time you have religious excitement, some one will tell you that the sun moves silently, but it is not so. The sun is such a furnace that the flames leap out 250,000 miles at a single flash, and there isn't such a rushing, roaring mass in the universe, except where there is a still larger sun. Still water don't run deep; it don't run at all, it is nothing but a pond with a green scum breeding mosquitoes and tadpoles. There is a reaction from these things, they say. There was a reaction from the day of Pentecost into the Dark Ages, but Pentecost was a good thing, wasn't it? There was a reaction from the Reformation, the church became formal; but who will say that the Reformation wasn't of God? I see a man sitting in darkness and saying he doesn't want the day, because there will be a reaction into night again. If it hadn't been for the revivals, the Christian church would have died long ago, for most of the additions to the church of God are from revivals."

This evangelist made a vigorous protest in another matter of church methods in the following words: "There are many pulpits where the word 'hell' is never used, but it is in the Bible. One of the justices of our Supreme Court of the United States said that in his judgment the chief reason for the alarming increase of crime was there was little of the preaching of hell and judgment in the pulpit to-day. Wendell Phillips said at the leading literary club of Boston: "Whenever you can procure the kind of men that the theology of Edwards produced, men with backbones and right notions of men and light and truth, then we will deprecate the teachings of Jonathan Edwards and the philosophy of his time."

In exposition and illustration the conference has had no more exhilarating excursion into great truths than that of this morning with Dr. Geo. F. Pentecost and Dr. A. J. Gordon as the span of speakers. Dr. Pentecost spoke of redemption, which he defined as buying back, as one buys back property that is in pawn or sold for taxes. He illustrated its meaning more fully by the Old Testament customs of redemption. When an Israelite had lost his property through debt, his nearest kinsman could redeem it for him by paying the bill; or if he refused, the next of kin could do so. If all kinsman failed in the Jubilee year God himself redeemed the lost property, and the man himself also, if his debts had reduced him to slavery, unless he preferred to remain under his old master, in which case his ear was pierced by nailing it to a door, as some men to-day deliberately cling to their old master, Sin, and refuse the redemption, the highest liberty, that God provides for all. When a man's property or himself was sold, two duplicate or "double" deeds were written on the same piece of paper, side by side, and then torn apart, causing a ragged edge. It is this abandoned custom to which reference is made in the meaningless phrase, "This indenture witnesseth." One of these duplicates the seller kept and the other the buyer; but when the man who had sold his property or himself was redeemed by his earthly kinsman or his Heavenly Father, he received back the duplicate deed, which is probably the meaning of "the double" referred to by Isaiah and Hezekiah in their songs of redemption, and this was folded with its mate, and nailed up at the same place where the man who refused redemption was pierced through the ear. The deed which had a nail hole in it was no longer valid, as a paid bank check is to-day cancelled by the hole cut in it by the teller's file, and if lost and presented again is refused payment. So Christ has given us in the Bible the deed of our redemption, "nailing it to his cross."

Our age is the world's jubilee period, as Christ declared at Nazareth when he proclaimed "the acceptable year," that is the forgiveness year, the Jubilee year.

Dr. A. J. Gordon of Boston, spoke of the three steps from grace to glory. We are first translated, second; transformed; third, transferred—a change, first, of condition; second, of character; third, of country. (1) John speaks of the translation which occurs at conversion as "out of death into life;" Peter as "out of darkness into light;" Paul as "out of darkness into dominion." Eternal life "is not natural life prolonged but the life of the Eternal imparted." There is not only a "light of life" but also a light of death, the phosphorescent life of the dead trees of the forest. Let us not mistake the brilliancy of human speculation for the outshining of the spiritual life. If our citizenship is in heaven we shall not move into the suburbs to escape taxation, to avoid our share of burdens. (2) We are also warned not to be "conformed to the age." Christ came to "deliver us from this present evil age," of which the devil is said to be the god, and therefore it cannot surely be the millennium. We are to be transformed, that is, transfigured by passing, as Christ did in his transfiguration, into "the age to come," into heavenly places in Christ Jesus. We are new creatures but are to be "renewed" daily. (3) We are at last to be transferred. One thing is perfectly certain, we shall not all die. "We that are alive and remain shall be caught up to meet the Lord in the air," changed "in a moment," into the image of Christ.

There has been some debate as to whether faith is a single act, and as to what it is. Dr. Pentecost defined it "as the belief of a truth on testimony." He declared there is no such difference as the terms "head faith" and "heart faith" would imply, but that faith is always and only "belief on testimony," differentiated only by its object. Dr. Pierson replied that belief has to do with accepting a fact, but faith with accepting and trusting a person. To which Dr. Pentecost replies that to believe in or on a person, or testimony, is Christian faith. Dr. Pierson insists that faith includes two things: the assent of the intellect and the consent of the will, the second act being a necessary part of saving faith, since the devils believe (that is assent) and tremble.

Dr. Marcus Rainsford of London, described the text, "Lord, help me," a golden uplifting chain of three links, the word "help" coupling the helpless "me" to the mighty "Lord." Dr. Rainsford expounded the parable of the Syrophenician woman as offering an encouragement to the most helpless soul to come to Christ, for she had no invitation to come and no example, being of an accursed race of which none had ever come. Rev. Geo. P. Marsh illustrated the unknown riches of the Gospel by the story of an ignorant old lady whose son was in a far-away land, who being asked if her son sent her money, replied, "No, but he sends me pretty pictures," which being shown proved to be bank notes. David Barron of London, illustrated the duty of all Christians to be at work by telling of the levy en masse in France in 1793 when that country was invaded by all or nearly all the other nations of Europe. All France was summoned by its rulers to arise, the young men to bear arms, the married men to forge arms, the old men to utter words of wisdom, the women to work on tents and uniforms, the children to scrape lint. So the church of God, surrounded by enemies, is called to arise en masse, each one to do his utmost to accomplish a glorious victory.

Methodists have never been numerous here either on the platform or in the audience; but Bishop Thoburn has been second to none this year in influence upon the conference, and has carried away substantial tokens of the hearers' sympathy with his work in India. His sermon on "The love of Christ (in us) constraineth us" to love the unlovely and even our foes as he did, was one of the most impressive discourses of the conference. Speaking of the frequent criticism of Christians, he told of a child's photograph which seemed to the parents very imperfect, especially when the child had died and they came to look at it earnestly and often, until a magnifying glass was at length procured which brought out the face like life, and enabled the parents to secure a beautiful copy. So the un mistaking eye of God sees doubtless in many whom we consider very faulty not only precious souls but pure purposes. "We shall know each other better when the mists have rolled away."

Dr. Arthur Little of Boston, speaking of the true strength of the church, aptly compared the church that has a fine edifice and appointments but no "Spirit in the wheels" to a schooner left high and dry by the receding tide.

Mr. Moody is like the great engine in the ship's hold, little heard but everywhere felt.

Northfield, Mass., August 5, 1890.

AMERICAN TITLES.

[Dr. O. W. Holmes in the August Atlantic.]

It is a very curious fact that, with all our boasted "free and equal" superiority over the communities of the Old World, our people have the most enormous appetite for Old World titles of distinction. Sir Michael and Sir Hans belong to one of the most extended of the aristocratic orders. But we have also "Knights and Ladies of Honor," and, what is still grander, "Royal Conclave of Knights and Ladies," "Royal Arcanum" and "Royal Society of Good Fellows," "Supreme Council," "Imperial Court," "Grand Protector" and "Grand Dictator," and so on. Nothing less than "Grand" and "Supreme" is good enough for the dignitaries of our association of citizens. Where does all this ambition for names without realities come from? Because a Knight of the Garter wears a golden star, why does the worthy cordwainer who mends the shoes of his fellow-citizens want to wear a tin star and take a name that had a meaning as used by the representatives of ancient families or the men who had made themselves illustrious by their achievements.

It appears to be a peculiar American weakness. The French Republicans of the earlier period thought the term citizen was good enough for anybody. At a late period, "le Roi Citoyen"—the citizen king—was a common title to give Louis Philippe. But nothing is too grand for the American in the way of titles. The proudest of them all signify absolutely nothing. They do not stand for ability, for public service, for social importance, for large possessions; but, on the contrary, are oftenest found in connection with personalities to which they are supremely inapplicable. We can hardly afford to quarrel with a national habit, which, if lightly handled, may involve us in serious domestic difficulties. The "Right Worshipful" functionary whose equipage stops at my back gate and whose services are indispensable to the health and comfort of my household, is a dignitary whom I must not offend. I must speak with proper deference to the lady who is scrubbing my floors, when I remember that her husband, who saws my wood, carries a string of high-sounding titles which would satisfy a Spanish nobleman.

ODD-FELLOWSHIP EXCLUDES CHRIST.

It excludes him from its creed, requiring only a belief in a Supreme Being. If there is any reason why an Odd-fellow should believe in God there is an equally strong reason why he should believe in Christ. Any heathen could subscribe to a creed that testifies only to a belief in God, but the Christian does not believe such a testimony sufficient. Such a creed is deistical. It may mean one God to one man and another to another man. It may mean Baal, Adonis, Osiris, Jupiter, or Mammon. If a Christian can subscribe to such a creed, which ignores Christ, he could join a Jewish synagogue, where they require a belief in God, but not in Christ, or a Unitarian church, or a Mohammedan church. Yet to hold membership in a Christian church and a Jewish church at the same time would be considered sufficient ground for discipline. It is no better to omit a recognition of Christ than actually to vote against him—in either case he is denied that honor which is due him.

It does not answer this objection to say that the order is not religious and doesn't pretend to teach religion. It does have religious ceremonies, prayers, hymns, burial services, moral homilies, etc.

Now if Christ is left out of the order, what kind of religious ceremonies must it have. It cannot be Christian because Christ is excluded, hence it must be a worship which is not Christian.

It cannot be said that Christ is omitted from the creed and afterwards introduced into the worship. It will be shown hereafter that he is omitted wholly from the lodge. The very object of omitting him from the creed requires that he be wholly excluded. There are many—perhaps the majority—who have never submitted to the Lord Jesus; they do not wish to submit to him. It is to accommodate this class of Odd-fellows that the lodge rejects him. They love the praise (patronage) of men more than of God.

Besides omitting Christ from its creed the lodge omits him from its symbols. The brazen serpent is one of the symbols of the lodge, but in place of allowing its proper significance as a symbol of Christ, it is called a symbol of wisdom! In like manner throughout the whole teaching of the lodge, the very place that Christ ought to occupy he is excluded from. In no place is the candidate told of the Saviour of the world. There is much talk of the teachings of Odd-fellowship and about what the order can do for a man, in elevating him, but not a word about what Jesus Christ can do for him. This is a fatal omission. It is not necessary to pass resolutions against Jesus to show that the lodge is against him. Mohammed, Confucius and Brigham Young never voted to antagonize Jesus, but there is no question that if their teachings prevail Christ would be forgotten. The triumph of Odd-fellowship would not bring the triumph of Christ's kingdom, but the contrary.

Christ is omitted from the prayers of the lodge. The first prayer of the ritual begins, "Thou King eternal, immortal and invisible! the only wise God our Saviour;" and ends, "Thus we ask in humble dependence upon, and in most solemn adoration of thy one mysterious and glorious name."

This comes the nearest to a recognition of Christ of any of the prayers, having the expression "our Saviour," but if it is intended to refer to Jesus Christ it would be objectionable to many Odd-fellows. Its very remoteness of allusion shows how constrained it would be to call it a recognition. Beyond this prayer there is no remote allusion to the Saviour. The Sovereign Grand Lodge, meeting in Baltimore in 1882, prescribed two forms of prayer in neither of which there is any recognition of Christ.

The Saviour is omitted from all the "charges" of the order, the very place where the candidate ought to be told of the only way of salvation. Although the candidate is taught some lessons about death, the resurrection, immortality and our duty to God, in no case is the Author of life and immortality and the resurrection brought to his mind. It is tacitly implied that Jesus is not needed. He is a character that figures in sectarian churches, but not in the universal religion of Odd-fellowship.

Christ is omitted from the degree of "truth." He said, "I am the way, the truth and the life," yet this order teaches the truth without him. In fact the institution does not recognize the Saviour. This constitutes the one great objection to the order.

If the Lord should come he could not enter an Odd-fellow's lodge, because the lodge considers it more important to have the Lord's enemies than the Lord himself.

Oh, Christian! how can you call yourself the Lord's friend and submit to this indignity? The Jews who first crucified him were unwilling to give him his proper place as religious leader. His enemies ever since have been slighting him. He is wounded in the house of his friends. His honor is taken away, his authority denied, his name is blasphemed, his office is abolished or given to another—and men, called Christians, submit!

Some men excuse this by saying the order is not religious; yet it does have religious service in which Christ is entitled to a place but receives it not. Others apologize by saying it teaches the principles of Christianity; but what are the principles without the Saviour himself? It is merely robbery. It is borrowing his teachings to honor an institution that rejects him! Others argue that it does not actually oppose Jesus, but only says nothing about him. "How shall ye escape if ye neglect so great salvation?" But the majority do not trust their own judgment, they rely on the fact that other good men see no harm in the institution. This is "running with the multitude to do evil." When the crowd cries "Hosanna," casting their garments in the way, these men shout the loudest. When the same crowd cries "Crucify him," they echo the cry. They profess in the prayer meeting to love the Saviour and go to the lodge to swear solemnly to a creed from which he is excluded. No wonder there is leanness in the churches. This great iniquity must be put away.—American.

WALDENSTROM'S TRAVELS IN AMERICA.

The following extract is from the volume by Prof. Waldenstrom noticed in the editorial columns:

As to Mr. Ingersoll himself, a few words may be deemed appropriate about this man, who has exerted such great and characteristic influence on the religious life in America. He holds the position of colonel in the United States army, which distinction he won during the late civil war. He now resides in New York city. Very often he travels in different parts of the country and gives lectures with marked distinction as an infidel. He is generally considered as one of the most subtle and dangerous enemies of Christianity in America. It can not reasonably be doubted that this man is endowed with great mental abilities; he is an intelligent man, and besides this is a moral man and a strict and zealous temperance man. But he is, nevertheless, as I have said, an infidel. Yet, however, his infidelity seems to be the natural result of the distortion of the Christian doctrines which the prevailing dogmatism has inflicted upon American theology. The results of this kind are very common. In these dogmas, that are now so generally accepted, God is represented, not as a Father, who, in unchangeable love, sends his only begotten Son in search of the bewildered children and to bring them back to the forsaken fold, but rather as a grim tyrant who, alleging his righteousness, can not accept or pardon a sinner unless he (God) has first inflicted upon a substitute that punishment which the sinner has merited. Furthermore, this dogmatical theology does not set forth Christ as the ambassador and vicar of the Father, whose office it is to bring back and save those who have gone astray, but to the contrary represents him as the vicar of man, whose merited penalty he (Christ) must suffer, and fulfill that law which man has transgressed.

According to this doctrine the remission of sins is considered in the old dispensation as a remission on credit, and in the new dispensation the remission is granted in consequence of that prepayment (which Christ is surmised to have made through his sufferings and death on the Cross of Calvary). Likewise conversion is not an act whereby the sinner turns towards God but away from him towards Christ, behind whom he (the sinner) seeks protection from the terrible Lord of vengeance. I believe that if the sincere representatives of Christianity in America did not consider every expression of Col. Ingersoll as inspired by the devil, but rather accepted the truths that he points out, it would redound to the benefit and blessing of the American Christianity.

It is noticeable how the ecclesiastical press in America deplors the present relation of the pulpit to this dogmatical doctrine (alleging that it ignores the dogmas of the Christian church). The press looks upon this attitude of the Christian pulpit with doleful apprehension.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 13, 1890.

The obstacle in the way of the anti-lottery legislation proved unsubstantial and was quickly brushed away by the sub-committee of Senators, appointed to ascertain whether the bill, as prepared by Postmaster General Wanamaker, would in any of its provisions conflict with the Constitution of the United States. The sub-committee were no long time in deciding that the proposed legislation was Constitutional; but in order to make assurance doubly sure they obtained the opinion of the Attorney General upon the question. He says: "Legislation of this kind has been upheld by the courts, and it seems to be settled that it is competent for Congress to authorize the Postmaster General to refuse the use of the mails to any persons engaged in the lottery business." The Senate committee on Postoffices has favorably reported the bill with an amendment providing that newspapers published in foreign countries shall not be excluded from the mails under this bill, unless in the opinion of the Postmaster General they are being circulated expressly to advertise the lottery. The committee was unanimously in favor of the passage of the bill, which has greatly encouraged the hope in the minds of many good people that it may become a law during the present session of Congress.

"Let your light so shine," was the text from which Rev. Ira J. Chase, the present Lieutenant Governor of the State of Indiana, preached a strong and most interesting sermon here this week. The admonition of St. John is one of the most familiar texts in the New Testament, and yet interest in it never becomes exhausted; there seems to be no end to the number of brilliant rays it is capable of throwing out to light up the darkest and most sinful corners; it is like the great cluster of electric lights on the top of the Eiffel tower at Paris, the rays of which may be seen for thirty miles in every direction. Did you ever see a picture of that tower showing the prisms of light radiating in all directions? That picture is, to my mind, one of the most practical illustrations in existence of the words of Christ, "Let your light so shine"; it brings its force home to you at once, and nothing could be better adapted to give children a comprehensive idea of the meaning of the sacred injunction. It would not be a bad idea to print the text on these pictures for use in teaching children.

The "original package" act, as it became a law last week was the original Senate bill, and relates only to intoxicating liquors. Its adoption gave great pleasure to every one interested in breaking down one of the greatest curses of our age—the human consumption of intoxicating liquors. Any law is welcome that will make it impossible for even one man to get the wherewith to satisfy an unnatural and depraved appetite; and this law will undoubtedly prevent thousands of young and promising men filling drunkards' graves, by removing the temptation from their sight and reach.

Visiting temperance people are continually expressing their surprise and gratification at the flourishing condition of the various organizations in this city and the large attendance they have, even in the warmest weather. The reason is not far to seek or difficult to find. The ladies and gentlemen at the head of our most successful temperance organizations long ago realized that it was necessary to make it pleasant for those who attended the meetings, if they wished them to come again. They thus have attracted many young men whose natural inclinations were to go to the saloons, for their recreation, and there are very few who become regular attendants at these meetings that do not eventually take the pledge and become earnest workers in the cause. *

REFORM NEWS.

CHICAGO IN INDIA.

A SAVE-ALL CIRCLE HAS A COLPORTEUR-EVANGELIST IN INDIA—A REPORT OF HIS WORK.

MILES, Iowa.

Bro. Prautch, who has superintended the work of the native bookseller, writes thus:

"Bangsha began work Jan. 2, 1890. Up to June 1st he has sold about 9,000 tracts, Scripture portions and small books. He sometimes visits the steamboat landings, where the coast steamers take hundreds daily to and from various ports. Sometimes he goes to the railway lines; other days to the markets; others to the mills; then to the native regiments. Some days he sold twenty or thirty Scripture portions, and fifty to one hundred tracts,—according to the crowds going.

"Sometimes he went preaching and visiting the native chawls (tenement houses) with me; then I would go and sell books with him. At times he would be "chief-mate" on one of my Gospel carts, when he and a man to push the cart would average 1,500 tracts a week, beside some hundred Gospels, and five or ten New Testaments. The languages of the books, etc., are Marathi, Gujartai, Hindi, Urdu, Goanese, Arabic, Persian and English. This is firing grape and cannister with a vengeance!

"When there is a large mela (religious festival and fair) five or six of us fill the cart, go to the mela, fill our arms with books, etc., and then some scatter about, while others would sell from the cart, or from a table. Every temple in Bombay has two or three 'bara din' (great days) each year, when crowds of people gather. [These are worshipers, merchants, hawkers, etc.] We make it our business to get to as many of these as possible. Bangsha has been to twelve or fifteen of these fairs, but always with other workers. So you see it is not practicable to give the exact number he sold separately.

"I am satisfied that the twelve rupees [$4], per month has been well spent. I am training other men, and will have more colporteur-evangelists ready when you want them."

A note of the missionary's experience should be added. He says:

"Of course, I am happy in this work. Only a sadness comes over me when I must leave possible work undone for want of funds, and also when I see the utter want of conviction for sin in the heathen all about us. But there are streaks of light. I am not discouraged, but I cannot be satisfied till I see the heathen turning from sin."

WHAT A CHEERING REPORT

from that four dollars per month! And there might be a thousand more such workers in India just as well as not. Who will pray and work that many more, or at least a few more, such useful men may be set at work in India this year?

FOUR DOLLARS PER MONTH!

Think of it! Talk about it! Praise God for the splendid opportunity of doing so much good with a sum so small that a Sabbath-school scholar can easily raise it. WALLACE J. GLADWIN, Missionary to India.

FROM WASHINGTON TO NEW ENGLAND.

BOSTON, Mass., Aug. 14, 1890.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Responding to an invitation of the N. E. agent I took advantage of the low railroad rate to visit "the Hub." As my ticket was limited I could not stop off for work in Connecticut as I desired. A three hours' wait at New Haven was made pleasant by a visit with Mr. Barnum and family. Mr. B. is a son-in-law of Rev. C.D. Brooks, a reader of the Cynosure, and an able advocate of our principles. I learned of some in New Haven favorable to our cause. Many could doubtless be found were meetings held and the subject agitated.

Time did not permit a visit to Yale College. The massive buildings bespoke a power, and the elegance of their finish a pride, which unrestrained by the grace of God would lead any young man or woman to ruin.

I reached this city about 11 o'clock Friday evening. Passing up Tremont street I saw by the electric light a sign which read "Genuine Exposures of Secret Orders," etc. Looking up I saw a familiar face. No password was necessary to gain admittance.

On Sabbath evening I addressed a good congregation in a United Presbyterian church of which Rev. Hood is pastor. Several of his members have subscribed for our paper and others will. I am much pleased with the outlook here. The Puritanic spirit is still alive in these beautiful hills and valleys. I expect, D. V., to remain in this section some weeks, attending the meeting in Hoyt's Grove near Ware the 23rd of this month.

W. B. STODDARD.

IOWA CHEERS OUR WESTERN AGENT.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—After speaking at Grundy Center, I visited Marshalltown, where I was kindly received and entertained by Bro. A. M. Miller and wife. At Quarry I stopped with Mr. Coppock, who is a staunch friend of the anti-secrecy reform. From there I went to Baxter, in Jasper county, and went into the country to call upon Bros. Dawson and Altman. I found that Bro. Altman had passed to his reward, and Bro. Dawson is disabled by increasing age and failing health. Thus are the pillars of the church and of Christian reform removed one after another, but the great Head of the church can raise up others to take their places, as they, one by one, are taken away.

From Baxter I went to Colfax, where I spent the Sabbath with Bro. C. R. Hunt, the pastor of the Presbyterian church. Here are mineral springs, and several large hotels for the accommodation of health seekers. Here, also, the Iowa Chautauqua assemblies are held. It is not like Brooklyn, a city of churches, but like Saratoga, a city of hotels. By invitation I preached to Rev. Hunt's morning congregation, and endeavored so to wield the sword of the Spirit as to sever the lodgemen from their connections that they may be joined to Christ by faith. I showed the difference between the true benevolence manifested in the lives of those in whose hearts Christ dwells by faith, and the counterfeit benevolence of mutual aid societies, such as the Odd-fellows.

Bro. Hunt edits and publishes a monthly paper called the Evangel of Rest, which has been adopted as the official organ of the Iowa State Sabbath Association. The subscription price is 50 cents a year. Many will wish to examine this question, in the light thrown upon it by this periodical.

From Colfax I went to Des Moines, and thence to Oskaloosa by the way of Altoona and Pella. While at Oskaloosa, I visited New Sharon and Taintor, and then went to Sigourney, the county-seat of Keokuk county. There I preached Sabbath morning, and then rode eight miles to Delta and preached again in the afternoon, and was re-conveyed to Sigourney, where I lectured in the evening on the religious and moral character of Freemasonry and kindred orders. Rev. Dougherty, who heard the lecture, was anxious to have me return to Sigourney and lecture again.

The Sabbath being past, I resumed my canvass, and went to Conroy, and called upon J. D. Frick, who was one of the Iowa delegates to the April Conference in Chicago. From Conroy I came to Richland, and went three miles into the country and spent the night with Aaron Stalker. He donated $5 to the N. C. A. current expense fund. J. D. Frick subscribed the same amount when I called upon him. Other parties around Richland donated $6 more to the same fund. I entered upon financial work for the N. C. A., as special agent for the West, the first of July. During that month I raised in cash, and subscriptions to the N. C. A. funds and to the Cynosure, the sum of $249.75. My expenses were $14.34. This result encourages me in the special financial agency I have undertaken in connection with my preaching, lecturing, and other agency work. Let us unitedly pray, as it is only as God is pleased to touch and open hearts, that we can hope to succeed.

C. F. HAWLEY.

CORRESPONDENCE.

FROM THE NEBRASKA BATTLE-FIELD.

GRAND ISLAND, Neb., Aug. 15, 1890.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—The Methodist and Congregational churches at Clark's, Neb., held a union service last Sabbath evening, at which I preached on the amendment. The town has a good opera hall which had been used for such services, but it was decided not to use it for a sermon on prohibition. No objection would be offered if the sermon was a Gospel sermon, viz., if the preacher was careful not to intrude upon the devil's political domain. Satan's tactics are to persuade people that the Gospel must not be applied to politics or to a question like license. If the devil can run the political machine and operate it against the church, he has very little to fear from the churches. But the churches in Nebraska are being shaken and divided over the prohibition question, and the lines are as closely drawn as they once were on the slavery question. They are having lively times in some of the large churches in Omaha in attempting to organize prohibition clubs. The World-Herald says the majority of the male members are opposed to these clubs, or to any form of politics in the church. At the time, says the Herald, "when the first attempt was made to plant a prohibition club in the Second Presbyterian Church, Rev. W. R. Henderson, then pastor, opposed it. He said, 'I hold that prohibition is a matter of individual conscience, and it is divisive for the church to take such action.'" One of the elders in the First Presbyterian Church opposed any efforts to form a prohibition club in his church for similar reasons, and will vote against prohibition. A prominent elder in a United Presbyterian church, it is said, takes the same ground.

How effectually does such policy destroy a church's power in fighting a public evil! It is equivalent to saying that men as individuals are permitted to oppose the saloon, but not as churches; and if the church as an organization cannot be committed as against the saloon, then it must be for the saloon, because Christ's words, "he that is not with me is against me," are as true of the organization as of the individual.

The more I take part in this Nebraska campaign, the more I see the momentous issues involved in the anti-saloon fight. The tremendous money power of the English syndicate is backing the saloons. The same money power that forced the opium traffic upon China at the point of the British bayonet. The same power that caused the famine in India, in which two and a half million perished. For this syndicate had bought and imported their grain to the seaboard, where they held it for speculation, and when the next year's crop failed the people were destitute. This same money power is now aiming to force the liquor traffic upon the people of Nebraska. The largest portion of the liquor interests in this country is now owned and controlled by English capitalists.

If the battle for prohibition is lost in Nebraska, the saloons will multiply all over the State. The license of saloons will then be compulsory wherever demanded. It will matter not if the town council is composed of Methodist preachers, they will then be compelled to grant license. The prohibition question will be taken from the hands of the people, and license will be fastened upon them by constitutional law; not even the Legislature can have power to interpose. Every influence counteracting the saloons will then be crushed out, and the liquor power will become more intolerant and overbearing, and will become rich by oppressing the poor. Where it now costs the State $23,000,000, it will then cost it $50,000,000; where it now destroys annually 5,000 lives in the State, it will then destroy 10,000 lives. It will powerfully neutralize the influence of churches and Christian organizations. It will attract the worst elements from other States and from foreign lands, and make the State the dumping-ground for the offscourings of the world. It will greatly neutralize the law in Iowa and Kansas, and start a wave of resubmission that will sweep every prohibition State.

It will, like the slave power, become so defiant and tyrannical, that it will trample upon every right of the people, and provoke a bloody revolution.

But all this will be obviated if prohibition triumphs. Gov. St. John, after making a tour of the State, predicts that we will poll enough votes in Nebraska to carry the prohibitory amendment, but he doubts if they will be counted. There is no doubt the machinery of both the old parties in the State is being used in favor of license. The Farmers' Alliance is strong in Nebraska, and their speakers openly declare that there is another box they will fall back upon, if the ballot-box fails to record the people's decision. I tremble in view of the revolution that seems to be just at hand.

M. A. GAULT.

"THE RESURRECTION."

MILLVILLE, Ont., Aug. 5, 1890.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—In your issue of July 24th under the above heading, Rev. S. F. Porter has quite a lengthy article on 1 Cor. 15:35, in which (if I understand him right) he undertakes to prove that there has not been, and never will be, a resurrection from the dead, of human bodies; and seems to base his theory on 1 Cor. 15:50, "Now this I say, brethren, that flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God," etc. Now, while I agree with Bro. P. "that the animal man shall rise out of the ground and live forever, is all a fancy and a sham," and while I believe that the souls of Abel and Seth ascended to heaven at the time when their body died; and that the soul of the penitent thief went to Paradise the day he was crucified: and that the souls of all true believers ascend to heaven at the hour when their body dies. Yet, I see nothing in all this, nor in any part of the argument used by Bro. P., to prove that there will be no resurrection of the human body; or, that the declaration of Christ, John 5:28,29, "For the hour is coming in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice and shall come forth, they that have done good unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of damnation," will not be fulfilled. Paul was not mistaken when he preached that, "There shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and of the unjust" (see Acts. 24:15), or when he said, "For the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed" (1 Cor. 15:52). See also 1 Thess. 4:15, 16.

Now, if the foregoing passages do not teach that there will be a resurrection of the dead bodies of the human race at the second coming of Christ, will Bro. Porter please tell the readers of the Cynosure what they do teach? Certainly, they teach that there will be a resurrection of the dead! And if (as Bro. P. teaches, and as I believe) the souls of all believers rise to heaven at the time their body dies, then surely it must be their dead bodies that will be raised up the last day. (See John 6:39,40,44,54. "Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you, that God should raise the dead?" Acts 26:8. The dead body of Lazarus came from the grave at the call of Jesus! And, doubtless, Jesus came from the grave in his human body! He said to his disciples, "It is I myself, handle me and see, for a spirit hath not flesh and bones, as you seem to have," Luke 24:39. Compare John 20:20-27. "And the graves were opened, and many bodies of the saints which slept arose, and came out of the graves after his resurrection," etc., Matt. 27:52,53.

The Apostle Paul says, concerning those who shall be living at the coming of the Lord, "They shall be changed in a moment, at the last trump." Why should not the resurrected bodies of the dead saints be changed also? They will be raised and also changed, and "be fashioned like unto the glorious body of Christ," Phil. 3:21. The fact that many bodies have been burnt to ashes and scattered to all winds; and others buried in the sea, etc., is no proof that they shall not all come forth at the blast of the last trump. "For the sea shall give up the dead which are in it." (See Rev. 20:13.) For with God nothing shall be impossible! The soul is immortal, and cannot die! Yet, in the work of regeneration by the Holy Spirit its disposition is completely changed, so that, from having been an enemy to God the regenerated soul becomes a friend and a loving child. (See John 3:3, and 1 John 3:1, 2, 9, 10.)

It is the mortal body which is to be raised from the dead and put on immortality, at the sounding of the trump of God. "And when this mortal shall have put on immortality" there will be no more flesh and blood, but a "spiritual body, in which the saints will rise to heaven, "to be forever with the Lord." Elijah had on his mortal body, and even his old mantle up to the moment in which he entered the whirlwind, which carried him up to heaven, 2 Kings 2:11, and so it will be with all God's children. Bro. Porter's theory of the death-bed being the place of the resurrection seems to me very much like the teaching of "Hymenaeus and Philetus, who, concerning the truth, have erred, saying that the resurrection is passed already," etc., 2 Timothy 2:17, 18. When the trump of God shall sound, I trust, that Bro. Porter and I, together with all the ransomed of the Lord, will be clothed upon with a spiritual body and so be forever sinless and happy with the Lord.

Since writing the above, I have read the replies by A. M. Paull, and also by Rev. H. H. Hinman. Bro. A. M. Paull says Enoch, and Elijah, and Moses are in heaven, saying, "for the record in their cases is clear, their bodies went with their spirits!" Now all that can be known of the body of Moses is, "He died, and the Lord buried him in a valley in the land of Moab," etc., Deut. 34: 5, 6. There is no more Scripture authority for saying that the body of Moses is in heaven, than there is to say that the bodies of all the saints that have died from the time of Moses to this day, are in heaven. As to there being a place somewhere between earth and heaven, divided by a gulf into a paradise and a place of torment, where the souls of saints and sinners are detained after death until the resurrection, it is in my opinion all a myth. The phrase paradise is found but three times in the New Testament. The spirit of Christ and of the penitent thief went there, while their bodies hung upon the cross, Luke 23: 43. And in 2 Cor. 12:2, Paul says, "I knew a man caught up to the third heaven!" and in verse 4 he says, "he was caught up into Paradise." Doubtless "the third heaven" is the same as "paradise." And in Rev. 2:7 it is said, "To him that overcometh, will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the Paradise of God." It was not in "Hades," but in heaven, where John saw "the tree of life," (see Rev. 22:2.) And it was not until after the resurrection of the dead, (see Rev. 20:12-13.) In Rev. 22:14 it is said, "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city." Whatever is meant by "the tree of life," it is to be found only in the heavenly city, which is "the paradise of God," or "the third heaven." Now, when Peter said concerning David, that "he was not yet ascended into heaven," he doubtless referred to David's body, which, of course, remains in the grave. And, when Christ said to Mary, "Touch me not, for I have not ascended to my Father," he referred to his risen body.

I see Bro. Hinman is in doubt "as to what is meant by the preaching to the spirits in prison." I suppose his theory about Hades leads him into a mist, as I think such a theory is likely to land every one who embraces it, into a region of skepticism! I believe the explanation of 1 Peter 3:18, 19, 20, by A. M. Paull, to be contrary to the general teaching of the Bible. I think Rev. S. F. Porter in his article, "From Earth to Heaven," in the Cynosure of July 17, has given the true Scriptural theory of that somewhat obscure passage. The idea is this, Christ, by his Spirit, preached through Noah, to those antediluvians, who rejected the Gospel he preached, and are now in prison awaiting the final judgment, (see 2 Peter 2:5.) It was the Spirit of Christ that spoke through all God's prophets in old time, (see 1 Peter 1:10-13.)

R. S. MORTON.

A SECRET SOCIETY SENSATION.

GREENFIELD, O.

The Daughters of Rebekah here are trying to keep sweet, serious and silent under circumstances which outsiders consider trying. A few weeks since one of the "Bekah" men kidnapped a young man after dark! who, rumor says, was too much interested in one of the sisters in high standing (in the lodge). They clothed themselves with authority by their secret law and took him to a private law office of one of the parties, where they thought they were sure of their victim, and could proceed to handle him as their wonderful lodge consciences would dictate. After asking what they were going to do with him, and receiving unsatisfactory and mysterious answers, the young man (who is not a member of any lodge) looked about him for some way of escape. Finding egress impossible by doorway, he leaped from the second story window to the pavement below, alighting unhurt. It is the general opinion he would have been severely dealt with, or that he would have mysteriously disappeared as others have done. The participants in the disgraceful affair are citizens in high standing, one being a prominent lawyer and ex-mayor and the other a "good" business man, both members of the M. E. church. The woman in question has a husband able and competent to defend her. She is no friendless outcast—no, indeed the humanity they pretend to uplift must be able to lift themselves.

A MASON'S WIFE.

PITH AND POINT.

IOWA COLLEGE FREE.

It is not our wish to have any secret literary or other societies in the college. Your position is wise for the nation, for every community, for all our public or private institutions. Secrecy imperils every interest of the Republic.—J. M. CHAMBERLAIN, Librarian Iowa College.

SOME NONOGENARIANS.

I am in the 91st year of my life. I have taken the Cynosure for many years and I consider it the best of papers. It is the last paper I shall give up. In my own handwriting.—S. A. BUMSTEAD, Decatur, Ill.

Within the same week came the above and another renewal from Girard Cutler of Beloit, Kans., aged 92, but "erect and smart." The third was from a dear aged brother in Senecaville, Ohio, who writes:

It is in my heart to say that I prize you above all the papers I take and have taken for years. I need not tell you my reasons which I think are sufficient for my preference. I am now a frail old man, ninety-one yesterday, and can hardly see, but make out by the help of a magnifying glass which I hold in my right hand, to read your fair and edifying pages every week. I have been an openly avowed Anti-mason for seventy years and know enough to abhor it as a foe to Christ and all good government, one of the chief devices of the devil to lead men away from Christ. I am glad we have a paper that is not afraid to speak out boldly and plainly to expose all secret orders, that only produce confusion and corruption in church and state.—REV. W. G. KEIL.

A GOOD WAY TO RENEW.

Yours is at hand, and I will say that after twenty years of reading of the Cynosure I don't know how to do without it. I think it the best reform paper that I know of. Please send it along, and I will see if I can't get one subscriber at least to send with my own renewal soon.—JOHN MOTTER, Lyons, Kansas.

A LIFE WORK.

I got twenty-three signers to the petition, all of whom ought to take the paper. I shall keep on trying to get subscribers as long as I live and am able to work. I sent a box of fifty pounds to brother I. R. B. Arnold last month to Marietta.—HARRIS JOHNSON, Nebraska City, Iowa.

WHO WILL RULE THE NATION IN 1896.

The saloon curse is terrible, and I am glad you hit it squarely. Then Catholicism is menacing our liberties and national life and will with the help of the liquor power control this nation in 1896. So you, my brother, will never see your fond hopes of crushing secrecy, or the triumph of righteousness over sin until the wicked fall at Christ's second coming.—H. A. MYERS, Bloomington, Ill.

CHEERING WORDS.

God bless you in your noble and necessary work.—REV. I. L. BUCHWALTER, Lisbon, Iowa.

My eyesight has failed and I cannot read the Cynosure, but I have it read to me. We must have it.—S. MATHEW, Canby, Or.

I wish that I could give you twenty subscribers. But I must do as I can. The reform from secretism will be a slow one, and not meet success in my day, but we are to hope on.—REV. T. S. HUBBARD, Tunbridge, Vt.

LITERATURE.

SCRIPTURAL POLITICS, THE WAY TO NATIONAL SALVATION. By Thos. M. C. Birmingham. A plea for the recognition of Christ as the Ruler of nations, and his Word as the law of nations. Pp. 198. Price 25 cts. For sale by J. M. Birmingham at Altus, Franklin Co., Arkansas, or J. D. Barbee, Agent M. E. Publishing House, Nashville, Tenn.

This is a remarkable theme for the present age, and this is a remarkable book that treats of it. Such extracts as these begin the introduction, and are to it like the overture to an opera: "There are no politics like those which the Scriptures teach."—Milton. "The leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations."—Rev. 22:2. "Open thou mine eyes that I may behold wondrous things out of thy law."—Psa. 119:18. "The theocracy of the Jews was intended to be the type, in substance, if not in form, of all righteous government."—Bishop Pierce.

Beginning with such an exalted strain it is a work of no small literary merit, as well as force of reasoning that shall continue it to the end. But the author fully realizes what is demanded of him, and points out with clearness and cogency that the governmental ideas of redemption are those best fitted for the nations of men; that the Bible is the best text-book of morals and politics and jurisprudence the world has ever known or ever will know; and that the more the statutes of a state approximate to the laws of God the greater will be the prosperity of the people. The economic value of obedience to the laws of God is first ably maintained. Next that intelligence is promoted by obedience to those laws, also the health of the people. Nations so obeying are most powerful; justice is best maintained between man and man by them. Such nations can only be truly free and such truly enjoy the blessings of peace. To secure these enviable results the author prescribes four essential steps: first the nation must be Christianized in character; second, it must acknowledge the authority of God in Christ; third, the laws must be in harmony with the Bible; and fourth, the Bible must be honored and studied in every school, high or low. Thus would a real Utopia be found, and the true one. In the course of the argument the prohibition is strongly endorsed, and reference is also made briefly to secret societies, systems of religion in which some trust against the plain command of God. The author evidently does not understand fully the extent and power of the lodge system. The reign of righteousness and peace which his book makes us all desire can never come while a secret lodge poisons the moral atmosphere.

The Reunion. The first number of the new church union magazine appears in handsome monthly form from Berea, Ky. Brethren Fee, Hinman and Browne are editors, and Rev. C. E. Hulbert of Detroit, corresponding editor. The first number is largely occupied with the report of the Dayton Conference. The object of the magazine, stated in the prospectus, is to promote the "visible" union of all true believers in our Lord Jesus Christ, an end most surely desirable, but not easily secured. It is a temptation in such efforts for organic unity to neglect that spiritual oneness without which the other is a hollow mockery. We should say therefore that spiritual unity rather than "visible" should be the prime object of such movements, for the latter will come when the first is secured, and not before. While it may be said that every sect is seeking to promote this real harmony, yet special efforts need to be made, but with care that a sectarian spirit does not take possession of such a movement, thus making the cure worse than the disease.

Our Day for August opens with a paper of remarkable interest by Miss M. F. Cusack, better known perhaps by the title, "The Nun of Kenmare." Miss Cusack boldly, yet with candor and forcible argument, charges that the Roman Catholic church is more deeply responsible for the curse of the liquor traffic than any other one organization. We have taken the liberty of reprinting a portion of her paper in our Temperance department and ask for it a careful reading. Pres. J. E. Rankin, now at the head of Howard University, writes on the "Ethical Culture of Afro-American Youth," and maintains that their peculiar character, history and other surroundings must be carefully regarded. Rev. Leroy S. Bean on "The Cause and Cure of Lax Divorce" writes more of the fact than of its causes, and we fail to find any important remedy suggested, but the general one of a revival of public morality. Dr. Geo. F. Magoun contributes a very forcible analysis of the decision of the Wisconsin Supreme Court and answer to the fallacious reasoning of that body. Mr. Cook's Monday lecture on "Fraudulent Elections" and "National Aspects of Ballot Reform" is timely, and helps us to understand the situation in Congress where the Election bill still waits for the Senate's approval.

Biblia for the current month opens with some account of the Egypt Exploration fund, what it has accomplished, how officered, etc., also the same for the Palestine Exploration fund, which has supplied for twenty-five years the money for very important surveys and discoveries. In continuation of these topics are other articles on Oriental research, as "Joseph in Egypt," "Mutilation of Monuments," Di Cesnola's Explorations, "Records of Assyria," "Amelia B. Edwards," etc.

OBITUARY.

Many of our reform workers will ever remember in the city of Rochester, N. Y., especially those public laborers who have enjoyed his open-hearted and generous hospitality, the genial and expressive face of that earnest and faithful friend of every good cause, our brother and co-worker, the Hollander, Bro. Henry De Jough, of 78 Saint Joseph street, nor can they forget his quiet, amiable and kind-hearted wife, of whose sympathy and aid he was not long ago deprived by her death. And now that unfortunate daughter, whose whole being bespoke such great and long-continued suffering from asthma and other distressing complaints, has just been taken away and brother De Jough is left alone.

But he mourns not as "those who have no hope!" Both the mother and daughter were devoted Christians; and it is wonderful how this noble daughter bore up under the years of pain and distress it was her unhappy lot so long to endure. She now rests from her sufferings and the sweet memory of her virtues does follow her.

Miss R. B. DeJough came into this world in 1840, and departed this life for a heavenly in 1890, fifty years of age.

"Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep,
From which none ever wake to weep."

It is a great source of comfort and consolation to Bro. DeJough to know that his pious and devoted wife and affectionate daughter in Christ are now together and with their loving and loved Saviour "this day in Paradise!" And that this "Paradise" is no half-way or midway "Sleepy Hollow," somewhere between earth and heaven, as some vaguely affirm. The penitent and believing thief hanging on the cross with the dying Son of God was not assured he should be with him in a half-way house somewhere; but should "be with him in Paradise!" Surely this Paradise could be no half-dead and half-alive, no half or wholly unconscious existence! He was to be "with Jesus!" the everlasting and eternal Son of God, and that not in a place of death or dreaming, but of everlasting life. "Because I live ye shall live also," says Christ. "I go to prepare a place for you that where I am there ye may be also."

G. W. C.

If the ladies would abandon cosmetics and more generally keep their blood pure and vigorous by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, naturally fair complexions would be the rule instead of the exception, as at present. Pure blood is the best beautifier.

As you like it. Gray and faded whiskers may be changed to their natural and even color—brown or black—by using Buckingham's Dye. Try it.

BEECHAM'S PILLS cure Bilious and Nervous Ills.

A GREAT WAY TO MAKE MONEY.

MR. EDITOR:—The "help or the talents" plan of raising money for mission work was new to me, but our Mission Band each agreed to invest $3.00. Some always made wonderful investments, but I felt sure I could not even double my "talent." During the week while reading your paper, I concluded to buy a Plater. I sent $3.00 to W. H. Griffith & Co., Zanesville, Ohio, got a Plater and went to work plating spoons, knives, forks and jewelry, and in a month I had cleared $116.40, and done all the work after school; in three months I cleared $406. One of the girls got a plater which her brother has been using to plate band instruments and large articles. He is doing splendid. In this way you can not only be generous to the mission but do much to assist at home. This is certainly a rare chance to make money with ease and rapidity.

MARY BRITTEN.

SECRET SOCIETIES CONDEMNED.

BY GREAT MEN IN THE STATE.

George Washington, in a letter written a year before his death: "I preside over no lodge, nor have I been in one more than once or twice during the last thirty years."

President Millard Fillmore, J. O. Spencer and others: "The Masonic fraternity tramples upon our rights, defeats the administration of justice, and bids defiance to every government which it cannot control."

Chief Justice John Marshall: "The institution of Masonry ought to be abandoned as one capable of much evil and incapable of producing any good which might not be effected by safe and open means."

John Quincy Adams: "I am prepared to complete the demonstration before God and man, that the Masonic oaths, obligations and penalties cannot by any possibility be reconciled to the laws of morality, of Christianity, or of the land."

General A. W. Riley: "I hold that the difference between the Christian and a heathen religion is, that one has morality and the other has not. And when our churches refuse to speak of such subjects as slavery, liquor-selling and secret societies, they are becoming heathen religions; that is, religions without morals."

Charles Francis Adams: "Every man who takes a Masonic oath forbids himself from divulging any criminal act, unless it might be murder or treason, that may be communicated to him under the seal of fraternal bond, even though such concealment were to prove a burden upon his conscience and a violation of his bounden duty to society and to his God."

Charles Sumner: "I find two powers here in Washington in harmony, and both are antagonistic to our free institutions, and tend to centralization and anarchy—Freemasonry and Slavery; and they must both be destroyed if our country is to be the home of the free, as our ancestors designed it."

Disraeli, Lord Beaconsfield: "In conducting the governments of the world there are not only soveraigns and ministers, but secret orders to be considered, which have agents everywhere—reckless agents, who countenance assassination, and, if necessary, can produce a massacre."

General J. W. Phelps: "All secret organizations are links of one and the same chain which binds men to evil and not to good. The Masonic lodge is the parent source from which all similar modern organizations have emanated and this lodge is now in active operation in every city and considerable village of the country swaying our parties and churches; filling our offices, secular and divine, with its partisans; shaping our political destinies; and teaching a spurious and corrupting morality subversive both of the Christian religion and of free institutions."

Thurlow Weed: "I now look back through an interval of fifty-six years with a conscious sense of having been governed through the Anti-masonic excitement by a sincere desire, first to vindicate the violated laws of my country, and next to arrest the great power and dangerous influences of secret societies."

A. M. Sullivan, Irish Leader: "I had not studied in vain the history of secret, oath-bound associations. I regarded them with horror. I knew all that could be said as to their advantages in revolutionizing a country, but even in the firmest and best of hands they had a direct tendency to demoralization and are often on the whole more perilous to society than open tyranny."

Hon. Edward Blake, leader in Canadian Parliament, March, 1884: "I am not in favor of State recognition of any secret societies. I have never joined one, though many of my best friends are members of secret societies. But I believe the tendency of secrecy itself to be injurious. I believe that it brings with it the possibility of evil; I believe that it involves a certain amount of sacrifice of individuality and independence, and gives very great facilities for the misleading of members by designing leaders—very great and mischievous facilities for that purpose." "I believe that a great deal of the trouble, social and political, that has occurred in those countries [Europe and America] is due to secret societies."

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 20 cents per pound:

1. Historical Sketch—National Christian Association.
2. Address to American Pastors.
3. Freemasonry in the Family.
4. President C. G. Finney on the duty of Christians towards the Lodge.
5. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
6. Modern Heathenism.
7. Ministers at Rival Altars.
8. Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodge.
9. Secrecy and Sin.
10. Selling Dead Horses.
11. History of Masonry.
12. Despotism Character of Freemasonry.
13. Freemasonry, a Christ-excluding Religion.
14. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.
15. Nathaniel Colver, D.D., on Masonry.
16. Hon. Wm. H. Seward on Secret Societies.
17. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).
18. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?
19. D. L. Moody on Secret Societies.
20. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?
21. John Quincy Adams on the duty of American Voters.
22. Chapters in American Politics.
23. Masonry vs. Prohibition.
24. Decline of the G. A. R.
25. Christianity and Odd-fellowship. Part 1, 4 pages; part 2, 4 pages.

The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—20 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

NEW ENGLAND DEPARTMENT.—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent, No. 309, Tremont St., Boston.

WASHINGTON DEPARTMENT.—W. B. Stoddard, Agent, No. 215, 4½ St., Washington, D. C.

WESTERN DEPARTMENT.—Rev. C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Du Page Co., Ill.

PACIFIC DEPARTMENT.—Rev. M. H. Nichols, 712½ Clementina St., San Francisco, Cal.

COLLEGE AGENT, Rev. S. F. Porter, Cynosure office.

STATE AGENTS.

Minnesota, E. Hanson, Minneapolis.
New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimball, New Market.

Pennsylvania, Rev. J. T. Michael, 2942 Westmont Street, Philadelphia.

Alabama, Rev. G. M. Elliott, Selma.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
Rev. H. H. Hinman, Berea, Ky.
Nathan Callender, Montdale, Pa.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa.
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.
Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
Rev. E. Mathews, Long Island City, N. Y.
E. Barnetson, Haskinville, N. Y.
Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
A. W. Parry, Annawan, Ill.

FINNEY ON MASONRY.

The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75c; per dozen $7.50. Paper cover 50c; per dozen $5.00. No Christian's library is complete without it. Send for a copy in cloth and get a catalogue of books and tracts sold by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

THE N. C. A. BUILDING
(The gift of Philo Carpenter.)

AND OFFICE OF
The Christian Cynosure,
221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO
The National Christian Association

PRESIDENT—Bishop Milton Wright, Dayton, O.

VICE PRESIDENT—Rev. Geo. R. Milton, Elgin, Ill.

COR. SEC'Y and TREASURER—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SECRETARY—Rev. E. R. Worrell, Washington Heights, Ill.

DIRECTORS—T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, John Gardner, J. M. Hitchcock, Jerome Howe, G. R. Milton, Wm. Pinkney, J. P. Richards, Alexander Thomson, E. Whipple, E. R. Worrell.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS.

NEW ENGLAND.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic Conn.; Sec'y, Miss E. E. Flagg, Wellesley, Mass.; Treas., Z. Graves, Harris, Mass.

ALABAMA.—Pres., Prof. Pickens; Sec., G. M. Elliott; Treas., Rev. C. B. Curtis; all of Selma.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., Rev. G. R. Milton, Elgin; Sec., A. H. Hiatt, Jr., Wheaton; Treas., Ezra A. Cook, Chicago.

INDIANA.—Pres., William H. Figg, Reno; Sec., S. L. Cook, Albion; Treas., Benjamin Ulsh, Silver Lake.

IOWA.—Cor. Sec., C. D. Trumbull, Morning Sun; Rec. Sec., W. L. Enlow, Birmingham; Treas., Wm. Crawford, Washington.

KANSAS.—Pres., J. S. T. Milligan, Denison; Sec., S. Hart, Leocompton; Treas., J. A. Torrence, Denison.

MAINE.—Pres., Isaac Jackson, Harrison; Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W. Goddard, West Sidney.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt, Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., S. B. Sjoblom, Fergus Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul; Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., B. F. Miller, Eagleville; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec., A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

NEBRASKA.—Pres., S. Austin, Fairmount; Cor. Sec., W. Spooner, Kearney; Treas., J. C. Fye.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., A. A. Hoyt, Littleton; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., Isaac Hyatt, Gilford Village.

NEW YORK.—Pres., Prof. A. R. Dodd Houghton; Sec., Rev. W. A. Hazlett, Belmont; Treas., P. D. Miller, Newfane.

OHIO.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Parry; Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Senecaville; Cor. Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Senecaville.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., Nathan Callender, Montdale; Cor. Sec., E. J. Chalfant York; Treas., J. C. Young, Custer City.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. W. Wood, Baraboo; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie.

HAVE YOU EXAMINED

The list of Books and Tracts for sale by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. Look it over carefully and see if there is not something you want for yourself or for your friend. Send for full catalogue to 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.

The Christian Cynosure.

J. BLANCHARD, EDITOR.

HENRY L. KELLOGG, ASSOCIATE EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, AUGUST 21, 1890.

WALDENSTROM AND INGERSOLL.

The Cynosure has made its readers acquainted with Dr. Peter Waldenstrom, professor of theology, editor and member of the Swedish Parliament, who traveled in America last year. We have just received a translated extract from Dr. Waldenstrom's narrative of his travels in the United States, sent us by the excellent Dr. T. N. Hasselquist, theological professor and president of Augustana College, Rock Island, Ill. We have known Dr. Hasselquist for the last thirty years, and if there is a saint this side of heaven, he is one; and by his founding and administering Swedish collegiate institutions, he has evinced great ability and soundness in the faith.

The extract sent us gives Dr. Waldenstrom's description of Robert G. Ingersoll, whom he seems to have fallen in with, and to have been fascinated with him. It seems that Ingersoll made the impression that his infidelity was, in part, caused by his disgust at the dogmas in theology which Dr. Hasselquist and others have taught. We are sorry for this. We fear the beloved Waldenstrom is not an exception to the proverb: "Great men have great failings." We hope to submit the extract to the editors of the Missions Friend and Chicago Blade; and give our views of this Scandinavian controversy next week.

Since writing the above we have submitted the above mentioned extract to the editors of two Swedish papers, who pronounce it substantially correct. We, therefore, give the extract in this number. We are sorry Dr. Waldenstrom ever wrote it; and sorry that it will be read by and mislead thousands of Scandinavians. It is replete with errors. Ingersoll holds no "position in the U. S. army," is a coarse, habitual blasphemer, is not "a strict and zealous temperance man," is a defender of frauds, and a tricky, contemptible character. We have known him for many years.

SATAN'S DEVICES.

The war upon American slavery was opened by Benjamin Lundy in 1821, when he started his "Genius of Universal Emancipation." Garrison joined him in 1829. Lundy's paper was like an alarm bell rung out on a still dark night. The year before he issued his first number, Congress was violently racked by "The Missouri Compromise" question; but Lundy blew his trumpet for "Universal Emancipation;" and wherever it echoed slavery trembled, and finally fell; though it had $1,200,000,000 invested in human flesh, protected by the Constitution of the first nation on earth, and defended by its armies.

When the movement began for the destruction of slavery, the Presbyterians and Congregationalists in the United States had more intelligent anti-slavery principle in them than existed in the world beside; and precisely those two bodies were set to discussing extremes of theological doctrine, so that the slavery discussion went on without them, till it came into politics and they were forced to vote "aye" or "no."

The "Taylor and Tyler" controversy occupied the attention and divided the Congregational churches of New England; and built a theological seminary at Hartford, Conn., which was not needed; and to-day, the churches have forgotten what that controversy was about.

A similar theological furor seized the Presbyterians, and split the denomination in 1838; and put all their church property into lawsuits. The Old and New School fight lasted until slavery fell. Then, in seven years the warring fragments reunited, neither party confessing any errors!

If the time, mind and money expended in those two controversies had been turned on the discussion of slavery, there would have been so many Union men in the South that secession would have been impossible, and the war avoided.

It is an old proverb, that "The devil never works with a bad man while he can get a good man to work with." He certainly, since Christ, has given his profoundest attention to the best men.

The Scandinavians are confessedly among our best and most pious people. They have some 200,000 church members, and they are, by book, opposed to secret lodges, which are eating out the vitals of this country. It is to be hoped that they will profit by the errors of Congregationalists and Presbyterians and "be not ignorant of Satan's devices."

AFRICA AND AMERICA.

The attitude of the nations of Europe towards Africa is to-day not unlike their relation to America three hundred years ago. Until recently Africa has been almost an unknown world. Exploration and discoveries during the past forty years have developed the possibilities of that vast continent, and the great nations are rivals in their desire for territory and dominion. The Germans who, as a people, have never been successful colonists, are vying with Great Britain for the possession of the eastern half of the continent, while Spain, whose golden era was in the days of her America colonies, now falls behind Belgium and Portugal in African possessions. Five sixths of the whole continent have within a few years been apportioned among the nations of Great Britain, France, Germany, Portugal, Spain, Belgium and Italy. But in some respects their relation to Africa is widely different from what it was to this continent. America was sparsely settled, had abundant harbors, genial climate and fertile soil. Africa has almost an entire absence of harbors, a vast population, a coast climate that is most inhospitable, while cataracts obstruct the navigation of her rivers. There is doubtless space for many more people than now dwell there, but it is safe to say that there will never be any considerable colonization of Europeans in tropical Africa unless it is on the high tablelands of the interior. This can only take place when railroads have been built. The African races are markedly different from the aborigines of America. The latter have shown but little physical stamina, and have melted away before advancing civilization. The Africans, in spite of their savagery, continue to increase, and but for their wars, would leave but little room for their paler brethren. It is not so much for new homes as for commercial advantages that the European nations court Africa. Railroads will doubtless be built. They are already piercing the continent on both the eastern and western coasts. The present operations of Great Britain and Germany in East Africa will necessitate the building of one or more roads to connect the great lakes of the interior with the Indian Ocean; while France, who is pushing her conquests from Algeria on the north to the Congo, will sooner or later build a road across the great desert, and connect the valley of the Niger with the Mediterranean. Europe will give to Africa civilization and Christianity. Her governments may have authority there, as Great Britain has in India; but unlike America, they will never possess the land. Africa will be for Africans.

—An esteemed Lutheran exchange reprints the old list of so-called "Connecticut Blue Laws", which are so well known as a fraud, the work of a lying Tory preacher, that we wonder any American editor should be deceived into publishing them as anything else.

—Bro. Stoddard who writes from Boston this week with enthusiasm, says that city and its suburbs ought to be full of Cynosure subscribers. There is anti-lodge sentiment enough if you get to it. Bro. J. P. Stoddard stopped at Willimantic and Worcester on his way to the Hoyt's-Grove meeting.

—Pastor L. C. Koehler, of the Grace Evangelical Lutheran Church of this city, has lately had a considerable number of copies of the Cynosure distributed among his people. The secret society question is being warmly discussed among them, and the watchful pastor hopes to get a number of them to subscribe for the paper.

—Any one contemplating a home in Kansas or Dakota may find it to their interest to obtain description and terms on a quarter section in those States from the National Christian Association. The Dakota 160 acres is in a county whose inhabitants are largely of that frugal and industrious people from Norway and Sweden. Write to this office.

—The tract by Rev. W. F. Crafts on the opening of the World's Fair on the Sabbath day published by the Western Tract Society of Cincinnati is sold at 25 cts. per hundred copies. It is a strong document and should be scattered by the hundred thousand without delay to help form a public sentiment in favor of Sabbath observance at the Fair.

—We took note last week of a criticism of the funeral services of General Fisk in Every Thursday of New York. We learn that a printer's mistake caused portions of two articles to appear as one. There was no lodge ceremony over Clinton B. Fisk, only the church was too small for such an occasion. But there was a Masonic performance over another prominent Methodist's remains in another State.

—We print another article on the disputed questions of the resurrection and heaven and hell. Several brethren have written, but to print all would unjustly tax our columns. Doubtless there could be a number of replies written to Bro. Morton's letter, since the views of Christians vary more or less widely. The Cynosure cannot settle all these questions to the satisfaction of all. We do believe it possible for any man to do so uninspired of the Holy Ghost. Therefore we will stop here, and ask brethren Clark, Glassford, Smith, Higbee and others to kindly be satisfied with what has been said, though they may not wholly agree with either view that has been printed.

—Immanuel Swedish Lutheran Church, Rev. C. A. Evald, pastor, seems to have solved a part of the problem presented by the secret societies, and so far as insurance or relief is concerned have no use for the lodge. Pastor Evald has a large congregation, many of whom are working men, to whom the invitations of the secret societies to provide for their families in time of sickness or injury, have a peculiar force. Immanuel Church provides a relief fund of $6 per week for any of its members who may be sick or injured. In case of death $500 is paid to the friends of the dead member. There are 350 members of the church joined in this society. The secretary has no salary, and attends to all the business with ease. It is worth noting that this agreeable official was for a long time in very poor health until he joined the church insurance society. Since that time he has been a well and strong man.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—We are expecting to greet Bro. J. P. Stoddard and his wife on a special Western visit soon after the grove meeting at Ware. In fact this word was hardly in type before Mrs. S. reached Chicago in excellent health and spirits.

—Mrs. V. A. Buck, one of the talented contributors to the Cynosure, has been writing a temperance story, which will appear in some fortunate paper before long. We may safely prophesy that it will be both popular and good.

—Dr. T. H. Hanna, the genial pastor of the First U. P. Church, Monmouth, Ill., is spending the present month in Pennsylvania. He will attend the centennial of the United Presbyterian congregation at Service, Pa., where he attended an academy when he was a twelve-year-old boy.

—Rev. John Harper, of Smithville, Ill., returning from a hearty, sun browning vacation at Cape May, New Jersey, and with friends in New York State, paid the Cynosure a cheery momentary visit last Friday. The United Presbyterian brethren of Smithville have a faithful pastor. God grant them grace to stand with him for Christ against the great lodge foe.

—Bro. Enos W. Shaw, whose labors for the N. C. A. as colporteur and lecturer will not be forgotten in some communities, is now studying law in this city. That he has fine abilities for the legal profession his contribution begun in this number is a brilliant witness. Sustained as they are by strict integrity and industrious and sober habits and the Christian faith, these talents will open to him, we are confident, a useful and successful career.

—Bro. A. D. Zaraphonithes, the Greek missionary now residing in Wheaton, Ill., returned home a few days since from a prolonged tour among the churches of Wisconsin, Iowa and Minnesota. During this time he preached at Diamond Bluff, Wis., to the people who were the next Sabbath overwhelmed in the Lake Pepin disaster.

Of this he wrote lately in our columns. He hopes to attend the missionary convention in Indianapolis, Sept. 3-9. The Cynosure hopes also to be represented in that meeting.

—John Greenleaf Whittier, our Quaker poet, has attended the little Friends' church in Amesbury, Mass., where he lives, for a period of fifty years, but has never been known to "speak in meeting"; he always puts himself in the background on public occasions, and can never be prevailed upon to read one of his own productions before an audience.

PLANS FOR FUTURE WORK.

FROM THE CORRESPONDING SECRETARY.

At a Mission Conference recently held in Minnesota among our Swedish friends, a committee was appointed to confer with the National Christian Association about holding conventions on the secret lodge system. Eight places have been chosen, and an organization is contemplated for each Mission district. I have also had correspondence with another party with the view of arranging for a still more extended series of lectures, and I mention the above in order that friends in different sections may take steps at once to prepare for lectures during the fall and winter. If arrangements can be made with this office some time ahead, two things will result,—first, a better preparation of the field and consequent better results; and second, a saving in time and money.

Our Minnesota friends can carry on the work, as they are arranging for it, at a total cost of about $15 for each place. This pays the entire salary and traveling expenses of the lecturer and organizer. It is a sum within the reach of a multitude of communities. Let each anti-secrecy church at their next business meeting appoint one of their members a committee to write to this office about a lecture, time of meeting, etc., and to raise the money necessary to pay the expenses. Will you not prayerfully consider this at once and write to this office.

Many interesting letters have been received from prominent members of the Anti-secrecy League, for which we wish to thank the writers, and from these we hope in the future to give the readers of the Cynosure certain interesting extracts. The Prohibitionists of Ohio honor themselves in nominating for a member of the Board of Public Works our staunch friend, Capt. J. M. Scott. The chairman of the State Central Committee is a seceding Freemason, worthy leader. The object of secretists, says Rev. B. A. Imes, is power,—their policy, silence. Hence to question candidates starts discussion, which, if it please God, shall not end until the secret lodge power is broken.

Through some misunderstanding a wrong address was given our Pacific agent in a recent Cynosure. The correct one is found on the seventh page of this paper. Some letters received from ministerial workers in San Francisco speak highly of Bro. Nichols, and he will doubtless be a great blessing to his field if the friends co-operate with him. All can write him, and welcome him to his new mission. He has had a varied experience,—born in Ohio, uniting with the M. E. church, entering the ministry, was a presiding elder, was a missionary for about four years in India, until failing health compelled him to return to this country. His two years' labors in California have been a special preparation, it would seem, for his present position.

A tract handed to a gentleman on the train served as an introduction, after which he said, "I have always been and still am opposed to secret societies, though I have joined a little one, the secrecy of which doesn't amount to much, because I wanted the benefits of cheap insurance." The above serves to raise the question whether reformers make enough of an effort to furnish such benefits? It is one of the great strongholds of a multitude of secret orders. Shall we say all life insurance is of the devil, or seek a wiser way, and remove temptation to the promising of obedience and perpetual secrecy for the sake of an insurance which may be had without those Satanic attachments. The gentlemen mentioned above did not know that there were open insurance companies, like the Total Abstinence Insurance Co., of America, equally cheap, and to say the least, fully as reliable.

Some of the churches have adopted the insurance idea as part of their church work. The secretary of the benefit society of one such church in Chicago told me this week that they had over 200 members. That the cost per member was about $10 per year. Whenever any member died each was assessed $1.50, and the family receives $500. That whenever a member was sick, he received $6 per week. That all was open, anyone could come into their meetings. The success of this benefit association proves how silly is the claim that they must be secret to protect themselves against imposition.

To sum up the above you are requested to use the N. C. A. as a lecture bureau, and to begin your plans at once for meetings to be held in October and later; second, write to candidates for public office, enclosing the Testimony of Statesmen on Secret Societies, and ask them their views; third, let the Pacific Coast friends welcome their agent and help him; fourth, spread information about the open mutual benefit associations, and where practical let churches form such societies, seems the wise thing to your co-worker,

W. I. PHILLIPS.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

The G. A. R. encampment in Boston.—The Catholic Review on secret societies.—Ecclesiastical politics in the Methodist church.—Other matters.—The waning summer.

For the last few days Boston has given herself heart and soul to entertaining the Grand Army. Not only were seven-story buildings crowded even to their roofs by spectators, but the public statues were made to do duty by the gamins who climbed them, untroubled by any scruples of reverence or dignity. However, in spite of the jam and crowd there were no serious accidents and general good order prevailed. Of the ladies on the stand with the Presidential party, Mrs. Logan seemed to attract the most attention. The addresses were of the stereotyped sort usual on such occasions. The remarks of one on-looker, as he stood watching the monstrous procession which was five hours passing a certain point, that "he could not see as the Grand Army decreased much in spite of the large death roll," is an observation which many have made; but a considerable number of those who gathered yesterday belonged to the new order of Sons of Veterans, and had never worn the blue, much less been on a field of action. There is nothing to hinder the G. A. R. from flourishing like a green bay tree, long after the last survivor of the Civil War is under the sod, thanks to this sagacious and far-seeing arrangement on the part of its political managers.

In Vermont the agent of the "Order of Unity," one of the bogus concerns that promise to give their deluded victims $1,000 in seven years for $300, has been arrested and held for trial, for soliciting insurance without a license. This has been the work of one brave journal in St. Johnsbury, and shows what the press might do to put down these orders or at least stop their growth if they were not so largely controlled by the lodge power. The proper place for these "agents," who go about gulling a too confiding people with these ridiculous schemes, is in the States Prison; and I was about to add the same of the legislators whose criminal ignorance or carelessness gives them their powers for mischief.

The Catholic Review in a recent issue notes approvingly the late editorial in the Congregationalist on secret societies, but with comments of its own taken of course from the Roman Catholic standpoint. Says the Review:

"It is possible that the Protestant body may yet be called upon to anathematize the secret societies whose growth at the expense of the sects simply indicates that the people are losing their interest in Christianity. Yet sectarianism is the potion invented by the Protestants themselves, and now stupefying their people."

Rome herself is the most monstrous example of sectism the world has ever known, and her authority rests on the same foundation as that of the lodge,—unquestioning obedience to superiors. But letting alone all this, truth is truth even when spoken by an enemy. When the Congregationalist strikes a note of alarm, even the most conservative Protestant must "allow," to use the parlance of our Southern brethren, that the danger is indeed imminent. Yet the denominational rivalries and bitter theological controversies among Protestants have made room for the lodge to enter and grow to its present proportions. The Indepen- dent reports a gain of 1,100,000 in the united membership of all the churches, Catholic and Protestant, and say triumphantly: "This is in itself an overwhelming refutation of the assertions we hear now and then from various quarters that Christianity is losing its hold upon the people, and the churches are declining." Meanwhile Zion's Herald in a series of articles on church politics is disclosing a state of affairs in that denomination which looks as if churchianity rather than Christianity had got the upper hand. Secret combinations headed by ecclesiastical politicians, with the same end in view as their secular brethren, office and preferment, have invaded the church of the Wesleys till even its chief organ feels that it is time to sound a halt. But when the church fosters the lodge; when she allows its audacious claims and plays second fiddle to it in a hundred ways, is it strange that lodge methods should creep into her civil polity? It is certainly an encouraging sign that from every quarter of the Christian church to-day, there seems to be a thrill of unrest and vague alarm, as if she were about to awaken at last and recognize her secret foe.

Mr. Moody's institution at Northfield is to have an addition in a training school for women which will combine the usual Bible study with a thorough course of instruction in cooking and dressmaking. A woman doing evangelical work among the poor must find her power for usefulness increased ninety per cent if she understands these womanly industries. I have no doubt that Phoebe, Dorcas, Lydia, and all those other noble women of the apostolic era were adepts in the household art of their time, and had that same practical efficiency which Mrs. Stowe celebrates under the name of "faculty," but which like genius is a divine gift.

The death of John Boyle O'Reilly removes one of America's best poets. A nobler tribute to a departed reformer was never paid than his poem on the death of Wendell Phillips; which always seemed to me the only one I ever saw worthy to stand by the side of Lowell's "Crisis." Particularly true and sweet was his characterization of the moral inspiration and heroic qualities that made him such a radical of the radicals.

"His life was a ceaseless protest, and his voice was a prophet's cry. To be true to the truth, and faithful though the world were arrayed for a lie."

It can hardly be said of Americans as a people that "they garnish the tombs of the prophets." Wendell Phillip's grave is still without a monument; so is Henry Wilson's. Of course Dorothy Dix has none, and indeed one is rather glad that the country which neglected to pension this noble woman has not added insult to injury by building a costly memorial over her sleeping dust. Mrs. Lydia H. Sigourney, the morning star of that galaxy of female poets of whom New England is so justly proud, still sleeps under her lichen-covered stone slab in the old cemetery at Hartford.

The shortening days are not the only sign that summer is waning. A group of girls pass by with great bunches of our now national flower, the golden rod; and only the other day I saw by the wayside a certain blue blossom whose name I do not know, but which from earliest childhood I have never seen without a startled sense that autumn was already at the door. With the cool, crisp days of fall, are we all planning to begin our work for truth and right with added vigor and renewed zeal? God grant it.

ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

PAPERS FOR THE FREEDMEN.

Books, papers and tracts for the Freedmen, to be circulated through I. R. B. Arnold's River Mission, should be sent by freight to Huntington, W. Va. Express is too expensive. Over one thousand papers a week are distributed at the floating chapel. Remember, packages too heavy for mail are to go by freight to the above address.

THE N. E. MEETING—Special notice is given to remind the friends in New England of the grove convention at Ware, opening on Friday of this week. Hoyt's Grove where the meeting is to be held is at some distance from the railway station. Friends who expect to attend will please send word to that effect to Mrs. L. M. Hoyt on what day and on what train they expect to arrive and arrangements will be made to meet them, and save some expense in transportation to the Grove.

THE HOME.

"HE THAT WINNETH SOULS IS WISE."

Proverbs 11:30.

BY A. H. BAILEY.

Some strive for honor, and some for fame,
Some labor for pleasure and some for gain;
But there's greater wealth than of earth's gold,
A wealth that cannot be measured or told,
To all who keep before their eyes,
"He that winneth souls is wise."

When trials come and friends grow cold,
And hope well nigh gives up its hold;
When life seems like a dreary road
Which we fain would leave, with its heavy load,
Then think of Him who in sorrow died;
O think of the spear that pierced his side;
Think then of the blood drops all the way
That marked the path to Calvary.
Think then of the agony, scoffing, cries,
That in winning souls He might be wise.

'Tis not enough for us to tell
That our souls are saved from death and hell;
'Tis not enough to give our means
To spread the Gospel's glorious themes;
'Tis not enough for me to know
Jesus was precious long ago;
'Tis not enough to meet and pray
With fellow pilgrims on the way;
Nor yet from time to time to tell
How Jesus in my soul doth dwell.
But there is work to do. Arise!
For "He that winneth souls is wise."

'Tis not enough for us to wear
A blood-washed robe in the City fair;
'Tis not enough if there is no gem
To glorify heaven's diadem;
We need the stars in the golden crown
Which we cast at the feet of Jesus down.
Oh, can we ever realize
That "He that winneth souls is wise!"

When from this world I'm called to part
Nothing so much could cheer my heart
When on my God I fix my eyes,
Than to hear him say with glad surprise,
"In winning souls you have been wise."

Pioneer, Ohio.

SOME SINGULAR THINGS.

Consistency is not the distinguishing feature of most men. Indeed, inconsistency seems to be the rule and not the exception. There is a wide discrepancy between preaching and practice, between profession and life. One thing is taught; another thing is lived. Men tell us how to do, and don't do, neglecting their own counsel. Good maxims are piled in heaps, placarded on the walls, printed in the newspapers, sung in song, but the maxims become the rule of but few lives. Life with many seems to be a fine art not to do what they profess to be doing. "I have my credo" is a boast of a man who believes nothing. Liberal religion consists in denying to everybody everything but its own style of liberality, "Orthodoxy is my doxy; heterodoxy is your doxy," as some one has said. An agnostic is a fellow who knows everything that he has no means of knowing. New theology is often only the black memory of a lie that was embalmed two thousand years ago. Old theology is often something that Christ and Paul never dreamed of.

If anybody asks for specifications of the prevailing inconsistency we are not obliged to travel far to find them. They lie right along the highway of every practical life. There are men and churches that really and soundly denounce gambling. They are totally opposed to betting, lotteries, pool-selling and all the forms of gambling. The idea of chartering a Louisiana lottery causes a cold shiver to run down the perpendicularity of their spinal column. Gambling is a sin to be reprobated in public and in private, and whoever is guilty of it meets with deserved reprobation. But stop a minute. A church fair is in progress and the man who denounces gambling takes a share in everything that is to be raffled for; he bets a box of cigars—no, caramels, so good a man don't smoke—that his candidate will win at the polls; he wears a hat obtained in the like way; he takes a little stock in every preposterous notion that promises to pay seventy-five per cent. on the investment, when he knows that seventy-five per cent. investments are hundred per cent. frauds, but he never grumbles, no, not he!

Here is another who grows pale at the sorrows of wage-earners. The idea of a pittance a day being paid for ten hour's work shocks him. He is a philanthropist. He strikes hands with all the noble men and women who are interested in moral reform. He feels bad—none too bad—that poor women are obliged to work at starvation wages. He wants a society formed, a newspaper printed, a committee named, a petition circulated to stop this great wrong. But when he goes to buy a shirt, at the making of which some woman earns a sixpence or a shilling a day, he declares the price exorbitant and screws down the dealer, though he knows the life of the maker is stitched into it to meet the demands of such as he. One way of helping wage-earners is to pay full price for goods. When the buyer screws down the price he screws the life blood out of some poor woman who has been compelled to make the article at starvation wages.

A minister preaches against monopoly. Just what monopoly is he does not seem to know, but he fancies that he is hitting something. A monopoly! A combine! A trust! Awful! A man sells potatoes; if he has more calls than he can attend to he takes a partner—that is a combine. If he has better facilities for buying and selling potatoes than anybody else he controls the market, he grows rich, he unites with other men and organizes "The Royal Potato Company." That is monopoly. The minister preaches against monopoly until the ears of the people tingle, but when he wants money to build a church, endow an academy or found a college he goes first to the potato monopolist and asks him to make the first subscription. Just now we are not discussing monopoly or anti-monopoly, but consistency and inconsistency.

We might continue. Men believe the Bible and act just as if it were a book of fables. They denounce popery and run into ritualism. They preach economy and practice waste. Verily, "Consistency, thou art a jewel."—Christian Inquirer.

THE CHURCH OF THE WORLD.

If the world will not come to Jesus, must we tone down his teachings? if the world will not rise to the church, shall not the church go down to the world? Instead of bidding men to be converted, and come out from among sinners, and be separate from them, let us join the ungodly world, enter into union with it, and so pervade it with our influence by allowing it to influence us. Let us have a Christian world. To this end let us revise our doctrines. Some are old-fashioned—grim, severe, unpopular. Let us drop them out. Use the old phrases so as to please the obstinately orthodox, but give them new meanings, so as to win philosophical infidels who are prowling around. Pare off the edges of unpleasant truths, and moderate the dogmatic tone of infallible revelation. Say that Abraham and Moses made mistakes, and that the books which have been so long held in reverence, are full of errors. Undermine the old faith, and bring in the new doubt; for the times are altered, and the spirit of the age suggests the abandonment of everything that is too severely righteous, and too surely of God. . . . Spiritual religion is despised, and a fashionable morality is set up in its place. . . . Be fashionable and think with those who profess to be scientific—that is the first and greatest commandment of the modern school; and the second is like unto it—do not be singular, but be worldly as your neighbors.—Selected.

NO HARM IN IT.

He who is ambitious to do only that which is no harm, is not a reformer. To walk by his rule is to stop at the point where doing good begins. About doing questionable things you ask, "Is there any harm?" While you ask that question there will be no aggression; continue to ask it and you will backslide. Give the Lord and your conscience and righteousness the benefit of the doubt. If there be a suspicion of harm about it, don't do it. The lowest grade of blameless acts is that in which there is no harm. To work in the no harm field is to work alongside Satan's ground. The no harm Christians are in doubt about social card playing, dancing, theater-going, conceding a little to the world, doing things to please respectable sinners; better to be quiet, they say, and not antagonize people. Nobody ever says, "There is no harm in the prayer-meeting, in family worship, in reading the Bible, in prayer." These things are so far from the no harm line that they are in the land of safety. To do them is not only no harm, but great positive good. He who does them faithfully, heartily, and steadfastly, grows in strength and becomes a power for good. He gets farther and farther away from the no harm place, and looks for the measure of good he can do—the riches and abundance of the harvest he may produce. To do no harm is to do little good—to begin as a drone, and end as a cumberer of the ground, fit only for the fire. The man to whom was given one talent was a no harm man. There could be no harm, he thought, in wrapping his talent in a napkin and putting it away. The men after God's mind put their capital to positive use, and they grew rich.—Christian Worker.

NO NAPPING!

"What's the secret of your success, Jackson," inquired the superintendent of the young conductor, who had managed to take his train successfully every time over a dangerous place, where others invariably had had serious accidents.

"No napping, either by conductor or men, when passing over dangerous places," was the reply.

A good rule, I thought, for travelers over life's pathway, as well as for those on the railroad. If only the dangerous places in life could be mapped out as accurately and marked as plainly, perhaps they would be heeded and avoided. The trouble is to convince people that there is any peril and of the need of wide-awake watchfulness.

That young man, a stranger perhaps to the allurements of a great city, does not think he is about to pass into danger when he accepts the invitation of a comrade to visit the public gardens or the baseball park on Sabbath, instead of going, as he had intended, as he promised his mother he would, to church and Sabbath-school.

"No harm just to go once. One must see something of the world." He lulls his conscience to sleep with these excuses, and goes. But he is not exactly the same young man in the evening that he was in the morning. He has lost something he could ill afford to lose. The first glass of beer has been taken. Vice has become a little more familiar and not so gross and loathsome. His sense of right and wrong blunted. The tempter has gained the victory, and it will not be so easy to resist him when he makes his next attack. In a word, he has been napping in the presence of the most terrible danger; he has been guilty of a criminal lack of watchfulness. Already he has lost much, and the end will be a wreck, not of body alone, but of mind and soul.

The skating rink did not seem a dangerous place to that innocent young country girl. She had accepted an invitation of an aunt to come to the city and attend school. The family next door allowed their daughter to go to the rink, and Stella gained permission to accompany her.

It was a bewildering, fascinating scene to the quiet girl, and she longed to be among the merry skaters and try her skill with the giddy throng. This was no new thing to Dora. Night after night she passed in this way. Stella's evenings were soon spent in the same manner. Instead of improving her advantages to the utmost by reading and study, and then renewing her health and strength by sound and refreshing slumber, she was away until nearly midnight in that unwholesome, demoralizing place.

Bad enough truly, for health, intellect and morals were all injured because some one was napping instead of watching and guarding this young life as she neared this dangerous place.—Selected.

SECRETS OF SUCCESS.

As boys and girls grow toward man and womanhood, they naturally feed on dreams of their future life, and look forward with hope to gaining success. They see that it follows and comes as the reward of honest, faithful work, which they are willing to give. Many, however, forget that the work must be mixed with brains, that there must be intelligence as well as industry.

A rustic lad, anxious to climb the ladder of fortune, willing and industrious, hired himself out to a thrifty farmer on the outskirts of a large city. Hitherto he had labored hard all his life, following the reapers and mowers in the field, or the wood-choppers in the forest, as each day's task was given him, as a faithful drudge. His work had required no thought or intelligence, only simple obedience and industry. The first day of his new life he was sent to sell a load of pumpkins in the city.

At evening he returned, discouraged, with his cart still heaping full, saying he had driven faithfully, all day long, through all the streets of the city, and nobody had said a word to him about pumpkins.

If persons are willing to learn from their failures, they can conquer most of the difficulties of life. Dr. Blake, as a boy, was a student at Rome, and so remarkably slow and dull as to be considered a dunce. This was, in part, owing to great indistinctness in speech, and a stammering tongue. One day he modestly gave his opinion in some discussion among his comrades, and to his surprise he was rudely interrupted by "What business have you to speak, who are the dunce of the college?"

The wound was keen and sharp. The poor boy did not reply, but turned away, with the harsh words burning into his bosom. He reflected that the cruel speech met no rebuke from any one, but was silently accepted by all. That must be his character among them, and the opinion of all, even of the kindest of his friends. For this rough rebuke he felt he ought to be thankful.

And now what was to be done? The reproach must be wiped away, the character changed. So he wrote on a slip of paper: "The Dunce of the College," in plain, unmistakable letters, and placed it in his desk, where, unseen by others, it should be ever before his eyes. This sharp, stinging goad was ever at his side.

He strove to speak slowly and carefully, and after a time cured the defects of speech. By close, faithful effort he soon rose to a post of honor in his class and in the school. His comrades never knew the secret of his success.—Selected.

MY KINGDOM.

A little kingdom I possess,
Where thoughts and feelings dwell,
And very hard the task I find
Of governing it well;
For passion tempts and troubles me,
A wayward will misleads,
And selfishness its shadow casts
On all my words and deeds.

How can I learn to rule myself,
To be the child I should,
Honest and brave, and never tire
Of trying to be good?
How can I keep a sunny soul,
To shine along life's way?
How can I tune my little heart
To sweetly sing all day?

Dear Father, help me with the love
That casteth out my fear;
Teach me to lean on thee and feel
That thou art very near;
That no temptation is unseen,
No childish grief too small,
Since thou, with patience infinite,
Dost soothe and comfort all.

I do not ask for any crown,
But that which all may win;
Nor try to conquer any world,
Except the one within.
Be Thou my guide until I find,
Led by a tender hand,
Thy happy kingdom in myself,
And dare to take command.

—Louisa M. Alcott.

An effort to introduce a prohibition plank, says the Prohibition Era, in the platform of the new Farmers' Union Labor party of Michigan was met with a storm of jeers and hisses. W. J. Baker, who introduced the resolution, was denounced as a liar and scoundrel and his argument in favor of prohibition as d—d nonsense.

On earth, we have nothing to do with success or its results, but only being true to God and for God; for it is sincerity, and not success, which is sweet savor before God.—Robertson.

In all evils which admit a remedy, impatience should be avoided, because it wastes that time and attention in complaints, which, if properly applied, would remove the cause.

Faint not; the miles to heaven are few and short. There are many heads lying on Christ's bosom, but there is room for yours among the rest.

TEMPERANCE.

ROMANISM AND THE RUM TRAFFIC.

[Miss M. F. Cusack, "The Nun of Kenmare," in Our Day for August.]

That power which has so largely closed the doors of the public schools to the members of the Catholic Church could, with one word, close the liquor saloons to-morrow. Why does not the Church of Rome act on the question of the liquor saloons as she has acted on the question of public schools? I hope I shall not be accused of prejudice if I say, it is because the Church of Rome is very lenient as to several forms of disloyalty to God, and is very stern as to any form of disloyalty to herself.

Let me ask the reader to consider facts, and not be turned from them by any fear of prejudice. The question is far too serious to be passed by lightly, involving, as it does, matters of such moment to this vast nation. It is a fact that a man may be recognized as an excellent Catholic by his church, although he is habitually in a state of inebriation, and although he sells illegally the poison of drink to thousands of the members of his church day after day. If the same man were to send his children to the public schools, he would be deprived of the advantages of his church membership, and if he were not to reach a death-bed repentance, he would be denied Christian burial.

No one will deny that by far the largest percentage of crime in this country is caused either directly or indirectly by the use, or rather by the abuse, of spirituous liquors. The most ardent prohibitionist and the most determined enemy of prohibition meet here on grounds which admit of no dispute. Political parties may differ in temperance matters, but the stern fact as to the moral consequence of excessive indulgence in spirituous liquor cannot be denied, nor have I ever heard it excused. But there is yet another fact which is equally undeniable, and sadly painful. He would be a bold man who dared deny that the members of the Church of Rome are the persons who form the American criminal class in the largest proportion. This is a fact which must be looked at boldly and firmly by the world at large, if the world is wise enough to face a startling state of affairs. It must be looked in the face still more boldly by those who are workers in the great cause of temperance. Of what use to urge the closing of saloons, when the saloon-keepers are members of the most powerful political and social organization in the world, and when their church at least allows saloons to be kept open?

It would be well if Protestants would try to understand the moral teaching of the Church of Rome before they give it more power than it has already. Surely it is not untrue, and not being untrue it is not uncharitable, to say that a church which requires obedience to its own arbitrary mandates, under the severest penalties, and condones easily any failure in Christian duty is not worthy of the name of a Christian church.

If the Roman Catholic Church ever set herself seriously as a church, I will not say to suppress the liquor traffic in this country, but merely to control it, the evils caused by drink would speedily become a thing of the past. But Rome will never do this. She needs the political power of the saloon. She needs the dollars of the saloon-keeper. If statistics could be obtained of the amount of money given by the liquor-saloon keepers of the United States to the Church of Rome, the record would amaze a startled world, and perhaps would arouse Christian people to some action. But such statistics will never be obtained, though a fair approximation may easily be reached.

Rome does not account for the money she receives, nor does she publish a balance-sheet. Rome is the only church in existence which shelters her expenditure under the mantle of her religious authority. The church is infallible; how can you then dare to ask any question as to the disposal of what she receives from you?

From time to time the Church of Rome makes a show of devotion to the cause of temperance. It is just as little sincere as the claim that Rome teaches "Christian doctrine." Protestants are deceived, all the time, believing that the professions of Rome in this matter are trustworthy. But there are Jesuit priests who know too well what all this profession is worth. It is a most serious injury to the cause of truth, rather we may say to the cause of God, that such deceptions are practiced, and that they are successful. Surely, however, it is time for Christians to take these professions for what they are worth. The subject is so important that I say again, but not without grief and regret, that Protestant honesty is no match for Roman Catholic trained Jesuit duplicity.

If Rome is sincere in her denunciations of the liquor traffic, why does not she suppress it? Let Protestants who may think that I am or any one else is actuated by prejudice against Rome in taking a decided stand on this subject, ask themselves the question what there is to prevent Rome from suppressing the liquor traffic if she pleased. We all know with what persevering and relentless denunciation she pursues those who support the public schools. We know she can do what she pleases and as she pleases. Clearly, then, she does not please to help the cause of temperance effectually or she would do so. The question is a grave one for many reasons. Here is a church which claims to be above all other churches in her "holiness," yet her children are sinking into the very pit of perdition day after day, and hour after hour, and she will not lift up her voice with decision to save them. What hope for this nation when Rome has absolute control, as she claims she will soon have? Righteousness exalts a nation. What righteousness will there be when Rome has power to enforce her ideas of virtue? Already we may see the fruit of Romish rule in our large cities. What will be the fruit when Rome has absolute power to act and to hinder the action of others?

We are very far from wishing to condemn every Catholic bishop or priest in this connection. There have been and are a few like Bishop Ireland, who have done their part in the cause of temperance. Unhappily it can be shown that these few have been the noble exceptions to the general rule. Their several failure, and the marked discouragement which they have met with, only go to prove what I advance here, that Rome is at best indifferent to the subject of intemperance. I might say more with perfect truth; I might say that Rome encourages intemperance, for she certainly does so when she sets the seal of her approval on those who devote their best energies to the cause of intemperance. She does not deny church membership to rum-sellers, as most Protestant denominations do.

Protestants know so very little of the true inner state of the Roman Church, and judge so entirely from externals which are purposely deceptive, that they cannot form a correct judgment on the most important points. And what makes matters worse is that Protestants have no idea that they are being deceived, and almost resent the idea that such deception is possible. A careful study of the history of the Church of Rome in her dealings with her own people when she had unlimited power would soon remove this misapprehension, which, if not removed, may yet prove the cause of the most serious evil, and of evil which will be irreparable.

From time to time, as I have said, some little movement is made by the Romish Church in this country to help forward the cause of temperance. A few meetings are held, a few speeches are made, Protestants think something is being done at last. They never were more mistaken. Talk does not cost anything. It can always be pointed to as an evidence of interest, but what has begun in talk ends in talk. There is no controverting the fact that Rome has power to make her people temperate, and that Rome does not use that power.

I wish to add here a strong warning to Protestants, one which I trust will be taken at least for what it is worth. Protestants are always ready to join Romanists in any movement in which Romanists show any willingness to join with them. This I believe to be a fatal mistake. It is a serious drawback to many who are trying to loosen the chains which binds them to Rome. It promotes a false charity. The Roman Catholic bishop or priest who appears to you so liberal is simply smiling at your credulity, while he compliments your liberality. No fear that he will practice a like liberality. He will take anything you will give him in the way of compliments or cash, but he will give you nothing in return, except a carefully worded commendation of your liberality. Rome cannot change, she is illiberal on principle and all the time, for she cannot alter her creed. But she can, and she does put on an exterior appearance of liberality for the simple purpose of deceiving you, even while she laughs at your Christian charity in allowing yourself to be deceived by her.

A good priest in De Land, Florida, has lately dared to say a few honest words on these subjects. Most assuredly he will be made to feel the effects of his boldness, but his words are well worth the consideration of those that think that the Roman Catholic Church has the least idea of promoting the cause of temperance. He says, writing in the Roman Catholic Baltimore Mirror: "Ask what has brought to prisons and almshouse, to reformatory and orphanage, to dive and brothel, so many children of the church. Trumpet-tongued comes back the answer, drink—drink." Then he asserts, and his statement has never been contradicted, that while there are many so-called Catholic Temperance Societies; the most of them are merely such in name, and that in fact they condone the very evils which they are supposed to denounce. In proof of this he quotes the following resolution, which was twice deliberately voted down in the Grand Convention of the Catholic Young Men's National Union. And yet this convention was held up to Protestants as another evidence of the zeal and energy of the Roman Catholic Church in the cause of temperance. The resolution proposed and rejected was as follows: "That the Catholic Young Men's National Union, viewing the saloon as pre-eminently the source of evil to young men, will use its utmost influence, and urge upon the societies connected with it to use their utmost efforts, to prevent Catholic young men from visiting saloons, and also to discontinue by all means the drinking customs of society."

When a Roman Catholic temperance convention deliberately refused to support such a resolution, the less said about Catholic sincerity in the cause of temperance the better.

Of all I wish to say of secret societies, this is the sum:

Secret oaths—

1. Can be shown historically to have often led to crime.
2. Are natural sources of jealousy and just alarm to society at large.
3. Are especially unfavorable to harmony and mutual confidence among men living together under popular institutions.
4. Are dangerous to the general cause of civil liberty and just government.
5. Are condemned by the severe denunciations of many of the wisest statesmen, preachers, and reformers.
6. Are opposed to Christian principles, especially to those implied in these three texts:
"In secret I have said nothing."
"Be not unequally yoked together with unbelievers."
"Give no offence in anything, that the ministry be not blamed."
7. Are forbidden in some portions of our Republic by the civil law, and ought to be in all portions. Many European governments hold Freemasonry under grave suspicion as a mask for conspiracies against throne and altar. In Prussia, Poland, Russia and Spain Freemasonry is prohibited by law.
8. Are forbidden to church members by some Christian denominations, and ought to be by all.—From address of Joseph Cook to Christian Conference, April, 1890.

—The Salvation Army in Paris has been reinforced by a Salvation Navy. A church boat floats on the river Seine, near the Pont de la Concorde. "The floating temple," as the Parisians call it, has been named the "Herald of Mercy." In the hall amidships there is accommodation for two hundred persons.

—During the summer months many pastors, says the New York Witness, have placed their Sabbath evening prayer service in the hands of the young people of the Christian Endeavor Society, and often with the best results. This is evidence that these pastors have not been wisely managing their churches heretofore.

—Judge McSherry, of Frederick, Md., filed his opinion July 15 declaring that baseball playing on Sunday by men who are under contract for the season at stated salaries, no one being admitted to witness the games except those who pay, can be construed as nothing else than work, and therefore comes within the purview of the prohibitory statute.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE NEW TESTAMENT.

LESSON IX.—Third Quarter.—Aug. 31.

SUBJECT.—Entering the Kingdom.—Luke 18:15-30.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child shall in no wise enter therein.—Luke 18:17.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

DAILY READINGS.—M.—Luke 18:15-30. T.—Matt. 19:13-29. W.—Luke 9:57-62. T.—1 Tim. 6:6-21. F.—Psa. 103:1-22. S.—Matt. 18:1-14. S.—Mark 10:13-30.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. The children brought to Jesus.—vs. 15-17. Our lesson opens with one of the sweetest and most familiar episodes in the whole life of Jesus. We learn from it (1) that he desires the love and service of little children. (2) That their natural inclination is to come to him. This is implied by the word, "suffer." (3) That to thwart or hinder them in any way is to bring upon ourselves the deserved indignation of the Master. (4) That the childlike nature is a prerequisite to entering the kingdom of heaven. It follows from this that it is our duty to take all obstacles out of the way of the children coming to Christ. It is not enough that we do not, like the disciples, actively hinder them. Satan is eager to get the children, and to this end his agents are always busy. Sometimes they offer young boys a drink of beer or something stronger, or a cigarette; and thus train them to become drunkards and smokers. Or advantage is taken of a child's innocent love of sweets, and he is offered candy flavored with spirits. Another, and full as potent a way, is by vile reading. The ways are countless in which Satan tries to tempt the children away from Christ. What if the whole Christian world were as eager to win them to Christ! How many more living members the church would have to-day. To become as little children means first of all a teachable, docile spirit. Men will not believe what God says, and so the world is full of the lust of gain and the debaucheries of pleasure; and as a consequence every form of unhappiness and unrest. They are like an unchildlike child who thinks he knows more than his father does, and inquires the reason for every command when it is his concern to obey and not to question. The pride of their human wisdom has shut more souls out of the kingdom probably than any gross sin.

2. The young ruler.—vs. 18-23. This young man is an example of one who refused to become as a little child. We cannot say that he was self-righteous. It was rather self-ignorance that made him say that he had kept all the commandments from his youth up. This was probably true as regards the letter, but his very question, "What shall I do to inherit eternal life?" shows that he felt his need of something more than this mere outward morality. We are told in another place that "Jesus beholding him loved him." This testimony from one whose perfect purity must have felt an attraction to all like natures, shows us that however he failed in the testing, he possessed elements of character that might have put him in the front rank among Christ's followers. But there was a weak spot. He loved his riches. Probably not on their own account so much as for what they would give him—social position, the cultivation of aesthetic tastes, and opportunities for mental culture. Perhaps he shrank from the probable comments of the world if he should give them all up to follow Christ. But he was not like the rich fool in the parable, thinking of them only as means to sensual gratification. Had this been the case he would not have come running to Jesus with such a question on his lips. We must rather look on him as the type of a very moral and highly cultured class which exists among us to-day. We all know most pure and loveable men and women who are kept away from Christ by some hidden reason. He requires some act of renunciation that they are not ready for, and they turn away sorrowful. Such natures cannot content themselves like lower ones with mere ease and good living, and they go through life unrestful and dissatisfied, yet with no hope of the other. Almost within the kingdom, yet missing it because they will not give up all to win all.

3. The reward of following Christ.—vs. 24-30. The Scriptures pronounce a "woe upon him who loadeth himself with thick clay," he that instead of possessing his riches as God's steward is possessed by them as their slave. But none lose their reward who renounce everything for Christ. It is only when we offer up our lives to him that life in turn offers up to us all its deepest delights and truest pleasures. The reward of our service must begin here. He who does not feel that he has received manifold more even in this life than he ever gave up may well doubt the sincerity of his renunciation.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—The Student Missionary Movement is still growing, and bids fair to overwhelm and run clear over the denominational boards. One of the requirements as stated by Mr. Speer, the Traveling Secretary, is: "Determination that, whether the Board accept them or not, they will have the Gospel preached in the untouched lands even though they die."

—In the United States 14 per cent of the population, on an average, is in the Sabbath schools of evangelical denominations. Chicago and New York fall below this average, only reaching 11 per cent, while Philadelphia rises above it, to 16 per cent. The Sabbath school attendance of the United States is one-half that of the entire world. Four-fifths of the other half belongs to Great Britain.

—Rev. Dr. Justin D. Fulton, the apostle of anti-Romanism, has been unanimously called to the pastorate of the new Grace Baptist Church, Montreal. He will not make his decision until the fall.

—The centennial of the first United Presbyterian theological seminary in the United States was celebrated at the seminary, Rancoon township, Beaver county, by the United Presbyterians last week. All that remains of the old seminary building are the walls of the two-story log hut, the interior divisions having long since rotted away. The services were attended by a large number of prominent members of the United Presbyterian church.

—Though Roman Catholic missionaries have been in Korea for two hundred years, the statement is made that they have never issued the Bible in the native language. They have translated the whole of the New Testament, but have not put it into print, and the only copies, made by hand, cost from $10 to $20 each. This is the way that Roman Catholicism sheds abroad the light of Gospel truth.

—The first sermon preached for the Methodists in Boston was delivered July 11th, 1790, by Rev. Jesse Lee. He stood on a table under the old elm tree on the Common. This event was celebrated July 11, near the site of the historic elm. A table, made expressly for the occasion, was used at the services, and it is to be presented to the New England Methodist Historical Society as a relic of the anniversary.

—The Salvation Army is arranging for a great demonstration in this city. It will be held in the First M. E. church at 8 p. m., Aug. 19th, also in Farwell Hall, Aug. 20th at 8 p. m. The object of these meetings is to make known the success of the Army work in India and to raise funds for the same. These meetings will be conducted by Commander and Mrs. Ballington Booth of New York, assisted by Staff-Capt. Jai Singh, Capt. Kanta Kantabella, Lord Ranta Pala, the saved Buddhist priest, and Lieut. Abdul Aziz, the saved Mohammedan sheik all from India, also Brig. and Mrs. Fielding, and scores of local officers and soldiers. The strength of the Salvation Army is 9,200 officers, and about 150,000 soldiers. The twenty-fifth anniversary meeting was held last month in the Crystal Palace, London. It was the largest religious meeting on record. There were present 25,000 uniformed soldiers, also 45,000 Christian friends and sympathizers.

MR. MOODY'S NEW SCHOOL.—It is the purpose of Mr. Moody to open a new training school in Northfield, Mass. quite distinct from his other enterprises. The object of this school is to combine a course of Bible study with thorough drill in two practical departments, dressmaking and cooking. It is designed to meet the needs of ladies who desire the ability to reach needy homes in a practical way, and who wish to equip themselves for more efficient work as Bible teachers, in their Sunday-school classes, and all kinds of church and mission work. How comfortless are thousands of homes from ignorance of the simplest details of housekeeping. Many a wife would welcome a little advice and instruction from a kind Christian woman who was able to give such help, and whose effort she knew to be prompted by a heart warm with interest in the souls of her family. The "Bible Institute" in Chicago, of which Mr. Moody is president works in distinctively Gospel lines, but as its workers go from door to door they find opportunities for giving practical help forced upon them. Many ways of service open to a woman who can instruct in these branches, and through them many a soul may be reached by the Word of God. Mr. Moody opens the Northfield training school in October for two terms of three months each. The best trained teachers will be employed to superintend the three departments. The total expense for one term will be $100. Any one desiring further information may address Miss Gertrude Hulbert, the Revell House, East Northfield, Mass.

LODGE NOTES.

The efforts of the striking trainmen of the New York Central Road to stop traffic were futile. Police protection has been established at the yards of the company. Mr. Powderly says the strike is caused by the apparent effort of the Central officials to break up the labor organizations of the road by discharging prominent members. It is expected that traffic will be resumed to-day on all the lines, yet the strikers say such will not be the case.

The Eastern railroads made special rates for the Odd-fellows, and were promised something like 150,000 excursionists to Chicago at the reduced rates. Well, not 25,000 people came here from the East. The Western roads, on the other hand, contributed something like $50,000 to Generalissimo Underwood's affair. They arranged for a rate of 3 cents per mile for the round trip, or one fare. Then the roads arranged with the management to refund one cent per mile on every ticket to the management.

When the finance and auditing committee of the recent Pythian conclave at Milwaukee concluded its work it was found that there were unpaid bills aggregating $6,000, with no money in the treasury to meet them. The finance committee reported a total cash subscription of $17,828.80, with $1,285 to be collected. The $3,000 which Mayor Peck promised to collect among the local lodges dwindled down to $1,700, but the Mayor failed to pay in the additional $1,300 which he had guaranteed the committee.

The Illinois State convention of the "Ancient Order of Hibernians" meeting at Rock Island a while since passed resolutions tendering to the Catholic hierarchy of this State grateful thanks for advice and encouragement and praying a continuation of the same; favoring a united organization and authorizing the State officers to make all reasonable concessions and honorable efforts to heal the differences of the order in the State. To the same end the following resolution was adopted: "Resolved, That the differences now existing between the A. O. H., in Illinois be left to the arbitration of Archbishop Feehan, of Chicago, Archbishop Ireland, of St. Paul, and Bishop Spaulding of Peoria."

A special from Santa Fe says: The White Cap organization near Las Vegas, N. M., whose outrages recently attracted the attention of the Secretary of the Interior, have become so bold in their depredations that Governor Prince has been compelled to issue a proclamation calling upon them to disband, and he declares that if they do not do so he will order out the Territorial militia, and, if necessary, call upon the United States troops. This band of regulators style themselves Knights of Labor, and have organized lodges through San Miguel county until they now have a membership of 1,500. They have, without any legal cause, destroyed hundreds of miles of fences, turned herds of cattle loose, burned thousands of tons of hay, and destroyed other property, while several men who have opposed them have been seriously wounded by some unseen assassin, or have mysteriously disappeared.

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from Aug. 11 to Aug. 16 inclusive:

J C Card, Rev S A Bumstead, L B Smith, M Morse, S Shroyer, T S Hubbard, Miss A A Wolcott, G W Waterbury, B Ush, J C Cole, A C Staples, C Smith, E Crawford, G Hoskins, S Lewis, W O Percival, J E Pierce, Mrs R Mansfield, Rev O W Watkins, Rev J P Robb, R W Kirkwood.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinions of many prominent college presidents and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25cts each.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

One hundred years ago the first mechanical patent was issued by our Government. It was granted to Samuel Hopkins for making pot and pearl ashes. The total number of patents issued during the century was 433,432.

The Original Package bill, designed to overthrow the recent adverse decision of the Supreme Court, and to secure to the prohibition States the right to enforce their laws against the saloons, passed the House of Representatives on Wednesday, August 6th, and was promptly signed by the President. The Senate bill restricting the act to intoxicants was the successful measure.

Superintendent Porter says that the work of counting the population of the country will be completed before the end of the present month. The population of the United States is estimated at 64,000,000.

First Assistant Postmaster General Clarkson tendered to the President his resignation last week Monday to take effect Sept. 1 next.

The House anti-lottery bill was favorably reported to the Senate Tuesday from the Postoffice Committee, with an amendment providing that newspapers published in foreign countries shall not be excluded from the mails under the provisions of this bill unless, in the opinion of the Postmaster General, they are being circulated for the purpose of advertising lottery schemes in violation of the law.

CHICAGO.

Shortly after the noon hour Thursday every switchman employed in Chicago by the Wabash Company, perhaps 150 in all, quit work, and it was a late hour before a wheel on that system stirred. The failure on the company's part to pay their men on a stated day was the cause of the stagnation in traffic.

A permit has been taken out for the erection of the building that will cover the ground now occupied by the Fair, at State, Dearborn and Adams streets. The permit calls for the expenditure of $3,000,000, which is the largest sum ever specified for a similar purpose in the history of the city. The structure will be sixteen stories high.

CROPS, ETC.

Friday the Minneapolis Market Record estimated the wheat crop of Minnesota and the Dakotas at 93,000,000 bushels. The yield per acre for the State of Minnesota is estimated at 13 bushels; for South Dakota, 10½, and for North Dakota, 11½ bushels.

Reports from Kansas are to the effect that the corn and other crops have been greatly improved by the rain that has fallen generally over the State. In North Dakota the hot weather has decreased the anticipated yield of wheat in some localities, but in others the yield will be fine. In South Dakota, where rains have fallen, there has also been destructive hail. Near Mason City, Iowa, there has been no rain for eight weeks.

J. N. Stearns, one of the leading fruit-growers in Michigan and head of many horticultural societies, after a careful review, says that the failure of peaches, apples and pears has not been so disastrous in twenty-five years. The people of the fruit belt will suffer financially to a serious extent.

General rains fell throughout Illinois, Iowa, and Missouri last week. In Manitoba there was a general rain Monday, and crops are reported in good condition except in districts injured by hail.

COUNTRY.

Chief Justice Corson, of the Supreme Court at Pierre, S. D., last week, handed down a decision affirming the constitutionality of the prohibitory law and giving the county courts full jurisdiction to fine and imprison liquor sellers without interference of grand juries or other courts.

Gov. Humphrey, of Kansas, has issued a proclamation covering Labor Day. This (Continued on 16th page.)

Peculiar

Peculiar in combination, proportion, and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the curative value of the best known vegetable kingdom.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "One Hundred Doses One Dollar." Peculiar in its medicinal merits, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures hitherto unknown.

Peculiar in its strength and economy, Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell than of all other blood purifiers. Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales abroad.

Peculiar in its preparation ever attained so rapidly nor held so steadfastly the confidence of all classes of people. Peculiar in the brain-work which it represents, Hood's Sarsaparilla combines all the knowledge which modern research in medical science has developed.

To itself, with many years practical experience in preparing medicines. Be sure to get only

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—No. 2.....	94	@	95
No. 3.....	96	@	103
Winter No. 2.....	49	@	51½
Corn—No. 2.....	36½	@	38
Oats—No. 2.....	61½	@	61½
Rye—No. 2.....	13	@	50
Bran per ton.....	6	@	9 50
Hay—Timothy.....	10	@	20
Butter, medium to best.....	06	@	10½
Cheese.....	75	@	1 70
Beans.....	1	@	14
Eggs.....	1 25	@	1 40
Seeds—Timothy.....	1 34	@	1 39
Flax.....	02½	@	06¼
Broom corn.....	1 10	@	1 25
Potatoes, new, per bu.....	03	@	07
Hides—Green to dry flint.....	10 00	@	13 00
Lumber—Common.....	15	@	34
Wool.....	4 50	@	5 10
Cattle—Choice to extra.....	1 60	@	4 40
Common to good.....	3 25	@	4 10
Hogs.....	3 70	@	5 25
Sheep.....

NEW YORK.

Wheat.....	1 07	@	1 21
Corn.....	55	@	58
Oats.....	43	@	50
Eggs.....	16	@	18
Butter.....	11	@	19½
Wool.....	14	@	39

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle.....	2 15	@	4 90
Hogs.....	3 30	@	3 80
Sheep.....	3 00	@	4 25

SEE THIS!

The latest, most complete edition.

Over 235 choice

Reform Songs for the Times.

Only 30c a copy, or 20c by the 100.

—AND—

"THE TOBACCO MANIA."

$1 per 100.

For sale here and by the author,

GEO. W. CLARK,

76 W. Montcalm St., Detroit, Mich.

HELPS

TO

BIBLE STUDY

With Practical Notes on the Books of Scripture.

Designed for Ministers, Local Preachers, Teachers, and all Christian Workers.

Chapter I.—Different Methods of Bib Study.
Chapter II.—Rules of Interpretation.
Chapter III.—Interpretations of Bible Types and Symbols.
Chapter IV.—Analysis of the books of the Bible.
Chapter V.—Miscellaneous Helps.

Cloth, 184 pages, price postpaid, 50 cents.

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

WILL SELL FOR

Regular Price.

FIVE CENTS.

Selling Price.

$.10	"REPORT OF THE TRIAL of Rev. J. T. Michael," an Elder in the M. E. Church, for arraigning the Bishops, Elders and Preachers in charge for being Freemasons contrary to the Discipline of the M. E. Church. Paper, 28 pages.	$.05
$.25	"MASONIC DEGREES ILLUSTRATED." Containing all the pass and real words, all the pass and real grips and signs of the first three degrees of Freemasonry, from the time of King Solomon, King Hiram of Tyre, and Hiram Abiff, the Widow's Son, to the present time. Compiled by E. M. Trowbridge. Paper, 39 pages. With certificate and demit showing that the author was a Freemason.	$.05
$.15	"A WOMAN'S VICTORY, or the Query of the Lodgeville Church." By Jennie L. Hardie. Paper, 21 pp.	$.05
$.10	"WASHINGTON SOUVENIR." Portraits of Geo. Washington and his Co-patriots, with their testimony on Freemasonry. Size 18x24 inches. Framed it is an ornament to any home.	$.05

SIX CENTS.

$.10	"SECRET SOCIETIES." A Lecture delivered at Oberlin College, Jan. 9, 1890. By Prof. Henry C. King. Paper, 36 pp.	$.06
$.20	"REASONS WHY Secret Societies cannot be Fellowshiped by the United Presbyterian Church." By Rev. J. W. Bain. Pages 149.	$.06

TEN CENTS.

$.15	"MY EXPERIENCE WITH SECRET SOCIETIES." By a Traveler. Paper, 51 pp.	$.10
$.20	"THE INTERIOR OF SIERRA LEONE, West Africa." A lecture delivered at the Government Practicing School-Room, Freetown, Sierra Leone, together with remarks and addresses of gentlemen present, and the lecturer's replies. By J. Augustus Cole, of Shaingay, W. Africa. Paper, 54 pages.	$.10
$.25	"SKETCH OF THE LIFE OF JAMES G. BIRNEY." His relation to the Anti-slavery movement and place in history. By General William Birney. Paper, 33 pages.	$.10

FIFTEEN CENTS.

$.25	"RELIGIOUS PERSECUTION." An examination of Cardinal Manning's letter in the New York Tribune, on Irish affairs and bearing on Home Rule. By Rev. John Lee. Paper, 83 pages.	$.15
$.25	"THE PURITY CRUSADE." With portraits of some of its leaders. Paper, 114 pp.	$.15

TWENTY CENTS.

$.30	"SONGS FOR THE TIMES," by Geo. W. Clark. Words and Music. Intended for Prohibition and W. C. T. U. meetings. Boards, 152 pages.	$.20
--------	---	--------

TWENTY-FIVE CENTS.

$.75	"BEREA COLLEGE," Kentucky. An interesting history of the founding of that College for white and black in a slave State. Cloth, 87 pages.	$.35
--------	--	--------

THIRTY-FIVE CENTS.

$.75	"LUCILE VERNON, or the Church at Lansington. The experience of a young pastor. A novel. By Rev. W. T. Meloy, D. D. Cloth, 208 pages.	$.35
--------	--	--------

FIFTY CENTS.

$1.00	"NATIONAL SUICIDE AND ITS PREVENTION." The following will show the drift of the book: Measure or Standard of Value; What is Honest Money; Our National Banks; Paper Money; Land Tenure, etc. By O. F. Lumry. Cloth, 224 pp.	$.50
$1.50	"HISTORY OF SECRET SOCIETIES IN FRANCE," or "THE CHADLE OF REBELLIONS." By Lucien De La Haidle. Translated from the French by Gen'l. J. W. Phelps. Cloth, 479 pp.	$.50

Sent postpaid to any address on receipt of the selling price.

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
Wm. I. PHILLIPS, Treasurer,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

IN BRIEF.

Last year Ireland contributed $25,000 to Peter's Pence, while Canada, Mexico and the United States combined gave only $55,000.

The Portuguese nation is said to be one of the least instructed in Europe, the illiterate inhabitants being officially stated at 82 per cent of the total population.

It is said that a woman in Missouri had her husband's name put down on the census enumerator's report as a lunatic because he had sold out two years ago and left Kansas.

Louisiana planters say that the slaughter of alligators has allowed muskrats, the great enemies of the levees, to increase at an alarming rate. South Florida people have discovered that the rapid decrease of the alligator in the peninsula has been accompanied by a corresponding increase in the moccasin, the most venomous of American snakes, and the alligator's choicest food. The saurian is not pretty, but he is a friend to humanity, nevertheless.

The total coinage at the mints of the United States in 1889, as compiled by Director Leach, was 109,140,917 pieces, of a value of $58,194,022.64. Of this sum $21,413,931 was in gold, $35,496,883.15 was in silver and $1,283,408.49 was in minor coin. The number of pieces of each denomination was as follows: Double eagles, 849,756; eagles, 249,885; half-eagles, 7,565; three dollars, 2,429; quarter eagles, 17,648; dollars, 30,729; standard dollars, 34,651,811; half dollars, 12,711; quarter dollars, 12,711; dimes, 8,353,389; five cents, 15,881,361; three cents, 21,561, and one cent, 48,869,361.

Mr. H. M. Stanley, the African explorer, has signed an agreement with Major Pond to deliver fifty lectures in the United States, beginning next November. He will sail for this country with his wife, October 29th, which is four days after he is to receive the degree of LL.D. from the University of Cambridge. Mr. Stanley is to receive $25,000 for his first lecture, which is to be given in New York city, and $1,000 each for the remaining forty-nine, making a total of $74,000 for the fifty lectures. The subject of the lecture is "African Exploration as I Have Found it," and it is to be delivered in eighteen of the principal cities in the United States.

The postage stamp celebrated its fiftieth anniversary this year. The invention is due to Printer James Chalmers of Dundee, who died in 1853, and who finally with his system, the adhesive postage stamp, conquered the whole civilized world. England, fifty years ago, introduced the postage stamp, and according to a decree of Dec. 21, 1839, issued the first stamps for public use on May 6, 1840. A year later they were introduced into the United States of North America and Switzerland, and again, a few years later, in Bavaria, Belgium, and France. One of the most important and valuable collections of postage stamps is in the German Imperial Postoffice museum, which contains over ten thousand postage stamps and other postal delivery devices.

The weather in Great Britain continues cold, windy and wet. Farmers are in dismay at the state of their hay crop, and commence to be anxious about the harvest prospects. In central Europe floods following the rains have laid bare many a highly cultivated district. For the first time during the past fifty years the streets of Innsbruck have been whitened by summer snows. The valley of the Adige, from Bozen downwards, is flooded, and half the town of Trent is submerged. The rivers on the southern slope of the Alps, in the Tyrol, and in Styria, have overflowed their banks. Terrible weather has been experienced in Southern Hungary, and reports come from Germany that the crops have suffered in that country, and that the fruit trees are ruined. It is an ill wind that blows nobody any good, and this failure of the crops in Europe is likely to greatly

BEECHAM'S PAINLESS PILLS EFFECTUAL.

WORTH A GUINEA A BOX.

For BILIOUS & NERVOUS DISORDERS

Such as Wind and Pain in the Stomach, Fullness and Swelling after Meals, Dizziness, and Drowsiness, Cold Chills, Flushings of Heat, Loss of Appetite, Shortness of Breath, Costiveness, Scurvy, Blisters on the Skin, Disturbed Sleep, Frightful Dreams, and all Nervous and Trembling Sensations, &c.

THE FIRST DOSE WILL GIVE RELIEF IN TWENTY MINUTES.

BEECHAM'S PILLS TAKEN AS DIRECTED RESTORE FEMALES TO COMPLETE HEALTH.

For Sick Headache, Weak Stomach, Impaired Digestion, Constipation, Disordered Liver, etc.,

they ACT LIKE MAGIC, Strengthening the muscular System, restoring long-lost Complexion, bringing back the keen edge of appetite, and arousing with the ROSEBUD OF HEALTH the whole physical energy of the human frame. One of the best guarantees to the Nervous and Debilitated is that BEECHAM'S PILLS HAVE THE LARGEST SALE OF ANY PROPRIETARY MEDICINE IN THE WORLD.

Prepared only by THOS. BEECHAM, St. Helens, Lancashire, England. Sold by Druggists generally. B. F. ALLEN CO., 365 and 367 Canal St., New York. Sole Agents for the United States, who (if your druggist does not keep them) WILL MAIL BEECHAM'S PILLS on RECEIPT of PRICE, 25cts A BOX. (MENTION THIS PAPER.)

THERE ARE MANY USES FOR SAPOLIO.

To clean tombstones. To renew oil-cloth. To renovate paint. To brighten metals.
To polish knives. To scrub floors. To wash out sinks. To scour bath-tubs.
To clean dishes. To whiten marble. To remove rust. To scour kettles.

EVERYBODY USES IT.

Dentists to clean false teeth. Engineers to clean parts of machines. Housemaids to scrub marble floors.
Surgeons to polish their instruments. Ministers to renovate old chapels. Chemists to remove some stains.
Confectioners to scour their pans. Sextons to clean the tombstones. Carvers to sharpen their knives.
Mechanics to brighten their tools. Hostlers on brasses and white horses. Shrodd ones to scour old straw hats.
Cooks to clean the kitchen sink. Artists to clean their palettes. Soldiers to brighten their arms.
Painters to clean off surfaces. Wheelmen to clean bicycles. Renovators to clean carpets.

EVERY ONE FINDS A NEW USE.

THE MERRITT
$15 TYPEWRITER
USES METAL TYPE
Caps & Small Letters
No $100 MACHINE CAN DO BETTER WORK
AGENTS WANTED
CHAS. F. STOKES MFG. CO.
293 & 295
WABASH AVE. CHICAGO

We have special Machines with large, plain type, designed for the use of Ministers and Lecturers.

If interested in BICYCLES, send for Catalogue. We have the largest assortment in America.

benefit the farmers of Ontario, Manitoba, and the Northwest Territories, where the harvest outlook is excellent.

The tortures of dyspepsia and sick headache, the sufferings of scrofula, the agonizing itch and pain of salt rheum, the disagreeable symptoms of catarrh, are removed by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

10,000

Another ten thousand edition of the tract,
KILLED, AND NO INQUEST.

This is a large 4-page tract at 30 cents per pound, 15 cents for half pound, and 10 cents for a third of a pound. It is an illustrated account of the death of Rev. J. W. Johnston, while being initiated by the officers of Huntington Lodge, W. Va., in January of this year. Sent postpaid at the above price. Address,

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
221 W. Madison St Chicago

PATENTS

Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees.

Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington.

Send model, drawing or photo., with description. We advise, if patentable or not, free of charge. Our fee not due till patent is secured.

A Pamphlet, "How to Obtain Patents," with names of actual clients in your State, county, or town, sent free. Address,

C. A. SNOW & CO.
Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

Disloyal SECRET OATHS.

ADDRESS OF

JOSEPH COOK,

OF BOSTON,

AT THE

Conference of Christians,
CHICAGO, 1890.

No better document of its size for general distribution has been printed. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Single Copies 5 cents, or 12 copies for 50 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS ILLUSTRATED.

By a Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The "odge-room, signs, counter-signs, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00. Address the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REMARKABLE OFFER!

Nearly everyone is familiar with the name, but it has been estimated that only one in every two hundred and eighty persons in the United States is fortunate enough to have access to the valuable information contained within the covers of the grandest work ever written by mortal man,

Webster's

UNABRIDGED DICTIONARY.

That this is an unfortunate state of affairs will be admitted by all, and it is due to the fact that no one save the rich could afford them.

The Dictionary is a necessity in every home, school and business house. It fills a vacancy and furnishes knowledge which no one hundred volumes of the choicest books could supply, and all young or old, educated or ignorant, rich or poor should have it within reach and refer to its contents every day in the year.

The Loomis reprint contains all the matter as compiled and arranged by our esteemed and honored author and statesman

NOAH WEBSTER.

About forty years of his life was devoted to this great work, and when we consider the fact that this book contains about 100,000 words, we will appreciate that these years must have been well spent.

Some idea of the magnitude of this book may be gained from the fact that it contains over 440 cubic inches of paper and has about 300,000 square inches of printed surface.

In addition to the 100,000 words it contains a portrait of the author, together with his biography and a valuable table of 12,000 synonymous words.

By special arrangement with the publishers, we are permitted to furnish this valuable volume: 1st. To any subscriber to our paper; 2nd. To any renewal subscription; and 3rd. To any person who has paid a full year's subscription within the past six months, on receipt of $1.50 for the paper one year, and two dollars and seventy-five cents to cover express charges, packing, etc., of the Dictionary.

Address

CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill

SCOTCH RITE MASONRY ILLUSTRATED.

The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all Masonic rites, and are fully and accurately given in

"FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED,"

as advertised, but the signs, grips, passwords, etc., of these three degrees are given at the close of Vol 2 of

"Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated"

Vol. 1 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3d to 18th inclusive. Vol. 2 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each; in cloth, $1 each. Each volume per dozen, paper covers, $4; per dozen, cloth bound, $9.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago,

PATRIARCHS MILITANT ILLUSTRATED

THE COMPLETE RITUAL

With Eighteen Military Diagrams

As Adopted and Promulgated by the

SOVEREIGN GRAND LODGE

OF THE

INDEPENDENT ORDER OF ODD-FELLOWS.

At Baltimore, Maryland, Sept. 24th, 1885.

Compiled and Arranged by John C. Underwood,
Lieutenant General.

WITH THE

UNWRITTEN OR SECRET WORK ADDED,

ALSO AN

Historical Sketch and Introduction
By Pres't J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College.

25 cents each.

For Sale by the National Christian Association
221 West Madison St., Chicago.

FARM NOTES.

CULTIVATING BERRY PLANTATIONS.

Summer cultivation should progress just the same if there were no weeds to kill. It is in July and August that the berry plants are storing up food and vigor to carry them through the winter and enable them to return an abundant harvest the succeeding summer. Farmers are especially prone to neglect berry plantations the second year, and thus lose a large part of the profit on their outlay for plants.

August is the month to increase strawberries and tip-rooting raspberries, and those who grow plants to use or sell should push their plantations by cultivation and give more or less attention to layering, if they would attain the best results. For home use and summer planting the sinking of small flower pots into which the strawberry stolons are allowed to root is a desirable plan. A stick five or six inches long should be stuck in each pot to indicate its position, as many get lost in the foliage without this precaution.—Vick's Magazine for August.

STRAWBERRY PLANTING IN AUGUST.

A Brookline, Mass., amateur strawberry grower gives his experience in strawberry culture and especially in regard to the time of the year to start a new bed, in the Rural New Yorker, as follows:

I have seen it stated in a horticultural paper that if strawberries were planted in August no crop could be expected the following June. A good deal has been written about this subject, and the views of the different writers differ so much that it is difficult to reach any exact conclusion. It seems to me that the question is of considerable importance to any one who grows strawberries, and, in view of this fact my experience may be of some value to those who are skeptical as to the practicability of this method of culture.

I may state, in the first place, that on a piece of ground which measures a few feet short of one-fortieth of an acre, I grew last season 155 quarts of fruit. This is the actual number of quarts picked and I am sure that at least a dozen quarts rotted on the plants. Considering the yield at 155 quarts to one-fortieth of an acre, there would be a yield at the rate of 6,200 quarts per acre. A small part of this piece of ground is occupied by two-year-old plants, but I am sure that the one-year-old plants outyielded them this season. I think that in growing strawberries in this way the variety planted has more to do with success or failure than anything else. It is hard to lay down any rule about this. With me Haverland, Warfield and Belmont do well the first year—Haverland better than any variety I have tried. I may say to any who happen to be interested in strawberry culture, that it would be better for them to set their plants in August rather than in July. I do not advise the use of horse manure as a winter mulch, as it fills the beds with weeds. If you wish a good crop of fruit the first year, do not hoe the plants more than twice in the spring, and never within a few days of the time of setting their fruit buds. This point I have found very important.

After the fruit has been gathered from the gooseberry and currant bushes, the watchfulness that thus far has been kept to defend them from the worms is apt to be relaxed, and the leaves soon become a prey to a brood of devastators that has grown up unnoticed. The dusting of the bushes with hellebore should be kept up as long as necessary to preserve the foliage and ripen the wood perfectly. Upon the perfect maturity of the wood depends the ability to produce a good crop the following year. Cuttings of many kinds of plants made now and dibbled in, in a nice piece of ground, will root easily on account of the warmth of the soil and the favorable atmosphere: when first put in, water and give a little shade, which, however, should be withdrawn as soon as practicable. Most of the soft-wooded house plants can be increased in this manner, and, also, many kinds of shrubs.

To Restore Tone and Strength to the System when weakened by La Grippe or any other Illness, Ayer's Sarsaparilla is positively unequalled. Get the BEST. Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Wonders

Are wrought by the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor in restoring gray hair to its original color, promoting a new growth, preventing the hair from falling, keeping it soft, silky, and abundant, and the scalp cool, healthy, and free from dandruff or humors. The universal testimony is that this preparation has no equal as a dressing, and is, therefore, indispensable to every well-furnished toilet.

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for some time and it has worked wonders for me. I was troubled with dandruff and was rapidly becoming bald; but since using the Vigor my hair is perfectly clear of dandruff, the hair has ceased coming out, and I now have a good growth, of the same color as when I was a young woman. I can heartily recommend any one suffering from dandruff or loss of hair to use Ayer's Hair Vigor as a dressing."—Mrs. Lydia O. Moody, East Pittston, Me.

"Some time ago my wife's hair began to come out quite freely.

Ayer's Hair Vigor

not only prevented my wife from becoming bald, but it also caused an entirely new growth of hair. I am ready to certify to this statement before a justice of the peace."—H. Hulsebus, Lewisburgh, Iowa.

"Some years ago, after a severe attack of brain fever, my hair all came out. I used such preparations for restoring it as my physicians ordered, but failed to produce a growth of hair. I then tried, successively, several articles recommended by druggists, and all alike fell short of accomplishing the desired result. The last remedy I applied was Ayer's Hair Vigor, which brought a growth of hair in a few weeks. I think I used eight bottles in two years; more than was necessary as a restorative, but I liked it as a dressing, and have continued to use it for that purpose. I believe Ayer's Hair Vigor possesses virtues far above those of any similar preparation now on the market."—Vincent Jones, Richmond, Ind.

Ayer's Hair Vigor

PREPARED BY

DR. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass.

Sold by Druggists and Perfumers.

To cure Biliousness, Sick Headache, Constipation, Malaria, Liver Complaints, take the safe and certain remedy, SMITH'S

BILE BEANS

Use the SMALL SIZE (40 little beans to the bottle). They are the most convenient; suit all ages. Price of either size, 25 cents per bottle.

KISSING at 7, 17, 70; Photo-gravure, panel size of this picture for 4 cents (coppers or stamps).

J. F. SMITH & CO., Makers of "Bile Beans," St. Louis, Mo.

KNIGHT TEMPLARISM ILLUSTRATED.

A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; 50 cents per dozen. Paper covers, 50c; $4.00 per dozen. Published in any quantities at

STANDARD WORKS

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES.

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Association.

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons order ing, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. A liberal discount to dealers.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 75 cents. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive. Vol. II. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprised the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished. 25 cents each.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe. 20 cents each.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. In cloth, $1.50 each. Paper, 75 cents each.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pages, 75 cents.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance. Bound in one volume. In cloth, 589 pages, $1.00.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. 25 cents each.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper, 35 cents.

Hon. Thurlow Weed on the Morgan Abduction. This is the legally attested statement of this eminent Christian journalist and statesman concerning the unlawful seizure and confinement of Capt. Morgan in Canandaigua jail, his removal to Fort Niagara and subsequent drowning in Lake Ontario. 5 cents each.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a League with the Devil. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason. 15 cents each.

Freemasonry Self-Condemed. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church. Paper covers, price, 20 cents each.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each.

Anti-masonic Sermons and Addresses. Composed of "Masonry a Work of Darkness;" the Sermons of Messrs. Cross, William M'Nary, Dow and Sarver, the two addresses of President Blanchard, and the addresses of President H. H. George, Prof. J. G. Carson and Rev. M. S. Drury; "Thirteen Reasons Why a Christian cannot be a Freemason," "Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion," and "Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate?" 287 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate. By Rev. L. A. Post. 5 cents each. Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper cover, 35 cents.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin trials. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1881, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each.

Stearns's Inquiry into the Nature and Tendency of Freemasonry. 338 pages. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor United Presbyterian church. 5 cents each.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. 10 cents each.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void; or FREEMASONRY SELF-CONVICTED. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. 207 pages. Postpaid, 40 cents each.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian), a seceding Mason of 31 degrees. 15 cents each.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the GRAND LODGE of ILLINOIS. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. H. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each.

Masonic Salvation, as taught by its standard authors. This pamphlet is a compilation from standard Masonic works, in proof of the following proposition: Freemasonry claims to be a religion that saves men from all sin, and purifies them for heaven. 111 pages, price, postpaid, 30 cents.

Freemasonry at a Glance illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the first three degrees. Paper cover, 33 pages. Single copy, six cents.

Masonic Outrages. Compiled by Rev. H. H. Hinman. Showing Masonic assault on lives of seceders, on reputation, and on free speech; its interference with justice in courts, etc. Postpaid, 20 cents.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret Societies. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each.

BUSINESS.

Every week gives us good courage for the future of the Cynosure. The responses of good friends and local workers proves that they are not of those who look back after putting hand to the plow. One friend proposes to get 100 subscribers in Chicago so that this shall be the Banner city as well as the Fair city. We promise to pay well for such a list; and so will we do with any other local agent who will raise a club of 100.

Have you thought of the remark of an editor in last week's paper that Joseph Cook's address at the Conference was a "God-send in a time like this?" Do you discern the signs of the times? One party ordered 500 of Mr. Cook's Disloyal Secret Oaths this week for distribution at Conferences. If it is a "God-send," then this man discerns the signs of the times aright. In order to allow every one to do something at conferences, synods, and associations this fall, we make the following prices:

Single copy, postpaid,	$.05
12 copies, "50
100 " "	2.50
1,000 " "	20.00

See Mr. Cook's powerful summary of the secret lodge system on another page.

The addresses and letters given in the Proceedings of the April Conference on the Secret Lodge System represent the following denominations: Friends, Baptists, Congregational, Free Methodist, Reformed Presbyterian, United Presbyterian, Evangelical Association, Presbyterian, Wesleyan, United Brethren, Methodist, Episcopal, and Lutheran. The cost postpaid is less than one cent per address. There is a daily demand for the pamphlet, and hence the supply is nearly exhausted. ONLY ABOUT 100 REMAIN UNSOLD. If you have not sent for it, better do so at once. It costs but 15 cents to any address postpaid. Has your minister been furnished with a copy? If will not be republished.

NEWS OF THE WEEK (Continued from 13th page).

is believed to be the first document of its kind ever issued by the governor of a State.

The Chicago and Atlantic Railroad was sold at Indianapolis Tuesday for $5,000,000. It was bought in the interest of the Erie Road, which thus completes its system from New York to Chicago. Only one bid was made for the property.

Cyrus W. Field has sold 700 acres of his magnificent Ardsley Park at Dobbs' Ferry, N. Y. The consideration is said to be in the neighborhood of $1,000,000. This is said to be the largest single tract sale in suburban real estate dealing on record.

The ocean steamer Teutonic has earned the title of the fastest greyhound of the Atlantic, having crossed from Queens-town to New York in 5 days, 19 hours and 5 minutes.

The Eastern Illinois Railroad, the Chicago Drainage Commission, and other interests, oppose the removal of the dam across the Kankakee river at Momence, Ill., for the purpose of draining the Kankakee marshes. The work of removal commenced Wednesday, but was stopped by the sheriff.

Contractors for the Denver & Rio Grande railroad at Red Cliff, Colo., finding that they could not finish a piece of road according to contract, put in a heavy blast containing over one ton of powder. After notifying all the people to leave town and seek safety farther up the mountain they touched off the blast.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER Absolutely Pure.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—U. S. Government Report, Aug. 17, 1889.

After the smoke cleared away it was found that the village had been almost demolished, nothing being left of five houses, while thirty others were badly wrecked and rendered uninhabitable. The houses will be rebuilt at the expense of the contractors.

Blazing log heaps in Shelby county, Ind., last week Monday set fire to a pocket of natural gas. An explosion followed which annihilated ten acres of ground; trees were hurled skyward, birds, snakes, rabbits and fish were cooked alive, and a stream was turned up hill. The gas caught fire and burned for some hours, lighting up the country for miles.

Two men were swept over the Niagara Falls Thursday. One was clinging to a boat; the other leaped into the rapids before the boat reached the falls and tried to swim ashore, but failed.

The bursting of a waterspout Sunday night in the mountains above Boulder, Colo., caused a flood in the river. W. J. King and wife were drowned. The railroad track was so badly washed that trains could not run for three days. Near Loveland the crops were ruined by a hailstorm.

An oil well was struck near Findlay, Ohio, that produced 1,000 gallons the first hour. This is said to be the largest flow known.

N. R. Towne, an old resident of Washington county, Neb., was shot and instantly killed and his daughter probably fatally wounded by Charles Pratt Friday. Pratt had formerly been employed on Mr. Towne's farm, but was discharged for making love to the girl. Shortly before midnight a mob of between three and four hundred men went to Washington county jail, overpowered the sheriff and his fifteen deputies, and taking the murderer from his cell, hanged him to a tree about a mile from town.

Near Santa Barbara, Cal., natural gas was struck Thursday, with a flow of 3,000,000 feet a day.

The north shore limited train on the Michigan Central road Friday struck a broken switch at Augusta, Mich. The engine ran over the ties, then the boiler exploded. Engineer and fireman were killed. The train crushed into the station and demolished it, killing two young boys. Several passengers in the forward coaches are said to have been seriously hurt.

FOREIGN.

The Cologne Gazette publishes a letter from Emin Pasha in which he denies that he bound himself to Germany after promising to assist England. He says he is under no obligations to any one, and that he is marching into the interior of Africa simply as an adventurer.

Reports show that the potato blight is spreading in the counties of Donegal, Cork, Waterford, Tipperary and Limerick, Ireland. The Catholic primate, preaching recently at Armagh, declared that great distress threatened the people in Ireland owing to the failure of the potato crop throughout the country. In the House of Commons Mr. Balfour, Chief Secretary for Ireland, said that while it was true that there had been a serious failure of the potato crop, yet there was no reason to fear a famine, as the resources of the poor law unions would be sufficient to meet all cases of distress that might arise from the failure of the crop.

Recent floods in Beloochistan have done enormous damage to property and many persons have been drowned.

Negotiations in favor of peace are progressing between Guatemala and San Salvador. Salvadorian troops are holding their positions ready to march on Guatemala at a moment's notice.

One hundred and seventeen persons died from cholera in Mecca, Aug. 11. In Jeddah seventy-nine died.

A mob on the 12th inst. attacked the residence of ex-President Celman and threatened to burn it to the ground. The government has placed a cordon of troops around the house for its protection.

A flood prevails on the Ganges. The river has overflowed its banks and the surrounding country is inundated to an extent never before known. There has been great loss of life.

Five persons have died at Nicolaieff, Turkey from a disease supposed to be Asiatic cholera. Eleven cases of the disease have been reported here so far. The Porte has decided to quarantine all arrivals from places on the Black Sea.

The steamship, 'City of Pekin,' which arrived in San Francisco, Aug. 14, brings advices from Japan to July 25. The cholera epidemic is rapidly gaining ground, 303 cases and 179 deaths having been reported in Nogasakinen. Cholera is also reported at Yokohama and other Japanese cities.

20% U. S. Title a sure 20 per cent profit. Invest your small savings. TACOMA $100 LOTS $5 CASH $5 MONTHLY. Tacoma Investment Co., (capital $100,000) Tacoma, Wash.

Puget Sound catechism and its chief city SEATTLE, WASHINGTON Send stamp to Rahelmann, Llewellyn & Co., Seattle, Wash.

Our High Grade List and Bargain Book sent to any address on receipt of a 2-c stamp.
LORD & THOMAS,
NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING
45 RANDOLPH STREET,
CHICAGO.

WHEATON COLLEGE,

WHEATON, ILL.

FALL TERM BEGINS TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 16TH.

A College for Men and Women.

For Catalogue address with stamp.

C. A. BLANCHARD, Pres

THE ELKHART CARRIAGE & HARNESS MFG. CO.
For 16 Years have sold complete sets of harnesses at wholesale prices, saving them the dealers profit. Ship anywhere for examination before buying. Pay freight on goods if not satisfactory. Warranted for 2 years. 64-page Catalogue Free. Address W. E. PRATT, Sec'y., Elkhart, Ind.

HARTSVILLE COLLEGE,

HARTSVILLE, INDIANA.

E. G. PAINE, A. M., PRESIDENT.

Classical, Scientific and Normal courses. Preparatory school, Art, Music and Business departments. Actively Christian and reformatory influences. No saloons. Romantic and healthful region. Living as cheap as it can be made anywhere.

MASONIC OUTRAGES.

BY REV. E. H. HINMAN.

The character of this valuable pamphlet is seen from its chapter headings: I.—Masonic Attempts on the Lives of Seceders. II.—Masonic Slander. III.—Masonic Assault on Free Speech. IV.—Freemasonry Among the Colored People. V.—Masonic Interference with the Punishment of Criminals. VI.—The Fruits of the Masonic institution as seen in the Conspiracies and Outrages of Other Secret Orders. VII.—The Revelation of the Secret Lodge System to the Foregoing and Similar Outrages.

PRICE, POSTPAID, 20 CENTS.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

Its superior excellence proven in millions of homes for more than a quarter of a century. It is used by the United States Government. Endorsed by the heads of the Great Universities as the Strongest, Purest and most Healthful. Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder does not contain Ammonia, Lime, or Alum. Sold only in Cans. PRICE BAKING POWDER CO.
NEW YORK. CHICAGO. ST. LOUIS.

Had the Desired Effect!

CARROLLTON, GREEN CO., ILL., Nov., '88. I highly recommend Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic to anybody that has suffered from headache as my son did for 5 years, because 2 bottles of the medicine cured him.

M. MOTIGUER.

What a Clergyman Says:

Morrisonville, Christ. Co., Ill., Sept., 1887. Within the last six years I have observed the excellent effect of Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic. It cured a boy named Mehon, who was so helpless that he had to be fed like a baby; he hid himself when he saw strangers, laughed and cried for half an hour. He was considered by physicians a maniac and hopeless case; but is now working on a railroad. Another case was Minnie Falls; she had St. Vitus' Dance; her legs and arms were so uncontrollable that she scratched holes in her dresses in a few days. 8 bottles of the Tonic cured her entirely. Another such case, which many physicians tried to cure without success, was cured by only two bottles. These and other cases convince me that the Tonic is the best remedy for epilepsy and other nervous troubles. It would be a blessing for all sufferers to know of it.

A. TEPPE, Pastor.

Our Pamphlet for sufferers of nervous diseases will be sent free to any address, and poor patients can also obtain this medicine free of charge from us.

This remedy has been prepared by the Reverend Pastor Koenig, of Fort Wayne, Ind., for the past ten years, and is now prepared under his direction by the

KOENIG MEDICINE CO., CHICAGO, ILL.

60 Wes. Madison, cor. Clinton St., CHICAGO, ILL.

SOLD BY DRUGGISTS.

Price $1 per Bottle. 6 Bottles for $5.

FIFTY YEARS and BEYOND;

OR,

Old Age and How to Enjoy It.

A most appropriate gift book for "The Old Folks at Home."

Compiled by REV. S. G. LATHROP.

Introduction by

REV. ARTHUR EDWARDS, D. D.,
(Editor N. W. Christian Advocate.)

The object of this volume is to give to that great army who are fast hastening toward the "great beyond" some practical hints and helps as to the best way to make the most of the remainder of that now is, and to give comfort and help life that is to come.

"It is a tribute to the Christianity that honors one gray head and refuses to consider the oldish man burden or an obstacle. The book will aid and comfort every reader."—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

"The selections are very precious. Springing from such numerous and pure fountains, they can but afford a refreshing and healthful draught for every aged traveller to the great beyond."—Witness.

Price, bound in rich cloth, 400 pages, $1

Address, W. I. PHILLIP,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago 11

FOR MINISTERS

THE

"STORIES OF THE GODS"

is especially adapted. They will at once derstand the references to the idolatrous systems of the nations. And the idolatrous worship of the Masonic lodge is thus more clearly seen and easily understood. Will you furnish each pastor in your place with one of these pamphlets?

PRICE, ONLY 10 CENTS.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XXII., No. 50.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, AUGUST 28, 1890.

WHOLE No. 1,061.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.

Address all letters for publication to EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, CHICAGO. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Send all business letters relating to the paper to THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE. Make all drafts and money orders payable to the Treasurer, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address on Cynosure list always give the former address.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill., as Second Class Matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:	CORRESPONDENCE:
Notes and Comments.... 1	The Baptist Vineyard Association; Echoes from the Camp Grounds; Heaven, Paradise and the Dead; Pith and Point..... 5,6
"The Man in the Procession."..... 8	LECTURE LIST..... 7
Dr. Waldenstrom's Good Doctrines..... 8	The Ware Meeting and the 50,000..... 9
Scandinavian Theology.. 8	Strikes and Labor Lodges. 9
Dr. Waldenstrom..... 8	THE HOME..... 10
Personal Notes..... 9	TEMPERANCE..... 11
CONTRIBUTIONS:	BIBLE LESSON..... 11
The Moody Conference..... 1	RELIGIOUS NEWS..... 12
Secrecy as a Principle of Organization (Concluded)..... 2	IN BRIEF..... 13
THE SERMON:	DONATIONS..... 13
The Perils of the Last Days..... 3	NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 14
WASHINGTON LETTER..... 4	HOME AND HEALTH..... 14
NEW ENGLAND LETTER..... 4	Secret Societies Condemned..... 15
LITERATURE..... 6	BUSINESS..... 16
OBITUARY..... 6	MARKETS..... 13
THE N. C. A..... 7

The election a few days since in Utah resulted in another Gentile victory, and may possibly be the means of giving a majority in the legislature for a Gentile representative in Congress. But what this pestilent sect loses at the center it seems to gain at the circumference. Reports from the British Northwest Territory state that Mormon missionaries from Utah are at work among the Indians of southern Alberta, and are making numerous converts to polygamy. The Canadian government has had great difficulty in impressing upon the Indians the evils of more than one wife, but the proselyting of the Mormons is undoing all the work of the past.

The joint resolution providing for a Constitutional amendment prohibiting the manufacturing or selling of intoxicating liquors in the United States has been favorably reported to the Senate—a temperance victory in itself. It will not be passed by this Congress; but that does not signify that it will not be passed by some future Congress. The idea is undoubtedly making progress, as the people become familiar with it and begin at last to realize the evils such an amendment to the Constitution would prevent. Now, people, even if opposed to it, speak in respectful terms of the proposition, while some few years ago, a very few, too, to say that you favored such an amendment was to get yourself written down as a "crank." These facts contain a valuable lesson to the student of moral reform; they also form a firm foundation upon which to build our hopes for the future.

Reports conflict about the G. A. R. meeting in Boston. The correspondent of the New York Tribune says the liquor dealers of the city laid in an unusually heavy stock of their poisonous goods, anticipating a large trade; but the veterans preferring to keep sober did not patronize the saloons to any considerable extent. This is exceedingly good news, and we are sorry to hear from other sources quite as reliable that drinking was restricted by order, and after limitations of time expired the members of the G. A. R. showed that they belonged to a great lodge system by freely turning into the saloons. The disgraceful drinking at the Pabst brewery in Milwaukee last year, and the equally disgraceful attempt to violate the prohibitory laws of Maine when the G. A. R. met at Portland a few years since, shows that the order will not soon or easily become part of the Prohibition party. If they would do so there would be good hope of casting out the lodgery from their great organization.

DR. P. WALDENSTROM.

For two weeks the cable has flashed the news that the young German emperor is proceeding in a very business-like way to secure another European congress, aiming at a general peace covenant and disarmament. No ruler of modern Europe has made so many official visits as the young Kaiser. He has been everywhere but into France. Now he is in Russia. He has taken his wife along, like a sensible man, and the reports are very hopeful of the success of his pacific intentions. William has given us many proofs that he wishes to manage his empire on sensible business principles, instead of following the effete rules and formula of the autocrats and nobility who have preceded him. If he succeeds in a plan of general disarmament he will stand among the world's benefactors.

Men who are living for earthly posthumous fame have several warnings outside of God's revelation that they can be in better business. Our fathers died believing that Columbus discovered America, but on the first generous celebration of that event, it becomes evident that America was discovered several hundred years before Columbus saw the Atlantic; and it is even argued that the Genoese sailor was only on a mission from Rome when his eye fell on San Salvador. The Swiss cantons, too, are beginning to repudiate their hero. The local government of Schwyz has ordered the story of William Tell to be excluded from all school books as a fanciful myth of German origin. We are not so much concerned about the hero of the arrow and the apple, however, as about the malicious fables told about our Washington by Masonic orators and sycophants. Such an exposure from one of their own company as we gave two weeks ago ought to be remembered.

It was written in 1872 by Cornelius Moore, a Mason of high degree and an authority for the lodge. The next edition of Gov. Ritner's vindication of Washington should include this item.

We are having another strike epidemic. Not only is Powderly laboring to embroil all the employes of the New York Central road in his Knight of Labor quarrel, but here and there in this country and in Europe local strikes are in full blast. Here in Chicago the men who manage the railway switching for the stockyards are out for more wages and trainloads of beef and ice are wasting. The carpenters all go out next Monday for a second time this year. Powderly is issuing his manifestos to the public, but they are not calculated to greatly help his case with the press, whose critics with keener analysis show him the fallacy of his position. We give a space to editorial opinion, and as the decisive blow of the lodges is yet suspended as we go to press, we wait extended notice till it falls.

THE MOODY CONFERENCE OF CHRISTIAN WORKERS.

BY REV. W. F. CRAFTS.

"Quicken thou me according to thy Word."

Dr. A. J. Gordon, by way of illustration, described a woman who had for years been cooped up in a New York tenement house, with scant measure even of sky and air, who, being taken to the sea by means of the Fresh Air Fund, exclaimed, "Thank God, I have seen something at last that there is enough of." These Northfield throngs thus exult beside "the ocean of the love of God," of which they here get a fuller view and in which they get a deeper plunge than most of them ever had before. Some who come here have been at home like the soldier referred to by Dr. Arthur Little, who went to sleep on guard, whose superior officer carried away his gun while he slept, so that he awoke to the shameful consciousness of being a gunless guard. In humiliation, these awakened Christians here seek to gain their lost weapons.

One of the most remarkable things about this conference is the obliteration of both national and denominational lines. The audience is equally responsive in prayer and in money to appeals in behalf of India, of Indians, of Jews, and of unchurched Americans, rich and poor, ragged and respectable—all without a thought of the denomination that will administer the funds.

Bishop Thoburn's picture of the poverty of the people of Asia, especially of India, where families live on five cents a day, and thousands of growing children go to bed hungry every night, drew forth a chorus of groans and sighs as well as generous gifts. He mentioned as a sample, a man who was paid $2.50 per month, whose wife, by hard work, added 28 cents per month to it. This had to be divided among a family of five, none of whom could have enough even of their one coarse food, rice mixed with weeds. "Five hundred millions of the people of this world," said the bishop, "will go to bed hungry to-night. The tramps of this country would be 'swells' in any part of India." Speaking of the fact that missionary converts are mostly gathered from the poor, he argued that it was better so. When a house is to be lifted, jack screws are put in at the bottom. If the roof was grappled, it would be only the top that would be lifted.

Mr. S. F. Wilkins, of Newton Centre, Mass., a banker, showed a practical method by which even "God's rich poor" in this land can help the doubly poor of pagan lands, namely, "The Extra Cent-a-day Bands," a plan which, if universally adopted by the evangelical Christians of our country, would increase the paltry seven and three-fourths millions of dollars now given by them to foreign missions to almost fifty millions, and that too without sacrifice. Mr. Wilkins will be glad to send explanatory circulars to any who may wish to adopt this plan.

If anything, the interest of the audience deepened when the address on India was followed the next morning by an appeal for the Jews by Rev. David Barron of London, himself a Hebrew Christian. He showed how remarkably prophecy had been fulfilled in the very survival of the Jews, in spite of the efforts of mighty kings to drown and burn and massacre them. "It is no thanks to the Gentiles," he exclaimed, "that there are any Jews left on earth." As to the Christian prejudice that makes so many feel that Jews are incorrigible and unconverted, he remarked that he once thought the same of Gentiles.

Speaking of the present dispersion of the Jews as outcasts, he brought a vocal smile by reminding those Christians who talk so fondly in a figure of "Our Zion" that Zion means deserted or a desert, as may be seen by the very context in Jer. 30:17. He condemned the course of those who approach the Jews not as sinners having "no healing medicine" (Jer. 30:13), but complimenting them on their ability and morality, as if these things would save them. He showed that while Jeremiah pictured his people as sick, Ezekiel describes them as dead, a valley full of "dry bones" to which we are called to "prophecy," that is, to testify of Christ, "that they may live." It is fitting to mention here Dr. Gordon's story of the aged Hebrew who was converted on his death bed, and kept exclaiming, "Not Barabbas, but this Man."

Secretary Sheldon, of the American Missionary Association, carried the interest still higher as he told of the success of the five Indian missions established by the money contributed at the conference two years ago. A young Dakotan, son of a chief, and destined to be his successor, after being at one of these Indian schools, he said, was welcomed back by his village with great ceremony, a new wigwam and a new blanket being presented to him, but he refused them and declined to take part in the heathen dance arranged in his honor, and was therefore driven out by the angry people, but after prayer came back, and by songs and Bible readings led his people to receive civilization and many of them the Christ who is the heart of it. The audience testified its belief that the only good Indian is a converted Indian by contributing $1,700 to support the five missions for this year, and enough more to found and support two more new ones.

Work for our unchurched masses enlisted like interest as presented by Rev. Dr. Hubbard, of Auburn, N. Y., who believes any church can have the people if it really wants them. But the feeling has been deepest of all when the conference has been shown the power of the Gospel to save the savages of our cities, the tramps and drunkards, by two reformed men, Mr. J. R. Wooley, the temperance evangelist, and Mr. Hadley of the Jerry McAuley Mission, "A Sinner's Club House," as the latter called it. The latter testified that since his conversion he had never had any more disposition to drink whisky than to drink ink, although he had never been beyond the smell of it, till he came to Northfield. This fact he passed over to the scientists to explain. He declared that the drunkards that throng the missions are not all from the ignorant and poor. He had found, by a frequent show of hands, many college men and ex-Wall-Streeters among the tramps that gather in the McAuley Missions.

In Dr. Geo. F. Pentecost's sermon on the Transfiguration the strongest, freshest point was that Peter counted as more convincing than what he had "seen and heard" in the Holy Mount, the "more sure word of prophecy," which we also have. "Why," said the speaker, "when God himself spoke from heaven at the Transfiguration to confirm the authority of Christ, he said nothing new, but only quoted Scripture, a significant, threefold quotation, a fragment of it from each of the three great divisions of the Old Testament, 'the Law, the Prophets and the Psalms,' as if to show the divine authority of every part: 'This is my beloved Son,'—that is from the second Psalm; 'in whom I am well pleased,'—that is from Isaiah 42 where Christ is called 'My beloved, in whom my soul delighted;' 'hear ye him,'—that is the prophecy of Moses, 'him shall ye hear.' This message from the sky not only confirmed the three parts of Scripture but the threefold work of Christ as the Divine Son, as the Beloved Son, as the great Prophet, the world's Teacher."

Mr. Moody has made only three addresses. The people, and even Mr. Sankey, listened with interest to the four hundredth delivery (to speak approximately) of his "well-known sermon on Elijah." His second address was on "Glory," and would have caused a series of explosions in a camp meeting. He spoke first of the Christian as "called unto glory." "'Poor fellow, he's dead,' may be all right as an exclamation over Dives," said Mr. Moody, "but not when a saint is 'called unto glory.' You would be no more afraid of a hornet than of a fly if you knew his sting had been extracted. 'O death, where is thy sting?' I once searched the gospels through to find for my own use a funeral sermon that had been preached by Christ, but there wasn't any to be found. He broke up every funeral he attended. He takes the pang out of them to-day."

Mr. H. L. Hastings, of the Boston Christian, made an address on "The entrance of thy Word giveth light," which was greatly enjoyed. This deeply spiritual convention enjoys such wit and laughter as would shock a cold, conventional church. Why shouldn't an address at a Christian conference be as dull as a sermon? Mr. Hastings remarked that we could know something of the Bible's character; that as we tell the difference between the words of the wise man and those of a fool, the difference between the light of a tall candle and the electric light; between a sky full of sunshine and a lightning bug. Infidels even might see the difference if they would only look. God's people are spoken of as "illuminated." He told of a new convert who celebrated his emancipation, his victory, his peace as emancipation, victory, peace are often celebrated, by illuminating his house from basement to attic. He did not approve of the dim religious light of the old time churches that came down from the Dark Ages and brought the darkness with them. A man who has a lofty and cultivated intellect not illuminated by the Word, is not a light-house but only a smoking chimney, however tall. There is death in Pharaoh's palace, but light in the Israelite's lowliest hut. The light of the Gospel shames men into decency even when it does not convert them. "Inventions," "science," "philanthropy," of which infidels talk so much, why is it that these are not found to any extent worth mentioning except in Christian lands? By a riverside in China there used to be this sign, "Don't drown girls here." At last even there the true "light of Asia," who is also the light of the world, is being felt, and last year the government for the first time forbade the murder of girls under penalty. Mr. Hastings' concluding illustration fitly closes this letter, as it expresses the very purpose of this convention. A piece of iron attached to the main belting of the machine shop is mighty, but unattached it is only a piece of old iron. What would Peter have been apart from Christ? or Paul? or Bunyan? or Moody?

Northfield, Mass., Aug. 11, 1890.

SECRECY AS A PRINCIPLE OF ORGANIZATION.

BY ENOS W. SHAW.

To an institution whose purpose is bad, the advantages of secrecy are apparent. Such an institution will naturally want to hide and veil itself, and if possible leave itself without hold to be taken what it is. And the reason is plain. "Virtue," says Butler, "is that which all ages and all countries have made profession of in public." Does anybody suppose that its enemies are so simple as to assail it openly? Far from it. They are too cunning for that. They practice secrecy. They hide what they are. In the name of Tyranny they strike down Freedom, and in the name of Freedom they set up Tyranny.

It has always been so. The coins of Nero were inscribed with "Libertas," and the first decree of Louis Napoleon began "in the name of the people;" and the institution whose purpose is to prey upon society under loud professions of innocence and benevolence will seize its victims. We are not to forget that Mephistopheles is the devil of the 19th century. He no longer appears in society with horns and cloven hoofs, but he comes clothed and mannered like a gentleman. He hides and veils himself so artfully, he does so many fine things, that it is only those who watch the whole tenor of his conduct that recognize who and what he is. But to them it is written on his forehead that he never loved any human being. If he were to found an institution to-day to overthrow Christianity by seducing Christians from their allegiance to the church, as a tribute to that Christianity and to deceive if possible the very elect he would transform his institution into an angel of light. From hundreds of masked batteries with thousands of guns served by tens of thousands of blinded Christians he would play upon the Rock of Ages.

As a matter of fact the soul of all the frauds and base designs that have been perpetrated upon the people has been secrecy. Secrecy enables a bad institution to avoid opposition. And since "nothing but freedom, justice and truth is of any permanent advantage to the mass of mankind," opposition renders the tenure of evil insecure. The great secret societies, willing as many people are to be duped, could never have grown to their present magnitude as open organizations. Opposition to what is not unpopular is disagreeable to most men, and unless what they antagonize is unpopular they apologize for making mention of it. Men are not going to oppose something of which they know nothing; and as long as strutting secretists can intimidate a whole neighborhood into silence by simply declaring that their secrets cannot be revealed, or that no outsider can know anything of their society, secrecy is in no danger from public sentiment. The great secret orders were powerful almost before society knew of their existence. Public opinion is an ocean so mighty that such pirate craft would be shattered by its waves, if secrecy, like an Æolus, did not hold in restraint the winds of discussion. But public opinion, except in some bays of Fundy, is at dead calm.

Secrecy not only enables a bad institution to avoid opposition, but it paralyzes in its members the sense of individual responsibility and fits them to be the instruments of the villainy of designing leaders. "Even the institution," says Lieber, "is the opposite of subjective conception, and individual disposition." But an institution under secret management is another and longer step in the direction of the obliteration of the sense of individual responsibility. Members of secret orders are all but destitute of the feeling of responsibility to society. Nobody feels to blame for what everybody does. The tendency then is to render them not only without shame, but without fear. And as they advance in the vices of shamelessness and unlawful fearlessness they become more perfectly adapted to be the tools of skillful architects of evil; they become, as Beaconsfield said, the "reckless agents who countenance assassination, and, if necessary, can produce a massacre."

As organized secrecy prepares agents for certain superiors, so it shields these superiors from the justice that might be meted out to them for the crimes they instigate. They smile serene at justice defeated. They sit secure within the inner circle, while their agents are sent to the gallows or the dungeon. They come to believe that the institution which they control is their private property. They bribe; they steal; they murder; they hesitate at no crime: and we, more brave than Rome's brave citizens, think we have done too little for our country until we crown them with her public honors!

But to an institution whose purpose is good, the advantages of secrecy are not so apparent. It is plain why men "steal the livery of the court of heaven to serve the devil in," but why they should array themselves in the livery of the court of hell to serve the Lord in is difficult to surmise—as difficult as to explain the conduct of a free citizen who, for the performance of his daily duties, should don the striped costume of a convict. The disadvantages of the method of secrecy to a good institution as readily appear as its advantages to the bad.

The institution whose purpose is good will want to inspire the confidence of the people. Without that no great work of benevolence is possible. The Earl of Chatham said confidence is a plant of slow growth in human hearts. Secrecy nips it in the bud. Owing to the operation of the principle of secrecy at this very time society has neither confidence in the government, nor in itself. Our present officers are not to be trusted; and where is the security that those who are to follow will be superior to those who are now either robbing us, or timidly seeing us plundered. The truth is, that secret societies of one kind and another have destroyed the people's confidence in almost everything. There are so many clans that there seems to be no nation. Publicity is necessary to regain and to retain the confidence of the people. Publicity inspires confidence, secrecy destroys it.

Secrecy prevents the co-operation of good men. Some men wherever they go tread on Plymouth Rock. They are born antagonists to what is not open work. Other men acquire this disposition. These are the most desirable men to be secured for carrying on benevolent enterprises. They insure their success. But they will not unite under the principle of secrecy. Many of them will withdraw from the best organization, if it tolerates secrecy. They know too well the history of secret societies. They perceive too clearly the tendency of secrecy. They understand that secrecy is great bait for deadbeats and demagogues. They are convinced that with such membership secret organizations are certain to become more dangerous to the country than the evils they aim to remedy. And these men are numbered not simply by the score, but by the hundreds of thousands.

Then, too, secrecy is un-Christian. Some one has well said that "the genius of Christianity is out and out." It conceals nothing, for it has nothing to conceal. Christ was born in a public place and was crucified on a hill in sight of millions. He did not sneak around trying to leave himself without hold to be taken what he was. He said, "I ever taught openly among you: I was in the temple whither the Jews always resort, and in secret have I said nothing." He did not draw men by secrecy, but he declared that "I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me." The pretence of secrecy is to gather a handful of people together in some secret, guarded place, and inculcate in their mind virtuous precepts. The sower that went forth to sow did not go into caverns and scatter a few seeds, but he went out on the highway and scattered seed everywhere. The method of the church is to sow the truth in every heart. It is to allow the good and the bad, the rich and the poor, those with the pass of King Solomon and those without it, all to have an equal opportunity to obtain what is for their benefit. Away with your tylers, grips and passwords; away with your oaths and pledges of secrecy—and if you have any water of life, invite all who will to come and drink of it freely. That is the Gospel invitation, and any less universal is not truly benevolent.

Nor do I forget the remark of Guizot, that a bad principle does not radically vitiate an institution. Granted that it does not. Still a bad principle is a bad principle, and we may be sure that, so far as it operates at all, it operates against the good and for evil. No institution which has a good work to perform will fail in its mission because it abandons evil principles. The house fell because it was founded upon sand, not because it was founded upon the rock.

The man that does his duty will in some way oppose secret societies. There is no evil principle which is operating in our midst that is more palpably dangerous, there is none with a blacker record, none which more truly deserves the opposition of every patriot and Christian, than the principle of secrecy. To the observing its demoralizing effects are plainly visible in politics, in religion, and in business. It has wrought ruin enough.

Let no Christian excuse his inactivity in resisting the progress of secrecy by saying with Guizot that a bad principle does not radically vitiate an institution. Webster said, "If I thought that there was a stain upon the remotest hem of the garment of my country, I would devote my utmost labor to wipe it off." With the spirit of Wendell Phillips, let us say that of every institution to which we may belong.

It costs something to be governed. The estimated amount of taxation per annum in Great Britain for each inhabitant is $20. In this country it is $12.50. This includes interest in war debts and all forms of taxation. Surely in a better state of civilization the well-being of the people could be preserved at far less expense. There is probably no investment that would be so profitable to the English-speaking people as more practical Christianity.

THE PERILS OF THE LAST DAYS.

JESUITISM, MORMONISM, LODGE AND LIQUOR UNITED AND REACHING FROM THE PACIFIC TO THE ATLANTIC OCEAN.

A SERMON PREACHED IN THE WHEATON COLLEGE CHURCH, SABBATH, AUG. 10, 1890, BY EX-PRES. J. BLANCHARD, AND PUBLISHED BY REQUEST OF THE CHURCH.

"In the last days perilous times shall come."—2 Tim. 3:1.

"The groans of Nature in this nether world,
Which heaven has heard for ages, have an end:
The time of rest, the promised Sabbath comes;
Six thousand years of sorrow have well nigh
Fulfilled their tardy and disastrous course
Over a sinful world; and what remains
Of this tempestuous state of human things
Is merely as the working of the sea before a calm,
That rocks itself to rest."

This was Cowper's theory of the millennium, written one hundred years ago. And it was the current opinion of his times, that the reign of Christ on earth was to be the seventh thousand years; which period begins one hundred and ten years from now (i. e., in the year 2,000).

The first nations who wrote and reasoned, expected an age of gold. And the application of steam and electricity to locomotion and light, have given force and rapidity to moral changes, in the century now past, which might, perhaps, without a miracle, lead us to expect the reign of truth in another hundred years.

But my purpose in this discourse is, not to add another to the myriad theories concerning the millennium, but to consider the moral forces now in play, and the causes now at work, between the Pacific and the Atlantic Oceans (which I have lately visited), as they relate to the destiny of our earth and our race.

The Bible gives us six dispensations of God to mankind; all of which have ended in human disaster, viz.: 1. In Eden, where man fell. 2. From Adam to Enoch, who instituted public worship to save men. 3. To Noah, when public worship had run down to one family, and the earth was drowned. 4. From Noah to Abraham, when a church was called out from the idolatrous masses. 5. The Exodus, when Abraham's descendants, taken from Egyptian slavery and cattle-worship, were forty years fed, guided, and taught from heaven; but relapsed into cattle-worship, and all but two died in the desert. 6. In the sixth trial a pure worship and commonwealth were set up in Judea, which, after fifteen centuries, ended in the crucifixion of the Saviour, and dispersion of the Jews. Each of these six trials of mankind ended in wreck, but good came out of them all. We are now living in the seventh trial of humanity, inaugurated at Pentecost by the Holy Ghost. What shall be the end of this?

The past is parent of the present and the future, and holds the key to both, and the world's failures in the past have come from ignoring or rejecting Christ. The first man born in the world murdered the second, because he worshiped Christ, by sacrificing a lamb. And the spite of Satan and the Cains of humanity against Abel's worship has, by wars, made our earth, like the spot where Christ was crucified, a place of skulls.

The statistics of martyrdom would be ghastly. There is, of course, no record of religious murders, outside of the Bible, until the time of Herodotus, called "The father of history," 500 years before Christ. But the glintings in sacred history of the earth "filled with violence" before the flood, and the treatment of Lot by the people of Sodom, and their treatment of the angels who were religious travelers, would seem to warrant the inference that the wars of the old world, like Cain's murder of Abel, were waged against the worshipers of the true God in Christ.

Historians record ten general persecutions of Christians by pagan Rome, in which above three million of Christians were put to death. Papal Rome has murdered a much larger number since. And rivals and substitutes for the law of God and the mediatorship of Christ, have made history red with human gore; the one specific object and end being to obliterate Christ, whom the whole Bible sets forth as the "way," and the only way of access to the Infinite God.

But priests have not slain all the martyrs. The late good German Emperor William said to Professor Stowe: "Tell the Americans to beware of infidelity and superstition." Infidels can be as cruel as priests.

"The French atheists," says a nervous writer, "murdered their king and queen," and "one million and twenty-two thousand persons of all ranks and ages, and of both sexes, till the streets of Paris ran blood, and the guillotines could not overtake their work. Thousands were mowed down by grape-shot. Hundreds were put on vessels and sunk in rivers, roasted alive in ovens, and tortured to death by other infernal cruelties." The religion which made this "reign of terror" was the worship of a harlot enthroned at Notre Dame in place of Christ. "There is but one God," and he is accessible and available to mortals by one mediator, Jesus Christ. And where that Mediator has been ignored, obliterated, rejected or set aside, mankind have been "without God and without hope in the world." Virtue and vice, right and wrong have become impossible ideas, and murder has become not crime but convenience. This is history.

Let us now glance at the United States between the two oceans. And let us see, if we can see, what destiny the causes now at work are preparing for us and our children.

English Protestants planted Christianity on the Atlantic, and friars planted Romanism on the Pacific coast.

In 1776 the Protestants put forth the Declaration of American Independence, and the friars planted the Dolores Mission at San Francisco the very same year. These two forces were then pitted over against each other, and they have had 114 years to show their fruits. At first three thousand miles of wilderness stretched between them. The Protestants have surveyed that wilderness into quarter-sections, townships, counties and States, and bound San Francisco to Boston with railroad iron. What have the friars done?

In 1767 Charles III of Spain gave the Franciscans the rich possessions of the Jesuits, whom he had expelled from Lower California, while the Protestants raised their own money to ship themselves and families to New England, and buy corn of the Indians to keep off famine.

With these superior advantages the friars planted twenty-one missions with twenty-five miles of land each. They scourged and tortured 20,000 natives into the condition of slaves, with whose labor they raised a million and a half of cattle, sheep, and hogs, and in 1825 had not less than a million dollars in specie and bullion. They converted no Indians, made no stand this side of the Sierras; their missions have vanished and their masses died away to echoes. They failed because they set aside the only Mediator between God and man, for their secret confession, priestly absolutions, and salvation by sacraments and ceremonies.

In Santa Clara College, San Jose, I asked a priest-professor, who had been there near fifty years, "If your superior should order you now in your old age to leave this beautiful place and go to a tribe of Digger Indians on Columbia river, what would you do?" "Obey at once!" he replied. If a higher priest should order that superior to go, he too must obey, till we come to the pope, who, twenty years ago, 1870, was officially declared "infallible," which pushed Christ aside and puts the pope in his place; and depriving men of Christ is depriving them of God.

But these Franciscans, whose conspicuous failure might have made them harmless, have given way to the Jesuits whose property they took when they (the Jesuits) were suppressed for treason by the King of Spain. Those Jesuits now have the principal university in San Francisco. They are the head secret society on our globe; mystery, "Babylon the Great," of the Revelation, and the chief danger to the United States, and indeed to the human race, because the chief foe of Christ. Beginning at Cincinnati they joined German infidels and voted the Word of God from the public schools. And now, having drawn the whole Romish body after them, they declare open war on our free school system, and in Boston have already begun to Romanize school books, divorce truth from history, and thus take away the key of knowledge from the American people.

But even this would fail to darken and destroy our Republic, were it not for the system of secret lodges which are furnishing drill-camps for Jesuits. Most of the degrees of the present chief Masonic rite were manufactured by Jesuits, and given the church names, "Chapter" and "Templar" degrees. They were invented in Paris to restore popery and overturn free government in England. And the present secret society craze is a device of Satan to enthrone popery and liken the United States masses to Mexico and Spain. Do Jesuits swear secrecy? So do Freemasons. Do they promise obedience? So do Masons. Does the Romish church promise salvation to its members? So does the lodge. Do Jesuits murder where they dare? So do Freemasons, and the "Clan-na-Gael," which is a Mason lodge with an Irish name. Both Jesuits and the lodge bribe the ambitious with titles and gewgaws, and bewitch the simple with sorcery, and befool the ignorant with lies. They are identical. But above all, does Rome dispense with Christ by substituting ceremonies, leaving her people without a Mediator and without God, and send them for salvation to false mediators and priests? The lodge cuts out the very name of Christ from the Scriptures, which it quotes, and promises salvation by its ceremonies. And if Rome is a "Beast" of the Apocalypse, the lodge is certainly the "Image" of that beast.

But from coast to coast across the continent, even in mountains beyond human abodes, liquor is sold and men intoxicated, and that traffic is licensed by the votes of professed Christians, under the party names, "Republicans" and "Democrats." San Francisco alone has one saloon to every eleven voters, and nearly nine-tenths of the dram-sellers belong to the Romish church. And revolting as are the crime, pauperism and agony caused by intoxicants, their worst effect is keeping men from Christ. Where brains are bewildered by alcohol and narcotics the Holy Spirit is shut from the heart. Hence, the alliance of idolatry and intoxication. I stopped in Utah at Ogden and Salt Lake, and was introduced to Governor Thomas, Judge Anderson and the U. S. Commissioners. They all seem able men and true Americans, and under the Edmunds law disfranchising polygamy, have carried an election against the Mormons. But those Mormons, now some 250,000 in Utah, with other thousands in adjacent States, were once organized as a Masonic lodge under the Grand Lodge of Illinois; and their prophet Smith, in gratitude said he received a revelation that Stephen A. Douglas was the greatest man in the United States. They know too that laws in Congress have been carried against them by the votes of Masons, whose very first oath in Masonry swore them to have their throats cut if they did not conceal what was to follow. And Judge Anderson has decided and the U. S. Supreme Court has confirmed that such oaths of allegiance to a secret power disfranchise Mormons. The only way possible to give any moral force to such laws is to apply them to Masons as well as Mormons.

These Mormons in the heart of our nation are among the perils of "the last days." For though they call themselves a "Church of Jesus Christ," they defy his fundamental law of marriage. And, "he that turneth away his ear from hearing the law" makes his "prayer abomination."

No Christian patriot can but glance at the combined systems of Jesuitism, Masonry, Mormonism, liquor and the lodges, which are a unit against Christ, and not see that we are in "perilous times."

King Solomon ruled a commonwealth which, with revolutions and rendings, stood 1,500 years. We are told what shattered it. "Then did Solomon build a high place for Chemosh, the abomination of Moab, and for Molech, the abomination of the children of Ammon. Likewise did he for all his strange wives, which burned incense and sacrificed unto their gods," 1 Kings 11: 7, 8. These false religions broke down the civil administration by multiplying oaths, destroying their sanctity, and consequently all sense of moral or political obligations. In our slavery war rebels would often swear opposite oaths, and Mormons now do the same. Dr. Warburton shows that each of those old shrines set up by Solomon was a lodge, with its secret initiation and worship. And Dr. E. P. Goodwin of Chicago, in the last April Conference, showed that our Masonry derived its mysteries from the heathen in the land of Moab and Ammon. But no matter where they come from, the mysteries are heathen by excluding Christ. And just so true as like causes produce like effects, the wrath of God hangs over our nation, and can only be averted by putting away these abominations. "But," one says, "we do not regard these lodges as religion." I answer. No more did Solomon. He built a house for his political wife, Pharaoh's daughter, in the forest of Lebanon, and gave as his reason that her's was an unholy religion, 2 Chron. 8: 11. But testifying against crimes which he had power to remove, without removing them, but aggravated his guilt. The brilliant sun of his reign went down in darkness; his kingdom was rent in pieces, and the name of his people afterward became a by-word of the nations. Such a doom hangs over us. But the Jews still live. The bush which has burned for centuries is not consumed. About one-half of the Hebrews now call themselves reformers, and honor Christ whom their fathers crucified. They may yet hail him, saying, "Blessed be he that cometh in the name of the Lord." And then he will come.

Sixty-seven years ago an obscure man named Miller began to proclaim the coming of Christ in 1843, though Christ had declared the day and hour of his coming unknown to men or angels. But all the prophets, especially his beloved disciple John, declare that he will come, and he himself spake freely of his coming "in glory with the holy angels," and the tokens multiply that "his coming draweth nigh," though the discussions concerning it have been largely profitless. The "post millennial," "pre-millennial," "personal," "providential" and "spiritual" theories of his coming have yet done a little good by directing the minds of his people to the fact. But any human conception or attempted description of the coming of Christ must dwarf and degrade it. When he comes it will be "in glory." Paul found human speech incapable of uttering the glories of heaven, and it must be incapable of describing Christ "in glory" on earth, when the Lord's prayer is answered and his kingdom come "in earth as it is in heaven."

The Scriptures join "the acceptable year of the Lord," with "the day of vengeance of our God." And if seventy-eight Southern grave-yards filled with Northern dead is a token of God's vengeance, the fall of slavery was a sign of Christ's coming. For not only were slaves emancipated, but truth itself was set free, and the earth begins to tremble at its goings. Bibles are sold in front of the Vatican, and the center of Africa, the darkest spot on earth, is echoing to Methodist hymns. There was no war on earth when Christ was born. The temple of Janus was shut. But there were wars enough after he began to preach. He set his Gospel and his disciples to declare "the whole earth lying in wickedness," and they soon proved that he came "not to send peace on earth, but a sword." All Europe is now a battle-field, and its nations sleeping on their arms. But the slumber will be broken and there shall be "wars and rumors of wars," as Christ predicted. Already there are "false Christs and false prophets," and none are so contemptible as not to find followers. The universal craze for secret societies is a sign of Christ coming, and the false priests of Rome are fulfilling his word. "They are moved by the spirits of devils," "having great wrath" as their time grows short, and clutching for an hour's worship from men before their leader is cast into the bottomless pit. The very earth and heavens seem disturbed and uneasy; diseases baffles medicine and cyclones and earthquakes baffle science. Twenty-six years ago I was eight months in the mountains. The Government took the census of the roads and 300,000 people crossed the plains that year. Since that time they go by railroads, and they will soon fill our vacant territory. More people now come to us in ten years from across the seas than were here when we became United States. And surely "the end of these things is nigh, even at the doors."

The thing for us to do is steadily to "seek first the kingdom of God." "Wait for the coming of our Lord." Prophets, evangelists and the Revelation proclaim the speedy fall of "Babylon," and the final triumph of Christ. "And a mighty angel took up a great stone like a mill-stone and cast it into the sea, saying, Thus with violence shall that great city Babylon be thrown down, and be found no more at all," Rev. 18: 21. And Babylon means and includes all false worship. She is "the mother of harlots and abominations of the earth." Rev. 17: 5.

Then follows the opening heaven, revealing Christ as "King of kings and Lord of lords," Rev. 19: 16. "And there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain," Rev. 21: 4. "Even so come Lord Jesus." Amen.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 20, 1890.

At last the pernicious example set before the thousands who visit the Capitol building by the open sale of intoxicating liquor in the Senate restaurant is to cease. Vice-President Morton has been repeatedly asked to have the sale of liquor stopped, but for some unaccountable reason he never did so. This week Senator Plumb offered a resolution instructing the Committee on Rules to make such an order as will entirely prevent the sale of spirituous, vinous or malt liquors in the Senate end of the Capitol. Senator Blair, with the consent of Mr. Plumb, amended the resolution by inserting the words, "and drinking," after "sale."

To people not familiar with certain practices of some of the Senators, Mr. Blair's amendment would appear to be superfluous; but it isn't by any means. Great harm is done by the bottles and demijohns with which many of the committee rooms are kept supplied. Men who, under other circumstances, would refuse to drink the vile stuff, fall easy victims to the tempter when the man who asks them to drink is a United States Senator, a man whom he has been in the habit of admiring and looking up to for years. "Surely," thinks the victim, "if the Senator does it there can be no great harm in it." More than one of the confirmed drunkards of Washington began his tipping in a committee room at the Capitol. Senator Blair's amendment is intended to break up this habit of keeping liquor in committee rooms; and it is well worth trying. The members of the Senate are honorable men, and it is not supposed that they will knowingly violate a rule adopted by that body.

Notwithstanding that the anti-lottery bill was passed by the House of Representatives with but one dissenting vote, for several days it looked as though all hope would have to be abandoned of getting the bill through the Senate at this session, owing to the wrangle which Mr. Quay's resolution, limiting the business to be transacted for the rest of the session, caused. But thanks to good influence the anti-lottery bill has been included in the resolution, so that it now seems certain that this measure will pass the Senate and become a law in the near future, no matter how the political wrangle may turn out. All that is needed is to get it before the Senate—it has already been favorably reported—to ensure its passage. It is not a question of politics, but of morality, and it is not probable that even a single Senator will vote against it.

The President to-day celebrated his fifty-seventh birthday, and like the good husband and father he is, he went to Cape May Point in order to do so in the midst of his family. Mr. Harrison has always followed good and regular habits, and as a natural consequence he finds himself at fifty-seven years of age just in the prime of his manly vigor. Look around you among the people you know; it requires no skill or special knowledge to select those of bad and intemperate habits; their foreheads carry an indelible brand, visible to all men. Observe carefully and see to it that no such mark is ever placed upon you by outraged Nature.

It is now regarded as practically settled that the remains of Gen. Grant will be removed from New York to Arlington Cemetery near this city.

It is a coincidence that Arlington should have belonged to Gen. R. E. Lee, the Confederate general.

Representative Morse, of Massachusetts, has introduced a bill that should become a law; it provides for the prohibition of the sale or supply of intoxicating beverages in United States military and naval institutions and branches of the National Home for disabled volunteer soldiers. *

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

Lodge notes—The Grand Army—The first annual convention of Volapuk students in Boston—Boston in a dilemma—The new harbor defences.

"Whom the gods destroy they first make mad." I owe an apology for beginning this letter with a quotation already worn threadbare, but which will never be worn out unless human nature materially changes. Nothing could have been worse timed for winning public sympathy than the strike on the New York Central in the very height of summer travel. Precisely what is the matter nobody seems to know, and this constitutes one of the peculiar beauties of secret combinations. On one side it is alleged that the company arbitrarily discharged veteran and capable employees; on the other, that those they thus discharged were "insubordinate" and "mischievous." There would be some faint prospect of getting at the truth of the situation if all the facts of the case could be ventilated in open day, and without Messrs. Powderly & Co. to blow dust in the eyes of the public. A mysterious cipher dispatch was sent yesterday to the New England Protective Railway Union at Boston which read thus: "Whatsoever, whatever, or more. Be in readiness." As it came from Mr. Lee, the representative of the Knights of Labor in this city, it has been generally interpreted as an order for the men to be prepared for a general strike. The future will show whether this reading is the correct one, but meanwhile what does it bode when in a time of peace cipher dispatches are sent to and fro, as if there were hostile armies in the land?

I see the papers are alluding to and copying very generally Dr. Holmes' scorchingly sarcastic paragraphs in the last Atlantic Monthly, on the American craze for high-sounding lodge titles. I believe it is Emilio Castelar who says, "A clever satire always appears by the side of a great wrong that is going to pieces." All history shows that the light infantry of wit and humor generally moves to the attack before the heavily armed cavalry of truth and logic have time to get under way. Erasmus had convulsed Europe with his "Praise of Folly," before the citadel of Rome had begun to tremble under the sturdy blows of Luther. So the keen lance of Dr. Holmes' wit—who at three score years and ten shows all the vigor and brightness that in his early prime marked the "Autocrat of the Breakfast Table"—has punctured the windbag of lodge conceit and folly with very telling effect; although Sir Michael and Sir Hans may not be able to appreciate the full force of the joke, as the literary attainments of many of these modern knights are on a par with those of their prototypes in the middle ages who prided themselves on their ignorance of reading and writing, and such like clerkly arts.

Boston has been as thoroughly given up to the Grand Army as Chicago to the Odd-fellows, and as it is estimated that she has reaped a very handsome financial harvest by the means—some even estimate it as high as two million dollars—she probably would not be averse to playing the part of hostess to such vast throngs even oftener. How much Grand Army money has gone into the coffers of the bar-tenders it is of course impossible to estimate. Strict commands were issued to the veterans to keep sober until parade day was over, but many of them it is to be feared when that period was safely passed needed the sarcastic apology of the Inter Ocean which remarks that "the veterans who have now returned home, and who walk in a kind of zigzag fashion should be excused on the ground that they have been wandering through the crooked streets of Boston."

Boston culture has taken so kindly to the study of the new international language of Volapuk that she is honored by being chosen as the gathering place for the first annual convention. China, Japan, New Zealand, Turkey, Russia, Egypt, India and South America show the names of students who have obtained diplomas, side by side with those of Europe and America; and it looks as if the time may soon come when it will be a universal medium of communication, thus doing away in a large degree with the curse of Babel. Should this be so, its humble inventor, Johann Martyn Schleyer, will have done more to prevent war, and bring about really "fraternal" relations among the inhabitants of the world than all the secret societies that ever had or ever will have being.

The removal of the city's penal institutions from Deer Island in consequence of the order from the Secretary of War to fortify the harbor, is greatly troubling the authorities, as there is no available island in the harbor that can be used in its stead for the purpose of a miniature Botany Bay; and any plan to move them to some point inland near Boston, besides involving a vast expense will be sure to be fought to the last inch by the inhabitants of the unlucky locality selected. It is a notorious fact that the great majority of the prisoners sent to Deer Island are committed for drunkenness; so that if Boston was only a prohibition city she might not need a Deer Island at all. The foes Boston has most to fear are already within her gates and licensed to prey on the bodies and souls of her people. The harbor defences when fully completed according to the government program will have 130 sea-coast mortars of the largest size and latest make, some 50 guns of the newest and heaviest pattern, ranging from an eight-inch breech loader weighing 30 tons to 16-inch guns weighing 107 tons, and carrying a ton shell the distance of nearly fifteen miles.

And perhaps when the grass has grown over the ramparts, and the sea-birds have made their nests in the mouths of the rusty cannon, they will serve the best use to which they were ever put by pointing some wise and witty essay on human folly for the moralist of a future generation—another Dr. Holmes, perhaps, who shall discourse "Over the Teacups" when "The mossy marbles rest

On the lips that we have prest
In their bloom;
And the names we loved to hear
Have been carved for many a year
On the tomb."

ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

—Prof. J. C. Hutchison, for so many years connected with Monmouth College, has been tendered the presidency of the Eastern Iowa Normal College, situated at Columbus Junction.

CORRESPONDENCE.

TESTIMONIES AT THE BAPTIST VINEYARD ASSOCIATION.

COTTAGE CITY, Martha's Vineyard, }
Mass., Aug. 16, 1890. }

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—God rules and the work goes on; the leaven of opposition to the works of darkness is slowly but surely permeating the Christian world. Here and there, now and then, the effect is manifest, and strengthens the faith of us who have borne the burden and heat of the day. Religious papers, long silent, criminally silent, pricked at length by a quickened conscience, have at this late hour dared to say a brave word for God and his church and against the devil and his lodge. Religious gatherings also listen to the truth without giving a rebuke in return.

Here in Martha's Vineyard close by the steamboat landing "Morgan's Freemasonry" is openly on sale. A few, who a few years ago knew nothing of Masonry and kindred orders, meet us this year in full sympathy with our work. My good wife and I have distributed tracts and said a good word for the truth as occasion has offered. The next morning after arriving, as I passed the reception room of the house where we are stopping, I heard an old gentleman criticising a tract on immortality, and handed him the Cynosure of July 31, remarking, "That contains an article from my pen on the subject you are discussing, which may interest you," and left the house. I had made but a step or two when he called to me and asked me if I was the A. M. Paull who was so strongly opposed to secretism. He proved to be Rev. J. Davis, of East Marshfield, a strong Anti-mason, and we were friends at once. The result of this providential meeting was an earnest discussion of the subject of secret societies at the house in the evening and at other times during our stay here, thus reaching several persons who had never thought seriously upon the subject, among whom was Alexander Abu-khalil, a Syrian, converted to the true faith and studying in this country for the ministry.

At one of the public prayer meetings the leader mentioned secret societies as one thing that had at last to confess, "We have done all we can for you, we can do nothing for your soul." Now I believe as a Christian consecrated to God's service I must let no opportunity slip that demands a testimony for the truth, so at a proper time, I arose and referring to that statement of the leader, said: "If there is a secret society anywhere that ever made such a confession, I would like to know it. I should look upon it as a curiosity. So far as I know secret societies claim sufficiency in themselves for every need of the soul, and send every one of their members at death to the grand lodge above." I added a bit of my personal experience with the Temple of Honor.

One afternoon, a discussion on church organization brought out sentiments in line with the rock-bed principles of the N. C. A., and such organizations as King's Daughters, Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor, and other like societies usurping the work of the church and annulling the covenant of the church were spiritedly and fearlessly discussed to great profit. This morning at the early hour of 6 o'clock Dr. Justin D. Fulton took charge of a little meeting in which the subject of Romanism was discussed, and in which my good brother Davis testified to the truth by holding up to view other societies which hold the same attitude toward the truth as does Romanism, specially referring to the grand secret society encampment in Boston this week.

"God is on the field when most invisible."

ALBERT M. PAULL.

ECHOES FROM THE CAMP GROUNDS.

PLEASANT PLAINS, O., Aug. 18, 1890.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—The Methodist Protestant camp grounds are three and a half miles from Washington C. H., Ohio. Meetings have been held here for the past twelve years. On Sabbath, the 3d inst., there were 1,000 people present.

Driving out from Washington we passed a beautiful home. The family was sitting in the yard, seeming to enjoy their elegant surroundings. This we remarked to the driver—a farmer near by. He said: "I do not see how they can enjoy it. That man bought his farm and mortgaged the land to pay for it. Then he borrowed $20,000 from his neighbors to improve it, putting up that fine house and barn and furnishing them in the latest style. Then he deeded all to his wife. We creditors were powerless. The family has since been living there in luxury. That is a common occurrence in Washington. It is calculated to weaken one's confidence in men."

That is a sore evil under the sun. It is only another manifestation of the unscrupulous determination to get rich quickly at any sacrifice of honor and principle. It is another form of the spirit which sustains the Louisiana lottery. We are glad to see the righteous indignation discovered by Christian citizens against that crime. As Phineas smote Zimri and Cozbi, so this people have struck down this octopus with the javelin of the law.

But why should the public conscience not be as sensitive respecting the liquor crime? If it is such a great sin for Louisiana to collect $1,250,000 license per year from the lottery, why is it not equally criminal for Ohio to collect $4,000,000 a year from the saloon? As Lincoln said, "What is wrong in Massachusetts is wrong in South Carolina."

Last Sabbath there were about 5,000 people at the Shiloh camp meeting. This is an M. E. association. Rev. D. H. Ketcham had charge. I preached three times on that day. As indicating the interest of the people in reform ideas I received a pressing invitation to return next year.

The M. E. church of Goshen, O., arranged a course of lectures last spring to raise money for their Sabbath-school. They invited us to deliver the first one. The committee informed me that our National Reform address was liked the best of all and they wanted another. These straws indicate the direction of the current of thought. There is a sensibly-felt want in the public mind. National Reform fills it. God's word must be applied to the questions of the day. That is their only solution.

DELAWARE, O., Aug. 21.—The Wesleyan Methodists separated from the M. E. church on account of slavery. They have some 18,000 members. They are anti-secret, prohibition and Sabbath-observing. It was my privilege to address the Central Ohio Conference near Delaware on Wednesday evening in the Bennington church. A fine audience assembled. Rev. H. R. Smith presided and made a few pointed remarks. He was a member of the Ohio legislature from 1880 to 1884, and the author of the Smith Sabbath-closing law. We were entertained at his home and drawn by his horse from the station to the seat of conference. Mr. Marcus Phillips, an old reader of the Cynosure, who has opposed the lodge from his boyhood, a man of the strictest integrity, whose devotion to principle is remarked by all who know him, gave us a hearty good welcome to his home. Give us a million such citizens and our reforms would be accomplished facts at once. President Teter and Father Ritchey are also devoted friends of this cause. In fact, the whole conference is a unit.

The Prohibitionists of Delaware county held their convention last Tuesday. In their platform they recognized Almighty God as the source of all authority, the Lord Jesus Christ as the King of nations and the Bible as the fountain of all law. Such action will have a grand influence in educating public sentiment.

I have been told of a church in New York that had a saloon in the basement. A wag wrote of it: "They have the spirit above and spirits below. The spirit above is the spirit of love; the spirits below are the spirits of woe. The spirit above is the spirit of mind; the spirits below are the spirits of wine."

The strike on the New York Central railroad has assumed alarming proportions. It does seem that it will be necessary for Congress to pass a law regulating the relations existing between great labor organizations and moneyed corporations. The first are determined to have their "rights," and the second are bent on being "independent."

Senator Plumb of Kansas has sounded a timely warning against liquor-selling in the Capitol. It is a burning shame that the Christian temperance sentiment of this country should be openly and flagrantly insulted in the national legislature.

J. M. FOSTER.

HEAVEN, PARADISE AND THE DEAD.

After death, what? This is the question of the ages; and it will be until we learn to "seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness." The numerous letters coming to us on this topic show that we are all profoundly interested in the future state; and that, while much is told us of that condition in the Word of God, much more remains untold of which finite mind can have no comprehension. If to Paul those heavenly scenes were impossible of description, it is certain that to most men of the present day they would be impossible of comprehension. The Cynosure has given some space to the views of brethren, derived from Scripture study, and it is manifest that no one man yet perfectly comprehends what has been told us by the Holy Spirit. We give below portions of two other letters, and ask the brethren who are eager to be heard that the Cynosure must be reasonable in dealing with this topic as with all others.—Ed.

WHERE IS PARADISE?

The word Paradise used in the 46th verse of the 23rd chapter of Luke is used in two other places in the New Testament, and nowhere else.

1. In 2 Cor. 12:2-4 inclusive the Apostle Paul, vindicating his apostleship, says, "I knew a man in Christ, above fourteen years ago (whether in the body, I cannot tell; or whether out of the body, I cannot tell, God knoweth), such an one caught up to the third heaven. And I knew such a man, whether in the body, or out of the body, I cannot tell, God knoweth; how that he was caught up into Paradise and heard unspeakable words which it is not lawful for a man to utter." Paradise then is "up," not down, the "heaven," not Sheol, or Hades.

2. In Rev. 2:7. When John, "in the isle that is called Patmos for the Word of God, and for the testimony of Jesus Christ was in the Spirit on the Lord's day," he heard and saw Jesus in his heavenly glory, who said to John among other things, "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life which is in the midst of the Paradise of God." Rev. 2:7.

But this tree of life was "in the midst of the street of the holy city, New Jerusalem, which cometh down from God out of heaven." This tree of life is "on either side of the" "pure river of water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God." But the throne of God is heaven. Isa. 66:1; Matt. 5:34. Then Paradise is heaven.

What, then, becomes of the idea that Christ preached to the antediluvian sinners in hell during the three days when his body was in the tomb, if his soul and spirit were at that time throned at the right hand of the Father in heaven? I believe it to be a total misinterpretation of 1 Peter 3:19, 20 to put any such a meaning as that upon the passage. Undoubtedly "the spirits in prison, which sometime were disobedient," refers to impenitent antediluvian sinners imprisoned in hell. Undoubtedly the Holy Spirit, through Peter, here teaches that Christ by the Spirit once preached to those prisoners. "For the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy" from Genesis to the Revelation. Rev. 19:10.

So, also, Christ by the Spirit preached unto the sinners who came out of Egypt by Moses, for unto them was the Gospel preached as well as unto us: "For unto us was the Gospel preached as well as unto them." Heb. 4:2. But some when they had heard did provoke, Heb. 3:16. "Wherefore I was grieved with that generation, and said they do always err in heart, and they have not known my ways. So I swear in my wrath, they shall not enter into my rest." Heb. 3:10, 11.

How long did Jesus preach by the Spirit unto this generation of sinners who were with Moses? The record says, "Your fathers tempted me, proved me, and saw my works forty years." Heb. 3:9. Thus while Jesus was preaching the Gospel, by the Spirit, in Moses, to the generation who came out of Egypt, some of them were hardening their hearts and provoking God to anger, until at last, after they had repeated their disobedience and unbelief unto the tenth act, Num. 14:22, God swore in his wrath that they should not enter into his rest. There is no scriptural authority for asserting that after the Master of the house had thus "risen up and shut to the door" of pleading entreaty for the rebels of the wilderness, that the door of mercy was ever opened to them again.

In the same manner, when once the long-suffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the Ark was preparing, Jesus, by the Spirit, in Noah, preached to the people, who, during all these years, were disobedient. But Jehovah expressly said to that generation, "My spirit shall not always strive with (literally, be pressed down in) man. . . . yet his days shall be an hundred and twenty years." Gen. 6:3. Surely this was time enough for the people to learn, and for God to prove, by actual trial, whether they would repent at the preaching of Jesus by his Spirit in Noah. . . . WM. F. DAVIS, Chelsea, Mass.

"LET THE DEAD BURY THEIR DEAD!"

DEAR EDITORS:—It is with much hesitation that I review Bro. Porter's article in the Cynosure of July 17. The Cynosure is sacredly consecrated not to the world of the dead, but to this world. But there are many readers that hold views of the dead, radically different from Bro. P., but do not wish the Cynosure lumbered up with a subject on which there is such a divergency of views. It is for this reason that I confine myself to Bro. P.'s first proposition.

What does our brother attempt to prove in this proposition? That we have a two-fold nature? He quotes four texts which he thinks prove it. Do they? Now if the same Spirit that inspired these passages, elsewhere explains these texts to mean the very opposite of Bro. P.'s interpretation, then we are to take that explanation of the nature of man. Turn now to 1 Cor. 15:45-50; read it in the Greek. "Thus it is written," Gen. 2:7.

Now this living soul, the Holy Spirit by Paul says, was a physical or animal life. Now I might drop my pen and ask that God's own explanation be put in place of the brother's theory. But I will show that the interpretation of other texts are equally erroneous. Eccl. 12:7. Read in place of "spirit," "life which goes to God who gave it." Any Hebrew scholar will tell you the Hebrew word is often thus used. Who knows that the life of man goes to God who gave it? Now John 11:26,—not dead for they will be awakened when God comes. So Paul taught, see Thess. 4:14 to end; and John 6:53-56. Jesus teaches in the clearest, most positive manner, that the condition of eternal life is to believe in him. How could that be if men have eternal life by birth? In the same chapter he teaches that eternal life is given by the resurrection.

The remarkable histories Dr. Nelson gives are revelations. I have seen such cases in persons who were not dying.

Had Bro. P. known he would have been reviewed, he would have written with more care. [He expected it.—Ed.] In one moment he says there is a vacuum all the way from the top of our atmosphere to paradise that no breathing animal could pass through. The next moment he tells us that Enoch, Elijah and Paul passed through it. When will we cease chaining Omnipotence down by the limitations of our ignorance? His philosophy of the resurrection is so peculiar and unscriptural that I think it safe to say he denies a resurrection. In Phil. 3:20, 21, it is written, "Our citizenship is from heaven, from whence, also, we wait for a Saviour, our Lord Jesus Christ: who shall fashion anew the body of our humiliation, that it may be conformed to the body of his glory, according to the working whereby he is able even to subject all things unto himself," (revised version). No words can make the bodily resurrection plainer.

Bro. P. writes as if the conversation with the thief on the cross forever settles his theory. Concerning that conversation I have but two things to say. On the morning of his resurrection Jesus said, "I have not yet ascended," etc. We have his word, therefore, that he did not enter paradise on the day of his death.

It is worthy of profound consideration that he did not use "hameran," the ordinary word for "to-day;" but "sameran," which is almost universally translated "now." So far as we know there was no created being in the universe that knew why Christ was hanging on the cross. And yet this thief knew Jesus was a king with a kingdom; and confides in him his eternal destiny; and the answer of Jesus was as if he had said, Do you confide in me now when dying as a malefactor? Then now, in the hour of your wondrous faith, I make you the promise that you shall be with me in my kingdom. C. C. FOOTE, Detroit.

PITH AND POINT.

WORDS OF CHEER.

God is on your side, be not discouraged. With best wishes for you, the Cynosure, and the National reform you represent, I am as ever,—R. S. MORTON.

Money is very close here, but I am doing the best I can. Bro. Osborn says the Cynosure is the best paper he knows of.—CYRUS SMITH.

TRACTS IN TEXAS.

I will still keep trying to get subscribers. The tracts you sent me were all carefully distributed. We had quite a good meeting, and the tracts were generally received with thanks. When a preacher tells us that "a man must first be a good Christian before he can become a good Mason" the tendency is to counteract the influence of the tracts. But the tracts will preach, and I am satisfied that good was done and will distribute all you send me.—BENJAMIN ULSE, Bowie, Tex.

BRO. SMITH'S HEADQUARTERS

Many of your readers will remember we came here a little less than one year ago, expecting to remain to work here, and at Minneapolis. We were soon called to work at the East, and in Canada. Since then we have found the saloon, like the devil, is bound to get a foothold here. Having selected this spot as our general headquarters, we have made a more permanent move here of late; hence our postoffice now is Crandon, Forest Co., Wis. Here we are bound to do our part, not only to keep out the saloon, but help all of God's workers whom we can at the North and elsewhere, to destroy the works of the devil in general. For this end Jesus came to this world, and for this end he has a church in the earth.—RUFUS SMITH.

"THE U. B. VINDICATOR."

This paper does not seem to lack "definiteness" of aim as ammunition in the fight between truth and error on the church question. It is as "a good soldier (truth-teller) of Jesus Christ." Every U. B. should arm himself with a copy and procure several to sell or lend to his neighbors. There are but a few liberal leaders and those of the same spirit, who love darkness rather than light on this subject, that will not read and appreciate it. Those who live on Decatur circuit can procure a copy by writing to me at DeKalb, Iowa.—CYRUS SMITH.

ST. JOHN AT ZANESVILLE, O.

At our county convention at Zanesville, Governor St. John of Kansas gave us an address. Jesus Christ was not excluded or forgotten by that convention, neither in prayer or speech. Bless God! But I believe all the officers of the convention belong to the secret empire. We are lodge-ridden in this State. They ride us up to heaven's gate, then hitch us outside.—W. N. WILSON, Freeland, O.

LITERATURE.

ILLUSTRATIONS OF MASONRY. Wolves in sheep's clothing. Dedicated to a research into the secrets and mysteries of oath-bound secret organized societies or associations and comments on the same. By James H. Jones. Pp. 270. Cambridge, N. Y.

Last year Mr. Jones, who is an aged gentleman, issued the above volume in handsome form and copyrighted it. It contains: (1) The old Morgan ritual with which we have long been familiar and Miller's introduction. (2) "A Key to the higher degrees of Freemasonry," "By a member of the Craft." This is reprinted from an edition published in Cincinnati in 1827 by Matthew Gardner. The copyright was by Levi Smith July 9th of that year. (3) The comments of Mr. Jones which occupy some thirty-five pages and which refer to such practical illustrations of the Masonic spirit and power as have come under his personal observation. We do not know as the book is for sale. Its wide circulation would instruct the people in the shameful rites of the lodge.

The Missionary Review of the World for September is promptly to hand with a rich and varied table of contents. The leading article is from the pen of the venerated Dr. Anderson Thomson, of Edinburgh, Scotland, known the world over for his work and high position. His subject—The Mission in Basuti Land—will intensely interest every reader. Dr. Ellinwood, of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions, writes on Woman's Work for Woman, a paper worthy of the writer and of the theme. Dr. Pierson, one of the editors, has a masterly article on the Supernatural Factor in Missions which is worthy of profound study. The article by Rev. D. L. Leonard on Mormon Proselytism will not only interest but astound the public by its array of historical facts. It is a paper that merits special attention. The great conference of missionaries at Shanghai (432 members) receives large attention. The Review sent a special representative from Japan to report its proceedings; and besides, Dr. Happer, of the Christian College of Canton, a leading member of the Conference, gives a ringing paper on its important action, also the four appeals to the churches are given in the Review. The translations from foreign missionary periodicals are full and valuable. The other seven departments are each and all full of intelligence, correspondence, able original papers on China, Japan, Korea, etc., editorial notes, reports of societies, statistics of missions, and the latest news from all parts of the world. It is fully up to its own high standard of merit.

Dr. Albert Shaw, who recently contributed a striking article on Glasgow in the Century, is to write a series of papers for that magazine during the coming year, on "Municipal Government in Europe and America." He will give studies of metropolitan London and Paris; the municipal system in Berlin and other German cities; recent progress of Italian cities, etc. It will be the endeavor of the author to impart in these papers suggestions of value in our own country.

OBITUARY.

From the Prohibition Era of Princeton, Ind., dated the 8th inst., we learn first of the death of an old friend of our cause and a seceded Mason, REV. LEWIS WILSON of Rumble, White county, Ind. The Era says;

Lewis Wilson, minister of the Gospel, was the fourth child and second son of Joshua and Comfort M. Wilson, and was born in Montgomery township, Gibson county, Ind., October 15th, 1814. His father was a farmer, and Lewis through life was strongly attached to the farm.

As soon as he could read the Bible was placed in his hands, and while quite young he memorized a large part of the New Testament. He was a member of the first Sabbath-school organized in the township, and was noted for his proficiency in the Scriptures. Being a diligent and thoughtful reader of the Bible, he was led through the light of its holy pages in the year 1839 to embrace fully the great principles of Christianity, and the Bible became in fact his rule of faith and practice through life. He was deliberate and cautious in his decisions, but when he saw the truth he unflinchingly adhered to it, and would defend it, if necessary, with his life.

On the 15th of October, 1838, he was married to Miss Sarah Skelton, who belonged to a large and influential family.

In February, 1847, he became a member of the Cumberland Church, and in April following united with the Indiana Presbytery and at once commenced preaching, and was ordained April 14th, 1849, according to the formula of that body. Soon after he received a call by the congregations in Pike county where he removed and took pastoral charge of the several little organizations, where he labored incessantly and acceptably, laying a permanent foundation of morals for the whole people, and doing effectual work for Christ. He remained in this charge until for the peace of his own conscience, the good of humanity, and the cause of Christ, he was forced to withdraw from the Presbytery; that body having at its sessions in Washington, Daviess county, in the fall of 1854, passed a resolution forbidding ministers to preach against the institution of slavery.

Lewis Wilson, who some years before had vowed that he would wage an unceasing warfare against the institution, was one of those for whom the resolution was aimed. At the following spring sessions of Presbytery he introduced a resolution declaring that it was the duty of ministers to oppose all sin, and as slavery was a sin it was the duty of ministers to oppose it. When he arose to speak in defense of his resolution he was composed, but his whole appearance was as one impressed with the power of divine truth. He planted himself on the Word of God, and in a masterly manner applied the logic of truth in a way that made the advocates of slavery see that they had more than "expediency" to contend with. At the close of his speech they adjourned Presbytery for several hours and then returned to the contest with the greater portion of Scripture marked where master and servant are spoken of, which they used in defence of slavery and against the resolution. After a long debate the roll was called and three recorded their names in favor of the resolution, and seventeen against it.

Presbytery in its published history mentioned his withdrawal but suppressed the truth under the guise of "for reasons not necessary to mention." And he left the world without any knowledge of their repentance toward him. He assisted in the organization of the Southern Association and aided in completing the organization of the State Association of Congregationalists in 1858. He was pastor of two small churches for more than thirty years and was beloved by the people, and when failing health compelled him to cease ministering to them it was with much reluctance. At one time he represented Pike county, in the Legislature. When asked "why did you renounce Masonry?" he replied: "Because there is no Lord Jesus Christ in it, and I cannot have a home where Christ is excluded. It is rank paganism, and I cannot mix it with the Gospel of Christ."

He boldly opposed the immoralities of the day, and was a friend to every true reform.

In his declining days it was a great satisfaction to him to recount how God in his providence had vindicated his course.

His wife, who was born January 19, 1819, and with whom he had lived for more than fifty years, was called away to her eternal rest June 5, 1890, leaving him to struggle with a fatal disease that had been preying on him for seven years; but the time of his departure was at hand; he had fought a good fight, he had finished his course, he had kept the faith, and at four A. M., of July 22, 1890, sitting in his chair, his "spirit returned unto the God who gave it," and received a crown of righteousness, which the Lord the righteous Judge gave him.

Some people are constantly troubled with boils—no sooner does one heal than another makes its appearance. A thorough course of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, the best of blood purifiers, effectually puts an end to this annoyance. We recommend a trial.

Hall's Hair Renewer is free from alcohol and dyes that injure the skin. It is scientifically prepared, and will restore gray hair to its original color and vigor.

MORE GOOD WORDS

FOR OUR PAPER.

LET THEM FIND AN ECHO IN EVERY HOME IN AMERICA.

I regard it as one of the best papers for ministers.—REV. W. L. CLARK, Weston, Ky.

I consider the Cynosure one of the best papers published.—REV. W. G. WADDLE, New Athens, O.

I love the Cynosure, it has caused me to leave all secret societies.—REV. JAMES H. HOKE, Searcy, Ark.

Your paper has induced me to wash my hands of the lodge.—REV. GEO. BAKER, Hillsdale, Washington.

I take several religious papers, but I would give up all for the Cynosure.—REV. J. P. RICHARDS, Chicago.

The great need of the Cynosure is seen everywhere out here.—REV. L. G. JORDAN, (prohibition orator,) Omaha, Neb.

I have taken the Cynosure from the first number, and do not know how to do without it.—REV. S. SMITH, Oberlin, La.

I have had the bright pages of the Cynosure from its first number, and it has testified to the truth.—JOSIAH SHAW, Durand, Wis.

In my short acquaintance with the Cynosure, I have learned to appreciate it very highly.—C. E. GIBSON, Pastor M. E. Church, Pullman, Washington.

A most excellent paper, advocating a noble cause. My prayer is for its success. Yours against secrecy and the saloon.—PROF. C. G. F. MILLER, Clay, Pa.

The paper is a great help to me. If I had not the Cynosure to-day, I would be a Mason. I thank God it came in time to save me.—REV. H. C. CADE, Camden, Ark.

Take it all in all, it is to my thinking the best periodical extant in the land. None other could fill its place and mission.—J. N. NORRIS, M. D., Birmingham, Iowa.

The Cynosure, under God, is a mighty power to create and concentrate sentiment which shall work the destruction of lodge-ry.—PROF. J. R. MILLIN, Knoxville College, Tenn.

The Cynosure is a welcome visitor to our home and hearts. It has fully converted my wife and myself to the principles of the N. C. A.—P. J. ROBIDOUX, New Orleans, La.

I have received and read the Christian Cynosure, and can say I never read any paper that so nearly takes a place by the Bible in my estimation.—J. W. MURRAY, M. D., Camden, Ark.

I am much pleased with the paper, and would not be without it. Every family in America ought to have this valuable journal.—REV. FRANK H. COWLES, Watts, Ala.

We are trying to prepare young men and women for the many duties of life. We request that you send us the Christian Cynosure.—PROF. E. W. BAILEY, Lane Institute, Tenn.

We enjoy your paper very much, and may God grant that the truths you disseminate may take root in this grand old mountain region.—REV. A. A. MYERS, Cumberland Gap, Tenn.

I am glad there is such a paper as the Christian Cynosure. I've had membership in Patriotic Sons of America, Phi Kappa Psi, and Knights and Ladies of Honor; but renounce them all.—WM. J. COULSTON, Holidaysburg, Pa.

We commend the Christian Cynosure to our members and ministers as the exponent of anti-secret reform, as well as a fearless and faithful advocate of all Christian reforms.—Vote of the Synod of the Reformed Presbyterian Church, 1890.

I have placed the Cynosure on file in the Congregational College associated with McGill. The result surpasses my anticipations. Your publications are eye-openers to the careless and unwary.—S. WINFRED MACK, McGill University, Montreal.

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 20 cents per pound:

1. Historical Sketch—National Christian Association.
3. Address to American Pastors.
4. Freemasonry in the Family.
5. President C. G. Finney on the duty of Christians towards the Lodge.
7. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
8. Modern Heathenism.
9. Ministers at Rival Altars.
12. Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodge.
15. Secrecy and Sin.
16. Selling Dead Horses.
17. History of Masonry.
18. Despotism Character of Freemasonry.
19. Freemasonry, a Christ-excluding Religion.

22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.

28. Nathaniel Colver, D.D., on Masonry.

33. Hon. Wm. H. Seward on Secret Societies.

37. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).

39. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?

44. D. L. Moody on Secret Societies.

45. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?

49. John Quincy Adams on the duty of American Voters.

Chapters in American Politics.

Masonry vs. Prohibition.

Decline of the G. A. R.

Christianity and Odd-fellowship. Part 1, 4 pages; part 2, 4 pages.

The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—20 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

NEW ENGLAND DEPARTMENT.—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent, No. 309, Tremont St., Boston.

WASHINGTON DEPARTMENT.—W. B. Stoddard, Agent, No. 215, 4½ St., Washington, D. C.

WESTERN DEPARTMENT.—Rev. C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Du Page Co., Ill.

PACIFIC DEPARTMENT.—Rev. M. H. Nichols, 712½ Clementina St., San Francisco, Cal.

COLLEGE AGENT, Rev. S. F. Porter, Cynosure office.

STATE AGENTS.

Minnesota, E. Hanson, Minneapolis.
New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimball, New Market.

Pennsylvania, Rev. J. T. Michael, 2942 Westmont Street, Philadelphia.

Alabama, Rev. G. M. Elliott, Selma.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
Rev. H. H. Hinman, Berea, Ky.
Nathan Callender, Montdale, Pa.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa.
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.
Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
Rev. E. Mathews, Long Island City, N. Y.
E. Barnetson, Haskinsville, N. Y.
Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
A. W. Parry, Annawan, Ill.

FINNEY ON MASONRY.

The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles C. Finney of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In clc. 35c; per dozen $7.50. Paper cover 35c; per dozen $8.50.
No Christian's library is complete without it. Send for a copy in cloth and get a catalogue of books and tracts sold by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST. CHICAGO.

THE N. C. A. BUILDING

(The gift of Philo Carpenter.)

—AND OFFICE OF—

The Christian Cynosure,

221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

The National Christian Association

PRESIDENT—Bishop Milton Wright, Dayton, O.

VICE PRESIDENT—Rev. Geo. R. Milton, Elgin, Ill.

COR. SEC'Y and TREASURER—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SECRETARY—Rev. E. R. Worrell, Washington Heights, Ill.

DIRECTORS—T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, John Gardner, J. M. Hitchcock, Jerome Howe, G. R. Milton, Wm. Pinkney, J. P. Richards, Alexander Thomson, E. Whipple, E. R. Worrell.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS.

NEW ENGLAND.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic, Conn.; Sec'y, Miss E. E. Flagg, Wellesley, Mass.; Treas., Z. Graves Harris, Mass.

ALABAMA.—Pres., Prof. Pickens; Sec., G. M. Elliott; Treas., Rev. C. B. Curtis; all of Selma.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., Rev. G. R. Milton, Elgin; Sec., A. H. Hiatt, Jr., Wheaton; Treas., Ezra A. Cook, Chicago.

INDIANA.—Pres., William H. Figg, Reno; Sec., S. L. Cook, Albion; Treas., Benjamin Ulsh, Silver Lake.

IOWA.—Cor. Sec., C. D. Trumbull, Morning Sun; Rec. Sec., W. L. Enlow, Birmingham; Treas., Wm. Crawford, Washington.

KANSAS.—Pres., J. S. T. Milligan, Denison; Sec., S. Hart, LeCompton; Treas., J. A. Torrence, Denison.

MAINE.—Pres., Isaac Jackson, Harrison; Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W. Goddard, West Sidney.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., S. B. Sjoblom, Fergus Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul; Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., B. F. Miller, Eagleville; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec., A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

NEBRASKA.—Pres., S. Austin, Fairmount; Cor. Sec., W. Spooner, Kearney; Treas., J. C. Fye.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., A. A. Hoyt, Littleton; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., Isaac Hyatt, Gilford Village.

NEW YORK.—Pres., Prof. A. R. Dodd Houghton; Sec., Rev. W. A. Haslett, Belmont; Treas., P. D. Miller, Newfane.

OHIO.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Parry; Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Senecaville; Cor. Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Senecaville.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., Nathan Callender, Montdale; Cor. Sec., E. J. Chalfant York; Treas., J. C. Young, Custer City.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. W. Wood Baraboo; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie.

HAVE YOU EXAMINED

The list of Books and Tracts for sale by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. Look it over carefully and see if there is not something you want for yourself or for your friend. Send for full catalogue to 221 W. MADISON STREET, CHICAGO.

The Christian Cynosure.

J. BLANCHARD, EDITOR.

HENRY L. KELLOGG, ASSOCIATE EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, AUGUST 28, 1890.

Christians do not make enough of the "presence" of God. He is "a God at hand and not afar off," Jer. 23: 23. He is in the room with us; out of sight but within hearing; as a friend in a closet; and so can be spoken to.

God's loving kindness "is better than life," Ps. 63: 3. For, when experienced, it exempts from all misery and fills us with joy. This, mere life cannot do. Yet men love and cling to life above and beyond all things.

In "Pith and Point" of our last week's number appear three friends: two aged 91, and the other 92. We suggest to these three patriarchs to read Psalm 91, especially verse 16, "With long life will I satisfy him, and show him my salvation."

"For Israel hath forgotten his Maker and buildeth temples."—Hosea 8:14.

The United States is now following the United States of Palestine, which in the last part of the reign of David and that of Solomon no other nation dared to attack. "The songs of Zion" have now given place to the screams of the jackal in the synagogues of Galilee, and owls hoot in the ruins of the cities of Judea. The people, what few there are, have no civil rights, elections, mails, schools or newspapers; and wild beasts burrow in the temples of Asia Minor. We are now copying their architecture, imitating their apostasy from our Maker, and, without repentance, shall inherit their doom.

"THE MAN IN THE PROCESSION."—Our neighbor, the Advance, under the above head makes fun of the thousands and tens of thousands of members of secret orders who have paraded the streets of our cities of late. Its article is forcible, and would be brilliant if the subject was not fearful. The editor seems puzzled to know the motive power of these costly processions. Yet Dr. Goodwin's speech of April last shows that the mother, model and type of the secret orders in this country, in its origin, was simple Asiatic idolatry and pagan mysteries. And though the Chicago directory, if the Advance had time to look at it, would show fifteen hundred secret societies in the city to one-third the number of Christian churches; and while laborers are spending toward millions of money on these processions and their degrees and ornamentation, a Roman Catholic who is perfectly subservient to the priesthood of Rome, who are openly seeking the destruction of our schools, is calling off seventy-two thousand laborers from the only four-track railroad in the world, in a strike to "protect their rights and liberties." Yet the Advance doubts whether we should imitate these lodges or oppose them!

DR. WALDENSTROM'S GOOD DOCTRINES.—"All of God's Word teaches us that it was God's eternal plan of salvation that Jesus should taste death for all."

"It was the desire of the Father, because he would save the world, and it could not be saved in any other way."

"By the wrath of God may also be meant that at the last day he will forever separate from himself all those who have obstinately defied all his endeavors to save them." "And Christ himself is the one who will execute the sentence. Therefore this wrath is called, also, the wrath of the Lamb." "It is a divine truth that he that seeth the Son seeth the Father."

"The Scriptures testify that man by nature is estranged from God. The very mind, the entire nature, as inherited from Adam, with all its quality, state and condition, is enmity against God."

"The entire work of reconciliation is of God, who dwelt and worked in Christ; therefore it is he who, through Christ, has reconciled to himself every man who is reconciled."

"All sorrow which simple souls cause themselves on the question as to whether, perchance, they belong to the elect or to the non-elect is entirely needless and hurtful... the work of Christ holds good for all men."... "It is common for the devil to terrify such souls."

"God has in other ways manifested himself... But the Bible never says, God was in nature, prophets or apostles, reconciling the world. No, but in Christ, only in Christ."

SCANDINAVIAN THEOLOGY.

To the Chicago Swedish editors, Princell, Halner and Martenson,

BRETHREN BELOVED IN THE LORD:—Your weekly issues, amounting to some thirty thousand, reach no inconsiderable portion of the Scandinavian Americans, who must now exceed two millions, mostly in the northern United States. This avalanche of people from the snowy North, now fresh to the study of our institutions, are said to be "more American than the native Americans." The Cynosure regards them and their prospective vast increase with awe and hope. They were originally Lutherans. Their hard soil afforded too small ecclesiastical revenues to lure a greedy priesthood, and their hard sense rejected the unmarried janizaries of the pope. The Lutheran Reformation destroyed almost all the secret lodges on the continent. Those of Switzerland were suppressed by the Helvetic Diet in A. D., 1522; and the Diet of the German Empire, at Ratisbonne, March 16, 1707, canceled the few weak grand lodges, and ordered brick and stone masons to settle their differences by the civil tribunals. The Scandinavians retain their abhorrence of secret lodges still; and hold with Luther and the Bible to salvation by faith in Christ.

As we have seen the best educated and most pious churches of the United States drawn away from correcting practical abuses, such as slavery, by frivolous theological controversies, we are alarmed to see our Swedish Americans being drawn into a similar net.

If you turn to the extract from Dr. Waldenstrom's travels in America last year (page 4, last week's Cynosure), you find it stated that Ingersoll's "infidelity seems to be the result of the distortion of the Christian doctrines which the prevailing dogmatism has inflicted on American theology." And he adds,

"In these dogmas, now so generally accepted, God is represented, not as a Father, who in unchangeable love sends his only begotten Son in search of the bewildered children to bring them back to the forsaken fold, but rather as a grim tyrant, who, alleging his righteousness, cannot accept or pardon a sinner unless he [God] has first inflicted upon a substitute that punishment which the sinner has merited." And Dr. W. thinks this American dogma makes conversion not the sinner turning to God, but "away from him, towards Christ, behind whom he [the sinner] seeks to hide from the terrible Lord of vengeance." Read and ponder the whole extract.

We can only account for this terrible caricature of "American theology" by a great and good man by supposing him, like his great namesake, Peter the apostle, when Satan sifted him as wheat. No such dogmas prevail in the United States as he affirms. The churches hold and believe that the Father would have given Christ "more than twelve legions of angels" if the Saviour had asked them, to have prevented his crucifixion. But we believe also, with Dr. Waldenstrom, that "the world could be saved in no other way." ("The Blood of Jesus," p. 5.) We agree with Drs. Princell and Waldenstrom that Christ's death was necessary to break the power of Satan and also to subdue the obdurate heart of the sinner. But we believe also that if the Father had gone on pardoning sinners from mere compassion, without an atonement, he would have shaken the stability of his own government over mind. So Dr. Waldenstrom sees and says of the death of Christ, "The world could not be saved in any other way." The eyes of a universe of worlds were on ours. And if Christ had not died to "magnify the law and make it honorable," no sinner could have been safely pardoned. This Dr. Waldenstrom sees and says as well as we, as we have twice quoted his words, "The world could be saved in no other way." Christ's death was necessary to make it possible that "God could be just and the justifier of him that believeth in Jesus." So he "bare our sins in his own body on the tree."

What, then, is the matter? Dr. Waldenstrom is fearless and sincere. What is he driving at?

We answer: He left the state church in Sweden, and was doubtless assailed by its bishops. But their assaults, if any, are not in English. It may be that to justify a church not professing regeneration, they taught that Christ paid the sinner's debt and satisfied the law so that their king and bishops could be saved in their sins; but a church teaching such doctrine in the United States would be scouted.

It is true, however, that Ingersoll has habitually dishonored his father and mother, imputing false ideas to one and un-motherly conduct to the other; and he has caricatured and smirched Christians who love Christ because "he freely gave his life a ransom for us." But we had not expected to live long enough to witness Dr. Waldenstrom's casting his (Ingersoll's) filthy garment on the churches of Christ, and American churches at that!

Nor does the Augsburg Confession contain the extravaganzas which Dr. Waldenstrom condemns. D'Aubigne says, "The Protestants, as the grand doctrine of the Reformation, taught that man is justified by faith alone," "which sees that in Christ we have a merciful Father" (v. 4, p. 188). This he says, writing of the Augsburg Confession, which is the creed of the Swedish state church, and of the Lutherans in this country. And this makes the Father not a "grim tyrant," but one in the atonement with the loving Son. This is as strong as anything Dr. Waldenstrom has written or can write, showing that the Father is as loving as the Son.

Yet it is true that hymn writers and theorists can be found who sing with John Wesley,

"My God is reconciled,
His pardoning voice I hear;
He owns me for his child,
I can no longer fear."

And the cry of Christ's humanity, suffering on the cross, "My God! My God! why hast thou forsaken me?" justifies the expression of Wesley that the Father was "reconciled" by the death of Christ, because as Waldenstrom says, "The world could be saved in no other way." And it could be saved in this way. After the terrible agony on the cross, at which the universe shuddered, no sinner in any other world could hope for impunity in sin.

We respectfully submit that no theological difference exists between these parties which justifies the irritation and consumption of time by controversy. The Lutherans should love the Free Mission church because they have suffered persecution by the state church, and asserted freedom of conscience for them. And the Free churches should love the Lutherans because they and their fathers have been trained by them. The thousands who throng to hear Waldenstrom were taught the Scriptures in Lutheran churches. The two are now separate bodies and can correct each other's shades of error without a fight. Each will soon call pastors from the other. Both abhor the lodge leprosy and should march shoulder to shoulder against this grievous curse of Christendom.

DR. WALDENSTROM.

In connection with the comments upon Dr. Waldenstrom's book and the relations of the Swedish churches, we give a portrait of the eminent Swede whose late visit to our country was so popular with large numbers of his countrymen. Dr. P. Waldenstrom was born in 1838 in the northern part of Sweden. His father was a physician, his mother a merchant's daughter; one as a parent was severe, the other gentle and amiable; but both inculcated strict morality upon their child. The memory of a falsehood told when a child rankled until years afterward it was confessed. The confession led to the presentation of a Bible to young Waldenstrom by a Christian aunt. The reading of the holy book, begun out of curiosity, led to Christ, whom the young man received as his Saviour and friend.

At this time Waldenstrom was a tutor in the family of the governor of a southern province, and the change in his faith and life caused a consternation; his friendship with his patron was broken, and he was commanded to separate himself from the company of his Christian friends under penalty of arrest, and was finally driven from the house in anger. A few years later (1862) he was assistant teacher in the high school at Wexjo, was made Doctor of Philosophy next year, professor in 1865, and theological professor in the Gefle school in 1874. He was ordained in the state church in 1864, and twice sought to give up teaching for the work of a pastor, but without success. In 1882 he left the state church and became fully identified with the Free churches of Sweden. He began to preach as occasion offered in 1858.

Dr. Waldenström's literary work has been largely of a polemical character. His first book was allegorical, "Adamson the Mill Owner, or Where art Thou?" published in 1863. Five years later he succeeded to the editorial control of the Pietist, a religious journal. His controversial writings began in 1872 when he had to defend his doctrine of the atonement, and did so in many pamphlets. He was also engaged with Rev. E. J. Ekman in editing the Witness in which they discussed theological and ecclesiastical questions. In 1883 he began the translation of a new version of the New Testament with notes which he anticipated would be the great work of his life.

The late visit to this country of this leader among his countrymen was at times an ovation. He crossed and recrossed the land, speaking in every large city at times to vast audiences. It must be regretted that he should have noticed Ingersollism, which is now greatly declining, and did not observe how fearfully a pagan philosophy is gaining in America through the wide influence of secret societies.

—If New England takes hold of the 50,000 list in earnest, we shall have to call on our friends in Illinois to maintain the standing of the "Prairie State" at the head of the list, as she has been these years.

—The Chautauqua letter to the United Presbyterian says that Knoxville College, Tennessee, is well represented at that popular resort. Miss Eliza B. Wallace, the lady principal, Prof. Millin, Miss Edith Shontz, Miss Alice Aikins, and Miss Maggie Telford, all of whom are of the Knoxville teaching force, are there variously engaged.

—We insert the sermon by the senior editor this week for those of our readers whose minds have inclined to literalize the symbols and costume of the coming of Christ. We have but one thing to do, viz., "Seek first the kingdom of God," which is "righteousness, peace and joy in the Holy Ghost." The glories of Christ's personal appearing are ineffable.

—The Pioneer-Press of St. Paul, Minn., published lately the abstract of a lecture by Rev. Dr. H. H. George on "Evolution and Christianity" in one of the churches of that city, in which he disproved the theory of evolution in general, and especially that particular exhibition of it known as theistic evolution. His argument was in that logical and forcible style with which we have become somewhat acquainted in his addresses at our national conventions.

—Let special attention be given to Bro. J. P. Stoddard's letter this week. If the Lord closes one door he will open another. Paul was forbidden by the Spirit that he should preach in the province of Asia, that he might hear and answer the cry from Macedonia. Bro. W. B. Stoddard is enthusiastic about Boston, and the goodly additions to our list show that it is, as he says, "a grand field." The seed sown year by year in trial and in tears will at the last bear sheaves for God's cause.

—It is announced that Rev. Wilbur F. Crafts of the American Sabbath Union will speak on "The Sunday Rest Movement" at the First Baptist Church in this city next Sabbath morning. In the afternoon at 4:30 he speaks in Farwell Hall. He has spoken twice at hearings before the labor committee of the United States Senate—in the first instance helping to secure the eight-hour law for letter carriers, in both cases urging their right to the weekly rest day. It is expected that at the meeting of August 31 many prominent advocates of the movement will be present. Invitations to speak have been extended to Dr. Herrick Johnson, Pres. C. A. Blanchard, Dr. Henson, Dr. Elvarts, and others. Another meeting will be held on Monday at noon at Farwell Hall, for further presentation and advocacy of the special lines of work of the Sabbath Association of Illinois. The question of Sunday and the World's Fair will receive special attention at these meetings.

—Dr. W. T. Meloy of this city writes to the United Presbyterian of Pittsburgh. The lodges here appear thus to him: "Chicago is this week to be taken possession of, the park abused, and the streets blockaded by the Odd-fellows' society. What this institution has ever done for the city or State that it should be accorded such privileges remains to be demonstrated. Is it not about time that their bombastic titles should be dropped? 'Patriarchs Militant' to the number of 12,000 are expected here. Secret orders are having their day, surely. We have grand orders of almost everything under the sun. Noble Foresters, Red Men, Elks, etc., ad nauseam. But still there is room for more. We have no special order of Porcupines, and some other beasts. They may after awhile be established. But so that somebody gets to wear a feather in his cap and carry a tin sword, and have his soul sent to the Grand Lodge above by men who may not believe in Christ at all, the end is accomplished."

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Rev. John G. Fee, of Berea, Kentucky, has been severely ill, but is now convalescent. Bro. Hinman was with him during his illness, but has since gone on a missionary tour to a new mountain district.

—Rev. R. T. Cross, whose discourse while pastor at Hamilton, N. Y., is still among the best of our reform pamphlets, is now in Minneapolis, Minn. The article from his pen which we borrow from the Missionary Review is worth a prayerful reading.

—Elder J. F. Browne was in the city last week for a brief space, having preached the Sabbath before for Rev. Alexander Thomson at Bartlett, Ill. He was on his way to Streator and other places in the interior of the State. Where shall he first respond to a call for a rousing lecture against secretism?

—Three years ago Bro. Waters Northrup, of Bloomingdale, Ill., had a severe fall, from the effects of which he was reported dead. The other day he climbed the stairs to our office on his crutches to renew old acquaintance and his subscription, better than a regiment of dead men. Bro. Northrup was one of Elder Barlow's strong helpers when he was pastor in Bloomingdale.

—Rev. J. W. Bain, D. D., former pastor of United Presbyterian churches in New Castle, Pa., and in this city, and a writer and speaker in our cause, is now pastor of a Presbyterian church at Altoona, among the mountains of Pennsylvania. He spends an August vacation in St. Paul, and preaches the five Sabbaths of the month in the House of Hope Presbyterian church of that city.

—Rev. Roland D. Grant of Boston was on the program of the Baptist Association at Martha's Vineyard of which Bro. Paull writes so agreeably. He was to preach Sabbath morning the 17th. On the Sabbath previous Rev. Dr. Morehouse was to speak. He is the secretary of the Home Missionary Society who promised to send any tract against secret societies which Dr. A. J. Gordon would endorse to all the Baptist home missionaries in his society. Among these in California is the eloquent young preacher, Rev. C. N. Hobart whose Thanksgiving sermon in Aurora, Ill., in 1882, which thrilled us all with its words of power and of truth against the secret lodge.

—A recent number of the Somerville, Mass., Citizen prints a portrait of Rev. F. O. Cunningham, pastor of the First Baptist church of that city, with a sketch of his life. Mr. Cunningham is not yet 29 years old, but has already become well known among the Christian workers of Massachusetts. He has a versatile genius. To his successful pulpit labors he adds a little variety with a home printing press. He is a fine musician. His assistance at the organ at our Tremont Temple conference last December was an agreeable feature of that meeting. He has also drilled choruses in his own church. He undertakes a department in Messiah's Herald of Boston, and is beginning successfully to write hymns also. Our own readers have the pleasure of knowing that he occasionally contributes to the Cynosure for their edification.

THE WARE MEETING AND THE FIFTY THOUSAND.

WEST BOYLSTON, Mass.

I spent Sabbath at Hoyt's Grove holding two interesting meetings, forenoon and evening. A heavy shower prevented many from attending the evening services, but we had a respectable number and a time of refreshing. The convention outlook is not all that could be desired, owing to the sickness of some, and the failure of others to respond who were relied upon to make the meeting a success, while the comers and goers would add to their numbers from day to day. I have conferred with the chairman and secretary of the committee, and owing to the unexpected obstructions by the illness of some, and inability of others, who had given encouragement that they would attend, the committee deem it best to postpone the meeting of the New England Association and hold such services as the occasion may require and the attendance justify, beginning on the evening of the 22d. If the friends are unable to find the time or for other reasons do not rally at these gatherings, I see no way but to visit them at their homes, and stir up a more active interest in their respective localities.

Perhaps the first work to be done is to secure readers for our literature, and especially for the Cynosure, which will carry its weekly message to the homes of all who can be induced to read it. I am not too old or too obstinate to learn methods and put them in practice, and the success attending my son's efforts in Boston, gives me both inspiration and encouragement to attempt more vigorous and persistent efforts in that line.

Shall we not strike hands and make a vigorous push to furnish

NEW ENGLAND'S QUOTA OF THE 50,000

readers asked for the "Polar Star of Reform?"

Facts already brought to the attention of pastors, editors and to the people through the medium of the Cynosure and other agencies of the N. C. A. have broken the silence and loosed the tongues and pens of some of New England's ablest preachers and writers; and, without abating one jot of our zeal upon other lines, is it not the dictate of wisdom and prudence to follow the leadings of Providence and enter where God opens the door, and push along the line where he has given the largest success? With thousands of weekly readers for the Christian Cynosure, the work of organizing an annual camp and maintaining it in New England would not be an impossible or even a difficult one. The co-operation of leading pastors in Boston in the convention in Tremont Temple last December; the forcible and unanswerable presentation of the danger of secret oaths by Joseph Cook in the Chicago convention last April; the manly and Christian stand taken by Dr. E. P. Goodwin, Col. Geo. R. Clarke and others in that same convention; the discussion of the lodge question by the Congregational ministers in the Vermont State Association and their entire unanimity in condemning it; and the opening of the columns of the Congregationalist, the Advance and the Pacific, indicate encouraging progress and the opening of a wide field which we ought to enter and occupy for righteousness and free government in the name of the Lord. If we are not ready to hold large conventions, let us do that which is both possible and every way practicable, viz., fill our full quota of the 50,000 readers asked for the Christian Cynosure.

J. P. STODDARD, N. E. Agent N. C. A.

STRIKES AND LABOR LODGES.

PRESS COMMENT.

CHICAGO NEWS, AUG. 11.

Instinctively public sympathy always leans toward the side of labor in these periodical conflicts with capital. That the employes of the New York Central had grievances, and perhaps serious ones, no fair-minded person will refuse to believe—for men with families dependent upon them do not relinquish employment for nothing. It is to be regretted, however, that peaceful counsels did not prevail, and that the strike is still considered by at least a portion of the Knights of Labor to be a coercive method of securing recognition as an organization.

It is doubtful whether the uniform sympathy

(Continued on 12th page.)

THE HOME.

A PLEA FOR THE HEATHEN.

I plead with those whose lives are bright,
For those who dwell in gloom,
On whom there breaks no starry rift
Of hope beyond the tomb;
I plead with those whose homes are fair,
For those whose homes are dim,
O guide them in the way to Christ
That they may learn of Him.

Borne far across blue-rounding waves,
A wailing voice I hear,
"Uplift us from this place of graves,
Alas! so vast and drear!"
That call from China's crowding host
Blends with the Hindu's cry,
"O sisters of the blessed life,
Come hither ere we die!"

Turn Eastward still; the rising sun
Looks down on eager bands,
Sweet daughters of sea-girt Japan,
Who stretch imploring hands,
And beg with eager hearts to-day
For Christian knowledge fain:
It cannot be their earnest plea
Shall come to us in vain?

Well may we scorn for gold and gems
And brodered garments fine,
To cumber Christ's victorious march,
To shame His conquering line;
The banner of the Cross shall float
From every mountain crest,
For He must reign o'er all the earth,
By all their King confessed.

He stoops to-day our aid to ask,
His name He bids us wear,
The triumph of His outward path
By sovereign grace we share:
O loiter not! to heathen gloom
Bear on the torch, His Word—
What glory for a ransomed soul
To help the Almighty Lord!

—Mrs. M. E. Sangster.

PRAYER AND MISSIONS.

Prayer is the church's vital breath in all its missionary work. Prayer and missions are as inseparable as faith and works; they are faith and works. The church at Antioch sent forth their first missionaries with fasting and prayer, and the success that attended those first missionary efforts was in answer to prayer. How many prayers are offered for every missionary; prayers by his home church, by personal friends, by himself, by the missionary society, the denomination, and by the church at large! To this fact it must be due in part that so few missionaries of all who have gone to heathen lands, among savage tribes, exposed to all sorts of perils, have met a violent death. The exceptions prove the rule, for God sees that it is best for the cause of missions that the surface desire be refused sometimes in order that the deeper desire be granted.

A poor mother of nine children in Vermont gave her mite to help send missionaries to the Sandwich Islands, and grieved because she could not give more. At family prayers she asked God to accept of one or more of her children. "That prayer," said one of her daughters, "struck me," and that daughter became the devoted wife and right royal helper of Missionary Wilder.

Missionaries need and greatly desire to be remembered by name in our prayers. When they go down into the depth of heathenism they want us to hold the rope, and we do not hold it unless we pray for them. One thing they want us to pray for is that they may be helped in learning the language. When Mr. Wilder had been in India but a short time, he was jokingly asked to preach in the native language. He tried and succeeded. The natives were astonished, and they said, "We prayed for him." One day he had preached in eight villages, and such was the indifference of the people that, wearied and discouraged, he sat under a tree to rest. While there he received a letter from a friend in Philadelphia, who, among other sympathetic things, said, "Brother Wilder, we are praying for you by name every Wednesday night." He felt refreshed at once. He arose, went two miles to a large town, called on the head man, who ordered his fifty clerks to stop work and listen. He spoke of Christ for an hour; tears were in their eyes, and they urged him to go on still longer.

Hear that prayer of that far-away sister missionary: "Oh, dear Lord, I have not time to pray this afternoon. Here are persons waiting for their poor bodies to be healed; souls are listening for the word of life to be spoken. Oh, dear heavenly Father, put it into the heart of some good Christian woman in America to pray for me while I go to minister to these thy little ones!"

The President of the United States can sit in his office and touch a button, and set in motion all the machinery in an exposition building in a far distant city. The humblest Christian in America can, from his closet, send a wave of spiritual power to the other side of the globe by way of the throne of grace. Pray, then, for the missionaries, and especially for your friends among them, for those whose names or work you happen to know.

When the first missionaries started for the Sandwich Islands in 1819 much prayer was offered for them, and what seasons of prayer they must have had on the brig Thaddeus during that tedious journey of many months! When they reached the islands they learned that the old king was dead, that the new king had abjured idolatry and destroyed the idols; and, behold! there was a nation without a religion all ready to receive the Christian faith. In that fact, and in the Pentecostal revivals that followed in later years, how wonderfully was prayer answered!

God's providences are very closely related to the prayers of God's people. A few years ago a German missionary society found itself in debt ten thousand thalers. Fourteen years before it had received as a gift three acres of what was supposed to be worthless land in South Africa. At this juncture diamonds were discovered upon it, and enough was realized by percentage paid by the miners to pay the debt.

The founder of the Friendly Islands Mission applied to the London Missionary Society for permission to start a mission on another island whose chief had requested it. While waiting in prayerful anxiety for an answer, a box was washed ashore which contained a letter giving the permission. The wrecked ship was never heard from, and no other article from it was ever found.

In 1815 Rev. B. Shaw went to Cape Town as a missionary, but on being forbidden by the Government to labor there, he bought a yoke of oxen and a wagon, and he and his wife started for the interior, not knowing whither they went. After going 300 miles, he camped on the 27th day near a party of Hottentots, who, with a chief, were going to Cape Town after a missionary to teach them the "Great Word," of which that chief had heard. Had either party started half an hour earlier on its journey they would have missed each other.

The more our prayers are answered the more we have to pray for. If the prayers of the morning are answered at noon, how busy we must needs be in the afternoon, and how much to pray for at night! The prayers of the fathers in the early morning of the great missionary movement are being answered all over the world, and all over the world God's people need to pray mightily for a great ingathering.

God's people pray in many languages. They use many forms of prayer, and they ask for many things. But there is one petition common to all. They all unite in saying, "Thy kingdom come." Around that prayer there is unity. In offering it we are all one. It is the generic prayer that Christ taught us to offer. He knew that millions of lips would repeat it, and that it would be the prayer of the church universal for ages. Surely he would not have taught us thus to pray if he had not known that the prayer was sometime to be answered by the complete triumph of his kingdom on earth.

That prayer is the charter for all the prayers that we offer for missions and missionaries, in all their minutest interests. So let us make every week a week and every day a day of prayer for the coming of the kingdom.—Rev. R. T. Cross, in Missionary Review.

The keeper of the morgue in New York city states that four-fifths of the five thousand bodies that reach that place of the dead every year are sent there by drunkenness.

ANTI-MASONS write for your paper.

Do not overlook the Business talk on the 16th page.

THE STORY OF ELIZA AGNEW IN CEYLON.

One day the teacher in a day-school in New York City, while giving a lesson in geography, pointed out to her pupils the heathen and the Christian lands, and she must have spoken some very earnest words to them, for then and there a little girl, eight years of age, named Eliza Agnew, resolved that, if it were God's will, she would be a missionary when she grew up, and help to tell the heathen about Jesus. She never forgot this resolve. Until she was thirty years of age she was detained at home, because there were near relations who needed her care. But when she had reached that age, and her dear ones had been called away from earth to heaven, she was free to leave her home, and she went as a missionary to Ceylon.

Some years before this, when the first missionaries reached North Ceylon, they could not find, among the more than 300,000 people there, a single native woman or girl who could read. There were a few men and boys who could read, but the people did not think it worth while to teach the girls. They said, "What are girls good for, excepting to cook food?" etc. "Besides," they said, "girls could not learn to read any more than sheep." The missionaries said to them: "You are mistaken. Girls can learn to read as well as boys." So they opened mission day-schools, not only for boys but for girls also.

Though the parents willingly allowed their sons to attend these schools, they were very unwilling to let their daughters remain long enough to receive an education, as it was common for parents to give their daughters in marriage when they were only ten or twelve years of age. Seeing this, one of the missionary ladies wished to commence a boarding-school for girls. She wished to have the native girls separated from the influences of their heathen homes, and brought under daily Christian influences. But none of the people would send their daughters to her.

One day there were two little girls playing in the flower-garden in front of the missionary's house at Oodooville. Ceylon is in the tropics, only nine degrees north of the equator. In North Ceylon there are two seasons, the wet and the dry. The dry season lasts nine months, and during that time there is scarcely any rain; but in the wet season, November, December and January, it rains nearly every day, and sometimes the rain falls in torrents—between nine and ten inches have been known to fall in twenty-four hours. While these two little girls were playing, there came on a heavy shower of rain, and as they had not time to go home, they ran for shelter into the missionary's house. It continued to rain all that afternoon and evening, and the little girls became very hungry and began to cry. The missionary lady gave them bread and bananas. The younger girl ate, but the older girl refused to eat. After a time, when the rain ceased a little, the parents went to look for their daughters. They had supposed they would be in some neighbor's house, but found them in that of the missionary. When they heard that the younger one had eaten, they were very angry, for they said, "She has lost caste." They found fault with the missionary lady, and the mother said, "You have given my child food, and it has broken caste and is polluted, and now we shall not be able to arrange a marriage for it. What shall we do? You may take the child and bring it up."

The missionary lady had been wishing for native girls to come to her, whom she might educate in a boarding-school, and here was a mother actually saying she might take her daughter, so the missionary lady thought that perhaps this was the Lord's way of enabling her to start the boarding-school. She took the little girl, fed and clothed her, and began teaching her the 247 letters of the Tamil alphabet. She sprinkled a little sand on the floor of the veranda, and taught the child to write letters in the sand. By-and-by, some of the playmates of this little girl came to see her, and when they saw her writing the letters in the sand, they thought that this was some kind of new play, and they also wanted to learn. The Tamil children have good memories, and in a very short time they committed to memory the 247 letters of the alphabet, and were able to read. Their parents, seeing this, and that the little girl was well cared for and happy, soon began to entrust more of their daughters to the care of the missionary lady. This was the beginning of the Oodooville Girls' Boarding-school, which was, perhaps, the first boarding-school for girls in a heathen land, having been commenced in 1824.

After Miss Agnew went to Ceylon, she became the head of this boarding-school. She remained in Ceylon for forty-three years without once going home for a rest or a change. When friends would ask her, "Are you not going to America for a vacation?" she would always reply, "No; I have no time to do so. I am too busy." Through all those forty-three unbroken years, during which God granted to her remarkable health, she was too busy even to think of going home.—From Seven Years in Ceylon.

THE GOSPEL IN SIERRA LEONE.

A correspondent of the Weekly News of Freetown, Sierra Leone, writes thus of Bro. J. A. Cole's work in that city: "Rev. John Augustus Cole is making himself useful in various ways; as herbalist, he is styled Dr. Cole; as linguist and scholar in Arabic literature, he is known as Professor Cole. He is an ordained minister of the Gospel of the American Wesleyan church, and is laborious in this city and country, in the pulpit and open air, in towns and villages.

"To supply in a certain degree the long-felt necessity of a regular place of worship and for preaching the Gospel, especially for the spiritual benefit of the ignorant native heathens in this city, Dr. Cole has succeeded in obtaining the old store, a long stone building of a late merchant in Walpole street. This place he has fitted up at his own expense, and pays the monthly rent. The hall is in two departments, which open towards each other. It is well adapted for the accommodation of both the native heathen, here at home and from abroad. It is several weeks now since it was opened. Every Sunday afternoon and Thursday in the week, other friends and native Christians are in attendance, to witness and encourage the native heathen tribes of the Timmanees, the Soosoo, the Mandingoes, Limbahs, Sherbro and Mendis, who do not feel themselves at home in our expensive churches.

"The number present at the hall last Sunday was 70 native heathens, besides 216 Christian people. Dr. Cole regularly preaches to the natives through an interpreter, and occasionally himself in the vernacular. With the Rev. Mr. Cole, we understand that the Rev. J. R. Frederick, and the Rev. H. W. Johnston are taking part in the meetings. Also for example and encouragement, Miss A. Harris, M. D., attends. The female workers also are doing active service among the native heathens. On last Sunday afternoon, before the close of the service, a solemn and serious inquiry was made of the aboriginal congregation, to attest their knowledge of the object of the meeting, and to show by sign their earnest desire and willingness to accept the Christian religion; the reply was made simultaneously in the affirmative by sixty of the heathens present, who all instantly rose up on their feet. This is a work of faith, and labor of love. For this work and its success we cannot as a Christian community refrain to unite our prayers."

TEMPERANCE.

PROHIBITION AS A FACTOR IN RELIGION.

We should like to persuade our friends who are fervent in religion but cool toward prohibition, that there is a great deal of religion in prohibition, and ought to be a great deal of prohibition in religion. In other words, we wish to rivet this conviction, that the man or woman who is sincere and in earnest to promote the kingdom of Immanuel, to lead humanity out of all moral danger, away from all temptation unto sin, and up to the plane of widest usefulness, utmost security in domestic happiness, and the most satisfying hope of heaven—that disciple cannot "cold-shoulder" the prohibition of the liquor traffic.

What is religion—Christianity—its office toward men? It is the system of doctrines and precepts taught by Christ. And nothing did his teaching better emphasize than the duty of man to love his neighbor as himself. And certainly the truly religious man so loves himself that he will put liquor away from himself and all his household. Prohibition is exactly that factor in religion through which the religionist is to apply his love for his neighbor by protecting him against the evil which is hostile to that neighbor and all his household. And if prohibition is protection of every neighbor, and every citizen on the Jericho road is a neighbor, how shall any citizen of Christ's church enact the good Samaritan and omit prohibition from the ritual of his duties alike at the polling-place and the prayer meeting?

If hitherto, brother, you have failed or declined to help this principle in all possible ways, please kindly remember it is still true that "he who is not for Me is against Me," and that if the liquor traffic be an evil and the prohibition of evil be God's principle, to stand against prohibition is to stand against the wise Master we serve. Surely you will not assert that liquor drinking is less than the source of abominations beyond counting, and the traffic is the source of the drinking. Hence to prohibit the traffic is to walk with God in exterminating what he hates, in promoting what he approves, in making it easier for weak and tempted man to be at one with his Maker. That is the work of prohibition, and in that work is prohibition an unavoidable factor in the religion that is the revealed will of God.

The Word says, "Thou shalt not kill!" Does the liquor traffic? No. It says, "Thou shalt kill!" and enforces its commandment. But prohibition, in keeping with the Word, prohibits killing—spills the maddening potion that is loaded with man-slaughter. It keeps God's law. License breaks God's law. Which way shall the Christian vote and pray? Which way must he vote and pray to be a Christian? Brother, if the licensed liquid kills your neighbor, and you licensed its sale, whose hand lifted the blade—pulled the trigger? On the hand that casts the license ballot is there not a spot that will not out?

The Word says, "Thou shalt not commit adultery!" and prohibition is the sword of the Word to enforce its command, for, as liquor is the prime inspiration to this prime infamy, so the demolition of the tap-room is the Nemesis of shame. Nay, tell us, man of license, can one license the cause yet not license the effect? You shut your eyes, whirl round and fire in the street. A passer-by falls dead, and you stand arrested for murder. You did not mean to kill him; but you set in motion the cause of his death, and the logic of the law rightly handcuffs you. You did not mean to license adultery; it shocks you to be so charged; but you license the stimulus that stifles conscience and stirs passion; and can the moral law keep its logic clean yet brand you cleaner than procurer of uncleanness? Surely, the logic of moral cause and effect is severe; but is it not the judgment of justice? Indeed, how far and how long is that religion worth living which omits from its daily creed and practice the prohibition of evil and the seed of evil.

Does a sound, unmortgaged mind witness the inward sowing and the outward harvest of the saloon, yet find either better than profoundest evil? Brother, eliminate prohibition from your mother's religion, and the factors remaining would not cipher the problem of her life to that solution of Christian uprightness you love to remember her by. And what is right in the mother cannot be wrong in the son. Were your wife, too, a communicant, praying the good Father to bless with many drunkards the saloons you voted to license, that your devotion might not go unrewarded, you would think her mad. And if the license be out of place in religion, certainly prohibition is in place there.

Moreover, the Book God wrote commands observance of the Sabbath day, forbids theft and false witness; and prohibition of the liquor traffic takes by the arm the most lawless man and leads him into companionship where those commandments are kept—helps to make truth and honesty and Sunday worship easy, while the traffic helps to make them all hard to some and impossible to a multitude. And since the traffic is a factor in iniquity, is not its prohibition a great factor in religion and its license a great rent in the holy vestment? Should all good men of twenty-one years espouse total abstinence and total abolition of the traffic, would not the rest of the virtues have a much easier time, and much of humanity shift rapidly from cactus barrens to fields of clover? And to help humanity thus is one purpose of the true religion. And if the Bible be the sibyl of truth in pronouncing woe upon him that putteth the cup to his neighbor's lip, do not its same words equally pronounce blessings upon him that taketh the cup away? And that is prohibition. It is ever blessed of God; 'tis license that is cursed; for if it be wicked in A to put the cup to the lips of B, it adds cowardice to wickedness to get C to do the evil deed. Brother, if no man would vote another the law's protection in doing what he would not do himself, would not prohibition prevail? Would not humanity be happy? Would not vice and crime be discouraged? Would not poverty have a new suit? Would not God seem great and the devil small?

Then why let the cowards conquer the world? When every man shall stand as if he alone gave tone to the moral world, the world will ring out the right moral tone, and only the meanest minority will seek to license the source of iniquity.—James Clement Ambrose in Union Signal.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE NEW TESTAMENT.

LESSON X.—Third Quarter.—Sept. 7.

SUBJECT.—Jesus and Zaccheus the Publican.—Luke 19:1-10.

GOLDEN TEXT.—The Son of Man is come to seek and save that which was lost.—Luke 19:10.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

DAILY READINGS.—M.—Luke 18:35-43. T.—Luke 19:1-10. W.—Luke 15:1-10. T.—Psa. 130:1-8. F.—Matt. 9:1-13. S.—Psa. 51:1-19. S.—Luke 19:1-10.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. The case of the rich publican.—vs. 1-4. There are several lessons to be gained from this story. (1) We have no warrant for despising or shutting out as impossible to be reached by the Gospel any class or condition of men. This was the mistake of the Jews; but it is a sin as well as a mistake to thus limit the grace of God. (2) No natural disadvantages need to hinder us from seeing Christ. If we are really in earnest like Zaccheus we shall make even the difficulties and hindrances in our way serve us. (3) "He ran before." He took opportunity by the forelock. There was no putting off of effort thinking that Christ might pass that way again. Had Zaccheus done so he would never have seen Jesus, for this was the last if not the first time that he ever passed through Jericho. Had he been too little in earnest to see him to run before and climb the sycamore tree he would have thrown away the one opportunity of his life. (4) Riches do not in themselves hinder a man from seeking Christ. Neither do heavy business cares and responsibilities, of which Zaccheus as chief collector of customs in so important a commercial center as Jericho must have had his full share,—perhaps as many, at least, as press on the ordinary business man of to-day. (5) He took the time from his business to find Christ, though it may have been his busy season, and it is certain that his position, involving as it did the oversight of all the other tax collectors in that city and perhaps of the adjacent country, could not have left him much leisure.

2. The call of Jesus.—vs. 5-7. Men often say, "I am content to be as good as my neighbors," but this is not the spirit that wins a special call from the Master. If we are not anxious to put ourselves on a higher moral and spiritual vantage ground than others we may be sure that Christ will never single us out for his special service. We notice, secondly, that our Lord's call is ever one of haste. It demands immediate action. "When Jesus came to the place he looked up." The obscurity of our worldly position can never hide us from him. As the great Captain of our salvation he is ever on the lookout for recruits who will be brave and true in his service, for those who will be his living witnesses, of whom men will always and everywhere take knowledge that they have been with Jesus. Zaccheus obeyed the call instantly, joyfully. Halting, reluctant obedience is not the kind the Lord wants. It does not honor him nor profit us.

3. The true penitent.—vs. 8-10. This was not the first time that Jesus had shocked Jewish prejudices. He was always doing it; and his followers who look at men and things as did he, from the heavenly standpoint, will find themselves offending the prejudices of worldly people at every turn. Some have thought that as the Jews classed all publicans as sinners without any discrimination as to individual character, Zaccheus' words do not imply a new formed resolve to act righteously, but rather an assertion that though he was a despised publican he had for all that lived a life of exceptional benevolence and integrity. If this was so it proves that a successful business man may also be entirely honest, and that no legitimate profession or trade needs to be a bar to Christian living. The common idea, however, has always been that Zaccheus had lived like an average publican, practicing the usual acts of extortion which made the class so hated. This seems to be implied in our Saviour's answer. "This day is salvation," etc. If we are saved ourselves, our homes and everything about us will feel the change. "Holiness to the Lord" will be written on our possessions. A thorough salvation will reach the pocket-book. If it does not we may doubt its genuineness.

STRIKES AND LABOR LODGES (Continued from 9th page).

extended by the public to organized labor has not occasionally led the latter to excesses which all true citizens must deplore. Nothing can be more tyrannical—not even the most grasping and soulless of corporations—than organized labor when it undertakes to order men without grievances to quit employment in order that some abstract principle of recognition of the organization may be forced upon employers.

THE SAME, AUG. 14.

The strike fever is abroad. Sixty thousand men are now idle in consequence of a railroad strike in Wales, and a strike of enormous proportions has paralyzed the shipping and railway industries of New Zealand. The day is probably not far distant when all civilized governments will adopt compulsory arbitration and make the paralysis of any industry by strikes a first-class misdemeanor punishable by law. Strikes have no legitimate place in this age of enlightenment and mutual forbearance. Coercion as a means of settling labor disputes is reactionary in its effects and retards the wheels of genuine progress toward the emancipation of labor from grinding conditions.

EQUITY, CHICAGO, AUG. 20.

We have heard a great deal of late about the Knights of Labor. They have made quite a stir by their efforts to control the management of our railroads, but unfortunately for them, they have failed to convince the owners of the roads that they were perfectly safe persons to be entrusted with so magnificent a property. They have as a consequence been gradually losing their hold, and to-day number but a handful of men—a corporal's guard as compared with the grand army of a few years ago—and are yet wasting away at a rate which threatens to obliterate them from the elements composing our economic system. The organization is practically dead, the coup de grace having been given to it last week when it endeavored to dictate to the managers of the New York Central railway as to the manner in which they should conduct their business.

The agitators ought to learn wisdom by experience. Their great blunder was in naming their now practically defunct organization. It should not have been called the Knights of Labor, but the Knights of Ease. The very suggestion of labor causes a cold chill to run down the spinal column of the average agitator and settle in the region of his brains, leaving him in a condition bordering upon idiocy.

NEW YORK SATURDAY GLOBE, AUG. 16.

It would be impossible to imagine anything more purely arbitrary than this strike. It was even worse, if possible, than the Reading strike of 1887, which was so disastrous a failure, and which, at the same time, resulted so seriously to the Knights of Labor involved in it. It is not even necessary to inquire why the men were discharged. Certainly the Central railroad, which has for so long a time maintained excellent relations with its employees, may be trusted not to pursue a policy purely arbitrary. Indeed, so excellent has been the management of this road that it has long been deemed almost an impossibility for a strike to occur on any of its lines. While the public were placed at great inconvenience by reason of the movement, small as it was, it was plain that it could not succeed. Indeed, it is impossible to imagine what good would have come from it if it had been a success.

All this gives a new proof of the fatuity of professional labor agitators. Here were the managers of a few local organizations of the Knights of Labor who, upon their own responsibility, ordered a strike on the main lines of the Central railroad, without any preparation either in and by themselves or of the public. They did this with no general agreement on the part of the members even of their own body, and with nothing upon which they could appeal to the sympathy of the public. They had no great wrongs to complain of, and yet they went on and ordered the strike with just as much assurance as if all the evils of the world had centered in the management of that railroad system.

As the result of this strike suggestions have been made that the public deserves and demands some protection from such irresponsible dictation. A railroad is itself compelled by law to carry passengers or to take freight when they are offered it. But there is no provision which compels the employees of railroads to give notice to the public of an intention to stop all traffic. Nobody has any idea of interfering in any way with the right of labor to organize, but it must do so with common sense, and must, at the same time, recognize that its members have as many duties and responsibilities as they have rights. If it is right to compel a railroad to do a thing, it is also proper to punish the employees of that railroad when without notice they render it impossible for the corporation itself to carry out its obligations to the public. The suggestions made by the Evening Post in this respect are worthy of wide discussion, and certainly commend themselves so that some law ought to be passed to carry them into effect.

AMERICA, CHICAGO, AUG. 21.

When a labor organization attempts to enforce its peremptory demands by an arbitrary interference with a public service, it runs the risk of being considered a conspiracy against society, and incurs the onerous responsibility not only to prove that its demands are reasonable and just, but that it has exhausted every means at its command to effect a reform of the abuse it complains against, and to avoid committing a great wrong against the community in order to enforce its own rights. If by presenting unreasonable demands, if by insisting upon unreasonable terms of employment, and if by ignoring all the obligations which employment by a quasi-public corporation impose, any organization of labor precipitates a disastrous and far-reaching strike, its leaders should be held criminally responsible.

There is a point beyond which the real or fancied grievances of employees on a railway cannot be permitted to interfere with great public rights. If their grievances are real, they cannot long be unredressed. If they are merely visionary, they cannot be justified by any show of power or violence. The responsibility of railway corporations to carry on their services promptly and efficiently is clear. The time will come when the right of labor to share in that responsibility will be equally plain. If it is not so with the railways in private hands, it will result in placing all railways under government control, when the attempt to bring transportation to a stand-still would be interference with the function of government, which the American people would not tolerate twenty-four hours.

INTER OCEAN, AUG. 23.

It is evident that Grand Master Workman Powderly has worked himself into quite a fevered state of mind over the troubles on the New York Central railroad. He calls in bugle tones upon all organized industry to contribute a strike fund large enough to enable the Knights of Labor on that great line to cope with and vanquish the Vanderbilts, as represented by H. Walter Webb. He becomes somewhat extravagant in his language, declaring that our revolutionary fathers and their achievement make a poor showing as compared with this New York Central strike, provided only the workmen live up to their privilege. Usually Mr. Powderly is a conservative man, whose words carry weight by their calm force, but in this case he allowed his temper to run away with his judgment. It is simply absurd to put in any such claim, and his own sober second thought will blush over his betrayal into such preposterousness.

The bottom fact in this whole business is that fifteen employees of that company were discharged without being told why. They thought and still think it was on account of their prominence in the Knights of Labor and their efforts to secure from the last Legislature of New York the enactment of a weekly pay bill. Mr. Powderly thinks the same. Mr. Webb and Superintendent Toucey say they were not discharged for being Knights. They do not specifically say that it was not for their efforts at Albany in behalf of the weekly pay bill, although the general denial may perhaps be considered to be broad enough to cover that ground. The company claims the right to discharge for cause without giving any explanation; the Powderly position is that it has the same right to discharge a Knight of Labor as anybody else, but not for being a Knight.

Mr. Powderly says, arbitrate; Mr. Webb insists there is nothing to arbitrate, and it is difficult to see what good could be accomplished by that means, whichever version of the facts is correct.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—John F. Stanton, a Friend, formerly of Indianapolis, is engaged in an active religious work in Chattanooga, Tenn. He preaches often to crowds upon the streets, as well as within doors. He wishes to procure a tent for evangelistic meetings in the South.

—The ten days' meeting of the Western National Holiness Association, with 500 campers and 110 tents, began Friday near Decatur, Ill. Eight States are represented. Rev. William McDonald and Joshua Gill of Boston, were the chief speakers on the opening day. Bishop Taylor of Africa, was present August 20th and 21st. No huckstering is permitted on the ground, and a deep religious feeling pervades the meeting.

—A series of fellowship meetings is in progress among the churches of western Kansas, conducted by Evangelist Veazie. Nine points are to be visited in three weeks in August, between the extreme northern and southern borders of the State. The meetings are for Bible study, prayer and Christian conference in preparation for the work of the winter, as well as to communicate cheer and courage to churches in that region, where there is much anxiety because of failure of crops.

—During the past four or five months an extensive revival of religion has been reported in the various Streator churches. The interest has been especially marked in the M. E. church, where the revival services have been in charge of a young evangelist named Thomas. An enthusiastic camp meeting was held in Villa Park, in the northern suburbs of the city. The attendance was large, and the meeting broke up on the 10th inst. with a grand jubilee and rejoicing over the five hundred conversions that have taken place.

—Rev. Dr. Richard S. Storrs, of Brooklyn, is to deliver the oration at the quarter-centennial observance of the founding of the town of Southold, L. I., on Aug. 27. Dr. Storrs' great-grandfather, the Rev. Dr. John Storrs, was pastor at Southold about the time of the Revolution.

—A joint commission on the union of the Reformed churches in America and in the United States has been appointed and will meet at the Catskill Mountain House September 2. The secretaries of the benevolent boards of the two denominations have been requested to meet with the commission. The subject of federal union will be discussed, the difficulties to be overcome will be considered, and if possible a plan of union will be formulated.

THE SOUDAN MISSION.—Word has been received in New York of the deaths of F. M. Gates, E. Kingman and John E. Jaderquist, Presbyterian missionaries in Soudan. They were murdered by Arabs, but no details beyond the simple announcement of their tragic end have reached America by cablegram.

Mr. Gates came from Plainfield, N. J. He and two other young men on May 13 came to New York and met seven other missionaries all bound for the Soudan. Among the party were E. Kingman, John E. Jaderquist, Roy G. Coddington, Warren G. Harris, F. M. Gates, Mrs. F. Kingman, Miss Jennie Dick and James Trice. All these missionaries were young and full of enterprise. They knew that no Christian teacher had ever returned from the Soudan, but they felt a special call to go and labor there. They were not sent out by any church or missionary society. They were very poor. Seven of the party had been sent on from the West by various Christian societies. They had no money. On May 14 they sailed from New York and the following two weeks were spent in getting settled in temporary quarters, and in much waiting before God for further plans. After much prayer, it was decided to send three of the brethren into the interior at once, planning for one to return as soon as the necessary information about the country and people could be obtained,—probably in from three to five months. Messrs. Kingman, Gates and Jaderquist were set apart to go forward and bear the hardships. A few days ago friends in New Jersey received this cablegram: "Gates and other two killed by savages." No further details have been received and none can be until letters arrive from Sierra Leone, two or three weeks from now at the very earliest.

IN BRIEF.

General Negrier, of the French army, has just issued an order to the garrison at Nantes containing the following paragraph: "Officers and non-commissioned officers are reminded that in no part of the 'theory' are military commands accompanied by swearing or blasphemy; consequently the General orders that henceforth such coarse words be omitted from commands."

The Sarnia (Ontario) town clock stopped at 4:30 Thursday morning, and Mr. Williams, on going to ascertain the cause, found the hands had been securely tied down by strands of twine and grass. The mischief had been done by a pair of English sparrows, who had selected the angle formed by the hands as a site for a nest. The movement of the hands interfered with their plans, and the birds put their wits to work to devise a remedy that would secure the stability of the nest. Their first scheme was to wind the shaft on which the hands are pivoted round and round with grass and cords. That failing, they tied the hands together and to the framework in such a manner that it took considerable time and a great deal of labor on Mr. Williams' part to remove the obstructions. The engineering skill displayed by the birds in accomplishing their object showed that they possessed reasoning powers of no mean order, besides an amount of industry and perseverance in gathering the material within the few hours at their disposal that is almost incredible.

The Mississippi river is displaying its usual dissatisfaction with its lower bed and is seeking a new channel. The recent high water has caused it to tear away great sections of land in its effort to break into another channel, and many plantations are threatened with being swept out of existence. At Plaquemine a large area in front of the town has been swept away and several hundred acres, comprising nearly the entire place, will surely fall into the river. In New Orleans a large parcel of land on Second street slipped off and disappeared in the stream. The Illinois Central has been obliged to move its tracks. Across the river, at Algiers, the river has eaten its way under the town, forming an underground channel, and its total destruction is liable to occur at any moment. Many points in New Orleans are threatened; the garbage wharf, the famous old church of St. Francis, built in 1727, and almost all of Point Coupee. But while the river is cutting away land above it is adding to it below. Its waters, laden with sand and mud, pouring over the levees or through crevasses, have filled up low and swampy places, and will bring into cultivation lands formerly deemed too low for that purpose. The restless Mississippi is always tearing down and building up.

DONATIONS

Fund for current Expenses:

N. O. Moore.....	$ 5 00
J. S. Hickman.....	2 00
Jno. Dorcas.....	10 00
M. F. Carr.....	3 00
I. A. Sommers.....	10 00
M. W. Bingham.....	5 00
A. Coe.....	10 00
A. L. Hunting.....	5 00
E. R. Worrell.....	2 00
S. Olsen.....	5 00
D. A. Straw.....	10 00
W. O. Percival.....	10 00
J. Griffin.....	2 50
A. Friend.....	2 00
J. Grove.....	5 00
E. Whipple.....	1 00
J. C. Drake.....	10 00
J. S. Rice.....	5 00
S. A. Pratt.....	20 00
Mrs. J. W. Phelps.....	10 00
Previously reported.....	212 32
	$ 344 82

For Free Tract Fund:

W. F. Carr.....	$ 2 00
I. C. Weidler.....	50

Southern Ministers' Fund:

C. S. D. Cowles.....	40
E. C. Guild.....	3 00
O. W. Walkins.....	50

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

The census office has practically completed the count of the population of the United States. There are, however, about 1,200 enumeration districts the returns from which have not yet been received. The count shows an aggregate of 62,695,955, and when the entire count is finished the population of the country, according to Mr. Porter's estimate, will be about 64,000,000, or an increase of about 30 per cent. during the decade.

CHICAGO.

Eighty engineers and firemen manning forty engines in the employ of the Union Stock Yards and Transit Company, and known as the Railway Switching Association, went out on a strike for an advance in wages Friday morning. They also demand a regulation of the hours of work Sunday. Not only did the strike interfere with the strikers themselves, but it threw out of work 120 switchmen and threatened to put an effective quietus on the important operations of between 5,000 and 6,000 men employed in and about the packing-houses.

The strike ordered for Sept. 1st by the carpenters, is a general one. Every union carpenter under the jurisdiction of the United Carpenter's Council, is ordered out at that time. This includes those who are working for men who have lived up to the agreement of last spring as well as others. The old bosses have refused to arbitrate the troubles between themselves and the carpenters, and the strike Sept. 1st. is regarded as inevitable.

An explosion of powder occurred at the Standard Cartridge Company's works, four miles south of Blue Island, on the Rock Island railway, Friday morning, in which Charles Sidwell, of Cincinnati, was instantly killed, and twenty men, boys and girls were more or less seriously injured.

It was reported Monday that if the strike of the switching engineers and firemen was not settled before night the entire packing industry would probably have to suspend operations. This would mean that over twelve thousand men will be forced into temporary idleness, that thousands of dollars' worth of perishable property will be jeopardized and that the meat supply of the country will be reduced to such an extent as to cause a partial famine.

COUNTRY.

During a heavy storm which prevailed in the vicinity of Philadelphia Thursday evening, the wall of the stable and car sheds used by the passenger railway companies, was blown down, carrying a portion of the roof with it. Four persons were killed outright. Three others are so badly injured that they are not expected to recover, three others were less seriously injured, and one is missing and probably dead. Twenty or more horses were killed.

A cyclone swept the city of Wilkes-barre, Pa., and the adjacent mountainous region. Immense buildings containing many people were unroofed, and in many cases destroyed in the twinkling of an eye. The city in its most frequented part around the depots presents its worst appearance, passenger and freight cars were lifted from the tracks upon which they stood and laid on their sides, while other cars were rushed along the track by the force of the cyclone's swirl. A careful estimate places the number of buildings demolished and partly destroyed at nearly four hundred, and some estimate that it will exceed this figure. The loss will probably reach nearly, if not quite, $1,000,000. The list of the killed now reaches eleven, and the fatally injured nine. Fifteen or twenty are more or less severely hurt.

John G. Coy, of Larimer County, Colorado, was nominated for Governor of that State Friday by the Independent Labor and Farmer's Alliance convention.

The Pennsylvania Prohibition Convention in its platform demands prohibition; preservation of the Sabbath; favors the

(Continued on 16th page.)

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable, causing distress after eating, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn, loss of appetite, a faint, "all gone" feeling, bad taste, coated tongue, and irregularity of the bowels. Dyspepsia does not get well of itself. It requires careful attention, and a remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acts gently, yet efficiently. It tones the stomach, regulates the digestion, creates a good appetite, banishes headache, and refreshes the mind.

Distress After Eating

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. After eating I would have a faint or tired all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My trouble was aggravated by my business, painting. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, which did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced."

Heart-burn

GEORGE A. PAGE, Watertown, Mass.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

The Washington Souvenir,

Size 18x24 inches, and containing the portraits of

Washington and his Com-Patriots, WITH THEIR TESTIMONY ON

FREEMASONRY.

It contains the portraits of

Washington.
John Adams, 2nd President of the United States.
James Madison, 4th President of the United States.
Joseph Ritner, Governor of Pennsylvania.
Richard Rush, Secretary of State and of the Treasury.
Alexander Hamilton, the friend of Washington.
Samuel Adams, the Father of the Revolution.
John Hancock, President of the Continental Congress.
Samuel Dexter, Secretary of War and of the Treasury.
William Wirt, Attorney-General.
John Marshall, Chief Justice of U. S. Supreme Court.
John Quincy Adams, 6th President of the United States.
Benjamin Rush, the Father of Temperance Reform in America.
Lebbeus Armstrong, Founder of the first Temperance Society.
Framed, it is an ornament to please the eye, and a testimony to gladden the heart. Sent safely packed in a mailing tube, postpaid, for ten cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

FIFTY YEARS and BEYOND;

OR,

Old Age and How to Enjoy It.

A most appropriate gift book for "The Old Folks at Home."

Compiled by REV. S. G. LATHROP.

Introduction by
REV. ARTHUR EDWARDS, D.D.,
(Editor N. W. Christian Advocate.)

The object of this volume is to give to that great army who are fast hastening toward the "great beyond" some practical hints and helps as to the best way to make the most of the remainder of that now is, and to give comfort and help life that is to come.

"It is a tribute to the Christianity that honors one gray head and refuses to consider the old man burden or an obstacle. The book will aid and comfort every reader."—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

"The selections are very precious. Springing from such numerous and pure fountains, they can but afford a refreshing and healthful draught for every aged traveler to the great beyond."—Witness.

Price, bound in rich cloth, 400 pages, $1

Address, W. I. PHILLIP,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago Ill

KNIGHT TEMPLARISM ILLUSTRATED.

A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; 60¢ per dozen. Paper covers, 50¢; 60¢ per dozen. Furnished in any quantities at

Standard Works

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Associat'n

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order, as a guarantee that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. A liberal discount to dealers.

MISCELLANEOUS

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. Table of Contents: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, The Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50cts each.

Knights of Pythias Illustrated. By a Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." 25cts each.

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the lodge, temple and council. 25cts each.

Knights of Labor Illustrated. ("ADELPHON KRYPTOS.") The complete illustrated ritual of the order, including the "unwritten work." 25cts each.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor. By a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25cts each.

Five Rituals Bound Together. "Odd-fellowship Illustrated" (old work), "Knights of Pythias Illustrated," "Good Templarism Illustrated," "Exposition of the Grange," and "Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic," are sold bound together in cloth for $1.00.

Rituals and Secrets Illustrated. Composed of "Temple of Honor Illustrated," "Adoptive Masonry Illustrated," "United Sons of Industry Illustrated," and "Secret Societies Illustrated." $1.00 each.

Secret Societies Illustrated. Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. 25cts each.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern, AND COLLEGE SECRET SOCIETIES. Composed of the two pamphlets combined in this title, bound together in cloth. $1.00 each.

Proceedings of Pittsburgh Convention. Containing official reports. Addresses by Rev. D. R. Kerr, D.D., Rev. B. T. Roberts, Rev. G. T. R. Meiser, Prof. J. R. W. Sloane, D.D., Pres. J. Blanchard, Rev. A. M. Milligan, D.D., Rev. Woodruff Post, Rev. Henry Cogswell, Prof. C. A. Blanchard and Rev. W. E. Coquette. 25 cents each.

Minutes of the Syracuse Convention. Containing addresses by Rev. B. T. Roberts, Chas. W. Green, Esq., Prof. C. A. Blanchard, Rev. D. P. Rathbun, Rev. D. S. Caldwell, Mrs. M. E. Gage, Elder J. R. Baird and others. 25cts each.

Eminent Men on Secret Societies. Composed of "Washington Opposed to Secret Societies," "Judge Whitney's Defence," "The Mystic Tie," "Narratives and Arguments," the "Anti-masonic Scrap-Book" and "Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry as Proved in the New Berlin Trials." 326 pages; cloth, $1.00.

History Nat'l Christian Association. Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought, the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association. 25cts each.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and Murder, and Oaths of 33 Degrees. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan; "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valiance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and "Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees." 304 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Between Two Opinions. ON THE QUESTION OF THE HOUR. By Miss E. E. Flagg, author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," etc., etc. Everyone who loves to read a good story, chaste and elegant in expression, pure in thought, interesting in narrative, should read this book upon the power of secret societies in politics, and the remedy. 389 pages, cloth, postpaid, $1.00.

HOME AND HEALTH.

SLEEP IN HOT WEATHER.

The Evening Wisconsin says, One reason, no doubt, why so many people become "pulled down" in health during hot weather, is that they do not exercise care to get their necessary amount of sleep.

At the very time when the demands upon the endurance are greater than at any other period of the year, they devote fewer hours to recuperating their bodies in nature's perfect way, than at times when the demand upon the physical resources is only normal.

Of course, it is to be remembered that this is the season when there is the greatest temptation to neglect the good old maxim of "early to bed." At no other time of year is a bedroom less inviting than now, when especially if it is near the roof, as bedrooms often are, its air will be hot and stagnant, until changed by the evening breezes.

At no other season are the temptations to sit on the front piazza so great as now. The latter practice is one of the pleasantest of those which characterize American informal social life, and need not be entirely sacrificed. But to devote to it hours which should be passed in sleep is to shorten life, and one can be of very little use to society after he is dead—or to himself either, so far as the matters of this mundane sphere are concerned.

The young can stand even less than the old the drain on their vitality caused by insufficient repose. The growing time of life, the time when body and mind are in the development stage, is a time when nutrition and conservation are imperatively necessary. So let the young folks, as well as the old folks, see to it these summer evenings that they get to bed betimes.

Those who find it difficult to sleep on account of the heat, can readily circumvent old Sol by taking a bath. If it is only a hasty sponge bath, it will do wonders in cooling the body, softening and refreshing the skin, and preparing the system for the ready enjoyment of "tired nature's sweet restorer."

Awakening from such a sleep as it is possible to secure even in warm rooms through which there is a draught of air, one is refreshed and fitted to cope to much better advantage with the hottest of weather, than the tired and jaded beings who have tried to get along without duly availing themselves of the recuperative process which is at everybody's command.

REST.

When you are so tired as to feel "ready to drop," sit down, comb your hair and change your shoes. This will rest the head and feet and give new strength for the work which at house-cleaning or moving time refuses to be postponed. That lying down ten minutes will rest one much more than sitting down, has to be reiterated often for the benefit of those ambitious women who sometimes scorn to rest in this way during the daytime, and others who fear that it will be known to their discredit if they so indulge themselves. I once heard Mrs. Lincoln talk upon this topic, and I wish every farmer's wife might have heard the woman who has made housekeeping a study, tell how to get rest enough to insure health. It was the wisdom not of the theorist, but of one who had so nearly overworked as to have found it needful to study means of making good house-keeping possible without "slowly killing the housewife."—New England Farmer.

To lessen the noise caused by the ticking of a clock in a sick room place the clock on a pretty thick sheet of India-rubber, cut slightly broader than the base of the clock.

In these days of silk handkerchiefs ladies will be glad to learn how they may be washed and retain their original softness. First, it is well to remember that they should never be washed or put into a tub with other clothes. Wash them in luke-warm water, and rinse two or three times in clear cold water, without blueing. Wring them out, fold and roll tightly in a cloth, and do not let them get dry before ironing.

BRONCHITIS

Is an inflammation of the bronchial tubes—the air-passages leading into the lungs. Few other complaints are so prevalent, or call for more prompt and energetic action. As neglect or delay may result seriously, effective remedies should always be at hand. Apply at once a mustard poultice to the upper part of the chest, and, for internal treatment, take frequent doses of

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

C. O. Lepper, Druggist, Fort Wayne, Ind., writes: "My little sister, four years of age, was so ill from bronchitis that we had almost given up hope of her recovery. Our family physician, a skillful man and of large experience, pronounced it useless to give her any more medicine, saying he had done all it was possible to do, and we must prepare for the worst. As a last resort, we determined to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and I can truly say, with most happy results. After taking a few doses she seemed to breathe easier, and, within a week, was out of danger. We continued giving the Pectoral until satisfied she was entirely well. This indisputable evidence of the great merit of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has given me unbounded confidence in the preparation, and I recommend it to my customers, knowing it cannot disappoint them."

"Ayer's Cherry Pectoral cured me of a bad cough and my partner of bronchitis. I know of numerous cases in which this preparation has proved very beneficial in families of so that the medicine is known among them as 'the consoler of the afflicted.'—Jaime Rufus Vidal, San Cristobel, San Domingo.

Young Children,

"A short time ago, I was taken with a severe attack of bronchitis. The remedies ordinarily used in such cases failed to give me relief. Almost in despair of ever finding anything to cure me, I bought a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and was helped from the first dose. I had not finished one bottle before the disease left me, and my throat and lungs were as sound as ever."—Geo. B. Hunter, Altoona, Pa.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

PREPARED BY

DR. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass.

Sold by all Druggists. Price $1; six bottles, $5.

To cure Biliousness, Sick Headache, Constipation, Malaria, Liver Complaints, take the safe and certain remedy, SMITH'S

BILE BEANS

Use the SMALL SIZE (40 little beans to the bottle). They are the most convenient; suit all ages. Price of either size, 25 cents per bottle.

KISSING at 7, 17, 70: Photo-gravure, panel size of this picture for 4 cents (coppers or stamps).

J. F. SMITH & CO.,
Makers of "Bile Beans," St. Louis, Mo.

PATENTS

Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees.

Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington.

Send model, drawing or photo., with description. We advise, if patentable or not, free of charge. Our fee not due till patent is secured.

A Pamphlet, "How to Obtain Patents," with names of actual clients in your State, county, or town, sent free. Address,

C. A. SNOW & CO.

Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

FOR MINISTERS

THE

"STORIES OF THE GODS"

is especially adapted. They will at once derstand the references to the idolatrous systems of the nations. And the idolatrous worship of the Masonic lodge is thus more clearly seen and easily understood. Will you furnish each pastor in your place with one of these pamphlets?

PRICE, ONLY 10 CENTS.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

STANDARD WORKS

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES.

FOR SALE BY THE.

National Christian Association.

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. A liberal discount to dealers.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 75 cents. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive. Vol. II. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished. 25 cents each.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe. 20 cents each.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. In cloth, $1.50 each. Paper, 75 cents each.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pages, 75 cents.

Mah-Hab-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance. Bound in one volume. In cloth, 589 pages, $1.00.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. 25 cents each.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper, 35 cents.

Hon. Thurlow Weed on the Morgan Abduction. This is the legally attested statement of this eminent Christian journalist and statesman concerning the unlawful seizure and confinement of Capt. Morgan in Canandaigua jail, his removal to Fort Niagara and subsequent drowning in Lake Ontario. 5 cents each.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a League with the Devil. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason. 15 cents each.

Freemasonry Self-Condemed. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church. Paper covers, price, 20 cents each.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each.

Anti-masonic Sermons and Addresses. Composed of "Masonry a Work of Darkness;" the Sermons of Messrs. Cross, William M'Nary, Dow and Sarver, the two addresses of President Blanchard, and the addresses of President H. H. George, Prof. J. G. Carson and Rev. M. S. Drury; "Thirteen Reasons Why a Christian cannot be a Freemason," "Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion," and "Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate?" 287 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate. By Rev. L. A. Post. 5 cents each.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper cover, 35 cents.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin trials. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each.

Stearns's Inquiry into the Nature and Tendency of Freemasonry. 338 pages. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor United Presbyterian church. 5 cents each.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. 10 cents each.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void; OR FREEMASONRY SELF-CONVICTED. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. 207 pages. Postpaid, 40 cents each.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian), seceding Mason of 21 degrees. 15 cents each.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. H. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each.

Masonic Salvation, as taught by its standard authors. This pamphlet is a compilation from standard Masonic works, in proof of the following proposition: Freemasonry claims to be a religion that saves men from all sin, and purifies them for heaven. 111 pages, price, postpaid, 20 cents.

Freemasonry at a Glance illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the first three degrees. Paper cover, 32 pages. Single copy, six cents.

Masonic Outrages. Compiled by Rev. H. H. Hinman. Showing Masonic assault on lives of seceders, on reputation, and on free speech; its interference with justice in courts, etc. Postpaid, 20 cents.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret Societies. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each.

SECRET SOCIETIES CONDEMNED.

BY GREAT MEN IN THE STATE.

Charles Francis Adams: "A more perfect agent for the devising and execution of conspiracies against church and state could scarcely have been conceived."

Thaddeus Stevens: "By Freemasonry, trial by jury is transformed into an engine of despotism and Masonic fraud."

Judge Pliny Merrick (a seceded Mason): "If ever a Chapter or a lodge shall establish laws in conflict with those of the state the Masonic requisition is obedience to the lodge and conflict with the state; and if a member hesitates at this humiliating obedience, his heart must be 'torn from his bosom,' his 'vitals plucked from his body,' and Masonic vengeance, not satisfied with this bloody immolation, denies a resting place to the motionless remains, but they are to be 'burnt to ashes and scattered to the winds.'"

Samuel C. Pomeroy, in an address, 1883:—"There may be a broad distinction between the good and the bad in secret societies, but as they all alike have oath bound obligations to complete oblivion of all they do or say, I have no means of judging the good from the bad. So I turn away from them all to the great Teacher who said, 'In secret have I said nothing.'"

Judge Daniel H. Whitney, (renouncing Mason): While professed ministers of the Gospel and members of churches are permitted to associate themselves with these organizations, the task to apply a remedy will be a hopeless one; and just so long will the declaration made to me not long since by a high Mason and a worthy man prove true, that "a Masonic lodge is the strangest medley of priests and murderers—deacons and whoremasters—church members and gamblers—decent men and loafers—drunkards and rowdies, that the All Seeing-Eye ever looked down upon."

Hon. Samuel Dexter, in an even letter to the Grand Master of Mass., 1798: "If there be no very important reason for upholding Masonry at a moment like the present, there is a reason against it. The system of the destroyers of human virtue and happiness is to undermine in the dark the castle that cannot be carried by storm. Secret agency has overthrown all the republics of Europe, and an extended, secret, leveling, self-created society, without any valuable object of pursuit, and embracing bad characters as well as good, cannot be the subject of approbation of an anxious patriot."

Hon. Cadwallader C. Colden, Mayor of New York and M. C.:—It is true that I have been a Mason a great number of years, and that I have held very high Masonic offices and honors. It is equally true that I have for a long time ceased to have any connection with the institution because I have believed, and do now believe, it is productive of much more evil than good. I have long entertained my present opinion, that a man who would eschew all evil should not be a Freemason.

Charles P. Sumner, father of the Senator, and a renouncing Abolitionist:—Masonic engagements, whether they are called oaths, obligations, or promises, ought never to be made. They are not sanctioned by law and are not obligatory. They make it a Masonic crime to divulge that which the good of the community requires should not be concealed.

Philo Carpenter:—This saint of God (Moses Stuart) like the old prophets, was satisfied with the institutions and ordinances of God's house, and consequently did not give his influence or aid in supplementing the same with human ordinances and worldly alliances; in other words, he was opposed to secret, oath-bound societies, into which many good men, and even clergymen, have been, and are being "ensnared."

Hon. Seth M. Gates, ex-Mason:—Profoundly convinced by long experience and observation that Freemasonry is an evil and pernicious institution. I wish once more to my advanced age to lift my warning voice publicly against it and all kindred organizations, and to beseech Christian men to have no connection or fellowship with them. Jesus is not, and cannot properly be recognized in Freemasonry. He must be ignored in the lodge-room, in its lectures, instructions, and in its prayers.

Hotter the Weather Bigger the Proof.

As the weather grows warm, the sale of James Pyle's Pearline Washing Compound rapidly increases. This proves that many women recognize the fact that PEARLINE makes washing and cleaning very much easier than when done with the ordinary means. Proves also that summer clothing, being of delicate texture and color, will not stand the rough usage necessary when washed with soap, and establishes the fact that PEARLINE, in doing away with the rubbing, lessens the wear and tear and fills a very important place. Delightful for bathing in fresh or salt water. Its ingredients render it harmless to the most delicate skin. Especially during the hot weather it is to your advantage to use PEARLINE, and only humane to supply your servants with it, and thus lighten their labors; besides you insure much better results. Beware of imitations. JAMES PYLE, New York.

EVERY WATERPROOF COLLAR OR CUFF

THAT CAN BE RELIED ON

BE UP
TO
THE MARK

Not to Split!Not to Discolor!

BEARS THIS MARK.

NEEDS NO LAUNDERING. CAN BE WIPED CLEAN IN A MOMENT.
THE ONLY LINEN-LINED WATERPROOF
COLLAR IN THE MARKET.

Disloyal SECRET OATHS.

ADDRESS OF

JOSEPH COOK,

OF BOSTON,

AT THE

Conference of Christians,
CHICAGO, 1890.

No better document of its size for general distribution has been printed. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Single Copies 5 cents, or 12 copies for 50 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

BIRNEY.

The sketch of JAMES G. BIRNEY candidate of the Liberty Party for President, in pamphlet for 25 cents. A limited number of copies of this handsome pamphlet for sale at the N. C. A. office

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

SEE THIS!

The latest, most complete edition.

Over 235 choice

Reform Songs for
the Times.

Only 30c a copy, or 20c by the 100.

—AND—

"THE TOBACCO MANIA."

$1 per 100.

For sale here and by the author,
GEO. W. CLARK,
76 W. Montcalm St., Detroit, Mich.

A WOMAN'S VICTORY;
OR
THE QUERY OF THE LODGEVILLE CHURCH,

BY JENNIE L. HARDIE.

This simple and touching story is worth reading by every Anti-mason—and especially by his wife. Get it and take it home to cheer the heart of your companion who may desire to do something for Christ against great evils, but is discouraged from making any public effort. PRICE, FIFTEEN CENTS. Ten for a dollar

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison Street, Chicago

WILL SELL FOR

Regular
Price.

FIVE CENTS.

Selling
Price.

- $.10 "REPORT OF THE TRIAL of Rev. J. T. Michael," an Elder in the M. E. Church, for arraiguing the Bishops, Elders and Preachers in charge for being Freemasons contrary to the Discipline of the M. E. Church. Paper, 28 pages. $.05
- $.25 "MASONIC DEGREES ILLUSTRATED." Containing all the pass and real words, all the pass and real grips and signs of the first three degrees of Freemasonry, from the time of King Solomon, King Hiram of Tyre, and Hiram Abiff, the Widow's Son, to the present time. Compiled by E. M. Trowbridge. Paper, 39 pages. With certificate and demit showing that the author was a Freemason. $.05
- $.15 "A WOMAN'S VICTORY, or the Query of the Lodgeville Church." By Jennie L. Hardie. Paper, 21 pp. $.05
- $.10 "WASHINGTON SOUVENIR." Portraits of Geo. Washington and his Co-patriots, with their testimony on Freemasonry. Size 18x24 inches. Framed it is an ornament to any home. $.05

SIX CENTS.

- $.10 "SECRET SOCIETIES." A Lecture delivered at Oberlin College, Jan. 9, 1890. By Prof. Henry C. King. Paper, 36 pp. $.06
- $.20 "REASONS WHY Secret Societies cannot be Fellowshiped by the United Presbyterian Church." By Rev. J. W. Bain. Pages 149. $.06

TEN CENTS.

- $.15 "MY EXPERIENCE WITH SECRET SOCIETIES." By a Traveler. Paper, 51 pp. $.10
- $.20 "THE INTERIOR OF SIERRA LEONE, West Africa." A lecture delivered at the Government Practicing School-Room, Freetown, Sierra Leone, together with remarks and addresses of gentlemen present, and the lecturer's replies. By J. Augustus Cole, of Shaingay, W. Africa. Paper, 54 pages. $.10
- $.25 "SKETCH OF THE LIFE OF JAMES G. BIRNEY." His relation to the Anti-slavery movement and place in history. By General William Birney. Paper, 32 pages. $.10

FIFTEEN CENTS.

- $.25 "RELIGIOUS PERSECUTION." An examination of Cardinal Manning's letter in the New York Tribune, on Irish affairs and bearing on Home Rule. By Rev. John Lee. Paper, 83 pages. $.15
- $.25 "THE PURITY CRUSADE." With portraits of some of its leaders. Paper, 114 pp. $.15

TWENTY CENTS.

- $.30 "SONGS FOR THE TIMES," by Geo. W. Clark. Words and Music. Intended for Prohibition and W. C. T. U. meetings. Boards, 152 pages. $.20

TWENTY-FIVE CENTS.

- $.75 "BEREA COLLEGE," Kentucky. An interesting history of the founding of that College for white and black in a slave State. Cloth, 87 pages. $.25

THIRTY-FIVE CENTS.

- $.75 "LUCIE VERNON, or the Church at Lansington. The experience of a young pastor. A novel. By Rev. W. T. Meloy, D. D. Cloth, 208 pages. $.35

FIFTY CENTS.

- $1.00 "NATIONAL SUICIDE AND ITS PREVENTION." The following will show the drift of the book: Measure or Standard of Value; What is Honest Money; Our National Banks; Paper Money; Land Tenure, etc. By O. F. Lumry. Cloth, 224 pp. $.50
- $1.50 "HISTORY OF SECRET SOCIETIES IN FRANCE," or "THE CRADLE OF REBELLIONS." By Lucien De La Hodde. Translated from the French by Gen'l. J. W. Phelps. Cloth, 479 pp. $.50

Sent postpaid to any address on receipt of the selling price.

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
WM. I. PHILLIPS, Treasurer,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

BUSINESS.

ENTHUSIASM!!

That is the word for Cynosure workers. The season for profitable work for subscribers approaches. With many of our good friends who volunteer their aid it is already HERE. NOW is always a good time for every good work. Let it be begun, at least.

By all means, we ask of every friend of the reform,—by all means read Bro. Stoddard's letter on the 9th page. The stones of New England will roll if they get started. Her sturdy people may awake with a grand enthusiasm that will astonish even our Western friends who are accustomed to be dubbed "hus-tlers." Let us join hands all along the line for a self-denying but grand effort in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ to send through the land 50,000 copies of our paper.

Since the April Conference on the Secret Lodge System the N. C. A. has had many hundred dollars worth of free advertising. This means advertising the movement against the lodge. It means a great deal more in its influence upon the minds of the readers of the papers which have by editorial and display advertisements aided in placing before the public the addresses at that Conference.

A Congregational minister and Freemason said, "I was glad to see Rev. Dr. Goodwin's address in the Advance. It was good." The thanks of this Association are due and heartily extended to these papers. But we must ask them to take out any advertisement now running of the Conference Proceedings for the supply is exhausted, and orders cannot be filled.

The Free Methodist says of "Disloyal Secret Oaths" by Joseph Cook:

"Mr. Cook treats of the disloyal oaths of Mormonism, Clan-na-Gael, Jesuitism and Freemasonry. The address is clear, outspoken, comprehensive. It is the utterance of a master-mind, and is entitled to a candid reading, even by lodge men. Send and get it, read it and get others to read it. If men would read the facts which exist to-day the secret organizations would soon decay and die. They only thrive by the ignorance, selfishness and misrepresentations of those interested in building them up. Such literature ought to be scattered broadcast throughout the land."

Have you thought of the remark of an editor in last week's paper that Joseph Cook's address at the Conference was a "God-send in a time like this?" Do you discern the signs of the times? One party ordered 500 of Mr. Cook's Disloyal Secret Oaths this week for distribution at conferences. If it is a "God-send," then this man discerns the signs of the times aright. In order to allow every one to do something at conferences, synods, and associations this fall, we make the following prices:

Single copy, postpaid.....	$.05
12 copies ".....	50
100 ".....	2.50
1,000 ".....	20.00

"All run down" from the weakening effects of warm weather, you need a good tonic and blood-purifier like Hood's Sarsaparilla. Give this peculiar medicine a trial. Sold by all druggists.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—U. S. Government Report, Aug. 17, 1889.

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from Aug. 18 to 23 inclusive:

A F Smith, Rev I Small, E J Hayes, Mrs T A Prest, J C Williams, Rev S F Clark, C Shank, Rev C C Foote, C F Hawley, W Northrop, R Gunn, Rev I C Weidler, Rev H J Craddock, Mrs C A Goodwin, Miss K M Hartsock, J H Wooster, M Merrick, Mrs M A Gamble, J Flieman J C Casteel.

NEWS OF THE WEEK (Continued from 13th page).

Australian ballot system and suffrage; increased time of residence by foreigners before naturalization; legal prohibition of trusts, equal taxation and maintenance of public schools inviolate.

All day Sunday the managers of the federation of railway employees—firemen, brakemen and switchmen—were consulting at Terra Haute, Ind., whether or no to join Powderly in a great strike from the Mississippi to Boston.

Owing to the failure of the crops in McIntosh county, N. D., the farmers there belonging to the Russian colony, have asked aid from the Commissioners.

Judge Rose, of Jamestown, N. D., Thursday declared the Legislature had no power to pass a law prohibiting the importation and sale of liquor in original packages, and that it was inoperative. He, however, decides that the importer has no right to allow the packages to be opened and the liquor drunk on his premises.

Mrs. Sizlove of Point Isabel, Ind., Wednesday night, broke up the stock and fixtures of a drug store in which her husband had bought whisky.

A car on the Mount Penn Gravity railroad at Reading, Pa., ran away Friday with eighteen passengers on board, making the descent of five miles in three minutes, and rolled down a fifty foot embankment at the end of the track. Four persons were killed; two fatally, and others seriously injured.

The air-brakes of a freight train standing on a grade at Summit, Cal., gave way, and the train dashed into another freight train at Cascade. Four men were killed and the railroad property was seriously damaged.

FOREIGN.

Statistics gathered by the Hungarian Ministry of Agriculture place the wheat harvest of the world at 725,000,000 hectoliters and the quantity required by importing countries at 123,000,000 hectoliters. The total quantity available to meet the import demand is estimated at 148,000,000 hectoliters.

The shipping strike in Australia has caused a general paralysis of business. It is expected that the New South Wales iron works and factories will close down owing to the lack of coal. A joint conference of Melbourne and Sidney ship-owners has been arranged. The great labor employers have renewed their pledge to stand against the strikers' demands.

A cyclone swept through the canton of Staud, Switzerland, Wednesday, doing an immense amount of damage. The villages of Lavalles and Ioux were devastated and whole forests destroyed. The storm lasted three minutes. It is reported that 150 lives were lost.

Cholera is spreading steadily along the Mediterranean north of Valencia, Spain, where there are ten to twelve new cases daily. The disease has appeared in several villages in the province of Toledo and suspicious cases have been discovered in Madrid.

The steamer Oceanic from Hong Kong and Yokahama brings Japanese papers which say that cholera is making headway throughout Japan in spite of the efforts of the government to arrest its progress. There have been about three thousand cases, 60 per cent. of which have proved fatal.

A San Salvador dispatch of the 18th says: General Ezeta to-day received the peace protocol, which was submitted to the Cabinet and was approved on most of the points. General Ezeta will send to Guatemala a commissioner duly authorized to sign the peace agreement arranged by the diplomatic corps, and it is believed that everything will be settled satisfactorily Friday or Saturday. It is said that the treaty is most favorable to Salvador. All the points demanded by Ezeta have been conceded by the Guatemalan Government.

BEECHAM'S PILLS cure Sick-Headache.

$75.00 to $250.00 A MONTH can be made working for us. Persons preferred who can furnish a horse and give their whole time to the business. Spare moments may be profitably employed also. A few vacancies in towns and cities. B. F. JOHNSON & CO., 1009 Main Street, Richmond, Va.

Our High Grade List and Bargain Book sent to any address on receipt of a 2-c stamp.

LORD & THOMAS,
NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING
45 RANDOLPH STREET,
CHICAGO.

WHEATON COLLEGE,

WHEATON, ILL.

FALL TERM BEGINS TUESDAY,
SEPTEMBER 16TH.

A College for Men and Women.
For Catalogue address with stamp,
C. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

HARTSVILLE COLLEGE,

HARTSVILLE, INDIANA.

E. G. PAINE, A. M., PRESIDENT,

Classical, Scientific and Normal courses. Preparatory school, Art, Music and Business departments. Actively Christian and reformatory influences. No saloons. Romantic and healthful region. Living as cheap as it can be made anywhere.

In Its Worst Form.

BENTON, LAE, Co., Wis., Dec., '88.
Rev. J. C. Bergen vouches for the following: James Rooney who was suffering from Vitus Dance in its worst form for about 1 1/2 years was treated by several physicians without effect, two bottles of Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic cured him.

St. Francis Wis. Oct 24, 1888
A member of my congregation used Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic with good results. The patient was so nervous that he could not find sleep for weeks. He suffered from the most intense anxiety which bordered on insanity. I gave the person some of Koenig's Nerve Tonic and he continued to use it. The appetite returned gradually, the anxiety disappeared the headache left, and to day the sufferer, who had almost despaired, is enjoying excellent health.
Bern. Elakamp, Pastor.

Our Pamphlet for sufferers of nervous diseases will be sent free to any address, and poor patients can also obtain this medicine free of charge from us.

This remedy has been prepared by the Reverend Pastor Koenig, of Fort Wayne, Ind., for the past ten years, and is now prepared under his direction by the

KOENIG MEDICINE CO.,
50 West Madison, cor. Clinton St., CHICAGO, ILL.
SOLD BY DRUGGISTS.
Price $1 per Bottle. 6 Bottles for $5.

Its superior excellence proven in millions of homes for more than a quarter of a century. It is used by the United States Government. Endorsed by the heads of the Great Universities as the Strongest, Purest and most Healthful Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder does not contain Ammonia, Lime, or Alum. Sold only in Cans.
PRICE BAKING POWDER CO.
NEW YORK. CHICAGO. ST. LOUIS.

THE ELKHART CARRIAGE & HARNESS MFG. CO.
For 16 Years have sold complete harnesses at wholesale prices, saving them the dealers profit. Ship anywhere for examination before buying. Pay freight ch'gs if not satisfactory. Warranted for 2 years. 64-page Catalog Free. Address W. B. PRATT, Sec'y., Elkhart, Ind.

REMARKABLE OFFER!

Nearly everyone is familiar with the name, but it has been estimated that only one in every two hundred and eighty persons in the United States is fortunate enough to have access to the valuable information contained within the covers of the grandest work ever written by mortal man.

Webster's UNABRIDGED DICTIONARY.

That this is an unfortunate state of affairs will be admitted by all, and it is due to the fact that no one save the rich could afford them.

The Dictionary is a necessity in every home, school and business house. It fills a vacancy and furnishes knowledge which no one hundred volumes of the choicest books could supply, and all young or old, educated or ignorant, rich or poor should have it within reach and refer to its contents every day in the year.

The Loomis reprint contains all the matter as compiled and arranged by our esteemed and honored author and statesman

NOAH WEBSTER.

About forty years of his life was devoted to this great work, and when we consider the fact that this book contains about 100,000 words, we will appreciate that these years must have been well spent.

Some idea of the magnitude of this book may be gained from the fact that it contains over 440 cubic inches of paper and has about 300,000 square inches of printed surface.

In addition to the 100,000 words it contains a portrait of the author, together with his biography and a valuable table of 12,000 synonymous words.

By special arrangement with the publishers, we are permitted to furnish this valuable volume: 1st. To any subscriber to our paper; 2nd. To any renewal subscription; and 3rd. To any person who has paid a full year's subscription within the past six months, on receipt of $1.50 for the paper one year, and two dollars and seventy-five cents to cover express charges, packing, etc., of the Dictionary.

Address

CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill

REVISED ODD-FELLOWSHALL ILLUSTRATED.

The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (Ladies) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. The ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover, 50 cents; per dozen $4.00.

All orders promptly filled by the
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XXII., No. 51.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 4, 1890.

WHOLE No. 1,062.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.

Address all letters for publication to EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, CHICAGO. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Send all business letters relating to the paper to THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE. Make all drafts and money orders payable to the Treasurer, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address on Cynosure list always give the former address.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill., as Second Class Matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:	CORRESPONDENCE:
Notes and Comments..... 1	The Nebraska Campaign;
Strikes..... 8	A Letter and a Gift
Who Wrote the Books of	from the Transvaal;
Moses?..... 8	Camp Ground Echoes;
The Farmers..... 9	Pith and Point..... 5,6
Personal Notes..... 9	OBITUARY..... 7
CONTRIBUTIONS:	THE N. C. A..... 7
Strikes..... 1	AGENTS AND LECTURERS..... 7
Make Your Points..... 2	THE HOME..... 10
The Pines of Mt. Willard..... 2	TEMPERANCE..... 11
Sunday Opening of the	BIBLE LESSON..... 11
World's Fair..... 2	LITERATURE..... 12
SELECTED:	RELIGIOUS NEWS..... 12
War!..... 3	DONATIONS..... 13
Strike Literature..... 9	NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 13
NEW ENGLAND LETTER..... 4	LODGE NOTES..... 14
WASHINGTON LETTER..... 9	FARM NOTES..... 15
REFORM NEWS:	BUSINESS..... 16
Notes About Boston..... 4	MARKETS..... 16

THE SUMMER IS PAST.

It was a cherished hope a few weeks since that the subscription receipts for August would be double those of July. The only value put upon the expectation was that it would show the measure of enthusiasm the friends of the paper were feeling. The mark is not quite so high, but the result of August work is very cheering.

Summer is now gone and we begin the fall campaign with much more courage and heart than was felt two months ago.

We are now receiving word from colleges where the Cynosure will be welcome in the reading room, and soon expect over 200 names on this list. We shall need an addition to the READING ROOM fund to complete this good work. Nine dollars will send the paper to eight colleges during the school year.

OUR SEPTEMBER PLAN

is this: Let each reader of the paper contribute one cent to the cause in this way: On a postal card send us the names and addresses of five persons who ought to read the Cynosure and might be persuaded to subscribe for it. Perhaps you can think of ten, perhaps only of one—no matter, send them all, more or less. This is the first step, the next will give in good time.

Now let us have a thousand names before next week is gone.

From Rome it is reported that a great socialistic conspiracy exists. The police have been examining the houses of workmen belonging to the secret societies, and find bombs charged with powder and dynamite, also correspondence of incendiary character and banners ready for display at the first uprising of this piratical conspiracy. But the Italians may thank themselves, just as we in America have more than once been compelled to do under like circumstances. So long as Freemasonry is allowed such power in Italy there will be other lodges more or less modeled after it, and more honest and frank in the avowal of their intentions.

In the article by Rev. R. T. Cross reprinted in our last from the Missionary Review there are two incidents given in the life of the late missionary Wilder, the founder of the Review. He died just as he was preparing to return to India with his wife and daughter, who are now in that country to spend their lives in mission work. The story told by Mr. Cross of the praying Vermont mother explains the spirit of this remarkable Wilder family. The son, who is now completing his studies, has been mainly instrumental in the great student movement in this country and is setting his face toward India for a life work. His address at the Northfield student conference was of thrilling interest. Let praying mothers be encouraged since they may remember Moses and Samuel in sacred story, and many cases like to this of the Wilder family in our own day.

Oliver Wendell Holmes was not permitted to be at peace after scorching the plumes of lodge barbarism with keen ridicule in the last Atlantic. The orders were uneasy until they had something to quote from the popular and witty poet to counteract the injury done them by stepping on the toes of their vanity. So the other day a G. A. R. company went to his summer home at Beverly and gave Dr. Holmes a badge of their order, following up their advance with a bold request for a letter. The aged man replies in a complimentary tone, in general terms speaking kindly of the visit, but in no word betraying that he has any feeling of regard for their secret society.

It has just been discovered that last year, early in the course of the trial of the five Cronin murderers, Alexander Sullivan, the Irish lawyer and Land League and lodge operator transferred his property to A. S. Trude. Sullivan was believed to be the chief villain in the Cronin affair, and Trude is a lawyer equally notorious. The bribing of the Cronin jurors was traced to a clerk in Trude's office, who ran away, and this transfer is proof of the collusion of these two men. At Trude's request the transfer was not recorded until lately, and has therefore been kept out of sight until it may be safely divulged. The main facts in the Cronin lodge murder will sometime be "out."

Rev. Elbert S. Porter, D. D., at one time editor of the Christian Intelligencer and pastor of one of the Reformed churches of Brooklyn, said in a speech before his Synod in 1880 that he was a Freemason, and quoted from an address he had not long before made at a Masonic corner-stone laying, that, if certain American institutions were assailed, "We have an institution in every town. WE HAVE AN ARMY READY." This is what Masons are drilling for—to have an army ready. And this army has not sworn allegiance to God and to the country, but to the lodge alone, which has been declared in the reports of both the Illinois and Missouri Grand Lodges to be an imperium in imperio, a government by itself and for itself, to which the allegiance of its members is first due.

Dr. A. T. Pierson writes in the Missionary Review of a lesson of the late conference at Niagara for Bible study. During seven days the only theme was the Word of God, and its teachings explained and applied. The missionary spirit burned like a flame fed with oil in the meeting, and the closing addresses by Prof. Moorehead of Xenia, Dr. West of St. Paul and Dr. Brookes of St. Louis were given with surpassing spiritual power. Voluntary offerings of $4,000 were made for missions, and last year at this conference Hudson Taylor engaged thirteen helpers for his China Inland mission. Dr. Pierson closes with the words: "The more we see of Christian life the more do we feel confident that every step away from a full faith in the plenary inspiration of the Word of God is a step away from the cross of Christ, and from all which that cross represents in the believer's life of devotion to the spread of the kingdom."

Henry George has been long regarded as an able representative of a vast body of workingmen, though his influence was not acquired by any combination of grips, oaths, threats and secret rites. He is in a position to speak far more candidly respecting labor difficulties than the petulant Powderly. In 1887 Mr. George wrote in his paper, the Standard: "As an abstract proposition, nothing can be clearer than that any combination to interfere with the perfect freedom of any one to manage a lawful business or by means of threat of injury or loss, or by interference with property or traffic, to dictate how such business shall be conducted, ought to be punished by law. It is time for the labor associations to face this fact, and to consider it soberly. The strike, the boycott, all the methods by which labor associations and combinations endeavor to carry out their objects, are methods of coercion—do involve interference with the liberty of others to conduct their own lawful business in their own way. When they do not proceed to the use of actual force and the actual destruction or injury of material things, they only stop short of this as a matter of degree. Without the power to in some way inflict injury or loss, the regulations of a trades union would be as futile as a law without a penalty."

STRIKES.

BY REV. J. M. FOSTER.

Carlyle calls strikes "the sooty hell of hate and savagery." As a rule they do more harm than good. Even when successful they must say with Napoleon after a bloody battle: "Another such a victory would ruin us." The loss of the employer is trifling compared to that of the working man in time and wages. "If the men who willingly lose one, two, three or six months' time in a strike, would continue to work, and set apart the money thus spent, it would be bread in their children's mouths; opposition to their interests would not be awakened, and there would be a brighter prospect of their reaching the end desired."—North American Review, August, 1882.

Why do American workmen strike? It is authoritatively stated that in idolatrous lands wages are 10 cents per day, in Mohammedan regions 20 cents, where the Greek church prevails 25 cents, in Roman Catholic countries 37 cents, in evangelical Protestant nations 75 cents, and in the United States $1.00. Why are the most favored workmen so dissatisfied? There are three reasons:

1. The merciless combination of capital. Moneyed corporations, trusts and syndicates, have become instruments of oppression to the wage-workers. The reaction against grinding monopolies is a strike.

2. The saloon. "A Massachusetts manufacturer, in payment of his seven hundred operatives, gave each one a crisp new ten dollar bill. Each of these bills was marked, so that it could be recognized. By the Tuesday following 410 of these seven hundred bills had been deposited in the banks by the saloon-keepers." A few years ago the locomotive engineers of Ohio struck. They were getting $1,000 a year. They demanded $1,200. The preachers in the State were getting an average salary of $700. All know the demands of their social position. Who ever heard of their striking? Why did the engineers strike? To get money to buy homes or educate their families? No. It was to feed the saloon. And until these tireless gormandizers of the workingman's wages are closed there will always be a labor problem.

3. Sabbath toil. When the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western railroad resolved to run their trains on Sabbath, their president, Wm. E. Dodge, protested. He said, "You compel your men to break the fourth commandment and you need not be surprised if they go on and break the eighth commandment and destroy your property." Breaking the fourth commandment blunts the moral sense. It makes the workman indifferent as to moral obligations. They are thus fitted for the folly and wickedness of the strike. Give us a national Sabbath-rest law and a national prohibitory liquor law and there will be no labor problem. The rich and poor will have met together.

Cincinnati, O.

MAKE YOUR POINTS.

Twenty years ago and more, a brilliant teacher in a Normal school said to her class one day when criticising their "teaching" exercises: "Make your points." It was a short but important lesson, for pointless teaching does not teach.

A lesson closely related to this one, is given on the last page of the tract entitled "The Non-Christian Lodges." Like the other, this is short and to the point. It says: "Lay strong hold of some salient fact and use it effectively."

In that short sentence a first necessity is indicated. To attempt Anti-masonic work in disregard of this vital principle, is like arguing before a jury without first eliciting testimony from witnesses.

Freemasonry itself dreads nothing but facts, and avoids nothing more diligently and evasively in pleading its own cause. Other causes are defended boldly on their merits; this one never. It has two refuges equally unmanly and mean. One is the so-called "dignified silence," in keeping with its entire skulking policy of darkness and muteness, while the other is that of leading off on a "false scent. Nothing nullifies these in a conversation on Freemasonry, like clear, definite knowledge of facts, while, without such knowledge, to attempt to talk on the subject with a Mason, is liable to prove useless, if not even worse. He has knowledge while the other man is ignorant; and the issue of a duel is easy to predict when one of the antagonists is armed while the other is unarmed.

A young preacher or student, who asked an older minister for some rules to guide him in composition, received this condensed system of rhetoric: "First, have something to say; second, say it." The first is what I am pleading for here.

If, now, it be asked, which among the "salient facts" can be used most "effectively"? I answer "sum cuique." Probably that will be used best by each one which most impresses his own mind. Among the facts you know, select for your favorite weapon that which most effects yourself by its keenness of edge or sharpness of point. Beyond this one, however, you will do well to have one or two more in reserve. David had one pebble from the brook for his sling, but for the shepherd's scrip selected five. You are liable to meet men who care little for your favorite reason, but much for another one. Arguments that depend on the truths of evangelical religion, may have little effect on some minds that can yet be appealed to on the ground of the privileges and duties of a free American citizen as affected by Freemasonry.

If, however, you decide to attack this wicked system only on its infidel side and let its traitorous governmental character alone, then one fact will do. In Cicero's great treatise on oratory he makes one of his characters say: "In pleading, my usual method is, to fix on whatever strong points a case has, and to illustrate and make the most of them, dwelling on them, insisting on them, clinging to them." You can select among several facts essential to Freemasonry, all of which are fatal and conclusive, reducing the system in which they are vital and fundamental to hopeless condemnation. Such are the following.

1. Masonry eviscerates, abuses and degrades the Bible. This proposition is easily proved when one is familiar with the rules, principles and customs of the lodge. When proved, it is, of course, an overwhelming condemnation, sufficient, even if there were nothing more.

2. Masonry imperatively requires prayer, but severely condemns "Christian prayer," or prayer that mentions or recognizes the only Mediator; and, while intensely and distinctively religious, yet, in various ways, rejects and repudiates Christ and the Christian religion.

3. The lodge ritual is indelibly stained with sacrilege and profanity, by means of the necessary association of things grave and trivial, sacred and trifling or wicked.

4. The boasted moral system of Masonry is a caricature to begin with, and at the end is flagrantly immoral. Under this fourth point, two or three lines of proof can be selected from. An illustration or two will indicate some of them. A seceding minister and not very rigorously adhering deacon were discussing Masonry alone after Sunday-school, when the deacon brought forward the stale claim that Masonry was an adequate moral system so far as that was concerned. The minister answered with an emphatic "No!" which he followed up with an argumentum ad hominem that completely squelched the deacon.

"Deacon, you don't teach in the Sunday-school that if a man avoids the wife, sister, mother or daughter of a member of — Street Church, and holds unlawful relations only with the world outside, he is sufficiently moral, and may be an 'Acacian, free from sin' here, and welcomed hereafter by the 'Grand Architect of the universe' to the 'lodge above.' Such a law of chastity would be intolerable in the church, or even in decent society, but it is the only law of the lodge. Masonic morals do not approximate the ethical doctrines of Christ."

Another line of proof was pursued in the same conversation, when Masonry was shown to be infamously immoral, not because it taught that fractional chastity and syndicated benevolence would free a man from sin, but because obedience to Freemasonry was made the cardinal virtue, central to the moral system, and the system as a whole was disarranged, while in both the Blue Lodge and the Chapter each member was sworn to actual complicity with crime. In the hands of the right person this fourth point is utterly overwhelming and discomfiting, but knowledge of facts in detail and clear understanding of principles are indispensable to its successful employment.

Either of these four points, firmly grasped and skillfully handled, will render an advocate of Christ's cause and antagonist of the infidel lodge invincible. A Mason can endure your prejudice against the order, and match it with his own prejudice in its favor, reinforced by his actual knowledge and experience; your religious and moral character he can offset by that of some minister who is a Mason; but simple facts go home to his heart like cold steel. The facts of Masonry are such as cannot be vindicated. I have seen more than one cheek blush and have had more than one friend plead his youth or thoughtlessness in exculpation and excuse for what he knew endangered my good opinion.

But it is not alone for the sake of rescuing Masons that this duty is to be urged. Nothing will save young men from being entangled in this dreadful net, like knowing what the shameful facts and degrading principles of Freemasonry are. The safeguards of youth are knowledge and understanding. Let us always bear in mind that nothing destroys darkness but light; that the specific antidote of falsehood is truth, and that every bubble of pretence and fiction collapses when it touches solid fact.

CRUCIFER.

Of all the foolish strikes with which the country has been afflicted during the last few years, it is probable that none has been more ill-advised than that which is now in progress on the N. Y. Central system. It is based upon the rivalries and jealousies of two labor organizations. One imagined that the other was making more headway than itself, and, failing to secure a promise that promotions would be made from its ranks according to its own rules, rather than as the judgment of the managers might dictate, it ordered a strike which has caused the public great inconvenience and menaced the peace of the State in many localities. Strikes of this sort can only result in disaster to the men who participate in them. They are without reason. Not one of the train and yard hands now out makes a complaint as to wages or hours. Their grievance is purely sentimental or emotional. The sympathy of the people will be with the employers whose business has been wantonly interfered with and whose generosity has been outrageously abused. — Chicago Herald.

THE PINES OF MOUNT WILLARD.

BY VICTORIA ALEXANDRA BUCK.

Mount Washington, Willard, Jefferson, Adams and Clay belong to the White Mountain group in New Hampshire. Mount Washington is the highest, and is sometimes called the "Crown of New England."

The pines of Mount Willard moan sadly to-night,
The sun glimmers faintly on hill-top and glen;
Mount Jefferson glows in the wavering light,
Mount Adams and Clay blaze in glory again;
While the Crown of New England her forehead of snow,
In splendor and majesty lifteth on high,
While the shadows are gathering darkly below,
And the sun sinks to rest in the nethermost sky.

And there in a cabin far down in the vale,
Enshrouded by mountains and bowered by trees,
Sits a woman with face all despairing and pale
And eyes that are bright as the spray of the seas.
She holds in her fingers, that tremble with pain,
The evening gazette, though but little she heeds:
From her sorrowful eyes tears are falling like rain,
And the shadows grow darker with night as she reads:

"There was a fight with drunken rowdies in the city of Leadville, Col., last night. Several shots were fired, and a young man, William Herbert, was shot dead by a policeman."

"Dead!" she exclaimed, "My brave lad dead!
Dead! my beautiful, fair-haired boy!
Such blessings as shadowed his youthful head,
Who brought to his parents such love and joy!
Only three years since he went away—
Ah! are the lips of justice dumb?—
And his death was caused by the drink, they say:
A curse on the demons who sold him rum!"

The pines of Mount Willard are moaning to-night,
The sun glimmers faintly on hill-top and glen:
Mount Jefferson glows in the quick fading light,
Mount Adams and Clay blaze with glory again;
Mount Washington grandly her forehead of snow,
In splendor and majesty lifteth on high,
While the shadows are gathering darkly below,
And the sun sinks to rest in the blue of the sky.

And there in her cabin the pale mother sits
In her arm chair, so calmly, so cold and so still;
On her forehead the shade of the gloaming still flits,
While the night falleth darkly on mountain and hill.
On her face from the sky the last glimmer of day,
Falls darkly and dim, but her spirit has fled.
And these her last words as her soul passed away,
"He was shot—my boy—William Herbert—dead."
East Randolph, N. Y.

SUNDAY OPENING OF THE WORLD'S FAIR.

FROM AN ADDRESS AT FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH, CHICAGO, AUG. 31, BY REV. WILBUR F. CRAFTS, AUTHOR OF "THE SABBATH FOR MAN."

Nearly all our people, native and foreign, Protestants and Roman Catholics, recognize their obligation to keep the Lord's Day as a day of rest, at least, for one or several or all of the following reasons:

1. Because it is a law of the State.
2. Because it is a law of nature.
3. Because it is a law of the church.
4. Because it is a law of apostolic example.
5. Because it is a law of Christ.
6. Because it is a law of the Decalogue.
7. Because it is a law of Eden.

There are very few in any Christian land who do not theoretically acknowledge the authority of at least one of these seven Sabbath laws. That each of these laws forbids Sunday labor (except works of necessity or mercy) is generally admitted. Whether they also forbid quiet Sunday amusements is the "Sunday question."

The noisy and exciting Sunday amusements of the race-course, the ball-ground, the beer garden, and the "hell on the Sunday boat" find few defenders among good citizens, but many such ask: "What's the harm in opening museums on Sunday afternoons for the entertainment and instruction of workmen?"

Whether the World's Fair should be kept open on Sundays, is another and far greater question, but some things may be learned from the history of the movement for the Sunday opening of museums.

It is noticeable that these Sunday openings are ALWAYS URGED FOR, BUT NEVER BY, THE WORKINGMEN.

The unsuccessful movement to open museums on Sunday in New York City was initiated by Ingersoll's Secular Union, whose pretense that the movement was for the workingmen, instead of being against the Sabbath, should have deceived no one. In England, in the meetings that asked for Sunday opening in behalf of the workmen, it was noticed by a shrewd observer that a large proportion of those who were in attendance wore the cockney's single eye-glass, which has not usually been regarded as the badge of labor. The people's House of Commons always defeats resolutions to open the museums on Sundays by overwhelming majorities, but the Lords almost pass them. So everywhere it is chiefly that are for Sunday opening. The disguised hands are the hands of the workmen, but the voice is the infidel's or the idler's voice.

INFIDELS AND IDLERS

If the pleasure-seekers but knew their own needs, they would agree with that citizen of Paisley who responded to a circular asking what Sunday amusements the people of that town indulged in: "We have amusements enough on week-days, and on Sunday are glad of a rest."

The workmen neither ask for Sunday opening where it does not exist, nor do they use it to any large degree where it is already in vogue. In England an earnest canvass of workmen's societies was made in 1883 by the friends of Sunday opening, and also by its opponents, each seeking the approving votes and signatures of workmen's organizations. The result was: Against Sunday opening, 2,412 organizations, with 501,705 members. For Sunday opening, 62 organizations, with 45,482 members, not one-tenth as many as petitioned against it. Why did these workmen oppose Sunday opening? Not for religious reasons chiefly, but because British workmen, with one day in the week to think, see that if they require or permit men to work on the Rest Day in museums that they may be amused, they can not justly oppose the opening of theatres to gratify others who want —something more exciting than a stuffed monkey and a cold statue. And those workmen see, further, that if the theatre can use the Rest Day for money-making, the factory cannot be equitably refused the same opportunity. This is not mere prophecy on their part. These workmen have seen the wedge, whose thin edge is the Sunday concert and the Sunday opening of the museum, driven home on the Continent. How slowly news crosses the Atlantic! In Prussia, fifty-seven per cent of the establishments engaged in manufacture, and seventy-seven per cent of those engaged in trade and transportation, continue their business on the so-called "holiday Sunday"—keeping over two-fifths of all the wage-earners of that country at their toil on the average Sunday. Those who require others to work the mails and trains and saloons and printing-presses on Sunday, that they may be amused, will find that their own turn to work comes ere long.

MORE PEPPER IN THEIR AMUSEMENT

If art galleries are really such powerful antidotes for the vices of the masses, how strange that Paris, with her magnificent galleries open every Sunday, and with a third larger police force than London for about a third as many people, has twenty-five times as many murders, and other crimes in proportion! Art has a place and power, but it is not its place nor in its power to do the work of religion.

The staple argument for Sunday opening, that it displaces a greater evil by allowing a lesser one, needs only to be carried out to the full to be wrecked in its own absurdity. If Sunday opening of art galleries and Sunday picnics can be defended on the ground that it is better that men should be at these than in liquor-shops, the same rule would justify Sunday theatres, ball games, and even Sunday races, while Sunday liquor-selling itself could be justified by the same spurious reasoning, on the ground that the bar is better than the brothel; or a manufacturer could justify himself for keeping his men at work seven days per week, on the ground that it was better for them to work Sunday than to drink away their health and money in Sunday speers. Of two wrongs choose—neither. We shall never save men from breaking the Sixth and Seventh Commandments by joining them in breaking the Fourth.

The Columbian Exposition should

EXHIBIT AMERICAN INSTITUTIONS

as well as America's products. That first "Columbian Exposition," personally conducted by Columbus himself on his return to Spain, after his discovery of this new world, contained samples not only of America's minerals and vegetables and animals, but also of its men—the red savages. We shall make but a poor showing for our four hundred years of progress if we exhibit at Chicago the half-savage Sabbath of the frontier, with its toil and dissipation and childish play, instead of the quiet American Sabbath of our best manhood.

The very tap-root among the American institutions that underlie the American Constitution is the American Sabbath, more influential than even the public school in producing the intelligence and conscientiousness that are necessities of life in a republic.

Those who oppose Sunday laws usually miss their point. Their purpose is not to "restrict," but to protect liberty—the liberty to rest and the liberty to worship. For instance, the laws that forbid Sunday trains are not designed to "restrict" the passenger's pleasures, but to protect the railroad man's right to rest and his rights of conscience.

Two kinds of selfishness combine to run the Sunday excursion: the selfishness of the miser who owns the road, and of the prodigals that fill the train, regardless of the fact that their fellows must toil to run it. Such trains are hog trains.

There is no force in the plea that Sunday is to see the Fair. As at Philadelphia, there will be special holidays when all workingmen who wish to go can do so without crushing either their own consciences or their priceless Rest Day.

THE ONLY DAY FOR WORKINGMEN

The only large American exposition that has opened on Sunday—that of New Orleans in 1885—was financially and every way an inglorious failure. Many of the exhibitors refused to run their machinery or uncover their exhibits on the national Rest Day, and the receipts on that day were seldom half as much as on other days, besides alienating the best people.

Let the Chicago Exposition imitate, not the Frenchy Sunday of the New Orleans Fair, but the American Sabbath of the Philadelphia Centennial. To accomplish this, let organizations and individuals all over the land, especially prospective exhibitors, by petitions and letters, request the directors, the commissioners, the Legislature of Illinois—if necessary, the Congress of the United States also—to prevent the Fair from misrepresenting the American Sabbath.

The American ambition to excel the Eiffel Tower may be justified by exhibiting at Chicago the American Sabbath in all its lofty beneficence as a day of universal liberty for rest, for fellowship, for worship.

The humane will not, and the inhuman must not gratify their miserly greed for gold, or their prodigal greed for pleasure, by robbing other men of their right to share in the general Rest Day.

REST AND LET REST ON THE REST DAY.

"I do not see how any Christian, most of all a Christian minister, can go into these secret lodges with unbelievers. They say they can have more influence for good, but I say they can have more influence for good by staying out of them, and then reproving their evil deeds. Abraham had more influence for good in Sodom than Lot had. If twenty-five Christians go into a secret lodge with fifty who are not Christians, the fifty can vote anything they please, and the twenty-five will be partakers of their sins. They are unequally yoked with unbelievers. 'But, Mr. Moody,' some say, 'if you talk that way you will drive all the members of secret societies out of your meetings and out of your churches.' But what if I do? Better men will take their places. Give them the truth anyway, and if they would rather leave their churches than their lodges the sooner they get out of the churches the better. I would rather have ten members who were separated from the world than a thousand such members. Come out from the lodge. Better one with God than a thousand without him. We must walk with God, and if only one or two go with us it is all right."—Address by Dwight L. Moody in Farwell Hall, Chicago, 1876.

"As to the question of the attitude of Christians toward the secret orders, two or three things seem to me very plain. One of them is this: that the whole movement of things on the line of secrecy is thoroughly antagonistic to the movement on the line of Scripture and Christianity."—From address of Rev. E. P. Goodwin, D. D., pastor First Congregational Church, Chicago, to Christian Conference, April, 1890.

WAR!!

ARMED MEN NEEDED TO PROTECT FROM SECRET LODGES.

The carpenters' strike for a second time threatening the business of Chicago has a remarkable commentary in the following letter in the Inter Ocean of July 22nd last:

CHICAGO, July 21.—Who is this poor, benighted Henry E. Allen who indites a letter to the Morning News of July 18, and whose wayward sentimentality runs away with his common sense? He deplores that we should have to spend large money for a new armory instead of "devoting the same to concerts and amusements," and can not see what we need here of an armed force to protect the peaceable workmen, the law-abiding citizens, the factories and industries, the monuments and fine arts, life and property, in short, against the wild and misguided uprisings of socialists, anarchists and so-called strikers, right in the very hot-beds of these and other dangerous elements, whether they be fire or cyclone disasters, or revolutionary uprisings.

It is a fact which we will concede that the new armory is to be built for strength and is to be manned and equipped with the same end in view. The emergencies for such a building are growing daily more and more numerous, and if we have forgotten the great fire of '71, the railroad riots of '77, the Braidwood mine riots of '77, and the Stock Yards strikes of '86, in all of which our First Regiment did good work, we can not forget the Haymarket riot of '86 and subsequent anarchists' trial, during the whole of which, and for a period of three months, the military forces were on constant duty ready to be called out at a minute's warning. Nor can we forget the labor troubles which are yet around us on every side. Does Mr. Allen or any of his friends know that since the 7th of April, the day when the carpenters went on strike, there has been instituted a guerilla warfare more brutal, more savage and cowardly than any "Wild West" Indian fight ever known? Peaceable, law-abiding American workmen are surrounded and trapped in buildings during their dinner hour or at work and are knocked down without any warning, kicked, clubbed and thrown out of second or third story windows without any notice whatsoever and without any provocation.

There is a barn on Thirty-seventh street, for instance, belonging to Pat Farrell, excavator, where the inhuman brutes hold meetings and concoct these raids made in the guise of a strike and under the cloak of the Carpenters' Union. A few facts will substantiate the foregoing statements:

May 10, at about 11 o'clock, on the southwest corner of Forty-fourth St. and Berkley Ave., Ed Nace, a carpenter about 62 years old, and another carpenter named Costello, were driven off the building by strikers Joe Young, Myers and Cunningham, by means of threats and violence; same men visited two other buildings on the same day, Forty-third and Berkely avenue, with similar results.

May 30, on Decoration day, Gunderson, an old man, 70 years old, working on his own house in Lake View, with Hans Johnson, Stevenson and two other carpenters, were nearly beaten to death and will probably never recover from the effects. The other two men were also badly beaten. The strikers in this case have all been fined on charge of assault and held to the Criminal Court on intimidation and trespass.

June 9 O. P. H. Andrews, 60 years old, working on the corner of Monroe and Kedzie avenue, sustained a bad cut on the head and had his throat cut.

June 21 A. Blummer, working on the corner of Thirty-fifth and Butler streets, had his face all cut up; another man named Rosin being knocked insensible, and three or four others, all on the same building, badly beaten.

July 7 A. Zeah, an old carpenter 50 years old, was working on a ladder at the corner of West Monroe and Laffin streets, when the strikers pulled the ladder from under him and pounded him on the ground.

July 9, at the corner of Forty-fourth and Ellis avenue, while the men were all at dinner, the strikers entered the building with stones, sticks, and brickbats, knocking a large hole in the head of Orser, beating Gallup, and leaving him unconscious; also striking Hawkins, a man fifty years old, who is suffering yet from internal injuries, kicking a man called Allen clear out of the building, and breaking the wrist of another man, name unknown.

July 12, at the corner of Vincennes and Thirtieth streets, at 12:50 o'clock, five men were injured. J. Howneck, being struck with a hammer back of the ear, has not left his bed since. Simons and L. P. Lewis were also badly beaten, while Macintosh and Paull were also struck, but have been able to resume their work.

July 10, at Forty-third street and Berkley avenue, J. Jackson and C. Petersen were badly beaten and kicked about the head and stomach by a crowd of about twenty men, who surprised them at their work.

July 16 W. E. Carpenter was working at the corner of Michigan and St. Clair streets when he was assaulted with a chisel, cutting his forehead and robbing him of $7.40. He was taken to the hospital, but has since returned to his home.

These are only a few, a very few, of over fifty cases of assault with bodily injury that have been reported. Over one hundred more cases have been reported where damages to buildings and materials have been perpetrated from time to time, and it is surprising that in all the cases brought before the courts the same men, notably Joe Young, Duffey, Myers, Phillips, McDougall and Cunningham have been identified as having committed these deeds in all different parts of the city.

The public will naturally say, "Where are our judges, where are the police, for whom we pay such large amounts annually?" To which I will answer: We have no police for such purposes; purposes where politics are involved, where a policeman depends upon the success of a party for reappointment, or where a judge expects soon to be re-elected.

All the arrests have so far been made on sworn warrants, not one has been made by the police, notwithstanding that wholesale gangs could be arrested as vagrants, with no visible means of support, or for disturbing the peace, or for disorderly conduct, and many others. "Where there's a will there's a way," but the way of the policeman is quite out of the way.

On the other hand, justices of the peace, before whom all these cases have to be brought for preliminary hearing, are a power in themselves. Instead of hearing evidence as examining magistrates only, on a State warrant, a very small amount of which evidence should justify them in holding over to the Criminal Court, they constitute themselves into a supreme court, as it were, dismissing the cases upon a preponderance of perjured evidence, not even giving the higher and proper judges in the case a chance to get at it. In many instances the evidence against the strikers has been more than conclusive, and yet upon a mass of perjured rebuttals, or upon a technicality, such evidence has been dismissed. We will ask if this is justice in this nineteenth century and among a population of over 1,000,000 supposedly civilized beings.

As I have said before, notwithstanding that the four-fifths of the union men have returned to work, there are now in this city over 12,000 carpenters to do the work of the 5,000 of three months ago, who are now taking 30 to 35 cents per hour when 40 cents was offered them on the 7th of April; yet a handful of disorderly thugs and heelers, calling themselves carpenters, hired and paid by the union, will go from building to building (the same men all over the city) to slug and smash men and fathers of families who are anxious to work for what is admitted to be good wages. And all this is done right in the midst of our most respectable neighborhoods, spreading fear and consternation for blocks around where the howling and yelling of strikers drowns the cries of the victims, where ladies and children in the vicinity of Forty-fourth street and Ellis avenue have had to seek refuge indoors while rocks and sticks were flying through the air and men falling out of windows.

All this seems incredible in an enlightened and free country, but they are positive facts, and a man will yet rise and say: "Why do we need protection?"

In hiring carpenters to-day they are invariably asked whether they are good mechanics and also if they are good fighters, i. e., whether they can defend their lives and their tools in case of emergency. A man gets no protection from the city whatever, and under the existing city laws he has no possible means of protecting himself, for he absolutely cannot get a permit to carry arms, though hundreds of them do it now, and must take their chances of being arrested and fined for the offense.

The foregoing condition of affairs does not apply to striking carpenters, it applies to all classes of workmen who strike and cannot get all they demand. For instance, the cornice men have just inaugurated a strike a couple of weeks ago, and already there are acts of violence reported, several of which are being investigated and the perpetrators shadowed; the facts can not be divulged as yet.

Now, if Mr. Allen has any further doubts as to whether we need any protection beyond that of our inefficient police system, we will be pleased to hear from him. Perhaps the day will come when he will welcome the advent of a military company to save his family, his home, or whatever he may possess.

R. W. MAXTON.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

Were the former days better than these?—The meetings at Asbury Grove—Some statistics about our young men—Some unconscious humorists.

It has been fashionable to exalt our great grandmothers as far superior in physical stamina and power of endurance to their degenerate daughters; but I am very much inclined to class it with other legends that we have grown up to believe without ever inquiring why we believe them. The historians promise not to leave one stone upon another to show the school children of the future that the lovely myths of William Tell and Pocahontas ever existed at all; and facts are making serious havoc with the generally accepted idea that women a hundred years ago were better housekeepers, nicer cooks, or healthier and happier in any respect than those of to-day. A woman of the present era who in addition to her family cares keeps abreast with the times and tries to fulfill the social demands made upon her is beset by an array of duties, so infinite in their variations, so multiform in their exactions that our great grandmothers would have stood aghast at the bare mention. Did one of them ever beat the record of Mrs. Livermore, who during the hottest weeks of August has traveled—according to newspaper reports—3,500 miles, and given eleven lectures at Chautauquan assemblies, besides attending conferences on temperance, woman suffrage, nationalism and physical culture. One of these indefatigable W. C. T. U. workers, whose "silver-tongued" eloquence has been frequently heard at our own conventions, writes: "We are all so busy that I am sometimes of the opinion that we are only to stop for communion when we get over the river." Very blessed must be that communion when it comes, to all these weary toilers in the Master's vineyard. But certainly a woman of this decade who has kept her heart open and her mind responsive to all the great social questions of the day does not grow old near as fast as the women of a former era to whom life offered such narrow horizons. At forty she was called elderly, if not actually old. Now it is growing common to see women who look young at fifty; who, like Frances Willard, in the constant exercise of all their physical and intellectual faculties, coupled with a persistent giving out and going out of themselves to others, have found the fountain of perpetual youth. Indeed, I know of nothing so potent to keep off wrinkles and help one grow old gracefully and graciously as to cast one's self, heart and soul, into the current of some needed reform. It is worry, and generally worry about petty things, that makes wrinkles; but a woman whose life is filled with wide human interests outside of herself, has no time to worry.

Heavy local rains have alternated with charming weather, so that campers-out have at least enjoyed a life-like variety of "sun and shade." At Asbury Grove, the regular Methodist camp meeting, there has been the usual large attendance. Rev. D. H. Ela, in his morning's discourse last Sunday on "Christ as a Saviour," had this thought: "Christ can not do the work committed to us. He cannot save us from mistakes and temptations—they are not sins—but he can and will save from sin to the uttermost all who call upon him. The afternoon discourse by Rev. Dr. Bates of East Boston on "Saving the Lost," contained several points worthy of notice. "There must be a revival," he said, "or Boston will be pagan." He then stated that of the 8,000,000 young men in the country only about one in thirty-five were church members. He recently noticed at a church service that of the 1,000 who were present only 15 were young men; but in returning from the church he saw along the way over one hundred young men on bicycles. The great question was, How could these young men be saved?

No thoughtful mind can fail to see elements of danger in the growing carelessness of moral restraint, and disregard of the Sabbath on the part of those who are to be our future American citizens. Every pleasant Sunday, sitting at my window, I can count scores on scores of bicycle riders, boys and young men, who seem to have thoroughly adopted the continental idea of the Sabbath. Can our liberties in the future be safely entrusted to such hands? Not a word, however, did the Rev. Dr. Bates have to say about one of the chief factors which has led to this state of things—the secret lodge which is drawing into its octopus clutches all the young men of the country, and which has slowly and insidiously set up another standard of morals than the Ten Commandments. I do not think enough is made of this strange subtle influence of the lodge. A year ago in the Khanate of Bokhara, one of Russia's Asiatic provinces that not one person in ten thousand knows anything about but the name—a strange malarial disease broke out. In six months the epidemic under the name of La Grippe had made the tour of the civilized world, and strewn its way with dead or enfeebled victims. In like manner the lodge influence is miasmatic. It is subtle, all pervasive; and anybody who thinks that a young man is safe from it simply because he has never joined the Masons or the Odd-fellows or the Knights of Pythias, reasons from a very narrow standpoint. Boston only needs a few more lodges before the Rev. Doctor's prophecy will be fulfilled, and she will be in truth pagan far more than Christian. May God avert the evil day.

Lynn is feeling severely the effects of the strike. One of the manufacturers complains in his letter to the K. of L., acceding to the demands of the strikers, that in several departments of his business where little or no skill is required, the union schedule of prices fixes the wages paid to green hands at six or seven dollars a day, which is equal to that paid the most dextrous and skilled workman in the higher departments. This he reasonably complains of as a gross injustice, but after all the greatest wrong is done to the laborer himself. It is taking away all motive to excel on the part of the average workman, and putting a premium on ignorance and incompetence.

The Providence Journal which fought so hard for license in Rhode Island, laments that "in the midst of the crying needs of brotherhood, and in times of man's helplessness the anti-secret society crank holds conventions and denounces Odd-fellowship because it is furnishing just what man needs; and adds with a naiveness that can hardly fail to amuse the aforesaid "crank": "There is a deal of reserve moral and fraternal force in every lodge that is never brought into action, and there are many excellent men in the order—excellent in that they are moral and upright—who are deplorably bad Odd-fellows. He who is deficient in the lines of fraternal work is not a good Odd-fellow. Special reference is made to those brothers who never do anything in or for a lodge but to pay their dues." That this "benevolent" order should be thus stoutly backed up by a paper run by men whose brotherly regard for their fellow beings is such that they have done all they could to aid the rum power in its work of desolating homes and making widows and orphans, is a striking illustration indeed of the "fraternal" relations existing between the lodge and the saloon. It also proves how misleading are the usual lodge counts which include the bad and indifferent Mason or Odd-fellow along with the good one, and make no allowance at all for lapsed members. In the secret society column of a leading Boston daily the boast is made that one out of every four voters in the State of New Hampshire are Odd-fellows. Letting alone the improbability of these figures, how can the friends of prohibition expect anything but a hard road to travel when so large a vote can be cast by men standing in "fraternal" relations to liquor sellers? The lodge question does not especially concern the old parties—only their political managers who pull the wires—but it is a question of life and death to the Prohibition, or any other party that stands on a reform basis.

I wonder if anybody is ever so uncontrollably, so exquisitely funny as when they have no intention of being so. I am not thinking especially of the blunders of the type-setter, though it is a case in point. Think of a white ribboner in good and regular standing, calmly advising her readers to "take a little" as a remedy for seasickness, when what she really wrote was "talk but little!" Yet this is an experience which once happened to the writer. However, he plays his pranks without respect of persons as shown by the smile which must have overspread the face of the British public when it read in the report of the queen's recent speech to Parliament that her foreign relations still continued "prolific," instead of "pacific."

I don't think any one can accuse the general run of Masonic writers of any conscious humor, but like the printer they are sometimes funny when they don't intend to be. An article on "Freemasonry in New York," in the last Illustrated American, informs the reader that George Washington was not only a Mason, but made a practice during the Revolution of attending the meetings of the traveling and military lodges as he had opportunity. Imagine the Father of his country, that staid, solemn, unbending figure of Trumbull, Stuart and Copley's pictures seeking relaxation for his care-burdened soul in the farce of Hiram Abiff!

ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

REFORM NEWS.

NOTES ABOUT BOSTON.

BOSTON, Mass., Aug. 22, 1890.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Coming home last evening I saw two colored men gripping each other's hands. The big fat one said to the little slim one, "I hope I meets you in the celestial lodge above." I stopped, and said, "Excuse me, gentlemen, but I hope you will never meet in such a place as that;" handed each a tract, with a request that they read, and walked on.

"The celestial lodge above!" It means, in short, heathenism. Search the Bible through and we find no intimation of a celestial lodge anywhere. The Indian may dream of his fair hunting ground, the Musselman of his harem, and the lodge-devotee of the celestial lodge, but they are all doomed to disappointment when the light of eternity dawns and we shall know as we are known.

Oh, what a degraded idea of the place where the pure and the holy, those that are washed and made clean only in the blood of the Lamb, are to dwell! To speak of this place as though it were the eternal abiding place of a company of men, who have excluded themselves behind tyled doors, voluntarily assumed oaths, perhaps administered by vile men, to conceal from their families their deeds of darkness. Can any Christian look upon such a representation of heaven with any degree of complacency? Some who profess Christianity are sanctioning this very thing.

I am constantly reminded that I am on historic ground. Strict attention to the work of our Association has prevented a visit to many places of interest which I hope to visit before my return. When in Cambridge I visited Mt. Auburn cemetery. Here in a secluded spot lies all that is mortal of the world-renowned Agassiz. Nothing but a plain unpolished boulder bearing his name, place of birth and death, marks his resting-place. I was told by a gentleman in charge that this stone was brought from his father's farm in Switzerland by Mr. Agassiz. When a boy he is said to have cracked nuts on the same stone. Both the graves of Charles Sumner and Henry Wadsworth Longfellow are marked with sarcophagus stones of plain design. A little rattle-brained Son of Veteran would make more display in half an hour because his father fought for the Union, than these truly great men made in a life time. Some of those who think that greatness consists in bearing great titles and making great display, would do well to walk in the well-trodden paths to the graves of these men and there meditate on "What is life?" In what does greatness consist?

The Lord has blessed me every day since I began work in this city. He has opened the hearts of the people to the reception of the truth and enabled me to secure forty-eight new subscriptions to the Cynosure. Rev. Wurl, pastor of a Lutheran church, Missouri Synod, has kindly invited me to speak to his people on the evils of secretism on Sabbath, and perhaps Monday evenings. He is a live young man and enthusiastic opposer of the works of darkness. Others want lectures in the early fall and winter.

Dear friends in New England, won't you come up to the help of the Lord unitedly this fall against the hosts of darkness that would destroy the church of Christ? Is the spirit of the Boston "Tea party" dead? Do you mean to be ruled by a despot who can stop your commerce and paralyze your business? You answer, no. Then for the sake of truth and all that you hold dear, strike hard for God and the right.

W. B. STODDARD.

The reader of the Sunday announcements in the Saturday papers and of the startling language on the bulletin boards of some of our churches is treated to titles and topics for Sunday preaching which make him question often whether the object of church going is entertainment or instruction. The headlines in the most sensational newspapers do not surpass the vulgarity and freedom and irreverence of these announcements, and the non-church going part of the community are simply amazed that persons calling themselves teachers of Christianity are willing to announce themselves as given over to claptrap and buffoonery in the pulpit. We have had some painful instances in well-known churches in this city where the pulpit has been disgraced by the irreverence and sensationalism which have been manifested in order to draw a crowd to religious services. Such baiting of the non-church-goer is better honored in the breach than in the observance.—Boston Herald.

"We have, then, the implied testimony of Freemasons themselves, that the Christian church ought to have no fellowship with Freemasonry as thus revealed, and that those who adhere intelligently and determinedly to such an institution have no right to be in the Christian church. God demands, and the world has a right to expect, that the church will take due action and bear a truthful testimony in respect to this institution. She cannot now innocently hold her peace. The light has come. Fidelity to God and to the souls of men require that the church, which is the light of the world, should speak out, and should take such action as will plainly reveal her views of the compatibility or incompatibility of Freemasonry with the Christian religion."—From Pres. Finney's book, "Character, Claims and Practical Workings of Freemasonry," pp. 260, 263.

"God's Word prohibits the believer from forming alliances with the ungodly in society. Whenever the Christian surrenders himself to the society of the unbelieving world, his heart will be led away from God. This is especially true of thousands of Christian men who have deliberately yoked themselves up with unbelievers in all manner of secret societies. This course of false alliance is doing more mischief to individual Christian men by turning their hearts away from God and his service, and to the church by depleting and robbing her of her male membership. THAN ANY OTHER ONE ENEMY OF CHRIST. There never was a time when the cry, 'Come out from among them and be ye separate, saith the Lord,' was more needed than now."—From Dr. George F. Pentecost's Bible Studies, 1889, p. 389.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE NEBRASKA CAMPAIGN.

OUTRAGES AT HASTINGS.

BLUE HILL, Neb., Aug. 22, '90.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—After preaching three times at Kearney last Sabbath, where I was introduced to the leading pulpits in that city by Rev. J. C. Lynn, a most devoted reform pastor, I came down to Hastings Monday afternoon, where J. R. Dill and F. G. Odell, two prohibition lecturers, were holding meetings in a large tent pitched on a vacant lot near the center of the city.

The boys were tired after several month's incessant speaking, and were glad to have me share the time in their meeting. The tent was large enough to seat about a thousand, and though the evening was rainy, yet all the seats were filled and all the standing room occupied. Bro. Odell is a fine singer and enthruses the audience with inspiring prohibition songs. He is also an effective speaker and brings down the house with his telling anecdotes. Bro. Dill lectured through the Pennsylvania campaign, and has developed into a logical and powerful speaker. These men, the one by the gift of song, and the other by clear persuasive reasoning, are among the most popular workers in the State. They use their mammoth tent, hired from a Chicago firm, and hold about a week's meetings in a place, and do not fail to stir every town where they go.

This meeting Monday evening was to be the last at Hastings, and was full of enthusiasm. Mrs. Flora H. Cassel, wife of Dr. Cassel, helped Bro. Odell to lead the singing. She is the author of "White Ribbon Vibrations," a new and choice book of temperance songs. After the singing and my address, Bro. Dill followed with a strong argument on the unconstitutionality of license laws.

The meeting adjourned in excellent order, and everybody seemed to be in good humor. Hastings with its flourishing Presbyterian college, numerous churches and large New England population, was the last city in the State where any fears would be entertained of violence to prohibition workers, and the tent was left unguarded at night. But during the night the enemies of prohibition almost literally destroyed the tent, cutting all the guy ropes, and letting it fall; they ripped the canvas from center to circumference in numerous places, and overturned the organ, throwing the poles upon it, smashing the lamps, etc. In the morning when we visited the tent it bore the marks of a lot of madmen.

The friends of the amendment were thoroughly aroused as the news of the outrage spread through the town, and an indignation meeting was called the next evening in the Opera House, at which President Ringland of Hastings College presided. This meeting was well attended, but the politicians and business men were conspicuously absent and not one of the city pastors put in an appearance. Prof. Ringland, who is an out-and-out National Reform man, said in his opening remarks, "When a man loses an arm or a leg it can be replaced, but when he loses his back-bone he is gone." He intimated that this was the trouble with the leading men of Hastings. A business man said to me, "Prohibitionists and women have raided saloonists and destroyed their property, and now you must take your own medicine."

The meeting was addressed by Prof. Ringland, Messrs. Dill and Odell and the writer. The meeting resolved to try to bring the criminals to justice, but it is very doubtful if anything is done to repair the damages. The value of the tent was $500, and the damage to the committee hiring it will be about $300. Bros. Dill and Odell are working under the Prohibition State Committee, who furnish the tent.

There are but few workers in the State who are not party Prohibitionists. There are few who realize the great opposition these men have to encounter. The politic and over-cautious friends of prohibition advise the W. C. T. U. not to take an open hand in the fight for fear of prejudicing Republicans. They and Prohibitionists are enjoined to work through non-partisan leagues that have been organized in nearly every town. These leagues are manipulated by Republicans, who exert a strong underhanded influence against Prohibition workers, often declaring that they will take no part in meetings if the W. C. T. U. or Farmers' Alliance take any part in them. Thus these non-partisan leagues not only do little themselves, but block the way against prohibition workers. There is such a league at Hastings, who were notified of the coming of Bros. Dill and Odell, but when they arrived they found no arrangements made, and so these workers had to doff their coats, and set up their tent, drive their own stakes, haul lumber for their seats, and pay their own board at the hotel; and when their tent is cut to pieces, pay their own money for its repair, and then feel thankful that they get out of the town alive.

These workers are virtually taking their lives in their hands. They feel that this campaign cannot close without the sacrifice of life. Every night they have to hire one to guard their tent. Such outrages as that at Hastings would be of daily occurrence only that the opposition feel it would lose them votes. I spoke here last evening at Blue Hill, where Bros. Dill and Odell are now holding rousing meetings. I close my month's campaign next Sabbath at Minden. I have given more than one lecture a day during the month.

M. A. GAULT.

A LETTER AND A GIFT FROM THE TRANSVAAL.

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa.

Editor Cynosure,

DEAR BROTHER:—Perhaps a few lines from us for publication might be welcome to you, since we have not written for some time. We always read the Cynosure with great pleasure, not only because it brings us news from America, a country still dear to us, but also on account of its contents in general. We notice with joy that the cause of anti-secrecy, by the instrumentality of the Cynosure and those connected with it, is rapidly progressing, whereof these general conferences of ministers and professors, and the various speeches there made, give abundant proof. Glory be to God that the labors and prayers of the friends of this good cause have not been in vain!

It appears to me that the lodge power in S. Africa is constantly increasing, as here are no able men in the field to expose it sufficiently. We let the Cynosure constantly be read by friends, by which, no doubt, some good is done. It gives us much joy that now and then articles appear in the paper on the subject of divine healing, or bodily healing by the prayer of faith alone, without the use of any medicine. The healing of the body by the Lord is of great importance. It is plain that people generally attach much value to their physical health, which is proved by the exertion and expense they make in the line of doctors and medicine, though in spite of all this, they often fail to gain their object.

The Apostle John also considered health a great blessing: "Beloved, I pray that in all things thou mayest prosper, and be in health, even as thy soul prospereth." John remembered that his friend Gaius could not be happy without enjoying bodily health, which he considered important enough to pray for. Neither does it seem that he had any doubt in regard to God's will to keep him in health or heal him when sick, for in this respect he does not introduce the "if it be God's will," of which clause is made so much use in our days, in the prayer for bodily healing. John believed that Christ had borne our diseases as well as our sins as Mediator, according to Matthew 8: 16, 17, and therefore he had no use for the doubting "if," when praying for bodily health.

Confession of sin, as the cause of sickness, and faith in Christ for healing, is all that is needed to secure such physical blessings, which at the same time are accompanied by spiritual blessings. The healing of the body by the prayer of faith is God's appointed way, and those who try to oppose and ridicule it subject themselves to divine punishment, as we have witnessed also in South Africa.

We are still used by the Lord to pray for the sick with manifest success. Several cases of healing have occurred at Johannesburg, where we still live. A short time ago I received an invitation from friends at Klerksdorp, a town nearly one hundred miles from here, to pray for the sick. The Lord answered my prayer for those that called me, and for others also in the place. While there I held several meetings, preaching Christ as a perfect Saviour for the body as well as for the soul, and the Spirit of God wrought mightily in their hearts, so that many asked for prayer either for bodily or spiritual blessings. If the preachers in general recommended Christ to the people as a Saviour for the entire man, the blessings would be greater and more lasting.

It is still our desire to go soon to America, visiting our relatives and friends, and doing there some work for the Lord, may it even be that many sick ones there may be healed by means of our prayer, as has been the case in S. Africa, and thus God would be greatly glorified by our visit, and our hearts would be overflowing with joy and gratitude to God.

We are not as rich in worldly goods as we some time ago have been represented in the Cynosure, though it is true that God has somewhat blessed us in this respect. In future our property may get to be of considerable value, but the times, at present, are very bad in the gold fields in Transvaal, so that there now is hardly any chance of selling any land for a decent price, which fact even may detain us for some time from leaving for America, in order to defray traveling expenses, though we know very well that the Lord is able to provide in many ways, in case he wants us to leave and work for him. Many gold shares—in which we do not speculate—which have been bought at par, or for £1, are worth about one shilling now, by which fact many rich persons have been rendered destitute. The cause of this depression is mismanagement, swindling, and great expenses by lack of railway communication.

We just now read an article in the Cynosure about seven-eighths of the Bible being misunderstood, which is very true indeed. We enjoyed the article very much. One would ask, how is it possible that the Bible, having been read for hundreds of years by millions of Christians, is still so little understood, even in spite of so many theological institutions? Perhaps many of these learned doctors have no time to read their Bibles attentively, and, as a rule, are satisfied with the fatherly traditions of the meaning of Scripture. Let us all pray to God that the Bible may be understood and practiced properly.

As the Cynosure is doing a great work for the Lord, and we have often wished to assist it, we therefore now enclose by the Lord's help, £5, for any purpose its editor may deem most necessary.

Your brother in Christ, W. HAZENBERG.

CAMP GROUND ECHOES.

NEW RICHMOND, O., Aug. 25, 1890.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—Saturday I heard T. DeWitt Talmage at River View Assembly, New Richmond, Ohio. If he had any subject it was Progress. He was an optimist, he said. This world began with a garden, and it would end in a paradise. The tide is rising; sometimes it seems to be going back, but it gathers more strength and rises a little higher. While destructive instruments of warfare are multiplying, the fatality of battle is decreasing. In the battle at Jerusalem 1,100,000 fell. At Troy 1,600,000 fell. At another battle 1,700,000 fell. Xerxes lost an army of 5,000,000. No battles in modern times will compare with these. England for manufacturing, Germany for scholarship, France for manners, Italy for paintings, but America for God. We say Columbus discovered America. He only discovered the shell. The geologist discovered a new America; the engineer another. We have only entered the vestibule of our store-house. Texas could spare a tract as large as the German Empire and have enough land left to raise wheat for America. In Nebraska he saw a farm of 40,000 acres, and thirty steam-reapers at work. We used to travel by stage, but now in the palace-car. Messages were formerly carried on horseback—now by express, the telegraph and the telephone. Children used to dislike going to school. No wonder. The master called up a class of boys; pointing to the first letter in the alphabet he asked the first boy, "What's that?" "I do not know." Giving him a cuff he said, "That's A." Pointing to the second letter he asked another, "What's that?" "I do not know." Cuffing him, "That's B." Those boys would never forget that lesson. The church is advancing. Out of 1,500,000,000 in the world 500,000,000 are followers of Christ. At one American port he was told the immigrants brought on an average $800 apiece. At another port $1,000 each. He passed a group of foreigners, one reading and the others intently listening. He was anxious to know what interested them so. Looking over the shoulder of the reader he found it was the Book. Such immigrants enrich our country. Men say 1881 was a bad year. He wrote the Bureau of Agriculture at Washington for the facts, and it was an abundant year. This year is more abundant than that. The world is coming under the scepter of Christ. Name five men who are eminent in science, literature or art, and deny Christ, and he would name twenty who were equally eminent, and accepted him. Gladstone said, "The Gospel is the only great question. I have been in the British Cabinet forty-six years. Of the sixty most prominent men I have been brought in contact with, all but five bowed to Christ."

Sabbath morning I heard Rev. Duncan preach in the hall, on "Moses' Reward." Moses wanted to go over into the Promised Land but God forbade him. Did he lose his reward? No. Moses' work was done. He must give place to another. If he had remained his place would have been second, and Joshua first. The people would have been divided in their allegiance to two heads. It was better for Moses to go to his reward above. We think of Gen. Wolff dying at Quebec just as the noise of battle is changed into the shout of victory. We think of Lincoln falling just as the nation is lifting its glad huzzahs over the fall of the confederacy. God has his plan. He knows best.

At night I preached in the same place on "The Responsibility of Nations." The hall was crowded; about 1,000 people were present. Ten ministers were there. I had the sympathy of the audience. Many heartily endorsed the sentiments. One man said, "I have been a reader of the Sunday paper. It came to my house this morning, and I read it. But it will never come again. That sermon settled my mind." Prof. Parker, who has taught an academy for fifty-seven years, in the same building, came forward with his wife to say Amen. I will not soon forget the visit to New Richmond.

J. M. FOSTER.

PITH AND POINT.

GOOD CHEER.

I have read the Cynosure for possibly fifteen years. Its noble, manly dealing with secret societies, I appreciate. May God increase its usefulness many fold, and may it help many a poor struggling soul into the light.—REV. I. C. WEIDLER.

I do rejoice in all the advances that the National Christian Association is making in this great reform. My best wishes and prayers are with them and for them. Ever in behalf of the truth,—MRS. M. A. GAMBLE, Wixom, Mich.

I do not see how people do without so good a paper as the Cynosure. Do you? Lord help us to get more subscribers.—W. O. DINIUS.

I am much delighted with your paper, and have great satisfaction in reading it. It is a great aid in our family circles. I would not do without it.—REV. J. W. TURNER.

MORE OF THE PURE WORD.

The time has come when the Christian church and the world of mankind should be given what the Word of God distinctly teaches and what it distinctly forbids, in regard to secret associations; and not the ordinances of man's assumptions for the commandments of God. Christ is in us the hope of glory; his word the man of our council. You will have constant need of power from on high, the Spirit's quickening energy within and wisdom from above to enable you to stand against the powers of the darkness of this world, and having done all, to stand and not let the word slip, as the Apostle says, "Be of good courage and the Lord shall strengthen thine heart." Yours for Gospel freedom as it is in Jesus,—M. MERRICK, Syracuse, N. Y.

CHRISTIAN UNION.

Visible union was what our Saviour prayed for. It was such a union as should be apparent to the world and would lead them to believe that the Father had sent the Son. If all the Christians in a given community would unite as the one church of that community they would be visibly one. If such church had no denominational name and made no condition of membership than real Christian character, it would make it possible to "keep the unity of the Spirit in the bonds of peace." What we desire is, that all the saints in every place shall unite simply as followers of Christ. When they shall do so there will be visible oneness. Surely we all pray for that day. We are meeting with reasonable success. I have just held a successful meeting with a Congregational church in the mountains; preached ten times and had two Bible readings.—H. H. HINMAN, Berea.

WAKING UP SOUTHERN CHURCHES.

I wish this morning to send thanks to you and all concerned for sending me the God-blessed Cynosure. It has wakened me up from a long slumber, and to that which is more precious than gold. As I have wakened I am trying to wake up others. So I have enlisted my church at New Shorterville, Ala. The church pays for two subscriptions for the preachers of that place.—H. J. CRADDOCK.

A DISCOVERY FOR THE LODGE.

I don't know as I was ever in a place before where there were so many persons belonging to so many secret organizations, both male and female. They seem to think a new discovery has been made—to shut the women's mouths. If you will send a few copies of your paper to the Young Men's Christian Association here you might be the means of extending the circulation of your paper.—LUCIUS E. REYNOLDS, Winsted, Conn.

OBITUARY.

REV. WARREN TAYLOR died at his home in South Salem, Ohio, April 21, 1890, aged 75 years, and was buried in the church-yard of Concord church, Ross county, Ohio, (a field of his former labors,) by his sons, his friends, and his brethren in the ministry.

Warren Taylor was born of Theodore and Lucy (Ballou) Taylor, at Langdon, N. H., Oct. 6, 1814. He united with the Congregational church on confession of faith at Essex, Lewis county, New York, in September, 1831; pursued academic studies at the Geneva Lyceum in New York, and the Bloomfield Academy in New Jersey, and Union College in New York; was married to Margaret Walton in Brooklyn, N. Y., April 24, 1840; studied theology under Dr. Nathaniel Hewitt, Rev. Abram Messler, and Rev. N. B. Purington; was licensed to preach April 14, 1843, and ordained April 24, 1844, by the Presbytery of Trumbull (in Northern Ohio), in which he labored nine years; was Home Missionary in southern Ohio and in Indiana from 1852 to 1865, a part of which time, however, he was laid aside by ill health, and a part (100 days) in the U. S. army.

His longest pastorate and most apparent work was at Wilkesville, Presbytery of Chillicothe, where he was for ten years, from 1865 to 1876. Thereafter, though in feeble health, he ministered to several smaller churches, in alternate periods of rest and labor, till in 1882; having thirty-four years of active service.

A life whose years of youth and early manhood were weighted with sad limitations and heavy strains, and whose general course was one of privations and difficulties, and which was met by a heroic courage, a devotion to righteousness, to humanity and to his family, which exalt the grace of God, and show what mettle of the skies he works in his redeemed.

As a preacher he was helpful as a comforter, and inspiring to a holy and reverential life, yet the special effort of his maturer years was to make plain the Gospel of justification through the merits of Christ alone. In the proclamation of this Gospel God was pleased to add his blessing in the conversion of souls, the building up of churches, and in great consolation of his saints. Some useful work was also permitted him in the cause of education as teacher and founder; and in the cause of moral reforms as writer and worker, and therein it was also given him in behalf of Christ to suffer of his sake. It was also permitted him to be of blessing for life and eternity to immediate kinsmen, and to others brought into his household. He leaves four Christian sons, three of whom are in the ministry—Rev. Charles B., Rev. Vinet E., Rev. Park W., and B. Gaylord.

By nature he was composite—both tender and severe; sensitive, yet vigorous; keyed up by storms, delighted by the delicacy and beauty of flowers. Of energetic temper and manners, he found friends in gentler natures, and rejoiced in their influence over him. His zeal for holiness, and his love for beauty were alike easily noticeable; he loved the woods, wept over the poets, and worshipped God.

As a Christian he was a pure minded man; a willing soul; one who hungered and thirsted after righteousness; who was grateful to God, and gave him the credit of his salvation; he praised his wife, and was thankful to his friends; the grace of God dwelt in him and he grew rich in it. The inspiration which his life was to his family may be seen in that his stricken wife in taking her last leave of his body, said to her children, "It seems as if we all ought to consecrate ourselves anew to God by the side of that coffin." After he had served his own generation by the will of God, he fell on sleep.

—To the above notice from the New York Evangelist there should be added some account of the devotion to the reform represented by the National Christian Association. This was more remarkable, because few of his ministerial brethren in the Presbyterian church were willing to stand by him. He was a frequent contributor to the Cynosure some years ago and was active in our conventions. Among those attending the seceders' convention in this city in 1880, none took a deeper interest in the proceedings. He was one of the committee appointed by the Ohio State Association to report on the nature of Masonic religion, which report remains one of our best tracts,—"Modern Heathenism." He wrote also an "Appeal to all ministers of the Gospel" on the lodge. His name remained for years in our list of volunteer lecturers, until age inclined him to drop it. While in his last sickness he heard of a young man who desired some information on the lodge. He asked for a package of tracts and himself selected a number to send to the young friend, with a prayer that they might be blessed to him. May God bless the testimony he gave during life, and from that seed-sowing raise up a great harvest for his truth.

MARGARET HOVERSTOCK, wife of William Hoverstock, died at her home near Zanesville, Indiana, August 15, 1890, aged 70 years, 3 months and 6 days.

She was married to William Hoverstock March 31, 1890.

She embraced the Christian religion in the year 1845 and subsequently joined the U. B. church, in which she continued a devoted Christian worker until the Master called her from labor to reward.

After the division of the U. B. church at York, Pennsylvania, she preferred the old confession of faith and the constitution of 1841 to the new confession and the new constitution adopted by the liberal element of the denomination, and clung with untiring zeal to the time-honored principles of the old church. She made her selection of a minister to preach her funeral sermon and the 15th verse of the 115th Psalm as the text to be used for the occasion.

The funeral sermon according to her request was preached at Zanesville, Indiana, August 17, 1890, in the presence of a large assembly of persons who manifested great respect for the departed, and for her aged companion who still lingers on the shores of time. After the sermon her remains were laid away in a vault erected by brother Hoverstock for that purpose in the cemetery near by. Brother Hoverstock is a subscriber for the Christian Cynosure, and with his good wife (now gone) wonderfully attached to the principles which it advocates.

WM. MILLER.

The only radical cure for rheumatism is to eliminate from the blood the acid that causes the disease. This is thoroughly effected by the persevering use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Persist until cured. The process may be slow, but the result is sure.

BEECHAM'S PILLS act like magic on a weak stomach.

10,000

Another ten thousand edition of the tract,

KILLED, AND NO INQUEST.

This is a large 4-page tract at 30 cents per pound, 15 cents for half pound, and 10 cents for a third of a pound. It is an illustrated account of the death of Rev. J. W. Johnston, while being initiated by the officers of Huntington Lodge, W. Va., in January of this year. Sent postpaid at the above price. Address,

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
221 W. Madison St Chicago

BIRNEY.

The sketch of JAMES G. BIRNEY candidate of the Liberty Party for President, in pamphlet for 25 cents. A limited number of copies of this handsome pamphlet for sale at the N. C. A. office

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 20 cents per pound:

1. Historical Sketch—National Christian Association.
3. Address to American Pastors.
4. Freemasonry in the Family.
5. President C. G. Finney on the duty of Christians towards the Lodge.
7. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
8. Modern Heathenism.
9. Ministers at Rival Altars.
12. Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodge.
15. Secrecy and Sin.
16. Selling Dead Horses.
17. History of Masonry.
18. Despotism Character of Freemasonry.
19. Freemasonry, a Christ-excluding Religion.
22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.
28. Nathaniel Colver, D.D., on Masonry.
33. Hon. Wm. H. Seward on Secret Societies.
37. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).
39. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?
44. D. L. Moody on Secret Societies.
45. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?
49. John Quincy Adams on the duty of American Voters.
- Chapters in American Politics.
- Masonry vs. Prohibition.
- Decline of the G. A. R.
- Christianity and Odd-fellowship. Part 1, 4 pages; part 2, 4 pages.

The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—20 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

NEW ENGLAND DEPARTMENT.—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent, No. 309, Tremont St., Boston.

WASHINGTON DEPARTMENT.—W. B. Stoddard, Agent, No. 215, 4½ St., Washington, D. C.

WESTERN DEPARTMENT.—Rev. C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Du Page Co., Ill.

PACIFIC DEPARTMENT.—Rev. M. H. Nichols, 712½ Clementina St., San Francisco, Cal.

COLLEGE AGENT, Rev. S. F. Porter, Cynosure office.

STATE AGENTS.

Minnesota, E. Hanson, Minneapolis.
New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimball, New Market.

Pennsylvania, Rev. J. T. Michael, 2942 Westmont Street, Philadelphia.

Alabama, Rev. G. M. Elliott, Selma.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
Rev. H. H. Hinman, Berea, Ky.
Nathan Callender, Montdale, Pa.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa.
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.
Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
Rev. E. Mathews, Long Island City, N. Y.
E. Barnetson, Haskinsville, N. Y.
Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
A. W. Parry, Annawan, Ill.

FINNEY ON MASONRY.

The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason" but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75c; per dozen $7.50. Paper cover 50c, per dozen $5.00.
No Christian's library is complete without it. Send for a copy in cloth and get a catalogue of books and tracts sold by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

THE N. C. A. BUILDING
(The gift of Philo Carpenter.)
—AND OFFICE OF—

The Christian Cynosure,
221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

The National Christian Association

PRESIDENT—Bishop Milton Wright, Dayton, O.

VICE PRESIDENT—Rev. Geo. R. Milton, Elgin, Ill.

COR. SEC'Y and TREASURER—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SECRETARY—Rev. E. R. Worrell, Washington Heights, Ill.

DIRECTORS—T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, John Gardner, J. M. Hitchcock, Jerome Howe, G. R. Milton, Wm. Pinkney, J. P. Richards, Alexander Thomson, E. Whipple, E. R. Worrell.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS.

NEW ENGLAND.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic, Conn.; Sec'y, Miss E. E. Flagg, Wellesley, Mass.; Treas., Z. Graves Harris, Mass.

ALABAMA.—Pres., Prof. Pickens; Sec., G. M. Elliott; Treas., Rev. C. B. Curtis; all of Selma.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., Rev. G. R. Milton, Elgin; Sec., A. H. Hiatt, Jr., Wheaton; Treas., Ezra A. Cook, Chicago.

INDIANA.—Pres., William H. Figg, Reno; Sec., S. L. Cook, Albion; Treas., Benjamin Ulah, Silver Lake.

IOWA.—Cor. Sec., C. D. Trumbull, Morning Sun; Rec. Sec., W. L. Enlow, Birmingham; Treas., Wm. Crawford, Washington.

KANSAS.—Pres., J. S. T. Milligan, Denison; Sec., S. Hart, Leocompton; Treas., J. A. Torrence, Denison.

MAINE.—Pres., Isaac Jackson, Harrison; Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W. Goddard, West Sidney.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt, Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., S. B. Sjoblom, Fergus Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul; Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., B. F. Miller, Eagleville; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec., A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

NEBRASKA.—Pres., S. Austin, Fairmount; Cor. Sec., W. Spooner, Kearney; Treas., J. C. Fye.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., A. A. Hoyt Littleton; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., Isaac Hyatt Gilford Village.

NEW YORK.—Pres., Prof. A. R. Dodd Houghton; Sec., Rev. W. A. Hazlett, Belmont; Treas., P. D. Miller, Newfane.

OHIO.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Perry; Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Seneca; Cor. Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Seneca.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., Nathan Callender, Montdale; Cor. Sec., E. J. Chalfant York; Treas., J. C. Young, Custer City.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. W. Wood Baraboo; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie.

HAVE YOU EXAMINED

The list of Books and Tracts for sale by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. Look it over carefully and see if there is not something you want for yourself or for your friend. Send for full catalogue to N. C. A. OFFICE, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

The Christian Cynosure.

J. BLANCHARD, EDITOR.

HENRY L. KELLOGG, ASSOCIATE EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 4, 1890.

Both Dr. Waldenstrom and his opponents seem, at times, to make the Father and the Son distinct persons. They say "the Father was reconciled, by Christ suffering as the sinner's substitute." "No," replies Waldenstrom, "the Father needed no reconciling. He loved sinners or he would not have given his Son to die for them." Yet both parties believe the Father and Son are one.

On the morning of his resurrection Jesus said, "I have not yet ascended to my Father." "We have his word, therefore, that he did not enter Paradise on the day of his death."—Rev. C. C. Foote, Detroit.

We must remember Christ's ubiquity. As he could enter that "upper room" to the disciples without opening the door; so he was in Paradise without "ascending" there. If we ascend to heaven or make our bed in hell, he is there.

The Romish priests are already beginning to demand that the taxes of the American people shall pay for their parochial schools! It is "the last days," and "perilous times" have come. The following from the Catholic Review Aug. 30, is a simple demand that the United States Treasury shall support thousands of unmarried priests who hold the keys of houses of women:

WHY SHOULD NOT THE STATE PAY FOR RELIGIOUS INSTRUCTION?

It seems to be taken for granted that the state should not pay for religious instruction. Even Catholics discussing the merits of the denominational plan, out of deference to popular prejudice, are careful to assure our Protestant friends that they do not ask the state to pay for religious instruction but only for secular studies. But surely it is a pertinent question, Why should not the state pay for religious instruction in the public schools? Is there anything morally wrong in the idea? Would it necessarily involve injustice, or wrong to any class of people? Would it have a deteriorating or demoralizing effect upon the pupils? In short, can any one give any good reason why the state should refuse to pay for religious as well as for other instruction? What is the object of the state in providing for the education of the rising generation? Is it not to make good citizens? And what is the most important requisite for good citizenship? Is it not morality?

STRIKES! STRIKES!! STRIKES!!!

The press has teemed with them of late, and though, as a rule, the laborers are having the worst of it, and the business interests of the country are the greatest sufferers financially, the struggle goes on, and the end is not yet.

The great Southwestern strike which took place on several roads centering in St. Louis, a few years ago, was ordered by Martin Irons, who published in the papers that they had means to stop and would stop every freight train between the oceans, unless the management of the roads would recognize their secret union within three weeks. Powderly, Grand Master Workman of the Knights of Labor, censured the action of Irons and ordered the men back to work. But much suffering was caused by the stoppage of fuel and food in Western villages. Not long afterward the papers stated that Irons was arrested and put in jail in Kansas City for drunkenness and disorderly conduct in the streets.

Mr. Powderly has ordered the strike on the New York Central, the only four-track road in the world. The cause of the strike seems to be that the road has dismissed from its employ fifteen Knights of Labor who were not only members but officers in the order, and took an active part in procuring a law to compel the road to pay its employees weekly. Their success doubtless emboldened them, and a vice-president of the road said they were "mischief-making," neglectful, drinking, etc., which probably meant that they attended to the interests of their order instead of their employers.

Mr. Powderly's statement is in these words: "For some time past the New York Central and Hudson River railroad have been discharging employees who have been active in labor affairs."

And he (Powderly) accused the management of hostility to and intent to destroy all labor unions, and appealed to all the unions to join his Knights of Labor in their strike. He also appealed for money to "all fair-minded men," saying: "The struggle is far more momentous than it was during the American Revolution. Then our fathers fought for LIBERTY; now we are fighting to maintain it."

At his instance a federation of the orders of railroad employes, switchmen, conductors, firemen, etc., met at Terre Haute; and after long conference decided to give Powderly and his Knights good words and good wishes, but would not join in their strike. This virtually defeated it. The road rallied men, and is taking in freight and inviting back unobjectionable men, and the strike, like that against the Reading road, is to end in failure.

THE CYNOSURE'S POSITION.

The cause of strikes is human depravity, and corporations and capital have the advantage of laborers. They can meet on their roads without expense, and consult without mass meetings in private parlors. We sympathize with the weaker party, and are glad that American laborers have education and talent to protect themselves from oppression: by uniting, by appeals to the public, by retreating to farm labor and drawing food from the earth, and by appealing to the humane sentiments of mankind, capitalists included; making starvation wages unpopular and securing protective legislation.

But we cannot shut our eyes to the following facts:

1. Almost every labor union now is secret, and to swear or pledge one part of society to permanent concealment from the public is to form a conspiracy against outsiders.

2. Almost every secret union has an altar standing in its hall. And an altar is an instrument of religion.

3. Mr. Powderly is a papist, having a secret understanding with priests who have vowed or sworn allegiance to Rome; and who are openly warring on our free schools, putting the Bible out of them, and then making its absence an argument for their destruction.

4. The Catholic Review, a Romish organ, sanctioned and sustained by cardinals and priests (Aug. 30th inst.), opens with an editorial leader of great bitterness on the New York Central, and in favor of the strike. The editor says, "They are fighting for liberty;" and, in another column, says, "The question is, shall a corporation have a right to discharge a workman because he belongs to a labor society." Yet this Review knows that the New York Central has thousands of employes belonging to labor unions to which it makes no objection. So that its assertion is false. And some of these same priests threaten excommunication to parents who send their children to our free schools; and their popes have excommunicated Freemasons who belong to lodges with Protestants. There is not and never was a railroad corporation in the United States whose workmen do not live like princes compared with laborers in Catholic countries. In the year of American Independence (1876) Romish priests had possession of California and gained control of twenty thousand Indians, whom they taught to count beads and whipped into the condition of slaves. Those "laborers" are now vanished from the face of the earth. The only other spot on the American continent where priests had absolute control of the soil, is the Republic of Paraguay, in South America. The Jesuits took possession of that beautiful State in 1610, almost three centuries ago. Its history has been one of disaster and misery, and to-day that republic is mortgaged for three times what the whole soil would sell for! And these priests, whose system is one of abject submission and subjugation of man to man, are here reading lessons on "liberty" to American people!

Luther taught truth when he said that this shameless system was "the Great Whore which did corrupt the whole earth." And that there might be no doubt as to her identity, the angel informed John: "The woman which thou sawest is that great city which reigneth over the kings of the earth." Rev. 17:18. This was no other than Rome. Let us rejoice that the doom of this shameless system is given by the "sure word of prophecy" and that it rapidly draws nigh. See Rev. 19.

WHO WROTE THE BOOKS OF MOSES?

"Biblia" is the name of a monthly, published "for Bible Students, Teachers, and Readers," and "the authorized organ of the Bible Reader's Union." The first article in the June number of this magazine contains Wellhausen's theory of the Pentateuch, which is briefly this: Moses did not write the first five books which our Bibles attribute to him. But they were written by five writers in different ages, and finally put together by Ezra in their present form B. C. 444. Of course, this impudent theory rests on no historic statement of the facts, which all may read when turned into English by pious scholars, and so examine for ourselves; but on the mazes of philology and grammar, and on inferences and guesses based on probabilities three thousand years old. German scholars who have run down Christianity in their universities, till only its shell seems left; and who make no pretension to guidance by the Holy Ghost, in the solitude of their studies wander into the regions of antiquity, and dogmatize of nations and peoples who have for ages ceased to exist. And shallow pretenders whose lives have been foreign to such revivals and reforms as Christ and the Apostles promoted among the people, wishing to seem learned, quote a string of these German scholastics, who resemble scholars as mummies resemble men. Biblia (a Greek word for books) tells all "Bible students, teachers and readers" that this "authorship of the Pentateuch is the great question of the hour." (1) And the first article of this June number quotes a long string of Germans, scarcely two of whom agree; and then gravely tells us that, "it is now quite largely accepted that the Pentateuch is composed of two distinct documents (some say four), and these, it is claimed, may be easily distinguished by the use of the words 'Jehovah' and 'Elohim' in the body of the text." And Biblia says, "It may be safely asserted that upon this central question, the opinions of our greatest scholars are very much divided." Now Rosenmuller, oft quoted by "our greatest scholars" for his verbal criticisms, treats the Bible thus: Luke says (4:2) that Christ was tempted forty days, "And in those days he did eat nothing." Rosenmuller says "radicibus et baccis, sustinebatur non dubie," (he lived on roots and berries, no doubt.) That is, he flatly contradicts the evangelist. Yet his books were in Andover library in the days of Woods and Stuart; and instead of being thrown in the fire, were there for their great learning! It is not wonderful that Andover has since discovered post-mortem probation or Protestant purgatory. Now that

MOSES WROTE THE PENTATEUCH is believed on the following grounds:

1. The oldest writers never suggest that Moses did not write it.

2. God commanded Moses to write some of it in a book. Ex. 17:14.

3. Moses wrote the whole law for Joshua, and ordered it to be put in the side of the Ark of the Covenant. The Pentateuch was called "The Law." Deut. 31:24.

4. Moses may have written beforehand by inspiration, his unknown death and burial in Nebo; or if another was inspired to write it, that no more proves Moses not to be the author, than words added to Webster's Dictionary prove Webster not to be the author of that book.

5. In the time of Christ, "The Law" meant the Pentateuch, a part of "The Scriptures." And we read in Luke 24:27: "Beginning at Moses he expounded unto them in all the Scriptures the things concerning himself." By "Moses" here Christ meant the books written by Moses; that is to say, the Pentateuch. And he confirms the same when he says in John 5:46 that Moses wrote of him; in the Pentateuch, of course; for Moses wrote no other "Scriptures." Thus Christ himself settles the question, Who wrote the Pentateuch?

Besides, the Pentateuch is inspired. That, and not who wrote it, is the "great central question." And Biblia and the Germans are "doting about questions." "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God," and the Pentateuch is "Scripture," whoever wrote it. Let us bless God for his precious Word.

—Dea. S. B. French of this city, a prominent member of Union Park church and a friend of the N. C. A., buried on Saturday his only son.

THE FARMERS.

Twenty years have passed since farmers were organized for political work. Their organizations were for a few years a power at the polls in Illinois and some others of the northwestern States, and succeeded in at least placing one judge on the Supreme bench of this State, and in securing legislation controlling the railways.

The grange is the best remembered of these organizations, inasmuch as it was the greatest failure, though the vast funds it accumulated have kept it in nominal existence ever since. Although it embraced hundreds of thousands in its membership at one time, it could not long last among the clear-headed agriculturists of our country. They could not understand what business their daughters had to be impersonating heathen goddesses with a vile history, or why they needed to retire behind a secret oath and be manipulated in a foolish and degrading initiation in order to make their farms pay.

But the curse of monopoly remained—the reasons for farmers maintaining an organization to protect their interests remained; and as the grange failed the Farmers' Alliance arose to do the work it had attempted, with more reasonable methods and better promise of success. Milton George, the editor and proprietor of the Western Rural of this city, was, as we understand, the originator of this society. The first organization was in this city of men practically engaged in farming. It was intended to work in politics, and as Mr. George was not a secret society man, and all had observed the evil workings of the lodge in the "Patrons of Husbandry," the new organization was designedly an open one. We have this from Mr. George personally, and in his history of the Alliance movement he says, "Secrecy was not only not necessary, but was not advisable." Nothing of prominence has ever been achieved by secret political action. The only secret political movement ever made in this country was the Native American movement, which was short lived, as it deserved to be. We are not ashamed of our principles, and are able to maintain them in argument against the world. There was and is, therefore, no reason for a secret organization to do what the Alliance proposes." In another circular introducing the work of the Alliance it is said; "If an open instead of a secret organization is desired, the Alliance will be found to serve the farmer's purpose excellently well."

The organization spread rapidly and national meetings were held. But the race question in the South divided its ranks and they have been ever since distinct. The Southern faction immediately went into secrecy and thus made the division between the two more permanent.

These are the two branches of the greatest agricultural society ever formed for political purposes. Concerning its present standing and associated societies we will say more in future.

—The Washington agent now in New England writes cheerfully from Willimantic, Conn., where he expected to preach on the Sabbath. He had arranged also a union meeting of the Swedish people of Worcester for Tuesday evening of this week and hoped for a large attendance.

—The Patriotic Publishing Company of this city has issued as a tract the editorial in the Worcester Daily Times of Aug. 14, which in the form of a parable supposes the Baptist church engaged in politics as an organization over four millions strong, opening a political bureau in Washington, with a powerful press auxiliary. It relates what has actually been the procedure of a certain ecclesiastical party and then shows that not Baptists, but Roman Catholics are the politico-religious organization. The idea of attributing such efforts to the Baptist brethren startles us, but we hear of the aggressions of Rome without a quaver.

—The Lutheran Synod in session at Fort Wayne, Ind., says one of our daily papers, has been discussing the relations of the church to trades unions. They do "not consider membership in such unions sinful unless they employ sinful means to attain their ends." This is another opinion on wheels. It says much, or it says nothing, as you please. When we hear more fully of this action it will probably appear in a better light. "Such unions" employ obligations to unknown superiors, and swear to conceal matters with perpetual secrecy. Such means ought to be considered sinful by well instructed Lutherans, for they present another allegiance to the laboring man than is prescribed for him by Christ and his Word.

—In the Congregational church of Ottawa, Ill., last April "Easter" day was celebrated with a Knight Templar performance in the morning, the church being decorated for the occasion and at twilight a communion service was held and a number of members were received. If the pastor had read to his Masonic morning congregation some facts from the record of Knight Templarism; such as portions of the oaths they take, the blasphemy they practice, their falsehoods claimed to be religion, and especially extracts from the daily press of Chicago ten years ago, the protest of the Washington ladies a few years earlier, and the White League resolutions adopted when the conclave was held in New Orleans—such facts would have dispelled the fiction of the occasion, and the walk of his church with the world would not have been so agreeable.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—President Gates of Rutgers College decides to go to Amherst and has so notified ex-Pres. Seelye. Oberlin will be disappointed with this arrangement.

—Rev. T. J. Kennedy, D. D., president of Amity College, College Springs, Iowa, is to have a furlough, which will, in part at least, relieve him from active duty in the institution for about a year.

—Bro. J. P. Stoddard wrote from Worcester on Wednesday last that he was to preach for Rev. W. T. Sleeper in the Summer St. Congregational church on the Sabbath, and lecture in the same place Monday evening.

—The Living Way contains a letter from Rev. R. N. Countee, written on board the Wyoming out at sea. He sailed on the 29th of July, and was enjoying his voyage greatly, not having the usual dispensation of sea-sickness.

—Dr. H. H. George, the retired president of Geneva College, is now with his son in St. Paul. We understand that he proposes removing to Chicago, and rejoice to hope that so good and strong a friend will be near us in this great Vandy Fair of a city.

—Mr. John F. Todd the evangelist, reports a good work at Williamsburg, Ky., where among the other helpers was Mrs. Wilson, a sister of the lamented P. P. Bliss, the singer. A lawyer of the town generously defrayed most of the expenses of the meetings, which have resulted in the conversion of many souls.

—Elizabeth Comstock was a co-laborer with Laura S. Haviland of the same religious faith. She is an aged Quaker preacher, living at Union Springs, New York. Her long life has been spent in works of love. She has visited 122,090 prisoners, 195,000 sick and wounded soldiers, 85,000 inmates of poor-houses on both sides of the Atlantic. She has been engaged in this work for the last thirty years, but now old age compels her to desist. Eternity alone will reveal what she has done.

—Rev. G. R. Milton of the Prospect Street church, Elgin, Ill., resigned finally and peremptorily last week when the officials of the First Congregational church, who had some claim on the building, demanded it of the Prospect Street church. A small portion of the latter church has opposed the pastor since he took so decided a stand against the lodge curse after being personally and violently assailed by the order of Woodmen at the funeral of one of their number. This faction seems to have found a friendly hearing among the legal owners of the building, and the majority, some forty members, being thus ejected, took their letters on the acceptance of Bro. Milton's resignation. He is an able and fearless man, and the Lord will not let him want for work to do.

FREE! SEND FOR THEM!

I have a large supply of missionary papers to send free to any who will use them well.—the pointed and practical Oriental Evangelist. Send promise to distribute, and postage at one cent for one hundred pages.

WALLACE J. GLADWIN.
Miles, Iowa. Missionary to India.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27, 1890.

"Render therefore unto Cæsar the things which are Cæsar's, and unto God the things that are God's," the Master's words to the Pharisees who sought to entangle him with the Roman authorities, was the text from which Rev. J. B. Hawthorne of Georgia preached a sermon here which, for originality of the conclusions arrived at, has seldom been surpassed. He argued that it was entirely wrong for governments, municipal, State or national, to employ chaplains to furnish religious ministrations to Congress; the sailors in the navy; the soldiers in the army, or to prisoners. He thinks that the chaplains of Congress should be paid by the members of that body, and that the same rule should be followed in all cases where ministers are employed as chaplains.

It seems somewhat strange that it should require more than ten days to pass a resolution so manifestly proper as that of Senator Plumb, instructing the Senate Committee on Rules to put a stop to the sale of liquor in the Senate wing of the Capitol. There is a rule prohibiting the sale of liquors; but Mr. Plumb knows that it is openly violated or he would not have offered his resolution. While no Senator has opposed the resolution, yet there has been a manifest desire on the part of certain Senators to bring ridicule upon it by offering absurd amendments; for instance, one instructing the officials of the Senate to carefully search each Senator's desk every morning to see that no liquor is concealed there. I do not mean to class Mr. Blair's amendment aimed against drinking in committee rooms among the absurd ones. In common with every one who has taken the trouble to investigate the matter, I regard Mr. Blair's amendment as necessary to break up what appears to be a growing evil. The others are below the dignity of the United States Senate, and it is surprising that members of such a body should be willing to offer them.

There are rumors that Speaker Reed's order prohibiting the sale of liquors in the House wing of the Capitol is not being strictly enforced. I have no personal knowledge on the subject, but I know that since it was issued passers by in the corridors have not been shocked by seeing men drinking the filthy and destructive stuff in the House restaurant, as they are daily by similar sights in the Senate restaurant.

The Washington local authorities have of late been very active in their attempts to break up the lottery gamblers in this place, and many of them have been arrested, but the pool sellers on horse races, in the absence of any law to stop them, continue their nefarious business openly. It was hoped that the bill to prohibit pool selling in the District of Columbia would become a law at this session of Congress; but the hope is waning. It cannot be brought up in the House except upon "District day," and it is considered doubtful whether there will be another "District day" at this session. More's the pity.

Far away North Dakota, through the person of Representative Hansbrough, who has introduced a joint resolution proposing a Constitutional amendment prohibiting any State or the United States authorizing the establishment or maintenance of a lottery, has shown her older sisters an example worthy to be followed.

STRIKE LITERATURE.

Grand Master Powderly has issued his address to the public. A more ineffective utterance never came from the bowels of emptiness. It is sound and fury, signifying nothing. Instead of adding one fact to the statement of alleged wrongs, instead of giving one new or good reason for the vicious precipitation of the strike, he rails against organized capital like a garrulous fish-wife, and prattles childishly about the fight of the Knights of Labor for liberty being more momentous than the struggle of the Revolution for independence. —America, Aug. 28.

It is about time for the Knights of Labor to disband. They started out with a great flourish of trumpets. They were to take the place of all trades unions, and with a mighty effort they were to solve off-hand every question that concerned the toiler and the capitalist. Their history has been a record of pride, pretense, bluster, failure

(Continued on 12th page.)

THE HOME.

A SUMMER THOUGHT.

We cannot say He speaketh thus:
We hear not voice nor sign,
But suddenly there breathes on us
A comforting divine,
That falleth softly with the showers,
And droppeth with the dew;
"I care for birds and wayside flowers,— Shall I not care for you?"
O gracious voice of Him that stilled
Of old the Syrian sea,
We witness to thy word fulfilled
Beneath the greenwood tree;
And on the sunny, clovered sod
That drinks thy rain and dew,
The stronger for this Truce of God
We gird our souls anew.

—Miss Flagg in Christian Witness.

THE ELDER BROTHER.

I want the people who weep over works of fiction to read this story. I know that it will interest them. A great king who lived in a golden palace had two sons. The younger one wandered away in early boyhood. When far from home he was kidnapped by an enemy of the king and taken to the frontier of the kingdom. Then his captor brought him up in wretchedness and rags, yet made him believe he was happy. He told him that the king, his father, was a tyrant; that if he went back this cruel and unnatural parent would beat him with remorseless severity. The king's enemy so wrought upon the fears of the king's son that, when messengers came asking him to return and promising him a cordial welcome, he would not believe them. He called them liars and cheats and drove them away.

Of course there were times when the boy felt lonely and sad. The filial instinct was in his heart, and would wake up now and then. He longed for a better home than that in which his captor kept him, but he knew not where to seek it, for he had no faith in the father from whom he had wandered. He believed what he was told—that the royal palace was a dreary dungeon.

But one day a stranger visited this wanderer. He was travel-soiled. He was weary. He had evidently come a long journey. He took the hero of our story aside and said to him: "I am your elder brother. Our father is so anxious for your return that he has sent me to seek you and to bring you. He loves you. I love you. His home is not a dungeon, but a house of many mansions, and in it a place is fitted up expressly for you."

The stranger was so frank and so kind that he made a deep impression on the young man. But what would his master say? He had sold himself to his father's enemy. He was closely watched and could not hope to escape. Possibly, however, the master could be induced to let him go. The elder brother agreed to try. He went to the master and said: "I would like to buy your slave. What is the price?" The master suspected that he was the king's son, and was determined to outwit him if he could. So he replied: "I will sell the young man on only one condition, and that is that you pay for him ten ounces of blood from your heart." He meant, of course, to try to kill the elder brother, and still keep his slave. But the elder brother consented to the terms. He bared his body and told them to take his blood. The master was glad enough to do it. The younger brother looked on while the elder groaned under the weapons of his tormentors, then grew faint, and finally ceased to breathe. He was now convinced that his brother did really love him, and he cried: "O that he were alive again, for then I would go with him." While he was speaking the elder brother opened his eyes. He had brought with him from his father's house an elixir of life. He had taken it just before they began to drain the blood from his heart. That elixir was powerful enough to restore him fully, to fill his veins with new blood and set his heart beating. So he rose up as from the dead. And then the wanderer said: "I know now that this cruel master has deceived. I have faith in my brother, who has come to die for me. I have faith in my father, who sent him to die. I will go back with him. I will be a loyal and obedient son." And then appeared a great army that had escorted the elder brother, and had waited in ambush the result of his mission. Against this power the master was powerless, and with shouts of triumph the soldiers accompanied the brothers to their father's house.

They found the father waiting to welcome them. He had a feast prepared at which his wandering, wayward son was the honored guest. He clothed him in royal robes. He placed a crown of gold upon his head. He built for him a city whose foundations were precious stones, whose gates were pearls, and whose streets were transparent gold. In this city were trees bearing all kinds of luscious fruits, and a fresh crop every month, and their leaves healed all kinds of sickness. So that there was in that golden home no pain, or sorrow, or crying, or death. O, how glad that younger brother was that his elder brother came and redeemed him. O, how grateful he was to him and to his father for all that they had done for him. O, how happy he was in that beautiful home!

Now, is there any story in the most glowing fiction of the day more touching and more wonderful than this? It exceeds the tales of fairyland and the Arabian Nights. And yet all my readers know that it is true. It is but a meager epitome of the story of the cross. It is only a faint and feeble presentation of the love of Christ for sinners, and of the love of God in Christ for those who despise and reject him.

And the moral is evident. Readers of romance, there is no book so full of what you admire and love as the Bible. And while other wonder books are false, it is not only true, but true for you. It comes with a personal appeal. It tells not only of a father, but of your Father, of your Elder Brother, and of the home that may be yours if you will only believe in the love of him who died to redeem you.—Obadiah Oldschool, in Interior.

PRAYER AND BIBLE-READING.

In prayer we talk to God; when we read his Word he talks to us. Our converse should be mutual. If we would have him hear our words, we must be eager to hear His. John Wesley thus describes his hours of retirement for the study of God's Word:

"Here, then, I am far from the busy ways of men. I sit down alone; only God is here. In his presence I open, I read his book; for this end, to find the way to heaven. Is there a doubt concerning the meaning of what I have read; does anything appear dark or intricate—I lift up my heart to the Father of Light: 'Lord, is it not thy Word? If any man lack wisdom, let him ask of God. Thou givest liberally, and upbraidest not. Thou hast said, if any be willing to do my will, he shall know. I am willing to do. Let me know thy will.' I then search after and consider parallel passages of Scripture, comparing spiritual things with spiritual. I meditate thereon with all the earnestness and attention of which my mind is capable. If any doubt still remains, I consult those who are experienced in the things of God, and then the writings whereby being dead, they yet speak."

The Bible is the creed of Protestants. In this day when there is so much attention paid to "confessions of faith" and so much said about a revision of creeds, the church needs to swing back to the Bible as the supreme authority of doctrine and life, creed and conduct. Our battle will be shorter, sharper, more conclusive, and our victory surer and more glorious when we meet the hosts of infidelity, Romanism and all sorts of falsehood and wickedness with the Bible only in our hands. Our appeal must be to the Book! Every doctrine of men must be brought to the test of God's Word. If it be of God it will stand; if not it will perish, and ought to perish.—Christian Inquirer.

Mr. Gladstone in his recent article on the Bible says: "John Bright has told me that he would be content to stake upon the Book of Psalms, as it stands, the great question whether there is or is not a divine revelation. It was not to him conceivable how a work so widely severed from all the known productions of antiquity, and standing upon a level so much higher, could be accounted for except by a special and extraordinary aid calculated to produce special and extraordinary results. If Bright did not possess the special qualifications of the scholar or the critic, he was, I conceive, a very capable judge of the moral and religious elements in any case that had been brought before him by his personal experience."

John Quincy Adams once said: "So great is my veneration for the Bible that the earlier my children begin to read it, the more confident will be my hopes that they will prove useful citizens to their country and respectable members of society." Thousands upon thousands of parents to-day sanction this sentiment of the "Old Man Eloquent."

TOMMY'S BUSINESS VENTURE.

Tommy wanted some money. He hadn't many chances to earn it, though willing, very willing, to work pretty hard for it.

He wanted ten dollars before the next winter's winds and snows shut the Lane family in for days, inside the little red farm-house at Maple Grove farm, five miles from a neighbor.

Ten dollars would, if divided right, bring weekly and monthly, bright periodicals from different portions of the busy world into their own little home.

And then when the blizzards came, and he sat at the little round table getting his daily lessons, mother and father, too, could spend the hours delightfully, sitting beside the fire and reading something very "good."

It's not nice to be a "shut-in" when your home is a small cabin way out upon a prairie, if you have nothing new to read, and very few neighbors, and those living out of sight.

Tommy's home was part dug-out. Their fire in the winter was fed by bundles of twisted grass, sunflower seed, cornstalks, dry weed stalks, and sparing handfuls of coal. Coal was precious. Wood was very valuable.

Tommy helped, with all his strength, the loving mother gather in their seasons, first, the wild strawberries, then raspberries, plums and grapes, and hoe in the garden from planting until harvest time.

Between them they had filled jars and glasses full of nice fruit for winter use, gathered in a supply of pumpkins, squashes, beans, potatoes and other good things, which were stored in the cave for the days when they could not work.

Tommy helped his father, too, in the "crop" tending and gathering. Mr. and Mrs. Lane thought their little lad a "wonderfully bright boy." At twelve Tommy was stout and tanned.

All through the winter of 1887 and 1888, he had, while studying under Mrs. Lane's directions, been trying to plan a way to earn at least ten dollars, talking over his desires with both father and mother.

Before planting time rolled round, Mr. Lane one day said:

"Tommy, couldn't you raise seed corn to sell? I mean if I give you a patch and break it for you, can you plant and tend it without help? The corn that I am planting I paid five cents for each ear. It is very fine for this climate. I have now quite a start, and can supply you with enough to raise quite a crop. You might also try planting the several varieties of pop-corn. There is the rice-grained and the large yellow."

"That is the very thing! Of course I can tend a crop! Mother! mother! we'll have 'em by next November!" shouted Tommy, as he ran to pick out his share of the corn.

The "ground" was broken, the corn planted. Tommy had managed to get together seven varieties of fine corn besides the pop-corn.

Friends from Buffalo, after hearing of this wonderful plan, sent him packages of the very best varieties, the early roasting ears, also field corn.

Tommy's mother became interested, and could not resist helping "just a little."

The lad laid out his rows, with care, saying "he wanted every row straight."

The grain sprouted well, the tender blades grew thriftily, and Tommy battled royally with the crows, taking care that the mules and two cows did not have the opportunity to trample down his growing "crop."

The weeds grew fast, and Tommy's hoe had to "swing" out lively sometimes, to keep them down.

Mrs. Lane, pitying the tired and hot little fellow, often wanted to rest him, but he had a chivalrous care over her, and gently put her aside with "it doesn't seem just right, mother, for women to hoe, when there are boys to do it."

Late in October that harvest was gathered and packed in large baskets ready for market.

A neighboring farmer came over to look at the exhibit, which presented an attractive appearance.

"Well done, Tommy," said neighbor Ewing, looking at the heaps of well-filled-out ears of corn. "You'll sell that in Carney for a good price, as this and the adjoining settlement is settled up with farmers that need just what you have to sell. It is always a satisfaction to me to know that the article I'm sellin' is goin' to help somebody. There isn't an inferior variety of corn in the lot you've raised."

"I couldn't have done so well without father and mother to help me. Father thought it out for me," returned Tommy, pleased and happy.

"Tommy has earned a reward, for he has toiled manfully to raise his crop," said Mrs. Lane, proudly, and neighbor Ewing said:

"I'll warrant ye; work tells on any crop."

The seed-corn was taken to the nearest town, fifteen miles away, and left with the storekeeper, and who kept the postoffice.

A few weeks later, neighbor Ewing went "to town," and asked about Tommy's corn, and if there had been a demand for it.

The postmaster replied:

"A purty consider'ble of a demand. Every grain has been sold, and folks come now askin' for some of that Lane seed-corn. Carry this to Tommy, an' tell him I don't charge him anything for sellin' his corn, as I'm an admirer of such industrious little fellers, and want to lend 'em a helping hand."

When the several silver dollars were handed Tommy by neighbor Ewing, he laid it all in Mrs. Lane's lap saying:

"Mother, it'll make us happy all through the long winter. There'll be something for you an' father too. Say, mother, can't we have a school here, for those who will come and study with me?"

Of course Mrs. Lane said, "Yes."—Elba Guernsey, in Arthur's Home Magazine.

TEMPERANCE.

UNEXPECTED TESTIMONY AGAINST BEER.

The editor of the Evening Post, of this city, is one of the clearest thinkers and most forcible writers on the newspaper press. Like the little girl with the little curl, when he is right he is very very right, and when he is wrong he is horrid. Mr. Godkin is neither a teetotal "fanatic" nor a prohibition "crank." We fancy, indeed, that he looks with a mild sort of contempt upon all who are capable of going to such extremes, and pities them for not being able to flavor their dinners with glasses of good old wine, or, at least, a moderate allowance of beer. It was with not a little surprise, therefore, that we read the following editorial remarks in the Evening Post of Wednesday last:

Gen. Von Moltke has put on record his testimony against alcohol, which he says he never uses, and thinks unnecessary, and sets down as "one of the greatest enemies of Germany, the misuse of alcohol." But he stands manfully for beer, and wishes that "tea, coffee, and light beer could be made cheaper than they are." For light wine he has apparently nothing to say. The greatest objection to beer, if it be not the only one, as a popular drink, is that people keep at it all the time. The quantities that a real votary consumes in the day, and especially in a hot day, are enormous, and the reason is, perhaps, that it really does little or nothing towards quenching thirst. On the contrary, there is much reason for believing that it steadily excites thirst, or, in other words, provides for its own increased consumption. It bids fair, however, to conquer the world. The product in America is enormous, and it makes steady strides in supplanting light wine in France. But nearly all the arguments in its favor are based on the assumption that it is consumed in moderation, whereas, as a matter of fact, it is consumed immoderately, and when so consumed is an undoubted deadener of some of the faculties, although it may not produce what is called intoxication. The force of Gen. Von Moltke's testimony in its favor, too, is somewhat weakened by the question whether even his greatness in the popular German eye would bear the strain of an attack on beer.

Had Mr. Godkin been employed as a campaign writer on behalf of the prohibition amendment he could scarcely have penned a more effective condemnation of beer than is contained in this paragraph. A Prohibitionist would indeed have stated the case more strongly, but the very moderation of the Post's utterance, and the evident absence of any disposition to discredit beer as a wholesome beverage if taken in moderation, adds force to its argument, which, in fact, reads much more like the reluctant confession of a friend than the accusation of an enemy.

If the Post had been a little more explicit and acknowledged that it is the finer and nobler faculties that are deadened by the free use of beer, while the lower or animal propensities are excited by it, and that it often induces disease, he would have given a fair statement of the case against this popular but pernicious beverage.

Seeing, then, that beer constantly creates an appetite for itself and never really assuages the thirst it evokes, and seeing that the excessive drinking of beer (which is admitted to be the inevitable result in multitudes of cases of an attempt to use it in moderation) deadens some of the faculties; is it not clear that the open sale of this beverage is detrimental to the best interests of the community and should be prohibited?—New York Weekly Witness.

The stringent liquor law of South Dakota, making county judges the final arbiters in liquor cases, has been declared constitutional by Chief Justice Carson of the Supreme Court. Under the law, a liquor dealer has no appeal, and can be fined or imprisoned without the intervention of grand juries or courts.

A dispatch from Deadwood in the Black Hills, says that on Aug. 11 tramps entered the only saloon at Heckert's camp, and after stealing all the liquor they could carry blew up the establishment with dynamite. The proprietor was blown into the river, but was not seriously injured. The saloon had been open but one day.

Senator Plumb's resolution to prohibit the sale and drinking of liquors in the Senate wing of the Capitol is intended to correct an evil which has grown to large proportions, and which is already nominally under the ban of the Committee on Rules, which is in charge of the subject. Speaker Reed's order against drinking in the House wing is practically a dead letter. Instead of the drinking being done at the counter, however, it is done at tables, but the results are about the same. In the Senate end, for some time at least, there has been no attempt at concealment of the sale of liquors, and anything from ginger ale to benedictine, may be had on demand. It has really grown into a scandal, and the resolution of the Kansas Senator is a timely protest against the custom. That Senator Plumb should lead in the crusade is a matter of surprise to some. But his sincerity is not to be doubted. He does not indulge in any legislative tricks for mere show, and this attack upon the Senate bar is taken to mean that, if it is possible, he intends to drive it out of business.—Washington Correspondence Chicago News.

A warning of frightful force against the use of cigarettes comes from a bright, agreeable boy, only sixteen, who died recently in a New York hospital. He smoked cigarettes on the sly, finally became a slave to the habit, contracted a painful disease, and died in great agony. He begged the nurse again and again to warn other boys against their use. Additional testimony of similar character comes from prominent educators in Michigan. In response to circulars sent to physicians throughout the State it is proved that boys are being dwarfed, made insane, deaf, dumb and imbecile by cigarettes. The extent of this evil, and also of drinking habits, among quite young boys, is not half realized by parents and teachers. In a drawing-room car, recently, we saw a party of boys returning to school after vacation. Some of them were not yet out of knickerbockers, but with their lunch they ordered bottles of beer. They were fine looking little fellows, and evidently came from wealthy families where there is no scruple against using liquor. But it is just such associations as these that thousands of other parents dread for their sons, and in selecting a school it is well to inquire into other things besides the reputation of the institution.—Congregationalist.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE NEW TESTAMENT.

LESSON XI.—Third Quarter.—Sept. 14.

SUBJECT.—Parable of the Pounds.—Luke 19:11-27.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Unto every one which hath shall be given.—Luke 19:26.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

DAILY READINGS.—M.—Luke 19:11-27. T.—Matt. 25:14-30. W.—Matt. 25:31-46. Th.—Isa. 60:1-22. F.—Psa. 2:1-12. S.—Luke 8:1-18. S.—Luke 19:11-27.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. The ten servants.—vs. 11-14.—The mind of the multitude was persistently fixed on a temporal kingdom, immediately to be set up, and the design of this parable was to correct both these false impressions. Christ continually reiterates this truth,—that his kingdom is a spiritual kingdom. All striving for place or power in the church; all effort to make her authority felt in civil affairs, is in direct contradiction of the first principles of that kingdom. The "far country" implies a long period of waiting on the part of the church before her Lord returns; but it also teaches that he surely will return, though none know the hour. It also seems to directly contradict the idea so widely prevalent that the world will become evangelized first, for we find that his citizens who hated him, and who, without doubt, represent the world's people, the unconverted masses, remain in the same condition at the close of the scene. The nobleman is represented at the time as paying no attention to their taunting message. This is a type of the Lord's wonderful forbearance. Sinners may blaspheme, and the tide of iniquity run its highest, yet he not seem to hear or see. For eighteen centuries since he left the earth the season of grace has lasted. The period of judgment may be even now at the door.

2. The ten pounds.—vs. 15-21. The pounds, of which every servant received one, must signify, not gifts, for we know that of these there is great diversity even in spiritual things, but God's saving grace given to all alike. Wonderful results in soul-winning have been attained by the most unlettered men and women. Every Christian may increase his pound of grace if he will, and receive the blessing of the faithful servant. "Because thou hast been faithful in a very little." No one is born into the kingdom a spiritual millionaire. If he becomes such it is by wise and zealous use of his one pound. We notice too that the reward, while bearing exact proportion to the faithfulness of the servants, is far beyond the service rendered. From traders they are made rulers and princes. A Christian does business for the King. He is a servant whose interests are or should be all centered in his Master's. The five or ten cities with which he is rewarded, must refer to a vast increase of opportunities as well as enlarged capacities for service. For this is what genuine rulership always means. So from this and kindred passages we are to regard heaven as a sphere of great activity rather than of mere ease and enjoyment, as is pictured by the Mohammedan, and indeed by all false religions.

3. The unprofitable servant.—vs. 20-27. The servant who hid his pound in a napkin must represent the mere nominal Christian who looks on all spiritual effort as a hardship, and thus tacitly gives the world to understand that they serve a severe Master. The napkin may mean their own selfish interests in which they deliberately bury every opportunity for usefulness, every chance to increase their spiritual store by adding to that of some one else. One's business may be the napkin; it may be pleasure or household cares. Whatever it is in which we hide our pound of grace, the result will be to lose what we have, or rather seem to have, for grace not used shrivels up and dies, leaving only an empty shell of outward forms behind. "To every one that hath shall be given." This is the law of nature as well as of grace. We have no reason to suppose that it does not extend to all created intelligences, even the highest archangel. The unprofitable servant and the open enemies of Christ meet at last on the same level. One has lost his pound of grace; the other never had any to lose. The opportunity for usefulness that we let slip will be given to another. Are we seizing eagerly every golden chance to work for God, and thus gain the reward of the faithful servant?

STRIKE LITERATURE (Continued from 9th page).

and decay. They may have won a small strike or two, but they have failed ignominiously in all their extensive enterprises. For a year or more their numbers increased amazingly. Now they are diminishing with equal rapidity. They do not command the respect of labor, nor are they feared by capital. To all appearances nothing is left of the Knights of Labor save Terence V. Powderly, his big salary and his type-writer. He will not resign. He will have to be bounced.—Chicago Herald, Aug. 28.

As a labor leader Mr. Powderly seems to have lost the firm grip he once had, and there is every indication of a rapidly-waning influence. As an adviser against strikes he was remarkably level-headed, and the results usually demonstrated the soundness of his advice. Since he has become so intensely partisan as to throw his whole influence against a prominent Republican measure, and to demand that every Knight of Labor shall vote according to his way of thinking, he has given color to the suspicion that he has degenerated from the safe counselor to the blatant demagogue. It was certainly unwise and inconsistent for the head of a great non-partisan labor organization to take so untenable and obnoxious a position.—Pittsburg Commercial.

We note with regret, but without surprise, Mr. Powderly's declaration that the struggle has just begun. Unhappily, he has contrived to put himself into a position from which he cannot escape with credit, except, indeed, by a manly acknowledgment of error and failure; and that, doubtless, seems to him an impossible alternative. But we think too well of the sagacity and reasonableness of the great majority of the Knights of Labor to suppose that they are deceived by shallow pretences of encouragement or at heart applaud and approve their leader's attitude and policy. Their organization has been beaten in a contest which it provoked without reason, and every man of sense among them knows the fact. They can prolong and perhaps temporarily increase the discomfort of the public and the annoyance of the railroads, but they deserved to lose, and they have lost.—New York Tribune.

Only a few weeks ago Mr. Powderly lashed himself into a quivering state of indignation over the Federal election bill, and appealed to the Knights to rise against it, denounce it by resolution, and at the polls this fall scratch the name of every candidate for Congress who, as a member of the present House, voted for the bill. That was an astonishing freak of the head of a non-political association of workmen. Of course his utterances made no impression, except to provoke criticism. The idea that the order of Knights of Labor was to be commanded to take up the cudgel in behalf of a partisan opinion of Mr. Powderly received the treatment it deserved, that of silent contempt. There is an almost exact parallel between his whoop on the fair-election bill and his effort to draw the Knights into a struggle to vindicate and execute his personal resentment against Vice President Webb, of the New York Central.—Cincinnati Times-Star.

The New York Central railroad is managed by Christian men on Christian principles. The endeavor of its officers is to be just and humane. They may make mistakes, may err in judgment, for they are men; but the constant effort is to avoid all unfair or unkind acts toward those they employ. Against this management there has been for about a fortnight one of the most unreasonable and wicked strikes on record. To review all that has been done and said, for doing has preceded saying, would fill much space. Only one or two points can be noticed. The management of the road claims, with entire justice, that such a business as is entrusted to it, demands strict discipline, prompt and accurate performance of duty, and that to maintain these vital and essential necessities, it must have and will be guilty of most reprehensible unfaithfulness to its trust if it fails to exercise promptly the right of summary dismissal. The strikers combat this position. The management also claims that a striker has abandoned its service and has no further claim as an employe upon its consideration. The strikers endeavor to overthrow this position. The ground of the trouble along the road is in these two claims and their denial. The company is right and the strikers are wrong.—Christian Intelligencer, Aug. 27.

If intelligent men who are employed in any capacity upon a railroad think that they are justified in producing quasi-anarchy in any community because they may have a just grievance, they hold views which are fatal to all social order. They may not see it, but what they propose as a remedy for an alleged grievance is war. They do not defy a railroad company. They challenge the whole community of intelligent, industrious, and law-abiding citizens, who are the overwhelming body of the American people. Public sentiment in this country is not peculiarly favorable to great corporations, or inimical to those who live by wages. The vast majority of the people live by wages, and upon any plain statement of wrong to railroad hands, or any other wage-workers, the pressure of public sympathy is with them. Railroad companies have no right to regard themselves as engaged in an exclusively private business. They are bound to act with regard to the probable effect of their action upon the public, from whom they have received franchises, and with whom they have made a contract. There is a similar obligation upon the employes of the road. Both company and employes have assumed duties to the public which they can not honorably disregard. This is a truth which was never so clearly perceived as now, and never more emphasized in the public mind than by the late Central strike.—Harper's Weekly.

Mr. Powderly, as representing the Knights of Labor, claims that the cause of the trouble between that organization and the New York Central railroad is the discharge of certain men for the sole reason that they belong to a labor organization. Mr. Webb, on behalf of the railroad company, denies the assertion absolutely. Mr. Powderly calls for arbitration in the matter, but it is difficult to see what ground there is for a settlement by that means.

A proposition to arbitrate, made by one party to a dispute, always has the appearance of a desire for simple justice; but it can only be fair when both parties to the dispute stand upon the same ground. This is not the case with regard to the Knights and the railroad company. Suppose that any one of the men who were dismissed by the company had taken it into his head to leave the service of the company, and suppose that his foreman should have denied his right to leave unless he could give a satisfactory reason for doing so, what would the man have said? He would have laughed in the foreman's face and reminded him that America is a free country. And suppose that fifty or sixty Knights had left the company without assigning any reason, and that Mr. Webb had asserted that it was the result of a secret desire on the part of the Knights to injure his company, and had demanded an arbitration, what would Mr. Powderly have said to him? What could he say? Simply that the men had left as individuals because they chose to leave, and there was nothing more to be said about the matter.

Seeing, then, that men cannot be compelled to remain, everybody who thinks at all must know that it is the interest of every employer to make as few changes as possible, and that he will always prefer to keep the men he has got unless he has some strong reason for preferring other men.—N. Y. Witness.

LITERATURE.

Scribner's Magazine for September contains the first of three articles on our new navy—the results of the voyage which R. F. Zogbaum, the artist and writer, recently made on the flagship of the "White Squadron." He gives a vivid picture of life on a modern warship under very new conditions, describing the voyage of the fleet from New York to Lisbon. Donald G. Mitchell's richly illustrated paper on "The Country House," is written in his most charming style, and is full of his love for rural life. He writes on the making of a home for the year 'round in the real country, far enough away from a city to be un-influenced by urban conditions. When Thomas Stevens, the bicycle traveler, was at Zanzibar, he met some of the most influential men engaged in African affairs, and acquired a knowledge of the industrial and commercial problems that are to be worked out in Africa. His article on "African River and Lake Systems" shows the relations which the waterways of the dark continent bear to its possible development. Other papers of interest are: a description of Heligoland (recently ceded by Great Britain to Germany), by one who has visited that picturesque island; one of several papers by Professor N. S. Shaler—describing the effects which physical conditions have had on the character of the populations of various States; another clear and valuable contribution, by an eminent Chicago lawyer, to the series on "The Rights of the Citizen." His views on the right to give away property during life deserve a wide reading.

The Polytechnic is the name of a new magazine to be published in Chicago, the initial number of which will be issued October 1. Like the London magazine of that name it will be the organ of a Polytechnic Institute, which in this case has been lately started in Chicago, and will be modeled after the famous London institute of similar name, an interesting account of which was given in the Century for June. The first number will be largely descriptive of the work of the Institute especially, its Trade Schools, a peculiar feature of which is that students may earn their expenses while in attendance, and can learn almost any trade. As this promises to solve the vexed apprenticeship question, all Master Associations are warm supporters of the movement. An article on the new evening medical college of Chicago is also included in this number. The ladies will be interested in the description of the cooking, millinery and dressmaking schools of the Chicago Polytechnic Institute. Published at the southeast corner Madison street and Fifth avenue, Chicago, Ill. Sample copy, 10 cents.

The September American Agriculturist gives us the sweet side of agricultural life from the water-melon patch and the sugar-cane plantation. The boys have also a recognition in the finely illustrated article on Shetland ponies and the pea-nut field. Practical farmers and their wives have something worth their notice on every page.

The Church Militant is a new paper of Brooklyn, N. Y., which prophesies of a coming cataclysm, for which it thinks we should be prepared. It believes that the righteous judgment of God is pronounced against the iniquities which abound, and that the measure of the infinite patience has at last been reached.

The illustrated article on Minneapolis promised by the New England Magazine makes its appearance in the September issue. Prof. W. W. Folwell of the University of Minnesota is the author, and among the illustrations are engravings of the notable buildings of the city.

Current Comment for Aug. 15, introduces its readers to Roger B. Taney, Chief Justice, by a portrait and sketch. Articles on a national bankrupt law, Inter-state commerce and original packages, and the labor laws of Europe will interest every class of readers.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—Bishop William Taylor of Africa, was at the Western National Holiness camp meeting at Decatur, Ill., last Wednesday, and spoke on sanctification. He also preached next day.

—The statistics of the Reformed Church in America are thus reported: Churches, 551; ministers, 560; received on confession, 5,277; on certificate, 2,798; dismissed, 2,403; suspended, 118; died, 1,522; total in communion on about April 1st, 1890, 90,878. The gain of the year was seven churches and 2,066 communicants, over all losses. The gain in membership should have been 4,032, according to the returns. Children on the rolls of the Sabbath-schools, 103,046. For denominational objects there was given during the year $280,661, and for congregational purposes, $1,003,815.

—According to the figures from the forthcoming Congregational Year-Book, there was a gain of 120 churches and 16,377 members during the year 1889. The net gain the previous year was 18,024. The whole number of churches is 4,689; of members 491,985. There were added in 49,859 members, of whom 29,286 were on confession of faith. The Sabbath schools have 596,204 members. The benevolent contributions were $2,398,037, an increase of $192,474; the amount for foreign missions was $357,929, for home expenses $6,046,962. The average of the 3,344 salaries reported was $1,047.

—The following Sunday-schools in Brooklyn have over 1,000 pupils: Greenwood Baptist, 1,060 pupils; Marcy Avenue Baptist, 1,715; Park Avenue branch of Tompkins Avenue Congregational, 1,371; Bethesda Mission Central Congregation, 1,259; Central Congregational School, 1,096; Bushwick Avenue Methodist Episcopal, 1,026; Hanson Place Methodist Episcopal, 1,504; Nostrand Avenue Methodist Episcopal, 1,182; Throop Avenue Presbyterian, 1,070; Throop Avenue Mission, 1,237; Brooklyn Tabernacle, 1,390; Twelfth Street Reformed, 1,299; Lafayette Avenue Presbyterian (three schools), 1,554; Plymouth (three schools), 2,303; total, 18,397.

—In connection with the Baptist Forward Movement, a new Deaconess' Home was recently dedicated in London. Ladies will be trained in nursing and other work among the poor in the more central district of the metropolis, and will be placed under the direction of such churches as may call for their aid.

—There are more than fifty Congregational churches in Southern California. Many of them have over one hundred members. The First Church in Los Angeles has a membership of 427, of which R. G. Hutchins, D. D., is pastor.

—There are in the city of Washington 194 churches. Of these 179 are Protestant and 15 are Roman Catholic. The Methodist Episcopal has 51; Methodist Episcopal South, 3; Methodist Protestant, 6—in all 60, of which 29 are colored. The Baptists have 11 white and 35 colored; Protestant Episcopal, 22 white and 3 colored; Presbyterians, 16 white and 1 colored; Roman Catholics, 14 white and 1 colored. The Lutherans have 11, and the rest are divided among nine different names.

—The religious statistics of Germany show 29,369,847 evangelicals, including members of the Lutheran, Reformed and United Churches; 16,785,734 Roman Catholics, 125,673 other Christians, including the Moravians, Baptists, Methodists and other independent churches; 563,172 Jews, and 11,278 "unclassified." Of the 125,673 independent Christians, 60,000 are Baptists, of whom 20,990 are members of the Baptist churches.

—The North London Presbytery has recently started open-air services in the public parks of London, on Sunday afternoons, for the purpose of reaching the masses. At one held in Regent's Park, Revs. Dr. Munro Gibson, John McNeill and other local ministers, gave addresses to a crowd of over two thousand people. Mr. McNeill had just closed a nine weeks' series of meetings in Exeter Hall, which had the same good object, and were eminently successful.

—About ten years ago, Miss Tucker, better known as A. L. O. E., a writer of popular religious books for young readers, went to India to obtain material for a book on life in that country. While there she became very much interested in the work of a number of English ladies who are trying to raise the Hindoo women from their degradation. Instead of returning to make up her book, Miss Tucker has remained up to the present time to work among the women of India.

—Three missionaries, members of a party of nine who left this country in May last to work in Africa, have died at Sierra Leone of African fever. Their names were Frank Gates, Warren J. Harris and Mrs. Kingman. Mr. Kingman has been reported as very sick with the fever also, but his recovery was looked for. Last week we noticed the death of three others of this devoted company at the hands of Arab Mohammedans in the interior. Thus one half the number who landed in Africa for the Soudan mission are already gone.

—Eight mission ships are now cruising in the North Sea, each a combination of church, chapel, temperance hall and dispensary.

—It is reported that the Baptists are gaining largely in Iowa at the present time. The additions to their churches this year numbered one thousand more than last year.

—The Enrollment Plan is a movement among the Episcopalians of this country to raise $1,000,000 for missions, domestic and foreign, from 200,000 contributors at $5 each.

Recent very trusty calculations of the population of the Chinese Empire by Russian authorities reckon it at 382,000,000, and the annual increase at 4,000,000. Not one in 10,000 ever heard of the religion of Jesus Christ.

—The American Board, at Boston, Mass., appeal to the Sabbath-schools and young people of the Congregational churches of the country for $5,000 with which to build another vessel for missionary use at the Micronesian Islands. It is to ply in the Ruk Archipelago and in the Mortlock group.

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from Aug. 25 to 30 inclusive:

B Rohrer, L E Reynolds, S Andrews, J L Buckwalter, Mrs J Cox, D Ault, D Lotzenhizer, H G Hanson, H Stahl, J Hart, J S Smith, R D Nichols, J Craig, E A Whiting, J Howe, H W Fowler, G Goodell, J Ball, D K Lawrence, E Brace, T. E. Patton, E H Gould, Rev M W Page.

DONATIONS.

Fund for current Expenses:

Rev. Wm. Hazenberg.....	$ 24.15
H. G. Hanson.....	3.50
Dudley Andrews.....	4.00
O. C. Blanchard.....	10.00
R. Gardner.....	1.00
Previously reported.....	344.82
	$387.47

Free Tract Fund:

D. Lotzenhizer.....	$ 1.00
N. C. A. Foreign Fund:
R. D. Nichols.....	$ 1.50

The month of August has been financially a reasonably prosperous month for the Association. I have secured by personal solicitation and correspondence $341.00, besides promises, indefinite as to amount, from several friends. In addition to the above some $58.00 has been received for the several uses of the National Christian Association. The income from book sales was $107.55, which is $33.98 more than for the same month last year. The income from Cynosure subscriptions was $174.80, which was $2.36 greater than for the same month last year. Money in this work is a necessity and a blessing, but it can not do the work; hence, while we are very thankful to God for the evident blessings financial and otherwise during the past month, we urge the friends to support the N. C. A. agents no less liberally during this month, that they be not crippled in their work. A Chicago banker, who knows far less about this reform than a reader of the Cynosure, said last week, I consider the work of the National Christian Association a very important work. I am very desirous to see the Association prosper. Its influence has been already great? Friends, will you make September an advance on August?

W. I. PHILLIPS, Treasurer.

Bald heads are too many when they may be covered with a luxuriant growth of hair by using the best of all restorers, Hall's Hair Renewer.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

The resolution offered by Mr. Plumb in the Senate instructing the committee on rules to issue such orders as will wholly prevent the sale of spirituous, vinous and malt liquors in the Senate wing of the Capitol, was killed last Wednesday by reference to the committee on rules.

CHICAGO.

Another big British syndicate, "The London Investment Company," has absorbed several more of Chicago's largest brewing companies, having an aggregate capacity of something like 275,000 barrels.

A portion of the south branch of Chicago river for a distance of four blocks from Laurel to Ullman street, raged for an hour Friday night with as hot a fire as ever Chicago firemen battled against. It was a conflagration of inflammable refuse from the packing houses. No damage resulted.

COUNTRY.

The Nebraska Prohibitionists Thursday nominated B. L. Paine, of Lincoln, for Governor, and George W. Woodbury, of Douglas county, a Negro, for Lieutenant Governor.

The New York State board of arbitration has ordered an investigation into the causes of the New York Central strike. The investigation will begin this week, but the strike is practically dead.

The New York State board of mediation and arbitration will meet in New York City next Tuesday morning to investigate the New York Central strike.

(Continued on 16th page.)

Be Sure

If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. A Boston lady, whose example is worthy imitation, tells her experience below: "In one store where I went to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla the clerk tried to induce me to buy their own instead of Hood's; he told me their's would last longer; that I might take it on ten days' trial; that if I did not like it I need not pay anything, etc. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I had taken Hood's Sarsaparilla, knew what it was, was satisfied with it, and did not want any other. When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was feeling real miserable with dyspepsia, and so weak that at times I could hardly stand. I looked like a person in consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me so much good that I wonder at myself sometimes, and my friends frequently speak of it." Mrs. ELLA A. GOFF, 61 Terrace Street, Boston.

To Get

Hood's

Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

The Crandall Type-writer

(New Model.)

Perfect and permanent alignment. Interchangeable type.

Writing in plain sight of the operator.

We sell direct to users only.

No agents. No discounts.

No commissions.

The most rapid and perfect Type-writer made.

PRICE $50.00

THE CRANDALL MACHINE CO.,

237 LaSalle St., Chicago.

FOR MINISTERS

THE

"STORIES OF THE GODS"

is especially adapted. They will at once derstand the references to the idolatrous systems of the nations. And the idolatrous worship of the Masonic lodge is thus more clearly seen and easily understood. Will you furnish each pastor in your place with one of these pamphlets?

PRICE, ONLY 10 CENTS.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
321 W. Madison St., Chicago.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—No. 2.....
No. 3.....		1 01½
Winter No. 2.....	1 00	@	1 02½
Corn—No. 2.....	46	@	48½
Oats—No. 2.....	35	@	37
Rye—No. 2.....			65
Bran per ton.....			13 50
Hay—Timothy.....	6 50	@	9 50
Butter, medium to best....	10	@	22
Cheese.....	06	@	10½
Beans.....	75	@	1 70
Eggs.....		@	16½
Seeds—Timothy.....	1 31	@	1 41
Flax.....	1 36	@	1 41
Broom corn.....	02½	@	06½
Potatoes, new, per bu.....	1 10	@	1 25
Hides—Green to dry flint....	03	@	07
Lumber—Common.....	10 00	@	13 00
Wool.....	15	@	34
Cattle—Choice to extra.....	4 30	@	5 20
Common to good.....	1 60	@	4 20
Hogs.....	3 75	@	4 50
Sheep.....	3 50	@	5 10

NEW YORK.

Wheat.....	1 04½	@	1 22½
Corn.....	54	@	55
Oats.....	38	@	50
Eggs.....		@	20
Butter.....	11	@	24
Wool.....	14	@	39

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle.....	3 15	@	4 90
Hogs.....	3 30	@	3 80
Sheep.....	3 00	@	4 25

WILL SELL FOR

Regular Price.

FIVE CENTS.

Selling Price.

$.10	"REPORT OF THE TRIAL of Rev. J. T. Michael," an Elder in the M. E. Church, for arraigning the Bishops, Elders and Preachers in charge for being Freemasons contrary to the Discipline of the M. E. Church. Paper, 28 pages.	$.05
$.25	"MASONIC DEGREES ILLUSTRATED." Containing all the pass and real words, all the pass and real grips and signs of the first three degrees of Freemasonry, from the time of King Solomon, King Hiram of Tyre, and Hiram Abiff, the Widow's Son, to the present time. Compiled by E. M. Trowbridge. Paper, 89 pages. With certificate and demit showing that the author was a Freemason.	$.05
$.15	"A WOMAN'S VICTORY, or the Query of the Lodgeville Church." By Jennie L. Hardie. Paper, 21 pp.	$.05
$.10	"WASHINGTON SOUVENIR." Portraits of Geo. Washington and his Co-patriots, with their testimony on Freemasonry. Size 18x24 inches. Framed it is an ornament to any home.	$.05

SIX CENTS.

$.10	"SECRET SOCIETIES." A Lecture delivered at Oberlin College, Jan. 9, 1890. By Prof. Henry C. King. Paper, 36 pp.	$.06
$.20	"REASONS WHY Secret Societies cannot be Fellow-shipped by the United Presbyterian Church." By Rev. J. W. Bain. Pages 149.	$.06

TEN CENTS.

$.15	"MY EXPERIENCE WITH SECRET SOCIETIES." By a Traveler. Paper, 51 pp.	$.10
$.20	"THE INTERIOR OF SIERRA LEONE, West Africa." A lecture delivered at the Government Practicing School-Room, Freetown, Sierra Leone, together with remarks and addresses of gentlemen present, and the lecturer's replies. By J. Augustus Cole, of Shaingay, W. Africa. Paper, 54 pages.	$.10
$.25	"SKETCH OF THE LIFE OF JAMES G. BIRNEY." His relation to the Anti-slavery movement and place in history. By General William Birney. Paper, 33 pages.	$.10

FIFTEEN CENTS.

$.25	"RELIGIOUS PERSECUTION." An examination of Cardinal Manning's letter in the New York Tribune, on Irish affairs and bearing on Home Rule. By Rev. John Lee. Paper, 83 pages.	$.15
$.25	"THE PURITY CRUSADE." With portraits of some of its leaders. Paper, 114 pp.	$.15

TWENTY CENTS.

$.30	"SONGS FOR THE TIMES," by Geo. W. Clark. Words and Music. Intended for Prohibition and W. C. T. U. meetings. Boards, 152 pages.	$.20
--------	---	--------

TWENTY-FIVE CENTS.

$.75	"BEREA COLLEGE," Kentucky. An interesting history of the founding of that College for white and black in a slave State. Cloth, 87 pages.	$.25
--------	--	--------

THIRTY-FIVE CENTS.

$.75	"LUCILE VERNON, or the Church at Lansington. The experience of a young pastor. A novel. By Rev. W. T. Meloy, D. D. Cloth, 308 pages.	$.35
--------	--	--------

FIFTY CENTS.

$1.00	"NATIONAL SUICIDE AND ITS PREVENTION." The following will show the drift of the book: Measure of Standard of Value; What is Honest Money; Our National Banks; Paper Money; Land Tenure, etc. By O. F. Lumry. Cloth, 224 pp.	$.50
$1.50	"HISTORY OF SECRET SOCIETIES IN FRANCE," or "THE CRADLE OF REBELLIONS." By Lucien De La Hode. Translated from the French by Gen'l. J. W. Phelps. Cloth, 479 pp.	$.50

Sent postpaid to any address on receipt of the selling price.

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
Wm. I. Phillips, Treasurer,
231 W. Madison St., Chicago.

LODGE NOTES.

At the late meeting of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts a delegation of Masons from Fredricksburg, Va., presented an appeal for aid in erecting a Masonic temple in that city to the memory of George Washington. This was referred to a special committee to report at the next quarterly meeting.

The head of that hydra of the lower Mississippi, the Louisiana Lottery, has received another vigorous blow from the Farmers' Alliance of that State, recently in convention at Baton Rouge. The convention characterizes the villainy in strong and proper terms, and calls upon the local Alliances to expel any members with which they may happen to be disgraced who, in the late Legislature, voted for the Lottery Scheme.

The Grand Master of the Freemasons of the State of New York lately reported that 703 "ministers of the Gospel" were members of the lodges in his State, viz., 288 Methodists, 149 Episcopalians, 112 Baptists, 59 Presbyterians, 11 Lutherans (?), and 8 Hebrews. The Grand Master added to the remark, that this large number of Masonic preachers or preaching Freemasons was the best proof for the fact that Freemasonry is not antagonistic to religion. It is rather a strong evidence of that fact.

The Cincinnati Enquirer speaks of an occurrence at South Bend, Ind., April 10th, as follows: "The wife of C. G. Folsom, a well-known citizen, died last night of heart trouble while on her way to a Masonic meeting. By a strange coincidence her mother suddenly died a number of years ago while on her way to a Masonic meeting." Freemasonry is getting too exciting for either men or women. It is too rough for women, and too hazardous for men. It had better be abolished by law, for it is condemned by the Gospel.—Conservator.

At the special meeting of the Head Camp of Modern Woodmen called at Des Moines, Iowa, lately, it was decided not to call the camp to order, as the action would be illegal. Some feeling was engendered among the members, and a reorganization of the order is said to be probable. The session was called to consider certain differences arising between the officers of the camp and the insurance department of Illinois, with the probable result of removing the head of the order from that to some other State. An injunction was procured to prevent this, which scared the followers of the Freemason Root and scattered them.

The Farmers' Alliance enthusiasts claim that they will hold the balance of power in the next Congress. If they elect fifty or sixty members in the South and West their boast may be realized. So far, however, their claims of strength have proved to be exaggerated except in Alabama, Georgia, the Carolinas and Kansas. The cloud which appeared no bigger than a man's hand a few months ago now obscures the entire political horizon in those States and threatens a tornado by November. In the South it is the Democrats who are alarmed, and so many Southern members have hurried away from Washington to look after their fences at home that the Democratic side of the House looks almost deserted.—Inter Ocean.

A convention of the Grand Lodge of the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks, in New York, adopted provisions to the constitution which will exclude a number of lodges formed of members whose professions are different from those contemplated by the order. It was decided that only those belonging to the "amusement professions" should be members and the term should embrace members of the theatrical, minstrel, musical, variety, circus, acrobatic, literary, and gymnastic professions and all others whose means of livelihood is in some manner dependent on the presentation of amusements to the public. It was decided that all members of lodges who did not participate in the clandestine meeting at Cleveland can become members of the loyal lodges if they apply before December 31.

STANDARD WORKS

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES.

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Association,

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. A liberal discount to dealers.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 75 cents. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive. Vol. II. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprised the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished. 25 cents each.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe. 20 cents each.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. In cloth, $1.50 each. Paper, 75 cents each.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pages, 75 cents.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance. Bound in one volume. In cloth, 589 pages, $1.00.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. 25 cents each.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper, 35 cents.

Hon. Thurlow Weed on the Morgan Abduction. This is the legally attested statement of this eminent Christian journalist and statesman concerning the unlawful seizure and confinement of Capt. Morgan in Canandaigua jail, his removal to Fort Niagara and subsequent drowning in Lake Ontario. 5 cents each.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a League with the Devil. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason. 15 cents each.

Freemasonry Self-Condemed. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshipped by the Christian Church. Paper covers, price, 20 cents each.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each.

Anti-masonic Sermons and Addresses. Composed of "Masonry a Work of Darkness;" the Sermons of Messrs. Cross, William McNary, Dow and Sarver, the two addresses of President Blanchard, and the addresses of President H. H. George, Prof. J. G. Carson and Rev. M. S. Drury; "Thirteen Reasons Why a Christian cannot be a Freemason," "Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion," and "Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate?" 287 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate. By Rev. L. A. Post. 5 cents each.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper cover, 35 cents.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin trials. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1891, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each.

Stearns's Inquiry into the Nature and Tendency of Freemasonry. 338 pages. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor United Presbyterian church. 5 cents each.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. 10 cents each.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void: or Freemasonry Self-Convicted. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. 207 pages. Postpaid, 40 cents each.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian), seceding Mason of 21 degrees. 15 cents each.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. H. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each.

Masonic Salvation, as taught by its standard authors. This pamphlet is a compilation from standard Masonic works, in proof of the following proposition: Freemasonry claims to be a religion that saves men from all sin, and purifies them for heaven. 111 pages, price, postpaid, 20 cents.

Freemasonry at a Glance illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the first three degrees. Paper cover, 32 pages. Single copy, six cents.

Masonic Outrages. Compiled by Rev. H. H. Hinman. Showing Masonic assault on lives of seceders, on reputation, and on free speech; its interference with justice in courts, etc. Postpaid, 20 cents.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret Societies. A most convincing argument against fellowshipping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10cts each.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims by Rev. David McDill, Pres. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. In cloth, 35cts each; paper covers, 15cts each.

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of his sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5cts each.

Sermon on Secretism. By Rev. R. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational church, Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear array of the objections to all secret societies, and to Masonry especially, that are apparent to all. 5cts each.

Pres. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to dis-fellowship secret societies. 10cts each.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and Church. By Rev. M. S. Drury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church, is clearly shown. 10cts each.

Holden with Cords. Or the Power of the Secret Empire. By E. E. Flagg, author of "A Sunny Life," etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story, accurately true to life because mainly a narration of historical facts. In cloth, $1.00; in paper, 50 cents.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and law of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved. 15cts each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. J. Day, Brownlee. In reply to a Masonic Oration by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio. 5 cents each.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on Masonry. Paper covers, 25 cents each.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion. 5 cents each.

ON ODD-FELLOWSHIP.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by ex-President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; paper cover, 50cts.

Patriarchs Militant Illustrated. The complete ritual of the Patriarchs Militant degree. This is an accurate copy of the Charge Book furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge of the Independent Order of Odd-fellows, with the eighteen military diagrams and the unwritten (secret) work added. Paper cover, 25cts each.

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own utterances; its doctrine and practice examined in the light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth 50cts; paper covers, 25cts.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and other secret societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms, and the duty to dis-fellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers, is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10cts each.

Odd-fellowship: Its History and its Work. By President J. Blanchard. A neat pamphlet with cover. Postpaid, 5 cts.

MISCELLANEOUS.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinions of many prominent college presidents and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25cts each.

The Anti-mason's Scrap-Book, consisting of 53 "Cynosure" tracts. In this book are the views of more than a score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of secret societies. Postpaid, 25 cts.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret tradesunion of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords, etc. 15cts each.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc., and the ritual of the Machinists' and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each.

FARM NOTES.

FEEDING FARM HORSES.

This is a matter that merits far more attention than it receives. An English veterinary surgeon very pertinently says that those having charge of horses, especially farm horses, should be taught that the stomach of a horse is not like the rumen of a cow, a mere receptacle for food, but an essential organ of digestion of limited capacity, which does not need to be crammed in order to perform its proper functions, and that it cannot be so treated without danger to the animal; that the teeth of the horse are provided for the purpose of masticating the food, and that the food which does not require mastication should be sparingly, if ever, used. He further recommends that no horse be put to work immediately after a full meal, and where a horse has done a heavy day's work it should be allowed to stand in the stable until it is cool and comfortable before being fed. A little water may be given, and if a little good hay be put into the rack it will occupy his attention, and besides requiring proper mastication will further have the effect to slightly stimulate the stomach to secretion and prepare it for the reception of the food which is to follow. Should a horse require more food than usual to supply the extra waste of tissues caused by hard work, give it by all means, but let it be in excess in its albuminoids, and let the horse be fed oftener and not in increased quantities at a time. —N. Y. Witness.

PURE FOOD FOR DAIRY CATTLE.

This is a matter which merits more attention than it usually receives; and here is an example from a Western town that is worthy of imitation in a good many Eastern localities. The Board of Health of Indianapolis, Ind., has been making an examination of creamery and dairy milk sold in that city, with a view of bringing some persons, who were reported as violators of the law, to justice. The city ordinance imposes a fine of $50 to $500 upon the conviction of any one feeding his stock the refuse of breweries or distilleries, or any refuse product that may be deleterious to milk, and it is believed that the use of what is commonly known as starch feed may come under the meaning of the law. Many farmers in the city's suburbs are using the starch, which is shipped to them by the carload, and the Board of Health will file complaints against them. It is said that the success of the case will depend upon expert testimony as to whether or not milk from starch-fed cows is adulterated.

THE HORSES WE WANT.

Our ideal of a model farm-horse is the general-purpose horse, not a light-harness horse. We want an animal sixteen hands high, that will weigh twelve or thirteen hundred pounds, with all the nerve, style, and pedigree we can possibly get. The weight above 1,300 pounds—or I might say 1,200—is only an incumbrance to the animal, and makes him less active and enduring. Such an animal will draw our plows and farm machinery at least a third faster than heavy draft-stock, and will show no more signs of fatigue or exhaustion at the close of the day. Out upon the road they will cover twice the number of miles per day, and then there is some satisfaction in occupying a seat behind them. It marketing a surplus from the farm (and every farm should have a few horses to sell every year), the stylish driver or coacher always commands at least fifty dollars more than the heavy draft; and when properly mated, they will often bring twice as much as you can get for a draft-team. —National Stockman.

LOVE YOUR ANIMALS.

If it referred to the equine race we should say there was a good deal of "horse sense" in the following remarks by a Western writer; but it is good advice, anyway, for the man who has no liking for domestic animals will very rarely prove successful as a breeder or stock farmer: If you do not love a little, fat, saucy Poland China, Berkshire or Red pig, you may as well quit attempting to raise hogs, but concentrate your

The Liver

When out of order, involves every organ of the body. Remedies for some other derangement are frequently taken without the least effect, because it is the liver which is the real source of the trouble, and until that is set right there can be no health, strength, or comfort in any part of the system. Mercury, in some form, is a common specific for a sluggish liver; but a far safer and more effective medicine is

Ayer's Pills.

For loss of appetite, bilious troubles, constipation, indigestion, and sick headache, these Pills are unsurpassed.

"For a long time I was a sufferer from stomach, liver, and kidney troubles, experiencing much difficulty in digestion, with severe pains in the lumbar region and other parts of the body. Having tried a variety of remedies, including warm baths, with only temporary relief, about three months ago I began the use of Ayer's Pills, and my health is so much improved that I gladly testify to the superior merits of this medicine." —Manoel Jorge Pereira, Porto, Portugal.

"For the cure of headache, Ayer's Cathartic Pills are the most effective medicine I ever used." —R. K. James, Dorchester, Mass.

"When I feel the need of a cathartic, I take Ayer's Pills, and find them to be more effective than any other pill I ever took." —Mrs. B. C. Grubb, Burwellville, Va.

"I have found in Ayer's Pills, an invaluable remedy for constipation, biliousness, and kindred disorders, peculiar to miasmatic localities. Taken in small and frequent doses, these Pills on the liver, restoring its natural powers, and aiding it in throwing off malarial poisons." —C. F. Alston, Quitman, Texas.

Act Well

"Whenever I am troubled with constipation, or suffer from loss of appetite, Ayer's Pills set me right again." —A. J. Kiser, Jr., Rock House, Va.

"In 1858, by the advice of a friend, I began the use of Ayer's Pills as a remedy for biliousness, constipation, high fevers, and colds. They served me better than anything I had previously tried, and I have used them in attacks of that sort ever since." —H. W. Hersh, Judsonia, Ark.

Ayer's Pills,

PREPARED BY

DR. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass.

Sold by all Druggists and Dealers in Medicine.

To cure Biliousness, Sick Headache, Constipation, Malaria, Liver Complaints, take the safe and certain remedy, SMITH'S

BILE BEANS

Use the SMALL SIZE (40 little beans to the bottle). They are the most convenient: suit all ages. Price of either size, 25 cents per bottle.

KISSING at 7, 17, 70; Photo-gravure, panel size of this picture for 4 cents (coppers or stamps).

J. F. SMITH & CO., Makers of "Bile Beans," St. Louis, Mo.

To clean tombstones. To renew oil-cloth. To renovate paint. To brighten metals. To polish knives. To scrub floors. To wash out sinks. To scour bath-tubs. To clean dishes. To whiten marble. To remove rust. To scour kettles.

EVERYBODY USES IT.

Dentists to clean false teeth. Surgeons to polish their instruments. Confectioners to scour their pans. Mechanics to brighten their tools. Cooks to clean the kitchen sink. Painters to clean off surfaces. Engineers to clean parts of machines. Ministers to renovate old chapels. Sextons to clean the tombstones. Hostlers on brasses and white horses. Artists to clean their palates. Wheelmen to clean bicycles. Housemaids to scrub marble floors. Chemists to remove some stains. Carvers to sharpen their knives. Shroed ones to scour old straw hats. Soldiers to brighten their arms. Renovators to clean carpets.

EVERY ONE FINDS A NEW USE.

energy and devotion on some animal you can love. And if you cannot love any domestic animal, you may as well quit farming and go to some place where they have nothing but a climate, and one not bothered with domestic animals.

THE MERRITT
$15
TYPEWRITER
USES METAL TYPE
Caps & Small Letters
NO $100 MACHINE CAN DO BETTER WORK
AGENTS WANTED
CIRCULAR
HAS. F. STOKES MFG. CO.
293 & 295
WABASH AVE. CHICAGO

We have special Machines with large, plain type, designed for the use of Ministers and Lecturers.

If interested in BICYCLES, send for Catalogue. We have the largest assortment in America.

Disloyal SECRET OATHS.

ADDRESS OF

JOSEPH COOK,

OF BOSTON,

AT THE

Conference of Christians, CHICAGO, 1890.

No better document of its size for general distribution has been printed. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Single Copies 5 cents, or 12 copies for 50 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

PATENTS

Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees.

Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington.

Send model, drawing or photo., with description. We advise, if patentable or not, free of charge. Our fee not due till patent is secured.

A Pamphlet, "How to Obtain Patents," with names of actual clients in your State, county, or town, sent free. Address,

C. A. SNOW & CO.
Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

REMARKABLE OFFER!

Nearly everyone is familiar with the name, but it has been estimated that only one in every two hundred and eighty persons in the United States is fortunate enough to have access to the valuable information contained within the covers of the grandest work ever written by mortal man.

Webster's

UNABRIDGED DICTIONARY.

That this is an unfortunate state of affairs will be admitted by all, and it is due to the fact that no one save the rich could afford them.

The Dictionary is a necessity in every home, school and business house. It fills a vacancy and furnishes knowledge which no one hundred volumes of the choicest books could supply, and all young or old, educated or ignorant, rich or poor should have it within reach and refer to its contents every day in the year.

The Loomis reprint contains all the matter as compiled and arranged by our esteemed and honored author and statesman

NOAH WEBSTER.

About forty years of his life was devoted to this great work, and when we consider the fact that this book contains about 100,000 words, we will appreciate that these years must have been well spent.

Some idea of the magnitude of this book may be gained from the fact that it contains over 440 cubic inches of paper and has about 300,000 square inches of printed surface.

In addition to the 100,000 words it contains a portrait of the author, together with his biography and a valuable table of 12,000 synonymous words.

By special arrangement with the publishers, we are permitted to furnish this valuable volume: 1st. To any subscriber to our paper; 2nd. To any renewal subscription; and 3rd. To any person who has paid a full year's subscription within the past six months, on receipt of $1.50 for the paper one year, and two dollars and seventy-five cents to cover express charges, packing, etc., of the Dictionary.

Address

CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill

The Washington Souvenir,

Size 18x24 inches, and containing the portraits of

Washington and his Com-Patriots,

WITH THEIR TESTIMONY ON

FREEMASONRY.

It contains the portraits of Washington. John Adams, 2nd President of the United States.

James Madison, 4th President of the United States.

Joseph Ritner, Governor of Pennsylvania.

Richard Rush, Secretary of State and of the Treasury.

Alexander Hamilton, the friend of Washington.

Samuel Adams, the Father of the Revolution.

John Hancock, President of the Continental Congress.

Samuel Dexter, Secretary of War and of the Treasury.

William Wirt, Attorney-General.

John Marshall, Chief Justice of U. S. Supreme Court.

John Quincy Adams, 6th President of the United States.

Benjamin Rush, the Father of Temperance Reform in America.

Lebbeus Armstrong, Founder of the first Temperance Society.

Framed, it is an ornament to please the eye, and a testimony to gladden the heart. Sent safely packed in a mailing tube, post-paid, for ten cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,

221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

"THE WHOLE IS BETTER THAN A PART," AND YOU HAVE IT HERE IN A "NUT-SHELL."

SECRET SOCIETIES ILLUSTRATED.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc. of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite). Adoptive Masonry. Revised Odd-fellowship. Good Templarism. The Temple of Honor. The United Sons of Industry. Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 24 cuts 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen. For sale by the National Christian Association, at Headquarters for Anti-Secrecy Literature, 221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

BUSINESS.

FORTY-THREE DEGREES —of the— SECRETS OF FREEMASONRY.

That the National Christian Association can furnish these so-called secrets many of the Masonic fraternity know, and avail themselves of the fact. But the public generally are ignorant of their ability to get forty-three of the secret degrees of Freemasonry from this Association, for the small sum of $2.25!

A young man came to the office for an expose, who had lately joined and learned of the place to get the secret work from which to "post up" from a brother lodgeman. He intimated that he had been sold, that had he known of these exposes he never would have allowed his name and money to have gone into the lodge. The suggestions that I have to make are that you send ten cents to this office for catalogues of these books, and see that one is placed in the hand of every young man in your vicinity. Ought it not to be done? It is much easier and safer for a young man to keep out than to get out.

Four boys, the oldest not twelve, put anti-secrecy tracts into nearly every home in five villages near their homes.

Mrs. L. C. Andrews has been supplying several neighborhoods, and others have labored in the tract work during the past few weeks, "To give light to them that sit in darkness."

Shall we not have a large increase in the list of N. C. A. local agents for the present campaign?

NEWS OF THE WEEK (Continued from 13th page).

It may not be generally known that the board in an investigation has the same powers and authority as a court of record. From a reliable source it is learned that Roger A. Pryor of New York city will act as counsel for the knights in the prosecution of the investigation, he having volunteered his services to the general executive board without cost.

An orchard of 400 young trees near Martinsville, Ind., has been destroyed by grasshoppers that have stripped the trees of leaves and bark.

Housekeepers, hotel landlords, the keepers of boarding-houses, at Baltimore, are feeling the effects of the strike of the switchmen in Chicago. The price of Chicago dressed beef has advanced 50 cents to $1 per hundred.

The United States is now connected with Canada by a 7,000-foot tunnel under the St. Clair river, between Port Huron and Sarnia. The opening was made last week.

Near Findlay, Ohio, George Struble was killed Thursday by an explosion of nitro-glycerine cans supposed to be empty. The explosion was caused by a jolt of his wagon and was heard seven miles.

The constitutional convention in Mississippi is endeavoring to frame a clause which shall exclude the blacks from voting. One member has moved the following as part of the bill of rights: "This State shall ever remain a member of the American Union, and the people thereof are a part of the American Nation, and all attempts to dissolve the said Union shall be resisted with the whole power of the State."

The Oklahoma Legislature organized Friday morning by a combination of the Democrats and alliance members. The Hon. George W. Goldenshire, an alliance member from Payne county, was chosen President of the Council.

A great prairie fire has been raging south of Dickinson, N. D., and it is estimated that hundreds of thousands of acres have been burned over.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—U. S. Government Report, Aug. 17, 1889.

Five dealers in "original packages" at Washington, Pa., were sentenced to pay a fine of $500 each and serve from two to five months in the workhouse.

The employes of the Wheeling (W. Va.) Electric Street railway are on strike and no cars are moving. One thousand miners at Scotdale, Pa., struck Saturday against unorganized labor.

STRIKES.

There is a serious war in progress between the employes in the brick yards of New York and the companies which they are serving. The companies have combined and the employes have united and each are bitterly opposed to the other and intend to fight it out. The result is that work on the buildings now in process of erection must soon be abandoned for want of bricks. It is estimated that if this strike continues a few days longer over 100,000 workmen will be thrown out of employment.

Three or four strikes among switchmen in Chicago stopped the stockyards business for several days and blocked the Alton and Lake Shore roads. The cause of each was so trivial that the masters of the secret unions denounced them and broke them up.

Special constables were enrolled to guard the city of Australia, Melbourne, last Friday in view of threatened riots. The city is without gas and the suburbs are dimly lighted. The mail service continues. The shipping companies are employing non-union men. The wharf men at New Zealand ports have struck. A conference between the ship-owners, mine-owners, and employes generally is projected, with the object of discussing the future relations between employers and employes.

The Seaman's Union at Melbourne, called out the crew of the Union Steamship Company, whose vessels ply between Sydney and New Zealand. The gas stokers struck on the ground that the gas company employ non-union men.

In consequence of the strike of the gas stokers the supply of gas is failing, and the streets of Melbourne are in partial darkness. Numerous assaults have been made on non-union men. At New Castle the strikers became very disorderly, and it was feared that a serious riot would ensue. The arrival of a battery of artillery, however, had the effect of quieting the turbulent element, and the town is now reported to be comparatively quiet. The New Zealand railways have been compelled to curtail the service owing to a lack of fuel.

FOREIGN.

A terrific storm flooded the rivers and canals of St. Petersburg and vicinity on the 28th ult. There was two feet of water in the lower streets of the city. Guns were fired at the fortress to warn the inhabitants of danger.

The distress among thousands of the starving people of Tokio and other large cities is being ameliorated to a great extent by the foreigners as well as by the Japanese noblemen. One nobleman is feeding 1,000 people a day out of his own funds. The price of rice is higher than ever before, both in Japan and Corea, and this is probably only the forecast of the suffering to follow. The outlook for the growing crop of rice is not good, owing to heavy and continued rains.

It is reported that the Minister of War is enrolling tribes in the Caucasus and other departments to form an Asiatic army which shall be able to operate independently of the European army in the event of war with Asiatic countries, the European troops to be removed from Asiatic Russia to Western Russia.

From Guatemala it is reported that of the eight prisoners captured at Femposque five were shot as prisoners of war, and of the 112 captured at Yupe July 21, fifteen were shot at Jutiapa Aug. 6. This is said to be no more than the Salvadorians did, as it is understood that all Guatemalan soldiers captured by them have been shot.

The Armenians continue to be subjected to terrible atrocities in Asia Minor. Bands of Kurds make raids nightly on the Armenian frontier villages and set fire to the crops. Influential Armenians are arrested nearly every day.

A fire broke out Monday last at Tokay, the entrepot for the noted Tokay wine, and all efforts to extinguish the flames were fruitless. When finally the fire burned itself out, the whole town, with the exception of thirteen houses, had been destroyed. One thousand families were made homeless. Five persons were killed. All the public buildings were destroyed. Several hundred head of cattle perished in the flames. Kaba, Hatzfeld, Saro, and other villages near Temesvar were also in flames. Ten persons have perished at Kaba and three at Saro.

The Mombasa and Nyanza Railway was inaugurated Tuesday in the presence of the British and other foreign consuls, Admiral Eremantle, of the British navy and a large number of other Europeans.

The New Free Press of Vienna says that Emperor William of Germany and the Czar had a disagreement while they were at Narva, in consequence of which the German emperor shortened his visit and hastily quitted Peterhof a day earlier than he had expected to do.

M. de Giers, the Russian minister of foreign affairs, is said to be completely satisfied with the result of the recent interview between the Czar and Emperor William. The meeting, he said, constituted a fresh and solemn affirmation of the good relations existing between Russia and Germany and would certainly contribute powerfully toward the maintenance of the peace of Europe.

The British government has sent a committee through the northwest of Ireland to see what assistance will be necessary in the event of a famine arising from the failure of the potato crop.

A correspondent at Igdır says it is reported there that the Turkish governors in Armenia have been ordered to arrest any Armenians caught conversing on the streets as conspirators and to send them to Constantinople. In the event of resistance the governors are instructed to shoot the offenders.

Six more villages in southern Hungary have been burned. This fearful destruction by fires is due to the dryness of the buildings caused by a long season of torrid weather. Twelve persons lost their lives during the burning of Mezoe Kerestzes recently.

Dealers who claim that their preparations are "as good as Hood's Sarsaparilla," by so doing admit that Hood's is the standard and possesses peculiar merit which they try in vain to reach.

20% U. S. Title a sure 20 per cent profit. Invest your small savings in TACOMA $100 LOTS $5 CASH $5 MONTHLY. Tacoma Investment Co., (capital $100,000) Tacoma, Wash.

For a Disordered Liver
Try BEECHAM'S PILLS.
25cts. a Box.
OF ALL DRUGGISTS.

Its superior excellence proven in millions of homes for more than a quarter of a century. It is used by the United States Government. Endorsed by the heads of the Great Universities as the Strongest, Purest and most Healthful. Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder does not contain Ammonia, Lime, or Alum. Sold only in Cans. PRICE BAKING POWDER CO. NEW YORK. CHICAGO. ST. LOUIS.

*Our High Grade List and Bargain Book sent to any address on receipt of a 2-c stamp.

LORD & THOMAS,
NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING
45 RANDOLPH STREET,
CHICAGO.

AROUND THE WORLD.
"Ex-Mayor Daniel F. Beatty, of Beatty's Celebrated Organs and Pianos, has returned home from a tour around the world."—News.

BEATTY'S ORGANS,
Only $35; Pianos $130.

Warranted ten (10) years. Write for Catalogue, Address DANIEL F. BEATTY, Washington, New Jersey.

THE ELKHART CARRIAGE & HARNESS MFG. CO.

For 16 Years have sold our carriages at wholesale prices, saving them the dealers profit. Ship anywhere for examination before buying. Pay freight on goods if not satisfactory. Warranted for 2 years. 64 page Catalogue Free. Address W. B. PRATT, Sec'y., Elkhart, Ind.

WHEATON COLLEGE,

WHEATON, ILL.

FALL TERM BEGINS TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 16TH.

A College for Men and Women.

For Catalogue address with stamp.

C. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

HARTSVILLE COLLEGE,

HARTSVILLE, INDIANA.

E. G. PAINE, A. M., PRESIDENT.

Classical, Scientific and Normal courses. Preparatory school, Art, Music and Business departments. Actively Christian and reformatory influences. No saloons. Romantic and healthful region. Living as cheap as it can be made anywhere.

A NATURAL REMEDY FOR
Epileptic Fits, Falling Sickness, Hysterics, St. Vitus Dance, Nervousness, Hypochondria, Melancholia, Inebriety, Sleeplessness, Dizziness, Brain and Spinal Weakness.

This medicine has direct action upon the nerve centers, allaying all irritabilities and increasing the flow and power of nerve fluid. It is perfectly harmless and leaves no unpleasant effects.

Our Pamphlet for sufferers of nervous diseases will be sent free to any address, and poor patients can also obtain this medicine free of charge from us.

This remedy has been prepared by the Reverend Pastor Koenig, of Fort Wayne, Ind., for the past ten years, and is now prepared under his direction by the

KOENIG MEDICINE CO.,
50 West Madison, cor. Clinton St., CHICAGO, ILL.
SOLD BY DRUGGISTS.
Price $1 per Bottle. 6 Bottles for $5.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XXII., No. 52.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 11, 1890.

WHOLE No. 1,063.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.

Address all letters for publication to EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, CHICAGO. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Send all business letters relating to the paper to THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE. Make all drafts and money orders payable to the Treasurer, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address on Cynosure list always give the former address.

(Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill., as Second Class Matter.)

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:	REFORM NEWS:
Notes and Comments.... 1	On Iowa Camp Grounds. 4
Relation of Mission Boards to Fundamental Reforms..... 8	CORRESPONDENCE:
Is Waldenstrom a Heretic?..... 8	From the Nebraska Battle-field: Views Afoot in Kentucky; The Body of Moses; The German Methodist Ministers: Pith and Point..... 5,6
The Indianapolis Missionary Conference..... 8	Secret Societies Condemned..... 7
Personal Notes..... 9	THE N. C. A..... 7
CONTRIBUTIONS:	AGENTS AND LECTURERS..... 7
How can we know Secret Societies?..... 1	The Financial Situation... 1
How they write Masonic History..... 2	Lectures..... 9
The Idolatry of Iniquity. 2	THE HOME..... 10
SELECTED:	TEMPERANCE..... 11
Dry Rot of the Lodge.... 3	BIBLE LESSON..... 12
The Church Humiliated. 3	LITERATURE..... 12
The United Presbyterian Law..... 3	RELIGIOUS NEWS..... 12
A Knight of Labor Boomerang..... 4	IN BRIEF..... 13
NEW ENGLAND LETTER..... 4	NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 13
WASHINGTON LETTER..... 9	HOME AND HEALTH..... 14
OBITUARY..... 7	FARM NOTES..... 15
	BUSINESS..... 16
	MARKETS..... 13

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION.

It is a great pleasure to say to our friends that the plan on which we are beginning the new year is developing satisfactorily. Our Mr. Phillips has now received subscriptions amounting to five hundred and forty-three dollars, of which sum one hundred and ninety-eight dollars is already paid. This result has been attained chiefly in the month of August, which is, as all know, one of the worst months in the year for carrying forward such an enterprise.

It will greatly facilitate our labors and increase their efficiency if our true and valued friends all over the country who intend to aid in our great work will indicate that purpose speedily. A postal card addressed to W. I. Phillips, Treas., etc., 221 West Madison St., Chicago, Ill., saying: "Dear Brother, Providence permitting, I will send you ——— dollars for the work of the National Christian Association about ———," will be sufficient to encourage others and save much personal solicitation of funds.

We have all been greatly encouraged by our very successful and influential conference of last April. The two thousand copies of the minutes of that meeting are sold, and the fifteen thousand copies of Joseph Cook's address, revised by himself, are having a wide circulation. We desire to hold other conferences and to put such literature into the hands of many ten thousands of our fellow citizens.

It is needless to say how secret societies, all based on human selfishness, and most of them promising salvation without faith in our Lord Jesus Christ, are multiplying. Some of them, like Freemasonry, boast of their descent from the pagan mysteries; that is, they claim to be modernized heathenism. Others make no such claim, yet so act that if it were set up it would be admitted without debate. Carpenters going to work in Chicago to-day take loaded revolvers in their pockets, and the buildings on which they labor are picketed as if a hostile army were at hand.

There is a hostile army at hand, the army of secret lodges,—Masonry seizing and manipulating the government, unions threatening American citizens with death if they do honest work for honest bread without permission of some lodge. Meanwhile our churches are living along, and men are dying without God and without hope.

There are tens of thousands of young men now entering on life who will bind themselves under the oaths and penalties of these lodges, if they are not warned; but who will retain their freedom if they are. Let us then at once devote a portion of that which we are this year to use in the Lord's work, to this great task. Send your pledge to our treasurer to-day, and the money when convenient. There are enough Christian hearts interested in this cause to accomplish all that is required at once. All our strength should be used in arranging meetings, publishing literature, and getting it into the hands of the people. This can be done if our helpers will aid us promptly in the manner indicated.

CHAS. A. BLANCHARD,
Financial Secretary.

The interest in the World's Fair and the Sabbath is increasing, though not with very rapid course. Mr. Crafts visited Chicago a week ago and introduced a district secretary for the American Sabbath Union who is planning for a convention in October that shall speak the mind of the churches with emphasis. Meantime State and local societies are not idle. The ministers of Joliet have sent in a strong resolution against Sunday opening. If the end sought is secured it will be a noble vindication of our American Christianity, but it will be a victory well earned. Already some committees are beginning to work on the Sabbath.

The proposal in the Mississippi constitutional convention to grant to women the right of suffrage provided they have a property qualification of $300 was doubtless designed to head off the large and increasing Negro vote. There are few Negro women who have the requisite qualification, and most white women would not, at least in the fiction of law, be property holders to that extent. This would also affect the election of members of Congress since the qualification of voters must be the same as for the legislature. But in this the Mississippians are building more wisely than they know. Woman suffrage means an infusion of honesty into politics. It means the overthrow of the liquor traffic and an end to the so-called race conflicts which are nearly always prompted by whisky.

The carpenter's strike, begun with much eclat in this city last week, was over almost before it began. Many of the union men had no complaint and did not obey the bosses. Some of the contractors agreed to pay the wages demanded, and before the end of the week work was generally resumed, partly at the old rate, partly at the new. The Knights of Labor have no more to say about the Vanderbilts and the New York Central since the State Board of Arbitration are unearthing the conspirators of their order. The correspondence between Powderly and others is too long for publication in our columns, but the extracts given on the fourth page of this issue will be sufficient. The great combination of manufacturers, east and west, to suppress strikes by lockouts, is just as much to be condemned as the combinations of labor, with the exception of the sworn secrecy. Their experience is that a strike in one establishment is supported by wages earned in others, therefore they will fight fire with fire and cut off the resources of a strike by locking up and paying no wages. There is no Golden Rule in such measures. Let these manufacturers and employers use a tithe of their profits to instruct the men against the seductions of the secret societies, and secure their suppression by law, as approved by Daniel Webster, Joseph Cook, the New York Mail and Express, etc., and they will find the labor problem very easy of solution.

No remedy for the labor troubles of our time has ever been suggested that equals in simplicity, fairness, efficiency, that of co-operation. When all men are employers and all are employes, we may expect that all will be fairly, if not equally compensated for their labor. It is noteworthy that in Great Britain the plan makes steady progress. These co-operative associations increased one-sixth within three years, and now own from $63,000,000 to $72,000,000 of capital. In Scotland one in fourteen of all the adults is a member of these associations, and in England one in twenty. The transactions reached the sum of $179,445,000, and a profit of $16,439,000 or 8.8 per cent. received. Surely this is a most encouraging showing. We are glad to notice the report that the Illinois Central R. R. is taking steps to make all of its employes shareholders in its immense business.

The friends of Miss Willard have been anxiously publishing all over the country a refutation of the rumor that she proposed a union of the Salvation Army with the W. C. T. U. Miss Willard lately attended a general meeting of the Army in this city and made them an agreeable speech, out of which the story grew. Miss Willard has friends, too, who are quite as anxious to see her break off the actual and unfortunate alliance made by the W. C. T. U. with the secret order of the Knights of Labor through her agency. An engagement with the Salvation Army would be no dishonor. It is a Christian body, opposed to the saloon and the lodge. The Knights of Labor order is neither. Mr. Powderly, its head, is personally opposed to intemperance, but if his order was to vote on the question, he would have a pitiful following. He draws $5,000 a year from the working men, and even while he was receiving $1,500 annually as mayor of Scranton, he drew the same from the labor lodge; and the revelation of his methods by the New York State Board of Arbitration shows him to be a true child of the Jesuits.

HOW CAN WE KNOW SECRET SOCIETIES?

BY GEORGE J. FRITSCHER, ERLANGEN, BAVARIA.

All who are not acquainted with Masonic publications, if they see the rituals published in America involuntarily ask: Is it possible that these are genuine and true? What proof have we that such are indeed the proceedings of the lodge? Can we know anything of the lodge and its intentions?

Let us take up this last question first and see what we can answer. Indeed, if the lodges would be silent and do all in secret, never publish a word in defense or explanation, we would not have the immense amount of material from which we can gather our information. Our information would come only from seceders; but then our argument (true and strong as it would be) could not be as convincing as it is. Lodges and secret societies cannot hold their peace. The tendency to spread and to win members induces Masonic authors to give us some information of the tendencies of their order. They will dwell largely on the benefits of their order and try to refute objections produced against their secrecy, their evil influence in state and church. Not every author produces the same arguments, but all give us more or less information of the object of their order.

Then the apologies against attacks contain a great amount of information. Here they must "give away" more than they would do by themselves in order to clear their society. Another source of information is that class of literature which we would expect last and least in a society which is the best and most peaceful, where all are brothers. But ever so loving brothers will quarrel now and then; and in doing so one brotherhood of Masons reveals the secrets of the other brothers, and the "profane world" sees that which should have been hidden forever from its view.

Especially in Germany this occurred in the first part of our century. There are three "systems" or "rites" represented, and hence such kind compliments occur. Besides there are books and publications written for the instruction of the craft. For it is an absolute necessity that members are educated and instructed in the doctrines of the order. Such instruction cannot be written, so it is printed. But alas! although the books cannot generally be had in the market, they come into the hands of "cowans" (dogs) and "profane" readers. And the words "for brothers only" or "manuscript for the use of the craft only" will not prevent their reading, and profane readers are thus enabled to cast a look behind the curtain. Here and there the veil is raised a little, and any intelligent reader can construe a more or less accurate picture of the whole.

Of course some will flatly deny the truth of statements made by cowans; some will rather tell a thousand lies than one truth by which an outsider might gain any knowledge of the lodge. Others who are a little more intelligent must admit that also outsiders can and do know the object, the means, etc., of the secret orders. The following quotations will express all any Antimason might desire or ask for.

Venturini, a prominent German Mason, says in his "History of Freemasonry":

"Every public library contains books for the diligent student in which the history and secrets of Freemasonry are scattered. 'Search and ye shall find!' Well, yes, just as you work at it. He who can guess, let him guess, and if he finds it, all right! But no one will make it easy for him. The Mason hides his secret more than his money. He would rather have his throat cut, his body severed in twain, his bowels taken from thence like a goose, than permit one single (forbidden) word to pass his tongue. If, however, clever heads find the key themselves, indeed nobody can help it."

And Dr. Werdt, a worshipful master, says (in "Antihephata," page 20):

"It is true, all that is done in the holy temples of the royal art has been printed, but only the 'knowing' can understand the real meaning. . . . This is the very mark and criterion of the secret science that the uninitiated can hear all secrets, and yet cannot understand them, for he is not in the possession of the key."

Suppose this to be true, what will be the result in case some one hands us the key? I should judge we would thereby be enabled to distinguish between material and immaterial constituents, we could see what is true and in what respect; the whole secret of the order would be within our reach. All we have to do is to study the doings of the lodge and the explanations given by Masonic authors, and the key is in our hands. An imperfect key, one that will open many parts, but not every single shrine, has been given to us in the monitors and handbooks published under the official authority of the orders. Says a publication of a lodge:

"Neither the existence, nor its aims and workings, nor even its organization and laws are secret. Only certain signs of recognition and pass-words are secret." (The I. O. O. F., by Bro. A. Weiss, Holbein Lodge, Augsburg, 1889.)

A more perfect key has been given to us in those works divulging the secret working of the order, the publication of the rituals. The first of this kind was, as is well known, Sam. Pritchard's "Masonry Dissected," 1731; and the last and most perfect are the rituals published by E. A. Cook, Chicago.

2. But are these rituals trustworthy? What proof have we of their correctness?

To most unbiased men the testimony and oaths attesting the accuracy of the exposition is a satisfactory attestation. And the proof by the footnotes from authors of the orders is for them conclusive. Besides the defenders of the lodge add testimony every time they call the "expositors" traitors. A traitor is one who reveals the truth he was expected to conceal in a correct manner, otherwise he would be a swindler or liar. Now and then you find a Mason who openly admits the correctness. The editor of one of the most prominent Masonic periodicals in Germany, Latonia, by the name of B. Cramer, has written a pamphlet in defense of Masonry, "Aims and Objects of the Masonic order. Brief Information for Non-masons." This pamphlet was awarded the premium by the Verein Deutscher Frn., (Max Hesse, Leipzig, 1886). He says:

"The secret of Freemasonry,—the Masonic ritual was held strictly secret in former years, because with visiting brothers we could see by the relation of initiation, whether we had an initiated or uninitiated brother before us. Since then so many expository writings have been published, that the secret is no secret for those who go to any book store and buy one of these writings, which are known well enough. . . . But the purchaser will be disappointed very much, for solemn rites must be witnessed to receive an impression from them; mere reading of the rituals will for this reason soon become tedious." (Page 39.)

Well, this is all we could ask of any man. And here we have a declaration, authorized by the official "imprimatur."

The writer of this has studied such expository publications from Pritchard's "Masonry Dissected" down to "Scotch Rite Masonry," publications published in different centuries, in different parts of the globe (Europe and America), and in different languages. Of course there are differences and deviations and changes, but by none of these changes has the system been touched in the very least degree. The changes fully agree with the development Masonry has undergone in that time. None of the changes is in any way more material than the change that has been made in the Odd-fellow ritual by the revision of 1880.

Yes, I can prove still more, viz., that the Masonry of Germany, which is recognized by Masonic bodies of the whole world as a sister institution, was based on such expository publications. We are told that a Provincial Grand Master favored the introduction of the ritual proposed by Bro. Schroeder, the foundation of which was the English work "Jachin and Boaz, or, an Authentic Key to the Door of Freemasonry, both Ancient and Modern (London, 1762)," (page 33), and at the same time we are told that as the English Grand Lodge did not furnish rituals, this work was used very much by German lodges.

The above information is from "Freemasonry in the Orient of Hannover. Hannover, 1859." It was published by the lodges of Hannover in remembrance of the initiation of the late king. The ritual of Schroeder is still in use in the largest section of Freemasonry in Germany.

No one will object that German Freemasonry is not genuine Masonry, for Masonry, we are assured, is the same in all countries and in all times; and Germans are fully recognized as true and genuine Masons. But thereby the correctness of expository rituals is de facto conceded.

HOW THEY WRITE MASONIC HISTORY.

An illustration of Masonic trustworthiness is found in the great four-volumed illustrated and embellished History of Masonry, by Robert Freke Gould, Past Senior Grand Deacon of England, and six others, including Carson, Drummond and Parvin of the United States.

It occurs on the 323d page of the fourth volume, where the writer says: "In November, Governor Clinton received from Governor Cass of Michigan (a Past Grand Master), some depositions, giving the confession of one Hopkins that he was present when Morgan was put in a canoe and set adrift over Niagara Falls, but the unquestionable facts prove that this statement could not be true, and nothing came of it."

"But the author of the 'Broken Seal' published in his appendix an account of this statement, with the assurance that it is the true account of what became of Morgan!"

The exclamation point at the end of this quotation is part of it, and is copied from the history. It seems to stand there to make up a virtuous face at the enormity of Col. Greene's false representation in the "Broken Seal."

Let it stand; for it is undeniably appropriate, since both in the body of the book and in the appendix referred to, Col. Greene gives another account entirely incompatible with the one referred to in this blue-and-gold-covered Masonic history, while to the false scent of the Michigan Past Grand Master, which failed to divert the chase from the real murderers, not the slightest allusion is made in the appendix, if even in the whole volume.

If this were an exceptional slip of the pen, instead of a sample of Masonic utterances, we would not ask the question whether the habit of swearing many oaths, and fixing the attention on them, tends to empty a man's ordinary and unsworn utterances of their natural value.

CRUCIFER.

THE IDOLATRY OF INIQUITY.

BY REV. H. H. HINMAN.

The great English statesman, Edmund Burke, said, "I am not of the opinion of those gentlemen who are against disturbing the public repose; I like a clamor when there are abuses. The fire-bell at midnight disturbs your sleep but it keeps you from being burnt in your bed. The hue and cry alarms the country but preserves all the property of the province." A greater than he said, "I came not to send peace on earth, but a sword."

There is no form of human wickedness but what, if it has once become sanctioned by usage and hedged around with prejudice, becomes an object of idolatry. Not only does the world bow down to it, in most unholy abasement, but there are found even good men who will fight desperately for its preservation.

The African slave-trade is an illustration. The world has come to regard it as among the crimes that are not to be tolerated even among savages. Its existence in Central Africa calls forth the execration of all Christendom. But it is within the present century that American citizens were engaged in it, and that it had the sanction of our Constitution and our laws. King George III. was a good churchman and exemplary in his morals, and yet he regarded the slave-trade as something sacred. He wrote with his own hand to the Governor of Virginia, commanding him, on pain of his highest displeasure, to refuse his assent to any law abolishing or restricting the slave-trade. Even the good John Newton says that when he was a slave trader he never supposed there was any evil in the business.

Henry Clay once said that "two hundred years of legislation had sanctioned and sanctified the right to hold property in slaves."

We all know with what a desperate struggle this imaginary right was fought for and lost. The rights of liquor-dealers have been maintained with a similar persistence, and the British ministry held that licenses even temporarily bestowed must not be taken away without compensation from the public treasury.

The secret lodge system, because of its prevalence, has come to be invested with the same kind of spurious sacredness. The public mind does not wish to be disturbed; and Christian ministers who know nothing about its inherent wickedness and pernicious practical tendencies are not only satisfied to be ignorant, but are generally glad to put in the plea that "there must be much that is good in the system since so many good men are involved in it."

They forget that ignorance on any great moral issue is a sin in any religious teacher, and that God has said, "Woe unto them that call evil good, and good evil."

Among the sins of professing Christians there is, perhaps, none so palpable and so utterly indefensible as the division of Christians into denominations on the basis of creeds, politics and names. To the masses in all the religious sects, there is not even a seeming impropriety; to others who see and deplore the evil, there is no apparent way of deliverance, and they suggest only temporary expedients, instead of radical reform.

The blindness of mind on all questions of reform is peculiar to no age or nation. In all lands the men who have had clearness of vision and the courage of their convictions have found themselves in a meager minority; and if they have escaped with their lives it has been because it was thought cheaper to tolerate disturbers than to suppress them. Nevertheless the truth is mighty and will prevail. "Be patient, therefore, my brethren, unto the coming of our Lord. Behold, the husbandman waiteth for the precious fruit of the earth, and hath long patience for it, until he receive the early and the latter rain. Be ye also patient; stablish your hearts, for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh." James 5: 6, 7.

Berea, Ky.

DRY ROT OF THE LODGE.

It seems at times as though some startling occurrence of the nature of a tragedy was called for, in order to awaken the public conscience to an apprehension of the gravity of great evils. Instantly only the matter of secret societies, the Morgan abduction and murders more than sixty years ago, sent a thrill of horror throughout the country, and aroused so strong a repugnance and hostility to Freemasonry, that it seemed for a while as though the order was not likely to notably recover from the shame and the odium of the revolting exposure. The Cronin trial of last year informed the country in a slight degree of the murderous character and scope of the secret Clann-Gael fraternity. Again, within a few weeks, the death of a Methodist preacher while taking the so-styled "Royal Arch degree in Masonry," at Huntington, West Virginia, should suffice to open the eyes of many to the sinfulness, folly and puerility of certain secret lodge ceremonies.

It is to be regretted, however, in connection with the last named circumstance, that many editors of religious papers, being themselves in association with oath-bound orders, will either suppress any mention of the foregoing tragic incident, or if told, will refrain from printing the strong moral and the recommendation of withdrawal which should be drawn from it.

Following is a little more evidence to the point. A minister complaining, not long since, that the secret societies were producing a dry rot in the religious natures of the men who united with them, stated that when he was a young man he was urged to join the Odd-fellows, and as an inducement was told "that being a minister, he could join without paying fees." Thinking to get a good thing free, he handed in his name. The evening he was to be taken in, among others to be received was a Jew of not the best character and no piety. The Jew rallied the preacher on his inconsistency in joining such a society, and put the case in such a way that the preacher, utterly disgusted with himself, never went near the lodge again. A man in New Hampshire, having recently made profession of religion in the Methodist church, "at once publicly withdrew from the Masonic and the Odd-fellows' lodges as inconsistent with the new position he had taken. Soon after, in the same church, an old gentleman, a member of the official board, who had taken seven degrees in Masonry, stated before a houseful of people that he withdrew from Masonry because the Lord Jesus Christ was excluded from the lodge."

Nevertheless, mark what is said by Sickels in his "Monitor of Freemasonry," concerning a candidate who has been "passed" and raised to the "sublime degree" of Master Mason: "We now find him complete in morality and intelligence, with the stay of religion added to insure him of the protection of the Deity, and guard him against ever going astray. These three degrees thus form a perfect and harmonious whole, nor can we conceive of anything which can be suggested more that the soul of man requires." But it is said in Scripture that there is one High Priest, and that "such a High Priest became us, who is holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners, and made higher than the heavens." Does it not hence appear a sacrilegious assumption that men in their lodges should exalt one of their number to a position which they make bold to call that of the "high priest?"

During the winter just past, Mary T. Lathrop, of Michigan, delivered in this city a lecture upon "Christian Politics," in the course of which she queried why it was that in the regular meetings for worship the number of men present, in proportion to the number of women, was but as one to three, and in the prayermeeting, only about one to ten. Answering her own question, she replied that the men were to be found in the liquor saloons. I believe her statement would have been much more accurate had she included with the saloons the club-houses and the lodge-rooms. About the time the foregoing lecture was delivered, there came to me from the same State of Michigan, a letter written by the pastor of the Congregational church, in the small town of H—, in which the writer says:

"I have been particularly interested in the subject of secret societies, since I came to this place, where I find two strong secret societies and two weak churches. As a rule, the men of the community are in the former, while the churches are left to the women. But the monster iniquity is not content with the work already done, but is now reaching out after our women. Only a short time since, a Star lodge was organized with a larger membership than that of our church! What will be the end of these things? It does seem to me that we must 'Cry aloud and spare not.' May we be granted grace and courage so to do."

Corroborative of the above, and immediately following the receipt of it, was the remark made to me by the compiler of that book of narratives of slave escapes, "The Underground Railroad," a resident of this city well qualified to speak for his race. He said that he knew of scarcely anything that stood so much in the way of the colored people's advancement as did the disposition they have shown to go into the secret orders, an example, moreover, that many of the women had not been slow to follow, and with results that had been sorrowful.

It is not necessary to go out of the way to glean evidence as to the convivial character of the clubs and lodges. A printed bill of fare of a down-town restaurant, thrown into my letter box within a week, besides advertising the choice liquors to be had at the drinking bar, states that estimates are given "for banquets to lodges, societies, etc." The testimony before the Board of License Judges, now being elicited, incidentally and abundantly confirms this statement. In the Court of Quarter Sessions last week, when desertion cases were being heard before Judge Willson, an order was given that one of the defendants must pay his wife a specified weekly stipend for the support of herself and children. "I can't keep up two societies and pay that," responded the delinquent. Upon which the Judge, properly observing, "You have the society of your children to look after," made an order of three dollars payment per week. There are many moving in a very different circle from this man, who are frequenters of fashionable club-houses, absentees from home, and neglecters of the places of worship.

There has been some surprise expressed, in view of the fact that some of our members have at times united with the orders, that our Book of Discipline makes no provision thereagainst. The reason for this was probably two-fold: that the orders generally have originated since the rise of our religious society, and that the whole procedure of secretism, the ritual, the oath, the title conferring and title pronouncing, the affiliation with many making no profession of religion, and other reasons not necessary to mention, were so opposed to the openness and simplicity, and indeed to the whole polity of primitive Quakerism, that such a thing as our members entangling themselves in the unhappy mazes of secretism was not thought probable, or needed not to be provided against.—Josiah W. Leeds, in The Friend.

THE CHURCH HUMILIATED.

An official member of the Methodist Episcopal church died. On the occasion of the funeral, the order of Masons to which he belonged took charge of his body at the house and conveyed it to the church. On arriving there a Mason spoke at considerable length in behalf of the fraternity. Next came some Masonic funeral ceremonies. These over, the members of another fraternity took charge of the remains, and went through certain funeral rites peculiar to themselves. When these were concluded the pastor of the deceased, and of the church in which the funeral services were held, came forward and made some remarks from the Christian point of view. Our informant, who was present, is not antagonistic to secret societies, but felt scandalized, regarding the scene as a humiliation of the Methodist Episcopal church and of that particular congregation and its pastor. It was, indeed; such an elevation of any human society, however beneficent, to the side of the Christian church in the solemn services of the burial of deceased Christians is a gross impropriety. The pastor was to blame. He should have declined to take part under such circumstances, not arrogantly or with ill-temper, but quietly, kindly and firmly.

There is a simple way to arrange these questions. If the deceased belonged to a society observing liturgical forms in connection with the burial of the dead, let the society act by itself, either at the house or at the grave, and the services of the Christian church be performed as religious acts. No religious Mason, Odd-fellow, Knight of Pythias, etc., would object to this, and the opinion of an irreligious member of these societies is of no value.—New York Christian Advocate.

Under the caption, "The Church Humiliated," the Christian Advocate cites a case in which the Masons took charge of a dead body at the house, taking it thence to the church where a Mason spoke in behalf of that fraternity, this being followed by some Masonic funeral ceremonies. After another fraternity had gone through certain funeral rites the pastor of the deceased and of the church was permitted to make an address from a Christian point of view. Many men in such circumstances would have declined to join in the service. If these societies wish to have a place on such an occasion, let them do so, but not to interfere with the religious services of the Christian church over the remains of one of its own members.—The Congregationalist.

THE UNITED PRESBYTERIAN LAW.

Under the title "A Bit of Unfairness" the United Presbyterian replies to an allegation respecting lax discipline in the denomination it ably represents. United Presbyterians should be thankful for their position toward the lodge. It must be regretted that a few of their pastors seem not to be. The church should be a unit on this great question. The reply reads thus:

"The Presbyterian Banner, referring to the church and secret societies, says, 'The Reformed Presbyterian (Covenant) church condemns them, and does not permit its members to be united with them. The United Presbyterian church has a law of the same kind, but it is not enforced.'

"If we should say the Presbyterian church has a law requiring the holy observance of the Lord's day, 'but it is not enforced,' we would be quite as accurate as the Banner is when it says the law of the United Presbyterian church against secret societies is not enforced. Some of our sessions are not so faithful as they should be in the enforcement of our law against secret oath-bound orders. Some sessions of the Presbyterian church are not as faithful in the enforcement of the law of the church against Sabbath profanation as they should be, but it would be doing great injustice to a church that is among the most faithful in the land in keeping the Sabbath holy, to say that its Sabbath law is not enforced.

"The Banner further says: 'No human organization, however well conducted, or beneficial in its objects, should take the place of the church, or be permitted to keep its members from attending it, or rendering the devotion and service which they have solemnly pledged. It may be that if the members of the churches were more sympathetic among themselves, and more helpful to one another, the secret society and the lodge would be less attractive to them.'

"We presume the Banner is opposed to secret societies. But its opposition to them 'is not enforced' by very strong language condemning them. Its own cautiousness when speaking about them is suggestive as to the reasons which probably prevent the enforcement of the law against them in some instances in our own church. There is a good deal of the old Cameronian mettle in our sessions generally, but here and there a weak one may be found. There is a great difference, however, between the imperfect administration of law and its non-enforcement."

The British soldiers in India suffer severely from the curse of alcohol. Said the Duke of Connaught recently, referring to the consumption of liquors in India by the military: "The use of intoxicating drinks by the British soldiers in India is the cause of almost the entire crime committed by them, and nothing is so deleterious to their health. If drink were prohibited in connection with the soldiery, 40,000 men would do the work which at present requires 60,000."

A KNIGHT OF LABOR BOOMERANG.

The investigation of the recent strike on the New York Central road by the State Board of Arbitration, which was requested so earnestly by the leaders of the Knights of Labor, has proved a boomerang of remarkable velocity and concussive power. The letters which passed between Mr. Powderly and Mr. Lee, the local leader of the strike, have been put in evidence, and so absolutely convict these men of a conspiracy, not alone against the New York Central road, but also against the railroad interests of the whole country, that it is astonishing a man of Mr. Powderly's supposed astuteness should have allowed them to be made public.

The first letter was written by Mr. Powderly to Mr. Lee on the 3d of last February, six months before the strike was declared. In this letter he gives Lee some useful advice and incidentally sheds some light upon the Reading strike by showing that the employes had complete control of that road and lost it by their own folly. He writes to Mr. Lee:

Avoid controversy as far as possible and fortify yourselves with facts, indisputable facts, if ever you have to ask for anything. Allow no rash counsels to sway you in anything, and do not place headstrong or intemperate men on any committee. The men on the Reading railroad actually controlled the entire management and had everything their own way. They grew restive, and allowed incendiary counsels to prevail. It was no uncommon thing for them to stop a train on the main track and talk to an up train in order to settle some little matter. That sort of thing could not last, and when they finally struck it was at the wrong time for the men and just the time to suit the company.

A week later Lee replies to Powderly that he will endeavor to follow his advice, and will select from the district organization only "men who will always work for the best interests of our order and endeavor to hold the respect of the officers of the company." The 17th of April Powderly still further develops the details of the conspiracy:

This is your plan: Go on with the work of organization; do it as quietly as possible; work hereafter under secret orders, and divulge nothing to the outside world as to movements or work done. Put organizers to work on the West Shore road and all along the entire Vanderbilt system. When you can induce a young man to quit the service of the company do so. Have as many as think of going elsewhere this spring do so in a body, if they can be relied on to do it that way. Have them give as a reason, if asked, that they are offered better wages and inducements elsewhere.

At the same time it is evident that Powderly had little faith in the success of the strike, for on the same date he writes to Lee, the company at that time having discovered the conspiracy and discharged some of the conspirators: "By all means do everything in your power to prevent a strike, for it will prove a failure and will be just what the N. Y. C. company wants the men to do." Lee had a great deal of difficulty in following Powderly's advice. In attempting to organize his men for the best interests of the order and to gain control, as in the case of the Reading road, and at the same time to avoid a strike, he ran against a snag, as is shown by his letter to Powderly July 31, in which he says:

We are having a very serious time of it here. The New York Central corporation is crowding us very hard, laying off men right and left, and the worst of it is the men who have been promoting the best interest of the organization are the ones selected for dismissal. It looks to me as if the company wants to have the men strike at this time in order to break up the organization, as it would be a very easy matter for them to defeat us now, as there is nothing doing on the road. I have received notice to-day that my services are no longer required by the company, and a few others who were at different times before the officers of the company while acting as representatives of the organization have been let go also.

Powderly's reply to this letter Aug. 2 is a singular composition for a man who was eager to avoid a strike. He writes:

Caution your men to continue as before, make no noise, no stir, or show of strength, and, if possible, act on the following suggestion: You have in the order a number of young men who would just as lief take Horace Greeley's advice and "go West" as not; select a number of these who would be willing to take positions elsewhere; have them correspond with our brothers and sisters in the West and secure positions there; then have them go one by one to their superintendent and ask for higher wages, shorter hours, better conditions, or, in fact, anything that may be required by the employes of the road. Their demands will be refused, of course, and then let them state that they are unwilling to work for such a corporation when they can better themselves. When a number of good men quit in that manner it will cause the company to think that it will not do to trifle with them and prevent the discharge of other men.

This you must do secretly, and by all means postpone and keep back all indications of trouble until the return of Mr. Depew from Europe. Remember that he is a possible candidate for the Presidency, and will go to any lengths, where his own personality is concerned, rather than have a strike on his road, for that would injure his chance irreparably.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

Labor day—An American monolith—A Jewish question arising—"The gates ajar" at Harvard but not "wide open"—The "improved" Order of Red Men.

"Labor day" passed off quietly, with the usual parade and display of flags and banners, some of which were unique as well as expressive and pointed; while only a few showed the anarchistic spirit of class hatred and animosity which does more than anything else to hurt the laborer's cause. One of the best—which it is to be hoped is prophetic of the good time coming—was that carried by the Allston and Brighton union, which showed two figures, capital and labor clasping hands, with the motto underneath, "Be just and fear not." If such a motto could only be accepted by both sides, there would soon be an end of strikes, tie-ups, boycotts, and all other similar relics of barbarism.

The labor leaders seem curiously unmindful of the fact that the best generals have always partaken of the hardships of their soldiers. Very few working men can afford such a menu as that which an exchange reports T. V. Powderly and his three lieutenants as sitting down to at a leading hotel; and it is certainly well for their digestion that they cannot:—soup of ox joint; boiled lake trout with parsley sauce; roast beef and pork with apple sauce; chicken livers; saute with mushrooms; apple fritters with brandy sauce; fruit, ice cream, cake, coffee, etc. And it may be also added that few working men can, like these so-called "representatives of labor," take over an hour and a half to discuss such a dinner, supposing they had it. But a humbug cannot last always, and there are cheering signs that the good ship of labor may yet clear itself from these barnacles, when our native American element begins to see the folly of supporting foreign potentates in a luxury they never dreamed of for themselves.

I believe there is a general idea that the quarries of old Egypt have never been equalled in the gigantic pieces of solid stone therefrom extracted; but Vinalhaven, Maine, fairly breaks the record of the country of the Pharaohs. A granite shaft has recently been quarried at that place, which, when erected, will considerably excel in height the tallest of the Egyptian monuments, and will be higher, larger and heavier than any other single piece of solid stone ever set up—at least so far as we have any historical account. This immense monolith is 115 feet long, 10 feet square at base, and weighs 850 tons. It has been suggested that it be used as a monument for General Grant.

It seems rather singular at this late day to read of such outbursts of race antagonism, and such wholesale interdiction of an entire people as the Czar's late edict against the Jews in Russia. Germany, it is said, is going to follow suit with an anti-Semitic Congress; and even in cultured Boston, Fire Marshall Whitcomb has made a small sensation by recommending that no risks be accepted from Hebrews because the Russian and Polish Jews so often set fire to their own property to get the insurance. This undesirable class of emigrants, the dregs and offscourings of Eastern Europe, have greatly increased of late years, and it would not be at all strange if America should witness in the future some displays of anti-Hebrewism. But I very much doubt the conclusion of a writer in the Transcript, "that these persecutions may be fulfilling the divine purpose which is to make Palestine again the possession of the Jews, and the final abode of the long-wandering sons of Israel." A friend of the writer who has been for many years a missionary to this people in Boston, states that in all her intercourse with Jews of every nationality, the rigidly orthodox and the most "liberal," she never heard but one express a desire ever to return to the land of his fathers with the intention to make it his permanent home. The Jew of to-day—at least the kind which throng our American cities,—is not a creature of sentiment; far from it. Eighteen centuries of exile have made him as thoroughly cosmopolitan as the gypsies. In a semi-poetic, semi-religious fashion he may, if he is an orthodox Jew, sometimes "remember Jerusalem," but in the same way that I fear some nominal Christians sing "Jerusalem the Golden"—without the slightest desire ever to become a denizen thereof. However, the very fact that Marshall Whitcomb's bare suggestion has made such a stir, shows that there is an inherent sense of justice in all true-born Americans which will never permit them to ostracize a whole race or people. Any anti-Semitic outbursts will come like the anti-Chinese outrages, mainly from our foreign element. Certainly this can be said in their favor,—that with all their sponging of the Gentiles, these modern Shylocks are never up in the police court for putting the bottle to their neighbor's lips. They may take Antonio's pound of flesh but they don't insist on having his soul with it.

The death of Mrs. Lucinda S. Hall, M. D., aged 75, a resident of Concord, Mass., removes the first woman in New England to receive the degree of M. D. She graduated from the Worcester Medical College in 1852. Yet now forty years after, Boston women are trying to raise money to endow a college for their sex at Baltimore, because the authorities at Harvard, with a brilliant display of old fogyism that ought to entitle them to a degree, obstinately refuse to open the doors of the medical department to women. The Boston University graduated eight female students from the school of law this summer, and expect a larger number next year. Harvard would do better to accept the fact that now is the time to do graciously and gracefully what she must do inevitably; for if she intends to keep to her conservative traditions in this respect, her authorities made a fatal blunder in opening the Annex at all.

The Improved Order of Red Men permits no uniform for public parades, but what good are parades without the accompanying fuss and feathers? So think and say the National Chieftain's League, a kind of upper degree in this order, and the only one allowed to wear a uniform,—indeed, originally created for this sole and only purpose. The uniform adopted by these modern "big chiefs" whose first council as an independent body has been recently held in Boston, consists of a very proper civilized garb:—a black Prince Albert coat, vest and pants, black felt slouch hat turned back one side, with ostrich plume of royal purple, and swords same as worn by officers of the United States Army. As the sachems pictured in our school histories certainly did not wear ostrich feathers in their heads, and bore scalping knives at their belts instead of swords, these are certainly "improved" red men. Let the good work go on, and perhaps the time will come when they will "improve" into self-respecting American citizens without any savage toggery or secret grips.

ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

—Bro. J. K. Glassford of Carthage, Mo., has been for some time sojourning in Phoenix, Arizona, from whence he has written occasional letters of much interest for our paper. He has lately returned to his Missouri home with its ample orchards, and we hope soon to hear that he is moving the friends of southwestern Missouri to renewed enthusiasm for the reform.

REFORM NEWS.

ON IOWA CAMP GROUNDS.

AN IMPORTANT WORD TO A FEW IOWA BRETHERN.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—After leaving Richland I visited Pleasant Plain, and Wayne, and then returned to Delta, calling at Washington by the way.

I visited and preached twice at a camp meeting three miles from Delta, of which Rev. C. E. Harroun, the first vice-president of the Iowa Association, had charge. Rev. Harroun is an earnest opponent of the lodge system, and I am just as free to rebuke that iniquity in his meetings as any other.

From Delta I returned to Washington, and thence to Wyman, and called upon Mr. Dodds, who subscribed $6 to the N. C. A. I also received by mail a subscription of $10 from S. J. White of Marshall Co., Ill., to the N. C. A. T. G. Dunn, of Wyman, subscribed $3, and others paid cash or subscribed other amounts.

While here I called upon and spent the night with Rev. Black, the pastor of the Covenantant church of Wyman, who is earnestly devoted to the reform. It is said the Lord loves a cheerful giver, and Rev. Black, unsolicited, gave his contribution to the N. C. A. work.

From Wyman I went to Winfield, and received subscriptions and cash donations from several brethren. Finding that my friend, Rev. Hall, a veteran anti-secret society reformer, had charge of a camp meeting near Winfield, I went to the meeting and preached once. Bro. Hall wished me to remain with him over the Sabbath and render further service, but as another camp meeting was in progress near Birmingham, Van Buren Co., of which Rev. Harroun had charge, I went to Birmingham and called upon that veteran reformer, Dr. J. N. Norris. I also visited Mr. Enlow, the enterprising editor and publisher of the Free Press, and reached the camp meeting Saturday night. Rev. Harroun and myself were the guests of Bro. Mizer, a seceded Mason, with whom we lodged each night I was on the ground.

On Sabbath afternoon at 2:30, and again on Tuesday at the same hour, I spoke to large and attentive audiences. Each time I showed the antagonism of the lodge to the doctrine of Christ, and the necessity of throwing off the lodge yoke if we would take the yoke of Christ upon us.

In one of the social meetings a brother said that when he was converted to Christ he was an Odd-fellow. He soon saw the antagonism between Odd-fellowship and the religion of Christ and became convinced that he must renounce Odd-fellowship if he would retain the Spirit of Christ in his heart. He could not give up Christ and so he gave up Odd-fellowship. After awhile another Odd-fellow came to him and said that he had found Christ, and his heart was filled with his love. This brother said to the new convert, "You will soon see that Odd-fellowship is antagonistic to Christianity, and you will have to give up Odd-fellowship if you keep in the Spirit of Christ." But the other thought that he could be an Odd-fellow and a Christian too. This friend told him that if he retained the Spirit of Christ in his heart he would soon see the antagonism of the two systems. It was not long before the converted brother came to him, and confessed that he now saw that Odd-fellowship is in conflict with the Christian religion, and had decided to renounce it that he might continue in fellowship with the Lord Jesus Christ.

The next day, after my last discourse on the camp ground, I went about eight miles, and lectured at the Oak Grove school-house. More people gathered than could be seated in the house, but those outside stood around the door and windows, while I showed how the administration of justice in the courts is obstructed by the disloyal oaths administered in the lodge; and how completely the religious philosophy of the lodge system antagonizes the Gospel of Christ.

I am now at Eldon, Wappello Co., where I have appointments to preach and lecture. While at Birmingham, subscriptions to the Iowa Association, which had been due one or more years, were paid. The Association, at its last annual meeting, voted that all such subscriptions should be paid to me, as the Association was back several hundred dollars on my salary as State Agent. Such payments awaken a grateful appreciation of the manly and Christian integrity of the subscribers. Others, who are owing me for the Cynosure, or on subscription to the Iowa State work, will command the same grateful appreciation if they fulfill their promises as these gentlemen did, and as others are doing who are owing me for the Cynosure. I say owing me for the Cynosure, for it may not be understood that when I take subscriptions to the paper, if cash is not paid down it is charged to me, and should the brethren fail to make payment, it is my individual loss. With the knowledge of this fact I am sure all will pay at the earliest convenience.

The harvest is great and the laborers are few. Let us unitedly pray that the power of Christ may attend his truth, and the lodges go down; and that the church, which is the pillar and ground of the truth, may be purified, and fill the land.

C. F. HAWLEY.

CORRESPONDENCE.

FROM THE NEBRASKA BATTLE FIELD.

IS DEFEAT COMING?

NEBRASKA CITY, Aug. 30, 1890.

EDITORS CYNOSURE:—Last Sabbath I preached twice at Minden, Neb., to full houses on "Bible Politics," and "The Saloons Must Go." Capt. Long lectured in the M. E. church in the evening. He has been lecturing for the Nebraska amendment during the past two months, and says there is no hope of its success. The weak points in our lines are the woeful apathy prevailing among church people. He noted the same apathy in the Pennsylvania and West Virginia campaigns, and it is a certain precursor of defeat. Again, it is almost impossible to arouse county organizations to the point of arranging meetings in the country. For this reason we are not reaching the rural districts. Capt. Long's experience tallies exactly with my own.

That which is conspiring more than anything else to defeat the amendment, is the non-partisan leagues in almost every town, officered by Republicans, and so organized as to boycott all except Republican speakers. They have deceived the people by the popular cry of non-partisan, so that many Prohibition and W. C. T. U. workers have given their support to these leagues, thinking thereby to allay the prejudice of politicians. Edward Rosewater, of the Omaha Bee, who has more influence with the Republican party than any other man in the State, has, it is believed, sold out the party for license. The machinery of the party is being strongly used on that side. My own experience, and that of other lecturers I have met, convinces me that these leagues are not working for the amendment, but in most cases are only operated to keep out all except Republican speakers, and to confine the agitation to that party. Thus Prohibition party speakers, though they do not touch the party question, yet when they reach a town where they have an appointment find no one to meet or entertain them. Their meetings are very imperfectly arranged, and as a result their audiences are small. These and other indications prove the existence of a strong undercurrent of opposition.

If prohibition is defeated in Nebraska, as it was in Pennsylvania, it will be due to the underhanded influence of the Republican party.

For years my conviction has been strengthening that in the great conflict to overthrow the saloon, the Republican party will fight on the side of the liquor traffic, just as the Democratic party once did on the side of slavery. The national platforms of the Republican party from its first in 1856, down till 1868, are silent as the grave on the liquor question. In 1872 the 16th plank in its platform declared against prohibition and Sabbath legislation. So testifies Herman Raster who wrote it. There is not a word about temperance in its platforms of 1876 and 1880. In 1884, its platform declared for the "largest diversity of industry," and this was interpreted by many in the party to have reference to the liquor traffic. Mr. Blaine and Logan, who were the candidates that year, proposed to make the license of the liquor traffic a permanent source of revenue, a measure that had in it more deep damnation than was ever proposed by an American politician, not even excepting Arnold or Jefferson Davis.

The five most influential men in the Republican party to-day are Blaine, Depew, Alger, Sherman and Harrison; and they are all on the side of license. The saloons of Indianapolis were decorated when the news of Harrison's nomination reached that city. They displayed flags on which was inscribed "Harrison our next President: He's all right!" The leading Republican paper of Indianapolis during the campaign of '88 kept standing at the head of its columns a quotation from Harrison's speech, declaring that he was opposed to prohibition and in favor of license. The day before his inauguration was Sabbath, and on that day two thousand saloons run wide open in Washington, in direct violation of law. In his inaugural procession marched a thousand saloon-keepers. How many slave-holders marched in Lincoln's inaugural procession? Not one. Why? Because they knew Mr. Lincoln was not on their side.

We are told that the Republican party has done so much for prohibition, but when it took charge of the government in 1860 there were about two gallons of liquor used for every individual, while now there are more than thirteen used for every person. In sixteen States having safe Democratic majorities, there are 36,170 liquor dealers, or one to every 662 of the population. But in twenty States having Republican majorities, there are 94,984 liquor dealers, or one to every 293 inhabitants. Thus it is easier to prove that the saloon is more a Republican than Democratic institution. It is true it was under the administration of the Republican party that prohibition legislation in Maine, Kansas and Iowa was obtained, yet it was not the party that gave them prohibition. It was the people that gave prohibition to the Republican party, and compelled it to take it under the lash.

M. A. GAULT.

VIEWS AFOOT IN KENTUCKY.

BEREA, Ky., Aug. 26, 1890.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—My sentiments will approach Bro. Hinman's more closely than my hand-writing, so it will be useless to sign his name to this letter. But his request that I write you in his stead, for this week, is the special reason why you receive this.

The privilege of a little vacation and a visit to a Kentucky mission field gives me the rare opportunity of making acquaintance at Berea, where so much of the modern Acts of the Apostles has been re-enacted. To meet the venerable Bro. Fee, and his equally heroic wife, is to go back in privilege to the days of pure Christianity, church unity, church purity, and apostolic faith. When my children read the story of such lives with the times they passed through, it will do something to strengthen their resolution to do to-day's battle well; and when I say, "I have known them," it will do more. The glory of the by-and-by will include the reminiscences of the present and the associated honors of a common struggle for Christ, with Christ and with his own.

Bro. Hinman is, as ever, incessantly at work, and the work is at the front—all along the line. If any new apology were needed for emphasizing church union, as much more than mere inter-sect amiability, a brief acquaintance with the South would give it. The simple but rather sounding name Congregational is an obstacle. A certain degree of preliminary education is needed to dispel the idea of a conflicting sect. And to these people, a new sect is a new religion. Besides, when the name is understood, there is a sect seed remaining in the nationalizing tendency of its conventional operations, and the gradual but sure growth of the directory.

Coming across the country on foot, I made many short acquaintances with the people where they live. Conversations and hospitalities were cordial. The common people are a unit on the thought of "less churches and more religion." And Southern people are generally religious. In one town of 800 people I could not find a single resident pastor, but there were three or four "Protestant" churches and one Catholic. They had some religion brought in in cans, once in a week or two, but no pastor resident, because they were too weak to sustain one. The first man addressed on that matter replied, "That's so, we want less churches and more strength to have a pastor here. You're right on that; no mistake." Not one man dissented from that idea. But the people feel too feeble to revolt against the church directory.

Masonry, the omnipresent, is the twin curse here, or if there be triplets, the whisky power may be added. (However, I judge that the South is leading the North in that contest.)

This was the conversation on the railway, loud enough for all the ears in the car. The chief speaker was a Baptist minister in full clerical dress. The rest of the group were politicians en route to a county convention; and I thought one or two of them were ashamed of him:

"I was living at Georgetown, and the boys in my absence from home, got a confederate flag hoisted over my premises. Then I was arrested and threatened with Camp Chase or the iron-clad oath. I said I would take Camp Chase and rot first. But I had recently been admitted to some of the higher degrees of Masonry, and you will see that it served me a good turn. For my friend

Dr. — was a Unionist. We were both Baptists and both Masons. He had also acted prominently in my initiation to the encampment and chapter degrees. I claimed his protection and received it. The neighbors wondered how I got clear of Camp Chase."

I have discovered, however, that in ordinary times the percentage of "Masons" who are practically dissociated from the lodge is very large. The number of those who are comparatively innocent of the religious and political vices of the system as such is even larger. I think these facts should be taken largely into account in all our work. In this connection it is also justice on the one side and a great shame on the other to say, that the trouble from preaching the truth in Christian communities very often arises out of the cowardice of church people, who are not Masons, more than from the Masons themselves, many of whom secretly wish the thing were disarmed of its power.

This has been my late pastoral experience. There is often a manliness in a Mason who is only nominally such, that will rally to the support of a manly pulpit. This I observed in Colorado. As in the church all are not Christians, so in Masonry all are not Masons. That they are in dangerous connection, and have suffered injury, is true. If the churches were not so panicky through fear of losing sectarian advantages, and their financial supporters, they would find it much less troublesome, in the long course, to assist the Mason out of his false religion than to give him so much protection before he asks it.

The color question, if left to the common honest people, would settle itself. These were the recurring scenes all along the way here: Three Negroes and two white men shoveling out of the same coal car; one white man and two Negroes sitting close together on a fence in hearty conversation as neighbors; one black man and one white man walking together in the middle of the highway, near enough to be under the same umbrella; next after them a white and a black man riding on the axle and reach of a farm wagon, etc., etc. The fact is, there is a common feeling of interest growing in the minds of honest laborers more potent than the color question.

"How much a month do you get?"

"Ten dollars. No wood for fuel, either. Have to buy coal. Pretty hard. Sometimes we get twelve and thirteen dollars."

"Not much better off than we used to be."

To the next man (white) I talk of wages and produce prices: "What is the matter that you can't pay wages?"

"We can't get prices for what we raise. Even our hogs don't sell as they did, and last winter was so warm we lost the 'hog-meat' we tried to keep."

"Why can't you get prices?"

Straight out came the answer, "Because the people's money is hoarded in the government treasury and is not at work making exchanges, the thing it was made for. That's the reason. Tariff sucks up in two days as much as the government pays out in three."

Another said, "We don't have to pay so much for the coal, but an awful pile of money has to be paid to the railroads that fetch it here."

Splendid "turn-pike" roads are found in this part of the State and the man on foot is all right. But the man who isn't on foot might wish he had taken the cars. I found three toll-gates in nine miles, and learned that in forty miles there would be six or eight: "Saddle horse, 5 cents; single carriage, 10 cents; double carriage, 20 cents," etc. These are stock companies. "Twenty-five dollars a year I pay," said one poor farmer, "to travel the 'public highway' to one town. I would like to be taxed in some other way." And the Legislature is now considering the matter.

A. J. CHITTENDEN.

THE BODY OF MOSES.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Bro. R. S. Morton in Cynosure of Aug. 21 questions the correctness of my statement concerning the body of Moses. Allow me to give the Scripture authority for my belief. It is found in Deut. 34: 5, 6, compared with Jude 9, and Luke 9: 30. True, these passages do not furnish positive proof, but still it seems to me they give sufficient evidence to satisfy a modest conviction. That can best be shown by quoting from the evangelist, Geo. F. Pentecost, D.D., page 152:

"Moses had died, though, verily, but under such peculiar circumstances as never man expired, 'by the lips of the Lord,' or as the old Jewish Rabbis used to say, 'by the kiss of the Almighty.' And God buried him with his own hand (an honor never before or since conferred on mortal). We might be prepared for some extraordinary occurrence in view of these facts in connection with Moses' death. Besides, we know that the body of Moses was never found by the children of Israel, though it is unlikely that they would have left the neighborhood of his death without searching for it. Indeed, the very fact that it was not found is an implied statement that search had been made during the thirty days they lingered about the mountain, after his death, ere they proceeded on their journey. But there is a circumstance related by Jude which throws light on this subject. We are told plainly that Michael, 'the archangel, when contending with the devil, he disputed about the body of Moses, durst not bring against him a railing accusation; but said, The Lord rebuke thee.' We are not told what he did further; but the inference is clear that he raised Moses' body from the dead, or at least delivered it from the power of Satan and death, and restored it to the translated spirit."

ALBERT M. PAULL.

THE GERMAN METHODIST MINISTERS.

WASECA, Minn.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—We have never had any conference action on the subject of Masonry. But we did not realize any need of it so far as the German ministers are concerned. I am not aware that there is one Freemason among the 750 German ministers of the Methodist Episcopal church. One, long years ago, joined the order, but finding that he was thereby shutting the door to the hearts of the majority of Germans, he dropped his membership. The writer was encouraged to join by a faithful Masonic chaplain twenty years ago. After he had given me "Landmarks of Masonry" to read, he handed me the ritual, evidently expecting that it would convince me that there was nothing objectionable in the Masonic institution. But it had the opposite effect. When I found that in the Scripture quotations the blessed name of Christ is left out, the question: Why is it thus? presented itself. And the answer was not far away: It must be, in order that Jew and Gentile, deist and moralist may feel at home in the lodge! And the Christian, of course, must quiet his conscience by saying, Well, Christ, is God. Then, of course, they must forget that St. John says: "He that hath not the Son hath not the Father."

Being present at a funeral in the then village of Le Sueur, Minn., I wondered whether the chaplain, a minister from Minneapolis, would use the ritual prayer, or pray ex tempore. He chose the latter. But in the course of his prayer, he had evidently forgotten that he was not now praying as a Christian, but as a Freemason chaplain, and almost uttered the forever adorable name of the Redeemer; but noticing his Masonic blunder, he formed another sentence, and succeeded to get through with his prayer without pronouncing the name of Christ.

How a Christian and a Christian minister can enjoy sweet communion with God, while thus studiously denying the Son of God, is a complete mystery; unless we may suppose that they do not give the subject any calm and serious thought. Peter's denial of his Master cannot be compared with Masonic denial of Him who died for the race. The former was the result of sudden fear of man and of death, while the latter is the result of study, premeditation, intention, and hence is wicked, to a far greater degree.

That there are so many otherwise sincere Christians and ministers of the Lord Jesus Christ in the Christ-denying institution of Masonry gives us heartfelt pain. And were the thought impossible, that they have not with Christian earnestness considered the inconsistency, it would be likewise impossible to believe them true Christians in any sense. Can any one believe it possible that a man should see definitely and clearly that he is wilfully and intentionally denying Christ and yet claim to be a Christian? As a member and minister of the Methodist Episcopal church, I am aware that at present the church cannot make this a test question for membership, as it would involve a dissolution of the church. So far as her German membership is concerned, they are almost, if not quite, a unit, against Freemasonry and Odd-fellowship. We hope that the main body of the M. E. church will before long see the positive inconsistency of acknowledging allegiance to a system which makes it a study to deny the Son of God. Yours in the Lord, WM. PAGENHART.

PITH AND POINT.

THE WORK FOR NEW ENGLAND.

I was sorry that the meeting at Ware had to be given up, but from Bro. Stoddard's report it seemed to be the best thing that could be done under the circumstances. I believe that now we have him in the field our cause will be advanced most speedily as well as most surely by his bending all his energies to increase the Cynosure list in New England. This will enlarge our list of friends and helpers so that we can hold more successful conventions by and by. Five thousand subscribers for New England seems a large number, but everything is possible when faith and works go together.—E. E. FLAGG.

JUDGE HARRINGTON OF VERMONT.

Judge Harrington, whom the Cynosure speaks of in a letter from Mrs. Kellogg, requiring a bill of sale from the Almighty, before he would release a slave from the court, was a Royal Arch Mason. He was uncle to me by marriage. He married my father's sister. My father was a Freemason. He lived in Vermont at that time, but sold out and emigrated to the western part of the State of New York. Soon after my father got settled Judge Harrington came to our house, and he made the sign of distress to my father, and he had to journey one hundred miles to settle debts to relieve the judge.—O. C. M. BATES.

AN ILLUSTRATION FROM MYTHOLOGY.

The Greeks had a fable concerning the islands of the Sirens. They located it near the southwestern coast of Italy. There were two or three female musicians upon it, whose strains enchanted all who came by, and when allured to land were at once made victims. When Ulysses went by he filled the ears of his argonauts with wax and lashed himself to the mast. He heard the music and wished to land, but could not. The rest heard not and so passed on. When Orpheus went by, the music of whose lyre enchanted not only beasts but rocks and trees, he produced so much better music than the sirens, that no one desired to land. They had better music on board. Ulysses is the moralist lashed to the post of duty by the thongs of a strong resolution. He hears the music of worldly temptation and wants to yield, but his resolution holds him. Orpheus is the Christian with better music in his soul. The love of Christ constraineth him. The first has a name to live, while he is dead. The second has Christ formed in his heart, the hope of glory. "For me to live is Christ."—J. M. F.

MASONRY WANTED TO SETTLE THE REBELLION.

A converted Jew and missionary in New York city, who was a Mason, while staying with us for a few days some sixteen years ago or thereabouts during his vacation, saw the Cynosure and was excited that so good an institution should be opposed. Wife asked him to send some of the old Masonic works to her; she wanted to learn about the lodge. In the package he sent by express was a pamphlet by the Grand Master of New York who lived in Syracuse, declining an invitation to attend a meeting of all the Grand Masters and Past Grand Masters of all the States on the 16th of October, 1861, to settle the rebellion. They were to meet at Louisville, Kentucky. In that letter he claimed Albert Pike said Masonry should not interfere with his duties to his country and he had conferred with the Grand Lodge of the State, and corresponded with other Grand Lodges and with Secretary Seward. I have often thought his influence may have stopped the meeting and saved our government.—H. BALDRIDGE.

VERILY THEY HAVE THEIR REWARD.

An epitaph in our cemetery reads: "A devoted Mason. He was first Worshipful Master of lodge No. — in Jonesville, first H. P. of the Chapter, and first T. I. M. of the Council, which office he held when he died." Best that could be said of him, perhaps, for he was a rumseller in his day. A son of his, a Royal Arch, says there is no Jesus Christ in Masonry, or in the first seven degrees. This son has quit drinking years ago, quit using tobacco and quit swearing, is an Episcopalian, sixty-five more or less years of age. Mr. Blain of Grand Rapids, this State, G. O. Templar, says four-fifths if not five-sixths of the Good Templars who are voters vote for prohibition.—R. D. NICHOLS.

NO MASON OATHS NEEDED TO GIVE COMFORT ON A DEATH BED.

A brother, writing of a friend who has been a subscriber but is now unable to read, and is fast sinking under a fatal disease, says: "At his death there will be no arrearages in lodge dues, as no allegiance was ever formed; and yet he is surrounded with kind friends and physicians, doing all in their power to alleviate his sufferings in this his last trial of faith."—A. C. S.

OBITUARY.

MARY F. MCCONNELL was born in the village of Franklin, Harrison Co., Ohio, June 26th, 1857, and died at Seybert, Dade Co., Mo., July 19th, 1890.

At a very early age she became deeply concerned in regard to her eternal interests. When between eight and nine years of age, during a protracted meeting, with streaming eyes and throbbing heart she came to the writer and convulsively exclaimed: "Father, what is it to get religion?" The subject being explained to her, I verily believe that she did then and there receive the blessed Saviour. Shortly after she united with the Wesleyan Methodist church in Deersville, O. In 1866 she with her parents emigrated to Warren Co., Iowa. Financially, the remove proved unfortunate; whereupon, after residing there one year, southwest Missouri was sought for a home. Here society, and surroundings in general, morally speaking, were far inferior to any ever enjoyed hitherto by the deceased. To remedy as far as possible this evil, we adopted and carried on for years the habit of holding weekly on each Sabbath prayer and testimony meetings within our own individual family. These religious interviews proved a great blessing to us. But notwithstanding all our caution and pains to conserve the spiritual interests of those committed to our trust, such was the effect of the unhallowed influence by which we found ourselves surrounded that our dear children to a great extent became careless and indifferent in regard to their eternal welfare; so much so that evidently the life and power of vital godliness were to a great degree forfeited. Thus things went on until womanhood is reached and the subject of this memoir is a very fair scholar and quite an efficient teacher.

In February, 1878, she became united with Mr. J. J. McConnell in holy wedlock. Things having assumed a new phase with her now, she endeavored to renew publicly her covenant with her God, and live truly a religious life. Among the many duties to which she felt herself now called was that of the erection (her husband being a non-professor) of the family altar. This tried her sorely. I rejoice, however, to record that grace proved victorious, and even here she went forward. Praise the Lord! But the adversary of her soul who "as a roaring lion ever walketh about seeking whom he may devour," leaving no chance, unimproved whereby he can render miserable, and if possible destroy, any and all who will live godly in Christ Jesus, taking advantage of her former unfaithfulness and present weakness, suggests to her that all her religious experience in early life was a delusion. It really appeared for a season that the powers of darkness had her at their control. But praise the Lord most high, though "sorrow may endure for a night, joy cometh in the morning." So in this instance. The blessed Jesus was no idle spectator as to what his feeble follower was suffering at the hand of the enemy. And thus it was on that memorable Sabbath, June 29th, 1890, that the subject of this obituary was entirely relieved from the hands of all her enemies. And calling her weeping friends to her bedside as calmly as the summer evening's breeze, yet very decidedly informed us that victory had come. And though she was going to die, yet it was to meet her dear Redeemer with great joy. In a short time she passed from earth away, in the triumphs of the Christian faith.

She was the mother of six children—three sons and as many daughters, the youngest of whom preceded her a few days to the spirit land. It ought to be stated that upon her marriage she united with the Cumberland Presbyterian church, within whose pale she remained until death. Oh, that her imperfections may be avoided, her virtues (which were many) imitated; so that finally, by God's grace, a reunion with former loved ones may be effected in that peaceful clime "where the inhabitants never say, I am sick."

J. W. THOMPSON.

Seybert, Mo.

SECRET SOCIETIES CONDEMNED.

BY GREAT MEN IN THE STATE.

George Washington (to Gov Trumbull): "Masonry is a benevolent institution, which may be employed for the best or worst purposes."

Edward Everett: "A secret society so widely diffused and connected as this puts a vast power, capable of the most dangerous abuse, into hands irresponsible to the public."

Richard Rush: Hooker, personifying law, eloquently exclaims, "her seat is the bosom of God, her voice the harmony of the world; everything on earth does her homage, the highest is not beyond her control, the least as claiming her protection." Masonry has overset this primordial system. She has dethroned this image of God upon earth. To reinstate it over so insolent a victor, we must have a political organization. There is no other way of assaulting, there is no other hope of vanquishing, there need be no other dream of humbling such a foe. It fights with desperation.

Wendell Phillips: "History shows them perverting justice, stopping at no crime to protect and conceal their mummeries; controlling politics for selfish and personal ends, and interfering with great danger in national emergencies. Every good citizen should make war on all secret societies, and give himself no rest until they are forbidden by law and rooted out of existence."

John Hancock: "I am opposed to all secret associations."

James Madison: "From the number and character of those who now support the charges against Masonry, I cannot doubt that it is at least susceptible of abuse, outweighing any advantages promised by its patrons."

General U. S. Grant: "All secret, oath-bound political parties are dangerous to any nation, no matter how pure or how patriotic the motives and principles which first bring them together."

Myron Holley of New York:—"Such a rebellion Freemasonry has raised. It has violated the dearest rights of nature, and the most sacred enactments of our laws, and this in a spirit manifestly treasonable, for it has done this in pursuance of solemn, deliberate and voluntary obligations to a foreign government,—I mean its own—a government far more alien to that which claims our allegiance than any which has ever afflicted mankind."

James G. Birney, candidate of the Liberty party, for President, was a Freemason, "but never entered a lodge after he joined the church, and, as his sons grew up, he cautioned them against joining any secret order."—Gen. Wm. Birney.

James Madison: "From the number and character of those who now support the charges against Masonry, I cannot doubt that it is at least susceptible of abuse, outweighing any advantages promised by its patrons."

Daniel Webster: "All secret associations, the members of which take upon themselves extraordinary obligations to one another, and are bound together by secret oaths, are naturally sources of jealousy and just alarm to others; are especially unfavorable to harmony and mutual confidence among men living together under popular institutions, and are dangerous to the general cause of civil liberty and just government. Under the influence of this conviction I heartily approved the law, lately enacted in the State of which I am a citizen, for abolishing all such oaths and obligations."

Gen. Henry Sewall, a companion of Washington:—"I was initiated an Entered Apprentice to the Masonic rites in October, 1777, at Albany, soon after the capture of Burgoyne, being then an officer in the American army. . . . I was led by the influence of this "perfect rule of faith and practice," during the year 1784, to view speculative Masonry in a shape still more deformed. Its charity appeared to be selfishness, because restricted to its own members; its religion deism because entirely devoid of the Gospel. Its history appeared fabulous; its claims to antiquity unsustainable; its titles fulsome; its rites barbarous and absurd; its oaths extra-judicial, unlawfully imposed and blindly taken, and the penal sanctions annexed, horrid and impious."

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 20 cents per pound:

1. Historical Sketch—National Christian Association.
3. Address to American Pastors.
4. Freemasonry in the Family.
5. President C. G. Finney on the duty of Christians towards the Lodge.
7. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
8. Modern Heathenism.
9. Ministers at Rival Altars.
12. Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodge.
15. Secrecy and Sin.
16. Selling Dead Horses.
17. History of Masonry.
18. Despotism Character of Freemasonry.
19. Freemasonry, a Christ-excluding Religion.
22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.
28. Nathaniel Colver, D.D., on Masonry.
33. Hon. Wm. H. Seward on Secret Societies.
37. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).
39. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?
44. D. L. Moody on Secret Societies.
45. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?
49. John Quincy Adams on the duty of American Voters.
- Chapters in American Politics.
- Masonry vs. Prohibition.
- Decline of the G. A. R.
- Christianity and Odd-fellowship. Part 1, 4 pages; part 2, 4 pages.

The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—20 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

NEW ENGLAND DEPARTMENT.—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent, No. 309, Tremont St., Boston.

WASHINGTON DEPARTMENT.—W. B. Stoddard, Agent, No. 215, 4½ St., Washington, D. C.

WESTERN DEPARTMENT.—Rev. C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Du Page Co., Ill.

PACIFIC DEPARTMENT.—Rev. M. H. Nichols, 712½ Clementina St., San Francisco, Cal.

COLLEGE AGENT, Rev. S. F. Porter, Cynosure office.

STATE AGENTS.

- Minnesota, E. Hanson, Minneapolis.
- New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimball, New Market.
- Pennsylvania, Rev. J. T. Michael, 2942 Westmont Street, Philadelphia.
- Alabama, Rev. G. M. Elliott, Selma.

OTHER LECTURERS.

- C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
- Rev. H. H. Hinman, Berea, Ky.
- Nathan Callender, Montdale, Pa.
- J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa.
- T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
- E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
- H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.
- J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
- A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
- J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
- W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
- J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.
- Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.
- J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
- Rev. E. Mathews, Long Island City, N. Y.
- E. Barnetson, Haskinsville, N. Y.
- Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
- D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
- A. W. Parry, Annawan, Ill.

FINNEY ON MASONRY.

The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75c; per dozen $7.50. Paper cover 55c; per dozen $5.50. No Christian's library is complete without it. Send for a copy in cloth and get a catalogue of books and tracts sold by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO.

THE N. C. A. BUILDING
(The gift of Philo Carpenter.)

—AND OFFICE OF—
The Christian Cynosure,
221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO
The National Christian Association

PRESIDENT—Bishop Milton Wright, Dayton, O.

VICE PRESIDENT—Rev. Geo. R. Milton, Elgin, Ill.

COR. SEC'Y and TREASURER—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SECRETARY—Rev. E. R. Worrell, Washington Heights, Ill.

DIRECTORS—T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, John Gardner, J. M. Hitchcock, Jerome Howe, G. R. Milton, Wm. Pinkney, J. P. Richards, Alexander Thomson, E. Whipple, E. R. Worrell.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS.

NEW ENGLAND.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic Conn.; Sec'y, Miss E. E. Flagg, Wellesley, Mass.; Treas., Z. Graves Harris, Mass.

ALABAMA.—Pres., Prof. Pickens; Sec., G. M. Elliott; Treas., Rev. C. B. Curtis; all of Selma.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., Rev. G. R. Milton, Elgin; Sec., A. H. Hiatt, Jr., Wheaton; Treas., Ezra A. Cook, Chicago.

INDIANA.—Pres., William H. Figg, Reno; Sec., S. L. Cook, Albion; Treas., Benjamin Ulsh, Silver Lake.

IOWA.—Cor. Sec., C. D. Trumbull, Morning Sun; Rec. Sec., W. L. Enlow, Birmingham; Treas., Wm. Crawford, Washington.

KANSAS.—Pres., J. S. T. Milligan, Denison; Sec., S. Hart, Leocompton; Treas., J. A. Torrence, Denison.

MAINE.—Pres., Isaac Jackson, Harrison; Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W. Goddard, West Sidney.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., S. B. Sjolom, Fergus Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul; Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., B. F. Miller, Eagleville; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec., A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

NEBRASKA.—Pres., S. Austin, Fairmount; Cor. Sec., W. Spooner, Kearney; Treas., J. C. Fye.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., A. A. Hoyt, Littleton; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., Isaac Hyatt, Gilford Village.

NEW YORK.—Pres., Prof. A. R. Dodd Houghton; Sec., Rev. W. A. Haslett, Belmont; Treas., P. D. Miller, Newfane.

OHIO.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Perry; Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Seneca; Cor. Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Seneca.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., Nathan Callender, Montdale; Cor. Sec., E. J. Chalfant York; Treas., J. C. Young, Custer City.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. W. Wood Baraboo; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie.

HAVE YOU EXAMINED

The list of Books and Tracts for sale by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. Look it over carefully and see if there is not something you want for yourself or for your friend. Send for full catalogue to 221 W. MADISON STREET, CHICAGO.

The Christian Cynosure.

J. BLANCHARD, EDITOR.

HENRY L. KELLOGG, ASSOCIATE EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 11, 1890.

THE LAST NUMBER.

Volume XXII closes with this issue, and we begin next week to send copies of the Cynosure to all the college reading-rooms where it will be accepted. At the request of college officers who heard the discussion of college secret societies at the National Educational Association in St. Paul last summer, that discussion will be continued in our columns. Already we have in hand or promised such a number of contributions on this subject, and of such a character, that we are able to give assurance of a review of the college fraternity question of great interest and profit to students and educators. We are securing arguments and opinions from every point of view on this question, and invite all who are interested in these fraternities, pro or con, to contribute to the discussion.

Until January we are providing for a portrait every week, either of some educator or some prominent participant in the discussion.

We should pray for angel ministries. They are promised to, but not pressed upon us. Of the angels, who from the beginning of the Bible to the end, come out of their skyey abodes to mingle in and manage human affairs, the greatest Apostle says, "Are they not all ministering spirits, sent forth to minister for them who shall be heirs of salvation," Heb. 1: 14. And of the holy dead departed from us the Evangelist says, "They are equal to the angels," and so we may suppose, share their employments. And as Moses and Elias, long after their departure, came back to visit earth and converse about the redemption of the people whom they loved and toiled for, so our loved ones departed, though invisible, may be ministering for us. Pray for the ministry of angels.

RELATION OF MISSION BOARDS TO FUNDAMENTAL REFORMS.

We have lately seen and corresponded with the secretaries of Congregational and Baptist Home Mission Boards, which employ three thousand and ninety-four ministers and teachers; and receive and pay out over a million and a half dollars in their support. Our object in seeking these conferences has been to induce the managers of these societies to send Joseph Cook's national speech on "Disloyal Secret Oaths" to each of their three thousand employees. If these great home societies will unite in sending Mr. Cook's speech, or some other approved tract on the secret lodge system to all of their missionaries, the givers as well as the receivers of their funds will take this action as a moral divorce of American Christianity from the secret lodge system and set a beacon-light on every one of their churches and school-buildings, and, indeed, on every hill-top where their missions are planted, illuminating the whole American horizon with a clear, discriminating light separating Christ's open Gospel from Satan's "unfruitful works of darkness," which are now crippling, emasculating, and darkening everything American.

Our interviews with the secretaries of these four home societies have been every way agreeable and hopeful. And we may continue, by correspondence, what our interviews have begun. But the Cynosure is our "house-top," from which Christ directed his disciples to proclaim their messages, and we have concluded to bring this subject, in print, before the Christian public, as an economy of labor; and so that the mass of our church-members, as well as their mission boards, may give it their thoughtful and prayerful consideration.

One of the most popular of the home societies, the American Missionary Association, has officially put itself on record against the lodge; and its monthly organ in its last issue reiterates the testimony and advice of former years against secret societies. But while its sister boards are silent or non-committal, its testimony is weakened, and the lodges are "snaking" their way into its churches. Whereas, if all the home offices will unite in sending Mr. Cook's speech to their missionaries, their united testimony will be respected even by those members of lodges who are in the churches. They are not prepared to give up Christianity; and the missions of a country are its popular religion.

The secretaries consulted, thus far, are all of them individually opposed to the secret lodges. But their argument against issuing the tract is:

1. It is "traveling out of their record," doing what they are not employed and set to do.
2. Opinion is divided, even among churches, and sending out such a tract would endanger their funds.
3. It would be a perversion of the funds to apply them to objects, though laudable and Christian, for which they are not given; as, for instance, to promote revivals of religion.

THE ARGUMENTS

in favor of issuing, or sending out a tract furnished them without expense, are these:

1. The silence of a mission board gives its consent to lodgery, while some of its missionaries are Masons.
2. Their silence gives the force of their example to keep their missionaries silent concerning an un-Christian institution.
3. The fear that sending an anti-secret tract to their missionaries would injure their funds, is a confession that the board is silenced by the lodge.
4. While, perhaps, a board would do wrong to print, pay for, or write tracts on disputed questions of reform, as a Gospel-spreading body, it is bound to keep its garments pure; which they are not, while it receives without question and supports some Masons as pastors or agents.
5. What was innocent years ago, while the country was ignorant on the subject, is no longer innocent now the issue is made.

"Once to every man and nation comes the moment to decide, In the strife of Truth with falsehood for the good or evil side:

Some great cause, God's new Messiah, offers each the bloom or blight, Parts the goats upon the left hand and the sheep upon the right."

Slavery long lay silent like a snake beneath a log-heap; but the Abolitionists rolled off the logs, and then the mission boards had to look the serpent in the face. So now with the lodge. It already hisses, and rolls its spangled circles along our streets: and the time has come to

"Let the Hero born of woman crush the serpent with his heel."

No man, except he be a disciple of Cain, can scan the death of Dr. Cronin and not see, in the words of the good Dr. Norris of Iowa, that the lodge includes in its nature the spirit of murder and every crime this side. And as Joseph Cook's tract is a truly Christian and American document, if our home boards shall consent to receive it, furnished them without expense, and send it to their missionaries, few years will elapse before our churches will pour out funds for the overthrow of American idolatry, as our States furnished bounty-money for the overthrow of American slavery! And the American Board will soon follow their example; and its missions feel the thrill, when its missionaries learn to explain to their hearers that "the things which the Gentiles sacrifice, they sacrifice to devils."

IS WALDENSTROM A HERETIC?

The Lutheran Standard of Columbus, Ohio, (Aug. 30th ult.) has an editorial which we regret to see in so good a paper as the Standard is. The Cynosure has expressed its sorrow that, in his rapid transit through the United States, Dr. Waldenstrom was deceived by Robert G. Ingersoll. But we equally regret to read such sentiments as these:

"Our Lutheran papers warned against the reception of this man (Waldenstrom) as he has been known to be brimfull of heresies. These warnings were interpreted as coming from a desire to antagonize a race who had opposed the dead orthodoxy of the Lutheran State church of Sweden and had revived a living Christianity within its bounds. While it must be acknowledged that the Lutheran State churches of Northern Europe are by no means what they ought to be and often have only the form and name and not the substance and faith of the church of the Reformation, yet to substitute such vagaries and false teachings as Waldenstrom's is to make bad even worse."

Dr. Waldenstrom is not a heretic. Originally, a member and a priest in the Lutheran State church, he was so soundly converted to Christ that he lost his situation as a teacher, and resigned his office as a priest in a church, many of whose members (among whom are the king, count, and court bishops), gave no evidence of saving faith; yet relied on the atonement of Christ to pay the debt to the Father's justice, while they continue in their sins. In the controversy to which this resignation led and to justify his separation from such a church, Waldenstrom attacks the ground they stand on. He insists that the Father and Son are one in the atonement; that there is no atonement for a man deliberately continuing to sin; that the Father needed no conciliation; that he gave his Son, and the Son gave himself to make it governmentally possible that God should be "just and justify" penitent believing sinners. He (Waldenstrom) insists, over and again, that "it was not possible for God to save us without the work of Christ;" and that "the blood of Christ is shed for the remission of sins." This is "vicarious atonement" enough. It holds that there are not two only but three parties in the atonement, viz., God, the sinner, and the rational universe; that the Father loved the world, and gave his Son "while we were yet sinners," and loved his Son and would have given him "more than twelve legions of angels," if he asked them, to save him from the cross. But he did not ask them because he and the Father are one. And pardoning sinners without atonement would have weakened or destroyed the stability of government over mind, and wrecked the universe. All that Waldenstrom affirms is that the Father was, and is, as merciful and disposed to pardon as the Son: and that is true. And though the subject is a fathomless mystery, the proposition is understandable and true.

Let us hope our Scandinavian brethren will not follow our American churches in the beaten track of splitting hairs of doctrine, and so engross the finest class of minds among our population that the lodge, which impiously proposes to save men without Christ, or the Holy Ghost or repentance or faith, may destroy our churches and sink our country.

THE INDIANAPOLIS MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.

Two words tell the story of the conference which opened last week Wednesday evening, in the Second Presbyterian church of Indianapolis, —consecration and ENTHUSIASM. It was a gathering after the spirit of the early church, when after fasting and prayer one and another was called out of the Holy Spirit and sent to the nations about, before missionary societies or salaries were thought of.

This meeting is supplemental to another held in the same city last May. Its leading spirits are young men from Nebraska, Kansas and Minnesota, who are State or district secretaries of the Y. M. C. A. They are among those met by Rev. H. Grattan Guinness a year or more ago, and were led of the Spirit to devote themselves to foreign missions, many proposing to go to the great Soudan region in Africa, where are ninety millions of people among whom no missionary agency has yet been planted. From this number twelve men and women started last May and stopped in Freetown, Sierra Leone, to prepare for a journey to the interior. Already three of the number have fallen victims to African fever. (The report that three others were killed by Mohammedan Arabs is untrue.) This devoted company is augmented by recruits from the missionary training school opened last fall under the charge of Rev. Dr. Mabie in St. Paul, and from the Moody Institute in this city.

The object of the meeting was not to promote the interests of any special agency, or to call attention to any definite field or particular methods of work; but rather to afford an opportunity for all Christians interested in mission work, and especially those who intended going to that work to gather for a few days and seek a deeper consecration by fasting and prayer, to study the Bible, and to consult about the needs of the great fields where yet two-thirds of the world's population sits in darkness. A question ever at the front was, "Shall the generation now upon the face of the earth hear the Gospel?" Among the speakers during the first two days of the conference were James Johnston, M. D., of Jamaica; W. E. Blackstone, of this city; Dr. A. T. Pierson, late of Philadelphia; and Dr. M. M. Parkhurst, long well known among the Methodist ministers of this city, but now of Greencastle, Ind. Their addresses were of an intensely interesting and practical nature; but the experiences of some of the young men who are on their way to mission fields, and of Mr. Ewing of the China Inland Mission, were heard with even more enthusiasm.

A great benefit from this and similar conferences will be to arouse the churches to more consecration and faith. We are manifestly in the early stages of a great missionary era. The men and the money will not be wanting for the great work left us by our blessed Lord. But beside all this, and more than all, the indifferent churches must be aroused so that a great volume of prayer may arise to God for his blessing on the work, that it may be speedily accomplished, and the Gospel be preached among all nations for a witness.

THE LISTS OF NAMES for sample copies of the Cynosure are coming in, and we welcome every one. Let there be multitudes of them—a snow storm of them, out of season for snow but in the very best time for our good work. Remember the one cent investment of a postal card, and put on it all the names possible. Do not forget to pray for each one, that God's truth may in some way be glorified through them all.

—Albert Pike, Sovereign Grand Commander of the Supreme Council of the Sovereign Grand Inspectors General thirty-third degree Scottish Rite, says in his book, "Morals and Dogma," page 819: "The Blue degrees are but the outer court of the Temple. Part of the symbols are displayed there to the initiate, but he is intentionally misled by false interpretations. It is not intended that he shall understand them, but it is intended that he shall imagine that he does understand them. Their true explanation is reserved for the princes of Masonry."

—The "Evangel of Rest" is the poetic and expressive title of a well edited and successful Sabbath observance paper of Colfax, Iowa. The Rev. Charles R. Hunt, secretary of the Sabbath Observance Association of the State of Iowa, is the managing editor of this wide-awake and enterprising sheet. It is full of facts and statistics and possesses "eye-openers" sufficient to become a resurrection trumpet to any who think lightly of the Lord's day. For a year's good reading of current, lively intelligence send $1 to Rev. C. R. Hunt of Colfax, Iowa, and your heart and soul will be filled like a gun shotted for action.

—"THE SECRETARY GENERAL OF THE HOLY EMPIRE" is the title of the scribe of Supreme Council 33 deg., Sovereign Grand Inspectors General, Scotch Rite, Southern Jurisdiction, headquarters on Third Street, Washington City. The treasurer is also styled "Treasurer-General of the Holy Empire." Mackey, who held the first office, says it was named by decree in 1859 when the number of actual members of the Supreme Council was increased from nine to thirty-three. It includes all the United States south of the old slavery line and west of the Missouri river. Albert Pike is its head.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Mr. Gladstone has written to a gentleman, who invited him to visit Canada, that his age and many engagements utterly disable him from crossing the Atlantic, so that Chicago will fail to secure his presence at the fair of 1893.

—Bro. W. B. Stoddard spoke to a grand meeting at Worcester, Mass., last Wednesday evening, and expected to return toward Washington Thursday night, possibly stopping at New York. His invitation to the friends to subscribe for the Cynosure met a warm response and the Worcester list is thereby materially increased.

—Rev. H. H. Hinman attended the missionary conference at Indianapolis, opening Sept. 3, and was probably the oldest delegate present. He has promised to write us an account of the meeting, especially the latter portion, and his estimate of its power and influence from the standpoint of his personal experience in foreign missions.

—Later word from Bro. W. B. Stoddard, written from Washington headquarters, says that the young people of the Lutheran congregation in Baltimore, of which Rev. Stemke is pastor, have requested him to address them Sept. 25. He is also to speak for a Swedish church in Philadelphia on the 21st.

—Rev. Henry M. Bissell, missionary to La Barca, Mexico, has returned to this country after an absence of five years for a short vacation, accompanied by his family. Mrs. Bissell is sister of Mrs. L. N. Statton of Wheaton, and he is brother-in-law of our N. C. A. treasurer, Mr. Phillips. They reached this city last Wednesday and will spend some time at Wheaton. Bro. Bissell was to have addressed a missionary meeting Sabbath evening in the College hall, but an incessant rain allowed the attendance of but few. During their stay in Mexico two young children were buried, but four boys and girls complete the circle of this interesting missionary family.

—The marriage of Miss Mary Irene Stoddard, eldest daughter of our New England secretary, to Mr. J. W. Fifield, of Benton Harbor, Michigan, was a joyful ceremony witnessed by a large company of friends, at the home of Prof. W. H. Fischer, in Wheaton, last Wednesday afternoon. President C. A. Blanchard, assisted by his father, the grandfather of the bride, united these dear young people, whom many prayers and good wishes follow to their first home in Oberlin. Mr. Fifield graduated at Wheaton in 1889 and has since been preaching at Cambridge, Ill., where he has been the means, under God, of greatly strengthening a feeble church. He will study theology at Oberlin.

LECTURES.

Letters are received on business in which the writer is apt to remark that "a lecturer is needed here to stir things up." Have all done what they can to secure a lecturer? In reply to such a remark as quoted above, the friend was told that $15 would pay expenses and salary of a lecturer to do just what he wanted. In a few days a reply came, saying: "I have spoken to a few friends. We are agreed. I will be responsible for the $15, though times are very hard here. We can have the benefit of such work." The N. C. A. will be glad to aid many places in this very practical way. Shall we hear from you, friends? Nine places are now on our list for such engagements. W. I. PHILLIPS, Cor. Sec. N. C. A.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3, 1890.

The anti-lottery bill has been favorably reported to the Senate from the postoffice committee, and Senator Sawyer, chairman of that committee, has given notice that he will call it up and ask for its passage as soon as the Senate disposes of the tariff bill. This is very encouraging, and makes it almost certain that the bill will become a law within the present month. So much interested are the members of the Senate committee in seeing the bill passed at the present session, that it has been reported exactly as it passed the House, although a majority of the committee favored making some changes; but they refrained, fearing that having to go to a conference committee would cause the bill to go over until the next session.

A young man, scarcely more than a boy, from Iowa, is attracting much favorable attention here on account of his unique methods of interesting the attendants, at a series of temperance meetings, in the bad effects of intoxicating liquor upon the human body. He uses "Kellogg's Temperance Charts," and various practical illustrations that are easily comprehended by the feeblest intellects. For instance, he shows a small piece of beefsteak which, after being soaked four hours in whisky, becomes half burned up, showing in a most realistic manner the effect of liquor upon the contents of the human stomach, and to remove any lingering doubts in the minds of his hearers an egg which has been cooked hard by lying a short time in whisky is exhibited. The gentleman's name is J. S. Washburn, and his meetings are successful.

Mrs. Springer, wife of Representative Springer, of Illinois, has long taken a deep interest in the work of the Central Union Mission, of which Mr. E. D. Bailey is the manager, an organization which specially looks after the stray waifs of a great city, and tries to gather them into the fold of the Good Shepherd, therefore it created only a momentary surprise when she led the regular Sabbath afternoon public meeting. She read the twenty-seventh Psalm, commenting upon the beautiful language as she went on, and told many personal reminiscences which had a bearing upon the subject of the Psalm. Mrs. Springer has for many years been prominent in Washington society, and it will be interesting to note the effect of her new departure upon her social friends. It is generally believed that it will make many new friends for the work, and that much good will result therefrom.

Mr. Harrison expects to go to Cresson Springs this week, where the executive office will be for the rest of September, unless some exigency arises making his return here necessary.

Temperance people have been very active of late in their efforts to have the President appoint a temperance man commissioner of the District of Columbia, in place of one of the commissioners whose resignation is in the hands of the President. Mr. Harrison promised the large delegation which called on him that he would carefully consider their very modest request. They did not ask for the appointment of any particular man but only that the man appointed shall be in sympathy with the great cause which they represent. The appointment is to be made this week, and it means a great deal more to the friends of public morality at the national capital than a person not familiar with the system by which the local affairs of the District of Columbia are regulated, can possibly conceive. The commissioners have a wide discretion in the matter of liquor licenses, etc., which makes it highly important that the right kind of man should be appointed, and the good people of Washington look to Mr. Harrison to make no mistake in the selection.

A new temperance paper, the Rechabite Advocate, has made its appearance, and candor compels me to say that it gives more space and attention to a dispute in that order than it does to advancing the good work. The parable of "a house divided against itself" at once occurred to me, as I suppose it has to other readers of the paper. The whole affair is a comment on secret society work in the temperance cause of which many are making careful note.

Senator Plumb's resolution to stop the sale of liquor in the Senate restaurant, has been referred to the committee on rules, and there are reasons for fearing that it will not again be heard from at the present session. Unfortunately some of the Senators seemed to regard the resolution as a reflection upon their personal habits, though why they did so it would be difficult if not impossible to say. Meanwhile the disgrace of selling intoxicating liquors to any and all who care to pay for them, goes on in the Senate end of the Capitol building, in plain view of passers through the corridors. Shame!

NEGROES AND SECRET SOCIETIES.—At the recent meeting of the American Association, in Providence, a colored minister said that secret societies were among the great evils which afflicted the colored race in the South. Memphis has eighty-two of them, and almost all the adults of both sexes are members of one or more of them. He said that they are formidable rivals to the churches and give great facilities to bad men to get power and influence. The annual picnics of these societies are very costly—not less than fifty thousand dollars a year in Memphis—while the money spent by them for the relief of sick members was only two thousand eight hundred dollars. They are the means of bringing the worst and the best into intimacies very hurtful to those who are trying to keep clean. The mystery about them arouses the superstitious fears of the ignorant, as do those of the voodoo and of the Indian medicine man.—Lutheran Standard.

THE HOME.

MY LORD AND MY GOD.

'Twas evening and the doors were shut;
No bar was that to Him
Who came in kingly silence through
The twilight folding dim.
In tones as tender as the dew,
He blessed them—"Peace be unto you."

It was the Master's loving word,
The Master's form they knew,
And nearer to the risen Lord
The glad disciples drew.
What hope was in their hearts that hour!
What glory in their wondrous power!

His eyes in matchless pity dwelt
On one reluctant face,
On one who knew not all the bliss
Of full believing grace.
The soul still fettered fast with doubt
The love of Jesus singled out.

"Behold," he said, "these wounds of mine,
Feel where the nails were driven."
Ah! swift he knew the voice divine;
His heart with love was riven,
And leaped like flame his answering word,
I know thee now, my God, my Lord."

Then soft from Jesus' lips there fell
A thought exceeding sweet;
Let age to age its message tell,
Its tenderness repeat.
"Thou hast believed, for thou hast seen;
Blessed are they who have not seen,

"And yet have trusted." We rejoice,
Dear Lord, and bless thy name;
How sacred was that time, when first
To us that insight came,
And we beheld thee, crucified,
Thy pierced hands—thy riven side.

Yet, seeing not the cross alone,
Our eyes were lifted high;
We knew thee, sitting on thy throne,
We felt thee drawing nigh,
And all our doubts were hushed to peace,
And from their chains we had release.

—Margaret E. Sangster.

IS CHRISTIANITY GAINING?

Joseph Cook being asked if he thought religion was making satisfactory progress, thought for a moment, and then said:

"Yes and no. I believe parts of the world are growing better and parts worse. Most foreign nations are making marvelous progress. The whole world is open to preachers of the Gospel. There is no gate that is not practically unlatched, and hardly a gate that is not wide open to the man with the Bible under his arm. Such conditions were never known before. It seems to me that in the great cities and centers of civilization there is a falling off. Cities are becoming very defiant in their organized form, and especially in the whisky rings and their allies.

"There is no school of infidelity that is intellectual and respectable in our time. The mythical theory put forward about the opening of the century in explanation of the origin of the New Testament, has been thoroughly overthrown, and no longer needs an answer in educated circles. As to the vulgar infidelity of the time, represented by Ingersoll and Bradlaugh, it is by no means abreast of infidel scholarship. It is half chaff and half chaffing, and has less and less influence on the men who love clear thought and who read all sides on every subject. My impression is that the school of agnosticism is the most dangerous form of modern infidelity, but that its chief support is a clique of writers whose homes are in London and who get a wide hearing because of the peculiar facilities they have for reaching the public ear. Prof. Huxley leads this clique, and the little band of London agnostics is driven round and round the hill of London journalism, and seems to be an endless army because some portion of it is always in sight and on the march. But the company is really not a large one. A great majority of the foremost scientific men of Europe are sound Christian theists. The philosophy of Herbert Spencer is a waning moon; but the spiritual theism, represented by the philosophy of Hermann Horte and his successors in Germany, and by ex-President McCosh here in America, is a waxing moon, rising with God behind it. The materialistic forms of the doctrine of evolution have not often been championed by thoroughly educated men within the last decade. If the doctrine of evolution is to be taught at all it must be in a thoroughly theistic form.

"The colleges of the country are under predominant Christian influences. The great universities of Germany, with the exception of three or four, and these are by no means the most prominent, are distinctly Christian in their philosophy and tendencies. Rationalism has ceased to be the fashion in the theological departments of the foremost German universities. The young men are patronizing, in theological departments of these latter universities, the evangelistic in preference to the rationalistic professors in the proportion of ten to one. Lord Bacon was accustomed to say that the best materials for prophecy were the unforced opinions of young men.

"Meanwhile moral reform is making great advances among the English speaking races. The temperance cause, in both its moral and legal aspects, has an exceedingly hopeful outlook in the United States." In spite of the organized opposition of the great wealth belonging to the whisky rings, prohibitory legislation is a rising tide. In twenty-seven States and Territories absolute scientific temperance education is now given in the elementary schools, including total abstinence from alcoholics and narcotics."

THE BRAHMO SOMAJ AND CHRIST.

The Missionary Review is doubtless one of the most reliable magazines published. Hence a blunder in its column becomes the more conspicuous. The editor of its international department says, in the June number, that "The Brahmo movement is a sort of a Lutheran reformation in the community." If that be true, we have read the "History of the Great Reformation" in vain, and have looked at India through green goggles for eighteen years.

I knew Babu Keshab Chunder Sen, the great Brahmo leader, have visited him in his house, heard him preach, and read the Brahmo papers for years.

George Bowen, the missionary and editor of the Bombay Guardian, always contended that Brahmoism, so far from being a stepping-stone to Christianity, was a most effectual device to keep men away from Christ. Almost every thoughtful Christian in India is of the same opinion. If Luther, in bringing the Bible to the front, had also preached with it the equally divine authority of the bloody Koran, the filthy Puranas, and a dozen or two other "sacred" heathen books, and had invented a jargon of silly ceremonies, to match the ridiculous jumble of teachings,—then the guess of the Review brother would have been a little nearer the mark.

See the following specimen of Brahmo teachings in their paper, the New Dispensation:

	Subject of Study.	Service.	Gifts.
Monday,	Christ.	Husband.	Gold.
Tuesday,	Buddha.	Parents.	Silver.
Wednesday,	Chaitanya.	Children.	Copper.
Thursday,	Mahomet.	Brothers and Sisters.	Cloth.
Friday,	Nanak.	Servants.	Rice.
Saturday,	Hara Gouri.	Poor.	Medicine.
Sunday,	Jagnabalka & Maltreyi.	Missionaries.	Wisdom.
Daily—Solitary meditation, Keeping the Sanctuary clean. Prayer and Communion,—Husband and wife together."

We are told that ancient Christians refused to allow the heathen to put Christ in their Pantheon. But when modern heathen do that very thing, some Christians say it is "a sort of Lutheran Reformation," the blasphemies of Mahomedanism are called "middle ground toward Christianity," the atheistic mythology of Buddhism is styled the "Light of Asia," and what God plainly calls "the Mother of Harlots and Abominations of the Earth," his people presume to call a "Christian Church." "Jesus wept."—W. J. Gladwin in Oriental Evangelist.

I do not know whether an account of how Hudson Taylor was practically convinced of non-resisting principles has ever been published. He was sitting on the bank of a river in China awaiting a ferry-man he had called from the other side. A Chinaman came and sat beside him, and directly hit him a blow on the head that knocked him over and for a moment stunned him; recovering himself, he was about to return the blow and knock the Chinaman into some very soft mud which was below him, and which he saw would entirely spoil his elegant silk suit, when, as he lifted his arm, the Scripture, "Resist not evil," came into his mind, and he forebore. The ferryman came, but refused the Chinaman a passage, but finding he wanted to go out to a vessel that was lying in the river, Hudson Taylor prevailed on him to take him also. The Chinaman appreciating this kindness, began talking with Hudson Taylor, and when he told him he was an Englishman, the Chinaman said, "No; you are not, or you would have knocked me down." Hudson Taylor then told him why he did not do so, and it ended in the Chinaman being converted to Christianity.—Ex.

THE CHINESE KITCHEN GOD.

This god has, perhaps, more influence than any other in China, and there is not a house, rich or poor, where this picture is not pasted up over the fire-place and worshipped by the whole family by prayers and sacrifices. One of the accounts of him tells us that in the beginning of the world everything was eaten raw, because no one had yet discovered fire. At last an emperor arose who felt sure there must be such a thing, and ordered one of his officers, Tan Tsz Kwo, to invent some means of producing it. Tan Tsz, noticing smoke ascending from some wood, took two pieces, and rubbing them briskly together, soon brought fire. Now the people so relished cooked food that they were ready to worship the wise Tan Tsz Kwo as a god. The emperor, too, deified or made a god of him, and made him the ruler of all family affairs.

Another story is, that when all things in heaven and earth were made, one god was called Tsaon Wong, that is, "king of the fire-place." He is the younger brother of the supreme ruler over all things. His duty is to watch over the family, especially the women and girls, rewarding the good and punishing the bad. If the women are lazy about caring for their house and children, if they tell lies and scold, neglect their husbands or secretly eat the nice things which they ought to give to them, they will surely be reported by Tsaon Wong, to the god of all things, and suffer severe punishment. They will be sick, their mothers-in-law will scold, their children will cry and be wakeful at night, their chimneys will smoke, and things will be uncomfortable generally. But the story of this god which is commonly told among the people is not written in the books. It is said that in the old times one of the gods came down to earth and was known as Chang. He was very rich and lived in the province of Honan. His wife, Ting Heang, was a good woman; but she praised Mr. Chang, perhaps more than was good for him, when he did right, and scolded him soundly when he did wrong. You may imagine they did not always live very peacefully, and at last Mr. Chang determined to send off Ting Heang and marry his beautiful cousin Hi Tang.

Ting Heang was a good, economical woman, and soon became rich, while Mr. Chang became a beggar, as he richly deserved. As he went from door to door to beg, he came one day to the house of his former wife, who knew him at once. When he discovered of whom he was begging he was so ashamed that he threw himself into the fire and disappeared in a twinkling. At the same moment some one passing saw him come out of the top of the chimney and ascend into heaven. When the affair was made known to the emperor he decided that Mr. Chang should be honored as the god of fire.

There are three principal times for the worship of this god. The first is his birthday, which is on the third of the eighth month. Early in the morning each family burns paper money and incense, and spreads wine and soup before the god. Then each person prostrates himself four times before him, praying aloud that he will accept the offerings. The second time for his worship is on the twenty-third of the twelfth month, just seven days before the new year, when they say he ascends to heaven to report to his elder brother, who is the supreme ruler of all things, all that has happened during the year, and gets his orders for the year to come. On this day, besides the paper money, incense, soup and wine, he receives sweetmeats, cakes and fruit. The idea of this is that he will be pleased with the nice things, and that his mouth will have a sweet taste, so he will naturally speak sweet, pleasant words about them to his elder brother. Many offer a rabbit also, that he may ride swiftly to heaven. He must be a small god!

When the offerings are all spread out they tear down the old picture of Tsaon Wong from the fireplace and burn it, so starting him on his flight. As it burns they prostrate themselves and repeat in a sort of rhyme such a prayer as this:

"Our Tsaon Wong to-night for heaven must start;
Come eat of our offerings before you depart.
Here are cakes, dates and pears, all good, as you know,
And a handful of candy to eat as you go.
And when you get there and report for the year,
Please say to your brother we're good people here;
Don't mention our bad deeds, no never a tittle,
But tell him our good ones, make much out of little.
Say we're honest and upright, and for us entreat
Much peace and good fortune, with plenty to eat.
Let sickness and poverty never come near,
Make us happy and prosperous all through the year;
If blessings like these you bring with you back,
You and we will enjoy them, of good have no lack.
And now up the chimney quick haste you away;
We'll look for you back on the thirtieth day."

—Children's Work for Children.

IN THE FIRELIGHT.

The fire upon the hearth is low,
And there is stillness everywhere;
Like troubled spirits, here and there
The firelight shadows fluttering go.
And as the shadows round me creep,
A childish treble breaks the gloom,
And softly from a further room
Comes, "Now I lay me down to sleep."

And, somehow, with that little prayer
And that sweet treble in my ears,
My thought goes back to distant years
And lingers with a dear one there;
And as I hear the child's amen,
My mother's faith comes back to me;
Crouched at her side I seem to be,
And mother holds my hands again.

Oh, for an hour in that dear place—
Oh, for the peace of that dear time,
Oh, for that childish trust sublime,
Oh, for a glimpse of mother's face!
Yet, as the shadows round me creep,
I do not seem to be alone—
Sweet magic of that treble tone,
And "Now I lay me down to sleep!"

—Eugene Field.

BOYS AND GIRLS IN SOUTH CHINA.

South China swarms with boys and girls, crowds of them in the cities, flocks of them in the country. They are slant-eyed. They are straight-haired. Babies have their heads clean-shaven when they are three months old. Girls, so long as they are little girls, have part of the head shaven from time to time. Every man in China must wear a cue. This is ordained by law. So every boy who is a candidate for manhood gets his head shaven, leaving a bunch at the crown from which he grows his cue.

Boys and girls, men and women, old and young, all dress in blue. On special occasions girls wear brilliant red dresses. And rich city boys march out in suits of green and yellow and blue silk. But nearly everybody's every-day dress is blue cotton. A boy can get a new suit for fifty cents, often less. The city boy wears a black cap with a red knob. The country boy wears a blue rag in the shape of a turban, or a big bamboo hat, alike a screen from the sun and a shelter from the rain.

The girls never have to worry about the styles. Their dresses are always made after the same pattern. And they wear no hats. So who cares whether hats are high-crowned or low, broad or narrow-brimmed?

Boys go to school, but by no means a majority of them. Thousands grow up who cannot read a line nor write a character. Girls never go to school. A man would be afraid to marry a young woman who could read. They say it is very unlucky. They say a man who marries such a young woman won't live long.

The boy who does go to school makes a business of it. He starts at his desk at seven in the morning. At nine he goes home for his breakfast. He gets back by ten. He studies till one.

Then home for his dinner, and back to school until five or six o'clock. He has no time, you see, for spinning tops or playing marbles or baseball, or hide-and-go-seek. The result is, he is an old-mannish boy. "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy."

At school young John Chinaman studies aloud. Last year I roomed over a Chinese school at Changchiu for three months. What a volume of ear-piercing Chinese eloquence would ascend from the room below at times! A Chinese school would be a capital training-ground for the rising generation of prospective stump-speakers.

What does all this noise mean? These boys are trying to hammer into their memories from 2,000 to 3,000 Chinese characters. When they get tired of repeating them and shouting them, they sit down and write them. This makes up the days' work at school. In our mission school we have added geography and Bible instruction.

Chinese boys and girls have few games. They have no picnics, no sleigh rides, no concerts. Their entertainments consist of vulgar theatrical performances and silly Punch-and-Judy shows. There are no parks to visit. There are no beautiful buildings to see. There are no attractive books or pictures in their homes. Their homes are dark and dirty. They worship filthy, grimy dust-covered idols. They hear vile language from father and mother. Girls are constantly maltreated. Boys, too, often are left to run wild, only to grow up gamblers and opium-smokers, a sorrow to their parents and a disgrace to themselves.

They know of no Bible and its attractive stories. They know of no Christ, the Friend of children and the Guide of youth. Boys and girls in the homeland, do you not sympathize with them? And will you not pray and work and give for them—A Missionary at Amoy, in the Intelligencer.

TEMPERANCE.

WHITE HOUSE TEMPERANCE.

Mrs. Lydia H. Tilton, Secretary of the Non-Partisan W. C. T. U., District of Columbia, having been desired to give positive information concerning the wine-drinking customs at the White House, replies as follows:

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—I think the voters and the mothers, sisters and wives of the voters have a right to ask about the habits and official customs of men who are exalted by the suffrages of the people. It is true that wine has been furnished at state dinners by the present administration and by every other, except during the four notable years when Ohio's son and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Hayes, gave the world the beautiful picture of pure home courtesy. It is also true that very few official homes during this administration furnish wines, and even when it is furnished, the example of the Harrisons, Wanamakers, Windoms, Millers, Proctors, Hustons, Hepburns, Dorchesteres, Fosters, Morgans, and many others has a restraining influence. Scarcely any of the men selected by President Harrison as his advisers ever take wine. Blaine is now a total abstainer. President Harrison does not take wine at any of the receptions, even when only gentlemen are present, and Mrs. Harrison never, under any circumstances, anywhere takes wine.

The wife of a leading Senator says: "Never since the days of Mrs. Hayes has so little wine been taken at public official receptions in Washington as during the present administration."

The only inaugural ball without wine was the one given to President Harrison, and the chairman of the inaugural committee told me that he "consulted the President elect and followed his wishes," and he added: "Wines and liquors were absolutely prohibited either to be sold or given away" anywhere about the premises.

A few figures may show you a contrast: At the ball given to President Cleveland the champagne bill was $3,500. I do not remember the bills for other liquors, but they were immense.

The stories about the wine at the last inaugural ball grew out of the fact that the caterer furnished among the deserts a water-ice flavored with some kind of liquor and called Roman punch.

Now I have the best of authority for everything I have written, and think the people ought to know the facts. Yours, etc.,

LYDIA H. TILTON.

DRINKING A FARM.

My homeless friend with the chromatic nose, while you are stirring up the sugar in a ten-cent glass of gin, let me give you a fact to wash down with it. You may say you have longed for years for the free, independent life of the farmer, but have never been able to get enough money together to buy a farm. But this is just where you are mistaken. For several years you have been drinking a good improved farm at the rate of 100 square feet a gulp. If you doubt this statement, figure it out yourself. An acre of land contains 43,560 square feet. Estimating for convenience the land at $43.56 per acre, you will see that it brings the land to just one mill per square foot, one cent for ten square feet. Now pour down the fiery dose and imagine you are swallowing a strawberry patch. Call in five of your friends and have them help you gulp down that 500-foot garden. Get on a prolonged spree some day and see how long a time it requires to swallow a pasture large enough to feed a cow. Put down that glass of gin; there's dirt in it—100 feet of good rich dirt, worth $43.56 per acre. —R. Burdette.

THE RAILROADS FOR TEMPERANCE.

The People of Scranton says: "All the officials in the various departments along the Jersey Central railroad have been notified by the company that hereafter employes must abstain from the use of intoxicating liquors while on or off duty, and if seen entering saloons, either during or after working hours, they will be discharged." The order created a decided sensation among the employes and saloons along the road that have hitherto received the most patronage among railroad men. The Central in issuing this order has only followed the lead of the Philadelphia and Reading and other railroads. Workingmen are learning that it pays to be total abstainers in more ways than one."

The Massachusetts and Boston unions served lemonade to the troops during the Grand Army parade at Boston, dispensing fifty-seven barrels. Last year a great brewery at Milwaukee made beer flow like water for the same men. They threw open their acres of brewing-rooms, and bands of soldiers marched through under our flag, to the sound of patriotic airs. An immense number of waiters served beer free to men, women, and children, and elegant illustrated souvenirs were given away with tiny bottles of beer. Even the line of march was changed that it might pass the residence of a great beer baron. In every way the brigand power endeavored to further enslave the men who fought for liberty. Which is better—the way of King Alcohol or of Queen Temperance!—W. C. T. U. column in Inter-Ocean.

After each election in Kentucky the liquor men go to the poll-books and make a list of the prohibition voters, their votes being so recorded that this can be done. It is said that in Louisville every dealer in liquor has a copy of this list so that he can spot each man and defeat him if he ever runs for office. At the last election in Louisville not more than half the voters went to the polls. A natural consequence of all this intimidation is that Kentucky will be likely to move for the Australian ballot very soon.

For every rich rum seller there must be one hundred poor drunkards. For every fortune gained in the rum traffic a score of fortunes must be lost by its patrons. For every rumseller riding in his carriage, we may expect to find one hundred feeble women bending over the wash-tub, one hundred helpless children thinly clad, poorly shod, plodding their way through snow and slush, and seeking their scanty sustenance by toil or beggary.—Safeguard.

A catechism. What is a saloon? A saloon is a place authorized by law to sell mixtures of fusel-oil, logwood, alcohol, nux-vomica and other poisonous drinks, at a profit of from two hundred to three hundred per cent.

An ordinary keg of beer costs $2, and usually about one hundred and ten glasses can be drawn from it. At five cents each this would produce $5.50, which seems a reasonable profit for the poor saloon keeper.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE NEW TESTAMENT.

LESSON XII.—Third Quarter.—Sept. 21.

SUBJECT.—Jesus Entering Jerusalem.—Luke 19:37-48.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Blessed be the King that cometh in the name of the Lord.—Luke 19:38.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

DAILY READINGS.—M.—Luke 19:28-48. T.—Matt. 21:1-16. W.—Mark 11:1-18. T.—John 12:12-19. F.—Psa. 24:1-10. S.—Rev. 7:9-17. S.—Luke 19:37-48.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. The entry into Jerusalem.—vs. 37-40. Christ now proclaims himself openly and unreservedly as the King for which the nation had so long waited. But every detail of his triumphal entry, the ass on which he rode, the green branches strewed in the way, the hosannas which repeated the song the angels sang at his birth, showed that he was widely different from any other royal conqueror the world had ever seen. There were those in the crowd out of whom he had cast devils, blind men to whom he had given sight, lepers that he had cleansed; and more than all, there must have been many who hailed him as their Deliverer from the power of sin, wandering prodigals, who, listening to his gracious words, had made up their minds to arise and go to their Father. Why should they not praise "with a loud voice?" But there were some Pharisees in the crowd, just as there are some formal and worldly professors at every revival meeting, and they wanted it stopped. Such are always ready to rebuke any hearty manifestation of praise. There must be nothing savoring of "religious excitement." There is still another class who are willing to honor Christ as a great religious teacher, and even as the purest and most perfect character that ever lived; anything they are willing to concede except the one fact of his divinity, which alone gives to the others any meaning. Satan does not want to see royal honors paid to Christ, and nothing so distinctly shows his hand in the secret lodge systems as their universal ignoring of Jesus as King and Messiah. But in spite of formal professors, and all the atheistic materialism of the age, there will always be a great multitude who have been healed and helped and saved by Christ to give him their glad hosannas.

2. Christ weeping over the city.—vs. 41-44. Christ was a Jew by birth, and the incident before us shows that he had a patriot's true love of country. Jerusalem to the Jew held within its walls every sacred national memory. It was really to all intents and purposes the nation, for we know that after its downfall the Jews were never again a people. Every scene of that terrible siege must have been vividly present to his mind; and bitterest of all must have been the thought that by rejecting and crucifying her King she herself was bringing down on her own head a doom so fearful that humanity to-day shudders to read the story. Why, O why would they not hear his message! This must have been the thought uppermost in the mind of the weeping Saviour. But as God-man we must not forget that he loved the whole human race with a love far more intense than that which as a Jew he felt for one individual nation. The depths of the Redeemer's sorrow for lost sinners who may fathom! Have we ourselves felt burdened for perishing souls and thus entered into fellowship with him?

3. Purging the temple.—vs. 45-47. We do not read of any questioning of his authority when he now drove out the buyers and sellers. The mad-dened and baffled priests conspire against him in secret; but Christ himself in the blaze of open noonday teaches in the temple, and as he afterwards stated in his trial before Caiaphas, "in secret says nothing." "My house shall be called a house of prayer;" not a house to feast in, nor a mart for trading. The buying and selling that was carried on in the temple was of doves and animals used in sacrifice. So it may be pleaded that the money raised by church fairs, suppers, etc., are to be used for church work. This if possible only makes the situation worse. "Wherein have ye robbed me, saith the Lord. In tithes and offerings." But to this guilt we add hypocrisy, when we try by these catch-penny devices to make the world pay our honest dues to God. Doubtless there were many in the throng that hung on Christ's words who would shout "Crucify him!" when the morrow came. They were entertained, their curiosity gratified, but they did not accept him as their Saviour. Those who reject his atoning work will not stand up for him when his cause is unpopular. Martyr faith was never built on any other foundation than Christ fully accepted in all his divine offices of Redeemer, Priest and King.

LITERATURE.

CHRISTIAN LIVING. By Rev. F. B. Meyer, B. A., author of "Elijah, and the Secret of his Power," etc. Pp. 160. Price 50 cts. Fleming H. Revell, Chicago and New York.

The author of this beautiful volume has been a popular speaker at conferences where the attributes and encouragements of spiritual-mindedness have been considered. His addresses on such occasions have been the foundation, and perhaps also part of the superstructure of this volume. He considers the Christian life as first an "appropriation" of Christ in fact and not merely as a sentiment. Imitation of Christ is not enough. We must make Christ our wisdom, our righteousness, our sanctification, our redemption. "It is a mistake to seek a sign from heaven; to run from counsellor; to cast a lot; or to trust some chance coincidence. Not that God may not reveal his will thus; but because it is hardly the behavior of a child with its father. There is a more excellent way." Christ's proprietorship is measured at its full value in considering the act of consecration, concerning which the author is clear and explicit. There can be no tampering with secret lodges with hope of making the soul acceptable to God. The chapters on sin, the will, the fulness of the Spirit and Christian work, are equally precious, definite and strong. There is no dogmatic expression of doctrine, but the truth is clearly explained and the exhortations to its acceptance are eloquent.

California topics occupy considerable space in the September Century. The paper by John Muir on "The Treasures of Yosemite Valley," in the August number, is followed by another on "Features of the Proposed Yosemite National Park," which is beautifully illustrated. The writer describes the wonderful scenery in the neighborhood of Yosemite—the Lyell Glacier, the Cathedral Peak region, the Tuolumne Meadows and Canon, and the Hetch-Hetchy Valley, all of which are included in the limits of the proposed park as defined by General Vandever's bill in the present Congress. In conclusion, Mr. Muir records his protest against the injuries done to the Yosemite Valley under the control of the present and preceding commissions. A paper of timely interest, practically illustrated, is Commander C. F. Goodrich's description of "Our New Naval Guns," detailing the process of manufacture and recounting their remarkable efficiency. An important paper by Prof. Charles W. Shields of Princeton, on "The Social Problem of Church Unity," is another of the "Present-Day Papers." Mrs. Van Rensselaer contributes an article on "Wells Cathedral," illustrated by Pennell, and a paper is contributed by Rowland E. Robinson on the Marble Hills of Vermont.

At the time of General Fremont's death he was engaged upon the manuscript of a paper for the Century's forthcoming series on the California Gold Hunters. It was to be entitled "Finding Paths to California," and was not only to deal with the several exploring expeditions, but to narrate the writer's intimate connection with the events which led to the conquest and occupation of the territory. The work will be promptly continued by Mrs. Fremont. A preliminary article, "How California came into the Union," is published in the September number as in this month occurs the fortieth anniversary of the admission of California.

The opening paper of the September Arena is by Senator John T. Morgan of Alabama on the Race Question, which presents the problem from the standpoint of a Southern statesman, and is full of the bitterness of caste. Rev. Samuel W. Dike, LL. D., contributes a paper of great ability on Marriage and Divorce Laws. Dr. Dike is considered a high authority in the divorce controversy by virtue of the research he has given the subject. Prof. Chas. Creighton, for many years professor of Comparative Anatomy in Cambridge University, attacks vaccination as being inefficacious. The Greatest Living Englishman is a brilliant and entertaining sketch of the life of Gladstone by James Realf, Jr.

The September St. Nicholas devotes the opening paper to Oliver Wendell Holmes, a visit to the poet being appreciatively described by Annie Isabel Willis. W. J. Henderson, of the New York Times, shows that "Great Ocean Waves," whatever they may be, are not properly called "tidal waves." A very strong drawing by Taber skillfully depicts the appearance of an enormous head wave as seen from the deck of an ocean steamer. Ernest E. Thompson writes the "True Story of a Little Gray Rabbit," and explains by a careful diagram just how a hound was thrown off the track. Professor Roberts describes his experiences in a lumber camp and incidentally explains the trick called "Chopping Him Down."

The current Vick's Monthly opens for the fall garnering from garden and orchard with a fine imitation on paper of a brilliant amaryllis. The floral notes touch on water lilies, daisies, etc., with much more of practical moment about seeds, berries and other garden matters of timely interest.

Two hundred thousand dollars is said to be the price offered by a syndicate of Jews for the Vatican copy of the Hebrew Bible. This is the largest amount ever offered for a book, either in manuscript or print.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—The East End Reformed Presbyterian church in Pittsburgh has dedicated a fine new building. Rev. O. B. Milligan, son of the late Dr. A. M. Milligan, is the pastor, and one of the main windows of the house is a memorial to Dr. Milligan by the late Wm. Thaw, the railway manager of that city. Drs. George and McAllister participated in the services.

—The Vindicator is the name of a new paper published in the interest of the English Lutheran Conference of Missouri. Rev. C. H. Spannuth, Wichita, Kansas, is the editor, but it is published at Pittsburgh, Pa.

—The conference of German Lutheran ministers of the Indiana and Ohio district has been in session at Fort Wayne, Ind. It was expected that the conference would take some action in regard to the school question, but nothing was done. The last topic discussed was the mutual aid societies inside the Lutheran congregations, which have lately been disturbing the peace of some of the churches. A resolution was adopted discouraging such societies on the ground that some persons might be influenced by them to join churches for impure motives and declaring that they were dangerous to both congregations and individuals. Christian charity and benevolence were commended, but the societies pronounced unsafe and objectionable.

—The National Union of the Swedish Mission Church meeting in Galesburg, Ill., last week discussed the founding of a university of its own instead of educating its ministers in the Swedish department of the Chicago Theological Seminary. The discussion was very animated. Twenty-two of the delegates went to the meeting instructed to vote against the change.

—Rev. C. C. Harrah, says the Advance, closed his short but remarkably successful pastorate of Plymouth Church, Peoria, Aug. 10, ill health compelling him to seek a change and rest. This church was organized by Mr. Harrah a little more than a year ago and has now a membership of over 150. It is prosperous, well-equipped and exerting a powerful influence for good in the city. One very unexpected event on the day of the pastor's farewell touched and made glad the hearts of the people. This was the unsolicited and generous gift to the church of the lot on which the building stands. This lot has been occupied for many years for school and church rent free, and is now valued at $2,500.

—The Janesville District Baptist Association meeting at Clinton, Wis., last week voted as follows: Resolved, That temperance is a part of godliness; that temperance work is an important part of Christian work; that the saloon ought to be east out of the land; that the young should be educated to shun and abhor it; that its victims should be rescued as far as possible, and that it is our duty to pray, work and to vote for its utter suppression. Resolved, That we regard our common school system as one of the great bulwarks of American liberty and citizenship, and indorse compulsory education in the English language as an obligation we owe to the children and future safety of our land.

—Rev. Dr. George F. Pentecost sailed on Saturday for England, and thence, on Oct. 16, he goes by the steamer Khedive, with twelve or fifteen English and Scotch friends, to India, where he will inaugurate a novel missionary work. "This mission," said Dr. Pentecost "was suggested to me by some high caste Hindoos. Few realize it, but it is true that there are 5,000,000 high caste Hindoos in India to-day educated in English as well as the average college graduate in America. These people at once lose caste with their own people and with the British when they accept Christianity. My mode of procedure may be briefly outlined thus: The Anglo-Saxons have the government and practically the civil service; they are the merchants, the bankers and the capitalists. There has grown up there a social life nominally Christian, yet really Christianized paganism. Now we will take the upper class by a flank movement, as it were. We will go to Calcutta and begin among the English, awakening a spiritual revival like that we have here. We will arouse these nominal Christians to a sense of their responsibility, making them see that they are not sent there for the purpose of trade alone, but to advance the kingdom of Christ. At the same time we will be showing the natives that the English must be converted as well as the heathen, or, in other words, that no living being can be a true Christian unless he opens his heart to Christ and openly accepts him. Then we will have the assistance of the English in the rest of our work in breaking down the barrier of caste and in establishing an era of fellowship. It is the social rather than the missionary influence upon which we depend."

IN BRIEF.

Mr. Edison has a novelty on which he is working—a clock to talk the time. Instead of a blank sound it will say "one," "two," etc., at the proper hours. For an alarm it will say in so many words, "Get up," in a stentorian and commanding voice.

The most singular material for book-making is proposed by Professor Castagnatta, and partially carried out by Professor Burkham, of Brunswick. His idea was to make a book indestructible by printing in gold or silver letters upon thin leaves of asbestos, the binding to be of a thicker sheet of asbestos. Neither time or fire could have any effect upon a volume of this kind, and it might well merit the title of "the book of eternity."

The Topeka, Kan., Capitol publishes letters from forty-three district court clerks showing the number of foreclosures of farm mortgages in their respective counties during the first six months of 1890. The total number of foreclosures is 1,103, about twenty-five to the county. The total for the 106 counties of the State on the same basis would be 2,650, or, probably, about $2,000,000. A significant feature of the report is the fact that a large portion of the foreclosures are on unoccupied lands bought up and mortgaged for what they would bring by speculators.

"I recently met Henry Palmer, an old California friend and one of the Argonauts, who told me he had abandoned the West and settled in St. Lawrence county," says a writer in the New York Star. "What are you doing up there?" I asked. He excited my curiosity by replying, "Working a paper mine." "What do you mean?" "I'll tell you. When I was a boy I worked in a paper mill at Camden and became familiar with the clays used for sizing and weighting paper. I concluded a short time ago to leave California and spend the balance of my days in the East. While on a visit to St. Lawrence county I was riding one day along a new road which had been cut for some distance through a peculiar formation of soft white rock. I examined it carefully under the microscope and found that it was fibrous, and seemed peculiarly adapted to paper-making. I had tests made by manufacturers, who reported favorably, so I bought the land and began mining; we are now shipping over a hundred tons a day, and it is rapidly displacing the clays formerly used, as its fibrous nature makes it a part of the warp and weft of the paper, instead of sizing only. No other such deposit is known in the country."

Census officials find that the increase of population on the whole has not been as great in the Southern States or in the Northern States of the Mississippi Valley as had been expected in those regions, notwithstanding that all of them advanced considerably and some of them remarkably over the figures of the last census. Pennsylvania made the largest actual gain in the number of her people, increasing her population by over a million. Next comes New York with an increase of over 900,000, and then Illinois with a gain of between 700,000 and 800,000. Ohio only increased by 400,000. Of the Southern States Missouri adds the greatest number of people to her population, growing from 2,168,380 in 1880 to 2,788,000 at the present time, and showing a gain of over 600,000. Texas comes in as a good second, increasing from 1,591,749 at the last census to 2,142,000 now, and showing a growth of over 500,000. There are eight States whose respective populations are over 2,000,000. New York has over 6,000,000, Pennsylvania over 5,000,000, and Illinois and Ohio both nearly 4,000,000. There are seventeen States that have each less than 1,000,000 and the population of all these seventeen States taken altogether does not quite equal that of the State of New York. If the House of Representatives is kept at its present number there will be some changes in the representation of several States.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

General Greely, Chief of the Signal Service, announced Thursday that an investigation into the causes of the hot winds that occasionally sweep over Kansas, destroying vegetation, was to be made, and means of averting their disastrous effects sought.

Senator Sawyer gave his colleagues to understand that the anti-lottery bill is to be passed this session. In reporting it from the Post Office Committee he gave notice that he would ask for its consideration as soon as the tariff bill is out of the way. The bill as reported is the House measure without amendment. If the Senate passes it no conference will be necessary and the signature of the President can be had at once, making it a law.

CHICAGO.

The South Park Commissioners have decided not to let the World's Fair into Washington Park. In lieu thereof Jackson Park has been offered entire. The question of site may now be referred to the National Commission.

There are, it is said, 139 suburban trains coming into the city every morning bringing 40,000 people.

COUNTRY.

At Little Rock, Ark., Monday, two colored election judges were ejected from the polling place and white men substituted. The remaining judge, a white man, refused to serve with the newly-elected judges, and opened polls elsewhere.

The total cotton crop of the United States for 1890 amounts to 7,311,322 bales, exceeding the largest crop ever grown by 265,489 bales, and the crop of last year by 373,032 bales. Of this amount 546,363 bales were consumed in the South, against 481,235 bales last year. There are 270 mills in operation in the country, of which thirty-three are in the South.

In a collision between an electric car and a freight train at Davenport, Iowa, Monday, William C. Preston, principal of a public school, was instantly killed, and several others were badly hurt. The accident was caused by the motor of the electric car becoming unmanageable.

A large assortment of Mormon converts from Europe landed in New York the past week. The heathen Chinese are prohibited. Why do we continue to invite moral lepers and a social pestilence like that of Mormonism?—Inter Ocean.

The State's Attorney for a North Dakota county Friday gave an opinion that the women could not vote in the coming general election, because the law failed to provide separate ballot boxes for them, and their franchise being restricted, they could not use the geneal ballot boxes.

Eight miners were buried in the Lake Angelina mine near Ishpeming, Mich., Friday by a cave-in. They are alive, and are being communicated with by means of a compressed air drill.

The total number of persons injured by railroads in Michigan in 1889 was 572, an increase of forty over the previous year. Of the total number eight passengers, sixty employees, and 110 belonging to neither class were killed.

An express train on the Louisville and Nashville railroad was stopped by highwaymen within half a mile of Pensacola, Fla., Monday night. The engineer was forced to batter down the door of the express car and the messenger was then compelled to hand out the contents of the safe, a small amount. The robbers escaped.

Dr. Paul Gibier, organizer of the Pasteur institute in New York and the hydrophobic expert of that city, who is just from Paris, says there is a bare possibility that Pasteur may visit this country next year. He finds the best physicians and surgeons of Europe believers in the efficacy of the cure by inoculation.

(Continued on 16th page.)

SCROFULA

Is that impurity of the blood which produces unsightly lumps or swellings in the neck; which causes running sores on the arms, legs, or feet; which develops ulcers in the eyes, ears, or nose, often causing blindness or deafness; which is the origin of pimples, cancerous growths, or "humors," which, fastening upon the lungs, causes consumption and death. It is the most ancient of all diseases, and very few persons are entirely free from it.

How Can It Be CURED

By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by the remarkable cures it has accomplished, has proven itself to be a potent and peculiar medicine for this disease. If you suffer from scrofula, try Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"Every spring my wife and children have been troubled with scrofula, my little boy, three years old, being a terrible sufferer. Last spring he was one mass of sores from head to feet. We all took Hood's Sarsaparilla, and all have been cured of the scrofula. My little boy is entirely free from sores, and all four of my children look bright and healthy." W. B. ATHERTON, Passaic City, N. J.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO:

Wheat—No. 2.....	1 00
No. 3.....	87	@ 94
Winter No. 2.....	91	@ 1 00
Corn—No. 2.....	45½	@ 47
Oats—No. 2.....	33	@ 37½
Rye—No. 2.....		60
Bran per ton.....		12 50
Hay—Timothy.....	7 00	@ 10 00
Butter, medium to best....	10	@ 22
Cheese.....	06	@ 10½
Beans.....	1 75	@ 2 45
Eggs.....		@ 16½
Seeds—Timothy.....	1 22	@ 1 35
Flax.....	1 36	@ 1 44
Broom corn.....	02½	@ 06½
Potatoes, new, per bu.....	80	@ 1 10
Hides—Green to dry flint....	03	@ 07
Lumber—Common.....	10 00	@ 13 00
Wool.....	15	@ 34
Cattle—Choice to extra.....	4 15	@ 5 20
Common to good.....	1 60	@ 4 10
Hogs.....	3 75	@ 4 60
Sheep.....	3 50	@ 4 70

NEW YORK.

Wheat.....	95½	@ 1 19
Corn.....	53	@ 53½
Oats.....	41	@ 51
Eggs.....		20
Butter.....	11	@ 24
Wool.....	14	@ 39

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle.....	1 50	@ 4 75
Hogs.....	2 00	@ 4 25
Sheep.....	3 25	@ 4 35

SCOTCH RITE MASONRY ILLUSTRATED.

The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all Masonic rites, and are fully and accurately given in

"FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED,"

as advertised, but the signs, grips, passwords, etc., of these three degrees are given at the close of Vol 2 of

"Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated"

Vol. 1 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3d to 18th inclusive. Vol. 2 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 19th to 33d inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each; in cloth, $1 each. Each volume per dozen, paper covers, $4; per dozen, cloth bound, $9.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
321 W. Madison St, Chicago,

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinions of many prominent college presidents and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25cts each.

The Anti-mason's Scrap-Book, consisting of 53 "Cynosure" tracts. In this book are the views of more than a score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of secret societies. Post-paid, 25 cts.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret tradesunion of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords, etc. 15cts each.

Standard Works

—OR—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Associat'n

321 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. A liberal discount to dealers.

General Washington Opposed to SECRET SOCIETIES. This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10cts each.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims by Rev. David McDill, Pres. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. In cloth, 35cts each; paper covers, 15cts each.

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of his sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5cts each.

Sermon on Secretism. By Rev. R. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational church, Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear array of the objections to all secret societies, and to Masonry especially, that are apparent to all. 5cts each.

Pres. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to disfellowship secret societies. 10cts each.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and Church. By Rev. M. S. Dury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church, is clearly shown. 10cts each.

Holden with Cords. OR THE POWER OF THE SECRET EMPIRE. By E. E. Flagg, author of "A Sunny Life," etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story, accurately true to life because mainly a narration of historical facts. In cloth, $1.00; in paper, 50 cents.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and law of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved. 15cts each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. J. Day Brownlee. In reply to a Masonic Oration by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio. 5 cents each.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on Masonry. Paper covers, 25 cents each.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion. 5 cents each.

ON ODD-FELLOWSHIP.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by ex-President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; paper cover, 50cts.

Patriarchs Militant Illustrated. The complete ritual of the Patriarchs Militant degree. This is an accurate copy of the Charge Book furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge of the Independent Order of Odd-fellows, with the eighteen military diagrams and the unwritten (secret) work added. Paper cover, 25cts each.

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own utterances; its doctrine and practice examined in the light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth 50cts; paper covers, 26cts.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and other secret societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms, and the duty to disfellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers, is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10cts each.

HOME AND HEALTH.

PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS.

Carelessness in measuring or preparing a dish is often the cause of failure. When a recipe is found good, it should be followed exactly.

It is not only an economy for home-makers to keep an account book, but it is a great satisfaction to know, from year to year, exactly what has been expended.

The excellence of baked potatoes depends upon eating as soon as they are done, and not before. They are worthless till cooked, and dry rapidly as soon as baked through.

What is more disagreeable to use than a rusty flat-iron? Rub them with fine emery dust and sweet oil. If you cannot make them smooth, send them to a factory and have them ground.

If the stove is cracked, a good cement is made for it as follows: Wood ashes and salt in equal proportions, reduced to a paste with cold water, and filled in the cracks when the stove is cool. It will soon harden.

Save stale pieces of bread, and when an easy day comes, dry them thoroughly in an open oven, and with a rolling-pin crush as fine as dust. These, then, will always be at hand for preparing oysters, cutlets, croquettes, etc.

Go to bed at night to sleep, and not to think over the troubles of to-day nor the anticipated trials of to-morrow. One woman said: "I plan my next day's work each night after retiring." Poor, little, nervous thing, she looked it.

Keep celery fresh by rolling it in brown paper sprinkled with water, then in a damp cloth, and put it in a cool, dark place. Before preparing it for the table, submerge it in cold water and let it stand for an hour. It will be found very crisp.

When furnishing a home, do not neglect to purchase pictures. They serve to recall pleasant memories and scenes, and when hung to harmonize with the furniture and in keeping with the use of the room, they are highly ornamental. Buy good ones or none.

When one is fatigued, tea is an efficient restorative. It forms an agreeable, warm drink, which is neither heating to the blood nor oppressive to the stomach, particularly if taken slowly when one is sitting quietly. Large quantities, however, induce nervous disorders.

Silver washed after each meal in very hot water, with sometimes a little ammonia in it, will be bright and shining for a long time without other cleaning. When a more thorough cleaning is necessary use any good silver polish, being sure to rub lightly, as the bright lustre soon wears dull, and if it be plated soon wears off.—Good Housekeeping.

Our lady friends should be glad to learn that a long, slim foot is now the stylish shape. The cramped-up, knotty knuckles have gone out. The girl who wore a 3½ now wears a 4½, with the result that her feet look smaller and more shapely than they ever did before. And is this not common sense? Why should people inflict tortures upon themselves in order to make their feet appear smaller than nature intended them to? Injury to health is certain to result from any such attempt, and the main object, beauty, is not attained after all. Follow the new fashion, a size larger than you have been accustomed to, and there will be a marked falling off in the sale of corn plasters, extractors, etc. Comfortable shoeing contributes to good health, beauty and good temper, which are all very desirable.

COOKED IN A NEW TIN PAIL.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Aug. 20.—Everett Gordon, an engineer on the Jersey Central, and his wife and son, were poisoned recently at their residence in Elizabethport, by eating some meat which was cooked in a new tin pail. His wife and son were attacked with severe cramps and vomiting, and Gordon, while on his way to bring a doctor, was similarly affected. Prompt medical attendance saved their lives, but the son is still very sick. Mr. and Mrs. Gordon were quite

Stomach Troubles,

Such as indigestion and loss of appetite, are extremely common. The functions of the stomach being weakened, the blood soon becomes impure, the system loses vigor, and you fall an easy prey to any prevailing epidemic. What you need to restore tone to the digestive organs is Ayer's Sarsaparilla, the best and most economical of all blood-purifiers.

"For several years I was troubled with indigestion, accompanied with pains in my side. My appetite was poor, and my health was gradually failing. Medicine recommended to me by my friends, did not have the desired effect. Finally I was advised to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and have done so, with the most beneficial results. My appetite is now good, I am free from pain, and feel once more in good health."

—T. Loney, 32 Fairmount st., Cambridgeport, Mass.

"About a year ago, I found myself in failing health. I suffered indescribably from stomach trouble, blood disorder, and various weaknesses, and almost despaired of relief. Thinking Ayer's Sarsaparilla might possibly benefit me, I began taking it, and am pleased to state that a few bottles wrought an entire change in my condition. My health has been restored by its use, and I feel stronger and more vigorous than I have for many years."—Mary A. Garland, 1407 Michigan ave., Chicago, Ill.

"During the summer and fall of 1887 I suffered very seriously from dyspepsia. Knowing the high standard of Ayer's medicines, I decided to try what Ayer's Sarsaparilla could do for me. It has helped me wonderfully. I regard the Sarsaparilla as invaluable in such cases."—James R. Williams, Delana, Ill.

"About a year ago I was greatly afflicted with indigestion, and suffered from headache and terrible pains in my stomach. I consulted a physician, who prescribed various remedies, but all to no purpose. I became worse instead of better, and was compelled to give up work. A friend finally advised me to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I purchased a bottle, took it according to directions, and soon had the satisfaction of knowing that my health was improving. After taking two bottles of this medicine, I was able to resume work. My appetite returned, my food digested well, I was free from headache, and to-day I am as well as ever."—P. Dubé, Holyoke, Mass.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla
—FOR—
Dyspepsia.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

Prepared by DR. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass. Sold by all Druggists.

Price $1. Six bottles, $5. Worth $5 a bottle.

EVERY WATERPROOF COLLAR OR CUFF

THAT CAN BE RELIED ON

BE UP
TO THE MARK

Not to Split!

Not to Discolor!

BEARS THIS MARK.

TRADE
ELLULOID
MARK.

NEEDS NO LAUNDERING. CAN BE WIPED CLEAN IN A MOMENT.
THE ONLY LINEN-LINED WATERPROOF
COLLAR IN THE MARKET.

ill for some time, but they are now out of danger.

An investigation showed that the victims were suffering from lead poisoning. A fourth member of the family, a girl, also partook of the meat, but she was not affected by it. She ate some cucumbers prepared in vinegar afterward, and this, it is said, counteracted the poison in the other food.

Use Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer and your thin gray locks will be thickened up and be restored to their youthful color, vigor, and beauty.

FOR A DISORDERED LIVER try BEECHAM'S PILLS.

10,000

Another ten thousand edition of the tract,
KILLED, AND NO INQUEST.

This is a large 4-page tract at 30 cents per pound, 15 cents for half pound, and 10 cents for a third of a pound. It is an illustrated account of the death of Rev. J. W. Johnston, while being initiated by the officers of Huntington Lodge, W. Va., in January of this year. Sent postpaid at the above price. Address,

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
221 W. Madison St Chicago

The Crandall Type-writer

(New Model.)

Perfect and permanent alignment.
Interchangeable type.
Writing in plain sight of the operator.

We sell direct to users only.
No agents. No discounts.
No commissions.
The most rapid and perfect Type-writer made.

PRICE $50.00.
THE CRANDALL MACHINE CO.,
237 LaSalle St., Chicago.

FOR MINISTERS

"STORIES OF THE GODS"

is especially adapted. They will at once derstand the references to the idolatrous systems of the nations. And the idolatrous worship of the Masonic lodge is thus more clearly seen and easily understood. Will you furnish each pastor in your place with one of these pamphlets?

PRICE, ONLY 10 CENTS.
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

WILL SELL FOR

Regular
Price.

FIVE CENTS.

Selling
Price.

- $.10 "REPORT OF THE TRIAL OF Rev. J. T. Michael," an Elder in the M. E. Church, for arraigning the Bishops, Elders and Preachers in charge for being Freemasons contrary to the Discipline of the M. E. Church. Paper, 28 pages. $.05
- $.25 "MASONIC DEGREES ILLUSTRATED," Containing all the pass and real words, all the pass and real grips and signs of the first three degrees of Freemasonry, from the time of King Solomon, King Hiram of Tyre, and Hiram Abiff, the Widow's Son, to the present time. Compiled by E. M. Trowbridge. Paper, 39 pages. With certificate and demit showing that the author was a Freemason. $.05
- $.15 "A WOMAN'S VICTORY, or the Query of the Lodgeville Church." By Jennie L. Hardie. Paper, 21 pp. $.05
- $.10 "WASHINGTON'S SOUVENIR." Portraits of Geo. Washington and his Co-patriots, with their testimony on Freemasonry. Size 18x24 inches. Framed it is an ornament to any home. $.05

SIX CENTS.

- $.10 "SECRET SOCIETIES." A Lecture delivered at Oberlin College, Jan. 9, 1890. By Prof. Henry C. King. Paper, 36 pp. $.06
- $.20 "REASONS WHY Secret Societies cannot be Fellowshiped by the United Presbyterian Church." By Rev. J. W. Bain. Pages 149. $.06

TEN CENTS.

- $.15 "MY EXPERIENCE WITH SECRET SOCIETIES." By a Traveler. Paper, 51 pp. $.10
- $.20 "THE INTERIOR OF SIERRA LEONE, West Africa." A lecture delivered at the Government Practicing School-Room, Freetown, Sierra Leone, together with remarks and addresses of gentlemen present, and the lecturer's replies. By J. Augustus Cole, of Shingay, W. Africa. Paper, 54 pages. $.10
- $.25 "SKETCH OF THE LIFE OF JAMES G. BIRNEY." His relation to the Anti-slavery movement and place in history. By General William Birney. Paper, 32 pages. $.10

FIFTEEN CENTS.

- $.25 "RELIGIOUS PERSECUTION." An examination of Cardinal Manning's letter in the New York Tribune, on Irish affairs and bearing on Home Rule. By Rev. John Lee. Paper, 83 pages. $.15
- $.25 "THE PURITY CRUSADE." With portraits of some of its leaders. Paper, 114 pp. $.15

TWENTY CENTS.

- $.30 "SONGS FOR THE TIMES," by Geo. W. Clark. Words and Music. Intended for Prohibition and W. C. T. U. meetings. Boards, 152 pages. $.20

TWENTY-FIVE CENTS.

- $.75 "BEREA COLLEGE," Kentucky. An interesting history of the founding of that College for white and black in a slave State. Cloth, 87 pages. $.25

THIRTY-FIVE CENTS.

- $.75 "LUCILE VERNON, or the Church at Lansington. The experience of a young pastor. A novel. By Rev. W. T. Meloy, D. D. Cloth, 208 pages. $.35

FIFTY CENTS.

- $1.00 "NATIONAL SUICIDE AND ITS PREVENTION." The following will show the drift of the book: Measure or Standard of Value; What is Honest Money; Our National Banks; Paper Money; Land Tenure, etc. By O. F. Lumry. Cloth, 224 pp. $.50
- $1.50 "HISTORY OF SECRET SOCIETIES IN FRANCE," or "THE CRADLE OF REBELLIONS." By Lucien De La Hodde. Translated from the French by Gen'l. J. W. Phelps. Cloth, 479 pp. $.50

Sent postpaid to any address on receipt of the selling price.

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
WM. I. PHILLIPS, Treasurer,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

FARM NOTES.

Hard-coal ashes make a good dust bath for hens.

Begin to get rid of your poor stock and to prepare for winter.

Make agriculture scientific and fashionable and the boys will like it.

South Georgia has 19,000 acres devoted to melon culture this season.

Lay shingles a quarter to a half an inch apart if you want them to last well.

In laying drain tiles, put them below frost line and grade as evenly as possible.

The farmer should buy labor-saving inventions for his wife as well as himself.

A dry, airy place is the best one in which to spread potatoes until cold weather sets in.

It is easy to overheat a working team on a hot, still, muggy day. Take care of your beast.

Oats are said to be in the best condition for feeding when straw and grain are fed together.

If fowls have plenty of ashes and dust to wallow in, they will dispose of the lice and keep them off.

Pasture often obliges cows to drink impure water, and this injures both the cow and the butter.

In building barns and stables do provide for good ventilation. Pure air is as necessary as good food.

Poor stock, poor farmer, poor income, poor farm, poor everything. Rather a deplorable combination.

Animals in clean, wholesome quarters eat less and make a better return for it than if kept in dirty quarters.

Do not be stingy with your flowers. By plucking them you prepare the way for more to bud and blossom.

Justice Williams of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania has just decided that a farmer is not obliged to take out a peddler's license to sell his products from door to door.—N. Y. Witness.

SHOT BY HIS OWN ORDERS.

HILLSBORO, Ill., Aug. 26.—Jonathan Hartgroves owns a large water-melon patch and has a chronic fear of the perennial melon thief. Last night he loaded a big duck gun with a heavy charge of shot and gave the weapon to his 12-year-old son with instructions to watch the patch till daybreak and shoot any one he saw in it. The old man wondered if the boy was "dead game," and whether he would really shoot. So Jonathan dressed himself and sneaked into the melon patch. He was just on the point of devouring a luscious melon when the boy emptied both barrels into the old man's body. Jonathan is badly hurt and may die.

A MILK-PRODUCING RATION.

Here is an item for those to consider who desire to make notable milk-producing records. The famous Holstein cow, Clothilde, that in seven days gave 664 pounds and 14 ounces of milk, which made 28 pounds, 2½ ounces of butter, or an average of over 95 pounds of milk, and over four pounds of butter daily, ate about twelve pounds of grain per day. This ration included two parts corn meal, two parts wheat bran, and one part ground oats, with a little oil meal. She also had good pasture and pure water during the record-making period.

OATMEAL FOR CALVES.

The best food for calves is one of the studies that interests cattle raisers. Hence we make note of the fact that M. Mertens, director of the Commercial dairy farm of Karnitten, Eastern Prussia, has found excellent results attend the employment of one-fourth pound of oatmeal per quart of milk, given to calves intended for the dairy when three weeks old, and gradually suppressing the sweet for the fresh-skimmed milk from the centrifugal creamer. Later, he gives crushed barley or oats and linseed, gradually augmenting, so that when six months old the calves will be receiving one pound of linseed and two pounds of

A-head of everything that can be used for washing and cleaning, is PEARLINE. If your work is heavy, it is a necessity; if your work is light, it is a luxury. It lessens the labor of washing, and helps everywhere in the housework. There's nothing so harmless—so effective—so popular and yet so new—it is rapidly succeeding soap. Try it for washing dishes—try it for washing anything—everything; only try it—for your own sake and ours. A house without Pearl-line is "behind the times."

Beware of imitations. 183 JAMES PYLE, N. Y.

To cure Biliousness, Sick Headache, Constipation, Malaria, Liver Complaints, take the safe and certain remedy, SMITH'S

BILE BEANS

Use the SMALL SIZE (40 little beans to the bottle). They are the most convenient; suit all ages. Price of either size, 25 cents per bottle.

KISSING at 7, 17, 70: Photo-gravure, panel size of this picture for 4 cents (coppers or stamps).

J. F. SMITH & CO.,
Makers of "Bile Beans," St. Louis, Mo.

PATENTS

Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees.

Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington.

Send model, drawing or photo., with description. We advise, if patentable or not, free of charge. Our fee not due till patent is secured.

A Pamphlet, "How to Obtain Patents," with names of actual clients in your State, county, or town, sent free. Address,

C. A. SNOW & CO.

Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

SEE THIS!

The latest, most complete edition.

Over 235 choice

Reform Songs for the Times.

Only 30c a copy, or 20c by the 100.

—AND—

"THE TOBACCO MANIA."

$1 per 100.

For sale here and by the author,

GEO. W. CLARK,

76 W. Montcalm St., Detroit, Mich.

grain per head daily. They are allowed the finest hay. He dusts about one good ounce of chalk per day on the rations.

Sallow and leaden-hued complexions soon give place to the loveliest pink-and-white, when the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla is persisted in, and cosmetics entirely abandoned. Nothing can counterfeit the rosy glow of perfect health, which blesses those who use this medicine.

STANDARD WORKS

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES.

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Association.

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. A liberal discount to dealers.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 75 cents. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive. Vol. II. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished. 25 cents each.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe. 20 cents each.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. In cloth, $1.50 each. Paper, 75 cents each.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pages, 75 cents.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance. Bound in one volume. In cloth, 589 pages, $1.00.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. 25 cents each.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper, 35 cents.

Hon. Thurlow Weed on the Morgan Abduction. This is the legally attested statement of this eminent Christian journalist and statesman concerning the unlawful seizure and confinement of Capt. Morgan in Canandaigua jail, his removal to Fort Niagara and subsequent drowning in Lake Ontario. 5 cents each.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a League with the Devil. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason. 15 cents each.

Freemasonry Self-Condemed. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church. Paper covers, price, 20 cents each.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each.

Anti-masonic Sermons and Addresses. Composed of "Masonry a Work of Darkness;" the Sermons of Messrs. Cross, William McNary, Dow and Sarver, the two addresses of President Blanchard, and the addresses of President H. H. George, Prof. J. G. Carson and Rev. M. S. Drury; "Thirteen Reasons Why a Christian cannot be a Freemason," "Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion," and "Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate?" 287 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate. By Rev. L. A. Post. 5 cents each.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper cover, 35 cents.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin trials. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each.

Stearns's Inquiry into the Nature and Tendency of Freemasonry. 338 pages. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor United Presbyterian church. 5 cents each.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. 10 cents each.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void; or FREEMASONRY SELF-CONVICTED. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. 207 pages. Postpaid, 40 cents each.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian), seceding Mason of 21 degrees. 15 cents each.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. H. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each.

Masonic Salvation, as taught by its standard authors. This pamphlet is a compilation from standard Masonic works, in proof of the following proposition: Freemasonry claims to be a religion that saves men from all sin, and purifies them for heaven. 111 pages, price, postpaid, 20 cents.

Freemasonry at a Glance illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the first three degrees. Paper cover, 32 pages. Single copy, six cents.

Masonic Outrages. Compiled by Rev. H. H. Hinman. Showing Masonic assault on lives of seceders, on reputation, and on free speech; its interference with justice in courts, etc. Postpaid, 30 cents.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret Societies. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each.

BUSINESS.

The BLUE LODGE, the YORK RITE, and the SCOTCH RITE degrees of Freemasonry, four volumes, postpaid, for $2.25. It was suggested in last week's paper that the readers of the Cynosure take pains to let young men know that they can obtain the above forty-threes for such a small amount. It is hoped that the suggestion will be acted upon. Send for catalogues. Ten cents worth will supply all of your friends, and if you have not the change, the catalogues will be sent if ordered. Aside from the secrets, the historical information obtained is valuable,—for example, that the Royal Arch degree was called Royal or King's degree, because invented to overthrow the Commonwealth of England and restore monarchy. The fact is stated by Masonic authorities.

It give us pleasure to acknowledge the co-operation of friends in the distribution of the address of Joseph Cook. There is a time to sow and, so far as this address is concerned, now is the time. Every one is interested to know what the leading lecturer of the world has to say about secret societies. Hence to attend a religious conference without a few of Disloyal Secret Oaths is to lose a splendid opportunity for good.

NEWS OF THE WEEK (Continued from 13th page).

FOREIGN.

Cholera is raging in the Arabian town of Yembo. Many Egyptian pilgrims pass through Yembo every year on their way to the holy cities of Arabia.

The Danube, Inn, Adda, and Upper Rhine rivers are rising rapidly and large sections of land have been flooded. Several persons have been drowned at the town of Klosterneberg, six miles from Vienna.

At Montreal Thursday the Catholic Mutual Benefit Association decided, by an almost unanimous vote, to separate from the body in the United States.

Advices from the frontier say that the Kurds are preparing to massacre Armenians, who, it is alleged, are passing into Turkey.

A dispatch received at Paris says the Turkish soldiers at Jerusalem have expelled the Franciscan fathers from that city.

The third International Temperance Congress opened at Christiana, Sweden, Tuesday.

Prof. Carl Lumholtz, the Norwegian explorer, is about to explore lower New Mexico and Arizona under the direction of the American Geographical Society of New York.

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from Sept. 1 to 6 inclusive:

T E Turner, Geo W Thamp, J A Goddard, J H Wooster, Rev G B Duncan, Rev J N Bedford, Mrs A E Rogers, A Sullivan, W C Gaddis, Rev Jno Harper, H Johnson, J Houston, Rev J P Dyas, Rev L H Norem, J McLean, G S Robinson, J P McKaig, N C Patton, J Walter, Mrs M H Wardner, H S Moxson.

BIRNEY.

The sketch of JAMES G. BIRNEY candidate of the Liberty Party for President, in pamphlet for 25 cents. A limited number of copies of this handsome pamphlet for sale at the N. C. A. office

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—U. S. Government Report, Aug. 17, 1889.

Puget Sound catechism and its chief city SEATTLE, WASHINGTON. Send stamp to Eschelman, Llewellyn & Co., Seattle, Wash.

$75.00 to $250.00 A MONTH can be made working for us. Persons preferred who can furnish a horse and give their whole time to the business. Spare moments may be profitably employed also. A few vacancies in towns and cities. B. F. JOHNSON & CO., 1009 Main Street, Richmond, Va.

GREAT FALLS, MONTANA. City of wonderful resources, immense water power, gold, silver, copper, lead, lumber, coal, iron, cattle, horses, wool and agriculture. Phenomenal growth. For full particulars address SECRETARY BOARD OF TRADE, Great Falls, Montana.

PENSIONS OLD CLAIMS Settled Under New Law. Soldiers, Widows, Parents, send for blank applications and information. PATRICK O'FARRELL, Pension Agent, Washington, D. C.

HOUSE FOR SALE OR RENT IN WHEATON, ILLINOIS. Ten rooms, besides pantry and closets, with good cellar. For terms apply to J. BLANCHARD, Wheaton, Ill., or H. L. KELLOGG, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.

MISSOULA Garden city of MONTANA. Railroad and manufacturing center, fine water power, rich agricultural lands, mines, lumber, etc. A prosperous city and rich country. Full particulars, including beautiful book, "MISSOULA ILLUSTRATED" SENT FREE upon application to FAIRCHILD, CORNISH & CO., MISSOULA, MONT.

*Our High Grade List and Bargain Book sent to any address on receipt of a 2-c stamp.
LORD & THOMAS,
NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING
45 RANDOLPH STREET,
CHICAGO.

HOME FOR SALE CHEAP. AT WHEATON.—Two story, eight-room frame house, stone foundation and cellar, good well and cistern, barn, lot about 100 by 400, joining college campus, bounded on three sides by streets. Price $1,000. $500 cash; balance one, two and three years, at six per cent. Address W. I. PHILLIPS, Cynosure Office.

THE ELKHART CARRIAGE & HARNESS MFG. CO.
For 16 Years have sold coaches at wholesale prices, saving them the dealers profit. Ship anywhere for examination before buying. Pay freight charge if not satisfactory. Warranted for 3 years. 64-page Catalogue Free. Address W. E. PRATT, Sec'y., Elkhart, Ind.

WHEATON COLLEGE,

WHEATON, ILL.

FALL TERM BEGINS TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 16TH.

A College for Men and Women.

For Catalogue address with stamp,

O. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

HARTSVILLE COLLEGE,

HARTSVILLE, INDIANA.

E. G. PAINE, A. M., PRESIDENT,

Classical, Scientific and Normal courses. Preparatory school, Art, Music and Business departments. Actively Christian and reformatory influences. No saloons. Romantic and healthful region. Living as cheap as it can be made anywhere.

HAVE YOU EXAMINED

The list of Books and Tracts for sale by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. Look it over carefully and see if there is not something you want for yourself or for your friend. Send for full catalogue to 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.

Had the Desired Effect!

CARROLLTON, GREEN CO., ILL., Nov., '88. I highly recommend Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic to anybody that has suffered from headache as my son did for 5 years, because 2 bottles of the medicine cured him.

M. McTIGUE.

What a Clergyman Says:

Morrisonville, Christ. Co., Ill., Sept., 1887. Within the last six years I have observed the excellent effect of Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic. It cured a boy named Mehon, who was so helpless that he had to be fed like a baby; he hid himself when he saw strangers, laughed and cried for half an hour. He was considered by physicians a maniac and hopeless case; but is now working on a railroad. Another case was Minnie Falls; she had St. Vitus' Dance; her legs and arms were so uncontrollable that she scratched holes in her dresses in a few days. 8 bottles of the Tonic cured her entirely. Another such case, which many physicians tried to cure without success, was cured by only two bottles. These and other cases convince me that the Tonic is the best remedy for epilepsy and other nervous troubles. It would be a blessing for all sufferers to know of it.

A. TEPE, Pastor.

Our pamphlet for sufferers of nervous diseases will be sent free to any address, and poor patients can also obtain this medicine free of charge from us.

This remedy has been prepared by the Reverend Pastor Koenig, of Fort Wayne, Ind., for the past ten years, and is now prepared under his direction by the

KOENIG MEDICINE CO.,

50 W. Madison, cor. Clinton St., CHICAGO, ILL.
SOLD BY DRUGGISTS.
Price $1 per Bottle. 6 Bottles for $5.

Disloyal SECRET OATHS.

ADDRESS OF

JOSEPH COOK,
OF BOSTON,
AT THE

Conference of Christians, CHICAGO, 1890.

No better document of its size for general distribution has been printed. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Single Copies 5 cents, or 12 copies for 50 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

FIFTY YEARS and BEYOND;

OR,

Old Age and How to Enjoy It.

A most appropriate gift book for "The Old Folks at Home."

Compiled by REV. S. G. LATHROP.

Introduction by

REV. ARTHUR EDWARDS, D. D.,
(Editor N. W. Christian Advocate.)

The object of this volume is to give to that great army who are fast hastening toward the "great beyond" some practical hints and helps as to the best way to make the most of the remainder of that now is, and to give comfort and help life that is to come.

"It is a tribute to the Christianity that honors the gray head and refuses to consider the old man burden or an obstacle. The book will aid and comfort every reader."—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

"The selections are very precious. Springing from such numerous and pure fountains, they can but afford a refreshing and healthful draught for every aged traveller to the great beyond."—Witness.

Price, bound in rich cloth, 400 pages, $1

Address, W. I. PHILLIPS,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago Ill

REMARKABLE OFFER!

Nearly everyone is familiar with the name, but it has been estimated that only one in every two hundred and eighty persons in the United States is fortunate enough to have access to the valuable information contained within the covers of the grandest work ever written by mortal man,

Webster's

UNABRIDGED DICTIONARY.

That this is an unfortunate state of affairs will be admitted by all, and it is due to the fact that no one save the rich could afford them.

The Dictionary is a necessity in every home, school and business house. It fills a vacancy and furnishes knowledge which no one hundred volumes of the choicest books could supply, and all young or old, educated or ignorant, rich or poor should have it within reach and refer to its contents every day in the year.

The Loomis reprint contains all the matter as compiled and arranged by our esteemed and honored author and statesman

NOAH WEBSTER.

About forty years of his life was devoted to this great work, and when we consider the fact that this book contains about 100,000 words, we will appreciate that these years must have been well spent.

Some idea of the magnitude of this book may be gained from the fact that it contains over 440 cubic inches of paper and has about 300,000 square inches of printed surface.

In addition to the 100,000 words it contains a portrait of the author, together with his biography and a valuable table of 12,000 synonymous words.

By special arrangement with the publishers, we are permitted to furnish this valuable volume: 1st. To any subscriber to our paper; 2nd. To any renewal subscription; and 3rd. To any person who has paid a full year's subscription within the past six months, on receipt of $1.50 for the paper one year, and two dollars and seventy-five cents to cover express charges, packing, etc., of the Dictionary.

Address

CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill

The Washington Souvenir,

Size 18x24 inches, and containing the portraits of

Washington and his Com-Patriots, WITH THEIR TESTIMONY ON FREEMASONRY.

It contains the portraits of

Washington.
John Adams, 2nd President of the United States.

James Madison, 4th President of the United States.

Joseph Ritner, Governor of Pennsylvania.
Richard Rush, Secretary of State and of the Treasury.

Alexander Hamilton, the friend of Washington.

Samuel Adams, the Father of the Revolution.

John Hancock, President of the Continental Congress.

Samuel Dexter, Secretary of War and of the Treasury.

William Wirt, Attorney-General.

John Marshall, Chief Justice of U. S. Supreme Court.

John Quincy Adams, 6th President of the United States.

Benjamin Rush, the Father of Temperance Reform in America.

Lebbeus Armstrong, Founder of the first Temperance Society.

Framed, it is an ornament to please the eye, and a testimony to gladden the heart. Sent safely packed in a mailing tube, postpaid, for ten cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Manifold Cyclopedia

A Library of Universal Knowledge and Unabridged Dictionary of Language in one; 32 volumes; over 25,000 pages; nearly 7,000 illustrations; $32.00, easy monthly payments. Specimen pages free. Agents Wanted. Catalogue 96 pages, Popular, Standard and Holiday Books, sent free. New issues weekly. Prices lowest ever known. Mention this paper.

Alden

NEW YORK:
393 Pearl Street.
CHICAGO:
242 Wabash Ave.
ATLANTA:
71 Whitehall St.

